Stasz v. Charles R. Schwab (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , involved three consolidated arbitrations arising from the same settlement agreement. The settlement agreement, between Stasz and the individual defendant Quackenbush, provided for confidentiality and that any disputes thereunder would be determined by arbitration. The published portion of the opinion addressed plaintiff's claims against the American Arbitration Association (AAA), which conducted the consolidated arbitration. Plaintiff claimed that the AAA had no jurisdiction to conduct the arbitration because an appeal was pending relating to the arbitration procedure and that the AAA breached their contract by failing to provide a neutral arbitrator but instead provided an arbitrator who was biased by familiarity with an attorney at the law firm representing Quackenbush and because that firm was a member of the AAA. The trial court sustained the AAA's demurrer to the complaint against it, agreeing that AAA enjoyed immunity. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that neither the alleged bias of the arbitrator or the AAA, nor a clear absence of jurisdiction deprived the AAA of the arbitral immunity afforded by California common law (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 443-444) . The court noted that the case was governed by the common law of arbitral immunity, not former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1, which was in effect from 1986 through 1996, but was repealed by its own terms three years before the Quackenbush-Stasz arbitration began (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 434-436) . With respect to the common law of arbitral immunity, the court of appeal noted that arbitrators have been extended the protection of judicial immunity, because the role that they exercise is analogous to that of a judge and arbitral immunity, like judicial immunity, promotes fearless and independent decision making (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 430-431) . The application of arbitral immunity does not turn on whether the act at issue is discretionary instead of ministerial or administrative. Such an analysis misses the mark. The scope of arbitral immunity is defined by the functions it protects and serves. Thus, it shields all functions which are integrally related to the arbitral process (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 431-432) . Arbitrators are exempt from civil liability for failure to exercise care or skill in the performance of their arbitral functions. Federal common law is in accord: arbitral immunity protects all acts within the scope of the arbitral process, even corrupt or biased actions, unless there is a clear absence of jurisdiction (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 432) . Both California and federal common law extend arbitral immunity to both the arbitrator and the sponsoring arbitration provider organization (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 433-434) .

The court noted commentators and texts to the effect that since the repeal of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1, it is unclear whether an arbitrator can be held liable for breach of contract (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 436-437) . Former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 was enacted to overrule the decision in Baar v. Tigerman (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 979, 189 Cal. Rptr. 834, 211 Cal. Rptr. 426 , in which the court held that an arbitrator and a sponsoring organization (the AAA) were not entitled to the same immunity as a judge and could be found liable for breach of contract based on the arbitrator's failure to make a timely award. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 provided that arbitral immunity was the same as the immunity of a judicial officer when the arbitrator is acting in the capacity of arbitrator under any statute or contract. Thus, there could be no civil liability imposed on the arbitrator for failing to issue an award (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 434-435) . The court of appeal cited with favor one commentator who noted that virtually any claim of misconduct in arriving at an arbitration award can be stated as a breach of contract, and that arbitral immunity would be effectively circumvented by labeling those wrongs as a contract breaches (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 437) . The court of appeal found that the real issue here was one of bias, for which the proper remedy is to have the award vacated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)-(3)] (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 439-440) . Bias is a type of arbitrator corruption or misconduct to which immunity applies to shield both the arbitrator and the sponsoring organization (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 441) .

Nor did the court of appeal find that the AAA's continuing with the arbitration during the pendency of an appeal (unsuccessfully) challenging the validity of the arbitration provision was such a clear absence of jurisdiction as to strip the AAA of immunity (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 441-442) . That argument was based on Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a), which provides that the perfecting of an appeal stays proceedings in the trial court on the judgment or order appealed from. Plaintiff twice presented this automatic stay argument to the arbitrator and twice to the trial court. Each time, it was rejected. Even assuming, without deciding, that Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a) mandated a delay in the arbitration proceedings, that would not effect a clear absence of jurisdiction or divest the arbitrator of jurisdiction to hear the matter. It would only affect the timing of the proceedings. The proper remedy for an alleged violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 916(a) was to seek a stay of the arbitration proceedings and, possibly, to petition the trial court to vacate the award on that ground, not to seek to impose liability on the AAA (121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 443) .

The court of appeal in Coopers & Lybrand v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 524, 260 Cal. Rptr. 713 , affirmed the sustaining of a demurrer to a complaint seeking to impose civil liability on an accountancy firm that had performed valuation services for the real party, because a factual determination was required to determine whether the parties intended valuation to be arbitration within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(a). The court said that arbitral immunity attaches not because of the professional credentials of the arbitrator, nor because of the ethical canons of the profession to which the arbitrator belongs, but because a proceeding is deemed to be an arbitration. If arbitral immunity has attached, a party to the arbitration has no cause of action arising from the arbitrator's misconduct, professional negligence, or fraud. The party's recourse, unless the particular arbitration agreement adopts alternative procedures, is to seek to have the award vacated pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 (212 Cal. App. 3d 524, 536) .

[b] Inclusive Definition of Agreement

Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(a) provides that as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., "agreement" includes, but is not limited to, agreements that provide for valuations, appraisals, and similar proceedings and agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representative.

The facts and procedural background of Wasyl, Inc. v. First Boston Corp. (9th Cir. 1987) 813 F. 2d 1579 , are discussed under [a], above. After noting that the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.) preempts only inconsistent state law, the court applied Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(a) (in accordance with the parties' choice of California law) to conclude that the process called for by the contracts was arbitration (813 F. 2d 1579, 1582) .

The procedural background of Coopers & Lybrand v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 524, 260 Cal. Rptr. 713 , and the portion of the opinion discussing immunity, are discussed at [a], above. In discussing the facts to be considered in determining whether the accountancy firm functioned as arbitrator, the court of appeal said that by application of Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(a), an accountant making a valuation for the parties would be entitled to arbitral immunity if, under the terms of the particular agreement, the parties intended the accountant to function as an arbitrator with respect to specific issues (212 Cal. App. 3d 524, 536) .

[c] Insurance Appraiser Is Entitled to Arbitral Immunity

Plaintiffs in Lambert v. Carneghi (2008) 158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 626 , sued defendants, who were the appraiser and their expert witness for negligence over their alleged failure to adequately advance their position in a fire insurance appraisal proceeding pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071. Plaintiffs and the insurer each party appointed an appraiser; and there was a neutral umpire, who allegedly misunderstood the term "replacement cost." Defendants both demurred, claiming immunity. The trial court sustained the demurrers. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed as to the appraiser, but reversed as to the expert (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1126, 1145) . The court of appeal noted that is it well established that a fire insurance appraisal pursuant to Ins. Code § 2071 is an arbitration governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., even though the procedures are different and an appraiser does not have the same powers as arbitrator (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1129-1133) . Plaintiffs argued that because defendant appraiser was a party-appointed advocate, he was not subject to arbitral immunity. Although the court of appeal found that no case has specifically extended arbitral immunity to appraisers, they reasoned that given the similarities between arbitrations and appraisals, immunity should apply. Although plaintiffs failed to address the issue in their opening brief, instead focusing their argument on the fact that a fire insurance appraisal is not an arbitration, they contended that the Legislature has not provided a shield to those who are hired to do a job for a party to a fire insurance appraisal and through their negligence fail to do it and thereby cause injury to the party employing them. Arbitrators have been extended the protection of judicial immunity, because they perform the function of resolving disputes between parties, or of authoritatively adjudicating private rights (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1133-1134) . The court distinguished, Coopers & Lybrand v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 524, 260 Cal. Rptr. 713 , relied on by plaintiffs, as not involving an arbitration but a valuation that was merely an audit. Plaintiffs argued that the duties of party appraisers are analogous to those of lawyers, and that appraisers therefore should not be subject to arbitral immunity, claiming that party-appraisers advocate their appraisals to the umpire just as lawyers advocate their client's positions before a judge, or that it is their duty to write appraisals and present them to the other side's appraiser, argue his or her positions. The court of appeal disagreed (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1134) . As to the argument that providing arbitral immunity to appraisers could lead to unintended and disastrous results, because arbitrators may escape liability when they ignore irrefutable proof that supports a party's position, the court noted that the remedy for arbitrator misconduct lies in vacation of the award; and that plaintiffs had not petitioned to vacate the award (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1136) . The court concluded that it was proper for the trial court to sustain the party appraiser's demurrer without leave to amend (158 Cal. App. 4th 1120, 1137, 1145) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20B ARBITRATION: SELECTING ARBITRATORS; ARBITRAL IMMUNITY
PART II. FORMS
B. Arbitral Immunity

2-20B California Points & Authorities § 20B.51

§ 20B.51 Arbitral Immunity Extends to Sponsoring Organization

[1] FORM

THE ACTS COMPLAINED OF AROSE FROM DEFENDANT'S ACTIVITIES AS SPONSORING ORGANIZATION OF AN ARBITRATOR, AND BOTH THE ARBITRATOR AND DEFENDANT ARE THEREFORE IMMUNE FROM LIABILITY.

A. Arbitral Immunity. [See § 20B.50, Paragraph A.]

B. Sponsoring Organization's Immunity. The immunity of an arbitrator necessarily extends to the arbitrator's sponsoring organization (Stasz v. Charles R. Schwab (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 433-434, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 ; Thiele v. RML Realty Partners (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1528-1530, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416 ; American Arbitration Ass'n v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1133, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899).

[Optional] C. Scope of Organization's Immunity. The scope of sponsoring organization's arbitral immunity is defined by the functions it protects and serves. Acts that are integrally related to the arbitral process and sufficiently associated with the adjudicative phase of arbitration[, such as sending out the award], are protected by the immunity (Stasz v. Charles R. Schwab (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 431-432, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 ; Thiele v. RML Realty Partners (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1530, 1532, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that an organization sponsoring an arbitration has no liability to any party to the arbitration for any acts done in its capacity as an arbitration sponsoring organization. It may be necessary to examine the particular agreement and proceeding under which the arbitration occurred to determine whether the proceeding was an arbitration. If so, Optional Paragraph B from § 20B.50[1] should be combined with this form. There may be additional bases for immunity, such as the statutory immunity granted to arbitrators and their sponsoring association in conducting arbitration of attorney's fee disputes [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(e)].

Note that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1, on which cases decided between January 1, 1986, and December 31, 1996, were based, gave arbitrators the immunity of judicial officers and may have provided a broader immunity than the common-law immunity recognized before and after that time [see 79 Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. 294 (1996)] .

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. It is probably appropriate to attach copies of the arbitration agreement and the award to the papers supporting the memorandum. The argument should establish that the acts on which liability is sought to be based were done within the scope of the arbitration agreement and the sponsoring organization's responsibilities in furthering that agreement and the arbitration proceeding.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the immunity or arbitrators and their sponsoring associations in arbitrating attorney's fee disputes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.430 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

For legal discussion and forms relating to demurrers, as well as a procedural checklist and research guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

For legal discussion and forms generally relating to summary judgment, as well as a procedural checklist and research guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sponsoring Organization's Immunity

Stasz v. Charles R. Schwab (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 420, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , is discussed at § 20B.50[3][a].

Plaintiff in Thiele v. RML Realty Partners (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416 , sued defendant American Arbitration Association (AAA) for negligence and breach of contract. After the hearing in the underlying arbitration hearing, plaintiff and the primary defendant settled their dispute. Plaintiff then told the AAA not to release their arbitration award because the matter had been settled. AAA released their award, for a sum less than the settlement; and the primary defendant refused to abide by the settlement agreement. The trial court sustained AAA's demurrer on the ground of arbitral immunity and dismissed the complaint.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting that the Legislature adopted then Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 in direct response to Baar v. Tigerman (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 979, 986-987, 189 Cal. Rptr. 834, 211 Cal. Rptr. 426 , which based its denial of immunity for the sponsoring organization on the fact that the arbitrator had no immunity for failing to render an award. Thus, former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 did not limit immunity to individual arbitrators but also served to shield the sponsoring organization from civil liability (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1528-1529) . Immunity for the sponsoring organization is a natural and necessary product of the policies underlying arbitral immunity (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1529) . The fact that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 did not mention sponsoring organizations, which Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(f) does, was not dispositive because the Legislative intent was clear (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1529-1530) . Public policy requires that independent decision-makers be free from fear of legal action arising out of the exercise of their arbitral functions (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1531) .

The court of appeal in American Arbitration Ass'n v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 899 , mandated the sustaining of the AAA's demurrer to a complaint by a participant in an arbitration, without leave to amend, and mandated the dismissal of the complaint, with prejudice. Plaintiff had failed to prosecute diligently the underlying arbitration; and the AAA had given notice that it would close the matter, with prejudice, unless a plaintiff responded by a specified date. After that date, notwithstanding the lack of a response, the AAA reopened the matter. Plaintiff had wanted the matter to remain closed and sued the AAA for damages and declaratory relief. The AAA demurred on the ground of arbitral immunity under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1, and the superior court overruled the demurrer.

In opposing the AAA's petition to the court of appeal for a writ of mandate, plaintiff argued that the immunity statute did not mention the arbitrator's sponsoring organization, whereas a similar arbitral immunity statute, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200(f), does specify the organization as well as the arbitrator. The court held the omission did not establish a Legislative intent not to extend immunity under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 to sponsoring organizations. On the contrary, extension of that immunity to the sponsoring organization was implicitly required in order to make the arbitrator's immunity real. Unless the organization is equally immune, the result is not immunity from liability but merely a shifting of liability (8 Cal. App. 4th 1131, 1133) .

[b] Scope of Organization's Immunity

The facts and procedural background of Thiele v. RML Realty Partners (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 416 , are discussed at [a], above. The point is not whether the challenged act was ministerial, administrative, or discretionary, but that the scope of arbitral immunity be defined by the functions it protects and serves. Acts sufficiently associated with the adjudicative phase of arbitration are protected by the immunity. Sending out the award is integrally related to the arbitral process and sufficiently associated with the adjudicative phase of the arbitration to justify immunity (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1530) . Not extending immunity for these acts to the sponsoring organization, an entity as indispensable to the arbitrator's job of arbitrating as are the courts to the judge's job of judging, would frustrate the purpose and effectiveness of arbitral immunity (14 Cal. App. 4th 1526, 1532) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Sponsoring Organization's Immunity

Plaintiff in Olson v. NASD (8th Cir. 1996) 85 F.3d 381 , sued the arbitrator and the sponsoring organization after an award against him was vacated for evident partiality of the arbitrator. The district court did not have jurisdiction over the arbitrator and dismissed the action against the sponsoring organization. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeals affirmed. Because an arbitrator's role is functionally equivalent to a judge's role, immunity is extended to arbitrators. Arbitral immunity is necessary to protect decisionmakers from undue influence and the decision-making process from attack by dissatisfied litigants. To give effect to these underlying policies, arbitral immunity extends to organizations sponsoring arbitration (85 F.3d 381, 382) . Without this extension, arbitral immunity would be almost meaningless because liability would simply be shifted from individual arbitrators to the sponsoring organizations. Appointment of arbitrators is a necessary part of arbitration administration, and thus protected by arbitral immunity (85 F.3d 381, 383) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20B ARBITRATION: SELECTING ARBITRATORS; ARBITRAL IMMUNITY
PART II. FORMS
B. Arbitral Immunity

2-20B California Points & Authorities § 20B.52

§ 20B.52 Arbitral Immunity Does Not Extend to Breach of Agreement to Conduct Arbitration

[1] FORM

THIS SITUATION FALLS WITHIN THE NARROW EXCEPTION TO ARBITRAL IMMUNITY APPLICABLE WHEN THE ARBITRATOR, FOR NO LEGAL REASON, REFUSES TO COMPLETE THE ARBITRATION AND FAILS TO RENDER AN AWARD.

A. Arbitral Immunity Will Not Protect Arbitrator or Arbitration Service Provider from Liability for Beach of Contract to Conduct Arbitration. Neither an arbitrator nor any related arbitration services provider is protected by arbitral immunity from liability for breach of a contract to conduct an arbitration if the arbitrator withdraws from an arbitration proceeding for no stated ethical reason [following evidence and argument, and offers to continue mediation efforts] and refuses to render an arbitration award (Morgan Phillips, Inc. v. JAMS/Endispute, L.L.C. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 800-804, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 782).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose a demurrer or otherwise support an action for breach of contract to conduct an arbitration or provide arbitration services against an arbitrator or arbitration service provider to anticipate or rebut a claim that the action is barred by arbitral immunity. It is for use when the facts of the situation fall within the exception to arbitral immunity. This is not a complete memorandum, but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural contest involved.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument should show that there was no issue regarding the arbitrator's ability to be fair or impartial nor any ethical reason for the arbitrator to recuse himself or herself, but just an unjustified refusal to complete the arbitration and render an award. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Related Memoranda

This authority is in opposition to those at §§ 20B.50 and 20B.51.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitral Immunity Will Not Protect Arbitrator or Arbitration Service Provider from Liability for Beach of Contract to Conduct Arbitration

Morgan Phillips, Inc. v. JAMS/Endispute, L.L.C. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 782 , began with a dispute between a mattress retailer and two of its suppliers. Plaintiff retailer engaged defendants John B. Bates, JAMS/Endispute, L.L.C., and JAMS, Inc. to mediate the dispute, which resulted in a settlement that provided for any further disputes regarding the matter to be submitted to Bates for binding resolution. Such a dispute arose in 2002. JAMS, Bates, and Morgan Phillips then entered a contract that was partly written, oral, and implied by law under which JAMS and Bates agreed to conduct a binding arbitration pursuant to the terms of the settlement agreement. Bates conducted a four-hour hearing in the matter after which he informed the parties that if they were unable to settle the dispute, he would render a binding arbitration decision. Bates knew that Morgan Phillips was in severe financial distress as a result of suppliers' breach, and would likely be unable to continue in business if the dispute was not decided promptly. After the arbitration hearing was concluded and the case was ready for decision, Bates tried to settle the case without rendering an arbitration award. When no settlement was forthcoming, Bates announced, with no lawful justification, that he was withdrawing as the arbitrator. He thereafter failed and refused to issue a binding arbitration award. Morgan Phillips alleged that Bates' conduct was part of an unlawful plan and scheme to coerce Morgan Phillips to settle the dispute. The complaint contained causes of action against both JAMS and Bates for breach of contract and for negligent breach of the duty to provide binding arbitration services, and against JAMS alone a representative action for unfair competition and false advertising, in violation of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 17200 and 17500. JAMS and Bates demurred to the complaint on several grounds, including arbitral immunity. The trial court sustained the demurrer on that ground. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, agreeing with plaintiff, that Bates improperly withdrew from the arbitration proceeding, without cause, and was not protected by arbitral immunity (140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 800, 804) . Since repeal of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1280.1 California common law has provided arbitrators with immunity coextensive to that of judicial officers when acting in the capacity of arbitrator under any statute or contract. That immunity protects arbitrators from civil liability for conduct in their quasi-judicial capacity (140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 800) . However, California common law recognizes a narrow exception to arbitral immunity: the immunity does not apply to the arbitrator's breach of contract by failing to make any decision at all. The rationale is that failure to render an arbitration award is not integral to the arbitration process but rather a breakdown of that process. For nonfeasance by a judge, litigants can petition for an extraordinary writ to compel action. For nonfeasance by an arbitrator, the parties' only remedy is a civil suit for specific performance or damages. The scope of the exception is best explained in Baar v. Tigerman (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 979, 983-985 (140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 801). Mindful of the need to protect arbitrators from vexatious litigation arising from conduct in their quasi-judicial function, the court of appeal still felt that the allegations portrayed conduct that was the antithesis of the adjudicatory purpose of arbitration and thus, could not be used to immunize the unprincipled abandonment of the arbitration and refusal to make a decision (140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 802) . The court discussed authorities and commentators cited by defendants to the effect that only complete nonperformance would bar immunity, saying if those authorities and commentators indicated that conducting some or all of the arbitration proceeding creates immunity for the unjustified failure to render an award, they disagreed Bates' alleged unjustified abandonment of the arbitration and refusal to render an award while offering to continue mediation (if true) was effectively a complete nonperformance of the ultimate object of the arbitration he contracted to conduct. The court emphasized that this situation was not a decision to withdraw because of substantial doubt of the ability to be fair and impartial, or because of a conflict of interest, which would be entitled to immunity. Nor did they mean to suggest that parties to an arbitration proceeding are entitled to litigate the validity of an arbitrator's stated ethical grounds for recusal in a later civil suit against the arbitrator or the sponsoring organization for breach of the duty to conduct a binding arbitration. In this case, accepting the allegations as true, Bates withdrew without justification in order to coerce a settlement. That amounted to a breach of his contractual duty to conduct a binding arbitration (140 Cal. App. 4th 795, 803) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD

2-20C California Points & Authorities 20C.syn

§ 20C.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20C: ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD

§ 20C.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 20C.02 Governing Law

[1] Correcting, Confirming, or Vacating Award

§ 20C.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 20C.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 20C.05-20C.09 [Reserved]

§ 20C.10 Supporting Petition to Confirm Arbitration Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confirmation of Award Unless Otherwise Ordered

[b] Award Presumed Valid

[c] Request for Correction Comes Too Late

[d] Venue for Filing Petition to Confirm Award

[e] Post-Award, Pre-Judgment Interest

[f] Partial Final Award

[g] Post-Arbitration Attorney's Fees

§ 20C.11 Opposing Petition to Vacate Arbitration Award and Requesting Confirmation of Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Response Requesting Confirmation of Award

§ 20C.12 Supporting Petition or Response Requesting Award Be Corrected and Confirmed as Corrected

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grounds for Correcting Award: Evident Miscalculation of Figures or Mistake in Description

[b] Grounds for Correcting Award: Arbitrator Exceeded Power and Award Is Correctable Without Affecting Merits

[c] Tolling of Time for Filing Petition Requesting Correction

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Grounds for Correcting Award

§ 20C.13 Order Compelling Arbitration Was Made by Disqualified Judge

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Order Compelling Arbitration Was Made by Disqualified Judge

§ 20C.14 [Reserved]

§ 20C.15 Corrected Award Served Late and Making Corrections Beyond Arbitrator's Powers Is Not To Be Given Effect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corrected Award Served More than 30 Days After Service of Award

[b] Arbitrator Cannot Correct Award for Errors of Law

§§ 20C.16-20C.19 [Reserved]

§ 20C.20 Supporting Petition to Vacate Arbitration Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misconduct of Neutral Arbitrator

[b] Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers

[c] Arbitrator Failed to Disqualify Self

[d] Deemed Admission If Response Untimely

[e] Time for Filing Petition to Vacate Award

[f] Arbitrator's Testimony May Not Be Considered

[g] Party Who Had Award Vacated Is Entitled to Post-Arbitration Costs and Attorney's Fees

[h] Prejudicial Conduct by Arbitrators

§ 20C.21 Opposing Petition to Confirm Arbitration Award and Requesting Award Be Vacated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Response Requesting Vacation or Correction

§ 20C.22 Request for Order for Rehearing of Controversy After Arbitration Award Is Vacated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Award That Is Uncertain on Any Submitted Issue Must Be Reheard

§§ 20C.23-20C.29 [Reserved]

§ 20C.30 Correcting Award by Striking Matters In Excess of Arbitrator's Power

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award by Striking Portion in Excess of Arbitrators' Authority

[b] Court May Correct Award by Striking Portion Requiring Employee to Pay Arbitral Expenses

§ 20C.31 Correcting Award by Striking Attorney's Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award of Attorney's Fees Not Authorized

§ 20C.32 Correcting Award by Striking Matters Beyond Powers of Uninsured Motorist Arbitrator

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reducing Uninsured Motorist Award to Policy Limits

[b] Extent of Coverage Was Not Submitted to Arbitrator for Determination

§§ 20C.33-20C.39 [Reserved]

§ 20C.40 Correcting Award by Striking Surplusage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award by Striking Surplusage

§§ 20C.41-20C.49 [Reserved]

§ 20C.50 Correcting Award by Changing Name of Party to One Over Whom Arbitrator Had Personal Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award Because of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

§§ 20C.51-20C.54 [Reserved]

§ 20C.55 Court Cannot Correct Award Regarding Attorney's Fees After Issue Was Submitted to Arbitrator

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Add Attorney's Fees

[b] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Attorney's Fees

§ 20C.56 Court Cannot Correct Award Regarding Sanctions on Attorney of Party Under Arbitration Agreement Allowing Arbitration of Any Issues Arising from Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Sanctions Against Attorney Under Arbitration Agreement Allowing Arbitration of Any Issues Arising from Contract

§§ 20C.57-20C.59 [Reserved]

§ 20C.60 Stipulation to Arbitrate Was Valid and Binding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stipulation to Arbitrate Was Valid and Binding

[b] Oral Stipulation Was Binding

§ 20C.61 "Self-Executing" Agreement Did Not Require an Order to Compel Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Self-Executing" Type of Agreement Needs No Order to Compel

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Self-Executing" Type of Agreement Needs No Order to Compel

§ 20C.62 Defense Is Unavailable as Outside the Scope of the Matters Committed to Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonarbitrable Defense Is Unavailable Against Petition to Confirm Award

§ 20C.63 Arbitrators of Uninsured Motorist Claim Have Power to Determine Subordinate Issues

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Physical Contact With Uninsured Motor Vehicle Is Fact Necessary to Determine to Uninsured Motorist Claim

[b] Parties Submitted to Arbitrator Issue of Workers' Compensation Setoff

[c] Arbitrator May Award Section 998 Costs In Excess of Uninsured Motorist Coverage Limit

§ 20C.64 Unilateral Rearbitration Clause in Health Services Contract Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Rearbitration Clause in Health Services Contract Is Unenforceable

§ 20C.65 Agreement Authorizes Costs to Be Assessed Against Disaffirming Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorizes Award Costs of Both Arbitration and Court Proceeding

§ 20C.66 Attorney's Dismissal of Action for Fees Repudiated Rejection of Award in Mandatory Fee Arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Party's Dismissal of Civil Action Repudiated Rejection of Award Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203

§§ 20C.67-20C.69 [Reserved]

§ 20C.70 Award Has Not Been Shown to Result from Undue Means

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Impact or Nexus Must Be Shown

§§ 20C.71-20C.79 [Reserved]

§ 20C.80 Arbitrator Was Not Improperly Biased

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Impression of Arbitrator's Bias Must Be Reasonable One

[b] No Close Business Relationship Shown Between Arbitrator and Party

[c] Party Arbitrator Able to Be Partisan

[d] Personal Relationship Between Arbitrator and Party Does Not Establish Bias

[e] Limitation on Arbitrator's Testimony in Determining Bias

[f] Arbitrator Did Not Know of Potential Conflict Until After Rendition of Award

[g] Existence of Bias Is Determined by Trier of Fact

[h] Proposed Arbitrator Was Not Required to Disclose Prior Service as Uncompensated Mediator

[i] Parent Company Was Not Party So Disclosure of Business Relationship Was Not Required

[j] Board Membership in Professional Organization Need Not Be Disclosed

[k] $500 Contribution to Mayoral Campaign Need Not Be Disclosed

[l] Unrequired Disclosure Is Not Grounds for Vacating Award

[m] Failure to Disclose All Details of Prior Arbitrations Is Not Necessarily Grounds for Vacation of Arbitration Award

[n] Arbitrator Has No Duty to Disclose Arbitrator's Law Firm's Past Representation of Third Party Who Had Adversarial Relationship With a Party.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Impression of Arbitrator's Bias Must Be Reasonable One

[b] Party Arbitrator Able to Be Partisan

[c] Unrequired Disclosure Is Not Grounds for Vacating Award

§ 20C.81 Party's Recognition of Arbitrator from Earlier Mediation, Waiver, and Participation in Arbitration Foreclosed Need to Vacate Award Based on Arbitrator's Failure to Make Additional Disclosure

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party's Knowledge and Arbitrator's Disclosure Foreclose Need to Vacate Award

§§ 20C.82-20C.89 [Reserved]

§ 20C.90 Mistake of Law Generally Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Justify Vacating Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Mistake of Law Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacation of Award in Absence of Clear Agreement to Contrary

[a1] Parties Have Not Clearly Agreed to Judicial Review for Errors of Law

[b] Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Unsound Reasoning

[c] Uninsured Motorist Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Mistake of Law

[d] Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Require Review for Manifest Disregard of Law

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Mistake of Law Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacation of Award

[b] Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Unsound Reasoning

§ 20C.91 Arbitration Awards May Be Based on Broad Principles of Equity and Justice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators May Base Their Decision on Broad Principles of Equity and Justice

[b] Arbitrator May Grant Relief That Would Exceed Power of Court to Grant

[c] Arbitrator's Grant of Relief Bears Rational Relationship to Breach

§ 20C.92 Relief Granted by Arbitration Award Need Not Be Specifically Provided for by Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Granted Need Not Be Specifically Authorized by Contract

§§ 20C.93-20C.99 [Reserved]

§ 20C.100 Arbitrators May Award Damages for Breach of Contract Though Not Submitted as an Issue for Determination

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators May Award Damages for Breach of Contract, Though Not Submitted as an Issue for Determination

§ 20C.101 Arbitrators Disposed of All Issues Which Had to Be Decided

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Issues Submitted to Arbitration Are Presumed to Have Been Resolved

[b] Arbitrator Need Only Determine Necessary Issues

[c] Arbitrators Decide Which Are "Necessary" Issues

[d] Arbitrator May Determine Legal Issues as Distinct From Factual Ones

[e] The Fact That An Award Is Not Enforceable as Judgment Is Not Grounds for Vacating the Award

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitrators Decide Which Are "Necessary" Issues

§ 20C.102 Failure to Find on Issue That Was Not Expressly Raised and Supported

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Is Proper Despite Failure to Determine Claim That Was Not Expressly Raised and Supported

§ 20C.103 Arbitrator May Amend Award on Own Initiative to Correct Inadvertent Omission

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Award by Arbitrator on Own Initiative

§ 20C.104 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Failing to Award Discovery Sanctions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Power Not to Impose Discovery Sanction

§ 20C.105 Arbitrator Not Court Decides Whether Agreement Impliedly Prevents Classwide Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Not Court Decides Whether Agreement Impliedly Prevents Classwide Arbitration

§ 20C.106 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Determining Matter in Telephonic Pre-Hearing Conference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator May Determine Matter in Prehearing Telephonic Conference

§ 20C.107 Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Determining Second Dispute Under Same Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Deciding Second Dispute

§ 20C.108 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Excusing Futile Performance of a Condition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Has Inherent Power to Excuse Performance That Would Be Futile

§ 20C.109 [Reserved]

§ 20C.110 Agreement Authorizes Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorizes Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

[b] Court Has No Authority to Modify Arbitrator's Decision Regarding Which Party Prevailed

[c] Stipulation to Arbitrate Injured Worker's Claim Authorizes Award of Statutory Attorney's Fees

[d] Arbitration Agreement Covering Damage Claims Under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civil Code Section 1750 et seq.) Incorporates Provision for Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorized Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

§ 20C.111 Private Arbitration Rules Applied by Agreement Allocate Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Rules Made Applicable by Agreement Allocate Costs

[b] Applicable Rules Allocate Costs Equally

§§ 20C.112-20C.119 [Reserved]

§ 20C.120 Punitive Damages in Medical Malpractice Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Language of Agreement in Medical Services Contract Is Susceptible to Interpretation to Include Claims or Issues Relating to Punitive Damages

[b] Limitations on Recovery of Noneconomic Losses in Medical Malpractice Action Do Not Preclude Award of Punitive Damages Based on Fraud, Willful Neglect, and Malicious Acts

[c] Arbitrator May Base Decision on Justice and Equity

§ 20C.121 Punitive Damages Expressly Provided for By Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Parties' Pleadings and Conduct Indicate Agreement

[b] Written Agreement

§ 20C.122 Punitive Damages Implied by Agreement With Subject Matter Likely to Give Rise to Claims for Punitive Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Contemplated Arbitration of Claims Giving Rise to Punitive Damages

§ 20C.123 Party's Conduct Empowered Arbitrator to Strike Unconscionable Damage Limitation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Parties Conduct Empowered Arbitrator to Award Consequential Damages

§§ 20C.124-20C.129 [Reserved]

§ 20C.130 Arbitration Rehearing Was Not Required on Previously Available Evidence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators Need Not Reopen Hearing for Evidence Previously Presented or Available

[b] Arbitrator's Determination of Issue by Summary Adjudication Does Not Amount to Failure to Hear Evidence

§ 20C.131 Arbitrator Was Not Required to Continue Hearing so Doctors Could Testify

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Refusing to Postpone Hearing

[b] Arbitrator Need Not Continue Hearing for Testimony When Written Records Are Available

§ 20C.132 Method of Selecting Arbitrators Was Not Unconscionable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Selection Method Not Unconscionable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Selection Method Not Unconscionable

§ 20C.133 Illegality of Contract Provision Does Not Void Entire Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Is Not Incompatible With Statutory Right

[b] Legal and Illegal Transactions Under Same Contract

[c] No Waiver by Failing to Object to Arbitration

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Not Incompatible With Statutory Right

§§ 20C.134-20C.149 [Reserved]

§ 20C.150 No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Unenforceable When No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

[b] When Attorney at Law Did Not Have Authority to Bind Client and Client Did Not Ratify or Consent to Agreement, No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Unenforceable When No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

§ 20C.151 Award Procured by Undue Means

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fraud of Party

§§ 20C.152-20C.169 [Reserved]

§ 20C.170 Neutral Arbitrator Failed to Reveal Possibility of Bias

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Disclosures Required of Neutral Arbitrators

[b] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Any Possibility of Bias

[c] Sporadic Business Dealings Are Sufficient for Vacating Award

[d] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Past Service as Party Arbitrator

[e] Neutral Arbitrator to Disclose Service as Attorney in Second Arbitration in Which Attorney for Party to Present Arbitration Serves as Arbitrator

[f] Neutral Fire Insurance Appraiser to Reveal Any Possible Interest

[g] Arbitrator Failed to Disclose Acceptance of Employment as Neutral During Pendency of Arbitration

[h] Ties to Party's Insurer Had to Be Disclosed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Any Possibility of Bias

§ 20C.171 Parties' Agreement Supercedes Normal Standards

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Has No Power to Consider Extrinsic Evidence

§§ 20C.172-20C.189 [Reserved]

§ 20C.190 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Awarding Relief Not Provided for by Law or Parties' Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Contrary to Parties' Agreement

[b] Insurance Appraiser Had No Authority to Determine Coverage

§ 20C.191 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Deciding Issues Which Only Receiver Had Standing to Tender

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Determining Claims of Entity in Receivership

§ 20C.192 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Dismissing Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Had No Power to Dismiss Arbitration for Change in Law

§ 20C.193 Arbitrator's Refusal to Postpone Hearing Was Prejudicial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Refusal to Postpone Hearing

§ 20C.194 Arbitrator Made Error of Law Subject to Judicial Review by Clear Term of Arbitration Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The California Arbitration Act Permits Enforcement of Clear Agreements for Judicial Review of Merits of Arbitration Award

[b] The Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Preempt California Rule Allowing Arbitration Agreements to Expand Scope of Judicial Review

§§ 20C.195-20C.209 [Reserved]

§ 20C.210 Award Based on Illegal Contract or Contract Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

[b] Award Based on Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable

[c] License Is Required to Confirm Award if License Is Required to Bring Action

[d] Objection Is Not Waived if Used to Oppose Confirmation

[e] Minor Was Entitled to, and Did, Disaffirm Contract Requiring Arbitration

[f] Award Against Unrepresented Minor Must Be Vacated

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

[b] Award Based on Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable

§ 20C.211 Award That Cannot Be Reconciled With Terms of Court Order Must Be Vacated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award That Cannot Be Reconciled With Terms of Court Order Must Be Vacated

§ 20C.212 Award Taken Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conditions for Relief Under Code Civ. Proc. § 473

[b] Relief From Nonjudicial Arbitration Award Taken Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.01

§ 20C.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda and contentions relating to correcting, confirming, or vacating arbitration awards under private agreements pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration Clauses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.02

§ 20C.02 Governing Law

[1] Correcting, Confirming, or Vacating Award

A party to an arbitration may petition the court to confirm the award within four years of issuance of the award [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1285, 1288; see §§ 20C.10, 20C.60 et seq.].

A response may be filed in opposition to the petition to confirm and, if it is not exclusively in the form of a request to vacate the award, may include such a request [Code Civ. Proc. § 1285.2; see § 20C.21[1]].

A petition to vacate an award or correct an award must be served and filed within 100 days after issuance of the award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1288; see §§ 20C.20[1] (vacate); 20C.12[1] (correct)].

Procedural requirements for vacating an award are set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.4. The grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 for vacating an award are considered exclusive bases for setting aside the award [State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Guleserian (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 397, 402, 104 Cal. Rptr. 683]. The major grounds for vacating an award are substantial prejudice to the rights of a party by misconduct of a neutral arbitrator, or by any conduct of the arbitrators contrary to the provisions of the governing law, including failure to make timely disclosure of any grounds for disqualification or to disqualify himself or herself on timely demand of a party, for any of the grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3), (a)(5), (a)(6)].

If the award is vacated, a rehearing may be ordered pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1287. A request for rehearing may be combined with a petition or request to vacate the award [see § 20C.22].

If a petition to vacate is filed, a response may be filed in opposition to the petition. A response may request the court to confirm the award, and would be based on the same grounds as a petition to confirm the award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1285.2; see §§ 20C.11[1], 20C.60 et seq.].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1286 requires the court to confirm the award if it does not vacate the award, or to correct and then confirm the award, or to dismiss the proceeding. Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.2 provides for dismissal when the court determines that a particular person named as a respondent was not bound by the award and was not a party to the arbitration [compare § 20C.50[1] (correcting award to reflect name of party over whom arbitrator did have jurisdiction); Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award, § 20E.13[1] (court's modification of judgment confirming award to name alter ego as additional judgment debtor)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionValidity of ADR Methods

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.03

§ 20C.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in a summary judgment proceeding. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, tables of contents and authorities, and proof of service are not counted. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Chapter 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other forms to form a complete memorandum. For detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06. For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.04

§ 20C.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of motions and other papers relating to private contractual arbitration proceedings, see:

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

Chapters in this publication with related forms include:

- For compelling arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

- For resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting .

- For selecting arbitrators and determining arbitral immunity, see Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity .

- For dismissing an arbitration, see Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing .

- For determining the effect of an arbitration award, see Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award .

- For situations in which attorney's fees may be recovered, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

- For contract provisions in general, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

- For situations in which contracts may be avoided or declared void, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

- For requirements of injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

- For general principles relating to specific performance of contracts, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesSpecific Performance

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.05-20C.09

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.10

§ 20C.10 Supporting Petition to Confirm Arbitration Award

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION TO Petitioner,	)	CONFIRM AWARD
vs.	)	[LIMITED CIVIL CASE]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Respondent.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE IT IS PRESUMED TO BE VALID IN THE ABSENCE OF A SHOWING THAT IT IS NOT VALID.

A. Petition to Confirm Award. A party to an arbitration in which an award has been made may petition the court to confirm the award (Code Civ. Proc. § 1285).

B. Confirmation of Award Unless Otherwise Ordered. If a petition or response under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1285 through 1287.6 is duly served and filed after an award has been rendered, the court shall confirm the award as made[, whether rendered in California or another state], unless, in accordance with those statutes, it corrects the award and confirms it as corrected, vacates the award, or dismisses the proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286; see Weinberg v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1083, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224 ; Pacific Law Group: USA v. Gibson (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 577, 581-582, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878).

C. Award Presumed Valid. Every presumption is in favor of the validity of an arbitration award. The party claiming invalidity has the burden of supporting that claim with evidence (United Brotherhood of Carpenters Etc., v. De Mello (1973) 22 Cal. App. 3d 838, 840, 100 Cal. Rptr. 564 ; Walter v. National Indem. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 630, 633, 83 Cal. Rptr. 803).

[Optional] D. Time for Filing Petition to Confirm Award. A petition to confirm an award must be served and filed not later than four years after the date of service of a signed copy of the award on petitioner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1288).

[Optional] E. Earliest Time Petition May Be Filed. No petition may be served and filed under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1285-1288.8 until at least 10 days after service of a signed copy of the award on petitioner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.4).

[Optional] F. Request for Correction Comes Too Late. The award must be confirmed as written and cannot be corrected as/if requested by _____ [name or status of party, e.g., respondent] because the request for correction comes too late: it was required to have been filed within 100 days after the award was served, or in this case, on or before _____ [date] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1288 (petition), 1288.2 (response); Weinberg v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1083-1084, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224).

[Optional] G. Venue for Filing Petition to Confirm Award. Except as otherwise provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1292-1293.2, any petition made after the commencement or completion of arbitration shall be filed in a court having jurisdiction in the county where the arbitration is being or has been held, or, if not held exclusively in any one county of California, or if held outside California, then the petition shall be filed as provided in Section 1292 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1292.2).

[Optional] H. Jurisdiction of Petition to Confirm[, Correct, or Vacate] Award as Limited Civil Case. Superior courts have jurisdiction over arbitration-related petitions whether the matter is a limited or unlimited civil case (see Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10; Code Civ. Proc. § 86(a)(10)(A)).

[Optional] I. Post-Award, Pre-Judgment Interest. A successful party to arbitration is entitled to "recover damages certain" within the meaning of Civil Code Section 3287(a) on the date the arbitrator renders the award. The arbitration award itself is a new and fixed liability regardless of the elements that comprised that liability. Thus, _____ [an order or a judgment] confirming an arbitration award should include interest on the award from the date of the award to the date of judgment (County of Solano v. Lionsgate Corporation (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 741, 752-754, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 362 ; Pierotti v. Torian (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 27-28, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 ; Britz, Inc. v. Alfa-Laval Food & Dairy Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1106-1107, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700).

[Optional] J. Partial Final Award. As long as the arbitrator has not improperly left undecided issues necessary in order to determine the controversy, and the partial final award bears a rational relationship to the contract and the breach, a partial final award meets the requirements of Code Civil Procedure, Section 1283.4. A partial final award may settle some issues and reserve jurisdiction over other issues. The partial final award may be confirmed and an interlocutory judgment entered thereon (Roehl v. Ritchie (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 351-352, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185 ; Hightower v. Superior Court (O'Dowd) (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1441, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209).

[Optional] K. Post-Arbitration Attorney's Fees. Because the arbitration clause provided that the prevailing party be awarded his or her attorney's fees and the arbitrator named the prevailing party, [and even though the arbitrator determined that each party bear its own attorney's fees for the arbitration], _____ [name], as the prevailing party, is entitled by the [mandatory] language of the contractual attorney fees clause and Code of Civil Procedure, Section 1293.2 to reasonable attorney feesand costs incurred in the post-arbitration judicial proceedings (Carole Ring & Associates v. Nicastro (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 260-262, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

Optional Paragraph I. may be used even if the petition to confirm the arbitration award contained no prayer for post-award pre-judgment interest under Civ. Code § 3287(a) [see Britz, Inc. v. Alfa-Laval Food & Dairy Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1106, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700] . In addition, if the dispute involves personal injury and interest is claimed under Civ. Code § 3291 and Code Civ. Proc. § 998 (interest at the legal rate from date of plaintiff's first offer that exceeded amount of award), but the arbitrator did not award interest on that basis, counsel may wish to include authority from Ch. 121, Interest, § 121.43. Optional Paragraph J. is for use in the unusual situation in which the arbitrator has issued a partial final award. If counsel uses Optional Paragraph J., he or she may want to include authority from § 20C.90. Optional Paragraph K. is for use when the petitioner is entitled to attorney's fees for post-arbitration judicial proceeding in accordance with the parties' agreement and the arbitrator's finding that the petitioner is the prevailing party. The bracketed language is for use when the arbitrator denied petitioner its attorney's fees for the arbitration. For other memoranda addressing the right to attorney's fees, see §§ 20C.55, 20C.110.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with forms from § 20C.60 et seq. addressing any issue that petitioner anticipates may be in contention.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that no petition to vacate has yet been filed, when the award was served on petitioner, and that the petition for confirmation is timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of petition to confirm an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, regarding other matters that the petition may need to address, see § 20C.60 et seq.

If the dispute involves personal injury and interest is claimed under Civ. Code § 3291 and Code Civ. Proc. § 998 (interest at the legal rate from date of plaintiff's first offer that exceeded amount of award), but the arbitrator did not award interest on that basis, counsel may wish to include authority from Ch. 121, Interest, § 121.43.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For a form that opposes this form, see § 20C.20.

For a form for use by an insurer to make a timely petition to have an uninsured motorist award corrected to reflect that its liability does not exceed its policy limits [to avoid the situation in the authority in Optional Paragraph F (discussed in [3][c], below)], see § 20C.32.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confirmation of Award Unless Otherwise Ordered

Weinberg v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224 , is discussed in [c], below.

The court of appeal in Pacific Law Group: USA v. Gibson (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 577, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878 , affirmed an award that, in part, determined a corporate officer was not personally liable for attorney's fees incurred by the corporation. Plaintiff raised the argument that only awards for payment of sums that remain unpaid may be confirmed. Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 or 1286 neither expressly not impliedly imposesthat condition. All awards are entitled to confirmation, not just unpaid ones (6 Cal. App. 4th 577, 581-582) .

[b] Award Presumed Valid

In United Brotherhood of Carpenters Etc., v. De Mello (1973) 22 Cal. App. 3d 838, 100 Cal. Rptr. 564 , written notice of an arbitration award in favor of the union was sent to the employer, but it was signed by only one arbitrator contrary to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4, which requires signature of the arbitrators concurring in the award. The award was confirmed, and the employer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the irregularity did not vitiate the award. Noting that courts must give every intendment to validity of an award, the court observed that the only course open to the employer's benefit for such an error would be vacation of the award. To achieve that result, the employer would have to demonstrate substantial prejudice in addition to error, as required under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(c) (requiring substantial prejudice to vacate on the ground of conduct of arbitrators contrary to arbitration statutes) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3) and (5)]. However, no prejudice was shown in this case (22 Cal. App. 3d 838, 840) .

Walter v. National Indem. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 630, 83 Cal. Rptr. 803 , involved a claim, by the heir of a passenger killed in a car driven by an insured, against the driver's uninsured motorist carrier. The award in favor of the heir was signed on the same day the heir died. There was no evidence whether the award was signed before or after the heir's time of death. The award in the name of the heir was confirmed, and defendant insurer appealed.

The court of appeal reversed because the deceased heir's personal representative was the necessary and proper party to petition for confirmation. However, with respect to the award, the court stated that, as a settled proposition, every intendment and presumption is in favor of the validity of an arbitration award, and that the burden is on the party claiming any invalidity to support that claim with evidence. Because there was no such evidence in the record, the court held as a matter of law that the heir should be deemed to have been alive at the moment when the arbitrator signed the award (3 Cal. App. 3d 630, 633) .

[c] Request for Correction Comes Too Late

Weinberg v. Safeco Insurance Co. (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224 , involved consolidated appeals: an appeal of a judgment confirming an uninsured motorist arbitration award and a bad faith judgment in the insurer's favor. On March 3, 2000, the uninsured motorist arbitrator had awarded the injured insured damages far in excess of his policy limits. The insurer paid the insured the policy limits. The insured sued the insurer for bad faith; judgment was for the insurance company, but it appealed the ruling on the insured's post-judgment motion to tax costs. Just before the trial in the bad faith case, on January 25, 2003, the insured petitioned to have the uninsured motorist award confirmed into a money judgment. Safeco's response sought neither to vacate the award not to have it corrected. The petition was granted; and Safeco appealed that judgment, contending the award should not have been confirmed because the arbitrator did not determine its liability to the insured, only the uninsured motorist's liability to the insured.

The court of appeal affirmed both judgments (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1079, 1085, 1087-1088) . Both in response to the petition to confirm the award and on appeal, Safeco argued that uninsured motorist arbitration awards cannot be confirmed because they are not liability assessments against the insurer. The policy adhered to the statutory language [see Ins. Code § 11580.2(f)], which provides that when the insured and insurer are unable to agree, an arbitrator must decide (1) whether the insured is entitled to recover damages against the uninsured motorist, and if so, (2) in what amount (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1082) . The trial court stated, and the appellate court eventually agreed, it had no jurisdiction to do anything other than confirm the award, because no request to correct or vacate the award had been filed (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1083) . Typically the insured will not have the uninsured motorist award confirmed, but will accept settlement from the insurer in the amount of the policy limits and then seek to recover the remainder from the uninsured motorist. The court noted the problem with the uninsured motorist statute, saying that unless and until the Legislature provides a mechanism to address what is to be done when the arbitrator is not asked to determine the insurer's liability, but issues an award of damages in excess of the policy limits, it is incumbent on the insurer to file a timely request to have the award corrected or vacated (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1084) .

[d] Venue for Filing Petition to Confirm Award

Code Civ. Proc. § 1292 is set forth at Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10[1], Paragraph B.

[e] Post-Award, Pre-Judgment Interest

The facts and procedural background of County of Solano v. Lionsgate Corporation (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 741, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 362 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the arbitrability of claims under the False Claims Act (Gov. Code § 12650 et seq.) are discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.22[3][k]. Lionsgate argued that the award of prejudgment interest was improper both because the False Claims Act (Gov. Code § 12650 et seq.) does not provide for prejudgment interest and because there was no award of "damages" on which prejudgment interest could be granted. The court held that prejudgment interest could be awarded under Civ. Code § 3287 even if it was not specifically authorized by the statute underlying the plaintiff's claims (126 Cal. App. 4th 741, 752) . Although the penalties were not "damages," the court found that they were sufficient under Civ. Code § 3287(a) to support an award of prejudgment interest as of the day they were made certain, that is, the date of the final award, which itself became a contractual obligation at that point. Case law establishes the County's right to postaward, prejudgment interest running from the date the final award was entered (126 Cal. App. 4th 741, 753) . The trial court should have vacated that portion of the award granting the County prejudgment interest for the period prior to entry of the final arbitration award. Thus, the court of appeal reversed that part of the judgment and directed the trail court to vacate thatportion of the award, but in all other respects affirmed (126 Cal. App. 4th 741, 753-754) .

The parties to Pierotti v. Torian (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 , were automobile dealers, and agreed to develop an "auto mall" in Fremont where they would share space. In 1987, defendant negotiated with a seller of land for the purchase of 75 acres for the mall. Defendant received a 3 percent commission on the sale. The letter of understanding which memorialized the terms of the purchase did not mention defendant's commission, nor did defendant mention it to the other dealers until after the transaction was completed. In 1990, the dealers entered into a partnership agreement which contained an arbitration provision, which entitled the prevailing party in arbitration to reasonable attorney's fees and costs. Plaintiff's dealerships were the only ones at the mall from November, 1991, until June, 1992, when he closed them. Due to a slack economy, the mall did not become an economic reality until 1995. Plaintiff brought two claims against defendant; one alleging fraud and breach of contract by inducing plaintiff to move his dealerships to the mall when defendant never had any intention of moving his dealership there; and another for breach of fiduciary duty by not disclosing the commission to the other dealers until after that purchase was completed. Defendant compelled arbitration of both claims pursuant to the arbitration clause in the partnership agreement. The arbitrator found for defendant on the first claim and for plaintiff on the second claim, awarding plaintiff $345,726 of the $850,000 commission. The arbitrator also awarded $700,000 in punitive damages, found that plaintiff and the other claimants were prevailing parties within the meaning of the partnership agreement, and awarded them costs and $363,513 in attorney's fees. Plaintiff moved for confirmation of the award and for post-arbitration, pre-judgment interest on the award. Defendant moved to have the award corrected on the ground the arbitrator exceeded his powers by awarding attorney's fees. The curt confirmed the award, but did not award post-arbitration, pre-judgment interest. Both parties appealed, plaintiff challenging the denial of post-arbitration, pre-judgment interest, and defendant challenging the award of attorney's fees.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment except that it remanded to the trial court to calculate and award post-award, pre-judgment interest. In upholding the award of attorney's fees, the court of appeal sanctioned defendant and its attorneys for engaging in a frivolous appeal with respect to those fees (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 37) . That portion of the opinion is discussed at § 20C.110[3][b]. With respect to the interest, the court of appeal noted that defendant had not contested the award of interest in the trial court, and the court offered no explanation for denying them (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 27) . The court of appeal said that a successful party to arbitration is entitled to "recover damages certain" within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3287(a) on the date the arbitrator renders the award. The arbitration award itself results in a new and fixed liability regardless of the elements that comprised that liability. Thus, a judgment confirming an arbitration award should include interest on the award from the date of the award to the date of judgment (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 27-28) . Denying the successful party interest would punish that party for using arbitration instead of the court system (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 27) .

Britz, Inc. v. Alfa-Laval Food & Dairy Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1106-1107, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700 , arose out of equipment sales and lease transactions amounting to approximately $1.5 million. Arbitration was compelled over plaintiffs' objections that fraud in the inducement of the contract containing the arbitration clause prohibited arbitration. The portion of the opinion addressing the fraud issue is discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.42[4][a]. The arbitrator issued a final award in defendants' favor for $587,425, plus costs and attorney fees in an unspecified amount. After additional submissions by the parties, the arbitrator issued a supplemental award of $1,412,953.75 for defendants' attorney fees and $696,747.45 as costs. Plaintiffs sought to vacate the award on the grounds of fraud and the bias of one of the arbitrators. The trial court dismissed the petition to vacate the award and granted defendants' petition to confirm the award, including attorney fees and costs, with interest from the date of the award through entry of judgment. Plaintiffs appealed, contending among other things, that the trial court erred in awarding prejudgment interest, asserting three separate reasons.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded with instructions to the trial court to hold evidentiary hearings on specific matters relating to bias. The portion of the opinion addressing the issue of bias is discussed at § 20C.170[4][a]. With respect to post-award, pre-judgment interest, plaintiffs claimed it was error to award interest because it was not demanded in the petition to confirm the award. The court of appeal said that in a contested action, prejudgment interest may be awarded, when the plaintiff is entitled to it, even though the complaint contains no prayer for interest; and there is no reason to distinguish between the award of interest on a complaint and on a petition to confirm an arbitration award (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1106) . Plaintiffs' second contention was that defendants' claims were unliquidated and therefore could not be the subject of an interest award under Civ. Code § 3287, which provides, in part: "Every person who is entitled to recover damages certain, ... and the right to recover which is vested in him upon a particular day, is entitled also to recover interest thereon from that day [with certain exceptions not relevant here]." Interest was awarded not on the unliquidated contract claims, but solely on the arbitration award from the date of the award. As of the date of the award, defendants were entitled to "recover damages certain" through entry of judgment confirming the award (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1106) . Third, plaintiffs argued, as to attorney fees and costs, the award of prejudgment interest thereon "pile[s] 'damages' (interest) on top of other 'damages' (attorneys' fees and costs) which were themselves awarded on Alfa-Laval's modest breach of contract damage claim." The court said that this argument misconceived the subject of the superior court petition. The petition was not for an award of damages and attorney fees on the original contracts. That underlying dispute was the subject of the arbitration, and had been concluded by the time of the superior court petition to confirm the award. The arbitration award itself resulted in a new and fixed liability. Regardless of the individual elements that comprised that liability, defendants were entitled to payment of the fixed sum on issuance of the award. In the context of a judicial judgment, interest after judgment accrues as to the entire award, including attorney fees. Prejudgment interest awarded after arbitration serves the same purpose. Although the interest was pre-"judicial judgment," it was post-"contractual judgment." Any result that denied defendants this postaward interest would punish them for using arbitration instead of the court system to resolve their dispute with plaintiffs (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1107) .

[f] Partial Final Award

Roehl v. Ritchie (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 185 , arose out of a dispute regarding distribution of trust assets and involved two arbitration awards, both of which had been confirmed. The trust, established by husband and wife, provided for binding arbitration of any disputes arising under it. The first award, rendered on March 1, 2004, considered many things, but definitively resolved only the issue of a note from Rho-Chem. Matters considered but not resolved involved the family home, which was occupied by wife, husband having died. Wife's rights were challenged by husband's sons from a previous marriage. The first award noted that in light of developments since the valuation date of the assets involved, a different distribution of assets than that suggested in the valuation exhibit would benefit the estate. Wife died one week after the first award was rendered and her niece succeeded to her position. The sons moved to vacate the award and the niece to confirm it. The award was confirmed. Sons appealed that confirmation. During the pendency of the appeal, the trustee submitted requests to the arbitrator for instructions regarding pending issues, including the valuation date of the family home and Niece's entitlement to reimbursement of payments made to Wife's caregivers. The second award, rendered on October 28, 2005, approved Niece's reimbursement, valued assets, and allocated various assets to the three subtrusts. The second award also reserved jurisdiction to make further supplemental awards, specifically those relating to accountings filed by the trustee and the reasonableness of the trustee's fees and his attorney's fees. The second award was confirmed, and Niece appealed, contending that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1284, the arbitrator had no jurisdiction to make the second award.

The court of appeal affirmed (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 356) , noting that its consideration was limited to the second award, because the appeal of confirmation the first award had already been determined (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 347). The court also noted that substantial deference is owed to an arbitrator's determination of his or her own authority. Thus, any doubts about arbitrator's power to decide specific issues must be resolved in the arbitrator's favor (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 347-348). Niece claimed that the second award was void because it modified the first arbitration award 15 months after the trial court had confirmed it. The court of appeal agreed that an arbitrator does not have power to modify an award after it has been confirmed, but found nothing in the second award to be a modification of the first (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 349) . The first award determined ownership of the Rho-Chem note, ownership of the family home (75% to wife, now niece, 25% interest to sons), and that sons' counsel could not recover his attorney fees from the trust. The first award did not determine the value of all assets for purpose of distribution but specifically left the door open for the trustee to suggest modifications to the distribution in exhibit 20 in light of new developments. The court of appeal found it significant that the first award did not incorporate the values expressed in exhibit 20 and did not attach exhibit 20 as an exhibit to the award. Plainly, future developments did occur, including a phenomenal boom in California residential real estate prices, which had the effect of increasing the value of sons' interest in the home. Thus, the court of appeal deferred to the arbitrator's powers to determine the scope of his contractual authority, and resolved any doubts in favor of upholding the second arbitration award (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 350) .

Niece claimed the arbitrator had no power to reserve jurisdiction in the first arbitration award to make incremental decisions, arguing this amounted to intentionally leaving issues unresolved and rendering the first arbitration award void under Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4, which requires any arbitration award to include a determination of all questions submitted to the arbitrators the decision of which is necessary in order to determine the controversy. Niece agreed that California law permits arbitrators to reserve jurisdiction over postconfirmation disputes, but argued that rule only applied in very narrow circumstances not applicable here. The court of appeal disagreed, citing Hightower v. Superior Court (O'Dowd) (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1431, 1434, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209 (discussed below), for the proposition that an arbitrator may use a multiple incremental or successive award process as a means, in an appropriate case, of finally deciding all submitted issues (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 351) . Regarding Niece's challenge to reservation, in the second award, of jurisdiction to determine later issues, the court of appeal noted that arbitration awards may contemplate future proceedings, and that in fact, the ongoing and changing nature of trust administration may require them--for instructions, to settle accounts, to fix compensation, and to allow, compromise or settle claims. Thus, the arbitrator did not abuse his discretion in fashioning a remedy to resolve ongoing matters relating to trust administration, costs, and fees (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 352) .

Niece also claimed that the second arbitration award was void, because the arbitrator expressly relinquished the power he had reserved (in the first award) over future questions in a letter dated June 11, 2004, which she characterized as an order of distribution. In fact, the letter said that "After thinking of the various issues, I believe that the appropriate approach at this time is to leave the distribution as originally done." The court of appeal disagreed (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 355) . The letter never described itself as final; it did not contain an order for distribution; and it contained the qualifier "at this time" (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 353) . It was not part of the first arbitration award, was never sought to be confirmed as a correction or amendment to that award, and was not included with other post-award correspondence with Niece's petition to confirm that award (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 353-354). Because the letter was not written within 30 days after the first award, the arbitrator did not have the power to use it to make corrections or modifications to the original award (147 Cal. App. 4th 338, 354).

Hightower v. Superior Court (O'Dowd) (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209 , involved a dispute between the two 50 percent shareholders of a corporation. Their shareholders agreement provided for arbitration of any disputes arising under it and procedures by which either could buy out the other's shares. D obtained financing and offered to buy H's shares. H set out to obtain financing topurchase D's shares. Employees and officers of the company wrote to the entities from which H was seeking financing and told them they would resign if H acquired D's interests. H demanded arbitration of claims against D including interference with contract and breach of fiduciary duties by inciting the officers' and employees' actions. The arbitrator ruled in favor of D and found that D was legally entitled to complete the purchase of H's shares on September 24, 1998. However, the award was not entered until April 25, 2000, and D's financing had expired by that date. The arbitrator issued an award, designated a "partial final award," which gave D six months from the date of confirmation of that award to obtain financing and complete the purchase and reserved jurisdiction to determine specific additional issues, such as the amount to be awarded to D for additional costs incurred to obtain new financing. H petitioned to have the award vacated pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2. The petition was denied. H then petitioned the court of appeal by writ of mandate to require the trial court to either (1) vacate its order denying the petition to vacate the partial final award and enter a new order granting it, or (2) enter an order confirming the partial final award and entering judgment thereon.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to (1) supplement its order denying the petition to vacate the partial final award by adding to it an order confirming that award, (2) enter an interlocutory judgment thereon, and (3) order the matter back to the arbitrator for further proceedings as might be required to permit the issuance of a final award resolving all remaining issues (86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1441) . The court of appeal noted that under Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 (discussed at § 20C.91[3][a] -[c]), substantial deference is given to the arbitrator's own assessment of his or her authority to resolve an issue and to the scope of his or her authority regarding the arbitrator's choice of a remedy. It is only necessary that the award bear some rational relationship to the contract and the breach (86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1437) , which the court found it did (86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1440) . Once the arbitrator determined that H had breached the shareholders agreement and had thereby frustrated D's attempt to complete the purchase of H's shares, the arbitrator had to fashion a remedy that would give D the benefit of his bargain. To accomplish this, the arbitrator provided that D had the right, but not the obligation, to purchase, on certain designated conditions, H's shares within six months of the date of the confirmation of the award. The court of appeal viewed this incremental process as reasonably necessary, if not essential, to the effectiveness of the remedy that the arbitrator had fashioned and found no violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4. The arbitrator did not improperly leave undecided any issues necessary in order to determine the controversy, but determined all issues that are necessary to the resolution of the essential dispute arising from H's breach. The arbitrator's judgment on this point must be respected (86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1439) .

With regard to H's contention that the partial final award left him in "judicial limbo" and unable to seek appellate review, the court noted that the partial final award was subject to confirmation. After confirmation, the trial court could issue an interlocutory judgment setting forth the terms of the award, and the issues and matters resolved. Appellate relief from the interlocutory judgments would be available by application for an extraordinary writ (86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1440) .

[g] Post-Arbitration Attorney's Fees

Carole Ring & Associates v. Nicastro (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 253, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519 , was based on an agreement under which defendant/appellant listed property with plaintiff/respondent. During the term of the listing, defendant executed a lease of the property, which plaintiff claimed was a breach of the agreement and entitled it to the commission. The lessee agreed to move out in 30 days if there the property was sold. The arbitrator ruled for defendant, and found that defendant was the prevailing party, but also provided that each party bear their own attorney's fees and costs. After moving for reconsideration, defendant moved to vacate the award. That motion was granted, but reversed by the court of appeal. On remand after reversal, defendant sought attorney's fees and confirmation of the award. The court confirmed the award, but denied attorney's fees. Defendant appealed again, contending that the superior court abused its discretion in refusing to remand the issue of attorney fees and costs incurred at the arbitration level to the arbitrator, and in denying his request for attorney fees and costs incurred in post-arbitration judicial proceedings.

The court of appeal held that the judgment confirming the award conclusively determined the issue of attorney's fees for the arbitration, but reversed and remanded, ordering the trial court to determine defendant's reasonable attorney's fees for post-arbitration judicial proceedings (87 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 262) . The court of appeal said that the superior court was not required by the arbitrator's denial of attorney fees to deny attorney fees for post-arbitration judicial proceedings. In fact, on the record before it, the superior court was required to award defendant, as the party prevailing on the contract, reasonable attorney fees and costs for post-arbitration judicial proceedings. The court said that Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 addresses the matter of costs in judicial proceedings relating to arbitration, such as a petition to confirm, correct or vacate an award, and in this case, the appeal and the proceedings on remand (87 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 260) . The court of appeal said that Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 was mandatory and incorporated Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10)(A), under which attorney's fees are recoverable as costs when the contract authorizes them. Thus, as the prevailing party, defendant was entitled to its attorney's fees and costs for the post-arbitration judicial proceedings (87 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 260-262) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.11

§ 20C.11 Opposing Petition to Vacate Arbitration Award and Requesting Confirmation of Award

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION
Petitioner,	)	TO VACATE AWARD
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Respondent.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE AWARD SHOULD NOT BE VACATED. RATHER, THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED, AS IT IS NOT PROPER TO CORRECT OR VACATE IT, OR TO DISMISS THE PROCEEDING.

A. Response to Petition to Vacate Award and Request to Confirm. A person named as respondent in a petition respecting an arbitration award may file a response requesting that the award be confirmed, vacated or corrected, or that the petition be dismissed (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1285.2, 1290).

B. Confirmation of Award Unless Otherwise Ordered. [See § 20C.10[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Award Presumed Valid. [See § 20C.10[1], Paragraph C.]

[Optional] D. Time for Filing Response Requesting Confirmation of Award. A response to a petition must be served and filed within 10 days after service of the petition[, except that if the petition is served in the manner provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1290.4(b)(2), the response must be served and filed within 30 days after service of the petition]. [This time may be extended by application of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1013] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 [see Hirsch v. Ensign (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 530, 176 Cal. Rptr. 17]).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a response opposing a petition to vacate an arbitration award and to request confirmation of that award. If the other party has not yet filed a petition to vacate the award, use the form at § 20C.10 instead of this one. If the award needs to be corrected before it is confirmed, combine this form with appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.12.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq. addressing any issue placed in contention by the petition seeking to vacate the award and any other issue that respondent anticipates may be in contention.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show when the award was served, when the petition to vacate the award was served, and that this response requesting confirmation is timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of petition to confirm an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, regarding other matters that the responsemay need to address, see § 20C.60 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Response Requesting Confirmation of Award

Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 provides that the time stated therein for serving and filing a response may be extended by an agreement in writing between the parties to the court proceeding or, for good cause, by order of the court.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.4(b)(2) provides that service outside California must be made by mailing the copy of the petition and notice and other papers by registered or certified mail. Personal service is the equivalent of service by mail. Proof of service by mail must be made by affidavit showing mailing together with the return receipt of the United States Post Office bearing the signature of the person on whom service was made. Notwithstanding any other provision on arbitration (Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.), if service is made in the manner provided in this paragraph, the petition may not be heard until at least 30 days after the date of service.

Hirsch v. Ensign (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 176 Cal. Rptr. 17 , is discussed at § 20C.21[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.12

§ 20C.12 Supporting Petition or Response Requesting Award Be Corrected and Confirmed as Corrected

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF
vs.	)	_____ [PETITION or RESPONSE]
_____ [name],	)	REQUESTING CORRECTION OF ARBITRATION
Respondent.	)	AWARD [AND CONFIRMATION OF AWARD AS )	CORRECTED]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: none

_____

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CORRECTED BY _____ [specify, e.g., DELETING THE AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES] AND CONFIRMED AS CORRECTED BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES WAS BEYOND THE ARBITRATOR'S JURISDICTION AND CORRECTING THE AWARD WILL NOT AFFECT THE MERITS OF THE DECISION].

[EITHER]

A. Grounds for Correcting Award: Evident Miscalculation of Figures or Mistake in Description. Subject to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.8, the court, unless it vacates the award must correct the award and confirm it as corrected if the court determines that there was an evident miscalculation of figures or an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing, or property referred to in the award (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a); see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (burden of establishing error)).

[AND/OR]

A. Grounds for Correcting Award: Arbitrator Exceeded Power and Award Is Correctable Without Affecting Merits. Subject to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.8, the court, unless it vacates the award must correct the award and confirm it as corrected if the court determines that the arbitrators exceeded their powers but the award may be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision on the controversy submitted (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b); Baldwin Co. v. Rainey Construction Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1057-1059, 280 Cal. Rptr. 499 ; see also Wade v. Schrader (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1045-1049, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865 (since nonsettling defendants were entitled to settlement credit as a matter of law, and since the arbitrator did not take the settlement credit into account in making the arbitration award, applying the settlement credit in satisfaction of the judgment was not really a modification of the arbitration award)).

[AND/OR]

A. Grounds for Correcting Award: Imperfect Form Not Affecting Merits. Subject to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.8, the court, unless it vacates the award must correct the award and confirm it as corrected if the court determines that the award is imperfect in a matter of form, not affecting the merits of the controversy (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(c)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Correction of Award in Response to Request Therefor. The court may correct an award if a petition or response requesting that the award be corrected has been duly served and filed (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.8(a)).

[Optional] C. Correction of Award in Response to Request That Award Be Vacated. The court may correct an award if a petition or response requesting that the award be vacated has been duly served and filed and (1) all petitioners and respondents are before the court; or (2) all petitioners and respondents have been given reasonable notice that the court will be requested at the hearing to correct the award or that the court on its own motion has determined to correct the award and all petitioners and respondents have been given an opportunity to show why the award should not be corrected (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.8(b)).

[Optional] D. Time for Filing Petition Requesting Correction. A petition to correct an award must be served and filed not later than 100 days after the date of the service of a signed copy of the award on petitioner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1288).

[Optional] E. Earliest Time Petition May Be Filed. [See § 20C.10[1], Paragraph E]

[Optional] F. Time for Filing Response Requesting Vacation or Correction. [See § 20C.21[1], Paragraph I.].

[Optional] G. Tolling of Time for Filing Petition Requesting Correction. When[, pursuant to Business and Professions Code Section 6203(b)], a party files a complaint relating to the matter that has been arbitrated, the time for filing a petition to correct the arbitration award is tolled from the date the complaint is filed until adjudication of that action becomes final (Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 993, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response that requests the court to correct an arbitration award and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; compare Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. The optional paragraphs related to the procedural and timing requirements are for use when appropriate in particular situations. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.30 et seq., addressing the particular basis for correction, as well as memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq., addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award.

If the other party has not yet filed a petition to vacate the award, and counsel wishes to initiate proceedings to correct and confirm the award, combine this form with the appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10. If correction is being sought in response to a request that the award be vacated, combine this form with appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.11.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show when the award was served, whether and when any petition to confirm or to vacate the award was served, and that this request or response requesting correction is timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [but see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under [3][a], below)].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of petition and response requesting correction of an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, regarding the basis for correction of the award, see § 20C.30 et seq.

For a memorandum asserting that an arbitrator can correct an award on his or her own initiative to include an inadvertently omitted finding, see § 20C.103.

If the "correction" that is required is the addition of a party's alter ego as judgment debtor, see Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award, § 20E.13.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grounds for Correcting Award: Evident Miscalculation of Figures or Mistake in Description

The facts and procedural background of Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 , are discussed under [b], below. The court noted that even if the petition was considered timely, it was error to grant the correction because no miscalculation was apparent on the face of the award. The appellate record did not contain the award, the arbitration record, or a transcript of the proceedings in the trial court. Thus, the court of appeal had nothing to review but the one-page judgment, and was bound by the rule that a judgment or order of a lower court is presumed correct and that all intendments and presumptions are indulged in to support it on matters as to which the record is silent; error must be affirmatively shown (185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994) .

[b] Grounds for Correcting Award: Arbitrator Exceeded Power and Award Is Correctable Without Affecting Merits

Baldwin Co. v. Rainey Construction Co. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 280 Cal. Rptr. 499 , involved a construction dispute. The contract included a warranty retention provision, under which the owner was entitled to withhold $10,000 for a year following recordation of the notice of completion, then to be paid less any claims made for warranty performance and correction of construction deficiencies. As of the arbitration date, no notice of completion had been filed. The arbitrator found in the contractor's favor for $57,109.20. In addition, the award found that the contractor was entitled to payment of the $10,000 withheld as a warranty retention pursuant to the contract less any claims made for warranty performance and correction of construction deficiencies. The trial court rejected the portion of the award related to the warranty retention and confirmed the balance of the award.

The court of appeal affirmed. The year (from recordation of notice of completion) had not elapsed. Therefore, that portion of the award was clearly beyond the arbitrator's jurisdiction. The merits of the decision were not affected by the correction, because the court merely severed out that portion of the award, without prejudice to further litigation in that regard (229 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1058) . Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b), a court has power to confirm part of an award and reject another part (229 Cal. App. 3d 1053, 1057-1059) .

In Wade v. Schrader (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1045-1049, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 865 , plaintiff initially sued defendants (Schraders) and others, claiming that they had wrongfully deprived plaintiff of his stock. Plaintiff settled his claims against several defendants. Plaintiff's claims against Schraders were resolved through binding arbitration. Although the arbitrator ruled in plaintiff's favor, the amount of the award was less than the total plaintiff had received from the settling codefendants. Schraders moved for an order compelling satisfaction of the judgment, arguing that the proceeds from plaintiff's pre-arbitration settlements completely offset the judgment against them, and the trial court granted the motion.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's decision. Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. 877, a court has the authority to offset an arbitration award against a nonsettling defendant by awarding a settlement credit for a pre-arbitration settlement of the same matter. Since Schraders were entitled to the settlement credit as a matter of law, and since the arbitrator did not take the settlement credit into account in making the arbitration award, applying the settlement credit in satisfaction of the judgment was not really a modification of the arbitration award upon which the judgment was based. Allowing the nonsettling defendants a credit against a future judgment promotes equitable sharing of fault and prevents the plaintiff from obtaining an unfair double recovery (168 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1045-1049) .

[c] Tolling of Time for Filing Petition Requesting Correction

Defendant in Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 , was plaintiffs' attorney in a medical malpractice action. The fee agreement provided for a 40 percent contingency fee, which amounted to $260,000. Plaintiff claimed that figure was in excess of the fee allowed by Bus. & Prof. Code § 6146. Defendant retained $260,000 of the settlement proceeds. The dispute was submitted to arbitration pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq. On December 27, 1984, the State Bar arbitrators awarded plaintiff $101,450 plus interest from July 9, 1984. The award was served on the parties on January 3, 1985. Defendant filed a civil complaint against plaintiff on February 1, 1985, seeking trial after arbitration pursuant to Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203(b). Plaintiff's demurrer to that action was sustained without leave to amend and judgment of dismissal was entered. On April 26, 1985, 113 days after service of the arbitration award, plaintiff filed a petition to correct the award and to confirm it as corrected. The award was corrected to $137,969.95, apparently to reflect proper calculation of interest, and confirmed. Judgment was entered thereon and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that the petition to correct and confirm was untimely, as beyond the 100-day limitation in Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.2. Plaintiff contended, and the court agreed, that defendant's filing of the complaint tolled the 100-day limitation from the time the complaint was filed until a final adjudication in the superior court action (185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 993) . The superior court action was appealed and did not become final until May 29, 1985. Thus, under the scheme envisioned by Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 6203-6204, the petition to correct and confirm the award was actually premature, in that it should not have been filed until the appeal of the superior court action had become final; but because defendant had a full hearing on the merits, defendant would not be prejudiced by affirmance of the judgment confirming the award (185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Grounds for Correcting Award

See also Bellflower Education Assn. v. Bellflower Unified School Dist. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 805, 812-813, 279 Cal. Rptr. 179 , discussed at § 20C.20[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.13

§ 20C.13 Order Compelling Arbitration Was Made by Disqualified Judge

[1] FORM

THE AWARD NEED NOT BE VACATED BUT A NEW JUDGE MUST DETERMINE WHETHER ARBITRATION SHOULD BE COMPELLED.

A. Order Compelling Arbitration Was Made by Disqualified Judge. If a judge who is disqualified does not disclose the disqualification but instead hears and determines the petition to compel arbitration, the order compelling arbitration must be vacated, because a disqualified judge's rulings are void regardless of their legal correctness. Another judge must reconsider the petition to compel arbitration. The arbitration award based on the arbitration ordered by the disqualified judge does not necessarily need to be vacated. Should the trial court conclude the motion to compelshould be granted, the parties may petition to vacate and/or confirm the arbitration award. The appropriate standard is whether a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator(s) would be able to be impartial. Only if the trial court concludes that the arbitration was tainted by the original trial court judge, or should be vacated on other grounds, should the trial court vacate the arbitration award. [On the renewed petition(s) to confirm and/or vacate the award, the parties may submit whatever supplemental evidence and argument the court may deem appropriate] (Rossco Holdings Inc. v. Bank of America (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1363-1368, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 141).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to resist a petition to vacate an arbitration award when the order compelling arbitration was made by a disqualified judge but there has been no determination of whether the arbitrator(s) might appear biased. The form describes the correct procedure to be followed in that situation. This form is not intended to be a complete memorandum. Counsel should combine it with authority from Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing, § 20D.10 et seq. and any other forms addressing any other relevant issues.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument must show that the judge who ordered arbitration was disqualified and that the basis for the disqualification existed when the order compelling arbitration was made. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Order Compelling Arbitration Was Made by Disqualified Judge

The judge who heard and determined the petition to compel arbitration in Rossco Holdings Inc. v. Bank of America (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 141 , was disqualified because he had had discussions regarding employment with a dispute resolution service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(8)], but never disclosed that nor disqualified himself. In fact, he did not know of the law rendering him disqualified, and when he learned of it, opined it was a "ridiculous law that basically disqualifies not for reasons of actual conflict by virtue of having some contact with the parties before you, but by virtue of having contact with an industry." After an award was rendered (after two weeks of arbitration at a cost in excess of $700,000 in arbitrator's fees alone), the parties made cross-motions to vacate and to confirm the award. At that point, the trial court judge disqualified himself. After various stay, continuances, and reconsideration, the case was transferred to a new judge who vacated both the order compelling arbitration and the arbitration award. Bank of America appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded finding the trial court did not err in vacating the order compelling arbitration, but that it was premature to vacate the arbitration award (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1356, 1361, 1368) . The court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 does not disqualify only those judges who have actual bias; it disqualifies judges in situations in which the Legislature has presumed bias, or the appearance of possible bias may exist and a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the judge would be able to be impartial. Orders made by a disqualified judge are void (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1362), regardless of whether they happen to have been legally correct (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1367) . Disqualification occurs when the facts creating disqualification arise, not when the disqualification is established. Thus, the trial court judge was disqualified at the time he heard the motion to compel arbitration because he had within the past two years participated in discussions regarding prospective employment as a dispute resolution neutral. He was disqualified from the case, regardless of his lack of knowledge of the law providing for his disqualification. His order compelling arbitration was therefore void (149 Cal.

App. 4th 1353, 1363) . However, it does not necessarily follow that the arbitration award should also have been vacated (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1364) . The parties are entitled to a reconsideration of the motion to compel arbitration before a new judge (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1366). Should the trial court conclude the motion to compel should be granted, the next step will be to determine whether the arbitration which has already occurred should be given legal effect (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1366-1367) . The appropriate course would be for the parties to move ahead with their cross-petitions to vacate and confirm the arbitration award. In reconsidering the cross-petitions to vacate and confirm the arbitration award, the appropriate standard is whether a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrators would be able to be impartial. Only if the trial court concludes that thearbitration was tainted by the original trial court judge, or should be vacated on other grounds, should the trial court vacate the arbitration award. On the renewed cross-petitions to confirm and vacate the award, the parties may submit whatever supplemental evidentiary matters and argument the court may deem appropriate (149 Cal. App. 4th 1353, 1367) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.14

[Reserved]

§ 20C.14[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.15

§ 20C.15 Corrected Award Served Late and Making Corrections Beyond Arbitrator's Powers Is Not To Be Given Effect

[1] FORM

THE CORRECTED AWARD MADE BY THE ARBITRATOR ON _____ [date], BUT NOT SERVED UNTIL _____ [date] IS OF NO EFFECT; [FURTHER, IT PURPORTS TO MAKE CORRECTIONS FOR _____ (specify, e.g, ERRORS OF LAW), THUS EXCEEDING THE ARBITRATOR'S POWER].

A. Corrected Award Served More than 30 Days After Service of Award. If an arbitrator purports to correct an award but does not serve the corrected award until more than 30 days after service of the original award, the purported corrected award is of no effect, having been deemed denied when not served within that 30-day period (Code Civ. Proc. § 1284; Landis v. Pinkertons, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 990, 993, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 890).

B. Arbitrator Cannot Correct Award for Errors of Law. The grounds set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.6(a) and (c), on which an arbitrator is authorized to correct an award, do not include errors of law. Thus, a corrected award evidencing changes based on errors of law exceeds the arbitrator's power and is not enforceable (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a), (c); Landis v. Pinkertons, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 992, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 890).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response that requests the court to vacate or refuse to give effect to a corrected award made by the arbitrator, but not served, or served too late and/or making corrections other than those the arbitrator is empowered by Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a), (c) to make.

If the original (uncorrected) award has not yet been confirmed or vacated, counsel may wish to combine this form with the appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 (to confirm) or § 20C.20 (to vacate).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show when the award was served, whether and when any petition to confirm or to vacate the award was served, and whether the request or response requesting correction was timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of both the original and the corrected awards [but see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233] .

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of petition and response requesting correction of an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For a memorandum asserting that an arbitrator can correct an award on his or her own initiative to include an inadvertently omitted finding, see § 20C.103. For a form for use when the arbitration clause includes a valid provision for review by a second arbitrator who has authority to correct errors of law, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.87.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corrected Award Served More than 30 Days After Service of Award

Code Civ. Proc. § 1284 provides that the arbitrators, on written application of a party to the arbitration, may correct the award on any of the grounds set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a) and (c) not later than 30 days after service of a signed copy ofthe award on the applicant. An application for correction must be made not later than 10 days after service of a signed copy of the award on the applicant. On or before making the application, the applicant must deliver or mail a copy of the application to all of the other parties to the arbitration. Any party to the arbitration may make written objection to an application for correction. The objection must be made not later than 10 days after the application is delivered or mailed to the objector. On or before making an objection, the objector must deliver or mail a copy of the objection to the applicant and all the other parties to the arbitration.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1284 further provides that the arbitrators must either deny the application or correct the award. The denial of the application or the correction of the award must be in writing and signed by the arbitrators concurring therein, and the neutral arbitrator is to serve a signed copy of the denial or correction on each party to the arbitration personally or by registered or certified mail or as provided in the agreement. If no denial of the application or correction of the award is served within the 30-day period provided in this section, the application for correction is to be deemed denied on the last day thereof.

Landis v. Pinkertons, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 890* , arose from arbitration of a wrongful termination claim and an award in plaintiff's favor for damages, including damages for emotional distress. Defendant filed a request for correction of the award by deletion of damages for emotional distress. Plaintiff did not file a motion to confirm the award but instead filed a motion to amend the pleadings to conform to proof by adding causes of action for negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The motions were argued on August 22, 2002. On August 30, the arbitrator signed an amended award, striking the damages for emotional distress and denying plaintiff's motion to amend the pleadings to conform to proof. The amended award was not served on the parties until October 14, 2002; however, on September 13, consistent with faxed notice to defendant's attorney, plaintiff filed an ex parte application to enforce the original August 5, 2002, arbitration award or, in the alternative, to prevent the issuance of an amended award due to lack of jurisdiction. Defendant opposed the motion. The trial court confirmed the original award and entered judgment accordingly, taking the position with regard to the lack of a noticed motion, that even if the matter had been heard on a noticed motion, defendant's counsel could do nothing further for his clients in representing their interests. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 993) . As to the corrected award, the court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1284 provides that an arbitrator may correct the award on any of the grounds set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a) and (c) not later than 30 days after service of a signed copy of the award. It further provides that if no denial of the application or correction of the award is served within the 30-day period provided, the application for correction shall be deemed denied on the last day of that period. Inasmuch as the corrected arbitration award was not served by September 4, 2002, 30 days after service of the original award, defendant's application for correction of the award was deemed denied (122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 990) .

[b] Arbitrator Cannot Correct Award for Errors of Law

The grounds for correcting an award set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a), (c) are (1) that there was an evident miscalculation of figures or an evident mistake in the description of any person, thing, or property referred to in the award; and (2) that the award is imperfect in a matter of form, not affecting the merits of the controversy.

The facts and procedural background of Landis v. Pinkertons, Inc. (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 890* , and the portion of the opinion discussing the arbitrator's failure to timely serve the corrected award are discussed at [a], above. The court noted that an arbitrator's power to correct an award after it has been issued to the parties is limited to evident miscalculations of figures or descriptions of persons, things, or property [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a)] and nonsubstantive matters of form that do not affect the merits of the controversy [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(c)]. An arbitrator may not correct an award because of having later determined a factual or legal error had been made in the award. An arbitrator may issue an amended or supplemental award for having inadvertently omitted a ruling on a submitted issue in the original award, but the amended award here did not fall within this category. Thus, it was beyond the arbitrator's power to make this correction (122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 992) .

As to the contention that the arbitrator exceeded his powers by issuing an award for damages for emotional distress, the court noted that defendant never moved to vacate the award, and did not raise this ground in opposition to the motion to confirm the award. Because defendant did not raise this issue below, the court of appeal could not reverse the judgment on that ground. Moreover, the arbitrator did not exceed his authority in issuing the original arbitration award; at most, he made an error of law as to what damages could be awarded in the action. An error of law is not a basis for correcting the original award (122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 991-992) .

As to the fact that the motion to confirm the award was made ex parte, the court of appeal agreed with the trial court: defendants was not prejudiced by this procedural impropriety and had the opportunity to oppose confirmation as if plaintiff filed a petition in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 (122 Cal. App. 4th 985, 993) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.16-20C.19

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.16[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.20

§ 20C.20 Supporting Petition to Vacate Arbitration Award

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION TO Petitioner,	)	VACATE AWARD [AND ORDER REHEARING
vs.	)	OF CONTROVERSY]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Respondent.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: none

_____

THE AWARD SHOULD BE VACATED BECAUSE _____ [OF CORRUPTION OF A PARTY or OF CORRUPTION OF AN ARBITRATOR or OF MISCONDUCT OF AN ARBITRATOR or THE ARBITRATORS EXCEEDED THEIR POWERS or THE ARBITRATORS ACTED CONTRARY TO THE ARBITRATION STATUTES].

A. Petition to Vacate Award. A party to an arbitration in which an award has been made may petition the court to vacate the award (Code Civ. Proc. § 1285).

B. Grounds for Vacating Award. If the requirements of Section 1286.4 of the Code of Civil Procedure are met, the court must vacate an award on the grounds set out in Section 1286.2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2).

[EITHER]

C. Award Procured by Undue Means. The court shall vacate the award on a determination that the award was procured by corruption, fraud, or other undue means (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)).

[AND/OR]

D. Corruption of Arbitrator. The court shall vacate the award on a determination that there was corruption in any of the arbitrators (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(2)).

[AND/OR]

E. Misconduct of Neutral Arbitrator. The court shall vacate the award on a determination that the rights of the party seeking an order vacating the award were substantially prejudiced by conduct of a neutral arbitrator (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3)).

[AND/OR]

F. Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers. The court shall vacate the award on a determination that the arbitrators exceeded their powers and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision on the controversy submitted (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4); Sunnyvale Unified Sch. Dist. v. Jacobs (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 168, 175, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 546 (affirming vacation of award); DiMarco v. Chaney (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1814-1815, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 ; see also Bellflower Education Assn. v. Bellflower Unified School Dist. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 805, 812-813, 279 Cal. Rptr. 179 (confirming as corrected)).

[AND/OR]

G. Prejudicial Conduct by Arbitrators. The court shall vacate the award on a determination that the rights of the party seeking an order vacating the award were substantially prejudiced by the refusal of the arbitrators to postpone the hearing on sufficient cause being shown therefor, by the refusal of the arbitrators to hear evidence material to the controversy, or by other conduct of the arbitrators contrary to the provisions of Sections 1280 through 1294.2 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5); Burlage v. Superior Ct. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 524, 531-532, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 531 (affirming vacation of award for prejudice due to exclusion of admissible, material evidence)).

[AND/OR]

H. Arbitrator Failed to Disqualify Self. The court shall vacate an award on a determination that an arbitrator making the award either:

- Failed to disclose within the time required for disclosure a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware. When the matter the proposed neutral arbitrator failed to disclose in a timely fashion was one of the matters required to be disclosed by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a), the court is required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) to vacate the award. There is no room for argument that the undisclosed matter is not one that might cause a reasonable person to question the arbitrator's impartiality. By its 2001 amendments to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1281.9 and 1286.2(a)(6)(A), the Legislature intended that failure to disclose any of the matters enumerated in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a) satisfy the "might cause a reasonable person to question" standard [Section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) is not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act]. [A party who fails to obtain disqualification within the time allowed by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.91(c) still has the right to have the award vacated in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(6)(A)]. [The right to have an award vacated in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) cannot be waived by agreeing to arbitrate under rules that state the arbitration provider's determinations regarding disqualification will be conclusive. The statutes were passed to advance a public purpose of crucial importance over which the state retained ultimate control] (Code Civ. Proc. 1286.2(a)(6)(A); Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 820-823, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 ; Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 835, 849-854, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 ; International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, etc. v. Laughon (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1386-1387, 1392-1394, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 341); or

- Was subject to disqualification on grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc.§ 1281.91, but failed on receipt of timely demand to disqualify himself or herself as required by that provision (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(B); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(d) (refers to grounds for disqualification of judge in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1) [The right to disqualify a proposed neutral arbitrator in accordance with Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1281.9 and 1281.91 cannot be waived by agreeing to arbitrate in accordance with rules that provide some other means of determining whether the proposed neutral arbitrator is to be disqualified. The statutory scheme is designed to primarily to serve the public purpose of promoting public confidence that the arbitration process allows individual rights to take precedence (Azteca Construction, Inc. v. ADR Consulting, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1168, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142)].

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] I. Deemed Admission If Response Untimely. The allegations in a petition to vacate an arbitration award are deemed admitted if the opposing party did not file a response within the time period set out in Section 1290.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 1290; Evans Products Co. v. Millmen's Union No. 550 (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 815, 819, 205 Cal. Rptr. 731).

[Optional] J. Time for Filing Petition to Vacate Award. A petition to vacate an award must be served and filed not later than 100 days after the date of service of a signed copy of the award on petitioner (Code Civ. Proc. § 1288; Louise Gardens of Encino Homeowners' Association, Inc. v. Truck Insurance Exchange (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 658-659, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 ; Louise Gardens of Encino Homeowners' Association, Inc. v. Truck Insurance Exchange (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 658-659, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 ; Knass v. Blue Cross of California (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 390, 395-396, 279 Cal. Rptr. 124).

[Optional] K. Earliest Time Petition May Be Filed. [See § 20C.10[1], Paragraph E.]

[Optional] L. Arbitrator's Testimony May Not Be Considered. An arbitrator's testimony concerning the arbitration is expressly prohibited (except in circumstances not relevant here) by Evidence Code § 703.5. Therefore, it is inappropriate to rely on the arbitrator's _____ [specify, i.e., declaration] in determining whether to confirm or vacate this award [Evid. Code § 703.5; Trabuco Highlands Community Assn. v. Head (2002) 96 Cal. App.

4th 1183, 1191, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842] .

[Optional] M. Party Who Had Award Vacated Is Entitled to Post-Arbitration Costs and Attorney's Fees. Code of Civil Procedure Section 1293.2 is applicable to petitions to vacate awards and is mandatory. The court's determination under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1293.2 which party, if either, is the prevailing party in a post-arbitration judicial proceeding is a judicial function distinct from the arbitrator's decision to award or not to award fees in the arbitration itself. The prevailing party in a proceeding to vacate an award is entitled to costs, including attorney's fees incurred in that post arbitration judicial proceeding if they are provided for by the contract (Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2; Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Investment Brokerage Co. v. Woodman Investment Group, Inc. (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 513-516, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 584 (distinguishing situation in which it may be too soon to tell which is prevailing party for purposes of award of costs and attorney's fees); see MBNA America Bank, N.A. v. Gorman (2006) 147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 7-10, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724 (on denial of petition to confirm; also upholding alternate ground of fee award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition to vacate an arbitration award. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but should be combined with particular memoranda addressing each ground petitioner asserts for vacating the award [see § 20C.150 et seq.]. Any of the bracketed language in Paragraph H. that is applicable to counsel's situation should be used. The propositions that one still has the right to vacate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) if one missed the deadline for disqualification specified in 1281.91 and that the right to vacate in accordance with 1286.2(a)(6)(A) cannot be waived (first bullet) are from Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 , discussed at [3][c], below. The proposition that the Federal Arbitration Act does not preempt Code Civ. Proc. 1286.2(a)(6)(A) (first bullet) is based on Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 , also discussed at [3][a], below. In addition to the statutory grounds for vacating an arbitration award set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2, courts have recognized two other grounds for vacating an award: (1) mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, which is the subject of the form at § 20C.212, and (2) illegality that contravenes public policy [see § 20C.210]. Optional Paragraph M is for use in the admittedly unusual situation in which rehearing is not ordered in the same proceeding [see discussion at § 20C.20[3][g]].

Venue and jurisdiction for petitions to vacate arbitration awards are the same as for petitions to confirm awards [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 86(a)(10)(A), 1292.2; (set forth in § 20C.10[1], Optional Paragraphs F and G)].

If the other party has already filed a petition to confirm the award, counsel should use the form at § 20C.21 instead of this one. If counsel wishes to obtain an order for rehearing after the award has been vacated, use the form at § 20C.12 in addition to this one.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his orher case. For example, the argument should show that no petition to confirm the award has been filed, when the award was served, and that the request to vacate the award is timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene

(1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of petition to vacate an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form addressing the particular grounds for vacating the award, see § 20C.150 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misconduct of Neutral Arbitrator

Comments to Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI], adopted effective July 1, 2002, indicate that in addition to providing grounds for vacatur of an arbitrator's award based on a neutral arbitrator's failure to comply with disclosure requirements, other obligations under the standards may also constitute grounds for vacating an arbitration award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3) if the rights of a party were substantially prejudiced by a violation of those standards [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Comment to Standard 1].

[b] Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers

Sunnyvale Unified Sch. Dist. v. Jacobs (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 168, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 546 , ostensibly affirmed the trial court's vacation of the arbitration award ordering reinstatement of a probationary teacher to his teaching position with respondent school district, after the district allegedly refused to reelect the teacher in retaliation for his participation in protected activities. The trial court's ruling vacated a portion of the arbitration award. The court of appeals noted that an order partially vacating an arbitration award is not authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1286 and, after analyzing the ruling, treated it as a vacation of the entire arbitration award (171 Cal. App. 4th 168, 174-175) . On the merits, the court of appeal reiterated that under Educ. Code § 44929.21, nonreelection of probationary employees is not subject to collective bargaining and, therefore, a proper subject of arbitration (171 Cal. App. 4th 168, 176, 179) . It then determined that the same reasoning applies to claims of nonreelection for retaliatory reasons (171 Cal. App. 4th 168, 180-181) .

The arbitration clause in the contract involved in DiMarco v. Chaney (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 , provided that "the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs." The arbitrator denied the relief plaintiff requested and denied all requests for attorney's fees and costs. The defendant moved the trial court to correct the arbitration award, contending that the arbitrator exceeded his power by not applying the attorney fee provision. The trial court ultimately granted a second motion to correct and confirm the award as corrected, and entered judgment awarding defendant $19,575 in attorney's fees. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed in part and reversed in part. The court held that under the clause, the award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party was mandatory; the arbitrator had exceeded his power in denying them. The court had power to correct the award in this respect (31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1814-1815) . The trial court erred by determining the amount of attorney's fees to be awarded, because this was a matter for the arbitrator. The trial court should have remanded the matter to the arbitrator to make this determination (31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1816-1817) .

Bellflower Education Assn. v. Bellflower Unified School Dist. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 805, 279 Cal. Rptr. 179 , involved allegations by a teacher that proper probationary and evaluation procedures had not been used in "not reelecting" her to her position for a third academic year. The teacher had been on probation for the previous two years. The school district contended that Educ. Code § 44929.21 provides that nonreelection of probationary employees may not be subject to arbitration. However, the violation of evaluation procedures was within the scope of collective bargaining. The arbitrator held that the district had violated its evaluation procedures, and ordered the district to cease and desist from conducting further evaluations in violation of these procedures and to reinstate the grievant. The arbitrator's award was vacated, and appeal followed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment vacating the arbitration award, but remanded to the trial court to issue a judgment confirming the award after correcting it to delete the order of reinstatement. Under Educ. Code § 44929.21, nonreelection of probationary employees may not be subject to arbitration. An arbitration award that exceeds the powers vested by the agreement may be vacated (228 Cal. App. 3d 805, 812) . By confirming the award except for the reinstatement provision, the trial court could correct the award without affecting the merits of the decision and thereby avoid vacating the award in its entirety (228 Cal. App. 3d 805, 812-813) .

[c] Arbitrator Failed to Disqualify Self

Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6) does not apply to arbitration proceedings conducted under collective bargaining agreements between employers and employees or between their respective representatives.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9 requires proposed neutral arbitrators to disclose six categories of potential grounds for disqualification,including the existence of any grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1, for disqualification of a judge [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(1)], and any disclosures required by the by far broader Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7 and 12, adopted effective July 1, 2002, and Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 8, effective January 1, 2003 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(2)]. If any ground specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 exists, a neutral arbitrator must disqualify himself or herself on demand of any party made before the conclusion of the arbitration proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(d); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 10(a)(5)]. For all other grounds of disqualification, a party must serve notice of disqualification within the times specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(a) or (b) or the grounds for disqualification are waived unless the proposed neutral arbitrator made a material omission or a material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 10(a)(1)-(4)].

Notwithstanding any contrary request, consent, or waiver by the parties, an arbitrator must disqualify himself or herself if he or she concludes at any time during the arbitration that he or she is not able to conduct the arbitration impartially [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 10(c)].

NOTE:

The California Ethics Standards will not apply in any arbitration in which the parties have agreed to arbitrate in accordance with New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) Arbitration Rules or the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) Code of Arbitration Procedure. Both preempt the California Ethics Standards to the extent that the Securities and Exchange Commission has approved those rules and procedures in accordance with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119, 1147-1148 (NASD rules); Mayo v. Dean Witter Reynolds (N.D. Cal. 2003) 258 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1112 , as corrected at 260 F. Supp. 2d 979 ; accord Wilmot v. McNabb (N.D. Cal. 2003) 269 F. Supp. 2d 1203 ; Jevne v. Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings, Inc.) (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 935, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 111 P.3d 954] . NYSE Rules and NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure have their own disclosure requirements [see NYSE Arbitration Rule 610; NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure, Rule 10312].

Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935 , involved wage claims, which were arbitrated through the American Arbitration Association (AAA). After the arbitrator issued an interim award in favor of plaintiffs, defendant learned that the arbitrator and his law firm represented several protection and indemnity clubs which provided insurance and other business services. These clubs procured reinsurance support from syndicates of Lloyd's of London (Lloyd's). Plaintiff was insured through Lloyd's syndicates, and a representative from Lloyd's was present throughout the arbitration. The AAA rejected defendant's requests to disqualify the arbitrator. Defendant filed a petition in trial court seeking an order (1) disqualifying the arbitrator for his failure to disclose his and his law firm's ties to Lloyd's, and (2) vacating the interim award. The trial court granted the petition. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed after modifying the trial court's order to delete any reference to disqualification of the arbitrator under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(a) because the statute does not provide for the disqualification of an arbitrator after the arbitrator has ruled on an issue of contested fact (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 809-810, 823) . The portion of the opinion addressing the need for disclosure is set forth at § 20C.170[3][h]. The court of appeal found that the statutory right to petition a trial court to vacate an arbitration award based on an arbitrator's failure to make required disclosures cannot be waived by the AAA rule stating its determinations regarding disqualification are conclusive (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 809, 818) . The petition for an order disqualifying the arbitrator was filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(a)(1) and (2) and the petition to vacate the award was filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6) (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 813) . The court began by noting that its review was deferential (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 816) . The court noted that the duty of disclosure is a continuing duty, applying from service of the notice of the arbitrator's proposed nomination or appointment until the conclusion of the arbitration proceeding (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 817) . And that was an issue. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c) provides that a party waives his or her right to disqualify a proposed neutral arbitrator if the party fails to serve the notice to disqualify pursuant to the times set forth in that section, unless the proposed nominee or appointee makes a material omission or material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure; and in no event may a notice of disqualification be given after a hearing of any contested issue of fact relating to the merits of the claim or after any ruling by the arbitrator regarding any contested matter (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 819-820) . Still, subdivision (c) does not limit the right of a party to vacate an award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 or to disqualify an arbitrator pursuant to any other law or statute. California Rules of Court, Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration (Standards) Standard 10(a)(4) states that an arbitrator is disqualified if a party becomes aware that an arbitrator has made a material omission or material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure and, within 15 days after becoming aware of the omission or misrepresentation and within the time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c), the party serves a notice of disqualification that clearly describes the material omission or material misrepresentation and how and when the party became aware of this omission or misrepresentation. Standard

10(a)(4) does not provide for disqualification after any ruling by the arbitrator regarding any contested matter. Defendant did not investigate the arbitrator's connections to Lloyd's until after the arbitrator issued the interim award. Thus, the trial court erred by granting the petition to the extent it sought an order of disqualification under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c) (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 820) . That left defendants' only recourse to seek vacatur of the interim award under to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A), which mandates that a court must vacate an arbitrator's award if the arbitrator making the award failed to disclose within the time required for disclosure a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware. The arbitrator was on notice as of the hearing on the motion for summaryjudgment that plaintiff was insured through Lloyd's syndicates but repeatedly and utterly failed to make the required disclosures. Thus, defendants had a statutory right to vacatur of the interim award (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 822) . Plaintiffs claimed however that the AAA rule 17, which provided that AAA's determinations regarding disqualification were conclusive, controlled. The court of appeal found otherwise, noting that the statutes were passed to advance a public purpose of crucial importance over which he state retained ultimate control (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 820-822) . Thus, the court affirmed the judgment vacating the award, but deleted references to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c) (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 823) .

Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 , arose out of defendant's employment with plaintiffs' joint venture. The employment agreement contained an arbitration provision. Dispute arose regarding whether defendant resigned or was wrongfully terminated. After the parties agreed to arbitration in accordance with the American Arbitration Association (AAA)'s Rules for Resolution of Employment Disputes, the proposed neutral arbitrator submitted a worksheet, purportedly making the required disclosures. The worksheet did not in fact contain the disclosure required by Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 12(b) regarding the proposed neutral arbitrator's intention, while that arbitration was pending, to entertain offers of employment from a party or a lawyer for a party, including offers to serve as a dispute resolution neutral in another case. Arbitration began on September 8, 2003. After 23 days of hearings and twenty-one witnesses, the arbitrator ruled on May 12, 2004, that the joint venture and related parties were entitled to $1,878,739.15 in attorney fees and costs.

On May 27, 2004, after the joint venture parties had circulated a proposed draft of the award, the AAA informed all parties' attorneys that the arbitrator had accepted employment in another arbitration in which the law firm representing the joint venture parties was representing a party. The arbitrator conducted a preliminary hearing in the second arbitration as early as March 1, 2004. The precise date of the arbitrator's appointment in the second case was not clear, but declarations suggested that the arbitrator and the attorneys for the law firm representing the joint venture parties had discussions in the second case as early as January or February 2004. On June 3 and 14, 2004, defendant's counsel sent letters to the AAA requesting the arbitrator's disqualification for failure to disclose that he would entertain offers of employment from the law firm representing the joint venture parties, and further failed to disclose his employment by that firm in the second arbitration. The AAA denied that disqualification request. The trial court denied the joint venture parties' petition to confirm the award, and granted defendant's cross-petition to vacate the award. After denial of their motion for reconsideration, the joint venture parties appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 856) . The portions of the opinion considering the failures of disclosure are discussed at § 20C.170[3][g]. After deciding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) required the award to be vacated, the court of appeal considered joint venture parties' contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) is preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA; 9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.). The court of appeal concluded after reviewing the relevant statutory language, that the congressional purpose of the FAA, did not result in the FAA's preemption of section 1286.2(a)(6)(A). Under the FAA, an award must be vacated if there "was evident partiality or corruption in the arbitrators, or either of them" [9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2)]. The joint venture parties argued that, for two reasons, section 10(a)(2) of the FAA preempted Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A). First, the FAA's "evident partiality" permits vacating an arbitration award for inadequate disclosure only if the undisclosed facts create a reasonable impression of partiality, and second, that a party who has constructive knowledge of a ground for disqualification but remains silent is deemed to have waived the right to disqualify.

The court of appeal disposed of the second contention first, saying that federal rule, based on a case, not statute, was not accepted in all federal courts (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 849) . Also, the only evidence that defendant had constructive knowledge was presented in the declarations filed in support of the motion for reconsideration, and the trial court did not find them credible. Finally, the waiver rule could have no greater preemptive effect than section 10(a)(2) itself; and the court of appeal chose to rest its decision on consideration of the preemptive effect of section 10(a)(2) alone.

The court considered the language of 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2) (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 850) , and the fact that that language strongly suggests that section 10 applies only in federal court proceedings: "the United States court in and for the district wherein the award was made." Similarly, section 12 of the FAA, which provides the procedure for presenting a motion to vacate, refers to a motion in district court (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 851) . Further, Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) is not inconsistent with the purpose of the FAA. Absent an express preemption provision, federal statutory language does not resolve the question of preemption. Rather, there is no evidence that Congress intended to preempt post-award and state court litigation rules so long as the basic policy upholding the enforceability of arbitration agreements is given full effect court (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 852) .

By its terms, section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) does not undermine the enforceability of arbitration agreements. It merely requires the vacating of an award if the arbitrator failed timely to disclose a ground for disqualification of which he was aware. Indeed, because it applies to vacating an arbitration award, section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) presupposes that the arbitration agreement has been enforced and the arbitration held. Further, the legislative purpose of section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) and the California disclosure requirements as a whole seek to enhance both the appearance and reality of fairness in arbitration proceedings, thereby instilling public confidence. The court didnot agree with the joint venture parties that the disclosure rules undermine the arbitration process by allowing a party to seize on a technicality to vacate an arbitration award (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 853) . Nor was section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) inconsistent with the parties' arbitration agreement, which specified that the intended their arbitration to be subject to all of the disclosure requirements imposed by the AAA and the California Code of Civil Procedure. From the outset of the arbitration proceeding, the parties contemplated that the California disclosure requirements applied, in addition to AAA disclosure requirements (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 854) . The arbitration agreement provided that judicial review would be limited as provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 or other applicable law. Even if "other applicable law" meant the FAA, section 10(a)(2) of the FAA does not preempt Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 855) .

Defendant/appellant in International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, etc. v. Laughon (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 341 sued plaintiff/respondent for sex discrimination and entered into a settlement agreement by which they agreed that any dispute about the terms of the settlement agreement would be submitted to binding arbitration before one of four named arbitrators, one of whom was John Kagel. A dispute arose that was submitted to arbitration before Kagel, who was informed of his selection as arbitrator on April 23, 2001. Kagel had previously served as the neutral arbitrator in one noncollective bargaining arbitration involving another union represented in that arbitration by the same firm that represented plaintiff in this arbitration and in numerous collective bargaining cases in which that law firm served as counsel. Kagel never disclosed this prior service. On the first day of the arbitration hearing between these parties, plaintiff/respondent introduced as an exhibit Kagel's June 13, 2001, decision in the noncollective bargaining matter. Kagel did not acknowledge that he had failed to disclose his service as an arbitrator in that matter nor did he alert defendant's counsel that his service as an arbitrator might be grounds for disqualification. The award was introduced to support of claims of plaintiff regarding breaches of confidentiality agreements or follow-up of settlement agreements. Kagel issued an award largely in favor of plaintiff, which defendant petitioned to vacate on the ground that Kagel had failed to disclose certain matters that might serve as a basis for his disqualification, including his prior employment as an arbitrator in cases involving plaintiff or its counsel. The trial court denied the petition to vacate and confirmed the award, finding that there was no obvious bias or prejudice in the manner in which Kagel conducted the hearings and that when the prior award was introduced as evidence, defendant made a knowing, voluntary and intelligent waiver of the grounds disclosed therein for disqualification. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, concluding that pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(4), the arbitrator was required to disclose his service as a neutral arbitrator in the noncollective bargaining matter, his failure to do so was not waived, and the nondisclosure of this required disclosure was a ground for vacation under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) (118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1382) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(4) specifies that an arbitrator must disclose the names of the parties to all prior or pending noncollective bargaining cases involving any party to the arbitration or lawyer for a party for which the proposed neutral arbitrator served or is serving as neutral arbitrator. The proposed neutral arbitrator must disclose all matters required to be disclosed to all parties in writing within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the proposed nomination or appointment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(b)]. Thus, 10 days after he was proposed as the neutral arbitrator in the matter, Kagel was required to disclose his service as neutral arbitrator in the prior matter. Had Kagel done so, defendant would have been entitled to disqualify him within 15 days after the disclosure statement was served [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91 (b)(1)] (118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1385) .

A party who does not move to disqualify an arbitrator prior to the commencement of arbitration may nevertheless seek vacation of an arbitration award on the ground that the arbitrator failed to disclose within the time required for disclosure a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A)]. This statute provides that if such a failure occurs, "the court shall vacate the award" (118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1385-1386) . The explicit language of the statute supported defendant's argument that the trial court was required to vacate the arbitration award once it was shown that Kagel had failed to make the required disclosure in a timely fashion. Thus, Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2, as amended in 2001, mandates that a court "shall" vacate an arbitration award if, among other reasons, the arbitrator making the award "failed to disclose ... a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware." The grounds include those enumerated in the six subparagraphs of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a). Those subparagraphs are preceded by general description of the matters which must be disclosed (a description also added in 2001) as "all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial, including all of the following:" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)].

This statutory language makes clear that, when it amended both Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.9 and 1286.2(a)(6)(A) in 2001, the Legislature intended that the failure to disclose the sort of prior relationship involved in this case necessarily satisfies the "might cause a reasonable person to question" standard (118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1386) . The court further found that because no effective disclosure of the disqualifying information took place, the trial court erred in finding that defendant "knowingly" waived any objection to Kagel's failure to disclose his prior service as a neutral arbitrator by failing to object when the opinion in the prior arbitration was offered into evidence during the arbitration. At the very least, defendant was entitled to the functional equivalent of the disclosure mandated by statute, i.e., an explicit, formal proffer of the disqualifying information [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9] and an opportunity to object [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91] (118 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1390-1392) .

The parties in Azteca Construction, Inc. v. ADR Consulting, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 142 , agreed to private arbitration in accordance with the American Arbitration Association's (AAA) then entitled "Construction Industry Dispute Resolution [Rules and] Procedures" (AAA Rules). Those rules stated that if one party objects to the continued service of an arbitrator, the AAA decided whether the arbitrator should be disqualified. Nevertheless, plaintiff demanded disqualification of the proposed arbitrator in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(b)(1) within 15 days after receiving the arbitrator's disclosure statement, which revealed that the proposed neutral arbitrator had, within the preceding five years, served as a neutral arbitrator on matters in which defendant's counsel represented one or more parties, and that he had a prior relationship with that counsel in approximately 1985 for about a year, during which he and the counsel were employed by the same construction company. In addition, the disclosure statement noted that a conflicts check made by the law firm to which the proposed neutral arbitrator was "of counsel" revealed a case in which plaintiff was listed as a potential adverse party to one of its clients, although the proposed neutral arbitrator stated that he had no personal recollection of any knowledge of the matter, nor had he made inquiry of the attorney at his firm responsible for handling it. AAA determined that there was no good cause for disqualification, affirmed the appointment of the arbitrator, and the arbitration proceeded to its conclusion. Plaintiff filed a petition to vacate the arbitration award for the arbitrator's refusal to disqualify himself. The trial court ruled that plaintiff had waived the right to disqualify the proposed neutral arbitrator in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(b)(1) by agreeing to AAA arbitration, and denied the petition. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, directing the trial court to grant the petition to vacate (121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1169-1170) . The court began by noting that the issue involved statutory construction and the ascertainment of legislative intent, which it reviewed de novo (121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1164) . It also observed that because arbitrators wield such mighty and largely unchecked power, the Legislature has taken an increasingly more active role in protecting the fairness of the process. In 1997, the Legislature added as an addition ground for vacating an award that the arbitrator "was subject to disqualification upon grounds specified in Section 1281.9 but failed upon receipt of timely demand to disqualify himself or herself as required by that provision" [see former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(f)] (121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1163) . The court set forth and discussed Civ. Code § 3513, which provides that anyone may waive the advantage of a law intended solely for his benefit, but a law established for a public reason cannot be contravened by a private agreement (121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1166) . The court concluded that the right to disqualify a proposed neutral arbitrator in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.9, 1281.91 cannot be waived by agreeing to arbitrate in accordance with rules that provide some other means of determining whether the proposed neutral arbitrator is to be disqualified. The neutrality of the arbitrator is of such crucial importance that the Legislature cannot have intended its regulation be delegable. The statutory scheme is designed primarily to serve the public purpose of promoting public confidence in the arbitration process by allowing individual rights to take precedence (121 Cal. App. 4th 1156, 1168) .

[d] Deemed Admission If Response Untimely

Evans Co. v. Millmen's Union No. 550 (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 815, 205 Cal. Rptr. 731 , involved arbitration of a dispute under a collective bargaining agreement. After the award was made by the arbitrator, the employer timely filed a petition to vacate the award. The union failed to file a response to the petition within the period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6. The trial court held that the employer's allegations in the petition to vacate were deemed admitted. The trial court ultimately granted the petition, after applying substantive federal law, and the union appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the union's untimely response was not "duly filed" as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1290. Therefore, the trial court had properly concluded that the allegations in petitioner's petition were deemed admitted (159 Cal. App. 3d 815, 819) .

[e] Time for Filing Petition to Vacate Award

Plaintiff in Louise Gardens of Encino Homeowners' Association, Inc. v. Truck Insurance Exchange (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 378 , demanded an appraisal of the amount of loss it sustained in the 1994 Northridge earthquake. The appraisal was conducted in accordance with Ins. Code § 2071, which provides that each party select a competent and disinterested appraiser and then they select a competent and disinterested umpire. The appraisers appraise the loss; and if they cannot agree, submit their differences to the umpire. The appraiser chosen by defendant disclosed his prior associations with defendant and its affiliates, including that during the three years immediately preceding his appointment by defendant, he had served as an appraiser designated by the defendant or its affiliates on 15 occasions, 11 of which involved appraisals which were then still pending. In addition, he had served four times during the same period as a consultant to the law firm which was then representing defendant in these proceedings. Based on those disclosures, plaintiff demanded defendant's appraiser be replaced and filed a petition for his removal. The trial court denied the petition, under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1282(e), which provided grounds for disqualification of party arbitrators. Admittedly, that denial was not appealable. Later, defendant commenced a declaratory relief action against plaintiff claiming plaintiff had breached the cooperation provisions of the policy and was therefore estopped to claim any benefits under it. That action was still pending in the trial court, but had been stayed pending resolution of the issues raised in this appeal. When the appraisal was returned, plaintiff accepted $440,000, which represented the difference between the appraisal award and the amount previously paid by defendant. Plaintiff never sought to vacate the award, much less within the 100 day period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1288. Instead, it filed a cross complaint in defendant's declaratory relief action. Still later, over 14 months after its receipt of the appraisal award, plaintiff filed a petition to confirm the award so that plaintiff could appeal the ruling refusing to remove the appraiser. The petition was granted, and judgment entered thereon. Plaintiff appealed, and defendant filed a timely cross appeal.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. An agreement to conduct an appraisal contained in a policy of insurance constitutes an "agreement" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(a), and therefore is considered an arbitration agreement subject to the statutory contractual arbitration law. While the court recognized that one of the grounds for vacating an appraisal award is the failure of an arbitrator who was subject to disqualification on the grounds set out in former Code Civ. Proc. § 1282 (e) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(1) (applicable only to neutral arbitrators)] to disqualify himself or herself as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(f), [now Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(B)] relief must be sought in a timely manner. A court cannot vacate an award unless a petition requesting that relief has been duly filed and served not later than 100 days after the date of service of a signed copy of the award on the petitioning party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1288] (82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 658) . A party to an arbitration may not circumvent the 100 day time requirement in which to seek the vacation of an award by attempting to raise his or her objections to the award in an appeal from the judgment entered following an order of confirmation. A party who fails to timely file a petition to vacate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286 may not thereafter attack that award by other means on grounds which would have supported an order to vacate (82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 659) . The court concluded that plaintiff could not avoid the consequences of its failure to file a timely petition to vacate by appealing from the post-confirmation judgment (82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 660) . As a further ground for affirming the judgment confirming the award, the court of appeal noted that plaintiff had accepted the benefits of the judgment, which resulted in waiver of the right to appeal from it (82 Cal. App. 4th 648, 661) .

The parties in Knass v. Blue Cross of California (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 390, 279 Cal. Rptr. 124 , stipulated to binding arbitration of a pending lawsuit. An award in defendant's favor was served in July, 1989. In September, the court ordered judgment entered in defendant's favor, and notice of entry of judgment was served on plaintiff in November. In January, 1990, plaintiff appealed, contending that the arbitrator's award should be vacated.

The court of appeal affirmed the award for defendant, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4 does not allow a party to challenge an arbitration award for the first time on appeal. The 100-day time limit in Code Civ. Proc. § 1288 may not be circumvented by appealing the judgment confirming the award (228 Cal. App. 3d 390, 395-396) .

[f] Arbitrator's Testimony May Not Be Considered

Evid. Code § 703.5 provides that no person presiding at any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding, and no arbitrator or mediator, is competent to testify, in any subsequent civil proceeding, as to any statement, conduct, decision, or ruling, occurring at or in conjunction with the prior proceeding, except as to a statement or conduct that could do any of the following:

- Give rise to civil or criminal contempt.
- Constitute a crime.
- Be the subject of investigation by the State Bar or Commission on Judicial Performance.
- Give rise to disqualification proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(1) or (6).

Evid. Code § 703.5 does not apply to a mediator with regard to any mediation under Fam. Code § 3160 et seq.

Trabuco Highlands Community Assn. v. Head (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842 involved a dispute between a condominium association and member/homeowners. They stipulated to arbitration, but the homeowners always maintained they did not agree to "binding" arbitration. There were letters evidencing an agreement for nonbinding arbitration, but the association claimed the homeowners orally modified the agreement during the arbitration hearing to agree to binding arbitration. The award issued (in favor of the association) was entitled "Binding Arbitration Award and Decision". Homeowners made it clear at association meetings that they did not agree to binding arbitration, but did nothing until, some five months after issuance of the award, the association moved to have it confirmed. Homeowners opposed the confirmation and both parties submitted declarations. The arbitrator submitted a letter indicating his notes conformed with the association's position and that the homeowners agreed to "seek a final resolution of this dispute". Homeowners objected that the letter was not a declaration and was hearsay, but the court referred to the letter in ruling that the arbitration was binding and confirming the award. After losing a motion for reconsideration, the homeowners appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the trial court reached its decision by impermissible means [96 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1188] . The court of appeal remarked that the trial court expressly noted that it was relying on the letter by the arbitrator. By doing so, the trial court abdicated its function to determine whether the arbitrator exceeded his powers in a most fundamental way: by issuing a binding award after the parties agreed to nonbinding arbitration [96 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1190] . The court of appeal said the problem went beyond the fact that the arbitrator's letter was hearsay: arbitrator testimony concerning the arbitration is expressly prohibited (except in circumstances not relevant here) by Evid. Code § 703.5. Therefore, it was inappropriate to rely after the fact on the arbitrator's characterization of the arbitration as binding. Because the trial court appeared to have relied on the arbitrator's statement, reversal was required for proper consideration of whether the parties agreed to binding arbitration [96 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1191] .

[g] Party Who Had Award Vacated Is Entitled to Post-Arbitration Costs and Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 provides that the court must award costs, as provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1021-1038, in any judicial proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2 connected with arbitration. This includes attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.3(a)(10)(A) when they are authorized by the contract.

Plaintiff in Marcus & Millichap Real Estate Investment Brokerage Co. v. Woodman Investment Group (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 584 , sought to recover a real estate brokerage commission. The arbitrator awarded the commission to plaintiff Marcus & Millichap (MM), which petitioned to confirm the award. Woodman, and its managing partner, who was also named in the award, petitioned to vacate the award. That petition was granted, as was Woodman's petition for post-award costs and attorney's fees incurred in the judicial proceedings. The award was vacated on the ground that the managing partner was not a signatory of the arbitration agreement and that the arbitrator exceeded her powers by entering an award against him. Plaintiff sought to have the award corrected to delete Woodman's managing partner. When that motion was denied, plaintiff filed a petition to compel the managing partner to arbitrate. That petition was granted. MM did not appeal the ordervacating the arbitration award, but did appeal the order granting defendants' costs and attorney's fees. The basis for seeking to set aside the order awarding post-award costs and attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 was that the matter had not yet been resolved, so no one was yet the prevailing party.

The court of appeal affirmed the award of post-award costs and attorney's fees, although with a dissent which claimed the majority treated the matter too technically, and should have come to a contrary result based on equitable principles (129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 518) . The award of costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2, including attorney's fees when authorized by the contract, is mandatory. The court's determination under Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 which party, if either, is the prevailing party in a post-arbitration judicial proceeding is a judicial function distinct from the arbitrator's decision to award or not to award fees in the arbitration itself (129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 513) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) (defining "prevailing party")]. As a matter of law, with respect to the postarbitration judicial proceedings Woodman and its managing partner were the prevailing parties (129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 514) . They were entitled to post-award costs and attorney's fees despite the order for another arbitration, because the order vacating the award without ordering rehearing was final and appealable [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1294(c)] (129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 514-515)

. Because no rehearing was ordered and the order vacating the arbitration award was not appealed, no claim of either party remained before the court or otherwise subject to judicial determination, the trial court's rulings are final. Further, the defendants did not have to prevail on the contract claim to be entitled to postarbitration fees and costs. The listing agreement provided for attorney's fees "in any litigation, arbitration or other legal proceedings." That contract language, as well as Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 required postarbitration judicial proceedings be considered a discrete legal proceeding for purposes of determining entitlement to attorney's fees (129 Cal. App. 4th 508, 516) .

MBNA America Bank, N.A. v. Gorman (2006) 147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 724 , was an appeal to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court from an order of the superior court denying plaintiff's petition to confirm an arbitration award against defendant card holder for sums owed to plaintiff on the ground that under Badie v. Bank of America (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 779, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 273 (discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.33[3][a]) a mailed insert or "bill stuffer" cannot serve as a waiver of the procedural right of trial by jury or as a basis for enforcement of an ADR clause by a unilaterally issued change in the original agreement (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 4). After plaintiff's petition was denied, defendant moved for costs and attorney's fees under both the attorney's fee provision in the credit card agreement and the private attorney general doctrine codified at Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court awarded defendant costs and fees in the amount of $23,490.77, finding that he was the prevailing party in this proceeding. The plaintiff appealed. The only issue on appeal was the grant of attorney's fees and costs to defendant.

The Appellate Division affirmed (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 13) , also awarding defendant his costs and attorney's fees on the appeal (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 13-14) . Plaintiff contended the order denying the petition to confirm was not a final award as required before contractual attorney's fees can be awarded under Civ. Code § 1717 because there was no final determination of the contractual rights giving rise to the dispute. The Appellate Division noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1293.2 mandates that the court award costs in any judicial proceeding under Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 et seq. A petition to confirm or vacate an arbitration award is covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1285]. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) defines "prevailing party" to include a defendant as against whom plaintiffs who do not recover any relief. Thus, defendant was the prevailing party in the judicial proceeding on plaintiff's petition to confirm the arbitration award: the petition was denied and plaintiff did not recover any relief against defendant. Thus, under the mandate in Section 1293.2, the trial court was required to award defendant his costs, which under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10) includes attorney's fees if they are authorized by contract, statute, or law. The credit card agreement contained a unilateral attorney's fees provision in favor of plaintiff; but Civ. Code § 1717(a) implies a bilateral right to attorney's fees (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 7) . The Appellate Division discussed other tests for who is a prevailing party, each of which bolstered its conclusion that defendant was the prevailing party on petition to confirm the award (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 7-8) . Because the trial court's order was silent on the legal basis for the award, the Appellate Division also considered whether the trial court properly granted attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and affirmed the award on that basis too (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 8-14) . Although plaintiff contended the award under the private attorney general doctrine could not be upheld because the denial of the petition to confirm the award was not "binding precedent," the Appellate Division said that although the order did not formally enjoin plaintiff from enforcing the arbitration agreement against other customers, it should effectively deter plaintiff from doing so at least with regard to customers similarly situated to defendant (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 10) . By similarly situated, the Appellate Division meant those of plaintiff's customers against whom the arbitration agreement would be unenforceable for the same reasons it was found to be unenforceable against plaintiff in the trial court proceedings (147 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 1, 10 n. 2).

[h] Prejudicial Conduct by Arbitrators

The court of appeals in Burlage v. Superior Ct. (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 524, 531-532, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 531 , affirmed the trial court's vacation of award for prejudice due to exclusion of admissible, material evidence. The court ruled that an arbitrator's refusal in contravention of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5) to admit admissible, material evidence that directly affects the issue of damages substantially prejudices the proffering party's ability to dispute the amount of damage and constitutes grounds for vacating an award. While not every evidentiary ruling by an arbitrator can or should be reviewed by a court, that is not to say that no evidentiary ruling can or should be reviewed by a court. In the case of excluded evidence, the trial judge cannot consider what he or she has refused to "hear." Legally speaking the admission of evidence is to hear it, and the weighing of it is to give it consideration (178 Cal. App. 4th 524, 530-532) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.21

§ 20C.21 Opposing Petition to Confirm Arbitration Award and Requesting Award Be Vacated

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION
vs.	)	TO CONFIRM ARBITRATION AWARD [AND
_____ [name],	)	ORDER REHEARING OF CONTROVERSY]
Respondent.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: none

_____

THE AWARD SHOULD NOT BE CONFIRMED; RATHER THE AWARD SHOULD BE VACATED BECAUSE _____ [OF CORRUPTION OF A PARTY or OF CORRUPTION OF AN ARBITRATOR or OF MISCONDUCT OF AN ARBITRATOR or THE ARBITRATORS EXCEEDED THEIR POWERS or THE ARBITRATORS ACTED CONTRARY TO THE ARBITRATION STATUTES].

A. Response to Petition to Confirm Award and Request to Vacate. A person name as a respondent in a petition may file a response to the petition requesting that the court dismiss the petition or confirm, correct, or vacate the award (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1285.2, 1290).

B. Grounds for Vacating Award. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph B.]

[EITHER]

C. Award Procured by Undue Means. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph C.]

[AND/OR]

D. Corruption of Arbitrator. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph D.]

[AND/OR]

E. Misconduct of Neutral Arbitrator. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph E.]

[AND/OR]

F. Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph F.]

[AND/OR]

G. Prejudicial Conduct by Arbitrators. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph G.]

[AND/OR]

H. Arbitrator Failed to Disqualify Self. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph H.]

[Optional] I. Time for Filing Response Requesting Vacation or Correction. A response requesting that an award be vacated or that an award be corrected must be served and filed within 10 days after service of the petition, [except that if the petition is served in the manner provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1290.4(b)(2), the response shall be served and filed within 30 days after service of the petition], and not later than 100 days after the date of service of a signed copy of the award on (a) the respondent, if the respondent was a party to the arbitration, or (b) the respondent's representative if the respondent was not a party to the arbitration (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1288.2, 1290.6; Eternity Investments, Inc. v. Brown (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 739, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134 ; Hirsch v. Ensign (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 530-531, 176 Cal. Rptr. 17 ; De Mello v. Souza (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 83-84, 111 Cal. Rptr. 274). Where the other party has filed a petition to confirm, only the 10-day deadline applies to the filing of the response, beginning upon the service of the petition (Oaktree Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Bernard (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 66, 67, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16); and that time for service of the response is extended by two court days when respondents serve the petition by overnight mail (Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(c)).

[Optional] J. Arbitrator's Testimony May Not Be Considered. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph L.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a response opposing a petition to confirm an arbitration award and requesting vacation of the award. It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with particular memoranda addressing each ground respondent urges for vacating the award [see § 20C.150 et seq.]. In addition to the statutory grounds for vacating an arbitration award set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2, courts have recognized two other grounds for vacating an award: (1) mistake, inadvertence, surprise or excusable neglect under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, which is the subject of the form at § 20C.212, and (2) illegality that contravenes public policy [see § 20C.210].

If the other party has not yet filed a petition to confirm the award, use the form at § 20C.20 instead of this one. If counsel wishes to obtain an order for rehearing after the award has been vacated, use the form at § 20C.22 in addition to this one.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show when the award was served, when the petition to confirm that award was served, and that this response and request for vacatur is timely. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of response to a petition to confirm an arbitration award that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form addressing the particular ground or grounds for vacating the award, see § 20C.150 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Response Requesting Vacation or Correction

Eternity Investments, Inc. v. Brown (2007) 151 Cal. App. 4th 739, 60 Cal. Rptr. 3d 134 , involved an award issued on August 26, 2005, in Eternity's favor, and served on September 5, 2005. On January 6, 2006, Eternity filed a petition in the trial court to confirm the award. The Browns had not filed a petition to vacate or correct the award, and more than 100 days had elapsed since the service of the award [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1288]. However, on February 8, 2006, the Browns filed both opposition papers and a petition of their own, seeking to vacate the arbitration award. They argued primarily that the arbitrator had exceeded his authority by awarding compensation to an unlicensed contractor [see Bus & Prof. Code § 7031(a), (e); Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 609-614 Loving, discussed at § 20C.210[3][b]; Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484 discussed at § 20C.210[3][b]]. The trial court confirmed the award. The Browns appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that defendants' response seeking to vacate the award was untimely (151 Cal. App. 4th 739, 742 . 748). A petition to vacate an award or correct an award must be served and filed not later than 100 days after the date of the service of a signed copy of the award on the petitioner [Code Civ. Proc. § 1288]. Similarly, a response requesting that an award be vacated or corrected must be served and filed not later than 100 days after the date of service of a signed copy of the award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.2]. In addition, a response must be served and filed within 10 days after service of the petition in California; 30 days is permitted if the petition is served outside the state [Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6]. If the party who lost in the arbitration does not serve and file a petition to vacate or a response to a petition to confirm within the 100-day period from the date of service of the award, the award must be treated as final. Failure to file a timely response prevents a party from vacating an award (151 Cal. App. 4th 739, 745). Defendants did not serve or file a petition or response to correct or vacate the award before the 100-day period expired. Plaintiff filed a petition to confirm 121 days after service of the award, when it was too late for the defendants to seek correction or vacatur. Under the plain language of the statute, the trial court had no alternative but to confirm the award as made (151 Cal. App. 4th 739, 742, 746) .

The award in Hirsch v. Ensign (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 176 Cal. Rptr. 17 , was issued on December 5, 1979. On December 20, plaintiff filed a motion to have the award confirmed and mailed it to defendant's counsel. On January 21, 1980, defendant filed a motion to vacate the award. The court heard the motion on January 25, 1980, confirmed the award and entered judgment thereon. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1290.6 and 1013, defendant had 15 days from December 20, 1979, to file a response to the motion to confirm the award and had exceeded that period (122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 530-531) . While Code Civ. Proc. § 1288 allows four years for filing a petition to confirm an award, it requires a petition to vacate or correct an award to be served and filed within 100 days after service of the award on petitioner. That same 100-day limitation applies by virtue of Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.2 when vacation or correction is sought by response. However, if another party petitions the court to confirm the award before the expiration of the 100-day period, a response seeking to vacate or correct the award is also subject to Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 and must be served and filed within 10 days after service of the petition. When no response is duly served and filed within the 10-day period, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1290 the allegations of the petition are deemed to be admitted by respondent (122 Cal. App. 3d 521, 531) .

The award in De Mello v. Souza (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 111 Cal. Rptr. 274 , was signed and transmitted to the parties on March 27, 1970. Plaintiff filed a petition for confirmation of the award on April 26, 1971, and served defendants on May 3, 1971. On June 17, 1971, defendant filed a response requesting correction of the award to conform to a stipulation of the parties regarding what it claimed was an error in calculation. The trial court corrected the award as requested by defendant, confirmedthe award as corrected, and entered judgment thereon. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the trial court had no authority to correct the award.

The court of appeal agreed with plaintiff and reversed with directions to the trial court to confirm the award as originally entered and to enter judgment thereon (36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 87) . If a party petitions to confirm the award within the 100-day period, a response to that petition requesting correction or vacation of the award must be served and filed within the 10-day period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 (36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 83) . The conclusion was inescapable that defendant violated both the 100-day statute of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.2 and the 10-day limitation contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 (36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 83-84) . Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.8 (set forth in § 20C.12[1]), the court may not correct an award unless a response requesting that the award be corrected or vacated has been duly filed and served. Because defendant failed to duly file and serve the response under both Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1288.2 and 1290.6, the trial court was barred from correcting the award (36 Cal. App. 3d 79, 84) .

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling in Oaktree Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Bernard (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 67, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 , that the response to the petition to confirm was timely. The filing did not comply with the 100-day deadline under Code Civ. Proc. § 1288. In response, the court ruled that where the other party has filed a petition to confirm, only the 10-day deadline in Code Civ. Proc. § 1290.6 applies to the filing of the response, beginning upon the service of the petition [182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 66] . The 10-day period was extended for two court days because respondents served the petition by overnight mail under Code Civ. Proc. § 1013(c) and for the period of time from its removal to federal court until its remand back to state court [182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 67] . The aspect of the case addressing whether the language of the agreement provided for judicial review of errors of law is covered in § 20.90[3][a1], below.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.22

§ 20C.22 Request for Order for Rehearing of Controversy After Arbitration Award Is Vacated

[1] FORM

THE ENTIRE CONTROVERSY SHOULD BE SUBMITTED TO REHEARING AFTER THE AWARD IS VACATED BECAUSE _____ [specify grounds, e.g., THE ARBITRATORS FAILED TO FIND ON A SUBMITTED ISSUE].

A. Rehearing on Award Being Vacated. If an award is vacated, the court may order a rehearing before new arbitrators (Code Civ. Proc. § 1287).

[Optional] B. Rehearing Before Original Arbitrators. If the award is vacated either pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(4) on the ground that the arbitrators exceeded their powers or pursuant to Section 1286.2(a)(5) on the ground that the arbitrators' conduct was prejudicial and contrary to those provisions, the court, with the consent of the parties to the court proceeding, may order a rehearing before the original arbitrators (Code Civ. Proc. § 1287).

[Optional] C. Arbitration Award That Is Uncertain on Any Submitted Issue Must Be Reheard. A rehearing in arbitration must be ordered with respect to the entire controversy subject to arbitration when the award reveals the arbitrators have not decided all questions submitted (M.B. Zaninovich, Inc. v. Teamster Farmworker Local Union 946 (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 410, 415-416, 150 Cal. Rptr. 233).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a petition or response seeking to have an award vacated to support a request that the matter be ordered reheard. It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to have the award vacated.

Optional Paragraph B is for use if rehearing should be before the original arbitrators. Optional Paragraph C is for when the arbitrators have failed to decide all issues submitted to them. The case on which Paragraph C is based has been questioned in Rodrigues v. Keller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 841, 170 Cal. Rptr. 349 , which is discussed in § 20C.101[3][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show when the award was served, if and when any petition to confirm that award was served, and that the response and request for rehearing are timely.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of petition requesting rehearing and order granting it that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing Paragraph C of this form and asserting that the arbitrators have disposed of all issues that had to be decided, see § 20C.101.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Award That Is Uncertain on Any Submitted Issue Must Be Reheard

M.B. Zaninovich, Inc. v. Teamster Farmworker Local Union 946 (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 410, 150 Cal. Rptr. 233 , arose out of a labor contract dispute. Among the questions submitted for arbitration was the amount, if any, owing to the union for the employer's failure to withhold certain amounts owed to the union by employees from their wages and to transmit these to the union. The award required the employer to remit to the union dues and initiation fees, which the employer had failed to withhold and which were due from a certain date. The employer's petition to set aside the award was denied, and the employer appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that failure to find on one of the issues submitted rendered the award fatally uncertain. It then considered whether a rehearing should be ordered as to the entire controversy subject to arbitration, or whether the award should be confirmed except for the part which was uncertain. The court found that precedent was solidly against the second alternative (86 Cal. App. 3d 410, 415) . The early case of Muldrow v. Norris (1859) 12 Cal. 331, 339, 344 , was found still to be controlling on the point that if arbitrators do not decide all questions submitted to them, the entire award is void and the entire cause should be returned for redetermination. Moreover, the same result follows from Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6, which sharply curtails the authority of the court to correct awards. This case did not fall within any of the categories mentioned for correction, which are exclusive (86 Cal. App. 3d 410, 416) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
A. Procedures for Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.23-20C.29

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.23[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.30

§ 20C.30 Correcting Award by Striking Matters In Excess of Arbitrator's Power

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MAY BE CORRECTED BY STRIKING _____ [specify, e.g., THE PORTION OF THE AWARD DETERMINING TITLE TO LOTS 14 AND 15] AND CONFIRMED AS CORRECTED BECAUSE NOTHING IN THE UNDERLYING AGREEMENT[, THE SUBMISSION TO ARBITRATION, OR RULE _____ (number) OF THE _____ (specify any incorporated rules, e.g., AMERICAN ARBITRATION ASSOCIATION)] GRANTED THE ARBITRATOR AUTHORITY TO MAKE AN AWARD _____ [specify, e.g., DETERMINING TITLE TO THOSE TWO LOTS].

A. Correcting Award by Striking Portion in Excess of Arbitrators' Authority. When the arbitrators exceed their powers but the award may be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision on the controversy submitted, that portion of the award in excess of the arbitrators' jurisdiction may be stricken and the award, as corrected, may be confirmed (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b); Allstate Ins. Co v. Superior Court (Jessel) (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 362 -364, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266 ; Jones v. Humanscale Corporation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 412, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 ; In re Connor (1900) 128 Cal. 279, 282-283, 60 P. 862 ; Luster v. Collins (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1347-1350, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215).

[Optional] B. Court May Correct Award by Striking Portion Requiring Employee to Pay Arbitral Expenses. When the criteria set forth in Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 101-112, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 are applicable because an employee or former employee is seeking to vindicate an unwaivable statutory right, an award requiring the employee or former employee to pay a portion of arbitral expenses is in excess of the arbitrator's powers. Such an award should not be vacated, but may be corrected by striking that portion and directing instead that the employer or former employer to pay all arbitral costs (Jones v. Humanscale Corporation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 412, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response that requests the court to correct an arbitration award by striking a portion of the award that was in excess of the arbitrator's power to make and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.12, addressing in general terms the ground for correction and any relevant timing or procedural matters relating to correction, as well as memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq. addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award. OptionalParagraph B is for use when the correction sought is to have the court strike the portion of the award requiring an employee or former employee who stated a claim involving an unwaivable statutory right to pay all or a portion of the arbitral costs and expenses.

Counsel may wish to include appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 or the form at § 20C.11, relating to confirmation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth and compare the award and the particular arbitration provision, submission agreement, and any rules adopted by the parties for the conduct of the arbitration to demonstrate what in the award exceeded the arbitrator's powers. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed at § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum to combine with this form, regarding correction of an award by striking attorney's fees, see § 20C.31.

For a memorandum to combine with this form, regarding correction of an uninsured motorist award by striking portions in excess of the arbitrator's powers, see § 20C.32.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award by Striking Portion in Excess of Arbitrators' Authority

Allstate Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Jessel) (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266 , was an appeal from a nonappealable order which the court of appeal chose to treat as a petition for a writ of mandate. The matter arose from damage to a home owned by real parties during the 1994 Northridge earthquake. After real parties sued Allstate, the parties entered into a mediation and arbitration agreement, which provided in part that the arbitrator's decision would be final and not subject to review, reconsideration or appeal, and would be issued without a written opinion other than to indicate which party prevailed, and how much, if anything, Allstate should pay to Jessels. The scope of the arbitration was limited Jessels' claims and Allstate's defenses. Mediation failed and the matter proceeded to arbitration. Evidentiary hearings were held in 2002 and 2003. On December 20, 2004, the arbitrator issued his ruling, which, contrary to the parties' agreement was five pages long and spelled out his reasoning. The award was for Jessels, for $400,000.00, less credit for any sums already paid. Although the ruling left issue of costs and attorneys' fees to be determined, the arbitrator stated that the ruling constituted a final award.

Jessel filed a petition to vacate the December 2004 ruling, contending the arbitrator had exceeded his powers because the ruling had been based on an affirmative defense that was not raised in Allstate's answer. Over Allstate's opposition, the trial court granted Jessel's petition, vacated the arbitrator's December 2004 award, and remanded the matter back to the same arbitrator--finding that he had yet to resolve all the issues. Allstate appealed.

The court of appeal construed the appeal as a petition for a writ of mandate, granted the writ, and directed the trial court (1) to vacate its order vacating the arbitration award; (2) to enter a new order correcting the arbitration award by deleting the introduction and discussion and leaving only the conclusion; and (3) denying Jessel's petition to vacate the arbitration award (142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 364) . The court treated as surplusage all language of the award that went beyond the arbitrator's statement of the amount to be recovered by Jessel (142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 362). The only possible basis for the trial court's order was a finding that the arbitrator exceeded his powers and the award could be corrected. The court of appeal agreed that the arbitrator exceeded his powers insofar as he stated the reasons for his decision, but the award could easily be corrected by deleting the surplusage so that the award was limited to the amount due to Jessel (142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 363).

Plaintiff in Jones v. Humanscale Corporation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 was a sales consultant for defendant pursuant to an agreement that contained a noncompetition clause, an arbitration provision, and a New Jersey choice of law clause. In 2002, defendant fired plaintiff and later made demand in New Jersey for arbitration of claims of breach of the noncompetition clause. Plaintiff commenced the California action for wages owed, declaratory relief, and unfair competition. In that action, plaintiff sought to have the New Jersey arbitration stayed, while defendant sought to have the action stayed while the New Jersey arbitration proceeded.Meanwhile, defendant had commenced an action in New Jersey, in which the parties were ordered to proceed to arbitration. The California court stayed the California action pending the arbitration. The New Jersey arbitrator found for defendant, awarding $17,500. as damages for breach of the noncompetition clause, finding defendant did not owe plaintiff any wages, and ordering arbitral costs to be shared equally, plaintiff's half amounting to $12,194. Defendant petitioned in the California action to confirm the award. Plaintiff petitioned to vacate it, claiming it was based on an illegal contract that violated California law regarding noncompetition agreements, that the wage claim ruling was improper, and that the division of arbitral expenses violated California law. The trial court granted plaintiff's petition, finding California law applied and was violated, both as to the noncompetition clause [see Bus & Prof. Code § 16600] and by directing employee to pay half of the arbitral costs. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded with directions to the trial court to correct the award by requiring defendant to pay all arbitral costs, and to confirm the award as corrected (130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 405, 417) . Because the arbitration dealt with plaintiff's wage claim, unwaivable statutory rights were involved [Lab. Code §§ 201, 203, 218.5], and the minimum requirements set forth in Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 101-112, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 (discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.23[3][a]), were applicable. One of those requirements is that the employee cannot be required by the arbitration agreement or the arbitration process to bear any of the arbitral fees or costs (130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 411-412) . Here, the division of arbitral fees was based on the award alone because the arbitration agreement did not require that parties to share arbitral costs. Thus, the arbitration agreement was not unconscionable (130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 416) . A court may correct an award and confirm it as corrected if it determines that the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers and the correction can be made without affecting the merits of the decision on the matters submitted [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b)]. To remedy the improper allocation of arbitral fees to plaintiff/employee, the trial court should have corrected the award, not vacated it (130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 412) .

In re Connor (1900) 128 Cal. 279, 60 P. 862 , involved arbitration of the amounts owing from the parties to each other for certain real estate transactions. The matter was submitted to arbitrators pursuant to stipulation. The award was in favor of appellant, who moved to modify the award to extend the period during which appellant was entitled to interest on the principal amount owing and to strike a finding regarding ownership of two lots or to vacate the award. The trial court struck the finding regarding ownership of lots 14 and 15 but did not modify the award with regard to interest.

The Supreme Court affirmed. With respect to the interest, the Court said that matter would require evidence, which was not before it, and that any error committed was not a ground for modification under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1287 or 1288 (128 Cal. 279, 282) . With respect to the stricken reference to ownership of lots 14 and 15, the Court said that modification was proper as an instance in which the arbitrators had exceeded their powers. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1288(2), modification of a part of an award on matters not submitted was proper when that part could be separated from the other parts without affecting the decision on the matters submitted (128 Cal. 279, 282-283) .

Luster v. Collins (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 215 , involved continuing disputes regarding an easement. Defendant's parcel was burdened with an easement in favor of plaintiff. After their first dispute, the parties entered into an agreement negotiated with the help of a retired judge. The agreement provided for operation of the easement. It covered issues such as maintenance of the easement, the locking of gates along it, and the control of the gates. It also provided that the agreement could be confirmed as an arbitration award and that future disputes regarding the easement be submitted to arbitration. Defendant was required by the terms of a 1989 arbitration award to remove trees along the easement. Plaintiff sold the benefitted parcel to his daughter and her husband during the time period encompassed by the several disputes and arbitrations, but continued the proceedings in his own name. The son-in-law was not a party to the original arbitration agreement and that agreement was never modified to require defendant to arbitrate disputes against the son-in-law. Three years after the original agreement and award, plaintiff sought confirmation of three awards, one of which awarded plaintiff monetary sanctions against defendant of $50 per day per tree for each tree not removed from the easement and $500 in favor of petitioner's son-in-law as damages for harassment (while attempting to use easement). The awards were confirmed, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with instructions to the trial court to set aside portions of the order confirming one award. The portions to be stricken related to the fine and to the award in favor of the son-in-law. Both matters were in excess of the arbitrator's power, as granted either by statute or by the original agreement, or beyond the charge of the original agreement of the parties. The remainder of the judgment was affirmed (15 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1350) . Although Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4 confers on arbitrators the power to fashion equitable remedies as necessary to determine the controversy submitted by the parties, when the value of the use of the easement was nominal (less than $3,500), a fine of almost $100,000 (which had accumulated by the time the appeal was argued) was beyond the charge in the original agreement to arbitrate "future violations" (15 Cal. App. 4th 1338, 1347-1350) .

[b] Court May Correct Award by Striking Portion Requiring Employee to Pay Arbitral Expenses

Jones v. Humanscale Corporation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 , is discussed at § 20C.30[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.31

§ 20C.31 Correcting Award by Striking Attorney's Fees

[1] FORM

THE AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE NOTHING IN THE UNDERLYING AGREEMENT[, THE SUBMISSION TO ARBITRATION, NOR RULE _____ (number) OF THE _____ (specify any incorporated rules, e.g., CONSTRUCTION INDUSTRY RULESOF THE AMERICAN ARBITRATION ASSOCIATION)] GRANTED THE ARBITRATOR AUTHORITY TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO THE PREVAILING PARTY.

A. Correcting Award by Striking Portion in Excess of Arbitrators' Authority [see § 20C.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Award of Attorney's Fees Not Authorized. If the underlying agreement[, the submission to arbitration, and any arbitration rules incorporated into the parties' agreement] is/are silent on the matter of attorney's fees, the arbitrator has no jurisdiction to award attorney's fees to the prevailing party; and the award may be corrected by striking the attorney's fees award and confirmed as corrected (Thompson v. Jespersen (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 964, 967-969, 272 Cal. Rptr. 132).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a petition or response that requests the court to correct an arbitration award by striking an award of attorney's fees and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.12, addressing in general terms the ground for correction and any relevant timing or procedural matters relating to correction, as well as memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq., addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award.

Counsel may wish to include appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 or the form at § 20C.11, relating to confirmation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the scope of the particular arbitration provision, submission agreement, and any rules adopted by the parties for the conduct of the arbitration. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed at § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum to regarding correction of an uninsured motorist award by striking portions in excess of the arbitrator's powers, see § 20C.32.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award of Attorney's Fees Not Authorized

Plaintiffs in Thompson v. Jespersen (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 964, 272 Cal. Rptr. 132 , contracted with defendant for the construction of a single family residence. The contract provided for arbitration. Plaintiffs were dissatisfied with defendant's performance and submitted a demand for arbitration, claiming significant damages. Defendant made a counterclaim for $50,000. Arbitration was conducted in accordance with the construction industry rules of the American Arbitration Association (AAA), which were incorporated into the parties' agreement. The arbitrators awarded plaintiffs $10 in damages and $75,000 in attorney's fees. Plaintiffs petitioned for judgment confirming the award. Defendant responded by requesting that the award be corrected by deleting the grant of attorney's fees, which it contended was beyond the jurisdiction of the arbitrators. The court confirmed the award in its entirety and entered judgment. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment insofar as it confirmed the award of attorney's fees, and in all other respects affirmed. An arbitrator cannot make an award based on an issue not properly submitted because his or her jurisdiction or authority to act is derived from, and limited by, the arbitration agreement or submission (222 Cal. App. 3d 964, 967) . Applying those principles, the court concluded that the arbitrators were without jurisdiction to consider the issue of attorney's fees. Plaintiffs admitted that the contract was silent on the subject of attorney's fees in the event arbitration or court action was required to settle a dispute but urged that Rule 43 of the AAA's construction industry rules permitted the award of attorney's fees. Rule 43 permits an arbitrator to "grant any remedy or relief that is just, equitable, and within the terms of the agreement between the parties." The court determined that Rule 43 did not contain any express or implied provision for awarding attorney's fees to the prevailing party when the parties' agreement is silent on this issue (222 Cal. App. 3d 964, 968) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.32

§ 20C.32 Correcting Award by Striking Matters Beyond Powers of Uninsured Motorist Arbitrator

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CORRECTED BY REDUCING THE AMOUNT AWARDED TO $_____ BECAUSE NOTHING IN SECTION 11580.2 OF THE INSURANCE CODE, [OR] THE UNDERLYING INSURANCE POLICY[, (OR) THE SUBMISSION TO ARBITRATION] GRANTED THE ARBITRATOR AUTHORITY TO AWARD SUMS IN EXCESS OF THE POLICY LIMITS [OR TO DETERMINE THE AMOUNT OF COVERAGE].

A. Correcting Award by Striking Portion in Excess of Arbitrators' Authority. [See § 20C.30[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Reducing Uninsured Motorist Award to Policy Limits. Unless the insurance policy is broader than Insurance Code Section 11580.2(f) or the parties voluntarily agree to submit additional issues to the arbitrator, the arbitrator has no power to determine the extent of coverage or the amount of money the insurance company is obligated to pay the insured; and the trial court may correct an award in excess of the policy limits by reducing the award to the amount of the policy limits (Furlough v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 45-47, 249 Cal. Rptr. 703 ; Campbell v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 105, 112-113, 67 Cal. Rptr. 175).

[Optional] C. Extent of Coverage Was Not Submitted to Arbitrator for Determination. Unless there is some written record of the submission to the arbitrator of the issue of the amount of coverage[, for example mention of the issue in the parties' arbitration briefs], the court cannot find that the coverage issue was submitted to the arbitrator, and the superior court may determine that issue (Furlough v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 46-47, 249 Cal. Rptr. 703).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a petition or response that requests the court to correct an uninsured motorist arbitration award by striking the portions of the award the were in excess of the arbitrator's authority and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.12, addressing in general terms the ground for correction and any relevant timing or procedural matters relating to correction, as well as memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq., addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award.

Counsel may wish to include appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 or the form at § 20C.11, relating to confirmation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the scope of the particular insurance policy, submission agreement, and any rules adopted by the parties for the conduct of the arbitration. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed at § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to addressing the scope of issues to be decided by the arbitrator in uninsured motorist cases, in procedural contexts other than correction of the award, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.43 and § 20C.63.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reducing Uninsured Motorist Award to Policy Limits

Furlough v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 249 Cal. Rptr. 703 , involved an uninsured motorist claim by the lessee of a tractor-trailer rig against the lessor's insurer. While driving the rig, plaintiff was forced off the road by a hit-and-run vehicle. Defendant issued a comprehensive business policy (primary policy) which included uninsured motorist coverage with a limit of $300,000 per accident. Defendant also issued a personal umbrella policy which provided uninsured motorist coverage with a $25,000 limit per accident and a commercial umbrella policy which did not mention uninsured motorist coverage and limited liability to $1,000,000. Plaintiff's amended demand for arbitration sought $1,300,000, claiming that the commercial umbrella policy included uninsured motorist coverage. The arbitratorawarded plaintiff $744,695, which was reduced to $641,796 to reflect sanctions against plaintiff. Plaintiff petitioned for confirmation of the award, and defendant responded seeking that the award be corrected by reducing it to $325,000, which defendant claimed was the applicable limit of uninsured motorist coverage. The superior court agreed, reduced the award to $325,000, and confirmed the award as reduced. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The policy language tracked the statutory language; thus arbitration of only two issues was required: (1) whether the insured was entitled to recover damages from the uninsured motorist, and (2) if so, the amount of damages (203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 45) . Unless the parties voluntarily agree to submit additional issues to the arbitrator, the arbitrator has no power to determine the extent of coverage or the amount of money the insurance company is obligated to pay the insured (203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 45-46) . Plaintiff argued the extent of coverage had been submitted to arbitration, but the record did not support that contention. The record on appeal did not include the papers purportedly submitted in the arbitration proceeding; and the trial court issued no statement of decision, none having been requested. Thus, the trial court's decision was presumed to be correct and impliedly determined that the issue of the extent of uninsured motorist coverage was not submitted to the arbitrator. Thus, that issue was left for the court's determination because an arbitration award that embraces matters outside the agreement and not submitted to the arbitrator is subject to modification under Code Civ. Proc. 1286.6(b) (203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 46-47) . The trial court correctly reduced the award because the commercial umbrella policy could not be read to include uninsured motorist coverage. Not only was there no express mention of uninsured motorist coverage in the commercial umbrella policy, but Ins. Code § 11580.2 specifically excludes from its application automobile liability coverage provided on an "excess or umbrella basis" [see Ins. Code § 11580.2(a)(1)] (203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 47) .

Campbell v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 105, 67 Cal. Rptr. 175 , arose from a claim under the uninsured motorist clause of plaintiffs' policy. An arbitration award was entered in favor of plaintiffs awarding $10,000 to one plaintiff spouse for bodily injuries and $4,000 to the other spouse for loss of the injured spouse's services. The policy provided a maximum of $10,000 could be paid in respect of an incident in which only one person suffered bodily injury, so defendant petitioned to have the award corrected. The trial court denied the petition and confirmed the award. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with directions to correct the award by limiting recovery to $10,000 less the amount of medical payments found by the arbitrator to have been paid and to enter judgment accordingly. The agreement to arbitrate did not confer on the arbitrator the power to make a determination that the policy limits were greater than provided in the policy (260 Cal. App. 2d 105, 112) . Defendant's failure to object to the demand in excess of the policy limits or to the introduction of evidence in support of the plaintiffs' claims could not be deemed waiver of its right to seek correction or vacation of an award in excess of the policy limit (260 Cal. App. 2d 105, 112-113) . The award being in excess of the powers of the arbitrator, the petition for correction should have been granted pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 (260 Cal. App. 2d 105, 113) .

[b] Extent of Coverage Was Not Submitted to Arbitrator for Determination

Furlough v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 249 Cal. Rptr. 703 , is discussed at [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.33-20C.39

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.33[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.40

§ 20C.40 Correcting Award by Striking Surplusage

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MAY BE CORRECTED BY STRIKING _____ [specify, e.g., ITEM 4] AND CONFIRMED AS CORRECTED BECAUSE THAT ITEM MAY BE STRICKEN AS A MATTER OF FORM THAT DOES NOT AFFECT THE MERITS OF THE CONTROVERSY.

A. Correcting Award by Striking Surplusage. A court may correct an arbitration award by striking portions of the award that are mere surplusage when the portions to be stricken do not affect the merits of the controversy, and then may confirm the award as corrected (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(c); Allstate Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Jessel) (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 362-364, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266 ; San Jose Federation etc. Teachers v. Superior Court (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 868, 183 Cal. Rptr. 410).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a petition or response that requests the court to correct an arbitration award by striking a portion of the award that is "mere surplusage" and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.12, addressing in general terms the ground for correction and any relevant timing or procedural matters relating to correction, as well as memoranda from § 20C.60 et seq., addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award.

Counsel may wish to include appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 or the form at § 20C.11, relating to confirmation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the scope of the particular arbitration provision, submission agreement, and any rules adopted by the parties for the conduct of the arbitration. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed at § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award by Striking Surplusage

Allstate Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (Jessel) (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 356, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 266 , is discussed at § 20C.30[3][a].

San Jose Federation etc. Teachers v. Superior Court (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 183 Cal. Rptr. 410 , involved arbitration of a grievance filed by a teacher who did not receive a position she had been offered because it was given to another teacher. The award ordered that the teacher receive back pay as if she had taught the course and be given priority to teach the course the next time it was offered. The award also provided that the arbitrator retain jurisdiction to determine the amount of compensation due in the event the parties could not agree and in the event there was a dispute regarding the aggrieved party's priority to teach the class the next time it was offered. The school district petitioned to have the award vacated on the ground that the arbitrator's retention of jurisdiction was in excess of his authority. The court vacated the award. The teachers' union petitioned to have that order set aside.

The court of appeal ordered issuance of a peremptory writ, directing the trial court to vacate its prior order and to enter an order correcting the award, by striking the item regarding retention of jurisdiction by the arbitrator in the event a dispute arose with regard to implementing aggrieved party's priority to teach the class the next time it was offered, and confirming the award as corrected (132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 868) . The extent of an arbitrator's authority is governed by the underlying agreement and by the dispute submitted by the parties (132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 864) . The collective bargaining agreement under which the dispute was submitted to arbitration provided that the decision of the arbitrator would be final and binding. The award did not become final until that amount of back pay was in fact calculated (132

Cal. App. 3d 861, 866) . Thus, the arbitrator did not exceed his powers by retaining jurisdiction to determine the amount of pay owing the aggrieved party in the event the parties could not agree (132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 867) . The fact that the award of priority to the aggrieved party to teach the class the next time it was offered had an indirect effect on the other teacher did not render the award in excess of the arbitrator's jurisdiction. Nevertheless, retention of jurisdiction over the issue of the aggrieved party's entitlement to priority in teaching was unnecessary and improper. The remedy was self-executing. Thus, retention of jurisdiction was surplusage and should be stricken (132 Cal. App. 3d 861, 868) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.41-20C.49

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.41[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.50

§ 20C.50 Correcting Award by Changing Name of Party to One Over Whom Arbitrator Had Personal Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CORRECTED BY INSERTING THE NAME OF _____ [specify party against whom award should have been made] AS THE PARTY AGAINST WHOM THE AWARD WAS MADE IN LIEU OF THE NAME OF _____ [specify person against whom award actually was made] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR HAD NO BASIS FOR EXERCISING JURISDICTION OVER _____ [specify person against whom award actually was made].

A. Correcting Award Because of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. A court may correct an arbitration award by changing the name of the party against whom the award was made when the arbitrator had jurisdiction over the proper party but had no basis for exercising personal jurisdiction over the person against whom the award actually was made (Ikerd v. Warren T. Merrill & Sons (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1833, 1842-1843, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 398).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a petition or response that requests the court to correct an arbitration award by changing the name of the party against whom the award was made, when the award was made against a party over whom the arbitrator did not have personal jurisdiction, as long as the arbitrator had person jurisdiction over the proper party, and to confirm that award as corrected [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6; cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 1288.6 (application to arbitrators for correction)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with memoranda from § 20C.12, addressing in general terms the ground for correction and any relevant timing or procedural matters relating to correction, as well as memoranda from§ 20C.50 et seq., addressing any particular challenge that has been made or may be anticipated with regard to confirmation of the award.

Counsel may wish to include appropriate portions of the form at § 20C.10 or the form at § 20C.11, relating to confirmation.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the name or the party over whom the arbitrator had jurisdiction and detail that party's participation in the arbitration and should describe the lack of participation by the party improperly named, and also show that the party improperly named was not a party to the arbitration agreement or any submission agreement. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed at § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Correcting Award Because of Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

In Ikerd v. Warren T. Merrill & Sons (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1833, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 398 , the arbitrator of a dispute between a building owner and a construction corporation concluded that the president of the corporation was personally liable for breach of the construction contract, under the rule that an agent for an undisclosed principal is personally liable on a contract that the agent makes for the principal. The arbitrator accordingly made an award against the president personally. However, the president had not been made a party, and the arbitrator had no basis for exercising personal jurisdiction over the president. The corporation opposed the building owner's petition for confirmation, on the ground of the arbitrator's lack of jurisdiction over the president. The trial court corrected the award by inserting the corporation's name in place of the president's name. The award as corrected was confirmed, and judgment was entered accordingly. The owner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting that the president was not formally made a party to the arbitration. He was neither named nor served as a respondent. His participation in the arbitration was not a general appearance because he participated solely in his capacity as president of the respondent corporation. He never personally filed a responsive pleading. When the arbitrator requested briefs on the president's possible liability under the undisclosed-principal rule, the corporation submitted a brief, but the president did not personally submit a brief (9 Cal. App. 4th 1833, 1842-1843)

.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
B. Ways in Which Court May Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.51-20C.54

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.51[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
C. When Court Has No Authority to Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.55

§ 20C.55 Court Cannot Correct Award Regarding Attorney's Fees After Issue Was Submitted to Arbitrator

[1] FORM

THE COURT HAS NO AUTHORITY TO "CORRECT" THE AWARD BY _____ [DELETING THE AWARD OF or MAKING AN ADDITIONAL AWARD FOR] ATTORNEY'S FEES BECAUSE THAT ISSUE WAS SUBMITTED TO AND DECIDED BY THE ARBITRATOR.

[EITHER]

A. Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Add Attorney's Fees. Under the standard of limited review of possible errors of law or fact made by an arbitrator, once the issue(s) of [contract interpretation, determination of prevailing party, and] whether a prevailing party is entitled to attorney's fees has/have been submitted to the arbitrator, and the arbitrator has either failed to designate a prevailing party or explained why he or she did not award attorney's fees to the prevailing party, the court has no authority under Sections 1286.2(a)(4) or 1286.6(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, or otherwise, to correct the award by making award of attorney's fees (Moore v. Bank of San Luis Obispo (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 782, 786-788, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 603, 996 P.2d 706 ; Moshonov v. Walsh (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 771, 774, 779, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597, 996 P.2d 699 ; Corona v. Amherst Partners (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 701, 706-707, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250).

[OR]

A. Court Has No Authority to Modify Arbitrator's Decision Regarding Which Party Prevailed. [See § 20C.110[1], Optional Paragraph B.]

[OR]

A. Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Attorney's Fees. Even if the arbitrator makes an error of law in awarding attorney's fees, the trial court has no authority to correct that mistake by deleting the attorney's fees from the judgment or award (Taylor v. Van-Catlin Construction (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1064, 1068, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690 (arbitrator in fact did not misconstrue statute under which fees were awarded)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Grounds for Correcting Award: Arbitrator Exceeded Power and Award Is Correctable Without Affecting Merits. [See § 20C.12[1], Second Alternative Paragraph A].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The form in [1], above, may be submitted in opposition to a petition to correct an arbitration award by either striking an award of attorney's fees (Second or Third Alternative Paragraph A) or awarding attorney's fees to the prevailing party when that issue was submitted to the arbitrator and the arbitrator either found there was no prevailing party or explained why no award of fees was made to the prevailing party (First Alternative Paragraph A). In many cases it will be appropriate to combine the memorandum in this form with those in §§ 20C.90, 20C.91, 20C.101 and 20C.102.

This form is not applicable if the arbitrator designated a prevailing party but then failed either to award attorney's fees to that party or to explain his or her reason for not making an award of attorney's fees. That situation is governed by DiMarco v. Chaney (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1815-1817, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 , which is discussed at § 20C.20[3][b].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting confirmation or opposing vacation of an award [see § 20C.10 et seq.].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, a copy of the arbitration agreement and any submission agreement or other statements or transcriptions defining the scope of the matters submitted to the arbitrator should be attached as exhibits to the memorandum.

Although the issue addressed by this form is mainly one of law, there may be other issues with regard to which counsel will wish to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice

(Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For form relating to correcting, confirming, and vacating arbitration awards, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For memoranda addressing the limited scope of judicial review of arbitrator's errors after contractual arbitration, see §§ 20C.90, 20C.91, 20C.101 and 20C.102. For a memorandum addressing an arbitrator's ability to correct an award on his or her own initiative, see § 20C.103.

For forms addressing general contract principles, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Add Attorney's Fees

Moore v. Bank of San Luis Obispo (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 782, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 603, 996 P.2d 706 , arose out of loan transactions in which plaintiffs pledged their personal residences to secure loans to a corporation in which they were shareholders. Plaintiffs alleged many causes of action, including one to enjoin Bank from foreclosing on plaintiffs' property. Bank cross-complained for judicial foreclosure of the deeds of trust and for deficiency judgments. Both plaintiffs' complaint and the Bank's cross-complaint prayed for an award of attorney fees. The loan agreements contained arbitration clauses as well as a provision by which the plaintiff borrowers agreed to pay the Bank's "collection costs," including "our [the Bank's] attorneys' fees." The incorporated deeds of trust contained a provision entitling the Bank, but not the borrowers, to reasonable attorney fees "[i]f Lender institutes any suit or action to enforce any of the terms of this Deed of Trust ... ." Bank petitioned to compel arbitration, and arbitration was had. The award required the Bank (1) to cancel all obligations under the loan agreements, deeds of trust and liens, (2) to reconvey the deeds of trust, and (3) to execute releases from the liens and promissory notes, but also found that no money was owed to plaintiffs. Without any explanation, the award provided that each party pay its own attorney's fees. Bank petitioned for confirmation of the award, while plaintiffs petitioned for correction of the award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b), so as to award them their attorney fees. The superior court granted the petition to confirm and denied the petition to correct, finding the question of fees had been submitted to and decided by the arbitrators and was, therefore, unreviewable by the court. Plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal affirmed; and the Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed also, finding that the recovery or nonrecovery of fees was one of the contested issues of law and fact submitted to the arbitrator for decision, that the arbitrators' decision not to award fees was final, was at most an error of law, and could not be judicially reviewed for error in accordance with the narrow scope of permissible review established in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 28, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 (discussed at § 20C.90[3][a]) and Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 376-381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 (discussed at § 20C.91[3][a] -[c]) (22 Cal. 4th 782, 786-787) . The Court pointed out that the arbitrators were asked, but failed, to designate plaintiffs as prevailing parties, perhaps because plaintiffs' prevailed on equitable issues but were not awarded any money damages. The Court specifically distinguished DiMarco v. Chaney (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1815, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 , discussed at § 20C.20[3][b], in which the arbitrator expressly designated a prevailing party but refused to award that party fees as mandated by the contract (22 Cal. 4th 782, 787-788) .

Moshonov v. Walsh (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 771, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597, 996 P.2d 699 , was a multiparty dispute arising out of a real estate purchase that was submitted to arbitration by stipulation of all parties. The arbitrator found for defendants, the sellers. Although the real estate purchase agreement contained a clause providing for reasonable attorney fees to the prevailing party in an "arbitration or suit ... brought to enforce the terms of this contract or any obligation herein," and although the arbitrator found defendants were the prevailing parties, the arbitrator refused to award defendants any fees, reasoning that the contractual attorney fees clause was not broad enough to encompass the noncontractual claims on which defendants prevailed. Defendants moved to correct the award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 to include an award of attorney fees. The motion was denied, and defendants appealed. The Court of Appeal affirmed; and the Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court also affirmed, reasoning that when an arbitrator's denial of fees to a prevailing party rests on the arbitrator's interpretation of a contractual provision within the scope of the issues submitted for binding arbitration, the arbitrator has not "exceeded [his or her] powers" under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] or Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(b) (22 Cal. 4th 771, 774) . The issue of contractual interpretation was committed to final adjudication by the arbitrator. Regardless of whether the arbitrator's contractual interpretation and consequent denial of fees was legally correct, it was final and binding by agreement of the parties, at most an error of law, and not subject to review by the court, in accordance with the narrow scope of review established in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 28, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 and Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 376-381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 (22 Cal. 4th 771, 779) : namely that a court may not vacate or correct the award because of the arbitrator's legal or factual error, even an error appearing on the face of the award (22 Cal. 4th 771, 775) . The Court again distinguished DiMarco v. Chaney (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1815, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 558 , discussed at § 20C.20[3][b], by pointing out that in DiMarco, the arbitrator gave no interpretation of the contract but merely stated a belief he had discretion not to award attorney's fees, despite the mandatory terms of the agreement (22 Cal. 4th 771, 779) .

The parties in Corona v. Amherst Partners (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 701, 706-707, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 250 , had entered into a standard real estate purchase contract. Defendant sold the property to someone else, and plaintiff sued, demanding arbitration in accordance with the contract. The arbitrator found in plaintiff's favor and awarded him $10,000. Plaintiff moved to confirm the award and for an award of $28,257.50 in attorney fees and $6,302.32 in costs. The superior court confirmed theaward, but denied the motion for fees and costs on the ground that only the arbitrator had the authority to make that award and that it was incumbent on plaintiff to have sought it from the arbitrator. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The record on appeal did not include a copy of the contractual arbitration provision, but did include the parties' notice of contractual arbitration. Because the parties' stipulation did not limit the issues to be resolved through arbitration, the issue of plaintiff's entitlement to attorney fees and costs, as requested in the complaint, was subject to determination in arbitration proceedings. Plaintiff did not request that the arbitrator decide the issue of his entitlement to recover attorney fees and costs, and contended that therefore his situation was different from those in which a court cannot review an arbitrator's determination whether to award attorney fees. The court of appeal did not agree. Judicial intervention is limited to reviewing the award to see if statutory grounds for vacating or correcting the award exist. Under the statutory scheme, a party's failure to request the arbitrator to determine a particular issue within the scope of the arbitration is not a basis for vacating or correcting an award. Allowing a party to request that the trial court make an award that was within the scope of the arbitration but not pursued in that forum is inconsistent with the policies underlying the statutory private arbitration scheme (107 Cal. App. 4th 701, 706) . Therefore, plaintiff could not recover an award of attorney fees and costs incurred in the arbitration in the judicial proceedings that followed the arbitration. He could, however, recover the attorney fees and costs he incurred in the judicial proceedings and the court of appeal remanded the matter for further proceedings on the issue of the amount of fees and costs to be awarded (107 Cal. App. 4th 701, 707) .

[b] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Attorney's Fees

Plaintiffs/appellants in Taylor v. Van-Catlin Construction (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1064, 1068, 30 Cal. Rptr. 3d 690 , petitioned the superior court to confirm an arbitration award they had obtained against their construction contractor. The contractor asked that the award be corrected pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 by deleting the attorney's fees portion of the award on the ground that the arbitrator had exceeded his powers in granting attorney fees. Although the parties' contract did not provide for attorney's fees, American Arbitration Association's Rule 44[d], permitted such an award. The trial court granted contractor's request and deleted the fees. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed (130 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1064, 1070) . The court of appeal first discussed the difference between a court's authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 to correct an award if the arbitrators exceeded their powers but the award may be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision [Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.6(b)] and the fact that a court cannot substitute its judgment for the arbitrator's. Arbitrators do not exceed their powers by rendering a decision that is erroneous on a legal or factual issue, so long as the issue was within the scope of the controversy submitted to the arbitrators. Courts cannot reevaluate the merits of a particular remedy (130 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1065-1066) . Defendant had requested attorney's fees, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10)(C) and Civ. Code § 3260. The court of appeal disagreed with the trial court and found that Civ. Code § 3260 was applicable (130 Cal. App. 4th 1061, 1067-1070) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
C. When Court Has No Authority to Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.56

§ 20C.56 Court Cannot Correct Award Regarding Sanctions on Attorney of Party Under Arbitration Agreement Allowing Arbitration of Any Issues Arising from Contract

[1] FORM

THE COURT HAS NO AUTHORITY TO "CORRECT" THE AWARD UNDER CODE CIV. PROC. § 1286.6 BY DELETING THE AWARD OF SANCTIONS AGAINST _____[PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S] ATTORNEY.

A. Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Sanctions Against Party's Attorney. In accordance with the general rule that a trial court may not decline to confirm an arbitration award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 because it disagrees with the merits of the decision, a trial court may not delete an award of sanctions against a party's attorney from a contractual arbitration award (Bak v. MCL Financial Group, Inc. (2008) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 1127, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 800).

[Optional] B. Grounds for Correcting Award: Arbitrator Exceeded Power and Award is Correctable Without Affecting Merits. [See § 20C.12[1], Second Alternative Paragraph A].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is designed for use in a memorandum in opposition to a petition to correct an arbitration award by striking an award of sanctions against the attorney for a party when that issue was submitted to the arbitrator and the arbitrator awarded sanctions. In many cases, it will be appropriate to combine the memorandum in this form with those in §§ 20C.90, 20C.91, 20C.101 and 20C.102.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting confirmation or opposing vacation of an award [see § 20C.10 et seq.].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should cite the provision of the arbitration agreement showing that the scope of the arbitrator's jurisdiction includes award of sanctions and the award itself.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] . For example, a copy of the arbitration agreement, and any submission agreement or other statements or transcripts defining the scope of the matters submitted to the arbitrator, along with the arbitration award should be attached as exhibits to the memorandum.

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For form relating to correcting, confirming, and vacating arbitration awards, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda and how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For memoranda addressing the limited scope of judicial review of arbitrator's errors after contractual arbitration, see §§ 20C.90, 20C.91, 20C.101, and 20C.102. For a memorandum addressing an arbitrator's ability to correct an award on his or her own initiative, see § 20C.103.

For forms addressing general contract principles, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Cannot "Correct" Award to Delete Sanctions Against Attorney Under Arbitration Agreement Allowing Arbitration of Any Issues Arising from Contract

Bak v. MCL Financial Group, Inc. (2008) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 800 , confirmed an award issued by an arbitration panel ordering attorney for defendants to pay $7,500 in sanctions as a result of conduct during a prehearing dispute over the return of documents that plaintiffs claimed were subject to the attorney-client privilege. The arbitration clause authorized the arbitrator to decide any issues arising from the contract. The portion of the opinion dealing with the arbitration panel's jurisdiction over the attorney is discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.46[3][a]. The reviewing court deemed the request to vacate the respective portion of the award a request for correction of the award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 (170 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 1123). For the trial court to vacate the sanctions award would result in "a classic case of the trial court declining to confirm an arbitration award because it disagree[d] with the merits of the decision" (170 Cal. App. 4th 1118, 1127) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
C. When Court Has No Authority to Correct Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.57-20C.59

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.57[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.60

§ 20C.60 Stipulation to Arbitrate Was Valid and Binding

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE STIPULATION TO ARBITRATE WAS AUTHORIZED AND RATIFIED BY RESPONDENT, AND THUS WAS VALID AND BINDING.

A. Stipulation to Arbitrate Was Valid and Binding. When a party knows his/her attorney has stipulated to binding arbitration, participates in that arbitration, and never seeks to repudiate the stipulation, he/she has ratified the stipulation; and the resulting award may properly be confirmed (Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 732-733, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306).

[Optional] B. Oral Stipulation Was Binding. While Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281 et seq. permit courts to enforce only written agreements to arbitrate, once the parties have arbitrated and a written award is made, courts can enforce an award even if the underlying agreement to arbitrate was oral (CalFarm Ins. Co. v. Krusiewicz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 273, 284-286, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 619 ; Law Offices of Ian Herzog v. Law Offices of Joseph M. Fredrics (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the stipulation under which arbitration was conducted was valid and binding despite the fact that one party did not sign the stipulation. It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

Optional Paragraph B is for use in the stipulation for arbitration was oral.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that the party who did not sign the stipulation knew of it, authorized, and participated in the arbitration without objection. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stipulation to Arbitrate Was Valid and Binding

Respondents in CalFarm Ins. Co. v. Krusiewicz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 273, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 619 obtained a judgment against appellant's insured, Laynescape, Inc., which constructed retaining walls on the respondents' property. Respondents sought to enforce an arbitrator's award against CalFarm under the theory of promissory estoppel, based on representations made by Laynescape's attorney at a settlement conference. Respondents believed Laynescape's attorney represented both Laynescape and CalFarm. In return for agreeing to binding arbitration, respondents agreed to dismiss some of their claims. The arbitrator made a lump sum award of $475,000 in favor of the respondents and awarded them $129,082.96 in attorney fees. Judgment was entered on the arbitration award. CalFarm paid all but $80,000 of the award and sued respondents for declaratory relief and reimbursement. Respondents cross complained on several theories. The trial court verdict was for respondents. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, except as to punitive damages, which were based on a cause of action for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing (131 Cal. App. 4th 273, 292) . The court of appeal found the jury's verdict supported by evidence of the promise and that respondents' reliance was reasonable, as was their belief that Laynescape's counsel was CalFarm's agent (131 Cal. App. 4th 273, 284-286) .

The facts and procedural background of Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 , and the portion of the opinion addressing plaintiff's entitlement to statutory attorney's fees are discussed at § 20C.110[3][c].

The stipulation to arbitrate was reduced to writing and signed by plaintiff and attorneys for both parties. Defendant's attorney told plaintiff's attorney he was "authorized and instructed" to stipulate to binding arbitration. At the commencement of the arbitration, the arbitrator asked both parties if they understood that this was binding arbitration and that there would be no appeal of his award. Both parties answered "Yes." Defendant did not submit a declaration in opposition to the motion to confirm the award, but her attorney's did.

In affirming the judgment based on the award, the court of appeal found that defendant's attorneys were authorized to stipulate to binding arbitration and that the stipulation was valid. Unlike the situations in cases the court distinguished, defendant in this case ratified the stipulation by expressly assenting to arbitration and never claiming her consent was fraudulently induced or seeking to repudiate it (59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 732-733) .

[b] Oral Stipulation Was Binding

Law Offices of Ian Herzog v. Law Offices of Joseph M. Fredrics (1998) 61 Cal. App. 4th 672, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 , arose from a fee dispute between attorneys. Defendant associated plaintiff as co-counsel on a matter which was successfully terminated in favor of their client; and plaintiff wanted to be paid. At first defendant refused to stipulate to arbitration unless the stipulation provided that an award in his favor would be considered a favorable termination for purposes of a malicious prosecution action. Later, defendant and an attorney for plaintiff appeared in court, orally stipulated to binding arbitration, asked the court to order binding arbitration, and stated no written stipulation would be necessary: that the oral stipulation on the record would be sufficient if the court ordered arbitration. After an award for plaintiff, defendant filed a request for trial de novo. Plaintiff petitioned for confirmation of the award. The award was confirmed pursuant to the procedures applicable to contractual arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4]; and judgment entered thereon. Defendant appealed, contending what the parties had was judicial arbitration, because the court had no power to order contractual arbitration based only on an oral agreement to arbitrate.

The court of appeal affirmed, saying that while Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 et seq. permit courts to enforce only written agreements to arbitrate, once the parties have arbitrated and a written award is made, courts can enforce the award even if the underlying agreement to arbitrate was oral (61 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677) . Fredrics did not dispute that under Horn v. Gurewitz (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 255, 258-259, 67 Cal. Rptr. 791 , the court could enforce a written award even if the arbitration was the result of an oral agreement but contended instead that as there was no written agreement to arbitrate, the order to arbitrate, and thus the award, were void. The court of appeal said that Fredrics could, and did, waive his right to require a written agreement to arbitrate as the basis for the court's order to arbitrate. Fredrics orally stipulated in open court that the parties could be ordered to arbitrate, expressly stating that no written stipulation was required (61 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677-678) . Alternatively, under the doctrine of judicial estoppel, Fredrics could not change his position to Herzog's detriment after arbitration to contend that a written arbitration agreement was required before the court could order him to arbitrate (61 Cal. App. 4th 672, 679) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.61

§ 20C.61 "Self-Executing" Agreement Did Not Require an Order to Compel Arbitration

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT IS SELF-EXECUTING, AND, WHEN RESPONDENT REFUSED TO ARBITRATE, PETITIONER WAS ENTITLED TO PROCEED TO ARBITRATION WITHOUT AN ORDER COMPELLING ARBITRATION.

A. Arbitration Under "Self-Executing" Type of Agreement Needs No Order to Compel. If an arbitration agreement incorporates rules by which arbitration can be proceed ex parte if a party refuses to arbitrate, it is not necessary to obtain an order to compel arbitration in order to proceed (Brink v. Allegro Builders, Inc. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 577, 579-580, 25 Cal. Rptr. 556, 375 P.2d 436 ; Kustom Kraft Homes v. Leivenstein (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 805, 810-811, 92 Cal. Rptr. 650).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the agreement under which arbitration was had was "self-executing," and no order compelling arbitration was necessary to initiate the proceeding or to give it validity [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2]. It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show in what respects the arbitration agreement was self-executing, providing for proceeding in the face of one party's refusal to arbitrate. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant)necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Self-Executing" Type of Agreement Needs No Order to Compel

Brink v. Allegro Builders, Inc. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 577, 25 Cal. Rptr. 556, 375 P.2d 436 , arose out of a construction contract dispute. A provision in the contract recited that all matters in dispute thereunder were subject to arbitration by either one or three arbitrators, and that at any point of refusal or neglect to proceed by either party, the arbitration procedure could continue ex parte. The landowner raised certain claims under the contract; when the contractor demanded arbitration, the landowner appointed an arbitrator. The contractor refused to appoint an arbitrator, contending the dispute was outside the scope of the arbitration provision. The landowner proceeded to arbitration unilaterally. The contractor appeared at the landowner's ex parte arbitration hearing, stating it was not waiving its objections, and presented evidence. The arbitrator made an award in the landowner's favor. The trial court denied confirmation and instead granted the contractor's motion to vacate the award. Landowner appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, stating that when a contract contains express provisions permitting one arbitrator to proceed, as in this case, the party not in default is not compelled to seek court aid in invoking the arbitration clause. The statutory procedure to compel arbitration by court order was designed to afford a remedy when the parties have not provided for the particular contingency that has arisen or when the contractual scheme has failed. The contract in the instant case provided for the very contingency that arose; therefore, it was unnecessary to follow the statutory procedure for compelling arbitration (58 Cal. 2d 577, 579-580) .

In Kustom Kraft Homes v. Leivenstein (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 805, 92 Cal. Rptr. 650 , plaintiff contractors alleged breach of a construction contract. Defendant demurred on the ground that the complaint failed to allege that the matter had been submitted to arbitration, as provided for in the contract, which arbitration was to proceed in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association. The demurrer was sustained, and the action was abated pending arbitration. Defendant refused to recognize the arbitration process which plaintiff thereafter initiated. Plaintiff received the award following an ex parte arbitration and had it confirmed. Defendant appealed, stating there had been no order compelling arbitration.

The court of appeal affirmed, though it ordered certain corrections to be made in the record below, stating that an arbitration agreement may be self-executing, and its provisions may obviate the need to resort to statutory procedure to compel arbitration, citing Brink, above. The arbitration clause in this case imported into the contract the entire scheme for arbitration as established by the rules of the American Arbitration Association. When those rules were read into the contract, the court concluded, it then appeared to be comprehensive enough to be self-executing 14 Cal. App. 3d 805, 810-811) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Self-Executing" Type of Agreement Needs No Order to Compel

The court of appeal in National Marble Co. v. Bricklayers & Allied Craftsmen (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 229 Cal. Rptr. 653 , confirmed an award against the employer despite the fact that there had been no order compelling arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2. An arbitration agreement is self-executing if it provides for arbitration under rules incorporated or set forth in it (184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1063) . When an arbitration agreement is self-executing, no court order to arbitrate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2 is necessary (184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1062-1063) . When arbitration proceeds under a self-executing agreement, the objecting party is required to participate in the arbitration proceeding and then may raise its objections by petition to vacate the award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 or by opposing a petition to confirm the award (184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1063) .

In King v. Larsen Realty, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 349, 175 Cal. Rptr. 226 , a member of the California Association of Realtors requested interboard arbitration over a controversy between members of two boards of realtors concerning a sales commission. Defendants objected to the arbitration and refused to attend the hearing. The trial court granted plaintiffs' petition to confirm the arbitration award, and defendants appealed on the grounds that they had not entered into a written agreement to arbitrate interboard disputes and, therefore, plaintiffs were required to secure a prior court order to compel arbitration pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2.

The court of appeal affirmed, reasoning that the contracts for local board membership, which defendants had signed, were comprehensive enough to be self-executing arbitration agreements because the contracts incorporated the board's bylaws that imposed a duty to arbitrate and contained a scheme for conducting such arbitration. Relying on Brink v. Allegro Builders, Inc. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 577, 579-580, 25 Cal. Rptr. 556, 375 P.2d 436 , the court then held that a self-executing arbitration agreement obviates the need to resort to statutory proceedings to compel arbitration (121 Cal. App. 3d 349, 356) .

Mitchum, Jones & Templeton, Inc. (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 596, 140 Cal. Rptr. 160 , held an arbitration clause containing the rules of the New York Stock Exchange to be "self-executing." That clause read: "If any of the parties, after due notice, fails to be present or represented at a hearing or any adjourned hearing, the arbitrators may, nevertheless, in their own discretion, proceed with the adjudication of the controversy" (72 Cal. App. 3d 596, 602) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.62

§ 20C.62 Defense Is Unavailable as Outside the Scope of the Matters Committed to Arbitration

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE RESPONDENT'S PROFFERED DEFENSE IS BASED ON A DISPUTE OUTSIDE THE SCOPE OF ARBITRATION AND OF THIS PROCEEDING.

A. Nonarbitrable Defense Is Unavailable Against Petition to Confirm Award. A hearing to confirm an arbitration award is a special proceeding, and litigation of a nonarbitrable dispute through cross complaint or defense of setoff is beyond the scope of the proceeding (Airfloor Co. of Cal., Inc. v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1007, 1009, 149 Cal. Rptr. 130).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that a defense that was not raised in the arbitration proceeding cannot be considered by the court as part of its consideration of a petition to confirm the award. It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument

should point out the language of the agreement which defines the nature of the disputes the parties agreed to arbitrate, or any broader language in any submission agreement, stipulation, or order, and indicate why the defense the other party seeks, or is likely to raise, is outside the scope of that agreement. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonarbitrable Defense Is Unavailable Against Petition to Confirm Award

In Airfloor Co. of Cal., Inc. v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 149 Cal. Rptr. 130 , a dispute arose over the construction of college facilities. On receiving an arbitration award for extra work performed in that construction, plaintiff petitioned for confirmation of the award. Defendant did not contest the award but claimed entitlement to set off an alleged debt, not subject to arbitration, and arising out of a different contract. The trial court confirmed the award, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating the issue as being whether certain affirmative defenses could be raised in response to a petition to confirm an award. Hearings to confirm an arbitration award are special proceedings, not actions. The court's jurisdiction in those proceedings is limited by statutes which reflect an intent to free the hearings from delays incident to ordinary court trials (84 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1007-1008) . The totality of the legislative scheme is inconsistent with the use of those proceedings to resolve nonarbitrable disputes (84 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1007, 1009) . Furthermore, the provisions for compulsory cross complaints do not apply to special proceedings, and permissive cross complaints are allowed only when in response to complaints, not petitions [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 426.60, 428.10]. A setoff may be alleged in an action, not a special proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.70]. The defendant could have moved to abate the confirmation hearings pending determination of litigation involving the debt; if that litigation had been resolved in defendant's favor, it could have set off the judgment in the confirmation proceedings with the judgment at law. Even at the moment, on remand, defendant could ask the trial court to stay execution until the other litigation might be decided (84 Cal. App. 3d 1004, 1009) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.63

§ 20C.63 Arbitrators of Uninsured Motorist Claim Have Power to Determine Subordinate Issues

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE _____ [INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.2(f) and/or THE POLICY and/or THE AGREEMENT SUBMITTING THE MATTER TO ARBITRATION] PROVIDES FOR ARBITRATION OF THE QUESTION OF WHETHER PETITIONER IS LEGALLY ENTITLED TO RECOVERY, AND THAT NECESSARILY AUTHORIZES THE ARBITRATORS TO DETERMINE ALL [LEGAL] ISSUES SUBORDINATE TO THAT QUESTION, [SUCH AS WHETHER PETITIONER'S INJURY WAS CAUSED BY PHYSICAL CONTACT WITH AN UNINSURED MOTOR VEHICLE].

A. Physical Contact With Uninsured Motor Vehicle Is Fact Necessary to Determine to Uninsured Motorist Claim. An agreement to submit to the arbitrator the question of whether the insured is legally entitled to recover damages from the owner or operator of an uninsured automobile is sufficiently comprehensive to include the subordinate issue of whether the vehicle which caused the accident was an uninsured automobile within the meaning of the policy (Felner v. Meritplan Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 540, 543, 86 Cal. Rptr. 178).

[Optional] B. Issue of Physical Contact With Uninsured Motorist Is Arbitrable Under Policy Language. [See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.43[1], Paragraph F.]

[Optional] C. Claimant's Status as "Insured" Is Arbitrable. [See Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.43[1], Paragraph G.]

[Optional] D. Parties Submitted to Arbitrator Issue of Workers' Compensation Setoff. Even if the issue is not a "coverage question," and even if the policy bars the arbitrator from considering it, if the parties' briefs in arbitration plainly show that the amount of a workers' compensation setoff was in dispute, [for example if each party produces a different total for the amount of damages to which claimant is legally entitled because of different assumptions about the proper amount of the setoff], the parties are deemed to have submitted that issue for arbitration and cannot later complain that the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers by determining the issue (Porter v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co.

(1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1291, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338).

[Optional] E. Arbitrator May Award Section 998 Costs In Excess of Uninsured Motorist Coverage Limit. Code of Civil Procedure Section 998 applies to uninsured motorist arbitration under Insurance Code Section 11580.2. Further, the "maximum liability" provision of Insurance Code Section 11580.2(p)(4) does not preclude recovery of costs under Section 998, even if those costs, when added to the arbitration award, exceed the coverage limits. Although prejudgment interest is not available because an uninsured motorist arbitration is not an action for "personal injury" within the meaning of Civil Code Section 3291, deposition and exhibit preparation expenses are recoverable (Pilimai v. Farmers Ins. Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133, 137, 139, 145, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 760, 137 P.3d 939).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that arbitrators determining an uninsured motorist claim have the authority to determine subordinate issues, such as physical contact with an uninsured vehicle as the cause of the insured's injury. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show how the question of "legal entitlement to damages" encompasses any other legal issue that has, or might be, called into question, including whether or not the parties' evidence and briefs in arbitration amounted to submission of that "subordinate" issue. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For a memorandum addressing arbitrators' authority in uninsured motorist cases in the context of petitions to compel arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.43.

For a memorandum asserting that the general rule that an arbitration award is not to be vacated for errors of law applies to uninsured motorist arbitration, see § 20C.90.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Physical Contact With Uninsured Motor Vehicle Is Fact Necessary to Determine to Uninsured Motorist Claim

Felner v. Meritplan Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 540, 86 Cal. Rptr. 178 , arose out of a claim for damages by an insured under uninsured motorist coverage. The policy, as required by Ins. Code § 11580.2(f), provided that the parties either would agree as to whether the insured was legally entitled to recover damages from the uninsured automobile owner or operator, and in what amount, or they would arbitrate the matter. At the hearing in superior court to confirm the award made by the arbitrator, the insurer contended that the court should conduct a new evidentiary hearing on a crucial legal issue necessary to determine if an uninsured motorist was involved: whether the injury was the result of physical contact by a hit-and-run automobile as defined in Ins. Code § 11580.2(b). The trial court disagreed and confirmed the award. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding the agreement to submit to the arbitrator the question of legal entitlement to recovery as sufficiently comprehensive to include submission of the subordinate legal question involved (6 Cal. App. 3d 540, 543) .

[b] Parties Submitted to Arbitrator Issue of Workers' Compensation Setoff

Porter v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338 , arose out of an accident that caused injury to plaintiff/truck driver. Defendant provided the employer's workers' compensation insurance as well as its uninsured/underinsured motorist coverage. Defendant, as workers' compensation insurer, paid plaintiff $17,192.67. Plaintiff settled with the other driver for $15,000. Plaintiff retained $11,000 of that settlement and defendant received $4,000. Then, plaintiff claimed additional compensation under the underinsured motorist coverage, which was limited to $60,000. Defendant's arbitration brief argued that plaintiff could receive no more than $27,808.33 because his recovery had to be offset by the $17,192.67 in workers' compensation benefits he had already received and by the $15,000 settlement from the other driver. The arbitrator awarded plaintiff $72,490, minus the $11,000 he had received from the other driver, for a net award of $61,490. The arbitrator found that defendant had waived its right to assert its workers' compensation setoff by earlier acceptance of the $4,000 in settlement with the other driver. Plaintiff petitioned to have the award confirmed. Defendant petitioned to have the award vacated or corrected, claiming that (1) the award was erroneous as a matter of law because it failed to subtract the workers' compensation setoff from plaintiff's recovery, and (2) the arbitrator had exceeded his powers by deciding a coverage dispute that the parties did not submit to him. The trial court found that defendant's arbitration brief submitted the issue of the workers' compensation setoff to the arbitrator, notwithstanding any contrary language in the policy. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first determined that the rule enunciated in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 11, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , that an award cannot be reviewed for errors of law or fact, applies to arbitrations pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2(f) as well as to contractual arbitration in accordance with Code

Civ. Proc. § 1281 et seq. (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1289-1290) . That portion of the opinion is discussed at § 20C.90[3][c]. Regarding the question of the arbitrator's power to decide the workers' compensation setoff, the court noted that parties may submit for decision issues they were not contractually compelled to submit to arbitration. In those situations, courts look both to the contract and to the scope of the submissions to determine the arbitrator's authority. Here, the parties' briefs in arbitration plainly showed that an issue in dispute was the amount of the workers' compensation. The parties produced different totals for the amount of damages which plaintiff was "legally entitled to recover" starting from different assumptions as to the proper amount of the setoff. Thus, the court concluded, the issue was unequivocally submitted for arbitration and defendant could not now complain that the arbitrator exceeded his powers. The court said any other result would be intolerable, because it would let a party play fast and loose with the administration of justice (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1291) . The court distinguished Furlough v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 40, 249 Cal. Rptr. 703 , (discussed at § 20C.32[3][a]) on which defendant relied, because the parties in Furlough made no showing regarding what issues they had submitted to the arbitrator, and did not request, or receive, a statement of decision from the trial court (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1291-1292) .

[c] Arbitrator May Award Section 998 Costs In Excess of Uninsured Motorist Coverage Limit

Pilimai v. Farmers Ins. Exchange Co. (2006) 39 Cal. 4th 133, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 760 involved an uninsured motorist arbitration conducted pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2. The uninsured coverage limit in the policy was $250,000. The insured made a Section 998 offer to settle for $85,000, which offer the insurer refused. The arbitrator returned an award of $556,972, less $15,000 credit that the insurer was entitled to, or the amount of the uninsured motorist policy limits. The award was silent on the matter of costs and prejudgment interest. Both parties moved to confirm the award, but Farmers wanted it confirmed at the policy limits, less $15,000, ($235,000) while the insured sought to have his costs and interest, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and Civ. Code § 3291, included in the award. The trial court entered judgment in the amount of$235,000. Although the trial court believed both Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and Civ. Code § 3291 applied to uninsured motorist arbitration and that the insured was entitled to both, it believed Ins. Code § 11580.2(p)(4)'s limit prevented entry of any judgment in excess of the policy limits, less the $15,000 credit. The insured appealed. The court of appeal affirmed in part but reversed the judgment with respect to costs and prejudgment interest. The California Supreme court granted review.

The Supreme Court also affirmed in part and in reversed in part, remanding for the trial court to determine the proper cost award. The Supreme Court concluded that (1) Code Civ. Proc. § 998 applies to uninsured motorist arbitration; (2) the "maximum liability" provision of Ins. Code § 11580.2(p)(4) does not preclude recovery of costs under Section 998, even if those costs, when added to the arbitration award, exceed the coverage limits; (3) prejudgment interest was not available because the case was not an action for "personal injury" within the meaning of Civ. Code § 3291; but (4) the insured's deposition and exhibit preparation expenses were recoverable under Section 998 (39 Cal. 4th 133, 137) . The Court first considered whether uninsured motorist arbitration pursuant to Ins. Code 11580.2 was arbitration within the meaning of the California Arbitration Act (CAA; Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 et seq.) by considering the purpose and meaning of each statute. Code Civ. Proc 998 applies to arbitration as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 or 1295, and its purpose is to encourage settlement by providing a strong financial disincentive to a party who fails to achieve a better result than that party could have achieved by accepting his or her opponent's settlement offer 39 Cal. 4th 133, 139) .

Ins. Code § 11580.2 governs uninsured and underinsured motorist arbitration, and requires that every automobile liability insurance policy covering damages that a third party shall be legally entitled to recover for bodily injury from the insured owner or operator shall also cover damages that the insured owner or operator shall be legally entitled to recover for bodily injury from an uninsured owner or operator (39 Cal. 4th 133, 140) . Every policy also must provide that the determination of whether insured shall be legally entitled to recover damages, and if so entitled, the amount thereof, shall be made by agreement between the insured and the insurer or, in the event of disagreement, by arbitration, meaning contractual arbitration. In this aspect, the purpose of Ins. Code § 11580.2 is to offer a means of resolving disputes that is more expeditious and less expensive than litigation. This benefits both the insurer and the insured, who are each given a right against litigating, and the courts, which are freed from entertaining uninsured motorist litigation (

39 Cal. 4th 133, 140) .

The insurer claimed that Section 1281 refers only to voluntary arbitrations subject to written agreements not those mandated by statute, such as uninsured motorist arbitration pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.2 (39 Cal. 4th 133, 140-141) . The court did not agree, but said the issue had been decided in Mercury Ins. Group v. Superior Court (1998) 19 Cal. 4th 332, 337-342 . Mercury considered whether the CAA governed uninsured motorist arbitrations so as to allow consolidation of the arbitration with a civil case pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(c), and found that uninsured motorist arbitration is a form of contractual arbitration governed by the CAA. The automobile liability insurance policy is the contract that provides for arbitration. The Court concluded that an uninsured motorist arbitration, although mandated by statute, nonetheless is a contractual arbitration subject to the provisions of the CAA (39 Cal. 4th 133, 141-142).

Considering whether the limitation of Ins. Code § 11580.2(p)(4) prevented an award of costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 if they would exceed the coverage limitation, the Court noted that Section 998 explicitly states that it augments Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, the general costs statute. Section 1032 in turn states that it is applicable unless another statue expressly provides otherwise (39 Cal. 4th 133, 143) . Ins. Code 11580.2 contains no such express provision. In fact, it does not mention costs at all (39 Cal. 4th 133, 144-145) . The Court concluded that the maximum liability provision of Ins. Code § 11580.2(p)(4) does not preclude an award of costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998, even if the costs, in addition to the damage award, would exceed the insurance policy's maximum coverage (39 Cal. 4th 133, 145) . The particular costs and expenses claimed included prejudgment interest under Civ. Code § 3291, which the Court concluded were not recoverable, because an uninsured motorist arbitration is not a personal injury action, but a contractual action brought against one's insurer (39 Cal. 4th 133, 145-147) . The insurer argued that even the insured could recover costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998, those costs were limited to expert witness fees, which are specifically mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 998(d), and thus, the only exception to Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2, which provides that unless the arbitration agreement otherwise provides or the parties to the arbitration otherwise agree, each party must pay his or her pro rata share of the expenses and fees of the neutral arbitrator, together with witness fees or other expenses incurred by a party for his own benefit. The Court disagreed, saying the starting point was Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 because Section 998 specifies that costs allowable under Section 1032 are to be allowed or withheld as provided in Section 998 (39 Cal. 4th 133, 148) . The costs allowed by Section 1032 are enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 and include deposition costs [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3)] and costs of exhibits [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.4(a)(12)], the costs Pilimai was claiming (39 Cal. 4th 133, 148) . The Court distinguished Austin v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1812, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 56 , relied on by Farmers because Austin did not involve a Section 998 claim (39 Cal. 4th 133, 149) . The Court discussed the wording of Section 998(d), specifically the phrase "in addition to plaintiff's costs;" and concluded that those words were not superfluous, that Section 998(d) was intended to apply to arbitrations as well as trials, and that Subsections 998(a) and (d) had to be interpreted consistently to apply equally to plaintiffs and defendants (39 Cal. 4th 133, 149-151). Thus, the insured was entitled to recover deposition and exhibit preparation costs pursuant Section 998(d) (39 Cal. 4th 133, 151) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.64

§ 20C.64 Unilateral Rearbitration Clause in Health Services Contract Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE PROVISION IN THE HEALTH PLAN CONTRACT FOR REARBITRATION OF A DISPUTE AT THEOPTION OF THE HEALTH PLAN UNREASONABLY DEFEATED THE EXPECTATIONS OF SUBSCRIBERS AND IS INVALID AND UNENFORCEABLE AS AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY.

A. Unilateral Rearbitration Clause in Health Services Contract Is Unenforceable. A provision in a health plan master agreement requiring rearbitration at the option of the health plan personnel or medical services provider, which provision is part of a contract of adhesion and is not brought to the attention of the plan subscriber, is contrary to arbitration policy and the expectation of the subscriber, and is unenforceable (Saika v. Gold (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1079-1082, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 ; Beynon v. Garden Grove Medical Group (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 706, 708, 161 Cal. Rptr. 146). Because the rearbitration clause is unenforceable, the award should be confirmed (see Saika v. Gold (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1082, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 ; Beynon v. Garden Grove Medical Group (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 714, 161 Cal. Rptr. 146).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that a unilateral rearbitration provision renders arbitration illusory and unenforceable. Both cases used in the form arose in the context of health services agreements, but there is no reason to think that application of the general principle is limited to health care contracts.

It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out the language of the rearbitration provision as well as any failure of the party who claims the right to unilateral rearbitration to point that provision out to the party who opposes it. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.62[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Rearbitration Clause in Health Services Contract Is Unenforceable

Saika v. Gold (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 922 , resulted from a medical malpractice claim against a plastic surgeon. Plaintiff claimed she was badly burned when Dr. Gold treated her with a chemical face peel. Arbitration in accordance with their agreement resulted in a $325,000 award for plaintiff. Defendant sought trial de novo, as was his unilateral right under the contract in any instance in which the award exceeded $25,000. Plaintiff petitioned to confirm the award. The trial court refused to confirm the award, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding this unilateral trial de novo provision so one-sided as to make the very existence of an agreement questionable. The effect of the arbitration clause was to make arbitration for the patient illusory: a patient would never have an end to the controversy--hardly consistent with the salutary aims of arbitration (49 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1079-1082) . Enforcement of an arbitration clause is an action in equity for specific performance of a contract and can be denied on general equitable principles. The net effect of the trial de novo clause is to deny arbitration to one party. There is no reason in equity to enforce such a clause. Thus, the court directed the superior court to enter a new order confirming the award (49 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1082) .

In Beynon v. Garden Grove Medical Group (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 161 Cal. Rptr. 146 , plaintiff had enrolled in an employees' medical plan after reading a pamphlet referring to a master agreement and policy (which she never saw). After a dispute over some medical treatment she received under the plan, plaintiff filed amedical malpractice action. She then was advised that the plan called for arbitration, and she gave no opposition to a petition to compel arbitration. She joined defendants in submitting the controversy to a panel of attorneys, and she received the award. Defendants then gave notice they were invoking a further provision of the policy which allowed them, in questions of medical services quality, to reject the award and demand submission to a new panel composed of doctors. Plaintiff filed a petition to confirm the award, maintaining she never was made aware of the rearbitration provision, and contending that it was against public policy. The court denied the petition, and plaintiff appealed.

In reversing the denial of confirmation and ordering that the award be confirmed, the court of appeal observed that the master plan and agreement was a contract of adhesion and that the informational brochure never referred to the rearbitration provision but only to the fact that disputes would have to be arbitrated (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 705) . The rearbitration provision was found to limit the obligations of the health plan unreasonably and defeat the reasonable expectations of one enrolling in the plan. Whereas arbitration should import a dispute resolution procedure which is speedy, economical, and bears equally on the parties, this special provision was weighted in favor of the health plan and against its members, and it rendered arbitration protracted and expensive. Plaintiff, therefore, would not be bound by the special provision (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 706) . While no showing had been made that the health care plan had been negotiated with employees' representatives, the court concluded that even if it had, no such agency relationship would authorize the inclusion in the policy of the extraordinary rearbitration provision, granting a unilateral right to one party to reject an arbitration award without cause and to require a second arbitration before a special panel (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 707) . The court also determined that there had not been fair disclosure of the rearbitration provision, rendering the single reference in the pamphlet to arbitration misleading (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 709) .

The court also separately determined that the rearbitration provision was violative of public policy and therefore invalid. The court noted the recent legislative trend toward requiring health care service contracts to be fair and reasonable. In light of the almost universal public reliance on prepaid health plan service contracts and insurance, provisions which can render arbitration as a one-sided procedure weighted against the subscriber are manifestly harmful to the public interest (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 712) . It found that the master agreement provided a complete and valid arrangement for arbitration without the rearbitration clause; the invalid provision was severable and did not taint the rest of the agreement and, therefore, the original award could be confirmed (100 Cal. App. 3d 698, 713, 714) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.65

§ 20C.65 Agreement Authorizes Costs to Be Assessed Against Disaffirming Party

[1] FORM

ON CONFIRMATION OF THE AWARD, THE PARTY SEEKING CONFIRMATION SHOULD BE AWARDED ALL COSTS FOR BOTH ARBITRATION AND JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS BECAUSE THE AGREEMENTS PROVIDES THAT THE PARTY DISAFFIRMING THE AWARD MUST PAY COSTS OF BOTH ARBITRATION AND COURT PROCEEDINGS.

A. Agreement Authorizes Award Costs of Both Arbitration and Court Proceedings. When the arbitration agreement provides that a party disaffirming an arbitration award which is then confirmed by judicial order is subject to assessment for all costs in both proceedings, the court may assess such costs at the conclusion of the court action (Tipton v. Systron Donner Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 508, 160 Cal. Rptr. 303).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the court has the power, on determining to confirm an award, to award costs of both the arbitration proceeding and the court proceedings against the party who resisted confirmation. With appropriate modification, the form may be used when the wording of the arbitration agreement is somewhat different but leads to a similar result.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement providing for costs, and show how seeking to vacate the award or just not beginning payments under the award, fits the conduct described as authorizing the imposition of costs. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5])are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For a memorandum addressing arbitrators' authority to award costs and attorney's fees under the terms of the agreement, see § 20C.110.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorizes Award Costs of Both Arbitration and Court Proceeding

In Tipton v. Systron Donner Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 160 Cal. Rptr. 303 , the parties had entered into a shareholders' agreement which provided for arbitration of any dispute. Petitioner was dismissed from employment by one of the respondents, and the parties agreed that this issue would be submitted to arbitration under the shareholder agreement. The shareholders' agreement provided that while the costs of any arbitration would be borne equally by the parties, if one party refused to abide by the award, then, should the award be confirmed by the court, all costs, including those incurred in the court proceeding, would be assessed against and borne by the disaffirming party. The award was for respondents, and petitioner filed a petition to vacate the award alleging, among other things, that the arbitrator appointed by respondent was biased and partial. The lower court denied the petition to vacate and confirmed the award. Petitioner appealed.

No award of costs was made in the arbitration proceeding, and the petitioner seeking to vacate the award complained the court should not award both arbitration and court costs. The court of appeal observed that although the arbitration might have terminated when the award was made, under the agreement a party's right to "all costs" could arise only after the other party had refused to abide by the award and court action was required to pass on the propriety of awarding those costs. The parties thereby vested the court with jurisdiction to make the dual cost award (99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 508) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.66

§ 20C.66 Attorney's Dismissal of Action for Fees Repudiated Rejection of Award in Mandatory Fee Arbitration under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203

[1] FORM

THE MANDATORY FEE ARBITRATION AWARD UNDER BUS. & PROF. CODE § 6203 SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE DISMISSAL OF RESPONDENT'S CIVIL ACTION REPUDIATED [HIS or HER] REJECTION OF THE AWARD.

A. Other Party's Dismissal of Civil Action Repudiated Rejection of Award Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203. The [voluntary or involuntary] dismissal of the respondent's complaint constituted a repudiation of respondent's prior rejection of the arbitration award under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203. Once the respondent repudiates the rejection of the award, the petitioner is thus entitled to apply for and obtain an order confirming the arbitration award and a judgment entered on the confirmation of the award under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1285, 1287.4 (Perez v. Grajales (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 605, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 784).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is designed for use in a memorandum in support of a petition to confirm a mandatory attorney-fee arbitration award granted under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6200 et seq., or a response seeking to have such an award confirmed after the respondent's civil action repudiating the award has been voluntarily or involuntarily dismissed. It does not provide a complete memorandum, but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition in § 20C.10, or the response in § 20C.11, seeking to have the award confirmed.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should cite the issuance of the arbitration award and the decision of the trial court dismissing the civil action.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] . For example, a copy of the arbitration award and the court's dismissal of and judgment in the civil action, and any other statements or transcripts defining the scope of the matters submitted to the arbitrator should be attached as exhibits to the memorandum.

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms relating to complaints for attorney compensation, notices of client's right to mandatory arbitration of fee, petition to correct mandatory fee award, and rejection of fee award, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics (Matthew Bender), § 72.740 et seq.

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda and how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For discussion of resolving fee disputes, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees, § 25.06. For memoranda concerning mandatory arbitration, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees, § 25.73 et seq. For memoranda concerning actions for fees, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees, § 25.30 et seq.

For forms addressing general contract principles, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Party's Dismissal of Civil Action Repudiated Rejection of Award Under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203

Perez v. Grajales (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 784 , reversed the trial court's order denying client's motion to confirm a mandatory attorney-fee arbitration award under the Mandatory Fee Arbitration Act (MFAA), Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203, and to enter judgment. The client sought confirmation after the attorney's civil action rejecting the arbitration award was involuntarily dismissed for failure to prosecute the case to trial within five years under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360. The court ruled that the involuntary dismissal of the attorney's complaint constituted a repudiation of the attorney's prior rejection of the arbitration award under the MFAA (169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 601, 605). The court relied on authorities involving voluntary dismissals, and found the principle equally applicable to the facts of involuntary dismissal. Thus, the involuntary dismissal of the complaint effectively reinstated the initially rejected MFAA award (169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 602) . The attorney having repudiated the award, the client was thus entitled to apply for and obtain an order confirming the arbitration award and a judgment entered on such confirmation of the award under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6203 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1285, 1287.4 (169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 605) .

The court rejected the notion that the rejection nullified the award. The only way to stop an arbitration award from becoming a final judgment is to either settle the case, or go through a trial de novo. If a party fails to do either, then he or she has had his or her day in court (169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 603) . Similarly, the client's filing of a counterclaim in the eventually dismissed civil action did not constitute a waiver of arbitration rights under Bus. & Prof. Code § 6201, because at the time of the filing of the counterclaim, the attorney's rejection of the arbitration award had rendered the award nonexistence for purposes of the waiver provision (169 Cal. App. 4th 580, 603-604) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.67-20C.69

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.67[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.70

§ 20C.70 Award Has Not Been Shown to Result from Undue Means

[1] FORM

TO THE AWARD _____ [MAY BE CONFIRMED or SHOULD NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE _____ [PETITIONER or RESPONDENT] HAS FAILED TO DEMONSTRATE BY CLEAR AND CONVINCING EVIDENCE THAT TO THE UNDUE MEANS [EXISTED OR] HAD A SUBSTANTIAL IMPACT ON TO THE AWARD.

A. Impact or Nexus Must Be Shown. In order to vacate an arbitration award under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(1) on the basis that it was procured by [fraud, corruption, or other] under means, the party challenging the award must show by clear and convincing evidence that the [fraud or] undue means existed and that it had a substantial impact on the arbitrator's decision. The court must not presume that evidence procured by undue influence had an impact on the arbitrator. The party challenging the award must demonstrate a nexus between the award and the alleged undue means used to attain it (Pour Le Bebe, Inc. v. Guess? (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 833-837, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the award was procured by fraud, corruption or other undue means [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)]. The authority on which the form is based involved a challenge based only on undue influence, but it should be equally applicable to any ground of vacatur mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1). This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should disclose factors that militate against the arbitrator having relied on the undue influence, for example by showing that the factual basis for the award need not have touched on the matters to which the undue influence related. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factualstatements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a form opposing this form on the ground that an award was based on undue influence amounting to extrinsic fraud, see § 20C.151.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Impact or Nexus Must Be Shown

Pour Le Bebe, Inc. v. Guess? (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 442 arose out of license agreements that turned sour in 1999. During the litigation and arbitration, defendant licensor was represented by an attorney and a law firm that had represented plaintiff in a few legal matters and had also performed substantial immigration work for principals and employees of the plaintiff company and their family members. Plaintiff tried to disqualify defendant's counsel and presented the matter to the arbitration panel, which refused to disqualify the attorney [see Benasra v. Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644 ("Benasra" discussed in Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award, § 20E.32[3][a], separate suit against law firm for breach of loyalty)]. The arbitrators rendered an award for defendant licensor, which was confirmed over plaintiff's objection. The trial court held that the alleged conflict, even if true, would not fit within the "procured, by undue means" rubric of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1), and that that ground for vacatur would apply only if plaintiff did not know about the issue or raise it before the arbitrators. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 813) . First considering the conflict of interest, the court of appeal concluded that plaintiff had at least a colorable claim that the law firm engaged in conflicted representation or violated its duty of loyalty by undertaking the representation of defendant in the underlying arbitration (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 825) . Defendant contended that only extrinsic fraud was sufficient to vacate an award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1), while plaintiff argued that "other undue means" includes representation of the prevailing party by an attorney with a potential conflict of interest, or any conduct that might be described as unfair. The court of appeal disagreed with both views (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 826) . The court cited from the Law Revision Commission that considered the arbitration statutes in 1960 and from a case that "any conduct which amounts to fraud or which results in depriving either of the parties of a fair and impartial hearing to their substantial prejudice may be grounds for setting the award aside" (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 827) , saying that rule strongly resembles the description of extrinsic fraud necessary to vacate a final court judgment. However, courts do not equate the conduct necessary for setting aside a judgment with the conduct necessary for vacating an arbitration award (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 828) . A party in a trial is required to meet and expose perjury or other intrinsic fraud during the trial, but parties to an arbitration are not afforded the full panoply of procedural rights available to civil litigants, lacking for example the right to an appeal or to extensive discovery. Thus, courts generally take a more lenient approach when examining intrinsic fraud in the context of a motion to vacate an arbitration award (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 829) . The court discussed federal cases dealing with awards challenged on the basis of intrinsic fraud and noted that when the award had not been vacated, the party who challenged the award had suspected forgery during the arbitration hearing, but failed to subpoena the alleged forger or otherwise exercise due diligence to uncover it during the arbitration (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 829-830) . Rather than rely on the distinction between intrinsic and extrinsic fraud, federal courts use a three part test to determine whether an arbitration award should be vacated for fraud (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 830) :

- First, the movant must establish the fraud by clear and convincing evidence.

- Second, the fraud must not have been discoverable on the exercise of due diligence prior to or during the arbitration.

- Third, the person seeking to vacate the award must demonstrate that the fraud materially related to an issue in the arbitration.

Defendant argued that under this test, plaintiff could not prevail because it knew about the alleged undue means, had presented them to the arbitrators, and should not be given "a second bite of the apple." The court of appeal did not agree that plaintiff had had a first bite, citing Pacific Crown Distributors v. Brotherhood of Teamsters (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1148-1149, 228 Cal. Rptr. 645 , discussed in § 20C.151[3][a], for the proposition that vacatur is required when the prevailing party's tactics deprived the other party of a chance to make its challenge at the arbitration hearing (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 831-832) . The court quoted from its opinion in Benasra that the question of whether a conflict prevented the law firm from representing defendant in the arbitration was raised as an ancillary or collateral issue and appellants have neverhad an opportunity to prosecute a full-blown claim for breach of duty of loyalty; the arbitration panel only considered the single issue of whether the representation of defendant in the arbitration required use of confidential information. Thus, it could not say that plaintiff ever had an opportunity to discover and reveal the alleged undue means at the arbitration hearing. Nevertheless, the conclusion that plaintiff did not receive a full hearing on its conflict of interest/breach of duty of loyalty contention did not mean that the alleged breach was the type of "fraud, corruption, or other undue means" needed to vacate the award. The court could not presume that evidence procured by undue means had an impact on the arbitrators, but had to presume instead that the arbitrators took a permissible route to the award (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 833) . Thus, plaintiff needed to demonstrate a nexus between the award and the alleged undue means used to attain it (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 834) , but failed to highlight any aspect of the award that might have been impacted by any confidential information allegedly obtained by defendant's counsel in the course of its representation of plaintiff and its officers and employees (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 835) . The court distinguished cases relied on by plaintiff involving judgments vacated because conflicted counsel was engaged in dual representation. Here, plaintiff was represented by independent counsel in the arbitration (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 836) and a much more limited review applies to arbitration awards than to judgments (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 837) . Again, the court said plaintiff had not pointed to any particular impact the conflicted law firm's continued representation of defendant had on the award (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 836) . The court concluded that plaintiff had failed to make the showing necessary to vacate the arbitration award. It failed to show by clear and convincing evidence that a conflict existed and that it had a substantial impact on the panel's decision. Accordingly, the trial court did not err in refusing to vacate the award on the ground that it was procured by undue means (112 Cal. App. 4th 810, 837) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.71-20C.79

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.71[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.80

§ 20C.80 Arbitrator Was Not Improperly Biased

[1] FORM

THE AWARD _____ [MAY BE CONFIRMED or SHOULD NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THERE WAS NO SHOWING OF A REASONABLE IMPRESSION OF BIAS.

A. Impression of Arbitrator's Bias Must Be Reasonable One. The established test for determining whether an arbitration award must be vacated for misconduct or bias of a neutral arbitrator when a party asserts prejudice because of an arbitrator's conflict of interest is whether the record reveals facts that might create an impression of possible bias. The test is an objective one--whether such an impression is created in the eyes of the hypothetical reasonable person. Each case must be considered in light of its particular circumstances (Casden Park La Brea Retail LLC v. Ross Dress for Less, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 478, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 ; Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841-843, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 ; Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 ; Guseinov v. Burns (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 959-961, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 ; San Luis Obispo Bay Properties, Inc. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 556, 567-568, 104 Cal. Rptr. 733).

[Optional] B. No Close Business Relationship Shown Between Arbitrator and Party. There is no basis for an inference that the arbitrator was biased when the facts alleged do not show that any close business relationship existed between the arbitrator and a party or the party's attorneys (Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 733-734, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869 ; Park Plaza, Ltd. v. Pietz (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 1419, 239 Cal. Rptr. 51). The existence of bias depends on whether one can draw an inference of favoritism not because the arbitrator may receive money but because the arbitrator has a business-connected relationship that may lead him or her to place unusual trust or confidence in one side as opposed to the other (Mahnke v. Superior Court (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 565, 580-581, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197).

[Optional] C. Party Arbitrator Able to Be Partisan. When the agreement provides that each party may select an arbitrator, a party's arbitrator allowably may be partial in favor of that party (see Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 859-860, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; Tipton v. Systron Donner Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 506, 160 Cal. Rptr. 303).

[Optional] D. Personal Relationship Between Arbitrator and Party Does Not Establish Bias. The fact that a personal relationship, i.e., acquaintance, exists between a party and an arbitrator does not require vacation of an award for possible bias (Ray Wilson Co. v. Anaheim Memorial Hospital Assn. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1087-1088, 213 Cal. Rptr. 62 ; compare Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(3), (8)).

[Optional] E. Limitation on Arbitrator's Testimony in Determining Bias. Evidence Code Section 703.5 is applicable to limit the competency of an arbitrator to testify regarding anything that occurred at or in connection with the arbitration. Thus, a court may not consider that portion of an arbitrator's declaration describing the basis for the award. However, a court may consider testimony of the arbitrator that addresses the arbitrator's qualifications and bias, or the lack of bias (Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 528-529, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868).

[Optional] F. Arbitrator Did Not Know of Potential Conflict Until After Rendition of Award. If the arbitrator made a reasonable effort to inform _____ [himself or herself] of any matters that a would cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that he or she would be able to be impartial and still did not know of a potential conflict until after the arbitration award had been rendered, the arbitration award need not be vacated but may be confirmed [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d), 9(a); Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 528-529, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(b)-(e) (requirements for sufficiency of proposed arbitrator's inquiry with regard to particular relationships, including those of proposed arbitrator's extended family)].

[Optional] G. Existence of Bias Is Determined by Trier of Fact. Whether a particular business relationship between an arbitrator and a party or a party's representative requires disclosure is a factual question to be decided by the trier of fact in each case (Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 527, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868). A trial court considering a petition to confirm or vacate an arbitration award is required to determine, de novo, whether the circumstances disclose a reasonable impression of arbitrator bias, when that issue is properly raised by a party to the arbitration (Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1457, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468). An arbitration service's determination under its rules on request for the disqualification of an arbitrator is subject to de novo judicial review (Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1457, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468).

[Optional] H. Proposed Arbitrator Was Not Required to Disclose Prior Service as Uncompensated Mediator. A proposed neutral arbitrator has no duty to disclosehis or her prior service as an uncompensated mediator in a mediation in which an attorney for one of the parties to the arbitration served as attorney for one of the parties in the mediation. Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a) and Ethical Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, Standard 7(d)(5) do not require disclosure of uncompensated service as a dispute resolution neutral; nor does acting as an uncompensated mediator in a single mediation in which an attorney for one of the parties to the arbitration represented a party to the mediation constitute a professional relationship that would require disclosure pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a)(6) or Standard 7(d)(8). Similarly, this single contact between the arbitrator and attorney would not cause a reasonable person to entertain doubt whether the arbitrator was impartial, and thus would not require disclosure pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 170.1, 1281.9(a)(1) or Standard 7(d)(14)(A). Thus, it is not error for a trial court to refuse to vacate an arbitration award because the arbitrator failed to disclose prior service as an uncompensated mediator (Guseinov v. Burns (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 958-959, 961, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903).

[Optional] I. Parent Company Was Not Party So Disclosure of Business Relationship Was Not Required. The relevant definition of "party" is found in Code of Civil Procedure Section 170.1(a)(8)(B)(ii), which defines party to include "the parent, subsidiary, or other legal affiliate of any entity that is a party and is involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding." The parent company was not involved in the transactions that gave rise to the arbitration; therefore the arbitrator did not have to disclose his business contacts with the parent company. [Further, the parent company did not acquire the party until after the (interim) award had been issued and disclose will not be required on the basis of potential successor liability] (Hayden v. Robertson Stephens, Inc. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 366-368, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 333).

[Optional] J. Board Membership in Professional Organization Need Not Be Disclosed. An arbitrator is not required to disclose that _____ [specify party or lawyer with whom arbitrator has relationship, e.g., one of a party's counsel and a proposed expert witness] were _____ [describe board, e.g., attorneys with whom he sat on 36-number] board of a professional association. Membership in a professional organization does not provide a credible basis for inferring an impression of bias. Rather, to create an impression of possible bias that requires disclosure, a business relationship must be substantial and involve financial consideration. Ordinary and insubstantial business dealings arising from participation in the business or legal community do not necessarily require disclosure (Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 734-736, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869).

[Optional] K. $500 Contribution to Mayoral Campaign Need Not Be Disclosed. Only significant or substantial business relationships between a [proposed] neutral arbitrator and a party or its representative must be disclosed; ordinary and insubstantial business dealings do not require disclosure. A $500 contribution to a party arbitrator's mayoral campaign was ordinary and insubstantial and did not require disclosure. Similarly, a neutral arbitrator who had no financial interest in or knowledge of a party's, party arbitrator's, employer's, or fellow employees' contributions to the same campaign had no duty to disclose those transactions (Casden Park La Brea Retail LLC v. Ross Dress for Less, Inc. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 476-478, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763).

[Optional] L. Unrequired Disclosure Is Not Grounds for Vacating Award. An arbitrator's voluntary disclosure of a matter that is not required to be disclosed and would not raise a suspicion of bias in a reasonable person, does not give a party the right to disqualify the arbitrator or have the award vacated under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(6)(A) (Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 736, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869).

[Optional] M. Failure to Disclose All Details of Prior Arbitrations Is Not Necessarily Grounds for Vacation of Arbitration Award. Arbitrators should disclose all dates and other details of prior arbitrations with a party, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9. However, an arbitration award is not required to be vacated when an arbitrator generally disclosed the grounds for disqualification, i.e. his or her relationships and prior interactions with the parties to the arbitration and/or their attorneys, but did not provide dates and other specific details, particularly where the parties agreed to go forward with the arbitration despite being aware of the incomplete disclosure (Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-843, 846-847, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116).

[Optional] N. Arbitrator Has No Duty to Disclose Arbitrator's Law Firm's Past Representation of Third Party Who Had Adversarial Relationship With a Party. An arbitrator's law firm's past representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with a party to the arbitration need not be disclosed. Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9(a), a proposed neutral arbitrator shall disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial. A court must look at the entirety of the facts in a case to determine if an objective person would not reasonably doubt the arbitrator's ability to be impartial [Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that one of the arbitrators was biased. This form attempts to establish a lack of bias under the general requirement that a proposed neutral arbitrator disclose any matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9; Cal. Rules of Ct., Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators, Standard 7(d)]. Counsel should use whichever of the Optional Paragraphs in this form address his or her particular fact situation. The question of whether any possible impression of bias is a reasonable one does not arise, and this form should not be used, if the relationship that was not disclosed was one that was required to be disclosed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1, 1281.9 or Cal. Rules of Ct., Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators, Standard 7(d). Failure to disclose any of those relationships is grounds for vacating an award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.6(a)(A)]. For a summary of the relationships required to be disclosed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1, 1281.9 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators, Standard 7(d), see § 20C.170[3][a]. For more detailed discussion of the relationships required to be disclosed, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding .

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should disclose factors that militate against the arbitrator having any particular bias against the party who has challenged or maychallenge an arbitrator's impartiality despite the arbitrator's having a background that could lead a reasonable person to suspect bias. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a form opposing this form on the ground that a neutral arbitrator failed to disclose possible bias, see § 20C.170.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Impression of Arbitrator's Bias Must Be Reasonable One

Casden Park La Brea Retail LLC v. Ross Dress for Less, Inc*. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763* , involved an arbitration between a commercial landlord and its tenant before a panel of three real estate brokers, one selected by each party and a neutral arbitrator selected by the two-party arbitrators. After the arbitrators rendered an award in favor of the tenant, the landlord petitioned to vacate the award, contending the neutral arbitrator had failed to disclose prior business dealings between the neutral arbitrator's employer (an international real estate firm) and the tenant and its party arbitrator. The trial court agreed with the landlord and vacated the award, notwithstanding the fact that the neutral arbitrator had no financial or other interest in his employer's dealings. Tenant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 471) , finding the neutral arbitrator had no duty to disclose any of his employer's transactions in which he had no financial interest, and no duty to seek out information about business transactions or political contributions unknown to him at the time his disclosures were made (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 476) . The court of appeal set forth portions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a) focusing on subdivisions (1) regarding the existence of any ground specified in Section 170.1 for disqualification of a judge, (2) relating to any matters required to be disclosed by the ethics standards for neutral arbitrators adopted by the Judicial Council, and (6) governing professional or significant personal relationships the proposed neutral arbitrator ... has or has had with any party to the arbitration proceeding or lawyer for a party. Only significant or substantial business relationships between the neutral arbitrator and a party or his representative must be disclosed (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 476); ordinary and insubstantial business dealings do not necessarily require disclosure (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 477) . Because these real estate broker arbitrators were selected for their familiarity with the type of business dispute involved, they were not expected to be entirely without business contacts in the field, but they had to disclose any repeated or significant contacts which they may have with a party to the dispute, his attorney or his chosen arbitrator. Other than those disclosed, the neutral arbitrator had no significant or substantial business dealings with either party or the parties' representatives. By any reasonable definition, his $500 contribution to the tenant's party arbitrator's 2001 mayoral campaign was ordinary and insubstantial. The court of appeal disagreed with the trial court's finding that the disclosure of that contribution would have caused landlord to entertain a doubt about the neutral arbitrator's impartiality--particularly because the landlord and its party arbitrator each contributed $1,000 to that same campaign. Because the neutral arbitrator had no financial interest in or knowledge of tenant and tenant's party arbitrator's dealings with other of his employer's brokers or the contributions made to the tenant's party arbitrator's campaign by others at his employer or the employer itself, the neutral arbitrator had no duty to disclose those transactions (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 477) . Because it is undisputed that the neutral arbitrator was unaware of his coworkers' business dealings with tenant and tenant's party arbitrator, and equally unaware of their contributions to the tenant's party arbitrator's political campaign, it follows that he had no duty to disclose those transactions (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 477-478) . Another reason the neutral arbitrator did not have to disclose those transactions was because he had no financial interest in them and did not benefit from any of them, financially or otherwise. Also, they would not have caused a reasonable person to entertain a doubt about the neutral arbitrator's ability to be impartial. The court of appeal distinguished cases relied on by landlord, and agreed with tenant that a neutral arbitrator who has no pecuniary interest in profits generated by his employer's business relationship with a party or a party's representative has no substantial business relationship with the party or its representative and, therefore, no duty to disclose those transactions. For that reason and because public policy favors the finality of arbitration awards, the court concluded that the trial court erred in vacating the arbitrators' award and should, instead, have confirmed it (162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 478) .

Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , involved a neutral arbitrator who acknowledged a prior relationship with both the defendant health care provider and its counsel, and he disclosed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9, that he had served as an arbitrator in a number of prior arbitrations involving them. He did not provide specific dates and other details of those prior arbitrations (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 835-836, 840) . The trial court denied plaintiff's motion to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the disclosure clearly put plaintiff on notice that the arbitrator had a significant history of arbitrating in cases in which defendant was a party (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841) .

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying patient's petition to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the patient, by consenting to proceed with arbitration despite being aware of deficiencies in the arbitrator's disclosure, waived her right to disqualify the arbitrator, and could not later challenge the arbitration award on the ground of inadequate disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841-843, 846) . The information that the arbitrator disclosed was sufficient to put plaintiff on notice of any potential bias on the arbitrator's part (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 834) . The court clarified that there is no question that arbitrator should have disclosed all details of his prior arbitrations with defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9. However, Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2, cannot be read to nullify every arbitration award stemming from an arbitration in which the arbitrator failed to disclose all of the details of prior arbitrations, particularly where neither party challenged the arbitrator despite being aware of the incomplete disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-843, 847) . The court interpreted Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2 to refer to a failure to disclose the existence and nature of any relationship between the arbitrator and the parties or the parties' attorneys, not the specifics of each such relationship (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842) .

Plaintiff consented to proceed with the arbitration despite being aware of deficiencies in the arbitrator's disclosure. Plaintiff waived her right to disqualify the arbitrator and cannot later challenge the arbitration award based upon the arbitrator's failure to provide the dates, the outcomes, and the names of other attorneys involved in his prior arbitrations. By failing to raise that issue earlier, plaintiff waived the right to disqualify the arbitrator based on an inadequate disclosure that did not amount to a material omission or misrepresentation (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 846) .

In the case of Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 , a neutral arbitrator heard a matter involving a breach of construction agreement and issued an award against plaintiff who was a general contractor. The trial court confirmed the arbitration award against plaintiff. Subsequently, plaintiff filed a motion for an order correcting or vacating the arbitration award, alleging that the arbitrator had an undisclosed conflict of interest since arbitrator's law firm represented a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff in another matter. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion, finding that the arbitrator had no duty to disclose because the relationship between the arbitrator's law firm (not the arbitrator himself) and a third party adversary of plaintiff was not substantial. Plaintiff challenged the trial court's decision to confirm an arbitration award, contending the award should have been vacated because the arbitrator violated his disclosure obligation.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff argued that the arbitrator was required to disclose his law firm's past representation of a company that owed plaintiff over $3 million. The court's record showed the following: (1) another attorney in the arbitrator's law firm represented the debtor company at the beginning of a bankruptcy proceeding; (2) the debtor company's interests were adverse to plaintiff's interests; (3) those adverse interests resulted in litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff; (4) the arbitrator's law firm had withdrawn from representing the debtor company before the litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff began; and (5) the arbitrator was appointed in the present case a year and a half after his firm's withdrawal as attorney of record for the debtor company in its bankruptcy proceeding. The court of appeal held that the applicable rule of law was the general requirement of Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9(a) that a proposed neutral arbitrator must disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial. Based on the entirety of the facts, the court of appeal found that there was adequate support for the trial court's finding that an objective person would not reasonably doubt the arbitrator's ability to be impartial; thus, the arbitrator's law firm's prior representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff was not required to be disclosed (168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1140) .

Guseinov v. Burns (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 arose from a dispute between former business associates and was arbitrated pursuant to a settlement agreement and stipulation. The first time the attorneys met with the arbitrator, on or about August 12, 2004, the arbitrator asked plaintiff's counsel if they had previously met. Plaintiff's counsel replied that the arbitrator had earlier served as a volunteer superior court mediator in an unrelated matter in which plaintiff's counsel had represented a party. The arbitrator did not recall the prior mediation. The attorneys representing defendant at that time acknowledged the disclosure, agreed to the arbitrator, and did not make an immediate effort to secure disqualification of the arbitrator. On May 20, 2005, during the arbitration, defendant filed a motion to disqualify plaintiff's counsel because he had initiated unauthorized settlement negotiations with defendant when defendant's counsel was not present. The arbitrator denied the motion, deeming it a matter for the State Bar to consider. Just prior to closing argument on June 3, 2005, defendant sought to disqualify the arbitrator by serving a notice of disqualification. The arbitrator denied the request. The arbitrator's award was issued in September, 2005. The parties filed cross-petitions to vacate and confirm the arbitration award. The trial court granted plaintiff's petition to confirm the award and denied defendant's petition to vacate it, concluding that defendant failed to show grounds to vacate the award. Disclosure of the arbitrator's prior service as a pro-bono mediator was not a matter requiring disqualification under the Ethics Standards. Nor would the arbitrator's prior service as a mediator in an unrelated case cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial. Even if disclosure were required, the absence of a written disclosure did not require vacation of the award. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 947, 962) . First, the court construed the language of the settlement agreement not to be specific enough to waive the right of appeal from a judgment confirming the award (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 952-955) . Defendant asserted three grounds on which it claimed the award should have been vacated because of the failure to disclose matters required by Standard 7(d) to be disclosed: the arbitrator served as a dispute resolution neutral and expected to receive compensation from that service [Standard. 7(d)(5)]; the arbitrator had a professional relationship with plaintiff's counsel [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6); Standard 7(d)(8)]; and a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be impartial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1(a)(6)(A)(iii), 1281.9(a); Standard 7(d)(14) (A)] (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 958) . The portion of the opinion addressing the first two contentions is discussed at [h], below. With regard to the claim that disclosure was required because the prior mediation contact was a matter that would cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial, the court traced the standard back to Commonwealth Corp. v. Casualty Co. (1968) 393 U.S. 145, 148-149, 89 S. Ct. 337, 21 L. Ed.2d 301 , emphasizing that the test for partiality is an objective one (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 959-960) . Here, there were no facts that would cause a reasonable person to entertain a doubt whether the arbitrator was impartial: the mediator was an unpaid volunteer, the mediation took place a year before the arbitration; and there was no ongoing relationship between the mediator and plaintiff's counsel (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 960-961) . The fact that plaintiff's counsel testified at the arbitration in connection with the motion to disqualify him was not relevant. The arbitrator could have reasonably concluded that that testimony did not relate to the merits of the arbitrated dispute (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 961) .

In San Luis Obispo Bay Properties, Inc. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 556, 104 Cal. Rptr. 733 , one party subleased certain property to the other in return for loan guarantees, with the maximum amount of the loan guarantees periodically adjusted according to appraisals of the leasehold interests. Each party was to appoint an appraiser, and in the event of disagreement the latter two would select a third, who would reach conclusions in matters not agreed on by the first two. The sublessor refused to accept the appraisal of the third appraiser and petitioned to vacate the arbitration award. One ground raised by the sublessor was that the third arbitrator had undisclosed relationships with the sublessee. The court denied that petition and instead granted the sublessee's petition to confirm the award, and the sublessor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The alleged bias arose from the fact that the neutral arbitrator belonged to the same professional organization as the appraiser appointed by the sublessee, and that each had referred business to the other. Membership in the same professional organization does not per se create an impression of bias (28 Cal. App. 3d 556, 567) , and that mutual referrals suggest no bias as a matter of law, absent a showing of favoritism or unusual preference. The court stated that if the impression of possible bias rule is not to emasculate the policy of the law in favor of the finality of arbitration, the impression of bias must be a reasonable one. In the final analysis, each case must depend on its own facts. In the instant case, the evidence was insufficient to create a reasonable impression of possible bias regardless of whether the issue was viewed as one of law or fact, or a mixed question of law and fact (28 Cal. App. 3d 556, 568) .

The court also viewed as insufficient certain evidence alleging a business relationship between the neutral arbitrator and a corporation which employed a person who also worked for the sublessee. Both the sublessee and the other corporation were legal entities distinct from their mutual employee, absent any evidence that they served merely as his alter ego (28 Cal. App. 3d 556, 568-569) .

[b] No Close Business Relationship Shown Between Arbitrator and Party

Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869 , involved a dispute over attorneys' fees which was arbitrated under the auspices of Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Services (JAMS), in accordance with the retainer agreement. The neutral arbitrator, out of an abundance of caution and not because he believed he was required to do so, disclosed that one of the law firm's counsel and a proposed expert witness were attorneys with whom he had sat on the board of the Business Trial Lawyers Association, an association that had between 500 and 700 members and of which there were three dozen members of the board. The arbitrator stated that this would in no way affect his ability to be fair and impartial to all sides in the case, but he wanted them to hear of the association fromhim rather than hear it from somebody else and wonder why he hadn't told them. Defendants (clients) requested that the arbitrator disqualify himself because of the disclosure. The attorney for the firm offered to withdraw that witness from the firm's witness list, and argued disqualification was not required. The arbitrator stated that there was no social relationship; he had never been in the attorney's home, nor the attorney in his. They had participated in professional boards together. There was no close personal friendship or any kind of business relationships. The arbitrator said he had been actively involved in the legal community for over 30 years, and the attorney for over 40; and that any time you're talking with lawyers or judges who have been around that long, they know each other. The arbitrator had not read the expert witness's report, would not do so, and would strike her name from the witness list. The law firm's attorney made similar representations about their relationship, but defendants moved to disqualify the arbitrator, who denied the challenge. Defendants then asked that JAMS decide the disqualification issue rather than the arbitrator, but JAMS concurred in the arbitrator's decision. The arbitrator issued a final arbitration award, finding that defendants breached their contract with plaintiff and awarded the firm $301,508.09 in fees, the full amount it sought. Plaintiff petitioned to confirm the arbitration award, and defendants petitioned to vacate the award on the ground the arbitrator was disqualified from hearing the matter because of his disclosures pertaining to the firms' counsel and the person who had been expert on the firms' witness list as an expert witness. The trial court confirmed the award, determining that because the arbitrator was not required to disclose he served on professional boards with the plaintiff's attorney, there was no basis for his disqualification on the ground he nonetheless revealed that information. Judgment was entered against defendants, and they appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 725) . Defendants argued that the arbitrator was required to disclose his board memberships, and even if he had no duty to disclose them, his voluntary disclosures were sufficient to trigger a right of disqualification (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 731) . The court of appeal independently reviewed the question of whether there was a statutory ground for vacation of the arbitration award (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 731) . The court discussed and distinguished cases relied on by defendants, which were decided before the enactment of the disclosure statues, but which the court of appeal considered might still be instructive. Those cases involved acquaintanceship based on a substantial business relationship (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 731-733) . There was no authority for the proposition that an arbitrator's duty of disclosure arises when he or she has served on a board of directors of a professional organization with a party, a party's attorney or an expert witness. The court discussed several authorities holding that membership in a professional organization does not provide a credible basis for inferring an impression of bias. Rather, to create an impression of possible bias that requires disclosure, a business relationship must be substantial and involve financial consideration (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 733). Ordinary and insubstantial business dealings arising from participation in the business or legal community do not necessarily require disclosure (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 734) . The court of appeal disagreed with defendants' contention that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.9(a), 1281.91(b)(1), or 1286.2(a)(6)(B), required disqualification for any disclosure other than a disclosure that is required to be made. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91 does not indicate that when an arbitrator makes additional oral disclosures at the arbitration that he or she was not required to make, disqualification is a matter of right. The court of appeal said it would not interpret statutes in a manner that results in absurd and unintended consequences. It could not attribute to the Legislature an intent to upset arbitration awards based on disclosures not legally required, but made out of an abundance of caution, given this state's strong public policy in favor of finality of arbitration awards (162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 736) .

In Park Plaza, Ltd. v. Pietz (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 239 Cal. Rptr. 51 , an arbitration to resolve a dispute arising from a joint venture agreement was conducted by a retired superior court judge. The losing party subsequently petitioned to vacate the award on the ground that the arbitrator earlier had served as a court-appointed discovery referee in an unrelated case litigated by the same attorneys who represented the prevailing party in the arbitration. The trial court affirmed the award and petitioner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the arbitrator's failure to disclose his relationship with the prevailing party's attorneys did not constitute corruption under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(2)] (193 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 1418-1419) . Citing Commonwealth Corp. v. Casualty Co. (1969) 393 U.S. 145, 89 S. Ct. 337, 21 L. Ed. 2d 301 , for the proposition that an award should be vacated when there is a failure to disclose a close business connection between the arbitrator and one of the parties, the appellate court found that the facts failed to demonstrate the existence of any such business relationship. Because a referee is appointed by a court as a subordinate judicial officer and is in no sense an employee or an independent contractor of the parties involved or of their attorneys, there was no reasonable basis for an inference that the arbitrator's service as a referee impugned his neutrality as an arbitrator (193 Cal. App. 3d 1414, 1419) .

NOTE:

The holding in Park Plaza is applicable only to the extent that the neutral arbitrator completed his or her service as a referee (or other dispute resolution neutral) before January 1, 2002 or was appointed to serve as neutral arbitrator before July 1, 2002 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 3(a), 7(d)(5)(A); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(f) (defining dispute resolution neutral to include referee)]. Otherwise, the Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, adopted effective July 1, 2002, require a neutral arbitrator to disclose certain particulars about his or her compensated service as a dispute resolution neutral (other than an arbitrator) in another pending or prior noncollective bargaining case involving a party or lawyer in the current arbitration, or a lawyer who is currently associated in the private practice of law with a lawyer in the arbitration, if the arbitrator's service as dispute resolution neutral concluded within two years prior to the date of his or her appointment, excluding any case in which the arbitrator completed his or her service as dispute resolution neutral before January 1, 2002 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 3(a), 7(d)(5)]. Failure to make that disclosure is grounds for vacating an award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(2) (requiring disclosures in accordance with Ethics Standards)] .

The court of appeal in Mahnke v. Superior Court (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 565, 576-578, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 197 , noted that jointly selected, or court-appointed, proposed neutral arbitrator or, in the case of a contested appraisal proceeding, the competent and disinterested umpire. Accordingly, it applied the disclosure requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(e) to appraisers appointed under Ins. Code § 2071. In response to a demand for automatic disqualification on the grounds of a prior business relationship between such an appraiser and the opposing party, the court declined to recognize an automatic and unlimited right of disqualification for disclosures made by those appraisers (180 Cal. App. 4th 565, 578) . In this case, the appraiser's disclosure declaration disclosed, that he was currently engaged as a construction expert for another client of the law firm representing one party. In assessing the need for disqualification on this basis, the court presumed that the appraiser was being compensated by the other client and stated that although compensation for services is often relevant to the question of ability to serve impartially, it is not determinative in the instance of a party-selected appraiser because any party-selected appraiser will necessarily be paid by the retaining party. The existence of bias depends on whether one can draw an inference of favoritism not because the arbitrator may receive money but because the arbitrator has a business-connected relationship that may lead him or her to place unusual trust or confidence in one side as opposed to the other (180 Cal. App. 4th 565, 580-581) . Citing the experience qualifying the appraiser to act as a "competent" appraiser and his broad client base distinguishing him from those professionals who regularly perform services for particular clients or attorneys and become financially dependent on them, the court held that a reasonable person would not require that the appraiser be disqualified on account of the business relationship properly disclosed (180 Cal. App. 4th 565, 582) .

[c] Party Arbitrator Able to Be Partisan

Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 , involved a dispute among three joint venturers--two individuals and a savings and loan association. The arbitration agreement provided for arbitration of any controversy between the parties concerning the joint venture agreement, the specific construction project it was formed to undertake, or the rights and duties of any party under the agreement. The savings and loan association brought an action against the individual venturers for nonpayment of a note. One of the individual venturers filed a second lawsuit, based on disputes concerning the venture. Arbitration was first compelled in the second suit, and later in the association's suit when it became clear that the note related to the venture. The association unsuccessfully opposed both petitions to compel arbitration. The arbitration panel found that the association had breached the venture agreement and its fiduciary duty. Each individual venturer was awarded $2,000,000 in compensatory damages and $150,000 in punitive damages, less a $250,000 offset for payments owing on the promissory note. The association unsuccessfully opposed the petitions to confirm the awards, and appealed the judgment confirming the awards.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant claimed that an impression of bias required vacation of the award. The court said that much of the defendant's efforts to support that claim faltered because it attempted to discredit the arbitrators chosen by plaintiff, and bias in a party arbitrator is expected and furnishes no ground for vacating an arbitration award unless it amounts to corruption. That arbitrator had once represented defendant's president and chairman of the board as an attorney; they had become embroiled in a fee dispute, and the president had made a complaint to the State Bar and filed a malpractice suit against the attorney. Because the State Bar complaint was dismissed, and the attorney did not learn of the malpractice action until after the arbitration, it did not constitute sufficient bias or corruption to require vacating the award (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 858) . The court of appeal concluded that another prong of the attack amounted to nothing more than miscommunication between party arbitrators regarding the availability of a specific person as the neutral arbitrator (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 859) . The third prong of the attack charged that same party arbitrator with intimidating and usurping the powers of the neutral arbitrator by questioning witnesses and interrupting and disagreeing with counsel for other parties. The court of appeal said that the conduct showed only that the party arbitrator was an active arbitrator (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 859-860) .

The facts and procedural background of Tipton v. Systron Donner Corp. (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 160 Cal. Rptr. 303 , are discussed at § 20C.65[3][a]. As an additional basis for challenging the award petitioner claimed that the arbitrator appointed by respondent was biased and partial. In affirming, the court of appeal noted that there is no statutory requirement that the arbitrators appointed by the parties be neutral or impartial, nor did the agreement in the case provide for such requirement (99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 505) . The court noted a Law Revision Commission comment that the arbitrators representing the parties frequently behave more like advocates than arbitrators and quoted with approval a New York case stating that in the typical situation in which two nonneutral arbitrators sit on a tripartite board, the parties must be deemed to have intended that each party was to be free to appoint any arbitrator desired. The agreement easily can specify otherwise; but if the parties so choose, they are free to have their disputes resolved by a body consisting of two partisan arbitrators and a third neutral arbitrator. A special relationship between the nonneutral arbitrator and that arbitrator's client is implicit in the nature of the tripartite format freely adopted by the parties in the case. Furthermore, there was no evidence that there was any misconduct or impropriety on the part of respondents' arbitrator (99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 506) . Petitioner also charged that the arbitrator had failed to disclose his fiduciary relationship with respondents. The court stated that absent a showing of corrupt intent and prejudice to petitioner, the failure of the arbitrator to disclose his relationship to defendant would not vitiate his right to act as a party arbitrator under the terms of the agreement, and statutory and case law (99 Cal. App. 3d 501, 506-507) .

Counsel should distinguish the situation in the Tipton case, discussed above, from that in Graham v. Scissor-Tail, Inc. (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 807, 171 Cal. Rptr. 604, 623 P.2d 165 , discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.90[3][a]. The Graham decision is concerned with the makeup of the entire tribunal and the ability of each party to have a fair hearing within it; if the tribunal is so identified with one of the parties that the other cannot receive a fair hearing within it, the arbitration provision is illusory (28 Cal. 3d 807, 825-826) . Tipton, however, contemplates the normal type of tribunal under the arbitration statutes in which each party selects an arbitrator, and the two "partisan" arbitrators select a third "neutral" arbitrator.

[d] Personal Relationship Between Arbitrator and Party Does Not Establish Bias

Since January 1, 1998, a proposed neutral arbitrator has been required to disclose any professional or significant personal relationship the proposed neutral arbitrator or his or her spouse or minor child living in the household has or has had with any party to the arbitration proceeding or lawyer for a party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(3), (8) (requiring disclosure of same relationships); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(n), (o) (father is not member of immediate family but of extended family); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(s) (significant personal relationship includes close personal friendship)]. Also, the Ethics Standards applicable to neutral arbitrators appointed on or after July 1, 2002, require the proposed neutral arbitrator to make a reasonable effort to inform himself or herself of any matters that a would cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that he or she would be able to be impartial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d), 9(a)]. An arbitration award may be vacated if an arbitrator making the award failed to disclose within the time required for disclosure a ground for disqualification of which the arbitrator was then aware [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A)]. Note that the relationship involved in Ray Wilson Co. v. Anaheim Memorial Hospital Assn. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 213 Cal. Rptr. 62 , was not one of those required to be disclosed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6).

In Ray Wilson Co. v. Anaheim Memorial Hospital Assn. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 213 Cal. Rptr. 62 , a contractor had demanded arbitration on behalf of a subcontractor against a hospital with regard to a dispute over the construction and remodeling of the hospital. In the course of appointment of the arbitrators, on being questioned by defendant hospital's attorney, the third member of the three-member panel of arbitrators indicated that he had a long-standing acquaintance with the father of the president of the contracting company and that they had been members of the same professional association. The attorney for the hospital objected to the appointment of that arbitrator on the ground of bias, but the two other arbitrators overruled the objection. The arbitration proceeded to conclusion over a period of several months, and a substantial award was made against the hospital. The hospital opposed plaintiff's petition to confirm the award. The trial court vacated the award based on several grounds, one of which was that one arbitrator was not impartial and neutral. The contractor appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, stating that a personal relationship of acquaintance between an arbitrator and a party to the arbitration does not require vacation of an award for possible bias (166 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1088) . Because arbitrators are selected for their familiarity with the type of business dispute involved, they are not expected to be entirely without business contacts in the particular field. The fact that an arbitrator and a party to the arbitration are members of the same professional organization is not a credible basis for inferring even an impression of bias (166 Cal. App. 3d 1081, 1087-1088) .

[e] Limitation on Arbitrator's Testimony in Determining Bias

Evid. Code § 703.5 provides that no person presiding at any judicial or quasi-judicial proceeding, and no arbitrator, shall be competent to testify, in any subsequent civil proceeding, about any statement, conduct, decision or ruling, occurring at or in conjunction with the prior proceeding, except in regard to a statement or conduct that could (a) give rise to civil or criminal contempt, (b) constitute a crime, (c) be the subject of an investigation by the State Bar or Commission on Judicial Performance, or (d) give rise to disqualification proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(1) or (6).

The facts and procedural background of Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the fact that the language of the parties' agreement was not broad enough to encompass tort claims, are discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.40[3][a]. The court of appeal reversed in part a judgment confirming the award, requiring the trial court to vacate the award of damages for emotional distress and to confirm the award for the balance, which was based on a contract claim. Two of defendant's other contentions on appeal related to alleged bias on the part of the arbitrator. Defendant claimed that under case law and the rules of the American Arbitration Association, the arbitrator was required to disqualify himself because one of the arbitrator's law partners represented a major competitor of defendant in an unfair trade practices suit initiated by defendant. Further, defendant claimed that the trial court erred in considering the arbitrator's declaration. The court of appeal noted that the applicable standard requires vacation of an award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 if the arbitrator fails to disclose to the parties any dealings that might create an impression of possible bias. Whether a particular business relationship between an arbitrator and a party or a party's representative requires disclosure is a factual question to be decided by the trier of fact in each case (217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 527) [but now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6), set forth at [d], above]. Thus, the trial judge decides the issue of bias. The court set forth Evid. Code § 703.5 and said that arbitrators are not required to explain their awards or provide reasons for their conclusions (217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 528) . Although Code Civ. Proc. § 170, referred to in Evid. Code § 703.5(d), applies expressly to judges, compelling reasons of public policy favoring neutrality of arbitrators indicate the same criteria should apply to nonjudicial dispute resolution, including arbitration (217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 528-529) . Thus, while the trial court should not have considered the portions of the arbitrator's declaration explaining the reasons for the decision or the merits of the controversy, the trial court had the power to consider those statements in the declaration that addressedthe arbitrator's qualifications and bias, or the lack of bias. The declaration stated that the arbitrator was unaware of any potential conflict of interest on his part until after the decision was made (217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 529) .

The trial court also considered the declaration of one of defendant's principals and sole shareholder of its parent company, to the effect that he did not know at the time of the arbitration that the arbitrator was a partner of the attorney who represented its competitor in an unfair trade practices suit, although the principal had been deposed by the partner for five days in the other action and although the name of the arbitrator's law firm was noted on the biography supplied by the American Arbitration Association. The court of appeal concluded that the record supported the trial court's finding that there was no actual bias and that defendant had waived any claim for apparent bias and was estopped from late assertion of such a claim (217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 529) .

[f] Arbitrator Did Not Know of Potential Conflict Until After Rendition of Award

Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d), 9(a), part of the Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, applicable to neutral arbitrators appointed to serve on or after July 1, 2002, require the proposed arbitrator to make a reasonable effort to inform himself or herself of any matters that a would cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that he or she would be able to be impartial. With respect to consumer arbitrations in which the arbitrator was appointed on or after January 1, 2003, and in which a dispute resolution provider organization is coordinating, administering, or providing the arbitration services, the proposed arbitrator must disclose any significant past, present, or currently expected financial or professional relationship or affiliation between that dispute resolution provider organization and a party or lawyer in the arbitration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 8].

NOTE:

The California Ethics Standards will not apply in any arbitration in which the parties have agreed to arbitrate in accordance with New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) Arbitration Rules or the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) Code of Arbitration Procedure. Both preempt the California Ethics Standards to the extent that the Securities and Exchange Commission has approved those rules and procedures in accordance with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119, 1124 (NASD rules) ; Mayo v. Dean Witter Reynolds (N.D. Cal. 2003) 258 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1112 , as corrected at 260 F. Supp. 2d 979 ; accord Wilmot v. McNabb (N.D. Cal. 2003) 269 F. Supp. 2d 1203 ; Jevne v. Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings, Inc.) (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 935, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 111 P.3d 954] . NYSE Rules and NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure have their own disclosure requirements [see NYSE Arbitration Rule 610; NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure, Rule 10312].

As of January 1, 2003, no private arbitration company may administer a consumer arbitration [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(d), (e) (definitions)], or provide any other services related to a consumer arbitration, if:

- The company has, or within the preceding year has had, a financial interest, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.5, in any party or attorney for a party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92(a)]; or

- If any party or attorney for a party has, or within the preceding year has had, any type of financial interest in the private arbitration company [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92(b)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92 became operative January 1, 2003, and operates only prospectively so as not to prohibit the administration of consumer arbitrations on the basis of financial interests held prior to January 1, 2003 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92(c), (e)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92 applies to all consumer arbitration agreements subject to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2, and to all consumer arbitration proceedings conducted in California [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92(d)].

Except as to the information relating to any financial relationship or affiliation the arbitrator has with the provider organization other than receiving referrals of cases, an arbitrator may rely on information supplied by the provider organization in making the disclosures required by Standard 8. If the information that must be disclosed is available on the Internet, the arbitrator may comply with the obligation to disclose this information by providing the Internet address at which the information is located and notifying the party that the arbitrator will supply hard copies of this information on request [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 8(a)(1)].

An arbitrator can fulfill his or her obligation under Standard 9 to inform himself or herself of the information that is required to be disclosed under Standard 8 by [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(e)]:

- Asking the dispute resolution provider organization for this information; and

- Declaring in writing that he or she has made that inquiry and attaching to the declaration copies of his or her inquiry and any response from the provider organization.

Similar provisions apply with respect to the proposed arbitrator's duty of inquiry regarding relationships or other matters involving his or her extended family and former spouse [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(b)], relationships with associates of a lawyer hired to represent any party in the arbitration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(c)], and service as a dispute resolution neutral, other than an arbitrator, administered by a dispute resolution provider organization and commenced prior to July 1, 2002 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(d)].

With respect to a proposed arbitrator's duty to inform himself or herself of relationships or other matters involving his or her extended family and former spouse that are required to be disclosed under Standard 7, the arbitrator can fulfill that duty by [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(b); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(h), (o) ("member of the arbitrator's extended family" means the arbitrator's parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, siblings, uncles, aunts, nephews, and nieces or the arbitrator's spouse or domestic partner [as defined in Fam. Code § 297] or the spouse of such person)]:

- Seeking information about those relationships and matters from the members of his or her immediate family and any members of his or her extended family living in his or her household; and

- Declaring in writing that he or she has made that inquiry.

Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868 , is discussed at [e], above.

[g] Existence of Bias Is Determined by Trier of Fact

Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, ___ Cal. Rptr. 3d ___ , affirmed the confirmation of an arbitration decision on a breach of contract claim. The portion of the decision on whether the agreement gave the arbitrator the power to decide arbitrability of issues is discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10[3][g], above. The portion of the decision dealing with review of the arbitrator's determination of arbitrability of the issue of joint and several liability is covered in § 20C.91[3][c], below. The portion of the decision addressing the review of the timeliness of the arbitrator's award is covered in § 20C.90[3][a], below. Next, the court treated the claim that the award should be vacated because the arbitrator failed to recuse himself on grounds that he was aware of the facts that might reasonably have justified entertaining a doubt that the he would be able to be impartial, as required by § 170.1, subd. (a)(6)(A)(iii). The allegedly disqualifying facts centered on a lawsuit filed against the arbitrator by an officer of an entity party to the arbitration in this case seeking costs and fees in another arbitration. The applicable Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Service (JAMS) rules required that JAMS determine disqualification, which it did by denying the challengers request (185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1456). A trial court considering a petition to confirm or vacate an arbitration award is required to determine, de novo, whether the circumstances disclose a reasonable impression of arbitrator bias, when that issue is properly raised by a party to the arbitration. Given that, and public policy favoring neutral arbitrators, an arbitration service's determination on disqualification is subject to de novo judicial review (185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1457). The portion of the decision on whether the arbitrator was immune to the suit on which the request for disqualification was based is discussed in Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity, § 20B.50[3][a], above. Based on the arbitrator's immunity to the suit, the arbitrator was not required to recuse himself and the trial court order vacating the award was error.

Cobler v. Stanley, Barber, Southard, Brown & Associates (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 518, 265 Cal. Rptr. 868 , is discussed at [e], above.

[h] Proposed Arbitrator Was Not Required to Disclose Prior Service as Uncompensated Mediator

The facts and procedural background of Guseinov v. Burns (2006) 145 Cal.App. 4th 944, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 and the portion of the opinion addressing the contention hat the facts might cause a person to reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be impartial are discussed at [a], above. Regarding the arbitrator's prior service as a pro-bono mediator, the court of appeal quickly disposed of that issue by noting that the undisputed evidence was that the arbitrator did not secure and did not expect to receive any form of compensation for serving as a mediator volunteer in the prior matter. Thus, the Standard 7(d)(5) disqualification ground was inapplicable. Regarding the claim that the single mediation amounted to a professional relationship that had to be disclosed, the court of appeal found that under these circumstances, acting as an uncompensated mediator in a single matter did not constitute a professional relationship between the arbitrator and plaintiff's counsel. Arbitration awards need not be vacated in every case in which there has been some contact between the arbitrator and counsel, particularly when the contact is slight or attenuated (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 958) . Substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that no professional relationship existed between plaintiff's counsel and the arbitrator because of the single prior uncompensated mediation within the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(6) and Standard 7(d)(8) (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 959) . The court of appeal found it noteworthy that when the prior mediation was disclosed to defendant's then counsel, albeit orally rather than in writing, that counsel did not object to the arbitrator serving as such. Because the court of appeal concluded there was no ground for disqualification that the arbitrator was required to disclose, it did not address defendant's additional contentions that the oral disclosure did not comply with the statutory requirements (145 Cal. App. 4th 944, 961) .

[i] Parent Company Was Not Party So Disclosure of Business Relationship Was Not Required

Plaintiff in Hayden v. Robertson Stephens, Inc. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 333 , borrowed money from defendant brokerage firm, secured by stock, and defaulted on the loan when the stock lost value. Plaintiff sued the brokerage firm for alleged breach of fiduciary duty in giving financial advice; the brokerage firm cross-complained to collect on the loan. Defendant's parent company, FleetBoston Financial Corporation (FleetBoston), was also a party to the arbitration agreement. After arbitration held over the course of five days, the arbitrator issued an interim award on October 23, 2003, finding in favor defendant on both the complaint and cross-complaint, and inviting defendant, as the prevailing party, to file an application for attorney fees and costs. Before the final award was issued, Bank of America Corporation announced that it was buying FleetBoston. Plaintiff maintained that Bank of America Corporation and its subsidy, Bank of America, N.A., were then parties to the arbitration and demanded that the arbitrator disclose all present and prospective relationships with them. Plaintiff later sought to disqualify the arbitrator because he worked for Judicial Arbitration & Mediation Services (JAMS), which provided arbitration services to Bank of America Corporation or its related entities (hereinafter "Bank of America"). JAMS reviewed the request for disqualification, and denied it in April 2004, finding that Bank of America was not a party to the arbitration, making disclosures unnecessary. The final award was issued in June, 2004. Defendant moved to confirm the arbitration award, and plaintiff moved to vacate it. The trial court confirmed the arbitration award. Plaintiff then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate, which was summarily denied. The collateral for the loan was foreclosed. Plaintiff moved for a new trial, which was denied. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 363, 369) , finding that Bank of America was not a party to the proceeding for arbitral disclosure purposes and therefore, the arbitrator was not required to disclose past, present, or prospective employment relationships with the bank (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 365) . The relevant definition of "party" is found in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(8)(B)(ii), which defines party to include "the parent, subsidiary, or other legal affiliate of any entity that is a party and is involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding" (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 366-367) . Plaintiff argued that "and is involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding" refers to the original named party, and the legal affiliate's connection to the arbitration proceeding is irrelevant: all affiliates of a named party are parties, even those with no connection to the issues in arbitration. The court of appeal disagreed, saying that plainly, it is the legal affiliate (not the entity that was the original named party) that must be involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding. An interpretation of the statute in which only the named party must be involved in the underlying matter being arbitrated, would make most of the statutory definition surplusage (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 367). A party is necessarily involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 367-368) . The entire qualifying clause requiring involvement in the underlying matter would be meaningless if the clause modified "any entity that is a party." A construction rendering some words surplusage is to be avoided. For the qualifying clause to have any meaning, it must be read to modify "parent, subsidiary, or other legal affiliate." It is this legal affiliate that must be "involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding" (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 367) . Plaintiff also argued that Bank of America Corp. was involved in the underlying matter because it was liable forFleetBoston's conduct as a successor corporation. The court disagreed, noting that the statute does not deem a corporation a party to the proceeding based on potential successor liability: a parent corporation must be "involved in the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding" to be a party. Further, plaintiff claimed Bank of America was involved because it held deeds of trust on property securing $9.5 million in bank loans to plaintiff. Defendant Robertson Stephens held junior deeds of trust on those same properties and, when the bank began foreclosure proceedings, Robertson Stephens bought the bank loans to safeguard its junior liens on the properties. In the arbitration agreement, plaintiff waived any claims against Robertson Stephens or FleetBoston arising out of the acquisition of the bank loans and liens, and Robertson Stephens made no claim in the arbitration proceeding for balances due on the bank loans assigned to it (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 368) . Thus, while plaintiff had disputes with Bank of America, N.A., those disputes were unrelated to "the transaction, contract, or facts that gave rise to the issues subject to the proceeding," which were restricted to Robertson Stephens's broker relationship and margin loans. Bank of America, N.A., was not a party to the arbitration proceeding. The arbitrator had no obligation to disclose prospective employment with either Bank of America Corp. or Bank of America, N.A., as they were not parties to the proceeding. Finally, plaintiff argued that there existed substantial doubt about the JAMS arbitrator's impartiality because Bank of America, N.A., is a frequent client of JAMS in consumer litigation. The court of appeal found that Bank of America, N.A.'s retention of JAMS for arbitration services provided no evidence of bias. The bank was not a party to the arbitration or otherwise involved in the arbitrated dispute, nor was there any evidence that arbitrator bias played any role in the award. The interim award had resolved all liability issues adverse to plaintiff before Bank of America Corp. acquired a party to the arbitration. No one could reasonably entertain a concern that the arbitrator's decision was motivated by partiality for Bank of America Corp. or its subsidiary (150 Cal. App. 4th 360, 368) .

[j] Board Membership in Professional Organization Need Not Be Disclosed

Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869 , is discussed at [b], above.

[k] $500 Contribution to Mayoral Campaign Need Not Be Disclosed

Casden Park La Brea Retail LLC v. Ross Dress for Less, Inc*. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 468, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763* , is discussed at [a], above.

[l] Unrequired Disclosure Is Not Grounds for Vacating Award

Luce, Forward, Hamilton & Scripps, LLP v. Koch (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 720, 75 Cal. Rptr. 3d 869 , is discussed at [b], above.

[m] Failure to Disclose All Details of Prior Arbitrations Is Not Necessarily Grounds for Vacation of Arbitration Award

Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , is discussed at [a], above.

[n] Arbitrator Has No Duty to Disclose Arbitrator's Law Firm's Past Representation of Third Party Who Had Adversarial Relationship With a Party.

Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 , is discussed at [a], above.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Impression of Arbitrator's Bias Must Be Reasonable One

Lagstein v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (9th Cir., 2010) 607 F.3d 634 , overturned the trial court's ruling vacating the arbitration award subject to the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) on grounds that it was excessive. The portion of the decision discussing manifest disregard of the law is set forth in § 20C.90[4][a], below. The portion of the decision discussing whether the award was irrational is located at § 20C.90[4][b], below . The FAA, 9 U.S.C.S. § 10(a)(2), requires vacatur where there was evident partiality or corruption in the arbitrator (607 F.3d 634, 654) . To show evident partiality in an arbitrator, the complainant either must establish specific facts indicating actual bias toward or against a party or show that the arbitrator failed to disclose to the parties information that creates a reasonable impression of bias (607 F.3d 634, 646) . The portion of the decision addressing the arbitrators' unrequired disclosure of past misconduct is discussed at [c], below.

Woods v. Saturn Distribution Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 78 F.3d 424 , discussed at § 20C.132[4][a], states that in cases governed by the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2) (award to be vacated for evident partiality of arbitrators) requires, in nondisclosure cases, that there be a reasonable impression of bias in order to vacate an award (78 F.3d 424, 427) .

The court of appeal in Betz v. Pankow (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 919, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 834 , affirmed the judgment confirming the award, holding that gender bias of two male arbitrators was not established. The court of appeal said that an arbitrator should not be disqualified unless a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial.

[b] Party Arbitrator Able to Be Partisan

In Good v. Kaiser Foundation Hospital (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 819, 199 Cal. Rptr. 581 , petitioners sought to vacate an arbitration award under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(c) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3)], due to evidence indicating bias on the part of respondents' appointed arbitrator. The court of appeal rejected this contention, holding that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(c) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3)] applied only to the misconduct of a neutral arbitrator, not that of an arbitrator selected by a party (152 Cal. App. 3d 819, 822) . Party-appointed arbitrators are not expected to be neutral, and the special relationship existing between the nonneutral arbitrator and his or her client is implicit in the nature of the tripartite format adopted freely by the parties. Thus, the court also held that a party-appointed arbitrator's expression of disagreement with testimony presented by the other party was not in itself prejudicial (152 Cal. App. 3d 819, 823) .

[c] Unrequired Disclosure Is Not Grounds for Vacating Award

Lagstein v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (9th Cir., June 10, 2010) 607 F.3d 634 , overturned the district court's ruling vacating the arbitration award subject to the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) on grounds that it was excessive. The portion of the decision discussing manifest disregard of the law is set forth in § 20C.90[4][a], below. The portion of the decision discussing whether the award was irrational is located at § 20C.90[4][b], below . The FAA, 9 U.S.C.S. § 10(a)(2), requires vacatur where there was evident partiality or corruption in the arbitrator (2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 11836 at 24) . To show evident partiality in an arbitrator, the complainant either must establish specific facts indicating actual bias toward or against a party or show that the arbitrator failed to disclose to the parties information that creates a reasonable impression of bias. In this case, the complainant failed to do so (2010 U.S. App. LEXIS 11836 at 25) . The portion of the decision discussing partiality or corruption of arbitrator is set forth at [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.81

§ 20C.81 Party's Recognition of Arbitrator from Earlier Mediation, Waiver, and Participation in Arbitration Foreclosed Need to Vacate Award Based on Arbitrator's Failure to Make Additional Disclosure

[1] FORM

GIVEN THE UNIQUE CIRCUMSTANCES OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT]'S KNOWLEDGE OF THE PRIOR PROCEEDING INVOLVING _____ [HIM or HER]SELF AND THE ARBITRATOR, AND HIS/HER WAIVER OF ANY POTENTIAL CONFLICT RESULTING FROM THAT PROCEEDING, IT IS NOT NECESSARY TO VACATE THE AWARD.

A. Party's Knowledge and Arbitrator's Disclosure Foreclose Need to Vacate Award. It would be absurd to construe Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(6) without regard to evidence and require vacating an award when credible evidence shows that the party claiming the failure of disclosure _____ [specify evidence, e.g., knew of the prior proceeding, and in fact was a party to it, consented to the arbitrator's service after all parties were advised of the prior proceeding, participated in the arbitration, and waited until after an adverse award to make any objection] (Fininen v. Barlow (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 185, 190-191, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose a motion to vacate an arbitration award for failureof the arbitrator to disclose a prior mediation or arbitration involving a party to the present arbitration when that party knew of the prior proceeding, waived any potential conflict arising from that proceeding, participated in the arbitration and waited until after an adverse award to make any objection.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument must show credible evidence to support the other party's knowledge of the prior proceeding, waiver or conflict, and participation in the arbitration. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party's Knowledge and Arbitrator's Disclosure Foreclose Need to Vacate Award

Plaintiffs in Fininen v. Barlow (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 185, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687 , hired defendant to do design and remodeling work. A variety of problems in their construction projects led plaintiffs to file a complaint against defendant for breach of contract, negligence, fraud and misrepresentation, and violation of contractors' licensing laws. The parties finally agreed to arbitrate the matter and entered into a stipulation for binding arbitration naming McCollum as arbitrator. McCollum sent the parties and their counsel an arbitration agreement which disclosed that he had previously mediated several cases for plaintiffs' counsel and also mediated and/or arbitrated several cases for defendant's counsel and that McCollum would provide additional information about these matters on request. The agreement also stated that all parties and their counsel had undertaken all investigation and due diligence they deemed necessary regarding the use of McCollum as arbitrator and agreed to waive any other disclosure requirements.

When all parties, counsel and McCollum appeared for the arbitration, Barlow and McCollum recognized each other. Barlow had in fact settled a matter which McCollum had mediated. McCollum had recommended that settlement. McCollum apparently did not remember the mediation, and Barlow suggested that McCollum had presided in a Santa Maria mediation in which Barlow was a plaintiff. Barlow also stated that the mediation had occurred a year or two previously, involved the collection of money owed Barlow for a construction project, and that it was held at the law offices of Kirk & Simas. McCollum then advised all parties and counsel that he had mediated a matter in which Barlow was a party, without providing the name of the other party. McCollum also disclosed that the mediation was in Santa Maria and that Barlow indicated it was a construction collection dispute. McCollum indicated that he could only continue to serve as an arbitrator in the matter if everyone were willing to waive any conflicts arising from the disclosure concerning the prior Barlow mediation and a separate, unrelated disclosure. All parties and counsel agreed to proceed with the arbitration. The arbitration lasted several months, and in a 22-page arbitration award, McCollum founding in favor of plaintiffs. Approximately six weeks later, McCollum served his ruling on the parties' motions concerning costs and fees. Barlow filed a petition to vacate the arbitration award claiming McCollum failed to disclose his involvement in a prior similar case involving Barlow and that if he had known these facts, he would not have agreed to Mr. McCollum as the arbitrator. The trial court denied the petition to vacate the arbitration award, finding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9 does not apply as it requires disclosures only regarding prior arbitrations, not prior mediations, and that even if section 1281.9 did apply, Barlow had waived the need for further disclosures. The trial court confirmed the arbitration award. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (142 Ca. App. 4th 185, 187, 191) . Barlow relied on Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6) and cases decided thereunder. The court of appeal distinguished all those cases because none involved an award based on the arbitrator's nondisclosure of a prior, settled case brought by a party who (1) participated in the nondisclosed case; (2) had access to his own file regarding that nondisclosed case before, during and after the arbitration hearings; (3) recognized the arbitrator visually before the arbitration hearing commenced; (4) failed to request a continuance to investigate the arbitrator; (5) consented to proceed with the arbitration when the arbitrator partially described the nondisclosed case to all parties; and (6) failed to notify the arbitrator or the other parties that he objected to the arbitrator's participation until nine months after signing the stipulation naming the arbitrator, six months after seeing and recognizing the arbitrator, and nearly two months after the arbitrator issued the award in favor of his opponents. When read literally, and without regard to the evidence presented below, Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6) could support Barlow's contention that the trial court was required to vacate the award. In denying Barlow's motion to vacate the award, the trial court considered and gave credence to the evidence that, before the arbitration, Barlow recognized McCollum and knew of his participation with Barlow in the prior mediation; that Barlow consented to McCollum as the arbitrator after McCollum advised all parties, in Barlow's presence, that he could not serve without the consent of all parties; that Barlow then waited many months either to check his own files regarding the prior mediation or to object to McCollum's continued participation; and that Barlow objected only after McCollum issued an award in favor of plaintiffs (142 Cal. App. 4th 185, 190) . In view of these circumstances, it would be absurd to construe Section 1286.2(a)(6) to require that the arbitration award be vacated based on an incomplete or untimely disclosure concerning the prior mediation involving Barlow (142 Cal. App. 4th 185, 191) .

41 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.82-20C.89

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.82[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.90

§ 20C.90 Mistake of Law Generally Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Justify Vacating Award

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE GENERALLY NEITHER AN ARBITRATOR'S MISTAKE OF LAW NOR UNSOUND REASONING _____ [PREVENTS CONFIRMATION OF or REQUIRES VACATING] AN AWARD.

A. Arbitrator's Mistake of Law Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacation of Award. An arbitrator's decision is not generally reviewable (by the trial court) for errors of law, whether or not the error appears on the face of the award and causes substantial injustice to the parties (Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 6, 33, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 ; Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 521, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 ; Oaktree Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Bernard (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 71, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 ; Baize v. Eastridge Companies (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 300-302, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 ; Harris v. Sandro (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1310, 1313-1314, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 910 ; accord Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1345, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586).

[AND/OR]

A1. Parties Have Not Clearly Agreed to Judicial Review for Errors of Law. The parties to an arbitration agreement may only take themselves out of the general rule that the merits of the award are not subject to judicial review by clearly agreeing that legal errors are an excess of arbitral authority reviewable by the courts under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2, 1286.6 (Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586). To so provide unambiguously, the parties must have expressly agreed to deprive the arbitrators of the power to commit legal error and to specifically provide for judicial review of such error (Baize v. Eastridge Companies (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 300, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 ; see Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586).

B. Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Unsound Reasoning. Erroneous reasoning does not invalidate an otherwise proper award (Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 11, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 ; Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 589, 343 P.2d 23).

[Optional] C. Uninsured Motorist Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Mistake of Law. The rule that an arbitrator's award is not invalidated by an error of law applies to arbitration of uninsured motorist disputes required to be arbitrated by Insurance Code Section 11580.2(f) (Porter v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1289-1290, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338).

[Optional] D. Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Require Review for Manifest Disregard of Law. In cases governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.), the California rule that generally prevents reweighing of the merits of an arbitrator's ruling is not preempted by Sections 10 and 12 of the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. §§ 10, 12) nor by the federal common law rule which allows review of an arbitration award in federal court for "manifest disregard of the law" (Siegel v. Prudential Insurance Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1290-1291, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 726).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition to confirm an arbitration award or a response to a petition to vacate an arbitration award to assert the principle that neither a mistake of law nor unsound reasoning prevents confirmation of, or requires vacating, an arbitration award. Alternative Paragraphs A1 and B are for the applicable basis for arguing that confirmation should not be denied, whether that is because the parties did not clearly agree to judicial review on the merits or the unsound reasoning of the decision is not grounds for denial of confirmation or for vacating the award. Optional Paragraph C is for use when the award is question relates to an uninsured motorist dispute which was required to be arbitrated by Ins. Code § 11580.2(f). Optional Paragraph D is for use when the matter is governed by the Federal Arbitration Act to counter an actual or anticipated assertion that the federal rule allowing review of an arbitration award for "manifest disregard of the law" applies.

It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking confirmation of the award. Counsel may also wish to combine this form with § 20C.91 or 20C.92, which also address the breadth of arbitrators' usual powers in this regard.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that there is no restrictive language in the arbitration agreement or the rules under which the arbitration was conducted to deprive the arbitrators of their usual power. It may also be appropriate to argue that all parties understood that in choosing arbitration, they intended to risk the possibility of legal error in return for a less expensive and more expeditious procedure than litigation.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purposeis to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Mistake of Law Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacation of Award in Absence of Clear Agreement to Contrary

Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , did not involve an error of law on the face of the award. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court extensively reviewed conflicting authorities on the issue and held, with two justices dissenting, that an arbitrator's decision is not generally reviewable for errors of law, whether or not the error appears on the face of the award and causes substantial injustice to the parties (3 Cal. 4th 1, 6, 33) . Plaintiff was an attorney employed by defendant pursuant to an agreement that provided that if plaintiff ceased to work for defendant and continued to represent clients who had been clients of the firm, the firm was entitled to 80 percent of any fees earned from those clients. The agreement also provided for arbitration of any disputes between the parties. After plaintiff left defendant's employ, plaintiff continued to represent six clients that had been clients of the firm. The firm offered to settle for a quantum meruit share of the fees. Plaintiff refused, and the parties proceeded to arbitration. Before the arbitrator, plaintiff raised the issues of the illegality of the fee-split provision, claiming it was unconscionable, illegal, and contrary to public policy as expressed in the State Bar Rules of Professional Conduct. The arbitrator held for the firm except with respect to the sixth client, as to whom the arbitrator found an 80-20 fee split would be unconscionable. As to the other five clients, the arbitrator held that the 80-20 arrangement was not unconscionable and did not violate the rules of professional conduct. Plaintiff petitioned to have the award vacated or corrected. Defendant sought to have it confirmed. The trial court confirmed the award, finding that the arbitrator's findings on questions of both law and fact were conclusive and that there was no error of law on the face of the award. That result was affirmed on appeal, and by the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court, in upholding the arbitrator's award, stated that because it vindicates the intentions of the parties that the award be final, and because an arbitrator is not ordinarily constrained to decide according to the rule of law, the merits of a controversy are not subject to review and courts will not review the validity of the arbitrator's reasoning. The rule that arbitrators' decisions cannot be reviewed for errors of law is based on two factors. First, the risk of error is something the parties agree to bear in return for a quick, inexpensive, and conclusive resolution of their dispute (3 Cal. 4th 1, 11) . Second, the Legislature, by enacting Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2 and 1286.6, substantially reduced the risk of certain types of error. The residual risk to the parties of an erroneous decision is an acceptable cost of obtaining the expedience and financial savings that the arbitration process provides compared to the judicial process (3 Cal. 4th 1, 12) . The Court discussed the Law Revision Commission studies that culminated in the revision of the arbitration provisions by Stats. 1961, ch. 461, and inferred that the Legislature intended to reject the rule (of earlier cases) allowing review to prevent substantial injustice, and instead to adopt the position that in the absence of some limiting clause in the arbitration agreement, the merits of the award, either on questions of law or fact, may not be reviewed except as provided by statute (3 Cal. 4th 1, 25) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1296, which governs public construction contract arbitration, does provide for vacating awards that are based on errors of law. This allows the inference that the Legislature intended that difference (3 Cal. 4th 1, 25-26) . In California and in states that have adopted the Uniform Arbitration Act (section 12 of the which is substantially similar to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2), most case opinions agree that the statutory grounds are the exclusive grounds for vacating an award (3 Cal. 4th 1, 26-27) . The Court concluded that the Legislature intended to exclude nonstatutory grounds for vacating an award, and disapproved all cases allowing review for an error of law on the face of an award causing substantial injustice (3 Cal. 4th 1, 27-28, 33) .

Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , affirmed the confirmation of an arbitration decision on a breach of contract claim. The portion of the decision on whether the agreement gave the arbitrator the power to decide arbitrability of issues is discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10[3][g], above. The portion of the decision dealing with review of the arbitrator's determination of arbitrability of the issue of joint and several liability is covered in § 20C.91[3][c], below. Next, the court treated the claim that the award should be vacated because the arbitrator failed to render a decision in a timely manner under the applicable Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Service (JAMS) rules. However, the court noted those rules made the arbitrator's decision on timeliness final and not subject to judicial review on the merits, so the court deferred to the decision of the arbitrator and could not vacate the award on grounds of untimely award [185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468, 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 968 at 67-82] . The portion of the decision covering whether the award should be vacated due to the arbitrator's failure to recuse himself is dealt with in § 20C.80[3][g], above . The portion of the decision on whether the arbitrator was immune to the suit on which the request for disqualification was based is discussed in Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity, § 20B.50[3][a], above.

Baize v. Eastridge Companies (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 , involved consolidated actions relating to plaintiff's wrongful termination. Defendants were several companies that developed public/private projects, especially in the field of education. Baize was hired to work on some established projects and to develop new projects. Each project usually involved the creation of a new legal entity for that project. As part of Baize' compensation, he was to be given an ownership interest in any of the entities created for projects he developed. Thus, the wrongful termination suit sought interests in various entities which received compensation for the projects he worked on. The arbitration agreement provided that (1) the arbitrator have the authority of a sitting judge with respect to handling the matter and had to apply California law; (2) the arbitrator apply the substantive law (and the law of remedies, if applicable) of the state of California, as applicable to the issues presented; the arbitrator was without jurisdiction to apply any different substantive law or the law of remedies; and (3) notwithstanding any provision to the contrary that may be contained in the rules governing the arbitration, the arbitrator was constrained by the rule of law and any arbitration award had to be based thereon. The arbitration resulted in an award in favor of Baize, who petitioned to confirm it. The Eastridge Companies opposed confirmation on, among others, the ground that the arbitrator exceeded his authority by failing to correctly apply controlling law. The trial court confirmed the award, on the basis that it lacked authority to review the arbitrator's decision for errors of law. Judgment was entered in favor of Baize.

The court of appeal affirmed (142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 299, 305) . The court first discussed Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 6, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 (discussed above), which held that the decisions of arbitrators are not generally reviewable for errors of fact or law, in part because it vindicates the intentions of the parties that the award be final. The merits of the controversy between the parties generally are not subject to judicial review. Further, courts will not review the validity of the arbitrator's reasoning (142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 300) . The questions whether an arbitrator's decision is judicially reviewable when the arbitrator is constrained to decide according to the rule of law and whether the parties could and in fact did provide for judicial review by agreement are discussed in § 20C.90[3][a1], below.

Harris v. Sandro (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1310, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 910 , arose out of arbitration initiated at plaintiff/appellant's request to determine if he had exercised an option to purchase land, as plaintiff contended, and for specific performance of the option. Defendant sought to quiet title to the property that was the subject of the option. The arbitrator denied plaintiff's claim for specific performance of the option agreement and found that plaintiff had no estate, title or interest in the property. Finding that defendant offered no proof for the counterclaim for quiet title, that was also denied. Defendant was awarded attorney's fees and costs. The award was confirmed judgment entered thereon. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff contended that the arbitrator exceeded his powers when he determined that plaintiff had no estate, title or interest in the property, failed to compel specific performance of the option agreement, and awarded attorneys' fees and costs to defendant. Plaintiff also contended that the arbitrator committed misconduct by failing to provide a basis for the award. The court of appeal noted that California courts have repeatedly emphasized that the merits of a controversy that has been submitted to arbitration are generally not subject to judicial review concerning the validity of the arbitrator's reasoning, the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the award, or any errors of fact or law that may be included in the award. Each of plaintiff's contentions runs afoul of the well-established limits on a court's power to review an arbitration award. The contentions that the arbitrator exceeded his powers by failing to compel specific performance of the option agreement, by determining that Harris had no estate, title or interest in the property, and by failing to give a "basis" for his decision are nothing more than claims that the award contains legal and factual errors, and thus, not reviewable by the court of appeal. The court found nothing inconsistent in the findings that plaintiff had not estate, title, or interest in the property and that defendant was not entitled to a judgment quieting her title: a ruling that one person lacks an interest in real property is fully consistent with a ruling that the interest of another cannot yet be determined. In addition, the court of appeal awarded defendant/respondent sanctions pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 907, finding that the appeal was frivolous and taken solely for delay. By any objective measure, the court said, the appeal was indisputably without merit given the clarity and frequency with which the California Supreme Court has rejected attempts to obtain judicial review of arbitration awards.

Marsch v. Williams (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 238, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 402 , involved the appeal of a partner in a general partnership from an order of the Superior Court of San Diego County (California), which confirmed an arbitration award appointing a receiver to oversee the dissolution of the partnership and the sale of the partnership property. The court of appeals affirmed in part, and held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 provided that a court could not vacate an arbitration award though it contained a legal or factual error on its face which resulted in substantial injustice (23 Cal. App. 4th 238, 244) . The portion of the opinion covering the right of judicial review under the terms of the agreement is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a1], below.

In Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 , the parties' agreement made arbitration subject to a statute that requires statements of decision from trial courts in ordinary civil cases. Given this qualification on arbitration, the losing party argued the arbitrators exceeded their powers in failing to issue a statement of decision that met the requirements of the statute. Even where application of a particular law or body of law is required by the parties' arbitration agreement, an arbitrator's failure to apply such a law is not in excess of an arbitrator's powers within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) (15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 588-589) . In rejecting the contention that a qualification as to the law governing an arbitration defines the scope of arbitrators' powers, the court stated: "The consideration that the submission agreement is qualified affords no persuasive reason to broaden the scope of judicial review. The fact that the parties restrict the arbitrator to a decision of the issues in the manner of a court of law does not mean that they expect that the decision is reviewable. The mode of decision and its reviewability are separate questions" (15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 589) .

State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Guleserian (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 397, 104 Cal. Rptr. 683 , arose out of a claim by an insured's widow for damages caused by an uninsured motorist. The dispute was submitted to a single arbitrator who, although he found the claimant to have been contributorily negligent, interpreted the Insurance Code as imposing absolute liability on the uninsured motorist insurance carrier in a hit-and-run situation and made an award accordingly. The insurance carrier petitioned to vacate the award, the superior court granted the petition, and the claimant appealed.

In reversing the order, the court of appeal disputed the insurance company's contention that an award should be set aside for an egregious error of law. Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 sets out the exclusive grounds for vacating an arbitration award, such as corruption, fraud, or other undue means, or substantial prejudice flowing from the conduct of the arbitrator--but not an error of law. The court reviewed the cases to find awards being upheld despite erroneous application of legal doctrines, consideration of inadmissible evidence, or conflict with substantive law and concluded that an award may not be vacated for an arbitrator's mistake of law alone, no matter how grievous (28 Cal. App. 3d 397, 402-403) .

[a1] Parties Have Not Clearly Agreed to Judicial Review for Errors of Law

Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 , enforced a provision of an arbitration provision allowing for judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award. The court reiterated the rule that in the absence of some limiting clause in the arbitration agreement, the merits of the award, either on questions of fact or of law, may not be reviewed except as provided in the California Arbitration Act (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1340, 1345) . The court stated that the agreement must clearly show that the parties agreed to judicial review of legal error by the arbitrator (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361). The portion of the decision addressing the court's ruling that the preclusion in the Federal Arbitration Act on contractual expansion of judicial review of the merits of arbitration awards is discussed in § 20C.194[3][b], below. The portion of the decision addressing the ability of the parties and the procedure to contractually expand the scope of judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is discussed in § 20C.194[3][a], below. The portion of the decision vacating the award and remanding the case to the arbitration panel for proper determination on the basis of contractual interpretation and applicable arbitration rules whether arbitration could proceed on a class basis is discussed in § 20C.105[3][a], below.

In Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 521, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 , the trial court and the court of appeal confirmed the arbitration award and denied a motion to vacate it. The agreement provided that: "The arbitrator ... shall render an award in accordance with substantive California Law" [182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 508] . After reviewing the applicable case law, the court of appeal ruled that that provision does not confer power on the courts to review the arbitrator's award for errors of law. Neither "apply" nor "in accordance with," when used in an arbitration provision to identify the governing substantive law, evinces an agreement that an award be reviewed for legal error (182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 518-519) . The portion of the opinion dealing with the allocation of costs is discussed in § 20C.111, below.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling in Oaktree Cap. Mgmt., L.P. v. Bernard (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 71, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 16 , that the arbitration agreement did not confer upon the courts the power to review the arbitrator's award for errors of law. The aspect of the case addressing whether the response to the petition to confirm was timely filed is covered in § 20.21[3][a], above. The agreement stated: "The arbitrator shall make all rulings in accordance with ... governing law ... and shall have authority equivalent to that of a California Superior Court judge, including the right to grant equitable relief, to the same extent as such relief would be available in an action pending in the Los Angeles Superior Court in which all parties have appeared." Citing Baize, discussed below, the court noted that while the agreement required application of California law, it did not expressly state that a court could review the arbitrator's application of that law (182 Cal. App. 4th 60, 71) .

In Baize v. Eastridge Companies (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 763 , the court of appeals affirmed the trial court's ruling that it lacked authority to review the arbitrator's decision for errors of law. The portion of the opinion setting forth general facts and the ruling on the issue of the arbitrator's error of law is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a], above. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling that even if the arbitration agreement limits the arbitrator to applying the law, judicial review is barred unless the arbitration agreement specifically provides for expanded judicial review (142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 300) . Regarding the parties' ability to expressly provide by their agreement that the arbitrator's errors of law are reviewable, the court criticized the holding in Crowell v. Downey Community Hospital Foundation (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 730, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 (disapproved on this point by Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586), that such a provision is void (142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 301 n5). While the arbitration agreement here expressly limited the arbitrator to the application of California law, in that the agreement provided that the arbitrator "shall apply California law" and "shall be constrained by the rule of law," it did not expressly expand the scope of judicial review. Facing that language in the agreement, the court of appeal refused not deviate from the rule of Moncharsh. Thus, arbitrator's decision was not reviewable (142 Cal. App. 4th 293, 302) .

In Marsch v. Williams (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 238, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 402 , the court of appeals affirmed the trial court ruling that the arbitration agreement did not provide a right to judicial review of the legal conclusions in the arbitration award. The portion of the opinion setting forth general facts and the ruling on the issue of the arbitrator's error of law as being in excess of jurisdiction is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a], above. The court also affirmed the trial court ruling that the requirement that the arbitrator apply the law did not by itself engender the right to judicial review of the arbitrator's legal conclusion, where the agreement provided that California law "shall govern [the] interpretation and effect" of the contract. The court noted that it was "not concerned about what law the parties have chosen." Rather, it focused on "whether the parties have agreed that an arbitrator's mistake in either determining the appropriate law or applying it are reviewable in a court of law. The court based its holding on the rule that where application of a particular law or body of law is required by the parties' arbitration agreement, an arbitrator's failure to apply such a law is not in excess of an arbitrator's powers within the meaning of Cal. Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d). The lack of an explicit reference in the agreement to judicial review precluded it (23 Cal. App. 4th 238, 244-245) .

[b] Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Unsound Reasoning

Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , is discussed at [a], above.

The facts and procedural background of Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 343 P.2d 23 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the arbitrators' power to award damages for breach of contract when only the issue of breach has been expressly submitted, are discussed at § 20C.100[3][a]. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court rulings. In referring to the union's interpretation of the award, the Supreme Court noted that even if the reasoning of the arbitrators was unsound, it would not invalidate the award, because it is well settled that erroneous reasoning will not invalidate an otherwise proper award. Every intendment of validity must be given an award, and doubts must be resolved in favor of the award (52 Cal. 2d 568, 589) .

[c] Uninsured Motorist Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Mistake of Law

The facts and procedural background of Porter v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 338 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the arbitrator's authority to determine the workers' compensation setoff, are discussed at § 20C.63[3][b]. Defendant claimed the general rule that an award is not reviewable for or invalidated by errors of law should not apply to uninsured motorist arbitrations under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f). Defendant contended that the rationale for allowing an award based on an error of law to stand is that the parties agreed to accept the risk of errors of law in return for the other benefits of arbitration, but that rationale does not apply when the arbitration is mandated by statute. The court of appeal disagreed. First, the statutory scheme of which Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 (exclusive grounds for vacating arbitration award) is a part encompasses all "private," "contractual" arbitration whether the parties contract for arbitration of their own volition or whether they are required by statute to incorporate arbitration into their agreement. Second, the public policy underlying the encouragement of contractual arbitration applies equally to all forms of arbitration. Whether the parties arbitrate because they have agreed to do so or because the Legislature has decided to compel arbitration, the attributes of speed, efficiency, and economy which distinguish arbitration from the judicial process remain constant. Judicial review of the merits of arbitration awards would vitiate those attributes whether the arbitration is mandated by statute or chosen by contract (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1289) .

Defendant also argued that because Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 26, 33, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832

P.2d 899 , cited Allen v. Interinsurance Exchange (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 636, 80 Cal. Rptr. 247 , which affirmed a trial court order vacating an award in an uninsured motorist dispute due to the arbitrator's legal error, Moncharsh leaves an opening for judicial review of the merits of awards under Ins. Code § 11580.2(f) (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1289-1290) . The court of appeal pointed out that Moncharsh cited Allen for the proposition that Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 defines the exclusive grounds for judicial review of arbitration awards and thus, buttresses Moncharsh's holding that arbitration awards may not be vacated for errors of fact or law (43 Cal. App. 4th 1282, 1290) .

[d] Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Require Review for Manifest Disregard of Law

Siegel v. Prudential Insurance Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 726 , was an action for wrongful termination by an employee who alleged he had been terminated for reporting wrongdoing ("policy churning") by other employees. The arbitration award was for the plaintiff and included $1,000,000 in punitive damages for acting with oppression, fraud, and malice in discharging plaintiff and damages for emotional distress, although there was no evidence that plaintiff suffered severe mental injury. Because of these last two elements of the award, defendants opposed plaintiff's petition for confirmation of the award and petitioned for the award to be vacated on the ground that the Federal Arbitration Act applied so that sections 10 and 12 of the FAA (9 U.S.C. §§ 10, 12) allowed the merits of the award to be reviewed because there had been a manifest disregard of the law by the arbitrator. The trial court confirmed the award, and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal said that California's rule precluding on the merits review of an arbitration award does not stand an obstacle to full effectuation of the purpose of the FAA--enforcement of arbitration agreements. In fact, California's rule furthers the use of arbitration by more strictly limiting judicial review of the merits of an award and thus furthers, rather than defeats, full effectuation of the federal law's objectives (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1283-1284) . State law is preempted only to the extent that it actually conflicts with federal law--that is, to the extent that it stands as an obstacle to the accomplishment and execution of the full purposes and objectives of Congress (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1285) . Although it has never directly confronted the issue, the United States Supreme Court has never held that sections 10 and 12 of the FAA apply to post-arbitration proceedings in state courts or that the federal rule allowing judicial review of an award for a manifest disregard of the law preempts a different state rule (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1287) . The manifest disregard of the law standard for vacating an arbitration award is a judicially created standard; it is not part of the FAA (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1289) . The manifest disregard of the law doctrine is not statutorily based but is premised on federal common law. Further, the court noted that the language of Sections 10 and 12, which refer to courts of the United States and the "district" where the award was made is inconsistent with those sections being applicable to litigation in state courts (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1290) . Thus, the court concluded that neither Sections 10 and 12 of the FAA nor the manifest disregard of the law rule preempt Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 or the California rule which prevents reweighing the merits of an arbitrator's decision (67 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1290-1291) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Mistake of Law Does Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacation of Award

Lagstein v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (9th Cir., 2010) 607 F.3d 634 , overturned the district court's ruling vacating the arbitration award subject to the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) on grounds that it was excessive. The FAA, 9 U.S.C.S. § 10(a)(4), permits vacatur where the arbitrators exceed their powers. This is a high standard for vacatur. It is not enough to show that the panel committed an error, or even a serious error. Arbitrators exceed their powers not when they merely interpret or apply the governing law incorrectly, but when the award is completely irrational, or exhibits a manifest disregard of law (607 F.3d 634, 641) . Manifest disregard of the law means something more than just an error in the law or a failure on the part of the arbitrators to understand or apply the law. To vacate an arbitration award on this ground, it must be clear from the record that the arbitrators recognized the applicable law and then ignored it (607 F.3d 634, 641) . Under the facts in the record, the arbitration award did not exhibit a manifest disregard of the law (607 F.3d 634, 641-642) . The portion of the decision on whether the award was irrational is discussed at [b], below. The portion of the decision covering partiality or corruption of arbitrator is set forth at § 20C.80[4][a], above . The portion of the decision addressing the arbitrators' unrequired disclosure of past misconduct is discussed at § 20C.80[4][c], above.

The decision in Comedy Club, Inc. v. Improv West Associates (9th Cir. 2009) 553 F.3d 1277 , was rendered after remand to consider the effects of the Supreme Court's decision in Hall Street Associates L.L.C. v. Mattel, Inc., 128 S. Ct. 1396, 170 L. Ed. 2d 254 (2008) , discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.96[3][a]. The Ninth Circuit determined that the Court's ruling in Hall did not determine the outcome in this case, and held that vacatur on grounds that the arbitrator's award manifestly disregarded the law was still valid under the Federal Arbitration Act, 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(4), in the Ninth Circuit (553 F.3d 1277, 1281, 1290) . For an arbitrator's award to be in manifest disregard of the law, it must be clear from the record that the arbitrator recognized the applicable law and then ignored it. In discussing the arbitrator's enforcement of an in-term covenant not to compete in light of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16600, court observed that it is well established that broad covenants not to compete are void unless they involve a situation where a person sells the goodwill of a business or where a partner agrees not to compete in anticipation of dissolution of a partnership. Neither party asserted an exception (553 F.3d 1277, 1290) . The court then determined that the arbitrator misinterpreted the ruling in Dayton Time Lock Service, Inc. v. Silent Watchman Corp., 52 Cal. App. 3d 1, 124 Cal. Rptr. 678 (1975) , in a manner that effectively quarantines the party subject to the noncompete from engaging in its business in forty-eight states until 2019 and does not follow well-established California law. Thus, the court determined that the arbitrator's validation of the noncompete covenant was in manifest disregard of the law and must be vacated in part (553 F.3d 1277, 1293) .

G.C. & K.B. Investments, Inc. v. Wilson (9th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1096 , arose out of a franchise agreement between defendants, plaintiff, and plaintiff's predecessor. Defendants bought their franchise to operate a car service business in Hawaii in 1992 from a California-based sub-franchisor of a Louisiana corporation. In 1997, the California Department of Corporations won a judgment against the franchisor and sub-franchisor for misleading misrepresentations and failure to disclose material facts in the uniform franchise offering circular. They were enjoined from further sales in violation of California law. Defendants stopped paying royalties and advertising fees and stopped reporting sales to plaintiff, claiming franchisor had orally promised certain corporate support that it did not provide. The franchise agreement contained an arbitration clause that provided for arbitration at the AAA office "located nearest the office of the [franchisor's] Region" and that litigation to enforce any award "be held in San Bernardino County, California, or the federal court located nearest thereto." Plaintiff filed a demand for arbitration with the New Orleans, Louisiana office of AAA. Defendants refused to participate in the arbitration, reading the franchise agreement tocall for arbitration in California, and instead filed suit in Hawaii state court seeking relief from the franchise agreement. In February, 2000, the arbitrator in Louisiana entered an award in favor of plaintiff. On March 14, 2000, plaintiff filed an application for an order confirming the award in the federal district court for the Central District of California. On August 14, 2000 the district court confirmed the award and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendants claimed, among other things, that the district court failed to consider the legality of the sale and offer of the underlying franchise agreement in light of the California securities violations and that the arbitration should have taken place in California. The Court of Appeals said under 9 U.S.C. §§ 9-11, a court must grant a confirmation order unless the award is vacated, modified, or corrected for one of the grounds available under the FAA. Confirmation of an award is required even in the face of errors of law. An arbitration award must be upheld unless it is completely irrational or constitutes a manifest disregard of the law (326 F.3d 1096, 1105) , which defendants did not claim. The district court made no error in failing to consider the legality of the underlying agreement (326 F.3d 1096, 1106) . Further, the provision defendants relied on to claim California as the proper place for arbitration was a notice provision, not a venue provision. Louisiana was the proper place to hold the arbitration (326 F.3d 1096, 1108) .

In Christensen v. Smith (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 931, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 57 , the parties' arbitration agreement provided that the arbitrator was required to render an award in accordance with substantive California law. One of the parties argued that that provision conferred the right to judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award. However, the agreement by its terms was governed by the Federal Arbitration Act, which does not permit parties to contract for judicial review for legal error. Accordingly, the court affirmed the trial court's judgment that judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award was not appropriate (171 Cal. App. 4th 931, 937-938) .

The court of appeal in Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 , issued a peremptory writ of mandate compelling the superior court to rescind its order vacating an arbitration award and granting ancillary relief and to issue a new order confirming the award. The award was challenged as being illegal, contrary to law, and in excess of the arbitrator's powers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)]. The court noted that generally, arbitrators are not constrained by rule of law, but may base their decision on broader equitable considerations. An award is not reviewable simply because the arbitrator makes a simple error of law or fact. Only an error that amounts to a such completely irrational construction of the contract provision in dispute as to remake the parties' contract will justify vacation of an award as beyond the scope of the arbitrator's power (15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 587-591) . Specifically, an award should not be vacated when the arbitrator's construction of the contract is clearly within the range of ambiguity. If the arbitrator's construction is within the ordinary bounds of semantic permissibility, the contract has not been arbitrarily remade. The test is one of arbitrariness, not correctness (15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 591-594) .

The court of appeal in Southern Cal. Rapid Transit Dist. v. United Transportation Union (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 416, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 , affirmed a judgment confirming an award in plaintiff's favor requiring the union and the district to meet and confer regarding appropriate remedies for drivers on 14 routes transferred to another district in violation of the collective bargaining agreement. First, plaintiff sued to enjoin the transfer. The court held their only remedy was arbitration. Then the parties stipulated to arbitration, subject to defendant's objection that plaintiff had waived its right to arbitrate. The stipulation provided that waiver was to be determined by arbitrator. In that situation, the court of appeal said, waiver was a matter of law, which is not subject to review by a court, even if there was an error of law (5 Cal. App. 4th 416, 423) .

[b] Award Is Not Invalidated by Arbitrator's Unsound Reasoning

Lagstein v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (9th Cir., 2010) 607 F.3d 634 , overturned the district court's ruling vacating the arbitration award subject to the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) on grounds that it was excessive. The portion of the decision discussing manifest disregard of the law is set forth in [a], above. The FAA, 9 U.S.C.S. § 10(a)(4), permits vacatur where the arbitrators exceed their powers. This is a high standard for vacatur. It is not enough to show that the panel committed an error, or even a serious error. Arbitrators exceed their powers not when they merely interpret or apply the governing law incorrectly, but when the award is completely irrational, or exhibits a manifest disregard of law. An award is completely irrational only where the arbitration decision fails to draw its essence from the agreement. An arbitration award draws its essence from the agreement if the award is derived from the agreement, in light of the agreement's language and context, as well as other indications of the parties' intentions . The scope of review does not include whether the award is irrational in light of the facts, i.e., whether the findings are supported by the record. Under the facts in the record, the arbitration award did not exhibit a manifest disregard of the law . Likewise, the arbitrators' interpretation of an agreement does not constitute irrationality where it draws its essence from the agreement and is plausible. In all respects, the arbitrators' interpretation was plausible and rational (607 F.3d 634, 642-643) . The portion of the decision covering partiality or corruption of arbitrator is set forth at § 20C.80[4][a], above . The portion of the decision addressing the arbitrators' unrequired disclosure of past misconduct is discussed at § 20C.80[4][c], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.91

§ 20C.91 Arbitration Awards May Be Based on Broad Principles of Equity and Justice

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATORS MAY MAKE THEIR DETERMINATION ON BROAD PRINCIPLES OF JUSTICE AND EQUITY WITHOUT RESPECT TO HOW A COURT WOULD DECIDE.

A. Arbitrators May Base Their Decision on Broad Principles of Equity and Justice. Unless specifically required to do so by the arbitration agreement, arbitrators are not bound by principles of dry law, but may base their decisions on broad principles of justice and equity (Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 374-375, 389, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 ; Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10-11, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899).

[Optional] B. Arbitrator May Grant Relief That Would Exceed Power of Court to Grant. A court may not vacate an award because the arbitrator has exceeded the power the court would have, or would have had if the parties had chosen to litigate, rather than arbitrate the dispute (Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 388, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994).

[Optional] C. Arbitrator's Grant of Relief Bears Rational Relationship to Breach. An arbitration award that grants relief not specifically authorized by the contract will be upheld as long as there is a rational relationship between the breach and award. Often that rational relationship will be found in the fact the arbitrator has awarded the injured party relief of the same general type that a jury or court could have provided had the claim been litigated, even if the quantity, extent or parameters of the award differ in some respects from that to which the party was legally entitled (Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 381, 386-387, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 ; Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1448, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 ; Hightower v. Superior Court (O'Dowd) (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 1437, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition to confirm an arbitration award or a response to a petition to vacate an arbitration award to assert that the arbitrators are usually allowed to utilize broad principles of law and equity in arriving at their decision as long as the result bears some rational relationship to the type relief a court could grant in the same situation.

It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking confirmation of the award. Counsel may wish to combine this form with § 20C.90 or 20C.92, which also address the breadth of arbitrators' usual powers in this regard.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that there is no restrictive language in the arbitration agreement or the rules under which the arbitration was conducted to deprive the arbitrators of their usual power. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 or 20C.11, 20C.90, and 20C.92.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing this form and asserting that, under the integration clause in the agreement at issue, the arbitrators were not allowed to use extrinsic evidence to interpret the agreement, and thus, could not award reformation, see § 20C.171.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators May Base Their Decision on Broad Principles of Equity and Justice

Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 , arose out of an agreement between two makers of computer chips. Under the agreement, the parties would share information so that each could develop products suitable for sale as an alternate source for products developed by the other. Either party could elect to be a second source for products the other offered it. It would then receive the necessary technical information and licenses it needed to make and sell the part and would pay a royalty to the developing company. The relevant part of the dispute involved Intel's refusal to accept products developed by AMD which would have allowed AMD access to Intel's 80386 microprocessor chip. The arbitrator found that Intel had decided to take no more products from AMD to avoid having to give AMD the 80386. The arbitrator also found and that AMD unnecessarily delayed seeking alternative ways to develop a competitive chip. The arbitrator declined to award AMD the hundreds of millions it sought in lost 80386 profits, finding that AMD's actual lost profits were immeasurable and that a nominal damage award would be inequitable. Instead, the arbitrator awarded AMD a permanent, nonexclusive and royalty-free license to any Intel intellectual property embodied in the chip AMD ultimately reverse-engineered, the AM386, as well as a two-year extension of patent and copyright licenses.

AMD petitioned the superior court to confirm the award. Intel petitioned for the award to be corrected by vacating those two items of relief on the ground they exceeded the arbitrator's powers. The superior court affirmed the award, but the court of appeal reversed. The Supreme Court granted review and in a four to three decision, upheld the award.

The Court framed the issue as being to determine the standard of review of the remedies fashioned by the arbitrator and held that under the proper standard, courts generally defer to an arbitrator's finding that determination of a particular question is within the scope of his or her contractual authority (9 Cal. 4th 362, 372) . The court then stated that because determination of appropriate relief also constitutes decision on an issue, these two aspects of an arbitrator's authority are not always neatly separable (9 Cal. 4th 362, 373) . The Court cited Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10-11, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , for the general point on the breadth of an arbitrator's authority set out in Paragraph A of the form (9 Cal. 4th 362, 374-375) . The Court concluded that the parties' contract contained no limitation compelling the arbitrator to follow legal rules, so that the arbitrator did not exceed his authority in fashioning the remedy (9 Cal. 4th 362, 389) . The contract clause the Court construed was identical to the American Arbitration Association, Commercial Arbitration Rules (1993), Rule 43 (9 Cal. 4th 362, 383) .

The facts and procedural background of Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the fact that an award will not be vacated for an error of law, are discussed at § 20C.90[3][a]. The Supreme Court traced the history and development of the issue,beginning with the early cases that developed the rule allowing review for error of law on the face of the award, and continuing with the 1927 amendments to the Code of Civil Procedure, which replaced the common law of arbitration and thereafter exclusively governed (3 Cal. 4th 1, 8-28) . In holding that an error of law on the face of an award causing substantial injustice is not grounds for vacating an award, the Court noted that arbitrators are not generally required to act in conformity with rules of law, but may base their decisions on broad principles of justice and equity (3 Cal. 4th 1, 10-11) .

[b] Arbitrator May Grant Relief That Would Exceed Power of Court to Grant

The facts and procedural background of Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 , and the portion of the opinion addressing arbitrators' usual power to base their awards on broad principles of equity and justice are discussed at [a], above. In upholding the arbitrator's award, the Court held that an arbitrator may award relief that would not be within the power of a court to award (9 Cal. 4th 362, 388) . Rejecting the dissent's contention that the remedy should be limited to specific performance of the contract, the court found that the parties agreement had not restricted the arbitrator to remedies available in a court of law (9 Cal. 4th 362, 388-389) . Counsel should note that the contract clause the Court construed was identical to the American Arbitration Association, Commercial Arbitration Rules (1993), Rule 43 (9 Cal. 4th 362, 383) .

Hightower v. Superior Court (O'Dowd) (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1415, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 209 , another case on this topic, is discussed in § 20C.10[3][e].

[c] Arbitrator's Grant of Relief Bears Rational Relationship to Breach

The facts and procedural background of Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 , and the portion of the opinion addressing arbitrators' usual power to base their awards on broad principles of equity and justice are discussed at [a], above. In upholding the arbitrator's award, the Court enunciated the standard of review of the remedy fashioned by an arbitrator. The Court held that arbitrators are not obliged to read contracts literally, and an award may not be vacated merely because the court is unable to find the relief granted was authorized by a specific term of the contract. The remedy need only bear some rational relationship to the contract and the breach. The award will be upheld so long as it was even arguably based on the contract; it may be vacated only if the reviewing court is compelled to infer the award was based on an extrinsic source (9 Cal. 4th 362, 381) . The court found that the remedy awarded bore a rational relationship to the breach even though it awarded AMD a license that did not correspond in all its terms with a license that could have been earned through performance of the agreement (9 Cal. 4th 362 386-387) .

Greenspan v. LADT, LLC (2010) 185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 111 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , affirmed the confirmation of an arbitration decision on a breach of contract claim. The portion of the decision on whether the agreement gave the arbitrator the power to decide arbitrability of issues is discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10[3][g], above. After determining that the arbitrator had authority to determine arbitrability of the issue of joint and several liability and that the arbitrator's determination was not subject to merits review, the court, citing Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994, stated that the award is subject to review only on the test whether the remedy awarded bears some rational relationship to the contract and the breach. Noting that joint and several liability is a remedy for these purposes, the court found that the award was rationally related to the agreement and breach (185 Cal. App. 4th 1413, 1448). The portion of the decision addressing the review of the timeliness of the arbitrator's award is covered in § 20C.90[3][a], above. The portion of the decision covering whether the award should be vacated due to the arbitrator's failure to recuse himself is dealt with in § 20C.80[3][g], above . The portion of the decision on whether the arbitrator was immune to the suit on which the request for disqualification was based is discussed in Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity, § 20B.50[3][a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.92

§ 20C.92 Relief Granted by Arbitration Award Need Not Be Specifically Provided for by Contract

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATORS NEED NOT CONFINE THE RELIEF GRANTED IN THEIR AWARDS TO RELIEF SPECIFICALLY AUTHORIZED IN THE CONTRACT [BUT INSTEAD MAY MAKE THEIR AWARD ON THE BASIS OF BROAD PRINCIPLES OF JUSTICE AND EQUITY (WITHOUT RESPECT TO HOW A COURT WOULD DECIDE)].

A. Relief Granted Need Not Be Specifically Authorized by Contract. Arbitrators are not obliged to read contracts literally, and an award may not be vacated merely because the court is unable to find the relief granted was authorized by a specific term of the contract. The remedy need only bear some rational relationship to the contract and the breach. The award will be upheld so long as it was even arguably based on the contract; it may be vacated only if the reviewing court is compelled to infer the award was based on an extrinsic source (San Francisco Housing Auth. v. Service Employees Int'l Union, Local 790 (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 933, 945, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 62 ; Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994) or conflicts with an express provision of the agreement (San Francisco Housing Auth. v. Service Employees Int'l Union, Local 790 (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 933, 945, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 62)).

[Optional] B. Arbitrator's Grant of Relief Within Court's Power Supports Rational Relationship. [See § 20C.91[1], Paragraph C.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition to confirm an arbitration award or a response to a petition to vacate an arbitration award to assert the principle that the arbitrators are generally not bound to limit the relief granted in an award to that specified in the contract.

It does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking confirmation of the award. Counsel may wish to combine this form with § 20C.90 or 20C.91, which also address the breadth of arbitrators' usual powers in this regard.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that there is no restrictive language in the arbitration agreement or the rules under which the arbitration was conducted to deprive the arbitrators of their usual power. Generally, it will be appropriate to attacha copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 or 20C.11, 20C90, and 20C.91.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing this form and asserting that, under the integration clause in the agreement at issue, the arbitrators were not allowed to use extrinsic evidence to interpret the agreement, and thus, could not award reformation, see § 20C.171.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Granted Need Not Be Specifically Authorized by Contract

In San Francisco Housing Authority v. Service Employees Internat. Union, Local 790 (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 933, 946, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 62 , the trial court vacated an arbitrator's award on grounds that the award violated a provision of the arbitration agreement. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the arbitrator's interpretation of the contract in deciding whether the employer improperly laid off a particular employee allowed her to frame a remedy that, although not expressly provided for in the agreement, was reasonably related to the arbitrator's interpretation of the contract and was not prohibited by it (182 Cal. App. 4th 933, 951) .

The facts and procedural background of Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 , and the portion of the opinion addressing arbitrators' usual power to base their awards on broad principles of equity and justice are discussed at § 20C.91[3][a]. In upholding the arbitrator's award, the Court enunciated the standard of review of the remedy fashioned by an arbitrator. Arbitrators are not obliged to read contracts literally; and an award may not be vacated merely because the court is unable to find the relief granted was authorized by a specific term of the contract. The remedy need only bear some rational relationship to the contract and the breach. The award will be upheld so long as it was even arguably based on the contract; it may be vacated only if the reviewing court is compelled to infer the award was based on an extrinsic source (9 Cal. 4th 362, 381) . The court found that the remedy awarded bore a rational relationship to the breach contract even though it awarded AMD a license that did not correspond in all its terms with a license that could have been earned through performance of the agreement (9 Cal. 4th 362 386-387) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.93-20C.99

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.93[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.100

§ 20C.100 Arbitrators May Award Damages for Breach of Contract Though Not Submitted as an Issue for Determination

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATORS HAVE THE POWER TO AWARD DAMAGES WHEN THEY FIND A BREACH OF CONTRACT, EVEN IF THE ISSUE OF DAMAGES WAS NOT SUBMITTED FOR DETERMINATION.

A. Arbitrators May Award Damages for Breach of Contract, Though Not Submitted as an Issue for Determination. When the issue of breach of contract has been submitted to arbitration, and all necessary evidence has been submitted, the arbitrators properly may determine the amount of damages although the specific issue of damages has not been submitted (Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 589-590, 343 P.2d 23).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the arbitrator improperly awarded damages for breach of contract. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed, and if desired, § 20C.101[1], regarding the general power of arbitrators to determine which issues are necessary for resolution of the entire controversy.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out that the issue of breach of contract was properly raised, submitted, and supported, and that the arbitrators foundthat there was a breach of contract. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10, 20C.11, and 20C.101.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators May Award Damages for Breach of Contract, Though Not Submitted as an Issue for Determination

Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 343 P.2d 23 , arose out of a dispute between a union and an employer, in which the company filed a petition for an order directing arbitration. The parties were ordered to arbitrate. As an arbitration award was being drafted, the union filed a motion with the arbitrators to reopen the hearing and present additional evidence. The motion was denied, first, because the issue sought to be reopened had been admitted in the pleadings of the union, and second, because the new evidence could have been offered during the hearing and no showing of excusable neglect or surprise had been made. The union additionally raised the issue that the award was erroneous in that the issue of damages had not been submitted to arbitration, and the arbitrators "rewrote" the contract by awarding damages. The award and supplemental award were confirmed on the company's motion. The union appealed from denial of its motion to vacate, modify, and correct.

The Supreme Court, determining the state court had jurisdiction of the particular matters in issue, affirmed the lower court rulings. The Court found that damages for breach of a particular contract provision were clearly a part of any "dispute" which had been agreed to be submitted to arbitration. Even if the damages issue had not been submitted specifically, damages were properly included in the award (52 Cal. 2d 568, 589-590) . The Court found this conclusion inherent in the reasoning of Sapp v. Barenfeld (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 515, 212 P.2d 233 (discussed at § 20C.102[3][a]), a case which reversed an order vacating an award for failing to grant damages, the appellate decision finding no proof of damage had been offered to the arbitrators. The court in Sapp was found to have implied clearly that when a contract breach has been submitted to arbitration although damages are not included expressly in the submission, if proper proof is made, damages may and should be awarded. The present Court found this conclusion to be in accord with common sense. All the necessary facts were before the arbitrators. In the instant case, all the evidence necessary on the issue was introduced. The damages were liquidated. The union made, and could make, no claim of surprise or prejudice. No useful purpose would be served in such a case by limiting the arbitrators to determining that there had been a breach of contract and then relegating the parties to a new proceeding to fix damages (52 Cal. 2d 568, 590) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.101

§ 20C.101 Arbitrators Disposed of All Issues Which Had to Be Decided

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATORS PROPERLY DISPOSED OF ALL ISSUES NECESSARY [AND ABLE] TO BE DETERMINED IN MAKING THE AWARD.

A. Issues Submitted to Arbitration Are Presumed to Have Been Resolved. There is a presumption that all issues submitted in arbitration have been resolved, and the objecting party has the burden of proving otherwise (Rosenquist v. Haralambides (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 62, 67, 237 Cal. Rptr. 260 ; Rodrigues v. Keller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 842, 170 Cal. Rptr. 349).

B. Arbitrator Need Only Determine Necessary Issues. There is no general rule that an arbitrator must find facts. It is the determination of issues necessary in order to determine the controversy which is required (Rodrigues v. Keller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 843, 170 Cal. Rptr. 349 ; Cothron v. Interinsurance Exch. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 860, 163 Cal. Rptr. 240).

C. Arbitrators Decide Which Are "Necessary" Issues. Because the award must include a determination of all questions submitted which must be determined in order to determine the controversy, it is for the arbitrators and not the court, to determine which issues are "necessary" to the ultimate decision (Morris v. Zuckerman (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 686, 690, 72 Cal. Rptr. 880, 446 P.2d 1000 ; Hall v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4).

[Optional] D. Arbitrator May Determine Legal Issues as Distinct From Factual Ones. An arbitrator clearly has the power to pass on legal, as distinct from factual, issues if they are part of the arbitrable controversy (Marcus v. Superior Court (1977)75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 210, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890).

[Optional] E. The Fact That An Award Is Not Enforceable as Judgment Is Not Grounds for Vacating the Award.

The failure of a contractual arbitration award to be enforceable as a judgment does not itself provide grounds for vacating the award (Mossman v. City of Oakdale (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 90, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764). The principle of arbitral finality does not preclude the arbitrator from making a final disposition of a submitted matter in more than one award (Mossman v. City of Oakdale (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 91, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764). The normal course of action when the financial terms of an award are unenforceable due to ambiguity is to remand the matter to the original arbitrator for clarification (Mossman v. City of Oakdale (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 92, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the arbitrator failed to dispose of all necessary issues or improperly disposed of one or more issues. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed. If applicable to the particular case, counsel should also include the memoranda from § 20C.100 or 20C.102, regarding award of damages for breach of contract and failure to determine an issue not expressly raised and supported, respectively.

Use optional paragraph E where the arbitrator made all necessary findings of fact and law, but failed to fully set forth details of the remedy.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out what the necessary issues were and show that the award disposes of them all, and otherwise indicate that any other issues disposed of were necessarily within the province of the arbitrators to decide. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])]. Similarly, where optional paragraph E applies, carefully distinguish how the arbitrator made all necessary findings of fact and law, but simply did not fully set forth all necessary details of the remedy. Consider giving examples of details of the remedy that the arbitrator could set forth on remand based on the findings of fact and law actually made that would complete the award.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11, 20C.100, and 20C.102.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Issues Submitted to Arbitration Are Presumed to Have Been Resolved

In Rosenquist v. Haralambides (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 62, 237 Cal. Rptr. 260 , the initial award included an entitlement to attorney's fees, but while each party had requested fees in their postarbitration hearing briefs, neither had submitted information on which a determination could have been made as to the amount of fees. Nevertheless, the corrected award included an award of the amount of attorney's fees that one party was ordered to pay the other party.

The court of appeal refused to vacate the corrected award, holding that because the parties had requested attorney's fees in their briefs, it was implicit in the procedure that the parties had agreed that the amount of fees would be determined subsequent to the arbitrator's decision on the merits (192 Cal. App. 3d 62, 67) .

Rodrigues v. Keller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 170 Cal. Rptr. 349 , arose out of a dispute on dissolution of a partnership which was submitted to arbitration. One partner then sought to have the award vacated on various grounds and appealed after the lower court denied the petition.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that it is presumed that all issues submitted for decision in an arbitration have been passed on and resolved; and the burden of proving otherwise is on the party challenging the award. To discharge that burden, the party attacking the award must demonstrate that a particular claim was expressly raised at some time before the award, and that the arbitrator failed to consider it (113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 842) .

[b] Arbitrator Need Only Determine Necessary Issues

The facts and procedural background of Rodrigues v. Keller (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 170 Cal. Rptr. 349 , are discussed at [a], above. In affirming the ruling below, the court of appeal noted that the failure of an arbitrator to make a finding on an express claim does not invalidate the award so long as that award serves to settle the entire controversy, citing Sapp v. Barenfeld (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 515, 522-523, 212 P.2d 233 , discussed at § 20C.102[3][a]. The court of appeal described the point as a corollary of the proposition that arbitrators are not obliged to find facts or give reasons for their award. The court further cited as illustrative of the point the instance described in Sapp, that a decision simply that one of the parties should pay the othera sum of money is sufficiently determinative of all items embraced in the submission (113 Cal. App. 3d 838, 843) .

Cothron v. Interinsurance Exch. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 163 Cal. Rptr. 240 , arose out of a claim in arbitration under the plaintiff's automobile insurance policy for damages caused by an uninsured motorist. Ins. Code § 11580.2(f) requires that the policy provide that the determination as to whether the insurer is legally entitled to recover damages, and in what amount, must be made by agreement between the insured and insurer, and that any disagreement must be settled by arbitration. The arbitrator awarded the policy limit, less, as stipulated between the parties, the sum of medical expenses previously paid by the insurer. In fact, however, the insurer thereafter paid the claimant the full policy limit amount without deductions. The arbitrator found that the claimant would be entitled to recover from the uninsured motorist an amount far in excess of the policy limit. The claimant petitioned to vacate the arbitration award on the ground that the arbitrator did not decide the total amount of damages to which the claimant was legally entitled nor the correct amount of coverage under the policy. The trial court denied the petition.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the arbitrator's determination that the damages far exceeded the policy limit was sufficient to determine all of the questions submitted to the arbitrator which were necessary in order to determine the controversy (103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 859) . Reviewing the cases on vacating an award for failure to find on all issues submitted, it noted that the failure referred to is not failure to find facts but the failure to determine each issue necessary for the ultimate decision of the arbitrator, as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4, set forth at [c], below. Thus, failure to determine a particular issue submitted would not be error unless the determination was necessary to determine the entire controversy (103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 859-860) . Because an arbitrator in an uninsured motorist proceeding may not award an amount in excess of policy limits, an award of the entire policy limit determines the entire controversy and leaves nothing remaining for determination (103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 860) . The court speculated that in an award of less than the policy limit, the total amount of a claimant's damages might be relevant in arriving at the award figure and for certain related statutory purposes, but the fact of potential relevancy still would not mean in itself that the damages must be found separately (103 Cal. App. 3d 853, 861-862) .

[c] Arbitrators Decide Which Are "Necessary" Issues

Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4 provides that an award shall be in writing and signed by the arbitrators concurring therein. It shall include a determination of all the questions submitted to the arbitrators the decision of which is necessary in order to determine the controversy.

In Morris v. Zuckerman (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 686, 72 Cal. Rptr. 880, 446 P.2d 1000 , a dispute arose between successor parties to a real estate development agreement as to whether the defendant was required to execute certain documents to expedite a transaction. The controversy was submitted to arbitration, as provided for by the agreement. The arbitrators awarded the relief requested by plaintiff, but on certain conditions, including plaintiff's modification of the proposed transaction. Plaintiff petitioned to vacate the award mainly on the ground that the arbitrators had exceeded their powers [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)], but the superior court confirmed the award and denied the petition to vacate.

The Supreme Court, in affirming the judgment on plaintiff's appeal, noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4 required the award to include a determination of all the questions submitted to the arbitrators, the decision of which is necessary in order to determine the controversy. It is for the arbitrators to determine which issues are actually "necessary" to the ultimate decision. Any doubts as to the meaning or extent of an arbitration agreement are for the arbitrators and not the court to resolve. Although the court may vacate an award if it determines the arbitrators exceeded their powers and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision, the court may not substitute its judgment for that of the arbitrators (69 Cal. 2d 686, 690-691) . The controversy submitted clearly involved the enforcement of the original agreement, which spelled out the relationship of the parties to each other, and the parties advised the arbitrators that their contentions involved the issue of their relationships. They submitted evidence on these issues and argued for their adjudication, so that none of the parties could be heard to say the arbitrators exceeded their authority in deciding these issues (69 Cal. 2d 686, 694) .

Hall v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 , was an action by sellers of real property against the real estate brokers who had listed the property for sale. The brokers withheld from plaintiffs information about the financial problems of the buyer, who defaulted. The arbitrator made an award in plaintiffs' favor, which they sought to have confirmed. The trial court confirmed the award against one defendant and vacated the award as to a second defendant. As to the vacated portion of the award, the trial court determined that the arbitrator erred in finding that a partnership agreement existed between the parties when the pleadings did not raise the issue and that the arbitrator failed to allow rehearing so one broker could submit evidence that, under custom and practice in the real estate industry, an oral agreement between brokers to share fees does not create a partnership. Plaintiffs sought be writ of mandate to have the vacated portion of the award reinstated.

The court of appeal ordered that a writ of mandate be issued directing the trial court to set aside its order vacating the arbitration award and enter a new order confirming the award. Citing Felner v. Meritplan Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 540, 543-544, 86 Cal. Rptr. 178 [see § 20C.63[3][a]], the court stated that it is for the arbitrators to determine which issues were actually "necessary" to the ultimate decision (18 Cal. App. 4th 427). Thus, the arbitrator properly concluded that partnership was among the issues the complaint raised, because he was entitled to reach that conclusion either by broadly construing the agency allegations of the complaint to include partnership, or by submitting all the issues in the complaint, which incorporated the parties' agreement to submit all issues between them (18 Cal. App. 4th 427).

[d] Arbitrator May Determine Legal Issues as Distinct From Factual Ones

The facts and procedural background of Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890 , are discussed at Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling,§ 20.12[3][a]. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate commanding the trial court to stay the action against the individual defendants until arbitration was completed.

The court of appeal characterized as being without merit plaintiff's contention that an arbitrator cannot pass on legal issues as distinct from factual issues. Code Civ. Proc. § 1280(c) includes in its definition of "controversy" any question of law or fact or both. Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4 requires the award to include a determination of all questions submitted which are needed to determine the controversy. The grounds on which an award may be vacated, as enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2, make no reference to errors of law. The court concluded that the entire statutory arbitration scheme is designed to give the arbitrator the broadest possible powers, including the power to pass on legal issues as distinct from factual issues, so long as they are part of the controversy subject to arbitration (75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 210) .

[e] The Fact That An Award Is Not Enforceable as Judgment Is Not Grounds for Vacating the Award

In Mossman v. City of Oakdale (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764 , the court of appeals reversed the judgment of the superior court, affirmed the order that denied the motion to vacate the arbitration award on grounds that it failed to decide all issues presented to the arbitrator, affirmed the order that confirmed the award as written, and remanded to the trial court with instructions to remand to the arbitrator. The arbitrator's award indicated that an employee who alleged that the city had failed to follow its personnel rules by not allowing her to fill an existing vacancy in another department instead of being laid off was to be reinstated and made whole. However, the arbitrator did not order employee's reinstatement into a specific position and did not calculate the exact amount of lost wages and benefits to be paid to the employee.

The court held that the failure of a contractual arbitration award to be enforceable as a judgment does not itself provide grounds for vacating the award (Mossman v. City of Oakdale (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 90, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764). In this case, there was no question that the arbitrator awarded the employee all lost wages and benefits. The failure to name reinstatement to a specific position as the remedy, or make a calculation on the basis of findings made of the amount of damages, did not require vacating the award, because the principle of arbitral finality does not preclude the arbitrator from making a final disposition of a submitted matter in more than one award (Mossman v. City of Oakdale, 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 91, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764). The normal course of action when the financial terms of an award are unenforceable due to ambiguity is to remand the matter to the original arbitrator for clarification, and the court so ordered. Also, the fact that the arbitrator ordered the parties to file papers on any remaining issues within thirty days after the issuance of the award did not deprive the court of authority to remand, because the agreement expressly provided for continuing jurisdiction of the arbitrator to hear additional issues (Mossman v. City of Oakdale, 170 Cal. App. 4th 83, 92, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 764).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Arbitrators Decide Which Are "Necessary" Issues

The facts and procedural background of Jones v. Humanscale Corporation (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 881 , and the portion of the opinion considering the court's power to correct the award by striking the portion that required the former employee to pay half of the arbitral costs is discussed at § 20C.30[3][a]. Plaintiff claimed the arbitrator's consideration of the wage claims was in excess of his powers, because plaintiff had not asked for them to be determined. The court of appeal disagreed, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.4. Based on an admittedly partial record, the arbitrator made clear to the parties that he would determine plaintiff's wage claim, and did not exceed his powers by doing so. Determination of the wage claim was necessary because any wages owed would be an offset to damages owed by plaintiff to defendant for breach of the covenant not to compete (130 Cal. App. 4th 401, 413-414) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.102

§ 20C.102 Failure to Find on Issue That Was Not Expressly Raised and Supported

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATORS NEED NOT DETERMINE A CLAIM THAT HAS NOT BEEN EXPRESSLY RAISED AND SUPPORTED, SUCH AS _____ [specify, e.g., THE AMOUNT REQUIRED TO REPAIR THE ELECTRICAL SYSTEM].

A. Award Is Proper Despite Failure to Determine Claim That Was Not Expressly Raised and Supported. A claim of a party must be expressly raised before an award is made; if it is not supported by evidence but only implied from the facts, the arbitrator's failure to consider it is not reviewable in the absence of fraud (Sapp v. Barenfeld (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 515, 523, 524, 212 P.2d 233 ; Grill v. Hunt (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78-79, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the arbitrator improperly failed to find on an issue when that issue was not expressly raised or supported. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed, and if desired, the memorandum from § 20C.101, regarding the general power of arbitrators to determine which issues are necessary for resolution of the entire controversy.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out that the issue in question was not raised and that no evidence was presented at the arbitration proceeding to support the issue. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10, 20C.11, and 20C.101.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Is Proper Despite Failure to Determine Claim That Was Not Expressly Raised and Supported

Sapp v. Barenfeld (1949) 34 Cal. 2d 515, 212 P.2d 233 , arose out of a dispute between the owners of a building and the contractors they had hired to rehabilitate it after a fire. The owners had failed during the arbitration proceeding to introduce any evidence of the damage claim the arbitrators allegedly overlooked. When the contractors petitioned to confirm the award rendered after arbitration of the dispute, the owners asked that the award be vacated, contending in part that the arbitrators had failed to pass on that particular claim. The court vacated the award, and the contractors appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the order vacating the award and ordered the award confirmed. It stated that a claim of a party must be raised expressly at some time before the award. If it only can be implied from the facts alleged, the failure to consider it is only an error of judgment that in the absence of fraud or gross misconduct is not subject to judicial review (34 Cal. 2d 515, 523) . A party who asserts a claim in an arbitration proceeding must produce evidence in support of that claim; failing to do so, the party cannot attack the award on the ground the claim was not considered by the arbitrators (34 Cal. 2d 515, 524) .

Grill v. Hunt (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 73, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 768 , involved a sale of land from defendant to plaintiff. Plaintiff buyer, contrary to the contract, graded the lot, and in the process, damaged the leach field, thus decreasing the property's value. Thereafter, errors were discovered in engineering reports on which county certification of the lot was based. The parties agreed to mutual rescission, but the seller, although agreeing to rescission, refused to return any money. Plaintiff buyer brought suit for rescission and return of amounts owed by the seller. The parties submitted the action to binding arbitration in which the arbitrator found that rescission had been accomplished but also found that he could not adjust the equities with respect to the diminished value of the lot and the portion of the price the buyer had already paid, because of a failure of proof. On plaintiff's motion, the court vacated the arbitration award and the granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, awarding plaintiff the reimbursement he sought. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the arbitrator's failure to award restitution was neither error of law nor failure to determine an issue presented which would warrant vacation. Plaintiff had the burden of proving that the land returned had not decreased in value or had decreased by less than payments made to defendant, thus, no restitution could properly be awarded (6 Cal. App. 4th 73, 78-79) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.103

§ 20C.103 Arbitrator May Amend Award on Own Initiative to Correct Inadvertent Omission

[1] FORM

THE AWARD _____ [SHOULD BE CONFIRMED or NEED NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE AN ARBITRATOR HAS THE POWER TO AMEND AN AWARD ON HIS OR HER OWN INITIATIVE BEFORE THE ORIGINAL AWARD IS JUDICIALLY CONFIRMED, WHEN THE AMENDMENT IS NOT INCONSISTENT WITH THE OTHER FINDINGS IN THE AWARD AND DOES NOT CAUSE DEMONSTRABLE PREJUDICE TO ANY PARTY.

A. Amendment of Award by Arbitrator on Own Initiative. Although there is no statute granting an arbitrator the authority to do so, an arbitrator has the power to amend an award to include a finding on an issue omitted from the original award through the arbitrator's own mistake, inadvertence or excusable neglect if the amendment (Delaney v. Dahl (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 657-660, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 ; Century City Medical Plaza v. Sperling, Isaacs & Eisenberg (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 867, 881-883, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 ; A.M. Classic Const. v. Tri-Build Dev. Co. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1476-1478, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449):

- Is (requested and) made before judicial confirmation of the original award.

[- Is requested and acted on within the time allowed for the correction of an award by either statute or any controlling rules applicable to the arbitration;]

- Does not alter the merits and is not inconsistent with other findings on the merits of the controversy, and

- Does not cause demonstrable prejudice to the legitimate interest of any party.

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the arbitrator's correction of the award on his or her own initiative was proper when the correction was based on evidence already in the record or in the arbitrator's possession and relates to a matter the parties submitted to arbitration, but as to which the arbitrator inadvertently neglected to make a finding.

The second requirement in bulleted list in [1], above (that the request for amendment and amendment be made within the time required by statute for correction of an award) has been imposed by only one of the three cases cited, Century City Medical Plaza v. Sperling, Isaacs, & Eisenberg (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 881, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 . As discussed at [3][a], below, Delaney v. Dahl (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 659-660, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 specifically rejected the idea that the time requirement for correction of awards be imported.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, argument should set forth evidence adduced at the hearing that provided the basis for the amendment and should attach copies of any submission agreement or proposed decisions to establish that the subject matter of the correction was placed before the arbitrator by the parties.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of petition to confirm and arbitration award and of response to a petition to vacate an award, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For a form setting forth the ways and times in and within which a court may correct an arbitration award, see §§ 20C.12, 20C.30 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Award by Arbitrator on Own Initiative

Delaney v. Dahl (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 involved arbitration of a legal malpractice claim and a counterclaim for the fees allegedly earned in the primary action that resulted in an adverse judgment against plaintiffs in the malpractice action. The retainer agreement under which the primary action was litigated and the malpractice action was arbitrated related to representation of two corporations, parent and subsidiary, in the primary action. Delaney and another principal were joined in the primary action, and a supplemental retainer agreement was executed, which made clear that the principals would have no liability for attorney's fees: the corporations were providing their legal services. The retainer agreement included a provision stating that "[i]n the event attorney's fees and related costs are incurred to enforce this agreement or to resolve a dispute under this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover, in addition to damages allowed by law, reasonable attorney's fees and costs." The arbitration resulted in an initial award in favor of the attorneys and law firm, determining that they were the prevailing parties and entitled to recover their attorney's fees and costs incurred in the arbitration. After additional written briefs were submitted to the arbitrator on the issues of costs and fees and the law firm's right to recover from the principals individually, the arbitrator issued the final award which determined that the principals were personally liable for the law firm's attorney fees and costs incurred in the arbitration. In the body of the final award, dated March 9th, Delaney's name was omitted from the relevant paragraph under the heading "AWARD," which stated that the corporations take nothing on their claim for legal malpractice. On April 1 and 2, the law firm requested in writing that the arbitrator amend or correct the March 9 final award to add Delaney's name to paragraph 4 of the "AWARD." The arbitrator issued a corrected final award dated April 7, apparently without having received Delaney's opposition to the law firm's request. The parties agreed the arbitrator should withdraw the April 7 corrected final award and consider Delaney's opposition, which he did. On April 28, the arbitrator issued a new final award which listed Delaney's name in the relevant paragraph of the "AWARD" section, indicating the arbitrator also found against Delaney with regard to the malpractice claim. The corrected award also included a discussion of the arbitrator's authority to change the March 9 award, stating the earlier omission of Delaney's name was a mistake and not an attempt to leave unresolved Delaney's malpractice claim. The law firm petitioned to confirm the final award or, in the alternative, to correct or amend the March 9 award. Delaney opposed the petition to confirm and filed a petition to vacate all three of the awards issued by the arbitrator--the March 9 award, the April 7 corrected award, and the April 28 final award. The April 28 final award was confirmed and judgment entered thereon. Delaney appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The portion of the opinion addressing the attorney's fees award is discussed at § 20C.110[3][a]. Regarding the arbitrator's authority to amend the award to include Delaney as taking nothing on his malpractice claim, the court of appeal noted that while an amendment such as this one is not within an arbitrator's statutory authority under Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6, as recognized by A.M. Classic Const. v. Tri-Build Dev. Co. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1478, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449 , (discussed below) an arbitrator can amend an award to include matters inadvertently omitted if the amendment is consistent with other findings on the merits and does not prejudice the legitimate interests of a party (99 Cal. App. 4th 647,657-658) . Delaney also contended that the amendment was untimely because it was not sought within 10 days of, nor made within 30 days of, receipt of a signed copy of the March 9 final award. The court of appeal acknowledged that those time requirements were imposed on corrections pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1284 and also on amendments under Century City Medical Plaza v. Sperling, Isaacs, & Eisenberg (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 881, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 , (discussed below) but concluded that as long as the amendment was made before the award was confirmed, the additional time requirements were unwarranted (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 659-660) . A.M. Classic, the first case to validate an amendment of an award by the arbitrator, did not import the time requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1284. The court of appeal said the nature of the change is reason to differentiate between correction and amendment of an award in terms of the time within which either must be made and that it would be irrational, a harsh result serving no legitimate purpose, and contrary to the policies recognized in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 to discard all the time and money spent by the parties and deny an arbitrator the authority to complete his or her task (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 659-660) .

Although Delaney contended otherwise, the court of appeal found there was sufficient evidence to conclude the amendment was made to correct an inadvertent mistake and did not indicate an attempt to leave Delaney's malpractice claim unresolved. In A.M. Classic, the arbitrator submitted a declaration to the trial court, stating that the failure to address an issue in the original award was inadvertent. In Century City Medical Plaza, there was a question whether the need for an amended award was due to the arbitrator's inadvertent omission of an issue, and the matter was remanded for factual findings as to the reason for the change. Here, the court of appeal noted, the award itself discussed and explained the reason for the amendment and there was no evidence to the contrary (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 660) .

Century City Medical Plaza v. Sperling, Isaacs & Eisenberg (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 605 was a landlord-tenant dispute arbitrated pursuant to a stipulation that provided the arbitrator could award interest, attorney's fees, and costs to the prevailing party if authorized by the contract or the parties' statutory rights. The original award was in favor of the landlord, but did not award attorney's fees, interest, or costs. After entry of the original award, the arbitrator made a second award, denominated the "Final Award," that awarded costs, interest, and attorney's fees to the landlord. The trial court confirmed the original award and vacated the second award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) on the ground that the arbitrator exceeded his powers by issuing the second award. Tenant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, directing the trial court to hold an evidentiary hearing and to confirm the second award if the evidence established that the arbitrator's failure to include an award of attorney's fees, costs, and interest in the original award was due to an inadvertent omission and that the modification or amendment (1) was requested and done in a timely manner prior to the confirmation of the original award, (2) did not alter the merits of the result set out in the original award, and (3) occasioned no prejudice to the legitimate interests of any party (86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 867) . The court discussed A.M. Classic Const. v. Tri-Build Dev. Co. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449 [see below], and said the critical distinction is the one between an inadvertent omission and the correction of an error in an intended ruling. An arbitrator's power to "correct" a factual or legal error in an award is limited and circumscribed by specific statutory language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6 (86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 877) . The court of appeal agreed with A.M. Classic, however, that when an omission in the original award was the product of inadvertence or mistake, it would elevate form over substance to deny the arbitrator the authority to complete his or her task by issuing an amended award including the missing findings (86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 880) . The court of appeal stated the requirements for issuance of a supplemental award slightly differently than did A.M. Classic, saying the requirements were that the supplemental award (86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 881) :

- Must be requested and acted on within the time allowed for the correction of an award by either statute or any controlling rules applicable to the arbitration,

- Must be made prior to confirmation of the original award (so that they both may be considered for confirmation together as would have been the case but for the inadvertent omission),

- Is not inconsistent with other findings on the merits of the controversy, and

- Does not cause demonstrable prejudice to the legitimate interests of any party.

Recognizing that whether those four conditions has been satisfied raised factual questions, as to which the burden of proof must be borne by the party seeking to sustain the supplemental or final award, the court remanded for determination of those issues (86 Cal. App. 4th 865, 881-883) .

A.M. Classic Const. v. Tri-Build Dev. Co. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1478, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 449 , was a suit by a subcontractor against the contractor and the school district for which the building was built. All parties stipulated to arbitration. The arbitrator issued an award against the contractor and in favor of the subcontractor, which was sent to all parties. Before any party had moved to confirm the award, subcontractor's counsel wrote a letter to the arbitrator and pointed out that the award failed to make any finding as to the stop notice cause of action against the school district, which was the only way the subcontractor could collect from the school district, and that the proposed judgments submitted by all parties included findings on the stop notice cause of action. Four days later, subcontractor's counsel called the arbitrator, who acknowledged the mistake, and receipt of the letter, and stated that he would make an amended award in a few days. In determining whether the amended award was proper, the court of appeal noted the following:

- All the information the arbitrator needed to make the award on the stop notice cause of action was already available in the record and in the arbitrator's notes (70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1475) ;

- Although the arbitrator should have informed the other parties of the ex parte communication and of the fact that he was going to amend the award, because there was no showing that the arbitrator considered evidence outside the original record [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2(g)], there was no fraud,corruption, undue influence, or misconduct of the arbitrator so as to require vacating the amended award under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a), (b), or (c) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1), (2), or (3)] (70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1476) ;

- This was not a situation that came within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.6(a) or (c), relating to correction of awards, because the mistake was more than a miscalculation or a mistake as to form (70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1476) ;

- Older cases holding that an incomplete award is a nullity and must be vacated and the entire matter re-arbitrated were to be disregarded as inconsistent with the current California Arbitration Act and the views expressed in Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 12, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 ; that to discard all the time and money spent on the first arbitration or to deny arbitrators the power to complete their tasks would be irrational and elevate form over substance (70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1476-1478) ; and

- That the opinion should not be read to condone the ex parte communications by A.M. Classic's counsel, which were inappropriate and under other circumstances might require vacation of the award (70 Cal. App. 4th 1470, 1478) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.104

§ 20C.104 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Failing to Award Discovery Sanctions

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MAY BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE FAILING TO AWARD DISCOVERY SANCTIONS IS WITHIN THE ARBITRATOR'S POWER.

A. Power Not to Impose Discovery Sanction. Code of Civil Procedure, Section 1283.05(b) gives an arbitrator the power, but not the duty, to impose discovery sanctions. Thus, it is not in excess of an arbitrator's power so as to require vacating an award for an arbitrator to order that a resisting party _____ [specify, e.g., respond to requests for admission without objection] instead of _____ [specify the sanction that was not imposed, e.g., deeming the unanswered requests to have been admitted] as would have been required in a court [if desired specify code section, e.g., under Code of Civil Procedure § 2033(k)] (Code of Civil Procedure §§ 2033.280, 2033.290, effective July 1, 2005; Alexander v. Blue Cross of California (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition or response seeking to confirm an award to support the contention that an arbitrator does not exceed his or her powers by failing to impose a discovery sanction that a court would be required to impose in similar circumstances.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to confirm the award.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should show the facts indicating the circumstances involved.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Power Not to Impose Discovery Sanction

Alexander v. Blue Cross of California (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431), arose out of a medical malpractice action in which plaintiff alleged that Blue Cross was negligent in investigation of her doctor, whose examination of her she alleged was sexually motivated and inappropriate. In the course of the arbitration, The arbitrator decided that because of its delay in responding, Blue Cross had waived all objections to nearly all the requests for discovery, but did not impose the sanction requested by plaintiff of treating the requests for admissions as admitted. Code Civ. Proc. § 2033(k) (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2033.280, 2033.290, effective July 1, 2005) would have required a court faced with the same conduct to deem the requests admitted. The arbitrator ruled for defendant. The award was confirmed, despite plaintiff's petition to vacate it. Plaintiff appealed the ensuing judgment, claiming in part, that the arbitrator exceeded his powers by failing to consider the requests admitted.

The court of appeal affirmed. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1283.1 and 1283.05 grant arbitrators broad authority to order discovery in certain types of arbitration proceedings. Both sections applied in this case, and the arbitrator ordered discovery pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.05. Code Civ. Proc. § 1283.05(b) gives an arbitrator the "power ... to enforce the rights, remedies, procedures, duties, liabilities, and obligations of discovery by the imposition of the same terms, conditions, consequences, liabilities, sanctions, and penalties as can be or may be imposed in like circumstances in a civil action by a superior court of this state." The court of appeal said that it is one thing for the Legislature to give an arbitrator the power to impose the discovery sanctions available to a trial court in the same circumstances but quite another for the Legislature to say that the arbitrator must impose the precise sanctions a trial court would impose. The Legislature did not go so far as to require the arbitrator to impose the sanctions a trial court could impose. Therefore, the arbitrator did not exceed his powers in failing to impose the sanction requested by plaintiff (88 Cal. App. 4th 1082).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.105

§ 20C.105 Arbitrator Not Court Decides Whether Agreement Impliedly Prevents Classwide Arbitration

[1] FORM

IT IS FOR THE ARBITRATOR NOT THE COURT TO DETERMINE WHETHER A PARTICULAR ARBITRATION AGREEMENT IMPLIEDLY PREVENTS CLASSWIDE ARBITRATION.

A. Arbitrator Not Court Decides Whether Agreement Impliedly Prevents Classwide Arbitration. When an arbitration clause is silent on the issue of classwide arbitration, the question of whether it permits classwide arbitration is one for the arbitrator to decide. The decision is a threshold issue that concerns arbitration procedure. The relevant question is what kind of arbitration proceeding the parties agreed to. [Thus, an arbitration agreement that provides that one party will choose the arbitrator, with the concurrence of the other, may impliedly prevent classwide arbitration. The members of the class can be implied to concur in the choice of arbitrator if they do not opt out of the class; but, it can be argued, the party who chose the arbitrator to resolve the initial dispute with the named opposing party or parties did not get to chose that arbitrator to resolve its disputes with the rest of the class] (Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Bazzle (2003) 539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 2407-2409, 156 L. Ed. 2d 414 ; Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1365-1366, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 ; Garcia v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 301-303, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted to support the contention that it is the arbitrator, not the court, that is empowered to determine whether a particular arbitration agreement impliedly prevents classwide arbitration. This authority may be included in a memorandum at any stage of the proceedings--a petition to compel arbitration [see, e.g, Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.10]. or a motion to confirm or vacate an award [see, e.g, §§ 20C.10-20C.21]. The bracketed portion of the authority sets forth the particular arbitration provision at issue in Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Bazzle (2003) 539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 156 L. Ed. 2d 414 . Counsel should use it or not depending on whether it is similar enough to the arbitration agreement involved in counsel's case to aid his or her argument. This form does not provide a complete memorandum, but may be combined with memoranda relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the arbitrator, not the court, interprets the agreement to decide if it prevents classwide arbitration.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, the argument should quote or refer to the description of matters to be arbitrated, any provision specifically addressing the matter of classwide arbitration (or the lack thereof), and the other provisions claimed to impliedly prevent or require classwide arbitration. It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations.

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of petition to compel arbitration that may be supported by this memorandum, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Not Court Decides Whether Agreement Impliedly Prevents Classwide Arbitration

Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Bazzle (2003) 539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 156 L. Ed. 2d 414 , began as two separate actions by consumers under substantially identical loan agreements that were governed by South Carolina law and contained arbitration clauses governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA). Plaintiffs sought damages for defendant's failure to provide them with certain documents and disclosures required by South Carolina statutes. The agreements further provided that arbitration would be conducted by "one arbitrator selected by us/Green Tree with consent of you/the Buyer or Buyers above signed." The arbitration provision applied to "disputes, claims, or controversies arising from or relating to this contract or the relationships which result from this contract" and granted the arbitrator "all powers provided by the law and the contract. These powers shall include all legal and equitable remedies, including, but not limited to, money damages, declaratory relief, and injunctive relief." Plaintiffs in the first action (Lackey and Buggs) sought class certification; and Green Tree moved to compel arbitration. The trial court denied arbitration, but on appeal, the South Carolina Court of Appeals reversed. The parties chose an arbitrator, who certified a class in arbitration in December, 1998, and ultimately awarded that class $9,200,00 in statutory damages and attorneys' fees. The trial court confirmed the award, and Green Tree appealed, contending, among other things, that class arbitration was not legally permissible under the agreement. Plaintiffs in the Bazzle action moved for class certification; and defendant moved to compel arbitration. In that action, the trial court certified the class and compelled arbitration. Green Tree, with Bazzles' consent, selected the arbitrator, in fact the same person who was selected as arbitrator in the first action. In the Bazzle action, the arbitrator awarded the class $10,935,000 in damages plus attorneys fees. The award was confirmed. Green Tree appealed, again contending that class arbitration was not legally permissible under the agreement. The South Carolina Supreme Court withdrew both proceedings from the Court of Appeals, assumed jurisdiction, consolidated the proceedings, and held that the contracts were silent on the issue of class arbitration, that they consequently authorized class arbitration, and that class arbitration was proper. The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari to consider whether that holding was consistent with the FAA.

The Untied States Supreme Court reversed, and remanded, without addressing the issue of whether the FAA allowed or prohibited class arbitration, holding instead that the matter was one of contract interpretation, which the parties' intended be resolved by the arbitrator, not the court. Thus, on remand, the arbitrator was to decide the question of class certification. Green Tree contended that the arbitration provision prohibited class certification because in a class action it would not get to independently select the arbitrator who considered claims of the class members other than the named plaintiffs. The unnamed plaintiff class members consented to that arbitrator by agreeing to proceed in the class action, but Green Tree's selection of the arbitrator was meant only to apply to the claims of the named plaintiff. The arbitration clause stated that all "disputes, claims, or controversies arising from or relating to this contract or the relationships which result from this contract" would be arbitrated. The majority opinion characterized the relevant question as what kind of arbitration proceeding the parties agreed to, a question that did not concern a state statute or judicial proceeds, but like the issue in Volt Information Sciences v. Board of Trustees (1989) 489 U.S. 468, 109 S. Ct. 1248, 103 L. Ed. 2d 488 , a question of contract interpretation and arbitration procedures. Although the arbitrator chosen in the Lakcey action wrote that 'I determined that a class action should proceed in arbitration based on my careful review of the broadly drafted arbitration clause prepared by Green Tree," the majority believed the arbitrator's decision reflected the court's interpretation of the contracts rather than the arbitrator's and remanded for the arbitrator to decide again whether to proceed with class arbitration (539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 2406-2408) .

Justice Stevens, who joined in the majority opinion so there would be a controlling judgment of the court, wrote a concurring and dissenting opinion in which he reasoned that South Carolina law governed the agreement and allowed class-action arbitration if not prohibited by the applicable arbitration agreement. Because this agreement was silent on the issue, the South Caroline Supreme Court reached the correct conclusion as a matter of law. The fact that the interpretation of the contract arguably should have been made by the arbitrator made no difference, because petitioner challenged only the merits of the decision to order class arbitration without claiming that the decision was made by the wrong decision-maker. Thus, there was no need to remand the case to correct that possible error (539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 2408-2409) .

Three dissenting Justices believed the interpretation of the contract was a matter for the court to decide and that the contract clearly prohibited class arbitration. Therefore, the Supreme Court of South Carolina was wrong when it ordered class arbitration. This dissent believed the choice of arbitrator is as important a component of the arbitration agreement as is the choice of what is to be submitted to that arbitrator, and thus, is not a procedural matter for the arbitrator to decide, but a matter for the court to decide. Although the FAA does not prohibit parties from choosing to proceed on a class-wide basis, these parties chose not to do so, and to enforce the arbitration agreement other than as written was not within the power of the South Carolina Supreme Court (539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 2409-2411) .

Judge Thomas would have affirmed the judgement of the South Carolina Supreme Court on the ground that the FAA does not apply in state courts, and thus, could not be a ground for pre-empting a state court's interpretation of a private arbitration agreement (539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 2411) .

The California Supreme Court held in Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 , that the arbitration award should be vacated and the case remanded to the arbitration panel for proper determination on the basis of contractual interpretation and applicable arbitration rules whether arbitration could proceed on a class basis. The portion of the decision addressing the general rule that judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is not available is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a1], above. The portion of the decision addressing the court's ruling that the preclusion in the Federal Arbitration Act on contractual expansion of judicial review of the merits of arbitration awards is discussed in § 20C.194[3][b], below. The portion of the decision addressing the ability of the parties and the procedure to contractually expand the scope of judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is discussed in § 20C.194[3][a], below. Having determined its authority to review the merits of the award, the court turned to the merits. It noted that two of the three arbitrators decided the proponents of class arbitration could pursue arbitration on a classwide basis, although the parties' contract did not mention classwide arbitration. The Court of Appeal agreed with this determination. The contract called for the arbitrators to apply California substantive law, while following the procedural requirements of AAA rules and the Federal Arbitration Act. The Court held firstly that the arbitrators improperly relied on caselaw concerning adhesion contracts, because those decisions only addressed the power of the courts to order class arbitration in the face of unconscionable contract provisions, and there was no adhesion contract in question. Secondly, the Court found error in that the arbitrators did not address squarely the fact that the applicable AAA rules permitted class arbitration where the arbitration agreement is silent on the issue of classwise arbitration, as was the case here. Looking to the plurality opinion in Bazzle (discussed in the preceding paragraphs) calling for arbitrator determination of the availability of classwise arbitration, the Court decided to "permit the arbitration panel to reconsider the availability of classwide arbitration as a matter of contract interpretation and AAA arbitration procedure" (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1364-1366) .

Plaintiff in Garcia v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 190* subscribed to digital home satellite television services through the network of independent dealers maintained by defendant, DIRECTV. Plaintiff filed a class action demand for arbitration with the American Arbitration Association. Before the arbitration was heard, plaintiff filed a class action lawsuit, in which defendant petitioned for arbitration. The trial court found that it, and not the arbitrator, should determine class action issues (including whether classwide arbitration was prohibited by the terms of the parties' agreement(s) [see Blue Cross of California v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 42, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 779] . The agreement was silent on the issue of classwide arbitration and did not explicitly prohibit it. Claims seeking less than $250,000 were to be decided by one arbitrator. Other matters would be decided by a panel of three arbitrators: one chosen by each party and the third selected by the other two. Matters exempted from arbitration were defendant's trade secrets, the validity of defendant's right to offer its services to the public, and any claims seeking injunctions, attachments, writs of possession, or other provisional remedies. The trial court found that classwide arbitration was not prohibited by the agreement, and granted defendant's motion to compel arbitration. The court of appeal originally affirmed that decision, but the United States Supreme Court vacated that decision when it granted certiorari in Green Tree Financial Corp. v. Bazzle (2003) 539 U.S. 444, 123 S. Ct. 2402, 156 L. Ed. 2d 414 (discussed above; hereinafter "Green Tree"). After the United States Supreme Court issued its opinion in Green Tree, that Court remanded the case to the California Court of Appeal for further consideration in light of Green Tree [see Hughes Elec. Corp. v. Garcia (2003) 124 S. Ct. 102, 157 L. Ed.2d 12 (remand)].

The court of appeal reversed and remanded to the trial court with directions to remand the matter to the arbitrator (115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 304) , stating that indeed Green Tree has changed California law on the subject: in cases governed by the Federal Arbitration Act, the arbitrator, not the court, must decide whether a particular agreement prohibits classwide arbitration (115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 298) . Plaintiff pointed out that the arbitration provision under review purported to afford judicial review of any arbitral decision for errors of law, an attempt to re-write California statues that has rendered at least some arbitration provisions totally invalid under California law [see, e.g., Crowell v. Downey Community Hospital Foundation (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 730, 748-749, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 (discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.96[3][a] and [b])], but the court of appeal did not address the issue. The court of appeal agreed with defendant that Green Tree was dispositive: The propriety of classwide arbitration was a "threshold issue" for the arbitrator to decide (115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 301-302) . The court of appeal noted that the arbitrator would be free to decide either way and that there were unresolved issues as to the application of the doctrine of unconscionability under the Federal Arbitration Act [see AT&T v. Ting (9th Cir. 2003) 319 F.3d 1126, 1150, n.14 (prohibition on classwide consumer arbitration is so one-sided as to be dispositive of unconscionability issue); Ingle v. Circuit City Stores, Inc. (9th Cir. 2003) 328 F.3d 1165, 1175-1176 (doctrine of unconscionability is not preempted by Federal Arbitration Act, but consistent with it; discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.91[3][b])]. The court of appeal also noted that some of these issues were before the California Supreme Court in Discover Bank v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 326 , rev. granted April 9, 2003, S113725 (115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 304 n.4).

The concurrence found it unfortunate that the court of appeal issued an opinion rather than just dismissing the appeal and sending the matter to the trial court with a citation to Green Tree. The concurrence felt the majority opinion implied that the trial judge was incapable of reading Green Tree and following it without some amplification from the court of appeal. Further, the concurrence pointed out, there was nothing to review; there was nothing properly before the court of appeal (115 Cal. App. 4th 297, 304-305) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.106

§ 20C.106 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Determining Matter in Telephonic Pre-Hearing Conference

[1] FORM

WHEN THE PARTIES HAVE ADOPTED A SET OF RULES TO GOVERN THEIR ARBITRATION THAT PROVIDES FOR A TELEPHONIC PRE-HEARING CONFERENCE, THE ARBITRATOR HAS THE POWER TO DISPOSE OF THE MATTER AT SUCH A CONFERENCE.

A. Arbitrator May Determine Matter in Prehearing Telephonic Conference. Under an arbitration agreement and submission agreement which stated that the arbitration was to be governed by the _____ [name of organization, e.g., National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD)] _____ [name of applicable rules, e.g., Code of Arbitration Procedure], Section _____ [specify, e.g., 10321] of which provides for telephonic pre-hearing conference, arbitrators do not exceed their powers by disposing of the entire matter at such a pre-hearing conference (Reed v. Mutual Service Corporation (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1369, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524 .)

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted to support the contention that it an arbitrator did not exceed his or her powers by disposing of the entire matter to be arbitrated at a pre-hearing telephonic conference. Of course, the authority is only applicable if the parties have chosen that their arbitration be conducted in accordance with a set of rules that provides for telephonic prehearing conferences and is most suitable when a single issue, such as a statute of limitations disposes of the entire. This form does not provide a complete memorandum, but may be combined with memoranda relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the arbitrator was empowered to dispose of the entire matter at a telephonic pre-hearing conference.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, the argument should set forth the portions of the arbitration agreement and/or submission agreement adopting the rules for arbitration and the particular rule that provides for telephonic pre-hearing conferences. It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations.

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see CodeCiv. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to correcting, confirming, and vacating arbitration awards, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator May Determine Matter in Prehearing Telephonic Conference

Plaintiff/investors Reed v. Mutual Service Corporation (2003) 106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 131 Cal. Rptr. 2d 524 , submitted claims against their securities brokers to arbitration under submission agreements stating that they had read the procedures and rules of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) relating to arbitration, and acknowledging that the proceeding would be governed by the NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure. Rule 10321 of that Code provides for a telephonic pre-hearing conference. Rule 10304 of that Code provides that no claim is eligible for arbitration if six years have elapsed from date of the occurrence or event giving rise to the dispute. Plaintiffs acknowledged their claims were barred by the 6-year limitation. Defendants moved in the arbitration proceeding to dismiss the arbitration based on the 6-year limitation period. Plaintiffs opposed that motion. A panel of three arbitrators conducted a telephonic pre-hearing conference in which the parties' attorneys, but not the parties themselves, participated. Based on that conference, and the pleadings, testimony, and evidence presented at that conference, the arbitrators issued an award granting the motion to dismiss the claim with prejudice. Defendants petitioned to confirm the award. Plaintiffs petitioned to vacate it, in part on the ground the that by deciding the matter based solely on the parties' pleadings and documentary evidence, and without a formal arbitration hearing, the arbitrators exceeded their powers. The trial court confirmed the award. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1373) . NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure, Rule 10321 provides that, at the request of a party or an arbitrator, a telephonic pre-hearing conference must be convened to give the parties an opportunity to exchange documents, information, witness lists, etc., and to address "any other matters which will expedite the arbitration proceedings." Rulings on issues raised in the course of the pre-hearing conference may be issued by one or more members of the arbitration panel, and "shall be made upon the papers submitted by the parties, unless the arbitrator calls a hearing" (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1366-1367) The court considered NASD Arbitrators' Training Manual, which provided that any party could file a dispositive motion--that is, a motion to dismiss all or part of a claim--prior to hearing (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1367) . The court was not swayed by the failure of the NASD's Code to make explicit provision for the (pre-arbitration hearing) motion at issue here. The lack of explicit authorization does not mean dispositive motions are precluded. Implicit in the arbitrators' express power to deem a claim ineligible for arbitration is the corresponding authority to make that determination in advance of and without the necessity for a full hearing on the merits (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1368) . In both their initial agreement to arbitrate and in the uniform submission agreements plaintiffs signed at the time they instituted the arbitration proceedings, they declared their familiarity with and their agreement to be bound by NASD's arbitration procedures (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1368-1369) . The court concluded that was no merit to the plaintiffs' contention that, by disposing of their case at the pre-hearing stage, the arbitrators exceeded their authority and "employed a decision-making procedure to which [they] never agreed, and which is expressly prohibited by the arbitration agreement" (106 Cal. App. 4th 1359, 1369) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.107

§ 20C.107 Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Determining Second Dispute Under Same Agreement

[1] FORM

THE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT COULD BE INTERPRETED TO GIVE THE ARBITRATOR AUTHORITY TO DECIDE A SECOND DISPUTE ARISING UNDER IT.

A. Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Deciding Second Dispute. An arbitrator who issued an award in an initial dispute between the parties does not exceed his or her powers by hearing and deciding a second arbitration when the parties' agreement provided that all disputes of any nature arising from the agreement would be settled by one arbitrator _____ [show how the second dispute is connected to the agreement or to the first dispute, e.g., the first award denied an accounting, without prejudice, and the second arbitration dealt with expenses and charges that would be considered in an accounting] (Patchett v. Bergamot Station, Ltd. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1392, 1395-1398, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 941).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a motion to confirm or oppose a motion to vacate a second arbitration award by the same arbitrator when the arbitration agreement provided for a single arbitrator to determine all disputes under it. This form is not intended to be a complete memorandum but should be combined it with authority relating to the particular procedural context involved, such as a motion to confirm or vacate an award [see, e.g., Forms §§ 20C.10, 20C.11]. Counsel may also want to include memoranda from § 20C.90[1] to establish that even if the arbitrator was mistaken in interpreting the agreement to empower him or her to decide the second arbitration, that mistake would amount only to an error of law, which would notprevent confirmation of the second award.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument must show the particular language in the arbitration agreement providing for a single arbitrator to determine all disputes thereunder. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notices (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

For forms and discussion relating to confirming and vacating arbitration awards generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Deciding Second Dispute

Patchett v. Bergamot Station, Ltd. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 941 , arose from arbitration between former partners. Their first dispute was settled and memorialized by an agreement that allowed defendant to buy out plaintiff's interest in their galleries and allowed plaintiff to occupy a portion of the premises rent free, although he was responsible for paying common area maintenance charges. The settlement provided that disputes of any nature arising from the settlement, including the arbitrability of any claim, would be "settled by one arbitrator, who shall be a mutually-acceptable retired Judge of the California Superior or appellate courts." In February, 2001, plaintiff demanded arbitration of two issues relating to occupancy and maintenance charges. The parties agreed on Judge Thomas as the arbitrator. That arbitration ended with an award declaring plaintiff's right to hold special events on the property, but denying him monetary damages or an accounting of management charges on the ground of insufficient evidence. In July, 2001, plaintiff served a renewed demand for arbitration, seeking declaration regarding the components of maintenance charges he was obligated to pay. Defendant objected to the re-litigation of the matter and would not agree to Judge Thomas serving as the arbitrator in any new arbitration proceeding. Judge Thomas granted plaintiff's motion for renewed arbitration, and denied defendant's objection to his serving as the arbitrator, finding that the June 2001 award by its terms did not preclude a further determination of maintenance charges issues. Further, the original settlement agreement did not provide for a different arbitrator to hear each new issue. When defendant still resisted the second arbitration, plaintiff brought a petition to compel the second arbitration before Judge Robert W. Thomas, and a petition to confirm the first arbitration award. Both were granted by the trial court and defendant's petition to correct the first award to state the maintenance charges claim was denied with prejudice, and to confirm the award as corrected, was denied. Defendant applied to the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition or mandate to set aside that decision. Defendant appealed, and after more than a year, that appeal was dismissed pursuant to stipulation. The second arbitration resulted in a monetary award for plaintiff based on findings that he was being charged maintenance fees beyond those charged other tenants. After that award was confirmed, defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1399) . Although the court found the use of the term "renewed" unfortunate, that did not affect the underlying facts (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1395) , which supported the arbitrator's authority to determine the second arbitration on both procedural and substantive grounds (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1396) . Procedurally, the court of appeal declined to revisit the appeal, saying that had defendant wished to preserve its objections, it should have expressly delineated the basis for the requested dismissal. Not having done so, defendant was bound by the order authorizing the second arbitration, and Judge Thomas to hear it (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1396). As a substantive matter, the arbitrator interpreted the settlement agreement to mean that the arbitrator mutually selected by the parties was to decide all claims. As a matter of law, the court of appeal could not say that the arbitrator's construction of the agreement was erroneous. While the arbitrator's interpretation of the arbitration clause did not, strictly speaking, address the question of arbitrability--which involves the arbitrator's authority over the subject matter of the dispute--it was substantively no different, as it necessarily concerned the individual arbitrator's jurisdiction over the dispute. An agreement that grants the arbitrator the power to decide any controversy "of whatever nature ... in relation to the interpretation" of the agreement, expressly including the jurisdictional issue o f arbitrability, logically and necessarily gives the arbitrator the power to interpret the agreement's provisions governing arbitral selection (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1397). Defendant insisted that the language "shall be settled by one arbitrator, who shall be a mutually-acceptable retired Judge" did not mean that the parties would pick onearbitrator "for life," but merely that each dispute would be settled by one arbitrator rather than three, and that a new arbitrator (or further consent) was required for each new dispute. While the language of the arbitration clause may be susceptible to the meaning defendant urged, it is equally susceptible to the meaning given it by the arbitrator. Even if the interpretation of the agreement was not as defendant contended, an arbitrator does not exceed his powers because of errors of fact or law (143 Cal. App. 4th 1390, 1398) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.108

§ 20C.108 Arbitrator Does Not Exceed Powers by Excusing Futile Performance of a Condition

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR DID NOT EXCEED _____ [HIS or HER] POWERS BY EXCUSING FUTILE PERFORMANCE OF A CONDITION

A. Arbitrator Has Inherent Power to Excuse Performance That Would Be Futile. Unless there is an explicit provision prohibiting excuse of conditions, an arbitrator has inherent power to excuse the performance of a condition that would be futile, for instance, giving notice of a breach that could not be cured. An arbitrator has the authority to find the facts, interpret the contract, and award any relief rationally related to his or her factual findings and contractual interpretation. This includes the authority to allow for equitable excusal of the notice-and-cure condition by making a factual finding that notice would have been an idle act (Gueyffier v. Ann Summers, Ltd. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 1179, -- Cal. Rpr. 3d --, 184 P.3d 739).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be used to support a petition or response seeking to confirm an arbitration award on the ground that the arbitrator had inherent power to excuse performance of a condition that would have been futile. This form is not intended to be a complete memorandum. Counsel should combine it with authority from § 20C.10 or § 20C.11.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument must show that performance of the excused condition would have been futile and that the arbitration agreement did not explicitly prevent the arbitrator from excusing performance. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Has Inherent Power to Excuse Performance That Would Be Futile

Gueyffier v. Ann Summers, Ltd*. (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 1179* ,--Cal. Rpr. 3d--, 184 P.3d 739 , involved a dispute under a franchise agreement and a failed attempted store opening. Each party claimed that the other had breached their agreement. As the contract required, the matter was arbitrated, and the arbitrator found for Gueyffier (plaintiff/franchisee), concluding that defendant had failed to provide promised training, guidance and assistance. In the written award, the arbitrator found that for plaintiff to have given defendant written notice and at least 60 days to cure these breaches, as the contract provided, would have been an idle act because the breaches were not curable. The superior court confirmed the award but the court of appeal revered, finding the arbitrator had violated the contract's express prohibition against an arbitrator modifying or changing a material term of the contract, thereby exceeding his powers within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4) by excusing plaintiff's performance of the notice-and-cure clause. Plaintiff petitioned for review and the Supreme Court granted it.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding that absent an express and unambiguous limitation in the contract or the submission to arbitration, an arbitrator has the authority to find the facts, interpret the contract, and award any relief rationally related to his or her factual findings and contractual interpretation (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1182, 1188-1189) . All the arbitrator did here was to allow for equitable excusal of the notice-and-cure condition or by making a factual finding that notice would have been an idle act. The award therefore was not subject to vacation (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1182). An arbitration agreement ordinarily contemplates that the arbitrator will have the power to decide any question of contract interpretation, historical fact or general law necessary, in the arbitrator's understanding of the case, to reach a decision. That includes the possibility the arbitrator may err in deciding some aspect of the case. Arbitrators do not ordinarily exceed their contractually created powers simply by reaching an erroneous conclusion on a contested issue of law or fact, and arbitralawards (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1184) . Defendant and the court of appeal claimed that the parties did effectively limit the arbitrator's powers by stating in the agreement that an arbitrator would have no power to modify or change any material term of the contract, which included the notice-and-cure provision. The Supreme Court disagreed, saying that the agreement did not unambiguously prohibit the arbitrator from excusing performance of a contractual condition when the arbitrator concluded performance would have been an idle act. To excuse performance of a contract term in a specific factual setting is not, in ordinary usage at least, to modify or change the term (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1185) . The no-modification clause did not explicitly and unambiguously bar the arbitrator from deciding that the notice-and-cure provision was inapplicable on the facts of the case as he found them. The no-modification clause could perhaps be interpreted as also precluding equitable excusal of a condition, but the arbitrator evidently did not adopt such an interpretation. As construction of the contract was for the arbitrator, not the courts, we cannot say he exceeded his powers by failing to adopt a particular interpretation of the agreement (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1186). The Court discussed other cases relied on by the parties and concluded that arbitrator did not exceed his powers by declining, on equitable grounds, to enforce the notice-and-cure condition against plaintiff (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1187-1188) . Thus, there was no reason to vacate the award (43 Cal. 4th 1179, 1188).

55 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.109

[Reserved]

§ 20C.109[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.110

§ 20C.110 Agreement Authorizes Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

[1] FORM

THE AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE AGREEMENT PROVIDED AUTHORITY FOR THE ARBITRATOR TO AWARD THEM TO THE PREVAILING PARTY.

A. Agreement Authorizes Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party. An agreement that authorizes an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party in any action related to the contract or in the event that a party is required to bring suit on the contract is broad enough to authorize an award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party in an arbitration (Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 856-857, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 ; Taranow v. Brokstein (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 662, 665-666, 185 Cal. Rptr. 532).

[Optional] B. Court Has No Authority to Modify Arbitrator's Decision Regarding Which Party Prevailed. A trial court does not have authority to reverse or modify the arbitrator's prevailing party finding, [or to strike an award of attorney's fees to that party], which constitutes a ruling on an issue the arbitrator was authorized to decide. When the contract gives the arbitrator the power to award attorney's fees, the arbitrator does not exceed his or her powers by awarding attorney's fees if that award is based on a reasonable interpretation of the contract involved and evidence submitted at the arbitration hearing (Kahn v. Chetcuti (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67-68, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 606 ; Delaney v. Dahl (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 655-657, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 ; Pierotti v. Torian (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 24-26, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 ; Creative Plastering, Inc. v. Hedley Builders, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1666, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216).

[Optional] C. Stipulation to Arbitrate Injured Worker's Claim Authorizes Award of Statutory Attorney's Fees. When parties to an action arising out of a worker's injury which allegedly occurred within the course and scope of his/her employment stipulate to arbitrate all issues of liability as well as damages, the employer has no workers' compensation insurance, and the employer's negligence is found to have been the cause of the employee's injury, the arbitrator has authority to award the employee his/her attorney's fees as provided in Labor Code Section 3709 (Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 734-735, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306).

[Optional] D. Arbitration Agreement Covering Damage Claims Under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civil Code Section 1750 et seq.) Incorporates Provision for Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees. When parties agree to resolve claims for damages under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.) through arbitration, it is reasonable to infer that they have consented to abide by the substantive and remedial provisions of the CLRA, including Civil Code Section 1780(d), which mandates an award of costs and attorney's fees for a prevailing plaintiff (Broughton v. Cigna Healthplans of California (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1066, 1086-1087, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334, 988 P.2d 67).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the arbitrator's award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party was not in excess of the arbitrator's powers, but was authorized by the parties' agreement or by a statute within the scope of that agreement, and should be confirmed. If counsel uses optional Paragraph B, counsel may wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.55, which, although they arose from situations in which no attorney's fees were awarded, are California Supreme Court cases holding that an arbitrator's determination of the prevailing party cannot be reviewed by a court.

Optional Paragraph C is for use only in an arbitration of an injured worker's claim against an employer who did not have workers' compensation insurance [see Lab. Code § 3709].

Optional Paragraph D is for use when the claim which was arbitrated was a claim for damages under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.).

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise thesepoints in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement or statute providing for an award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10, 20C.11, and 20C.55.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorizes Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

The facts and procedural background of Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 , are discussed in § 20C.80[3][c]. The trial court's judgment confirming the awards also awarded costs and attorney's fees to each of the individual venturers. The association appealed, contending the awards of attorney's fees and costs were unauthorized.

In affirming, the court of appeal quoted from the arbitration agreement, which provided that "if any action at law or in equity, including an action for declaration [sic] relief, is brought to enforce or interpret the provisions of this Agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees which may be set by the court in the same action, or in a separate action brought for that purpose, in addition to other relief to which the prevailing party may be entitled." Absent a contrary agreement between the parties, Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2 provides that each party to the arbitration pay his or her pro rata share of the expenses and fees of the neutral arbitrator or other expenses incurred by the party for his or her own benefit (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 856) . A contract provision for recovery of attorney's fees if a party is required to bring suit is broad enough to include fees arising in arbitration (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 856-857) . If any dispute under the contract must be submitted to arbitration, any other result would make the attorney's fee provision in the contract meaningless (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 857) . The association also contended that both the costs and attorney's fee awards were premature because a party has not prevailed until all appellate remedies are exhausted. While that may be true as a practical matter, neither the arbitrators nor the trial court erred in regarding the individual venturers as the prevailing party at each level of the proceeding (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 857) .

Taranow v. Brokstein (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 662, 185 Cal. Rptr. 532 , involved arbitration under a partnership agreement that provided in part, "Should any partner be forced to bring suit to enforce the terms of this partnership agreement, the prevailing partner shall be awarded his or her costs of suit incurred therein and his or her reasonable attorney's fees. ... In the event of a controversy or claim arising out of this agreement which cannot be settled by the partners or their legal representatives, it shall be settled by arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association and judgment on the award may be entered by any court having jurisdiction." The award, which was confirmed, required the defendant to pay the plaintiff $14,600. Both parties agreed that the award included attorney's fees of an undetermined amount. Defendant appealed, claiming the award of attorney's fees was in excess of the arbitrator's jurisdiction.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court considered various legal texts and dictionaries and cases from other jurisdiction that said that the term "suit" is broader than the term "action" in that "action" may refer only to actions at law, but "suit" includes any civil legal proceeding brought by one person against another, and includes actions at law and in equity (135 Cal. App. 3d 662, 665-666). New York cases specifically held that the term "suit" embraces arbitration proceedings

(135 Cal. App. 3d 662, 666) . Relying on Civ. Code §§ 1641 and 1643, the court also noted that the attorney's fee provision would be rendered meaningless if any other interpretation were given to the term "suit." Every controversy or claim arising out of the agreement was required to be settled by arbitration. If "suit" did not include arbitration proceedings, attorney's fees could never be awarded under the contract provision (135 Cal. App. 3d 662, 667) .

[b] Court Has No Authority to Modify Arbitrator's Decision Regarding Which Party Prevailed

Kahn v. Chetcuti (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 606 arose under a contract for the sale of real property which required any disputes arising under that agreement to be mediated, and if that was unsuccessful, to be submitted to binding arbitration. The agreement also provided that the prevailing party in any arbitration or other legal proceedings was entitled to reasonable attorney fees, except that attorney's fees were not to be awarded to a party whom the arbitrator determined resisted mediation. Respondents filed a complaint prior to mediation because their statute of limitations was about to run and appellants would not agree to waive it. They never intended to pursue the litigation, and never served the complaint. The mediation wasunsuccessful and the parties proceeded to arbitration. Appellant purchaser was unsuccessful in the arbitration. The award granted respondents their attorney's fees. Appellant appealed, contending that the arbitrator exceeded his powers in awarding attorney fees and costs to respondents.

The court of appeal affirmed. The pivotal question, the court of appeal said, is whether an arbitrator exceeds his or her powers when the arbitrator has the authority to rule on a particular issue under the terms of the controlling arbitration agreement (101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 65) . Clearly the agreement authorized attorney's fees to the prevailing party, but respondent argued attorney's fees could not be awarded under the facts of the case. One dispute or claim the arbitrator was authorized to decide under the language of the agreement was whether respondents had in fact attempted a court action before attempting to mediate. The arbitrator's granting costs and attorney's fees indicated he had impliedly concluded respondents had not attempted court action before mediating (101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 66) . An arbitrator's decision on an issue that has been submitted to arbitration is not subject to judicial review. Thus, the court could not review the validity of the arbitrator's reasoning, the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the award, or any errors of fact or law that may be included in the award (101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67) . Nevertheless, the court of appeal said that from the evidence before the arbitrator, he could reasonably conclude that respondents did not, in any real sense, attempt a court action before mediating (101 Cal. App. 4th 61, 67-68) .

The facts and procedural background of Delaney v. Dahl (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 are discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.03[3][a]. The retainer agreement under which the primary action was litigated and the supplemental retainer agreement signed when the firm undertook to represent the two principals were interlineated to show that Delaney and the other principal would have no liability for attorney's fees in the primary action. No changes where made to the clause that provided "[i]n the event attorney's fees and related costs are incurred to enforce this agreement or to resolve a dispute under this agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to recover, in addition to damages allowed by law, reasonable attorney's fees and costs." The arbitrator awarded the law firm their attorney's fees and costs in the arbitration and awarded those costs again the corporations and Delaney. After Delaney was unsuccessful in his attempt to have the award vacated, he appealed from the resulting judgment, contending, among other things, that the arbitrator had exceeded his powers in finding him liable for the prevailing parties' attorney's fees and costs of the arbitration.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that judicial intervention and review of an arbitration award are to be minimized, and that under Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 an arbitration award must be upheld if it bears a rational relationship to the arbitration contract (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 655) . Here, the arbitrator interpreted the retainer agreements to provide for an award of attorney's fees against Delaney for fees incurred in the arbitration proceeding (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 655-656) . The arbitrator considered Delaney's handwritten changes to the supplemental retainer agreement. The retainer agreement and the supplemental retainer agreement made numerous references to attorney's fees, both in connection with the primary litigation and any later arbitrable dispute between the law firm and its clients. The issue in this case was whether certain language applied to Delaney. The arbitrator interpreted the contract on this issue. The award did not exceed the arbitrator's powers as conferred by the retainer agreement, but interpreted the agreement. Contractual interpretation is precisely the type of decision by an arbitrator to which courts must defer. The arbitrator decided the question of whether under the contract Delaney owed attorney's fees for the arbitration, as distinguished from fees owed for litigation the primary action (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 656) . Based on his interpretation of the arbitration agreement and all the evidence, the arbitrator made a decision regarding the award of attorney's fees incurred in the arbitration. That award is entitled to deference by the court and could not be vacated (99 Cal. App. 4th 647, 657) .

The facts and procedural background of Pierotti v. Torian (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 553 , are discussed at § 20C.10[3][d]. In upholding the award of attorney's fees, the court of appeal sanctioned defendant and its attorneys for engaging in a frivolous appeal with respect to those fees (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 37) . The court characterized defendant's claim that the arbitrator erred by finding plaintiff was the prevailing party under the partnership agreement's attorney fees clause as an attack on the "arbitrator's reasoning" or, at best, an assertion of "an error of law apparent on the face of the award," and disagreed with defendant's attempt to characterize the award as in excess of the arbitrator's powers. There was no question that the arbitrator had the power to award attorney fees; the partnership agreement which contained the arbitration clause expressly granted that power (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 24) . Nor was there any evidence that the award of attorney's fees was an unauthorized remedy or that the arbitrator decided an unsubmitted issue (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 25) . The only question was whether the arbitrator exercised the power to award attorney's fees correctly. The court cited Creative Plastering, Inc. v. Hedley Builders, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1666, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216 , discussed below, for the proposition that a court lacks the authority to reverse or modify the arbitrator's prevailing party finding, which constitutes a ruling on an issue the arbitrator was authorized to decide (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 24) . Arbitrators do not exceed their authority because they erroneously decide a contested issue of law or fact. The court also noted that while this case was pending, the California Supreme Court decided closely related issues in Moshonov v. Walsh (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 771, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597, 996 P.2d 699 and Moore v. Bank of San Luis Obispo (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 782, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 603, 996 P.2d 706 , both discussed at § 20C.55[3][a], above (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 25) . Although both Moshonov and Moore deal with the denial of attorney's fees, they make clear that when the issue of entitlement of a party to attorney fees is within the scope of the issues submitted for binding arbitration, arbitrators do not exceed their powers by making an error with respect to a party's request for fees, even if the finding would be reversible legal error if made by a court in civil litigation. The court went on to distinguish Thompson v. Jespersen (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 964, 272 Cal. Rptr. 132 , discussed at § 20C.31[3][a], in which the underlying agreement did not authorizeattorney's fees, and concluded that who is the prevailing party is a mixed question of law and fact and a court simply has no power to review an arbitrator's decision on that issue (81 Cal. App. 4th 17, 26) .

Creative Plastering, Inc. v. Hedley Builders, Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216 , was a dispute between a subcontractor (plaintiff) and a contractor over sums owed. Contractor stipulated that it owed $13,099.60 under the contract but contended it was entitled to $22,176 delay damages. Subcontractor claimed the delay was due to weather and should not subject it to liability. The agreement provided for arbitration of "all matters in question arising out of or relating to, the subcontract" as well as for attorney's fees and costs for the prevailing party. The arbitrator found for subcontractor in the amount of $11,251 under the contract, with $1,549 interest, and also awarded the subcontractor $11,178 in attorney's fees. Contractor filed a petition to vacate the award, or in the alternative to strike the attorney's fees because it claimed subcontractor was not the prevailing party. The trial court refused to vacate the entire award but did strike the attorney's fees, ruling that the subcontractor was not the prevailing party because it recovered less than the amount stipulated to be owing (forgetting apparently that subcontractor prevailed on the delay claim). Subcontractor appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the striking of attorney's fees, but affirmed the judgment in other respects. Contractor claimed that the arbitrator exceeded his powers because subcontractor was not legally the prevailing party. The court of appeal disagreed, saying that the trial court had no authority to reverse or modify the arbitrator's prevailing party finding, which constitutes a ruling on an issue the arbitrator was authorized to decide. Even if the decision as to the prevailing party constituted or was generated by the arbitrator's error of fact or law, it binds the parties and is immune from judicial interference (19 Cal. App. 4th 1662, 1666) .

[c] Stipulation to Arbitrate Injured Worker's Claim Authorizes Award of Statutory Attorney's Fees

Plaintiff in Caro v. Smith (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 306 , worked for defendant performing secretarial and other duties, including holding a horse while it received acupuncture treatment. The horse bolted and seriously injured plaintiff. Defendant had no workers' compensation insurance. Plaintiff sued in tort; and shortly after the mandatory settlement conference, the parties stipulated to binding arbitration (contractual, not judicial) of "all issues of liability, as well as damages." The arbitrator found that plaintiff was acting within the course and scope of her employment when she was injured and that her injuries were caused by defendant's negligence [see Lab. Code § 3708 (presumption of employer's negligence)]. The arbitrator awarded plaintiff $331,111 in compensatory damages and $59,500 in statutory attorney's fees as provided in Lab. Code § 3709. Plaintiff then dismissed the lawsuit and petitioned to have the award confirmed. Defendant's attorneys opposed confirmation on the ground that defendant had not signed the stipulation. The trial court found defendant knew that the stipulation was binding, confirmed the award, and entered judgment thereon in the amount of $390,611. Following entry of judgment, the court also awarded plaintiff $73,431 in prejudgment interest based on her recovery of a more favorable judgment than her pretrial statutory offer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 998; Civ. Code § 3291] and $2,234 in other costs. Defendant appealed, challenging both the enforceability of the stipulation and the award of attorney's fees. In a separate appeal, both parties challenged the post-judgment order.

The court of appeal affirmed as to both appeals. The court of appeal found the stipulation to be binding (59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 732) . As to the award of attorney's fees, defendant contended the arbitrator exceeded his authority under the stipulation. The court of appeal noted the broad language of the stipulation and said the arbitrator quite reasonably concluded that the stipulation included plaintiff's entitlement to attorney's fees under Lab. Code § 3709. There was nothing in the stipulation that specifically restricted the arbitrator from awarding statutory attorney's fees as damages. The court said it was the Legislature, not the arbitrator, that adopted a positive statutory provision mandating attorney's fees for employees not covered by workers' compensation insurance. A reasonable interpretation of the scope of an agreement to arbitrate an employee's tort claim against an employer would include statutory attorney's fees contemplated by the Labor Code (59 Cal. App. 4th 725, 734-735) .

[d] Arbitration Agreement Covering Damage Claims Under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civil Code Section 1750 et seq.) Incorporates Provision for Award of Costs and Attorney's Fees

Civ. Code § 1780(d) provides that the court shall award court costs and attorney's fees to a prevailing plaintiff in litigation filed pursuant to that section and that reasonable attorney's fees may be awarded to a prevailing defendant on a finding by the court that the plaintiff's prosecution of the action was not in good faith.

The facts and procedural background of Broughton v. Cigna Healthplans of California (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1066, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 334, 988 P.2d 67 , and the portion of the opinion discussing the arbitrability of damage claims under the Consumer Legal Remedies Act (Civ. Code § 1750 et seq.) are discussed at Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.22[3][f]. The portion of the opinion addressing the nonarbitrability of CLRA claims for injunction is discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.43[3][a].

One of plaintiffs' objections to arbitration of any of the CLRA claims was that arbitration costs and attorneys fees mandated for a prevailing plaintiff by Civ. Code § 1780(d) would not be available in arbitration, thus depriving them of an important remedy provided under the CLRA. This argument relied on the fact that Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2 provides that "each party to the arbitration shall pay his pro rata share of the expenses and fees of the neutral arbitrator" and bear his own attorneys fees unless "the arbitration agreement otherwise provides." The Court agreed that the availability of costs and attorneys fees to prevailing plaintiffs is integral to making the CLRA an effective piece of consumer legislation, increasing the financial feasibility of bringing suits under the statute. Following the rule which requires that potentially conflicting statutes be harmonized if reasonably possible, the Court reasoned that any potential conflict between the California Arbitration Act and the CLRA was easily resolved by viewing Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2 as a default provision and not operativewhen the parties agree to resolve statutory claims through arbitration. The reasonable inference when parties agree to arbitrate statutory claims is that they consent to abide by the substantive and remedial provisions of the statute. Thus, Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2 gives way to the remedial provisions of the CLRA when parties have agreed to arbitrate claims under that statute and presents no barrier to the enforcement of an arbitration agreement governing a CLRA claim (21 Cal. 4th 1066, 1086-1087) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agreement Authorized Award of Attorney's Fees to Prevailing Party

In Severtson v. Williams Construction Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 86, 220 Cal. Rptr. 400 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment based on an award that included attorney's fees and costs. The construction contract in the case provided that "in the event Contractor shall employ an attorney or bring suit ... Contractor shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and expenses of litigation." The court of appeal noted that Civ. Code § 1717 makes that clause mutual. The court said that while some attorney's fees clauses may be inapplicable to the arbitration process, the use of the term "suit" in the contract was broad enough to embrace arbitration. Thus, attorney's fees and costs were properly awarded by the arbitrator (173 Cal. App. 3d 86, 95) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.111

§ 20C.111 Private Arbitration Rules Applied by Agreement Allocate Costs

[1] FORM

THE AWARD OF COSTS SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR ALLOCATED COSTS IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE APPLICABLE ARBITRATION RULES.

A. Arbitration Rules Made Applicable by Agreement Allocate Costs. An arbitration agreement or agreement between parties to an arbitration agreement may allocate arbitration costs between the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2). If that agreement applies private arbitration rules to the arbitration, the provisions of the rules allocating costs govern (Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70).

[Optional] B. Applicable Private Arbitration Rules Allocate Costs Equally _____ [cite to provision of the applicable private arbitration rules] of the applicable private arbitration rules, _____ [insert name of rules], provide that costs shall be shared equally, and given that the award allocated costs accordingly, the award should be confirmed (Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to assert that the arbitrator's award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party was not in excess of the arbitrator's powers, but was authorized by the parties' agreement, was undertaken in accordance with the agreement, and should be confirmed. Optional Paragraph B is for use when the rules made applicable by the agreement call for allocating costs equally.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement providing for an award of attorney's fees and costs to the prevailing party. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10, 20C.11, and 20C.55.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitration Rules Made Applicable by Agreement Allocate Costs

In Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 , the trial court and the court of appeal confirmed the arbitration award allocating costs equally. The portion of the opinion dealing with the extent of judicial review of error of law in the award is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a], above. The agreement provided that the arbitration rules of ADR Services, Inc., which contained rules for allocating costs, applied to arbitration of disputes arising from the agreement. The court of appeal noted that an arbitration agreement or agreement between parties to an arbitration agreement may allocate arbitration costs between the parties under Code Civ. Proc. § 1284.2. Accordingly, the court affirmed the trial court's ruling that the allocation of costs between the parties was to be determined under the cost allocation provisions of the rules of ADR Services, Inc. (182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520) . The portion of the opinion dealing with the equal allocation of costs is discussed in § 20C.111[3][b], below.

[b] Applicable Rules Allocate Costs Equally

The court of appeal ruled that the trial court correctly allocated arbitration costs between the parties in Gravillis v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 70 . The portion of the opinion dealing with the extent of judicial review of error of law in the award is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a], above. The portion of the opinion dealing with the application of cost allocation rules in private arbitration rules is discussed in § 20C.111[3][a], above. After ruling that the trial court correctly viewed the cost allocation rules of the applicable priviate arbitration rules, namely, the rules of ADR Services, Inc. as governing the allocation of costs, the court of appeal determined that the ADR Services rules required equal allocation of costs and that the trial court correctly confirmed the award of costs calculated on that basis (182 Cal. App. 4th 503, 520) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.112-20C.119

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.112[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.120

§ 20C.120 Punitive Damages in Medical Malpractice Arbitration

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR HAS THE AUTHORITY UNDER THE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT TO AWARD PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

A. Language of Agreement in Medical Services Contract Is Susceptible to Interpretation to Include Claims or Issues Relating to Punitive Damages. An agreement providing for arbitration of "any" issue of medical malpractice under the language of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1295(a) and (b) may authorize an arbitrator to award punitive damages in arbitration of a medical malpractice claim if the language of the agreement is susceptible to interpretation to include claims or issues relating to punitive damages (Baker v. Sadick (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 626, 208 Cal. Rptr. 676).

[Optional] B. Limitations on Recovery of Noneconomic Losses in Medical Malpractice Action Do Not Preclude Award of Punitive Damages Based on Fraud, Willful Neglect, and Malicious Acts. Civil Code Section 3333.2, limiting recovery to $250,000 for noneconomic losses in actions against health care providers based on professional negligence, does not preclude an arbitration award of punitive damages when the patient's claim is based on fraud, willful neglect, and malicious acts (Baker v. Sadick (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 627, 208 Cal. Rptr. 676).

[Optional] C. Arbitrator May Base Decision on Justice and Equity. When the terms of an arbitration agreement do not specify that the arbitrator must act in conformity with rules of law, the arbitrator may base his or her decision on broad principles of justice and equity, without regard to any limit imposed by Civil Code Section 3333.2(b), and generally will be immune from judicial review (Nogueiro v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1192, 1194-1195, 250 Cal. Rptr. 478).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed when the claims were submitted for arbitration under an agreement with language as broad as that at Code Civ. Proc. § 1295, for example language providing for arbitration of "any dispute as to the professional negligence of a health care provider," to assert that the arbitrator had the authority under the particular agreement to award punitive damages.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed. Counsel may also wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.121, if the award of punitive damages might also be based on express authority in the arbitration agreement, or from § 20C.122, if the award might be based on the fact that punitive damages were contemplated by the type of claim to be arbitrated.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement, as well as any relevant conduct of the parties, that demonstrates the parties' mutual intent. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For memoranda to combine with this form, basing the award of punitive damages on express authority in the arbitration agreement, or on the fact that punitive damages were contemplated by the type of claim to be arbitrated, see §§ 20C.121 and 20C.122, respectively.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Language of Agreement in Medical Services Contract Is Susceptible to Interpretation to Include Claims or Issues Relating to Punitive Damages

Baker v. Sadick (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 208 Cal. Rptr. 676 , involved arbitration of a patient's medical malpractice claims against her physician, including claims based on negligence as well as on intentional tort principles. On plaintiff's petition for confirmation of the arbitration award, the trial court confirmed the award, including an award for punitive damages. Defendant physician appealed, contending the arbitration agreement did not authorize an award of punitive damages.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the arbitration agreement, providing for arbitration of "any" issue of medical malpractice under the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b), and containing language identical to that found in those code sections, authorized the arbitration panel to award punitive damages because the language of the agreement was susceptible to interpretation to include claims or issues relating to punitive damages. The court construed the ambiguity concerning the agreement's coverage of claims based on intentional tort principles against the physician because the physician drafted the agreement, it was the physician who sought to limit the agreement to exclude punitive damages, the patient's claim rested on intentional tort principles, both patient and physician submitted the claim to arbitration, and the issues of liability for punitive damages were submitted to arbitration without objection by either party (162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 626) .

The court noted that even though a proceeding in arbitration has been held not to be an action for purposes of discovery, it does not follow that it is not an action for purposes of recovery of punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294. That conclusion disregards the purpose of arbitration as a substitute for proceedings in court (162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 628) . Additionally, an award of punitive damages in arbitration of a medical malpractice claim required to be submitted to arbitration by an agreement containing clauses as broad as those contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b) does not divest the parties of their powers to control the scope of arbitration by the terms of their agreement (162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 630) .

[b] Limitations on Recovery of Noneconomic Losses in Medical Malpractice Action Do Not Preclude Award of Punitive Damages Based on Fraud, Willful Neglect, and Malicious Acts

The facts and procedural background of Baker v. Sadick (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 208 Cal. Rptr. 676 , are discussed at [a], above. The court of appeal held that Civ. Code § 3333.2 (limiting recovery to $250,000 for noneconomic losses in actions against health care providers based on professional negligence) does not preclude an arbitration award of punitive damages when the patient's claim, as in the case at bar, is based on fraud, willful neglect, and malicious acts. Punitive damages that may be asserted in court may also be asserted under the arbitration clauses in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b) when the issue is submitted by the patient or with the consent of both parties (162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 627) .

[c] Arbitrator May Base Decision on Justice and Equity

In Nogueiro v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1192, 250 Cal. Rptr. 478 , a disputed medical malpractice claim was submitted to arbitration pursuant to a health plan agreement between the parties. The arbitrators determined that defendants were required to pay plaintiffs $40,000 in special damages and $310,000 in general damages. Defendants unsuccessfully sought to reduce the general damages to $250,000, the maximum sum allowable for noneconomic damages under Civ. Code § 3333.2(b).

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that unless specifically required under the terms of an arbitration agreement to act in conformity with rules of law, arbitrators may base their decision on broad principles of justice and equity. As a consequence, arbitration awards are generally immune from judicial review, even for an error of law. Even if the arbitrators' award in this case had resulted from an erroneous refusal to apply Civ. Code § 3333.2, the error of law did not invalidate the award (203 Cal. App. 3d 1192, 1194-1196) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.121

§ 20C.121 Punitive Damages Expressly Provided for By Agreement

[1] FORM

THE PUNITIVE DAMAGES AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE PARTIES BY EXPRESS AGREEMENT CONFERRED AUTHORITY ON THE ARBITRATOR TO AWARD PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

[EITHER]

A. Parties' Pleadings and Conduct Indicate Agreement. When the parties'contractual arbitration provision neither expressly permits nor specifically prohibits punitive damages, the arbitrator has the authority to award punitive damages if the parties' pleadings and conduct clearly establish their mutual intent to arbitrate the entire case, including the claim for punitive damages (Belko v. AVX Corp. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 907-908, 251 Cal. Rptr. 557).

[OR]

A. Written Agreement. Punitive damages may be awarded if there is an express provision authorizing such relief in the arbitration agreement or pursuant to a stipulated submission order or its legal equivalent (see Barnes v. Logan (9th Cir. 1997) 122 F.3d 820, 823-824 ; Belko v. AVX Corp. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 900, 251 Cal. Rptr. 557).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, when the award includes punitive damages and the parties, either by written agreement or by their conduct, have agreed to submit the issue of punitive damages to the arbitrator.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed. Counsel may also wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.120, if the award of punitive damages might also be based on interpretation of an agreement for medical services with language as broad as that in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b), and from § 20C.122 if the award might be based on the fact that punitive damages were contemplated by the type of claim to be arbitrated.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement, as well as any relevant conduct of the parties, that demonstrates the parties' mutual intent to submit the issue of punitive damages to the arbitrator. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For memoranda to combine with this form, basing the award of punitive damages on an arbitration agreement for disputes regarding medical care with language as broad as that in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b), or on the fact that punitive damages were contemplated by the type of claim to be arbitrated, see §§ 20C.120 and 20C.122, respectively.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Parties' Pleadings and Conduct Indicate Agreement

In Belko v. AVX Corp. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 901, 905, 251 Cal. Rptr. 557 , plaintiff brought an action against his employer requesting compensatory and punitive damages for wrongful termination. The contract provided for the resolution by arbitration of all controversies and claims arising from the contract. The parties submitted briefs as to their positions on the issues the arbitrator was to resolve. Plaintiff's brief expressly sought punitive damages. Defendant's brief addressed the issue only on the merits, contending there was no intent or conduct sufficiently outrageous to merit punitive sanction. After receiving an adverse arbitration award, defendant requested that the court vacate the punitive damages award as exceeding the scope of the arbitrator's jurisdiction. The court confirmed the award in its entirety and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that, when the parties' contractual arbitration provision neither expressly permits nor specifically prohibits a punitive damages award, the parties can by express agreement confer jurisdiction on the arbitrator to make such an award (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 899, 901) . Looking to out-of-state courtsand other jurisdictions for guidance, the court refused to follow the many decisions holding that an arbitrator may never award punitive damages. The better rule is simply that punitive damages should not be awarded absent an express provision authorizing such relief in the arbitration agreement or pursuant to a stipulated submission order or its legal equivalent (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 900-901) . This view recognizes the disfavored character of punitive damages in arbitration contracts but allows the parties' express intent to govern (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 901-903) . There is no countervailing public policy significant enough to restrict the right of contracting parties to vest agreed-upon arbitrators with the authority to consider and resolve claims for punitive damages (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 903-904) . The court noted that an absolute prohibition is most inappropriate when both tort and contract claims arise from the same facts because separate adjudications would be a waste of court resources (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 905) . Considering defendants' failure to reserve an exception for the punitive damages claim in its answer, defendants' choice to address the punitive damages claim on the merits in its arbitration brief, and defendant's failure to file a written challenge to the arbitrator's authority to address punitive damages until after receiving an adverse arbitration award, the court concluded that the pleadings, written trial briefs, and the parties' conduct clearly established their mutual intent to arbitrate the entire case, including the claim for punitive damages (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 907-908) .

[b] Written Agreement

Barnes v. Logan (9th Cir. 1997) 122 F.3d 820 , was an arbitration between investors and their brokers under an agreement that provided for application of Minnesota law. The award included punitive damages, expressly "pursuant to Section 3294 of the California Civil Code and pursuant to Mastrobuono" (discussed at § 20C.122[3][a]). The award was confirmed. Defendants appealed, contending Minnesota law only allowed punitive damages in cases of personal injury.

The court of appeals affirmed. While agreeing that the award pursuant to California law was beyond the arbitrators' authority, the court found the error was harmless (122 F.3d 820, 823, 824) . There was a case from the Minnesota Supreme Court affirming an award of punitive damages in a case not involving personal injury. However, question before the court of appeal was not what the Minnesota law of punitive damages was, but whether the arbitrators acted in manifest disregard of Minnesota law in awarding punitive damages (122 F.3d 820, 823) . The court held they did not (122 F.3d 820, 823-824) .

The factual and procedural background of Belko v. AVX Corp. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 251 Cal. Rptr. 557 , is discussed under [a], above. In holding that the parties' pleadings and conduct demonstrated an intent to arbitrate the issue of punitive damages, the court expressed the general rule that punitive damages cannot be awarded unless there is an express provision authorizing such relief in the arbitration agreement or pursuant to a stipulated submission order or its legal equivalent (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 900-901) . The court declined to adopt a contrary rule, followed in other states, that prohibits arbitrators from awarding punitive damages, even if agreed on by the parties (204 Cal. App. 3d 894, 902) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.122

§ 20C.122 Punitive Damages Implied by Agreement With Subject Matter Likely to Give Rise to Claims for Punitive Damages

[1] FORM

THE PUNITIVE DAMAGE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED BECAUSE THE AGREEMENT WAS BROAD ENOUGH TO REQUIRE ARBITRATION OF CLAIMS GIVING RISE TO PUNITIVE DAMAGES.

A. Agreement Contemplated Arbitration of Claims Giving Rise to Punitive Damages. If the particular arbitration provision contemplates arbitration of claims giving rise to punitive damages, the arbitrators have authority to award punitive damages. An express agreement to allow punitive damages is not necessary to confer that authority (Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton (1995) 514 U.S. 52, 59-63, 15 S. Ct. 1212, 131 L. Ed. 2d 76 ; Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854-856, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, when the award includes punitive damages and the parties' agreement contemplated arbitration of claims giving rise to punitive damages, to assert that this reflected the parties' intention to empower the arbitrator to award punitive damages.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed. Counsel may also wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.120, if the award of punitive damages might also be based on interpretation of an agreement for medical services with language as broad as that in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b), or from § 20C.121, if the award of punitive damages might also be based on the fact that the arbitration agreement expressly authorized the arbitrators to award punitive damages.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should indicate the precise language in the agreement that demonstrates the parties' mutual intent to submit the issue of punitive damages to the arbitrator. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For memoranda to combine with this form, basing the award of punitive damages on an arbitration agreement for disputes regarding medical care with language as broad as that in Code Civ. Proc. § 1295(a) and (b), or on the fact that the arbitration agreement expressly authorized the award of punitive damages, see §§ 20C.120 and § 20C.121, respectively.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Contemplated Arbitration of Claims Giving Rise to Punitive Damages

Mastrobuono v. Shearson Lehman Hutton, Inc. (1995) 514 U.S. 52, 115 S. Ct. 1212, 131 L. Ed. 2d 76 , arose from an action in the United States District Court for the Northern District of Illinois by investors against their securities broker for mishandling of their account. In accordance with the parties' agreement providing for arbitration pursuant the rules of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), a panel of three arbitrators heard the matter and awarded petitioners $159,327 in compensatory damages and $400,000 in punitive damages. Respondent paid the compensatory damage portion of the award, but moved to vacate the award of punitive damages. The District Court granted the motion, and the Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit affirmed. Both courts relied on the choice of law paragraph in the parties' agreement, which specified that the contract be governed by New York law. A New York court of appeals case held that punitive damages can only be awarded by judicial tribunals, not by arbitrators. The United States Supreme Court granted certiorari to resolve a conflict between Courts of Appeals as to whether a contractual choice of law provision may preclude an arbitral award of punitive damages that would otherwise be proper (131 L. Ed. 2d 76, 82-83) .

The United States Supreme Court reversed. Although the agreement contained no express reference to claims for punitive damages, respondents claimed that the choice of law provision amounted to an express agreement that punitive damages not be awarded in the arbitration of any dispute arising under the contract. However, the NASD rules specified in the agreement indicate that arbitrators may award "damages and other relief." Again, while that rule does not make specific reference to punitive damages, the manual provided to NASD arbitrators contains a provision that states:

> "B. Punitive Damages
>
> "The issue of punitive damages may arise with great frequency in arbitration. Parties to arbitration are informed that arbitrators can consider punitive damages as a remedy."

After applying the general contract principles that ambiguous language must be construed against the drafter and that the two provisions should be harmonized to give effect to both and to render them consistent with each other, and after noting that the New York case did not apply to the substantive "laws of the State of New York," but was a special rule limiting the authority of arbitrators, the Supreme Court concluded that the Court of Appeals had misinterpreted the parties' agreement, and that the punitive damage award should have been enforced as within the scope of the contract (131 L. Ed. 2d 76, 85-88) .

The facts and procedural background of Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 , are discussed at § 20C.90[3][c]. The portion of the opinion addressing the prevailing party's entitlement to costs and attorney's fees are discussed at § 20C.110[3][a].

In affirming, the court of appeal discussed Baker v. Sadick (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 618, 622-626, 208 Cal. Rptr. 676 [see § 20C.120[3][a]], which it characterized as the leading California authority on the authority of an arbitrator to award punitive damages. Baker reasoned that if the parties intended to substitute an arbitral forum for a judicial one and intended presentation of tort claims in the arbitral forum, then they also must have intended the usual judicial remedies to be available in arbitration (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854) . The crucial question is whether the arbitration agreement contemplated arbitration of claims giving rise to punitive damages (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854-855) . When contracts provide for arbitration of "any controversy arising out of or relating to the contract," the language is considered sufficiently broad to include tort as well as contract claims as long as the tort claims have their roots in the relationship between the parties that was created by the contract [see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.40]. While somewhat narrower than the quoted language, the language of the joint venture agreement is still very broad and inclusive. In fact, the court noted that the trial court's order compelling arbitration specifically included tort claims. The venture agreement allowed for arbitration of tort claimswithout expressly allowing or precluding a punitive-damage award. Thus, it is hardly irrational to conclude that the parties contemplated the possibility of punitive damages. The award was not, as a matter of law, in excess of the arbitrators' powers (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 855) .

The association also argued that it is unconstitutional to allow punitive damages in arbitration without an express agreement to allow them. The Supreme Court's decision in Browning-Ferris v. Kelco Disposal (1989) 492 U.S. 257, 263-264, 109 S. Ct. 2909, 106 L. Ed. 2d 219 , had disposed of that issue. The court of appeal concluded that the Supreme Court decision afforded no basis for the association's claim that some other constitutional provision requires an express agreement before arbitrators are empowered to award punitive damages (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 856) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.123

§ 20C.123 Party's Conduct Empowered Arbitrator to Strike Unconscionable Damage Limitation

[1] FORM

THE PARTIES SUBMITTED EVIDENCE ON AND ARGUED THE _____ [specify, e.g., UNCONSCIONABILITY OF THE DISCLAIMER AND DAMAGE LIMITATION], THUS, THE ARBITRATOR WAS EMPOWERED TO _____ [specify, e.g., STRIKE THE DAMAGE LIMITATION AND] AWARD _____ [specify, e.g., CONSEQUENTIAL] DAMAGES.

A. Parties Conduct Empowered Arbitrator to Award Consequential Damages. Because _____ [party, e.g, defendant] expressly responded to the claim of unconscionability, presented evidence on the issue, and failed to assert, at any time before or during the arbitration proceeding, that the arbitrator's power to find the disclaimer and damage limitation clause unconscionable or unenforceable was limited by the arbitration clause, _____ [e.g., it] cannot not complain that the arbitrator exceeded his authority by _____ [specify, e.g., awarding consequential damages]. Parties may submit for decision issues they were not contractually compelled to submit to arbitration, so courts look both to the contract and to the scope of the submissions to determine the arbitrator's authority (J.C. Gury Co. v. Nippon Carbide Indus. (USA), Inc. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1302, 1304-1307, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to resist a petition to vacate an arbitration award when the parties submitted an issue for arbitration that they were not required by their contract to submit. Counsel should combine it with authority from Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing, § 20D.10 et seq. and any other form addressing any other relevant issues.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument must show that the parties submitted evidence on the issue not covered by the arbitration agreement. It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Parties Conduct Empowered Arbitrator to Award Consequential Damages

The plaintiff in J.C. Gury Co. v. Nippon Carbide Indus. (USA), Inc*. (2007) 152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 118* , manufactured reflective signs using sheeting manufactured by defendant. Plaintiff did not experience any problems for years, but after defendant moved its plant to China, plaintiff experienced cracking, separation, and peeling in over 37,000 reflective signs, for which it had to reimburse its customers. Plaintiff sought to recover some $90,000 in reimbursement costs from defendant. Defendant refused, relying in part on the warranty disclaimer and the consequential damage exclusion in the parties' contract, which restricted plaintiff's relief to product replacement and precluded any liability for additional damages for breach of warranty of fitness for intended. The contract also provided that any controversy arising out of the parties' sales contract would be settled by arbitration, but specified the arbitrator had no power to make an award that had the effect of changing, modifying or altering any provision of the parties' contract. The arbitrator's award concluded that a clause disclaiming warranties and excluding consequential damages was unconscionable and unenforceable, and awarded damages to the buyer on that basis. Plaintiff sought to confirm, and defendant to vacate, the award. The trial court confirmed the award. The seller appealed, contending that the arbitrator exceeded his powers because the award altered, indeed nullified, a contractual provision.

The court of appeal affirmed, because the seller expressly responded to the buyer's claim of unconscionability and failed to assert, at any time before or during thearbitration proceeding, that the arbitrator's power to find the clause unconscionable or unenforceable was limited by the arbitration clause. A party cannot wait until after an award is made to claim that an issue expressly presented to the arbitrator for decision is beyond his authority (152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1302, 1306-1307) . The court of appeal found that, while the arbitration clause limited the scope of the arbitrator's power, the conduct of the parties at the arbitration proceeding operated to waive that limitation. Although defendant contended at the arbitration that the warranty disclaimer and consequential damage exclusion clause should be enforced, it never argued that the arbitrator had no authority to find the clause unenforceable. Consequently, defendant could not complain on appeal that the arbitrator exceeded his authority. Despite the clear language of the arbitration clause, the court noted that parties may submit for decision issues they were not contractually compelled to submit to arbitration, so it would look both to the contract and to the scope of the submissions to determine the arbitrator's authority (152 Cal.

App. 4th 1300, 1304-1305) . The court concluded that defendant had submitted the issue of unconscionability to the arbitrator for decision, and therefore could not argue that an adverse decision on the issue exceeded the arbitrator's powers. In support of its conclusion, the court noted that both parities devoted considerable portions of their arbitration briefs to the issue of the unconscionability of the warranty disclaimer and damage limitation provision, but defendant's brief never contended that the issue of unconscionability exceeded the arbitrator's authority powers (152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1305). During the two-day arbitration hearing the parties offered related to issues concerning the course of dealing, lack of notice and discussion about product specification changes, warranty disclaimer and damage limitation exclusion, relative bargaining position, and measure of damages--all going to unconscionability, but defendant never objected to consideration of any of those issues or to evidence relating to them on the ground that the arbitrator was prohibited from finding a contractual term unconscionable or unenforceable (152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1305-1306) . Despite defendant's argument that it never agreed to waive the contractual limitation on the arbitrator's powers, defendant never reminded the arbitrator of the contractual limitation on the scope of his authority. The record supported only one conclusion: that both parties unequivocally submitted the issue of unconscionability to arbitration. Having done so, defendant may not now complain that the arbitrator exceeded his authority (152 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1306) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.124-20C.129

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.124[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.130

§ 20C.130 Arbitration Rehearing Was Not Required on Previously Available Evidence

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD_____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE A REHEARING IN ARBITRATION WAS NOT REQUIRED FOR EVIDENCE WHICH WAS, OR COULD HAVE BEEN, PRESENTED IN THE ARBITRATION. THEREFORE, THE AWARD SHOULD BE CONFIRMED.

A. Arbitrators Need Not Reopen Hearing for Evidence Previously Presented or Available. While parties to arbitration must be given every reasonable opportunity to present their evidence, they must be diligent in offering it at the proper time; the arbitrators need not reopen a case to hear material evidence which was or could have been presented earlier (Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 587-588, 343 P.2d 23 ; see also Hall v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 427-428, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 (two-step review process)).

[Optional] B. Arbitrator's Determination of Issue by Summary Adjudication Does Not Amount to Failure to Hear Evidence. An arbitrator's obligation under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(5) "to hear evidence" does not mean that the evidence must be orally presented or that live testimony, or the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, is required. This, and the fact that Code of Civil Procedure Section 1282.2(c) grants arbitrators "all power relating to the conduct of the hearing" give arbitrators authority to hear and determine motions for summary adjudication (Schlessinger v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1105-1109, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 650).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the arbitrator improperly failed to order rehearing based on evidence proffered subsequent to the original hearing, but which was available during the time of that hearing, if not actually presented at that hearing. Optional Paragraph B is for use to assert that the arbitrator's determination of the issue by way of summary adjudication was proper. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11].

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out in what respects and to what extent the evidence being offered as a basis for rehearing was actually before the arbitrators at the original hearing or was available at that time to the party now seeking to challenge the award. If relevant, counsel may also wish to point out the lack of substantive impact the proffered evidence would have on the case if introduced at this point. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factualstatements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrators Need Not Reopen Hearing for Evidence Previously Presented or Available

The facts and procedural background of Grunwald-Marx, Inc. v. Los Angeles Joint Bd. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 568, 343 P.2d 23 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the arbitrators' power to award damages for breach of contract despite the fact that damages were not expressly submitted as a separate issue is discussed at § 20C.100[3][a]. In affirming, the Supreme Court found that the statute allowing an award to be vacated if a party was prejudiced by the arbitrator's refusal to hear evidence pertinent and material to the case (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1288(c), now Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5), requiring substantial prejudice by refusal to hear material evidence) could not be interpreted to mean that, after a hearing at which full opportunity was given to each side to produce evidence, the arbitrators, as a matter of law, must grant a motion to reopen if the proffered evidence is relevant. A motion to reopen is a matter of discretion with the trier of fact, and that discretion cannot be upset on appeal in the absence of a clear showing of an abuse of that discretion. No abuse of discretion appeared in this case. Arbitrators are not required to admit all relevant testimony whenever it may be offered or submitted to them. The orderly administration of justice requires that, within reason, evidence must be offered at the proper time. The parties must be diligent (52 Cal. 2d 568, 587) . Here the union had made a crucial admission in its pleadings in the case, made the same admission at the arbitration hearing, and offered no evidence on the issue. Only when an award was about to be issued did the union then offer some qualification to the point admitted and attempt to introduce evidence on the subject. The Court concluded there was no abuse of discretion in the denial to reopen (52 Cal. 2d 568, 588) .

The facts and procedural background of Hall v. Superior Court (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the arbitrator's reliance on partnership principles are discussed at § 20C.101[3][c]. In issuing a writ of mandate requiring the trial court to set aside its order to vacate the award, the court of appeal discussed one broker's claim that he had been prejudiced by the arbitrator's refusal to reopen the arbitration hearing to permit presentation of evidence on the issue of the partnership. The court of appeal said former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(e) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)] authorized a two-step review process. Because a transcript of an arbitration proceeding is not generally available, if a superior court has to review the arbitrator's decision on materiality before reaching the question of substantial prejudice, the legislative goal of arbitral finality will be unattainable (18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 428) . Instead, the reviewing court should first determine whether the complaining party was substantially prejudiced by the arbitrator's refusal to reopen the hearing, and need only consider materiality if it finds substantial prejudice. In this case, it was clear from the award that the arbitrator believed a partnership existed as a matter of law between the brokers once they agreed to share fees, and that the proffered evidence would not have changed that decision (18 Cal. App. 4th 427, 427-428) .

[b] Arbitrator's Determination of Issue by Summary Adjudication Does Not Amount to Failure to Hear Evidence

Schlessinger v. Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 650 , involved a dispute regarding payments due to a lawyer on his resignation from defendant law firm. The partnership agreement provided for arbitration in accordance with the rules of the American Arbitration Association (AAA). The principal issue in contention was whether the "tolls" for the former partner's competition with the firm were reasonable and thus valid. The arbitrator determined this issue by way of two motions for summary adjudication, i.e, by consideration of evidence submitted in written form. The evidence submitted on the second motion included declarations from plaintiff, his attorney, and his accountant, excerpts from depositions of two partners of the firm, and portions of plaintiff's deposition. The arbitrator concluded that the tolls were valid and reasonable; and the parties then stipulated that plaintiff had been paid in full. The arbitrator issued an award in defendant's favor. Plaintiff petitioned to have the award vacated, claiming his rights were substantially prejudiced by refusal of the arbitrator to hear evidence, contrary to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(e). The petition was dismissed, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff contended that Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2(d) required a hearing at which he could cross-examine witnesses. The court of appeal disagreed, saying that an arbitrator's obligation under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(e) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)] "to hear evidence" does not mean that the evidence must be orally presented or that live testimony, or the opportunity to cross-examine witnesses, is required (40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1105) . Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2(d) entitles a party to cross-examine witnesses if they appear at the hearing, but it does not give a party the absolute right to present oral testimony in every case. Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2(c) provides that arbitrators "shall rule on ... questions of hearing procedure and shall exercise all powers relating to the conduct of the hearing." The provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2 are prefaced by the words "unless the arbitration agreement provides otherwise." Here, the AAA rules provided that the arbitrator hold a preliminary hearing to consider matters that would expedite the proceedings and gave the arbitrator authority to vary the hearing procedures, including the right to receive and consider evidence by affidavit. The court of appeal said those rules implicitly sanctioned the use of summary adjudication motions (40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1106-1107) . The court of appeal noted that the question of an arbitrator's authority to determine matters by summary adjudication motions was a matter of first impression in California and considered commentators and cases from other jurisdictions, which were divided in their holdings (40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1108-1109) . The court then concluded that in this case, Code Civ. Proc. § 1281 et seq. and the AAA rules gave the arbitrator authority to entertain the parties' motions for summary adjudication (40 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1109) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.131

§ 20C.131 Arbitrator Was Not Required to Continue Hearing so Doctors Could Testify

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE NO [specify, e.g., CAUSE WAS SHOWN WHY POSTPONEMENT WAS NECESSARY AND NO PREJUDICE RESULTED FROM THE FAILURE TO POSTPONE THE ARBITRATION HEARING].

A. Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Refusing to Postpone Hearing. An arbitrator does not exceed his or her powers by refusing to postpone the arbitration hearing for a party who has delayed asking for the postponement, who shows no reasonable cause for needing the postponement, and who was not prejudiced by the failure of the arbitrator to postpone the hearing (SWAB Financial, LLC v. E* Trade Securities, LLC (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1196-1198, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 ; see also 9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(3); Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)).

B. Arbitrator Need Not Continue Hearing for Testimony When Written Records Are Available. An award may be confirmed even though the arbitrator relied on doctors' written records rather than their oral testimony when the proponent did not make any offer of proof why the records were insufficient to establish the desired points, did not make any attempt to ascertain when the doctors would be available to testify, [and the arbitrator stated that if the doctors' testimony was necessary, s/he would hear it at a later date] (Roitz v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 716, 724-726, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed to anticipate or rebut the claim that the arbitrator improperly failed to postpone the hearing. The first paragraph establishes the general proposition. Paragraph B is for use when the opposing party is claiming that the arbitrator improperly failed to continue the hearing to hear medical evidence when the doctors' records were available and no showing was made that those written records were insufficient or that any attempt had been made to determine when the doctors could testify [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [§ 20C.10] or response [§ 20C.11].

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should point out any previous delays by the party requesting the postponement, the lack of any showing of good cause for the postponement, and the lack of prejudice resulting from the failure to postpone the hearing. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Did Not Exceed Powers by Refusing to Postpone Hearing

SWAB Financial, LLC v. E*Trade Securities, LLC (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 904 , was an action by an investor against its securities broker for fraud and other causes of action. After asking for a continuance, but providing no reason therefore, plaintiff served notice of nonappearance. The arbitration proceeded without plaintiff and resulted in a denial of all relief requested. Plaintiff sought to vacate the award. Defendant countered that prejudice to plaintiff arose from the failure to appear at the arbitration hearing, not from the denial of the continuance request. The trial court ordered a second hearing to address whether plaintiff had requested a continuance in a timely manner. At the conclusion of that hearing, the trial court granted plaintiff's petition to vacate the arbitration award, finding that plaintiff's rights had been substantially prejudiced by the failure of the arbitrators to postpone the arbitration hearing on sufficient cause being shown. Additionally, the court ordered plaintiff's claims under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 to be arbitrated in the then pending arbitration before NASD. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1202) , finding at the outset that the order to arbitrate the Bus. & Prof. Code claims was not a rehearing that would prevent an appeal under Code Civ. Proc. § 1294 (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1195) . NASD Rule 10319(a) provides that the arbitrator(s) may, in their discretion, adjourn any hearing(s) either on their own initiative or on the request of any party to the arbitration. The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) is similar to Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5) and provides that an award be vacated if the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct in refusing to postpone the hearing, on sufficient cause being shown [9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(3)] (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1196-1197) . Chapter 1 of the FAA does not preempt California's statutory grounds for vacating an arbitration award, and California courts are not required to apply 9 U.S.C. § 10. Thus, when the arbitrator exercises his or her discretion to deny a postponement of the hearing, there are two questions to be considered in determining whether vacatur is required: whether the arbitrator abused his or her discretion by refusing to postpone the hearing on sufficient cause being shown; and if so, whether the party seeking the postponement suffered substantial prejudice as a result (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1198) . The court of appeal found there was no abuse of discretion by the arbitrators, and recapped the history of plaintiff's delays, which included filing three lawsuits, all of which were either dismissed or stayed so the arbitration could continue, challenging an arbitrator, who recused himself, seeking to add a new claim almost a year after the arbitration was originally set for hearing, and failing to appear at the arbitration hearing, which was reset approximately one year after it had been originally scheduled. The request for continuance came more than three years after plaintiff first initiated the arbitration, more than one year beyond the original arbitration date, and after plaintiff had already once refused to appear at the arbitration hearing. Plaintiff offered no excuse for failing to earlier assert its additional claims, which arose out of the same facts. Under these circumstances, the arbitrators could reasonably conclude there was no good cause to further delay the arbitration (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1198-1199) . Further, the trial court had no authority to order the arbitrators to expand the scope of the pending arbitration to include the new claims under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1198-1199) . Nor did the trial court have any discretion to vacate the award based on the arbitrator's refusal to include the Bus. & Prof. Code § 17000 claims (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1200-1201). Thus, the vacatur had to be reversed (150 Cal. App. 4th 1181, 1202) .

[b] Arbitrator Need Not Continue Hearing for Testimony When Written Records Are Available

Roitz v. Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage Co. (1998) 62 Cal. App. 4th 716, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 85 , involved 10 causes of action arising form plaintiff's termination as an independent contractor for defendant. The date for the arbitration hearing was set two months in advance. Defendant waited until two weeks before the hearing date to serve subpoenas on two doctors it wished to have testify. There was no indication in the record of any attempt by defendant to contact the doctors to ascertain if the arbitration dates were convenient or to make other arrangements to preserve their testimony. When the arbitrator refused to continue the hearing because of the doctors' unavailability, defendant's counsel departed; and the matter proceeded to default. An award of $260,000 was made in favor of plaintiff. Plaintiff petitioned to have the award confirmed, and defendant to have it vacated on the grounds that the arbitrator refused to hear testimony and was biased. The alleged bias was based on the arbitrator's refusal to continue the hearing or to waive his fee. The trial court confirmed the award. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that defendant did not demonstrate good cause for the continuance. Defendant made no showing why the doctors needed to be at the hearing. The arbitrator had the various medical records and could refer to them. No offer of proof was made why the records were insufficient to establish the point defendant desired to make through either of those witnesses. It is common practice at arbitrations to use medical records, declarations, and deposition transcripts in lieu of live testimony (62 Cal. App. 4th 716, 724) . The court also found the timeliness of the request to be highly questionable. The date for the arbitration hearing and the arbitrator's policy on fees and continuances were made know to the parties two months before the hearing date. Further, the arbitrator did not refuse to hear the doctors' testimony, but stated "if ... I have to have them come in at a later date, I will listen to their testimony" ( 62 Cal. App. 4th 716, 725) . Thus, the record demonstrated no prejudice to defendant from the failure to continue the hearing to hear the oral testimony of the doctors (62 Cal. App. 4th 716, 726) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.132

§ 20C.132 Method of Selecting Arbitrators Was Not Unconscionable

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED], BECAUSE THE METHOD OF SELECTING THE PANEL OF ARBITRATORS WAS REASONABLE WHEN THE PARTIES FORMED THEIR CONTRACT.

A. Selection Method Not Unconscionable. There is no inherent unconscionability in a multiple-party agreement that provides for each party to appoint an arbitrator and for those arbitrators to select a neutral arbitrator to complete the panel. Such an agreement is not made unconscionable or unfair by the fact that two or more of the parties' interests have become aligned against the other party or parties' interests at some point after the arbitration agreement is formed (Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 852-854, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to anticipate or respond to a claim that the selection process by which the arbitration panel was chosen was inherently unfair when in fact it was not until after the contract had been executed that the parties' interests became aligned against the party challenging the award. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11].

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should detail the history of the parties' agreement and the facts surrounding its drafting, including whether counsel who drafted it was employed by all parties or only some of them and what the respective bargaining positions of the parties were at the time the agreement was executed. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For memoranda addressing adhesion contracts and unconscionability in the context of compelling or resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, §§ 20.82, 20.83 (arbitration proper), and Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, §§ 20A.90, 20A.91 (arbitration not proper).

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Selection Method Not Unconscionable

The facts and procedural background of Tate v. Saratoga Savings & Loan Assn. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 265 Cal. Rptr. 440 , are discussed at § 20C.80[3][c]. The portion of the opinion addressing the prevailing party's entitlement to costs and attorney's fees are discussed at § 20C.110[3][a]. The arbitration agreement provided that each of the three joint venturers was to select one arbitrator, and those arbitrators were to select a neutral fourth arbitrator. The president and chairman of the board of the savings and loan association and one of the individual venturers had been friends and business associates since 1962. The two individual venturers formed their first venture in 1979. The joint venture agreement originally contemplated three individual venturers. The first three drafts of the venture agreement were drafted by an attorney who had worked for all of the venturers and the president and chairman. The last draft was revised by counsel for the association after the third individual decided not to participate in the venture.

On appeal, the association did not contend that the joint venture agreement was an adhesion contract, but argued that there is a constitutional requirement for a certain minimum level of integrity, which was not met by the arbitrator-selection process provided for by the agreement, and that as applied, that provision was unconscionable because it did not give the association a realistic and fair opportunity to prevail. The court of appeal disagreed.

The court noted that Civ. Code § 1670.5 requires unconscionability to be determined at the time the agreement was made (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 852-853) . The interests of the individual venturers were not necessarily aligned when the agreement was made. One put up the initial $500,000 deposit for the property, and one was apparently closer to the chairman. The court said that it reasonably appeared from the terms of the agreement and the evidence of the relationships among the venturers that any potential alignment in the event of a dispute would depend on who breached what promise to whom. When the superior court was petitioned to compel arbitration, one individual venturer was named as a respondent along with the association, and it was unclear what issues existed among the venturers, as well as what their positions were. Thus, the court concluded, there was no inherent unconscionability in the arbitration agreement (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 853) . The court said it was disinclined to rewrite the agreement to favor the association, particularly considering that the association had already had the final opportunity to do so (216 Cal. App. 3d 843, 854) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Selection Method Not Unconscionable

Woods v. Saturn Distribution Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 78 F.3d 424 , arose out of dealership terminations under an agreement governed by the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.; FAA). The arbitration was conducted in accordance with Saturn's Dealer Dispute Resolution Guide, which provided for arbitration by a panel of two Saturn dealers and two Saturn employees chosen from a pool of dealers and employees trained in Saturn's dispute resolution process. Though plaintiff at first objected to the composition of the panel and claimed in lacked fundamental fairness and was inherently biased against a dealer and in favor of Saturn, he later agreed to arbitrate. The award upheld the termination of plaintiff's dealerships but required Saturn to pay plaintiff approximately $90,000. The award was confirmed, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The FAA (9 U.S.C. § 10(a)(2)) allows an award to be vacated for evident partiality of the arbitrators. In nondisclosure cases, a reasonable impression of bias is sufficient to vacate an award (78 F.3d 424, 427) . In this case, however, the standard for actual bias was applicable. Plaintiff failed to show that the decision of the arbitrators was a result of their financial relationships with Saturn, that they would be more likely to decide in favor of Saturn, or that they would benefit from deciding in favor of Saturn. Further, plaintiff knew of those relationships when he agreed to the arbitration procedure (78 F.3d 424, 428-430) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.133

§ 20C.133 Illegality of Contract Provision Does Not Void Entire Award

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [BE CONFIRMED or NOT BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE CLAIMED ILLEGALITY DOES NOT GO TO THE ENTIRE CONTRACT [OR TRANSACTION] AND THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT ANY STATUTORY RIGHT OF A PARTY WOULD BE LEFT UNPROTECTED BY CONFIRMING THE AWARD.

A. Award Is Not Incompatible With Statutory Right. An award may not be vacated because of a claim that a provision of the contract construed or applied by the arbitrator is illegal or contrary to public policy except in rare cases when according finality to the arbitrator's decision would be incompatible with the protection of a statutory right (Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 33, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899).

[Optional] B. Legal and Illegal Transactions Under Similar Contracts. When an award covers a series of transactions under the same or similar contracts, all of which are challenged as illegal, the trial court should review the evidence de novo on a transaction by transaction basis. If only some of the transactions were illegal, and the policy of the statute involved would not be furthered by requiring one party to forfeit the benefits of the contract with respect to the legal transactions, an award regarding the legal transactions should not be vacated because other transactions were illegal (Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 888-889, 893-895, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484 (involving finder's exception to real estate licensing law [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10131, 10136])].

[Optional] C. No Waiver by Failing to Object to Arbitration. Unless a party is claiming that the entire contract is illegal or that the arbitration agreement itself is illegal, he or she need not raise the illegality question prior to participating in the arbitration process so long as the issue is raised before the arbitrator (Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 31, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used with a memorandum in support of a petition or response seeking to have an arbitration award confirmed, to assert the point that confirmation of the award is not precluded by the fact that some provision of the underlying agreement other than the arbitration provision is illegal or contrary to public policy.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.10] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to have the award confirmed. Counsel may also wish to include memoranda from §§ 20C.90-20C.92.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for other form of rejoinder to the respondent's opposing memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to be raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should (1) indicate the language of the illegal provision in the contract, (2) show that the illegality does not implicate the entire contract, and (3) explain why confirmation of the award, or a portion of it, not would violate any public policy or express statute. Generally, it will be appropriate to attacha copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.10 and 20C.11.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Is Not Incompatible With Statutory Right

The facts and procedural background of Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the issue of whether an award can be confirmed in the face of errors of law are discussed at § 20C.80[3][a]. Plaintiff contended that the fee-splitting provision of the employment contract was illegal and contrary to public policy, and that despite the limited scope of judicial review of arbitration awards, review has historically been available when one party alleges that the underlying contract, or part of it, or the resulting award is illegal or in violation of public policy. The Court first distinguished cases such as Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 204 P.2d 23 (discussed in § 20C.210[3][b]), and All Points Traders, Inc. v. Barrington Associates (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 723, 259 Cal. Rptr. 780 . Both of those cases involved transactions by unlicensed persons, who were required to have licenses to enter into the contracts, construction and investment brokerage, respectively. Thus, in those cases the issue was the illegality of the entire contract or transaction (3 Cal. 4th 1, 31-32) . The Court said that while it recognized there might be some limited and exceptional circumstances justifying judicial review of an arbitrator's decision when a party claims illegality affecting only a portion of the underlying contract, those cases would involve situations in which affirming the award would be inconsistent with the protection of a party's statutory rights. Without an explicit legislative express of public policy, courts should be reluctant to invalidate an award on this ground (3 Cal. 4th 1, 32) . Nothing in the Rules of Professional Conduct at issue in this case suggested that resolution by an arbitrator of what is essentially an ordinary fee dispute would be inappropriate or would improperly protect the public interest. Accordingly, judicial review of the claimed illegality was unavailable (3 Cal. 4th 1, 33) .

[b] Legal and Illegal Transactions Under Same Contract

Defendant in Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 888-889, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484 , acquired, franchised, and managed home health care businesses. Plaintiff assisted defendant in it acquisition efforts. Over a five-year period, the parties entered into 25-30 contracts, covering over 100 prospects. In 1995, plaintiff initiated arbitration to collect four finders fees. Defendant contended that plaintiff was not entitled to fees because he was not licensed under the Real Estate Law (Bus. & Prof. Code § 10000). Plaintiff contended that as a finder, not a broker, his activities fell within the finder's exception [see Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 10130, 10131, 10136]. The arbitrator found for plaintiff as to two transactions but found that in the other two transactions, he had acted as unlicensed broker and could not recover fees. Plaintiff sought to confirm the award for the two fees. Defendant opposed confirmation, urging that the trial court had the obligation to review the arbitrator's findings de novo and make its own determination regarding illegality. The trial court confirmed the award without de novo review. Defendant appealed, contending both that de novo review of the legality of each transaction was required and that if plaintiff acted a broker in some of the transactions, the finder's exception could not be applied to any of the transactions and the award would have to be vacated.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded to the trial court for de novo review of the legality of each transaction, but did not agree with defendant's contention that the award had to be vacated as to all transactions if plaintiff acted as broker in some of the transactions (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 889, 893, 895) . The court of appeal noted that although the trial court may not generally review an award for errors of law, there is an exception when a unlicensed party seeks to recover (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 889) . In such a case, the trial court should independently determine whether the parties' contact was illegal. Absent a license, the parties' agreement is illegal and unenforceable (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 890-891) . If plaintiff acted as an unlicensed real estate broker on a transaction, the arbitrator exceeded her powers to the extent she awarded compensation for that work [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 893) . The court of appeal discussed the finder's exception and noted that neither considerations of competency or trust are of importance when the undertaking is merely to find and introduce the principals. The public policy underlying the licensing requirements for brokers does not apply to enforcement of the promise to pay a finder's fee. The goal of the licensing law is adequately served by denying plaintiff any compensation on those transactions in which he crossed the line from finder to broker. By applying thefinder's exception on a transaction by transaction basis, defendant will be justifiably required to perform its contractual duty (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 894) .

[c] No Waiver by Failing to Object to Arbitration

The facts and procedural background of Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the issue of whether an award can be confirmed in the face of errors of law are discussed at § 20C.90[3][a]. Before addressing the merits of the illegality issue, the Court considered whether the issue had been adequately preserved for appellate review. Defendant contended that plaintiff waived the issue of illegality by failing to object to arbitration on that ground. The Court noted that while Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2(b), which requires arbitration except when grounds exist for the revocation of the agreement, does not specify whether grounds must exist to revoke the entire contract, the arbitration agreement only, or some other provision in the contract, a fair reading of the statutory scheme reveals that the Legislature must have meant revocation of the arbitration agreement. If a contract includes an arbitration agreement and grounds exist to revoke the entire contract, those grounds would also vitiate the arbitration agreement. Thus, if an otherwise enforceable arbitration agreement is contained in an illegal contract, a party may avoid arbitration altogether (3 Cal. 4th 1, 29) .

In contrast, when the alleged illegality goes only to a portion of the contract (other than the arbitration agreement), the entire controversy, including the issue of illegality, remains arbitrable (3 Cal. 4th 1, 30) . The Court distinguished Ericksen, Arbuthnot, McCarthy, Kearney & Walsh, Inc. v. 100 Oak Street (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 312, 197 Cal. Rptr. 581, 673 P.2d 251 (discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.42[3][a]), and cases dealing with entire agreements vitiated by fraud in the inducement, although the issue of fraud in the inducement is determined by the arbitrator (3 Cal. 4th 1, 30 n.13). However, the issue would have been waived had plaintiff failed to raise it before the arbitrator (3 Cal. 4th 1, 30) . Unless a party is claiming that the entire contract is illegal or that the arbitration agreement itself is illegal, he or she need not raise the illegality question prior to participating in the arbitration process so long as the issue is raised before the arbitrator (3 Cal. 4th 1, 31) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Not Incompatible With Statutory Right

The procedural background of Pacific Gas & Electric Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 295 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the breadth of the arbitrator's powers are discussed at § 20C.90[4][a]. Pacific Gas & Electric involved three separate challenges by seller/real party at interest, claiming that the award should be vacated because it required buyer/petitioner to pay more for gas than the ceiling price imposed by Natural Gas Policy Act of 1978 (15 U.S.C. § 3301 et seq.). In each respect, the court of appeal said that the arbitration award did not compel the seller to do an illegal act. The proper remedy would be to correct the award (by adjusting the price down to the ceiling) and affirming the award as corrected. As neither party sought correction, however, the court of appeal merely vacated the order vacating the award and ordered the award confirmed (15 Cal. App. 4th 576, 612-613) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
D. Circumstances That Do Not Prevent Confirmation or Require Vacating Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.134-20C.149

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.134[Reserved]

69 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.150

§ 20C.150 No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [NOT BE CONFIRMED or BE VACATED] BECAUSE NO AGREEMENT TO ARBITRATE EXISTED.

A. Award Unenforceable When No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed. When no agreement to arbitrate existed, an arbitrator's award exceeds the power of the arbitrators and the award must be vacated (Villacreses v. Molinari (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1230-1233, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 281 ; Lopez v. Charles Schwab & Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1224, 1229-1230, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544 ; Northern Cal. Dist. Council of Laborers v. Robles Concrete Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 289, 294, 196 Cal. Rptr. 776 ; see Heenan v. Sobati (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1001, 1003-1004, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 532 (order confirming award and judgment thereon were void)).

[Optional] B. When Attorney at Law Did Not Have Authority to Bind Client and Client Did Not Ratify or Consent to Agreement, No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed. In the absence of express authorization of counsel to sign a binding contract, a client is bound by an arbitration agreement signed by his or her counsel only if the client consented to or ratified the agreement (Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1221 & n.9, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration to assert that there was never any agreement to arbitrate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4) (arbitrators acted in excess of their powers)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show that no agreement to arbitrate existed. If there was a contract between the parties that included an arbitration clause, but that contract, or the arbitration clause, has been rescinded or has otherwise become unenforceable, counsel should discuss the facts supporting that contention [see § 20C.80 et seq. (defenses to arbitration based on voidness, waiver, or unenforceability)]. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see § 20C.20 or 20C.21.

For memoranda that may be appropriate to combine with this form addressing defenses to arbitration based on lack of an agreement to arbitrate in general or the subject matter that was arbitrated, or voidness, waiver, or unenforceability of an such agreement, see §§ 20C.10, 20C.40 et seq., or 20C.80 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Unenforceable When No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

Villacreses v. Molinari (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 34 Cal. Rptr. 3d 281 arose out of the sale of defendants' home to plaintiffs. The agreement of sale was apparently drafted by the parties themselves and did not contain any arbitration clause. Later the parties executed an escrow agreement, on a standardized form prepared by the escrow company, which recited that it was the only agreement between the parties relating to the transaction and did contain an arbitration provision. All parties initialed the arbitration provision in the escrow agreement. When plaintiffs discovered problems with the house after they moved in, they filed a complaint for breach of contract and rescission, among other things. Defendants petitioned to compel arbitration. The petition was granted over plaintiff's objection that the arbitration provision related only to the escrow, not to the underlying purchase and sale. The arbitrator found defendants had breached their obligations regarding disclosures relating to additions and permits, but found buyers suffered no damages on account of that breach, denied any relief to buyers, and awarded sellers $30,000 in costs. Defendants petitioned to confirm the award and plaintiffs to vacate it. The trial court confirmed the award, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed (132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1233) . An order compelling arbitration is not appealable, but the party challenging arbitration is entitled to have the order reviewed on appeal from the judgment confirming the award (132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1229) . In determining whether a valid arbitration agreement exists, the initial burden is on the party seeking to compel arbitration. The escrow agreement provided for arbitration of "all disputes to which it applies," rather than to all disputes between the parties and admits of some limitations on its scope (132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1230) . Defendants did not give the court any extrinsic evidence of what "it" meant and gave the court no basis to conclude that the language was intended by the parties to cover this particular dispute. Defendants failed to meet their initial burden to demonstrate any agreement to arbitrate this dispute (132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1231) . In fact, the language in the escrow agreement appeared to have been taken in part from the mandatory language required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1298 to accompany an arbitration provision in a real estate sale and purchase agreement (132 Cal. App. 4th 1223, 1231-1232) .

Lopez v. Charles Schwab & Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1224, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 544 is discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.10[3][a].

Northern Cal. Dist. Council of Laborers v. Robles Concrete Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 289, 196 Cal. Rptr. 776 , arose from an arbitration proceeding to enforce a prehire agreement made by an employer under 29 U.S.C. § 158(f) that agreed to the terms and conditions of a previous collective bargaining agreement that provided for arbitration to resolve any dispute under the agreement. The employer notified the union that it intended to cancel the prehire agreement and hired no union employees thereafter. The union later filed a grievance alleging that the employer had not complied with the terms of the agreement, the arbitration board agreed with the union. The union petitioned to confirm the award. The employer petitioned to vacate the award, arguing that the prehire agreement had been repudiated by the employer's notice to the union and its subsequent conduct in not hiring union employees. The trial court agreed and vacated the award, and the union appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court agreed with the trial court that the employer had effectively repudiated the prehire agreement, rendering the agreement void and unenforceable (149 Cal. App. 3d 289, 294) . The court held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] requires a court to vacate an arbitration award when the arbitrators exceeded their powers and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision on the controversy submitted (149 Cal. App. 3d 289, 294) . The court concluded that because no agreement to arbitrate existed in the case before it, the arbitration board's decision exceeded its powers, and the trial court correctly vacated the arbitration award (149 Cal. App. 3d 289, 294) .

The parties in Heenan v. Sobati (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 532 , stipulated to "binding judicial arbitration" before a sitting superior court judge. The judge entered a "Final Binding Award of Arbitration" in favor of plaintiffs. Plaintiffs moved to confirm the award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1295 and also filed a memorandum of costs and moved for an order fixing attorney's fees. The motion to confirm was granted and judgement was entered on the award, but the commissioner who heard the motion declined to award costs or attorney's fees. From this, the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed after asking for supplemental briefing on the jurisdictional defect regarding a sitting judge's capacity to conduct contractual arbitration. The court started its analysis by dismissing a fictional creature that appears as often as reports of the Loch Ness monster: the stipulation's oxymoronic reference to "judicial binding arbitration" by a sitting judge. There is no such statutorily created beast. Regrettably, the court said, this case provides yet another example of incoherent hybrids and bizarre mutations of supposed agreements for judicial or contractual arbitration. There are two statutory frameworks: nonbinding judicial arbitration under the Judicial Arbitration Act (JAA) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq.] and binding contractual arbitration under the California Arbitration Act (CAA) [Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.]; and the two are mutually exclusive [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1000] . The parties agreed they did not stipulate to judicial arbitration; but stipulations to contractual arbitration cannot stand as to sitting judges [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1001] . The court of appeal concluded that what the parties had agreed to was a bench trial in which they waived a court reporter and the right of appeal [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1003] . Therefore, there was no "arbitration" award to be confirmed. The power to issue a judgment, and to correct or modify it on post-trial review, rests with the judge who conducted the bench trial. The judgment and order on the motion to confirm the arbitration award are invalid [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1004] . The matter of attorney's fees should have been determined by the judge who issued the "award" [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005] . Thus the court of appeal remanded with directions that the trial court vacate the void judgment and order under the California Arbitration Act and transfer the matter to the judge who heard the matter for all further proceedings, including the entry of judgment, and any post-judgment matters concerning costs and attorney fees [96 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1006] .

[b] When Attorney at Law Did Not Have Authority to Bind Client and Client Did Not Ratify or Consent to Agreement, No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

In Toal v. Tardif (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 97 , defendant home sellers appealed a judgment of the Superior Court of Orange County, California, which confirmed an arbitration award in favor of plaintiff buyers in their action for breach of contract, negligence, misrepresentation, and negligent misrepresentation. The facts and the portion of the opinion discussing the court of appeal ruling that in the absence of express authorization of counsel to sign a binding contract, a client is bound by an arbitration agreement signed by his or her counsel only if the client consented to or ratified the agreement are discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.10[1][L], [3][l]. The court of appeals went on to rule that a client does not necessarily ratify an attorney's unauthorized arbitration stipulation simply by allowing the arbitration to proceed to an award. At the same time, allowing a party to object to an allegedly unauthorized stipulation to binding arbitration after an adverse decision has been reached raises the possibility of manipulation--of withholding an objection unless and until an unfavorable decision is announced (178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1222) . The court of appeal remanded for hearing on the issue of consent or ratification by the defendant (178 Cal. App. 4th 1208, 1224) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Unenforceable When No Agreement to Arbitrate Existed

Although the court of appeal in National Marble Co. v. Bricklayers & Allied Craftsmen (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 229 Cal. Rptr. 653 , confirmed an award against an employer in part because the employer did not sustain its burden of proof in establishing that the agreement was a prehire agreement under 29 U.S.C. § 158(f), it said that the right to repudiate such a prehire agreement is a matter of federal law regardless of the terms of the agreement. An employer is entitled to repudiate a 29 U.S.C. § 158(f) prehire agreement at any time before the union achieves majority status among its employees (184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1064) . The court clarified that an agreement may be a prehire agreement under 29 U.S.C. § 158(f) even if it covers only one employee, and that in order for an agreement to be a 29 U.S.C. § 158(f) prehire agreement, the employer must be primarily engaged in the construction and building business (184 Cal. App. 3d 1057, 1065) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.151

§ 20C.151 Award Procured by Undue Means

[1] FORM

GROUNDS EXIST FOR _____ [REFUSING TO CONFIRM or VACATING] THE AWARD PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1286.2(a)(1) BECAUSE IT WAS PROCURED BY _____ [PETITIONER'S or RESPONDENT'S] FRAUD IN _____ [specify conduct constituting fraud, e.g., FAILING TO ABIDE BY ITS STIPULATION].

A. Fraud of Party. Extrinsic fraud of a party, such as failure to abide by astipulation, is undue influence within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(1) sufficient to require vacating any resulting award (Pacific Crown Distributors v. Brotherhood of Teamsters (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1146-1148, 228 Cal. Rptr. 645).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award to assert that the award must be vacated because of the extrinsic fraud of a party [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.11] seeking to vacate the award, or a memorandum seeking rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.12].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show the particular conduct constituting extrinsic fraud. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fraud of Party

Pacific Crown Distributors v. Brotherhood of Teamsters (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 228 Cal. Rptr. 645 , was a dispute between an employer and a union, on behalf of a discharged worker, under a collective bargaining agreement. There was concern regarding whether Section 9.2(1) was finalized, accepted, and part of the agreement. Section 9.2(1) required that in all cases except proven theft, intoxication, or insubordination, an employee to be discharged shall be allowed to remain on the job without loss of pay unless and until the discharge is sustained under the grievance procedure. Prior to the arbitration hearing, the parties agreed that Section 9.2(1) would not apply in the arbitration proceeding. At the arbitration hearing, both parties stipulated that the only issue submitted to the arbitrator was whether or not the discharge was in accordance with the collective bargaining agreement, and if not, what was to be the remedy. No mention was made of Section 9.2(1) at the hearing. However, the union's posthearing brief argued that Section 9.2(1) had been violated because the employee had not been allowed to remain on the job until the grievance procedure was finished. The arbitrator found that the discharge was in accordance with the collective bargaining agreement but awarded back pay on the ground Section 9.2(1) had been violated. The superior court vacated that portion of the decision awarding back pay. The union appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)] requires judicial vacation of an arbitration award procured by corruption, fraud, or other undue means, and applies when fraud is perpetrated by either the arbitrator or a party involved. The fraud must be extrinsic as opposed to intrinsic (183 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1146-1147) . The court held that raising the Section 9.2(1) issue in the posthearing brief in violation of the agreement between the parties was extrinsic fraud (183 Cal. App. 3d 1138, 1147-1148) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.152-20C.169

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.152[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.170

§ 20C.170 Neutral Arbitrator Failed to Reveal Possibility of Bias

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [NOT BE CONFIRMED or BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE NEUTRAL ARBITRATOR FAILED TO REVEAL EXISTING FACTS, UNKNOWN TO _____ [PETITIONER or RESPONDENT], WHICH COULD REASONABLY HAVE CREATED THE IMPRESSION THAT THE ARBITRATOR POSSIBLY WAS BIASED.

A. Statutory Disclosures Required of Neutral Arbitrators. Within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the proposed nomination or appointment, a neutral arbitrator must disclose to the parties any information required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a), which includes the information required to be disclosed by Code of Civil Procedure Section 170.1, relating to disqualification of judges and the information required to be disclosed by the Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration, California Rules of Court, Appendix, Division VI, applicableto neutral arbitrators appointed to serve on or after July 1, 2002 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)).

B. Arbitrator Failed to Disqualify Self. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph H.]

[AND/OR]

B. Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Any Possibility of Bias. An award may be vacated if the neutral arbitrator failed to disclose to the parties any facts that might create an impression of possible bias in the eyes of a hypothetical, reasonable person (Ceriale v. AMCO Ins. Co. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 504, 506 . 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685 ; Kaiser Foundation Hospitals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 517, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 ; see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d)(4) (service as party arbitrator) and 7(d)(7) (attorney-client relationships); but see Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-847, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 (court did not vacate award where arbitrator did not disclose all of the details of prior arbitrations); and Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 (arbitrator's law firm's past representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with a party to the arbitration need not be disclosed)).

[Optional] C. Sporadic Business Dealings Are Sufficient for Vacating Award. A neutral arbitrator's failure to disclose even sporadic business relationships with a party to the arbitration constitutes legal cause for vacating the award (Kaiser Foundation Hospitals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 517, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 ; Johnston v. Security Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842, 86 Cal. Rptr. 133).

[Optional] D. Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Past Service as Party Arbitrator. The neutral arbitrator's duty of disclosure requires disclosing the fact that in previous arbitrations he or she was the party arbitrator selected by one of the parties to the present arbitration, and it is not enough merely to disclose that he or she was an arbitrator in previous arbitrations involving that party (Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators, Standard 7(d)(4)(A)(ii); Neaman v. Kaiser Foundation Hospital (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1177, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879); but see Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-847, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 (court did not vacate award where arbitrator did not disclose all of the details of prior arbitrations); and Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 (arbitrator's law firm's past representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with a party to the arbitration need not be disclosed)).

[Optional] E. Neutral Arbitrator to Disclose Service as Attorney in Second Arbitration in Which Attorney for Party to Present Arbitration Serves as Arbitrator. Even if there is no actual bias, an award must be vacated if the neutral arbitrator failed to disclose to the parties that at the time he or she was serving as their neutral arbitrator, he/she was acting as attorney in another arbitration in which the attorney for one of the parties to the arbitration was acting as arbitrator (Ceriale v. AMCO Ins. Co. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 504, 506 . 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685).

[Optional] F. Neutral Fire Insurance Appraiser to Reveal Any Possible Interest. Insurance Code Section 2071 requires a higher degree of impartiality from fire insurance appraisers than from arbitrators generally, such that nondisclosure of any business relationship existing between the insurer or the insurer's appraiser and the neutral appraiser during the pendency of the appraisal procedure is a sufficient ground for vacating an award under Insurance Code Section 2071 and Code of Civil Procedure Section 1286.2(a)(1), regardless of the significance of the relationship (Figi v. New Hampshire Ins. Co. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777-778, 166 Cal. Rptr. 774).

[Optional] G. Arbitrator Failed to Disclose Acceptance of Work as Neutral During Pendency of Arbitration. If an arbitrator intends to entertain other offers of employment from the parties or their lawyers while the current arbitration is pending, the arbitrator must disclose that intention in writing within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the arbitrator's proposed nomination or appointment. An arbitrator who does not disclose an intent to entertain additional offers from the parties or their lawyers, and despite the prohibition of Standard 12(c), accepts such an offer, must disclose that fact to the parties in writing within 10 calendar days. If an arbitrator who has not disclosed his or her intention to accept employment from a party of lawyer for a party accepts employment as a dispute resolution neutral from a party or lawyer while the arbitration is pending and fails to disclose that fact, any award rendered by that arbitrator must be vacated (Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A); Cal Rules of Ct, Appen., Div. VI, Standards. 7(d), (d)(4)(A)(i), 12(b), (c); Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-845, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117).

[Optional] H. Ties to Party's Insurer Had to Be Disclosed. The arbitrator was required to disclose that he and his law firm represented several protection and indemnity clubs which provided insurance and other business services and procured reinsurance support from syndicates of the company through which plaintiff was insured[. A representative from that insurer was present throughout the arbitration]. This relationship "could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial" within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.9(a) and thus had to be disclosed (Advantage Medical Services, LLC v. Hoffman (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 809, 817, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 935).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award on the ground that the neutral arbitrator failed to disclose facts which would create an impression of possible bias in the eyes of a reasonable person [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1), (2), (6)] or one of the matters required to be disclosed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1, 1281.9 or Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d) or 12 [but see NOTE at [3][a], below]. Failure to disclose any of those relationships is grounds for vacating an award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.6(a)(A)]; thus, if failure to make one of the required disclosures is involved, Paragraph H from § 20C.20[1] should be included in the memorandum. The Optional Paragraphs are for use if they correspond to the facts of counsel's particular situation.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.12].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should show the facts indicating the arbitrator's possible bias, that the party seeking to vacate the award was unaware of those facts at the time of the arbitration, how those facts were revealed, and how the facts indicate possible bias on the part of the neutral arbitrator. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994,230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the facts to be disclosed by neutral arbitrators and procedures for their disqualification, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Disclosures Required of Neutral Arbitrators

NOTE:

The California Ethics Standards will not apply in any arbitration in which the parties have agreed to arbitrate in accordance with New York Stock Exchange (NYSE) Arbitration Rules or the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD) Code of Arbitration Procedure. Both preempt the California Ethics Standards to the extent that the Securities and Exchange Commission has approved those rules and procedures in accordance with the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 [Credit Suisse First Boston Corp. v. Grunwald (9th Cir. 2005) 400 F.3d 1119, 1134-1136 (NASD rules) ; Mayo v. Dean Witter Reynolds (N.D. Cal. 2003) 258 F. Supp. 2d 1097, 1112 , as corrected at 260 F. Supp. 2d 979 ; accord Wilmot v. McNabb (N.D. Cal. 2003) 269 F. Supp. 2d 1203 ; Jevne v. Superior Court (JB Oxford Holdings, Inc.) (2005) 35 Cal. 4th 935, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 685, 111 P.3d 954] . NYSE Rules and NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure have their own disclosure requirements [see NYSE Arbitration Rule 610; NASD Code of Arbitration Procedure, Rule 10312].

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1, 1281.9(a) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7, 8, and 12 require a proposed neutral arbitrator, except one who is to conduct an arbitration pursuant to a public or private sector collective bargaining agreement, to disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial, including the following enumerated items [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(1) (which requires disclosure of any ground specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1 for disqualification of a judge); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d), 12(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.85(b), 1281.9(e)]:

- Family relationships between the arbitrator and his or her immediate or extended family and any party, party's spouse or domestic partner, officer, director, or trustee of a party, lawyer in the arbitration, a spouse or domestic partner of a lawyer in the arbitration, or a lawyer currently associated in the private practice of law with a lawyer in the arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(4), (5); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(1), (2); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 9(c) (inquiry of proposed arbitrator into relationships of lawyers associated in practice with lawyer in arbitration)].

- Whether or not he or she has a current arrangement concerning prospective employment or other compensated service as a dispute resolution neutral, or is participating in, or within the last two years has participated in, any discussions regarding such prospective employment or service with a party to the proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1(a)(8), 1281.9(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d)(6)].

- Particulars of prior or pending cases in which the proposed neutral arbitrator has acted or is acting as any of the following:

  - A neutral arbitrator [Code Civ. Proc. § 1291(a)(4); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(4)(A)(i), (iii)].

  - A party arbitrator [Code Civ. Proc. § 1291(a)(3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(4)(A)(ii)].

  - An other compensated dispute resolution neutral [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(5)].

- Attorney-client, and other professional or significant personal relationships, including those of the arbitrator's family, with any party or lawyer for a party [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 170.1(a)(2), 1291(a)(5), (6); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(3), (7)-(8)].

- Financial interests of the arbitrator and his or her immediate family in a partyof the subject matter of the arbitration, or other interests of theirs that could be substantially affected by the outcome of the arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(9)-(11)].

- Physical or scheduling problems that might effect his or her ability to perform as arbitrator [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(7); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(e)].

- The arbitrator or a member of the arbitrator's immediate or extended family has personal knowledge of disputed evidentiary facts relevant to the arbitration or is likely to be a material witness in the proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(12)].

- The arbitrator's membership in any organization that practices invidious discrimination on the basis of race, sex, religion, national origin, or sexual orientation [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(b)(13)].

- Any other matter that might cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6)(A)(iii); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(b)(14)(A)].

- Any other matter that leads the proposed arbitrator to believe either of the following:

  - There is a substantial doubt as to his or her capacity to be impartial, including, but not limited to, bias or prejudice toward a party, lawyer, or law firm in the arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6)(A)(ii), (B); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(b)(14)(B)].

  - The proposed neutral arbitrator's disqualification will further the interests of justice [Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6)(A)(i); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(b)(14)(C)].

- If, while that arbitration is pending, he or she will entertain offers of employment or new professional relationships in any capacity other than as a lawyer, expert witness, or consultant from a party or a lawyer for a party, including offers to serve as a dispute resolution neutral in another case [Cal. Rules of Court, Appen., Div. VI, Standard 12(b)].

- Beginning January 1, 2003, in any consumer arbitration in which a dispute resolution provider organization is coordinating, administering, or providing the arbitration services, certain particulars of any significant past, present, or currently expected financial or professional relationship or affiliation exists between the dispute resolution provider organization and a party or lawyer in the arbitration [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 8]. Note that if the financial relationship or affiliation between the provider organization and the party or attorney in the arbitration is a "financial interest," as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 170.5, that provider organization is prohibited from administering a consumer arbitration or providing any other services related to the consumer arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.92].

All of the foregoing are subject to the definitions set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1291(c)-(e) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 2 and 7 and are more fully discussed in California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding .

[b] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Any Possibility of Bias

Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d)(4)(ii), (B), regarding disclosure of a neutral arbitrator's prior service as party arbitrator is set forth at [d], below.

Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standards 7(d)(7) requires a proposed neutral arbitrator to disclose any attorney-client relationship the arbitrator has or has had with a party or a lawyer for a party [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(m) (definition of "lawyer for a party")]. Attorney-client relationship includes the following [Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(7)]:

> (A) An officer, a director, or a trustee of a party is or, within the preceding two years, was a client of the arbitrator in the arbitrator's private practice of law or a client of a lawyer with whom the arbitrator is or was associated in the private practice of law;
>
> (B) In any other proceeding involving the same issues, the arbitrator gave advice to a party or a lawyer in the arbitration concerning any matter involved in the arbitration [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 2(l) (definition of "lawyer in the arbitration" set forth at [c][vi], below)]; and
>
> (C) The arbitrator served as a lawyer for or as an officer of a public agency which is a party and personally advised or in any way represented the public agency concerning the factual or legal issues in the arbitration.

Ceriale v. AMCO Ins. Co. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685 , arose out of an automobile accident involving an uninsured motorist. Plaintiff was represented by the firm of Carrington & Nye. Victoria Lindenhauer was appointed arbitrator. She did not disclose that sometime between 1986 and 1992 she had been an associate in a firm with Nye and Richard Hardin, who at the time of the arbitration, was the managing partner of the firm representing AMCO. AMCO was aware of this past association, and made no objection to Lindenhauer's appointment. The arbitration in the Ceriale matter was continued for three months, during which time, Nye was appointed arbitrator in a judicial arbitration in which Lindenhauer represented a party. Lindenhauer did not disclose to the parties to the Ceriale arbitration that she represented a party in the case in which Nye was appointed arbitrator. Nye heard that arbitration while Lindenhauer was ill, so another attorney appeared at the hearing. Although Nye ruled in favor of Lindenhauer's client and had written up that decision, to avoid even the appearance of attempting to influence Lindenhauer, Nye did not mail that decision until he learned that Lindenhauer's decision in the Ceriale matter had been placed in the mail. Lindenhauer awarded Ceriale $278,169. AMCO moved to vacate the award and Ceriale to have it confirmed. AMCO contended, among other things, that Lindenhauer should have disclosed the past association and the fact that Nye was appointed arbitrator in a case in which she represented a party. The trial court denied AMCO's motion and confirmed the award. AMCO appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The standard to be applied is whether the record reveals facts which might create an impression of possible bias in the eyes of a hypothetical reasonable person (48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 504) . The trial court repeatedly stated that Lindenhauer, Nye, and Carrington were above reproach. The court of appeal stated it had no cause to dispute that, but the question is not one of actual bias, but whether a person aware of the facts might reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial given the circumstances (48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 506) .

Kaiser Foundation Hospitals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 , involved a wrongful death action by a decedent's survivors against a hospital. The dispute was submitted to binding arbitration under the medical and hospital service agreement between the decedent and the hospital. After the arbitrators rendered an award in favor of the hospital, the survivors discovered that the neutral arbitrator had served as the hospital's party arbitrator on a number of prior occasions. The survivors moved to vacate the arbitration award and the trial court granted the motion. The hospital petitioned the court of appeal, seeking a writ of mandate to direct the trial court to set aside its order.

The court of appeal denied the petition for writ of mandate. The court pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1, provides that a judge is to be disqualified if a person aware of the fact might reasonably entertain a doubt that the judge would be able to be impartial. Further, according to Johnston v. Security Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842, 86 Cal. Rptr. 133 , discussed at [c], below, arbitrators are required to disclose to the parties "any dealings that might create an impression of possible bias." Thus, the court concluded that the arbitrator's prior relationship with the hospital was one that he was required to disclose and he failed to do so (19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 517) . In addition, the court held that an artfully drafted letter by hospital's counsel, which was claimed to have put the opposing party on notice of the situation, did not relieve the arbitrator of his obligation disclose (19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 516) .

Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , involved a neutral arbitrator who acknowledged a prior relationship with both the defendant health care provider and its counsel, and he disclosed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9, that he had served as an arbitrator in a number of prior arbitrations involving them. He did not provide dates and other details of those prior arbitrations (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 835-836, 840) . The trial court denied plaintiff's motion to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the disclosure clearly put plaintiff on notice that the arbitrator had a significant history of arbitrating in cases in which defendant was a party (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841) .

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying patient's petition to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the patient, by consenting to proceed with arbitration despite being aware of deficiencies in the arbitrator's disclosure, waived her right to disqualify the arbitrator, and could not later challenge the arbitration award on the ground of inadequate disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841-843, 846) . The information that the arbitrator disclosed was sufficient to put plaintiff on notice of any potential bias on the arbitrator's part (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 834) . The court clarified that there is no question that arbitrator should have disclosed all details of his prior arbitrations with defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9; however, Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2, cannot be read to nullify every arbitration award stemming from an arbitration in which the arbitrator failed to disclose all of the details of prior arbitrations, particularly where neither party challenged the arbitrator despite being aware of the incomplete disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-843, 847) . The court interpreted Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2 to refer to a failure to disclose the existence and nature of any relationship between the arbitrator and the parties or the parties' attorneys, not the specifics of each such relationship (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842) .

In the case of Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 , a neutral arbitrator heard a matter involving a breach of construction agreement and issued an award against plaintiff who was a general contractor. The trial court confirmed the arbitration award against plaintiff. Subsequently, plaintiff filed a motion for an order correcting or vacating the arbitration award, alleging that the arbitrator had an undisclosed conflict of interest since arbitrator's law firm represented a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff in another matter. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion, finding that the arbitrator had no duty to disclose because the relationship between the arbitrator's law firm (not the arbitrator himself) and a third party adversary of plaintiff was not substantial. Plaintiff challenged the trial court's decision to confirm an arbitration award, contending the award should have been vacated because the arbitrator violated his disclosure obligation.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff argued that the arbitrator was required to disclose his law firm's past representation of a company that owed plaintiff over $3 million. The court's record showed the following: (1) another attorney in the arbitrator's law firm represented the debtor company at the beginning of a bankruptcy proceeding; (2) the debtor company's interests were adverse to plaintiff's interests; (3) those adverse interests resulted in litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff; (4) the arbitrator's law firm had withdrawn from representing the debtor company before the litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff began; and (5) the arbitrator was appointed in the present case a year and a half after his firm's withdrawal as attorney of record for the debtor company in its bankruptcy proceeding. The court of appeal held that the applicable rule of law was the general requirement of Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9(a) that a proposed neutral arbitrator must disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial. Based on the entirety of the facts, the court of appeal found that there was adequate support for the trial court's finding that an objective person would not reasonably doubt the arbitrator's ability to be impartial; thus, the arbitrator's law firm's prior representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff was not required to be disclosed (168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1140) .

[c] Sporadic Business Dealings Are Sufficient for Vacating Award

The facts and procedural background of Kaiser Foundation Hospitals, Inc. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 431 , are discussed at [b], above. In holding that a trial court did not abuse its discretion in ordering that an arbitration award be set aside when a neutral arbitrator failed to disclose that he had served as a party arbitrator for the opposing party on a number of occasions, the court stated that a neutral arbitrator's failure to disclose even sporadic business relationships with a party to the arbitration constitutes legal cause for vacating the award, citing Johnston v. Security Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842, 86 Cal. Rptr. 133 , discussed below (19 Cal. App. 4th 513, 517) .

In Johnston v. Security Ins. Co. (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 86 Cal. Rptr. 133 , the parties to a fire insurance policy resorted to arbitration over differences concerning fire loss benefits. Each was allowed under the policy to appoint a "competent and disinterested" appraiser, and the latter, in turn, were to appoint a "competent and disinterested umpire." After an award for the claimant, the claimant petitioned to confirm the award. The insurer petitioned to vacate it on the ground that the neutral umpire failed to disclose his relationships with the claimant's counsel and the appraiser appointed by the claimant. The trial court denied confirmation and vacated the award, and the claimant appealed.

The court of appeal, in affirming, found that federal and state law were practically identical in allowing vacation of an award for corruption, fraud, or partiality [cf. 9 U.S.C. § 10; Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)]. The court found persuasive the U.S. Supreme Court's approach in this area [see Commonwealth Coatings Corp. v. Continental Cas. Co. (1968) 393 U.S. 145, 148-149, 89 S. Ct. 337, 21 L. Ed. 2d 301] , that even in the absence of any showing of actual fraud, corruption, or possible partiality on the part of a neutral arbitrator, arbitrators should disclose to the parties any dealings that might create an impression of possible bias (6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 843-844) ; and that the arbitrator's failure to disclose even sporadic but substantial business relationships with a party to the arbitration constituted legal cause for vacating the award (6 Cal. App. 3d at 841-842). The fact that no actual fraud or bias was charged or proved against the arbitrator was immaterial. The neutral arbitrator was under a duty to disclose to the parties any dealings that might create an impression of possible bias at the outset of the hearings, and that included the facts that opposing counsel had been associated with the neutral arbitrator on various cases, had been referred cases by him, and on the date of the hearing opposing counsel was representing a client referred by the arbitrator (6 Cal. App. 3d 839, 843-844) .

[d] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Past Service as Party Arbitrator

If a proposed neutral arbitrator is serving, or within the preceding five years, has served as a party-appointed arbitrator in another prior or pending noncollective bargaining case for either a party to the current arbitration or a lawyer for a party, Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(3) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(d)(4)(A)(ii), (B) require him or her to disclose in writing to all of the parties, the names of the parties to each prior or pending case, and where applicable, the name of the attorney representing the party in the current arbitration who is involved in the pending case or was involved in the prior case, or whose current associate is involved in the pending case or was involved in the prior case, together with the results of each case arbitrated to conclusion, including the following:

- The date of the arbitration award.
- Identification of the prevailing party.
- The names of the parties' attorneys.
- The amount of monetary damages awarded, if any.

To preserve confidentiality, it is sufficient to give the name of any party who is not a party to the pending arbitration as "claimant" or "respondent" if that party is an individual and not a business or corporate entity [Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(b)(3)].

In Neaman v. Kaiser Foundation Hospital (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879 , the court of appeal vacated the award in a medical malpractice arbitration on the ground that the neutral arbitrator was required but failed to disclose that in atleast five previous arbitrations involving the same health care provider, he had served as the party arbitrator selected by the health care provider. The court concluded that the neutral arbitrator's duty of disclosure was not met by disclosing merely that he had served as an arbitrator in five previous arbitrations involving the same health care provider (without disclosing that he had been selected as that party's arbitrator) (9 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1177) .

Dornbirer v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan, Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , involved a neutral arbitrator who acknowledged a prior relationship with both the defendant health care provider and its counsel, and he disclosed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9, that he had served as an arbitrator in a number of prior arbitrations involving them. He did not provide dates and other details of those prior arbitrations (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 835-836, 840) . The trial court denied plaintiff's motion to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the disclosure clearly put plaintiff on notice that the arbitrator had a significant history of arbitrating in cases in which defendant was a party (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841) .

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying patient's petition to vacate the arbitration award, holding that the patient, by consenting to proceed with arbitration despite being aware of deficiencies in the arbitrator's disclosure, waived her right to disqualify the arbitrator, and could not later challenge the arbitration award on the ground of inadequate disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 841-843, 846) . The information that the arbitrator disclosed was sufficient to put plaintiff on notice of any potential bias on the arbitrator's part (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 834) . The court clarified that there is no question that arbitrator should have disclosed all details of his prior arbitrations with defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9; however, Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2, cannot be read to nullify every arbitration award stemming from an arbitration in which the arbitrator failed to disclose all of the details of prior arbitrations, particularly where neither party challenged the arbitrator despite being aware of the incomplete disclosure (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842-843, 847) . The court interpreted Code Civ. Proc., § 1286.2 to refer to a failure to disclose the existence and nature of any relationship between the arbitrator and the parties or the parties' attorneys, not the specifics of each such relationship (166 Cal. App. 4th 831, 842) .

In the case of Agri-Systems v. Foster Poultry Farms (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 917 , a neutral arbitrator heard a matter involving a breach of construction agreement and issued an award against plaintiff who was a general contractor. The trial court confirmed the arbitration award against plaintiff. Subsequently, plaintiff filed a motion for an order correcting or vacating the arbitration award, alleging that the arbitrator had an undisclosed conflict of interest since arbitrator's law firm represented a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff in another matter. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion, finding that the arbitrator had no duty to disclose because the relationship between the arbitrator's law firm (not the arbitrator himself) and a third party adversary of plaintiff was not substantial. Plaintiff challenged the trial court's decision to confirm an arbitration award, contending the award should have been vacated because the arbitrator violated his disclosure obligation.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff argued that the arbitrator was required to disclose his law firm's past representation of a company that owed plaintiff over $3 million. The court's record showed the following: (1) another attorney in the arbitrator's law firm represented the debtor company at the beginning of a bankruptcy proceeding; (2) the debtor company's interests were adverse to plaintiff's interests; (3) those adverse interests resulted in litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff; (4) the arbitrator's law firm had withdrawn from representing the debtor company before the litigation between the debtor company and plaintiff began; and (5) the arbitrator was appointed in the present case a year and a half after his firm's withdrawal as attorney of record for the debtor company in its bankruptcy proceeding. The court of appeal held that the applicable rule of law was the general requirement of Code Civ. Proc., § 1281.9(a) that a proposed neutral arbitrator must disclose all matters that could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial. Based on the entirety of the facts, the court of appeal found that there was adequate support for the trial court's finding that an objective person would not reasonably doubt the arbitrator's ability to be impartial; thus, the arbitrator's law firm's prior representation of a third party who had an adversarial relationship with plaintiff was not required to be disclosed (168 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1140) .

[e] Neutral Arbitrator to Disclose Service as Attorney in Second Arbitration in Which Attorney for Party to Present Arbitration Serves as Arbitrator

Ceriale v. AMCO Ins. Co. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 500, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 685 , is discussed at [b], above.

[f] Neutral Fire Insurance Appraiser to Reveal Any Possible Interest

Figi v. New Hampshire Ins. Co. (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 772, 166 Cal. Rptr. 774 , concerned a disputed insurance claim for fire loss which was arbitrated pursuant to the policy's standard appraisal clause mandated by Ins. Code § 2071. Plaintiff insured petitioned to vacate the award for fraud and corruption under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)] on the ground that an undisclosed business relationship between the neutral appraiser and the appraiser appointed by defendant insurer gave the appearance of bias. Although the business relationship was not shown to involve defendant insurer, it was found to have existed during the pendency of the appraisal. Plaintiff appealed the lower court's confirmation of the award.

The court of appeal reversed, reasoning that a higher standard of impartiality was imposed on fire insurance appraisers than on arbitrators generally. This higher standard arises from a specific requirement in Ins. Code § 2071 that such appraisers be "disinterested," as well as from the general duty of good faith and fair dealing owed by insurers to their insureds (108 Cal. App. 3d 772, 776-777) . In this case, the court held that the existence of the business relationship during the pendency of the appraisal, regardless of its significance, was a sufficient basis to vacate the award under Ins. Code § 2071 and former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1) and (6)], read together (108 Cal. App. 3d 772, 778) .

[g] Arbitrator Failed to Disclose Acceptance of Employment as Neutral During Pendency of Arbitration

Cal Rules of Ct, Appen., Div. VI, Standard 12(b) provides that, in addition to the disclosures required by Standards 7 and 8, within 10 calendar days of service of notice of the proposed nomination or appointment, a proposed arbitrator must disclose to all parties in writing if, while that arbitration is pending, he or she will entertain offers of employment or new professional relationships in any capacity other than as a lawyer, expert witness, or consultant from a party or a lawyer for a party, including offers to serve as a dispute resolution neutral in another case. A party may disqualify the arbitrator based on this disclosure by serving notice of disqualification in the manner and within the time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(b).

Cal Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 12(c) provides that if an arbitrator fails to make the disclosure required by subdivision (b) of this standard, from the time of appointment until the conclusion of the arbitration the arbitrator must not entertain or accept any such offers of employment or new professional relationships, including offers to serve as a dispute resolution neutral.

The facts and procedural background of Ovitz v. Schulman (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the fact that Code Civ Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A) is not preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act are discussed at § 20C.20[3][c]. As to the matter of disclosure, the court of appeal determined that without the disclosure required by Standard 12(b), the arbitrator's acceptance of employment in the second arbitration violated Standard 12(c) and the arbitrator's failure to disclose that employment within 10 calendar days violated both Standards 7(c) and 7(d)(4)(A)(i) (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838) .

The court discussed the governing statutes and California Ethical Standards for Disclosures by Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration [Cal. Rules of Court, Appen., Div. VI]. Standard 12(a) prohibits the arbitrator from entertaining or accepting an offer of employment as a lawyer, an expert witness, or a consultant from a party or lawyer in the pending arbitration. An arbitrator may entertain offers from the parties or their lawyers to serve in other capacities, if the arbitrator discloses that intent pursuant to Standard 12(b). The parties can disqualify the arbitrator based on such a disclosure (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 838-839) . Further, under Standard 12(c), the arbitrator's failure to make the disclosure required by Standard 12(b) precludes the arbitrator from entertaining or accepting any offer of employment from the parties or their lawyers from the time of appointment until the conclusion of the arbitration. Under Standard 7(c) and (d)(4)(A)(i), an arbitrator serving as a neutral arbitrator in another prior or pending non-collective bargaining case involving a party to the current arbitration or a lawyer for a party must disclose that to the parties in writing within 10 calendar days after the arbitrator becomes aware of the matter (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 840) . Under Standard 7(b), if an arbitrator has disclosed to the parties that he or she will entertain offers of employment or of professional relationships from a party or lawyer for a party while the arbitration is pending as required by Standard 12(b), the arbitrator is not required to disclose to the parties in that arbitration any such offer from a party or lawyer for a party that he or she subsequently receives or accepts while that arbitration is pending (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 840-841) . However, if the arbitrator does not disclose an intent to entertain additional offers from the parties or their lawyers, the arbitrator cannot accept any such offer until the current arbitration is concluded. If, despite this prohibition, the arbitrator accepts such an offer, the arbitrator must disclose that fact to the parties in the current arbitration in writing within 10 calendar days [Cal Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 7(c)] (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 841) .

Here, the arbitrator's initial disclosure did not disclose an intent to entertain offers of employment or new professional relationships from a party or a lawyer for a party (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 842-843) . Having failed to comply with Standard 12(b), the arbitrator was precluded from serving as an arbitrator in any other matter involving theparties or any lawyer for the parties until the arbitration was completed [Cal Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. VI, Standard 12(c)]. However, the arbitrator accepted appointment in a second case in which he knew a party was represented by the same law firm that representing the joint venture parties. Besides being prohibited by Standard 12(c), the arbitrator's service in the second arbitration was a matter covered by the disclosure requirement of Standard 7(d)(4)(A)(i), which under Standard 7(c), the arbitrator was required to disclosure, in writing, within 10 calendar days of his appointment in the second case. Although the first hearing in the second arbitration was held on March 1, 2004, the arbitrator did not make any written disclosure until May 27, 2004, by which time the arbitrator had orally ruled and directed the joint venture parties to draft a proposed arbitration award. The arbitrator's failure to comply timely with his disclosure obligations has a severe consequence: the vacating of any arbitration award rendered by the arbitrator [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(6)(A)] (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 844). These failures require that the arbitration award be vacated. Further, defendant did not forfeit her right to vacate the award based on any disclosure violation (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 845). Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.91(c), a party is deemed to have waived the right to disqualify the arbitrator if the party fails to act within the 15-day time period provided in section 1281.91(a) or (b), unless the proposed nominee or appointee makes a material omission or material misrepresentation in his or her disclosure. Here, the arbitrator's initial disclosure statement contained a material omission: it failed to disclose under Standard 12(b) that he intended to entertain other offers of employment from the parties or their attorneys. Even if not initially material, it certainly became material when, in violation of Standard 12(c), the Arbitrator accepted appointment in the second case, and failed timely to disclose it under Standards 7(d)(4)(A)(i) and 7(c). Thus, defendant did not waive her right to challenge the arbitrator. The waiver rule of section 1281.91(c) manifestly applies only when the proposed arbitrator has made the requisite disclosure (133 Cal. App. 4th 830, 846) .

[h] Ties to Party's Insurer Had to Be Disclosed

The court of appeal found substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding that disclosure of the arbitrator's and his law firm's ties to plaintiff's insurer "could cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the proposed neutral arbitrator would be able to be impartial" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a) and the arbitrator's failure to disqualify himself warranted vacating the award (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 809, 816) . The court discussed Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(2) and (6) and Standard 7(d)(14)(A) of the California Rules of Court, Ethics Standards for Neutral Arbitrators in Contractual Arbitration (Standards). Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.9(a)(2) and (6) require disclosure of any matters required to be disclosed by the ethics standards and any professional or significant personal relationship the proposed neutral arbitrator has or has had with any party to the arbitration proceeding or lawyer for a party. Standard 7(d)(14)(A) requires disclosure of any matter even if it is not specifically enumerated in the standard, if it might cause a person aware of the facts to reasonably entertain a doubt that the arbitrator would be able to be impartial. This duty is a continuing duty, applying from service of the notice of the arbitrator's proposed nomination or appointment until the conclusion of the arbitration proceeding (160 Cal. App. 4th 806, 817) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Neutral Arbitrator to Reveal Any Possibility of Bias

Schmitz v. Zilveti (9th Cir. 1994) 20 F.3d 1043 , concerned a dispute in which a post-award investigation revealed that the neutral arbitrator's law firm represented the parent corporation of an opposing party in at least 19 cases during a period of 35 years, with the most recent representation ending approximately 21 months before the current arbitration was submitted. A party to the arbitration challenged the arbitration award in district court, alleging that the award should be vacated because the arbitrator was evidently partial under federal statute allowing vacation of an arbitration award. The district court upheld the award and the party appealed.

The Ninth Circuit court of appeals reversed, vacating the arbitration award. The court held that the arbitrator had a duty under the arbitration association's rules to make a reasonable effort to inform himself of his firm's representation of the opposing party. The arbitrator did nothing to fulfill that duty, and although he lacked actual knowledge, he had constructive knowledge. Given his constructive knowledge and the presence of conflict, the arbitrator's failure to inform the parties to the arbitration of his law firm's representation resulted in a reasonable impression of partiality warranting vacatur of the award (20 F.3d 1043, 1049) .

In Britz, Inc. v. Alfa-Laval Food & Dairy Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 700 , plaintiffs petitioned to vacate an arbitration award on the basis of, among other grounds, the arbitrator's conflict of interest. Before arbitration was ordered and while it was pending, the defendants were represented in the trial court by a law firm (McCormick) that had made referrals to the arbitrator and occasionally retained him as an expert witness. A different law firm represented defendants in the arbitration proceeding, except on one occasion, when an attorney in the McCormick firm wrote a letter on firm letterhead to the arbitrator regarding issuance of a subpoena in the matter. After liability was determined (the arbitration was bifurcated), plaintiffs requested the arbitrator to disclose all past and present relationships with McCormick, and learned that the arbitrator had been retained by McCormick as an expert witness in two matters in November and December of 1991, matters in which he was still involved at the time of making the disclosure. Plaintiffs requested the AmericanArbitration Association (AAA) to appoint a new arbitrator, and when the AAA refused, sought relief from the court, which was also denied. Plaintiffs again raised this issue on their later petition to vacate the award, which the trial court denied. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that, although the arbitrator had not then disclosed his prior involvement with the McCormick firm, plaintiffs had adequate knowledge of the referrals of business so that they had waived any objection based on these facts by their initial acceptance of the arbitrator without seeking further disclosure (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1097) . However, the trial court erred as a matter of law in holding that plaintiffs had waived the objection based on the expert witness relationship that began just a few weeks before arbitration commenced (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1097-1099) . The AAA decision on the issue of bias was not entitled to the same degree of finality that is afforded any other issue submitted for determination by an arbitrator, but is subject to de novo review by the trial court on a petition to confirm or vacate an award (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1099-1103) . The applicable test was that the arbitrator was under a duty to disclose any dealings that might create an impression of possible bias (34 Cal. App. 4th 1085, 1104) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.171

§ 20C.171 Parties' Agreement Supercedes Normal Standards

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [NOT BE CONFIRMED or BE VACATED] BECAUSE THE _____ [specify, e.g., INTEGRATION CLAUSE IN THIS CONTRACT PREVENTED THE ARBITRATOR FROM CONSIDERING EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE]. THEREFORE, IT IS/WAS NOT WITHIN THE _____ [TRIAL COURT'S or ARBITRATOR'S] POWER TO _____ [MAKE or REVIEW] THE AWARD IT THIS CASE, WHICH CLEARLY _____ [specify, e.g., WAS BASED ON THAT EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE].

A. Arbitrator Had No Power to Consider Extrinsic Evidence. The agreement under which the parties arbitrated this case contains an integration clause that specifically prohibits introduction of any extrinsic evidence whatsoever in any judicial or arbitration proceeding involving the contract. Because the award in this case is clearly based on consideration of extrinsic evidence, it must be vacated as in excess of the arbitrator's powers (Bonshire v. Thompson (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 810-812, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award when the parties' agreement provides special terms limiting the arbitrator's power [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)], in this instance, in the manner provided in the case cited. The parties' ability to provide for special rules of evidence or review is limited. For example, the parties may not require judicial review for errors of law (or fact) [see Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum Authority v. CC Partners (2002) 101 Cal. App. 4th 635, 638, 645-647, 124 Cal. Rptr.2d 363 , discussed at § 20C.96[3][a]]. See also §§ 20C.90 -20C.92, addressing the extent to which an arbitrator may award relief not specifically authorized by the contract, but may grant any rationally related relief based on broad equitable principles.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.22].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the exact language relied on to prohibit consideration of extrinsic evidence and should emphasize every brief, memorandum, and piece of documentary evidence that constitutes or refers to the extrinsic evidence. Counsel should also demonstrate that it would have been impossible for the arbitrator to make the award that was made except on the basis of that extrinsic evidence. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a form opposing this form and supporting the contention that the parties' attempt to confer jurisdiction on the trial court to review an arbitration award for errors of law and sufficiency of the evidence renders the entire arbitration provision void unenforceable, see § 20C.96.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Has No Power to Consider Extrinsic Evidence

Bonshire v. Thompson (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 716 , arose from the sale of all the stock of a business. Defendants/sellers contended that in addition to the stated purchase price, they were entitled to the cash in the company's bank account at the time of the sale as well as all payments on accounts receivable through close of escrow, less payables and expenses. Sellers instituted arbitration proceedings under the contract which stated in part that its terms were the final expression of the parties' intent "any may not be contradicted by evidence of any prior agreement or contemporaneous oral agreement. The parties further intend that this agreement constitutes the complete and exclusive statement of its terms and that no extrinsic evidence whatsoever may be introduced in any judicial or arbitration proceeding, if any, involving this agreement." Sellers' arbitration brief sought reformation of the contract based on unilateral or bilateral mistake. The award was in favor of sellers, granting them the excess sums they sought. Buyer sought to have the award vacated as excess of the arbitrator's powers, but the trial court confirmed the award, and granted judgment thereon. Plaintiff/buyer appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The sum awarded was identical to the sum sought by sellers in their arbitration briefs and their responses to the petition to vacate. From that record, the court said it was compelled to conclude that the arbitrator had relied on extrinsic evidence (52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 810) . Sellers argued that under Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994 (discussed at § 20C.91[3][c]), the award should be upheld because it bore a rational relationship to the contract and the breach. Intel also held that the parties may specifically agree to compel the arbitrator to follow legal rules and that the powers of an arbitrator are derived from, and are limited by, the agreement to arbitrate [Advanced Micro Devices, Inc. v. Intel Corp. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 362, 374-375, 381, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581, 885 P.2d 994] (52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 810) . In this case, the contract established that the parties agreed to limit the powers of the arbitrator by prohibiting the introduction of, and reliance on extrinsic evidence. In light of that limitation, an award based on a term that extrinsic evidence established was omitted from the contract, wasnot rationally related to the contract. Rather, the arbitrator exceeded his powers within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1) and (6)] (52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 811) . The parties' express prohibition on reformation of the contract in the integration clause disposed of sellers' reliance on general principles regarding reformation of contracts and required that the award adding the terms regarding cash and receivables be vacated as in excess of the arbitrator's powers (52 Cal. App. 4th 803, 812) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.172-20C.189

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.172[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.190

§ 20C.190 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Awarding Relief Not Provided for by Law or Parties' Agreement

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MUST BE VACATED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR EXCEEDED [HIS or HER] POWERS BY AWARDING RELIEF NOT PROVIDED FOR BY THE PARTIES' CONTRACT [OR LAW], SPECIFICALLY, BY _____ [specify, e.g., AWARDING FORFEITURE OF THE WITHDRAWING PARTNERS' CAPITAL ACCOUNTS].

A. Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph F.]

B. Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Contrary to Parties' Agreement. An arbitrator acts exceeds his or her powers by ordering relief that is contrary to the parties' agreement[, which prohibited any remedy not available in a court of law, and which did not provide that a wrongfully withdrawing partner forfeit his or her capital account] (O'Flaherty v. Belgum (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1056-1061, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286).

[Optional] C. Insurance Appraiser Had No Authority to Determine Coverage. Under Insurance Code Section 2071, appraisers have power only to determine a specific question of fact, namely, the actual cash value of the insured item. It is certainly not their function to resolve questions of coverage and interpret provisions of the policy. When an appraisal panel exceeds its powers by deciding coverage issues, and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision, the decision must be vacated (Kacha v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1026, 1032-1033, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award if the arbitrator has exceeded his or her powers by awarding relief contrary to the parties' agreement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)].

Optional Paragraph C is for use to challenge a fire insurance appraisal award under Ins. Code § 2071 when the appraisers exceeded the statutory authority by deciding coverage issues.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum and should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.22]. If the parties' agreement prohibits an award that would not be available in a court of law, or is not authorized by law, counsel should add authority relating to that particular law.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, the argument should set forth the exact language of the parties' agreement and the specific portions of the award that are contrary to that agreement. Counsel should also demonstrate that the parts of the award that are contrary to the parties' agreement are inextricably intertwined with the remainder of the award so that it is impossible to correct to award by merely deleting the portions of it that contravene the parties' agreement. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Contrary to Parties' Agreement

O'Flaherty v. Belgum (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286 , involved several actions between withdrawing partners and remaining partners of a dissolvinglaw partnership, O'Flaherty & Belgum ("OB"). Claims included breach of contract, intentional violation of fiduciary duty, conversion, appointment of an impartial receiver, an accounting, and judicial dissolution of the partnership. A receiver was appointed to hold the partnership's property and wind up the partnership's affairs during the parties' dispute-resolution process, in part to insure the effect of any arbitration award and resulting judgment specifying how the partnership should be wound up and liquidated. The receiver's powers included enforcing and collecting debts, instituting lawsuits on behalf of OB to preserve and protect the partnership's assets, discharging obligations of OB from the funds in its possession, and engaging the services of counsel.

Arbitration was ordered in accordance with the partnership agreement, but the receiver chose not to participate. His position was that under the court order the partners were to complete arbitration of all disputes between them and not to involve the receiver on behalf of OB. Nevertheless, the withdrawing partners' attorney purported to represent OB in connection with the arbitration proceedings. The receiver first demanded in writing that the attorney cause the dismissal of OB from the action in which arbitration was ordered because the receiver was the only person authorized to bring a lawsuit on behalf of OB, and he did not authorize that attorney to file the action on behalf of OB.

Later, the receiver sent a letter by fax to the withdrawing partners' attorney stating that the receiver was the only authorized representative of OB and that he had not retained or authorized anyone to represent OB or the receiver in the arbitration proceeding. That letter was transmitted to the arbitrator. Nevertheless, the arbitrator's interim findings included several establishing liability of the withdrawing partners to OB. The receiver then advised the arbitrator that he, the receiver, had not authorized anyone to take part in the arbitration on behalf of OB, and the person who had purportedly made an appearance for OB was not authorized to do so. The receiver requested that the arbitrator strike the counterclaims in OB's name from the order. The receiver sought instructions in the receivership action concerning how to proceed with the interim arbitration award in favor of OB and was instructed not to participate and to allow the arbitration to proceed as it had been proceeding. The final award again awarded sums to OB from the withdrawing partners and found that because of the withdrawing partners' breaches of their contractual and fiduciary duties, they had forfeited all rights under the partnership agreement and it was therefore not necessary to calculate their capital accounts. The award was confirmed, and judgment entered thereon. The withdrawing partners appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding the award had to be vacated because the arbitrator exceeded his powers. The court based its decision on only two of the grounds urged for error: the forfeiture of the withdrawing partners accounts and jurisdiction by the arbitrator over a partnership in receivership over the objection of the receiver (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1055, 1063-1064) . One way an arbitrator can exceed his or her powers is by acting in a manner not authorized by the contract or by law (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1056) . The partnership agreement provided for arbitration and also provided that the arbitrator did not have the power to alter, amend, modify or change any terms of the partnership agreement or grant any remedy prohibited by the terms of the agreement, or not available in a court of law.

The forfeiture was contrary to partnership law, the partnership agreement, and decisional law. The partnership was governed by the 1994 Uniform Partnership Act, which provided that a partner is entitled to a settlement of all partnership accounts on winding up the partnership business [see Corp. Code § 16807(b), Stats. 1996, ch. 2003 § 2]. A partner who "wrongfully disassociates" from the partnership is liable for damages [Corp. Code § 16602(c)], but there is no statutory reference to a forfeiture of an account. Among the various remedies in the Uniform Partnership Act, there is no provision for a forfeiture of a capital account. Nor did the partnership agreement provide for forfeiture of a partner's capital account, even in the event of a partner's wrongful withdrawal from the firm or involuntary termination of a partner for cause. To the contrary, the agreement provided for a return of capital, even to a wrongfully withdrawing partner (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1057) . California case law does not support a forfeiture of a capital account (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1058) . The majority rejected the dissent's view that application of the doctrine of unclean hands would allow the arbitrator to award the forfeiture (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1059-1061). This award exceeded the arbitrator's powers and was not susceptible to correction (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1063) . The forfeiture of the capital accounts also potentially affected the damage award. Had the capital accounts not been forfeited, an accounting would have been required. The award had to be vacated (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1064) .

[b] Insurance Appraiser Had No Authority to Determine Coverage

Kacha v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 92 , involved a fire insurance appraisal award. In October, 2003, plaintiffs' home and personal property were damaged by heat and smoke in a wildfire designated the Cedar Fire. Allstate provided Kacha homeowners insurance and valued the cost to clean the home and contents at $25,799.77. It paid that amount to Kacha, who retained a licensed public adjuster, and demanded an appraisal, as provided by the insurance policy if the parties could not agree on the amount of loss. Plaintiffs claimed $639,688.82 in covered losses, which included the cleaning the damaged property when applicable and the repair or replacement of permanently damaged property. Plaintiffs petitioned the superior court to compel an appraisal and appoint an umpire. The trail court did so, and the appraisal was held at Kacha's home, on November 15 and 16, 2004, and January 4, 2005. Allstate presented an appraisal brief claiming this was not a standard appraisal because more than the value of the loss was at issue and that damage to numerous items was not caused by smoke or heat from the Cedar Fire. Throughout the process, plaintiffs' counsel urged that there could not be a determination of coverage or cause of loss by the appraisal panel. In January, 2005, the panel delivered an appraisal award for $163,792 in replacement cost value and $155,993 in actual cash value. Allstate sent Kacha two checks totaling $138,010.07, representing the $163,792 sum, less the amount it already paid on the claim. Kacha, however, did not endorse or negotiate the checks, but applied to the appraisal panel to correct the award, arguing the panel had exceeded its authority by making coverage determinations reserved to Allstate. Two of the three appraisers denied the request to correct theaward, claiming the parties had stipulated to the coverage determinations. Kacha then filed a petition in superior court to vacate the appraisal award, which was also denied. The award was confirmed. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, noting that it is settled that appraisers have the power only to determine a specific question of fact, namely, the actual cash value of the insured item (140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1025-1026, 1038) . The court agreed with plaintiffs' contention that the trial court erred by finding consent to the form of the appraisal award constituted a waiver of rights under Ins. Code § 2071. Since its enactment in 1909, Section 2071 has directed that the standard form for fire insurance policies include an appraisal provision to settle disagreements concerning the amount of loss. The function of appraisers is to determine the amount of damage resulting to various items submitted for their consideration. It is certainly not their function to resolve questions of coverage and interpret provisions of the policy. There is no authority suggesting that an appraisal panel is empowered to determine whether an insured lost what he or she claimed to have lost or something different (140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1032) . An insurer is free to litigate whether the insured has misrepresented what he or she lost; but it is beyond the scope of an appraisal. When an appraisal panel exceeds its powers by deciding coverage issues, and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision, the decision must be vacated (140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1033) . The court of appeal discussed the waiver issue at length, admitting that the introductory language of the appraisal award form was ambiguous but concluded that, standing alone, it did not establish a waiver of rights so as to authorize the appraisers to decide whether actual damage to claimed items was caused by the Cedar Fire. The court concluded that the trial court's finding of waiver was not supported by substantial evidence (140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1033-1035). Accordingly, the trial court erred by denying his motion to vacate the appraisal award as exceeding the panel's jurisdiction (140 Cal. App. 4th 1023, 1035-1036).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.191

§ 20C.191 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Deciding Issues Which Only Receiver Had Standing to Tender

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MUST BE VACATED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR EXCEEDED [HIS or HER] POWERS BY ADJUDICATING CLAIMS OF AN ENTITY IN RECEIVERSHIP WITHOUT THE PARTICIPATION OF[, AND OVER THE OBJECTIONS OF], THE RECEIVER.

A. Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph F.]

B. Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Determining Claims of Entity in Receivership. If a receiver has been appointed for a party to the arbitration, generally only the receiver will have standing to represent that party. If the receiver declines to participate in the arbitration, any award purporting to determine claims of the entity in receivership will be in excess of the arbitrator's powers [see O'Flaherty v. Belgum (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1061-1063, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286 (receiver of dissolving partnership declined to participate in arbitration)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award if the arbitrator has exceeded his or her powers by determining the claims of an entity in receivership without the receiver's participation in the arbitration, and possibly over the receiver's objection [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum and should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.22].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should set forth the exact language of both the order appointing the receiver and the order compelling arbitration. Any correspondence between the receiver and the arbitrator or any specific instructions by the receivership court relating to the arbitration should also be included. Counsel should also demonstrate that the parts of the award relating to the entity in receivership are inextricably intertwined with the remainder of the award so that it is impossible to correct to award by deleting the portions of it relating to the entity in receivership. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file (including verified pleadings), or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied if plaintiff-respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For discussion of forms relating to receiverships, see Ch. 200, Receivers .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Exceeded Power by Award Determining Claims of Entity in Receivership

The facts and procedural background of O'Flaherty v. Belgum (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 286 , and the portion of the opinion pertaining to the arbitrator's award of forfeiture of capital accounts, which was in excess of his powers, is discussed at § 20C.190[3][a].

Another basis on which vacation of the award was sought was the arbitrator's exercise of jurisdiction, the objection of the receiver notwithstanding, over a partnership in receivership ("OB"). The order appointing the receiver directed the receiver to "operate and conduct the Partnership in the ordinary and usual course of its business other than practicing law" pending the resolution of the arbitration between the individual partners. The trial court's orders and rulings compelling arbitration were specifically limited to the individual partners and did not encompass the dissolving partnership. Nevertheless, the attorney for the withdrawing partners, over the objection of the receiver, filed an action and then a counter-demand for arbitration on behalf of OB (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1061) .

In the absence of a specific order to the contrary, a receiver appointed for a dissolved partnership has the sole authority to commence an action on behalf of that partnership [Code Civ. Proc. § 568]. An arbitrator may not encroach on the jurisdiction of the receivership court. The receivership is in the hands of the receiver, and is under the control and continuous supervision of the court. Like an executor or bankruptcy trustee, who are real parties in interest over their estates, a receiver is the real party in interest over the receivership estate. Because individual partners may not sue for damages to the partnership or their interests in the partnership, only the receiver for the partnership may maintain those claims. The attorney for the withdrawing partners did not have the power or right to prosecute any claims on behalf of OB in the arbitration, and the arbitrator did not have jurisdiction to consider them (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1062) .

Although the receivership court was aware of the actions of the attorney for the withdrawing partners on behalf of OB over the opposition of the receiver, the receivership court never expressly authorized or ratified those actions. The arbitrator exceeded his jurisdiction in purporting to adjudicate OB's claims. That adjudication could not be severed from the award. The arbitrator's determination that the withdrawing partners violated OB's rights are intertwined with findings as to other parties. The arbitrator based the award, in part, on his determination that the withdrawing partners improperly caused the appointment of the receiver. The court declined to say that the presence of, and those portions of the award relating to, OB did not affect the remaining portion of the award, or if they did, what effect the adjudication of the OB claims had on the award. Thus, the court ruled that entire award be vacated. The fact that the receiver had then been discharged was of no consequence (115 Cal. App. 4th 1044, 1063) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.192

§ 20C.192 Arbitrator Exceeded Powers by Dismissing Arbitration

[1] FORM

THE AWARD MUST BE VACATED BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR EXCEEDED HIS [or HER] POWERS BY DISMISSING THE ARBITRATION[, EVEN FOR A CHANGE IN THE LAW SINCE THE COURT ORDERED ARBITRATION].

A. Arbitrators Exceeded Their Powers. [See § 20C.20[1], Paragraph F.]

B. Arbitrator Had No Power to Dismiss Arbitration for Change in Law. The question of whether the parties are bound by a particular arbitration agreement is a question for the court. An arbitrator exceeds his [or her] authority by reexamining whether the parties were bound by the arbitration provision; and [even if the law changes while the matter is being arbitrated], the legal validity of the arbitration provision is a matter for determination by the court (Malek v. Blue Cross of California (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 56, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate the dismissal of an arbitration when the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers by reexamining whether the parties were bound by the arbitration agreement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)]. Presumably, the correct procedure when the law changes during arbitration is to petition the trial court to reconsider its original order compelling arbitration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1008(c); Malek v. Blue Cross of California (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 59-60, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687 (that portion of opinion discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.94[3][c])].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.22].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the order of dismissal or award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, ofgrounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator Had No Power to Dismiss Arbitration for Change in Law

The facts and procedural background in Malek v. Blue Cross of California (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 687 , and the portion of the opinion dealing with the consequences of failure to comply with Health & Safety Code § 1363.1 are discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.94[3][c]. Briefly, arbitration was ordered at a time when Health & Safety Code § 1363.1 was held to be preempted by the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA), even though the arbitration provision involved admittedly did not comply with Health & Safety Code § 1363.1. After Smith v. PacifiCare Behavioral Health of Cal., Inc. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 139, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 140 , cert. denied, (2002) 537 U.S. 818, 123 S. Ct. 92, 154 L. Ed. 2d 23 (Smith, discussed in Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.94[3][a]) was decided, and the trial court denied plaintiffs' motion to vacate its original order compelling arbitration based on the change in law, plaintiffs moved the arbitrator to dismiss the arbitration. The arbitrator did so. The trial court considered the dismissal an award, and vacated it.

The court of appeal affirmed (121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 50-51, 73) . One of the grounds for which the court must vacate an award is if the arbitrators exceeded their powers and the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision on the controversy submitted [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] (121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 55) . The court of appeal concluded that both the statutory requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4) were met. The question of whether the parties are bound by a particular arbitration agreement is a question for the court. The arbitrator exceeded his authority by reexamining whether the parties were bound by the arbitration provision in the enrollment form. The legal validity of the arbitration provision is a judicial determination, which the trial court made in its June order. Plaintiffs asserted that the award was not wrong because the trial court ultimately agreed with the arbitrator. The court of appeal found no merit in that argument. The second requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4), that the award cannot be corrected without affecting the merits of the decision, does not require that in order to vacate an arbitration award it must be wrong on the merits (121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 56) . It means that the arbitration award cannot be corrected without affecting the arbitrator's decision (whether right or wrong) on the merits. Here, there was no way to correct the award without affecting the merits of the decision, which was a determination of arbitrability, which rested solely with the trial court, not the arbitrator. The only way to correct the award would have been to reverse the arbitrator, which affects the merits of the decision (121 Cal. App. 4th 44, 57) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.193

§ 20C.193 Arbitrator's Refusal to Postpone Hearing Was Prejudicial

[1] FORM

GROUNDS EXIST FOR _____ [REFUSING TO CONFIRM or VACATING] THE AWARD PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1286.2(a)(5) BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR REFUSED TO POSTPONE THE HEARING, WHICH WAS PREJUDICIAL TO _____ [PETITIONER or RESPONDENT].

A. Refusal to Postpone Hearing. An award may be vacated when it was based on a hearing that the arbitrator refused to postpone after a party established good cause for the postponement (Humes v. MarGil Ventures, Inc. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 486, 495-497, 220 Cal. Rptr. 186).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award when party seeking to vacate the award was prejudiced by the arbitrator's refusal to postpone the hearing when good cause existed for the postponement [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)]. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award, or one supporting a request for rehearing after the award is vacated [see § 20C.22].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should describe the situation that constituted good cause for postponement, detail how the arbitrator was informed of that cause and asked for postponement, and show the prejudice that resulted from the arbitrator's refusal to postpone the hearing. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factualstatements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Refusal to Postpone Hearing

Humes v. MarGil Ventures, Inc. (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 486, 220 Cal. Rptr. 186 , involved a controversy under the artists' managers act and arbitration under Lab. Code § 1700.44. Defendant had written a letter to the Labor Commissioner requesting that the hearing be postponed because defendant would not be able to attend due to his present incarceration. Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq. applied to the hearing officer, who ignored his power under Code Civ. Proc. § 1282.2(b) to postpone the hearing for good cause on request of a party, and held the hearing in defendant's absence. Plaintiff obtained a default judgment, and filed a petition in superior court seeking its confirmation. Defendant wrote a letter to the trial court explaining his inability to be heard at the original hearing, and asked for a stay of proceedings. The letter, was deemed a response, but was filed more than 100 days after the date of service of the award on him. The superior court granted the petition for confirmation, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, and directed the superior court to conduct a full adversary hearing to consider defendant's response seeking vacation of the award. The court of appeal held that the fact of defendant's incarceration, his sending the letter requesting a delay of the hearing before the Labor Commissioner because of his inability to appear at hearing due to his incarceration, and the hearing officer's holding the hearing in defendant's absence in disregard of the request for a delay, raised grounds that might support the vacation of the determination under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(e) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(5)]. The court also held that the superior court was to determine whether defendant had presented sufficient cause for postponement to the hearing officer, and whether the officer's refusal to postpone substantially prejudiced defendant's rights (174 Cal. App. 3d 486, 495-497) . Finally, the court held that defendant's failure to timely file his response seeking vacation of the award was an excusable mistake due to his disability of imprisonment, that he had acted diligently in seeking relief from the court once he became aware of the need to act, and that the defense he sought to present had potential merit. Thus, the court used its inherent equitable power to relieve defendant of default and to deem the request to have been timely filed in the superior court (174 Cal.

App. 3d 486, 498-500) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.194

§ 20C.194 Arbitrator Made Error of Law Subject to Judicial Review by Clear Term of Arbitration Agreement

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD NOT BE CONFIRMED BUT SHOULD BE VACATED BECAUSE IT IS BASED ON ERROR OF LAW SUBJECT TO JUDICIAL REVIEW BY CLEAR TERMS OF ARBITRATION AGREEMENT.

A. The California Arbitration Act Permits Enforcement of Clear Agreements for Judicial Review of Merits of Arbitration Award. The California rule is that the parties may obtain judicial review of the merits by express agreement (Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1340, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586). Parties to an arbitration agreement may take themselves out of the general rule that the merits of the award are not subject to judicial review by clearly agreeing that legal errors are an excess of arbitral authority reviewable by the courts under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2, 1286.6 (Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586).

[Optional] B. The Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Preempt California Rule Allowing Arbitration Agreements to Expand Scope of Judicial Review. The Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) and decisions under it prohibiting expansion of judicial review of arbitration awards by express agreement of the parties do not require state law to conform with its limitations. A reading of the California Arbitration Act that permits the enforcement of agreements for merits review is fully consistent with the FAA policy guaranteeing the enforcement of private contractual arrangements (Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1354, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award on the ground that the arbitration award is based on an error of law and the arbitration agreement both required the arbitrator to apply the law and clearly expands the scope of judicial review to include errors of law in the arbitration award. This is to be distinguished from the situation in which the arbitration agreement requires the arbitrator to apply the law, but does not expressly include a clear right to judicial review of legal error [see § 20C.90, above, addressing error of law generally precluding judicial review].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum, but is designed to be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting confirmation or opposing vacation of an award [see § 20C.10 et seq.].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should cite the provision of the arbitration agreement clearing setting forth the requirements that the arbitrator apply the law and the authorization for judicial review of the arbitration award for errors of law.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] . For example, a copy of the arbitration agreement, and any submission agreement or other statements or transcripts defining the scope of the matters submitted to the arbitrator, along with the arbitration award should be attached as exhibits to the memorandum.

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For form relating to correcting, confirming, and vacating arbitration awards, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda and how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For memoranda addressing the limited scope of judicial review of arbitrator's errors after contractual arbitration, see §§ 20C.90, 20C.91, 20C.101, and 20C.102. For a memorandum addressing an arbitrator's ability to correct an award on his or her own initiative, see § 20C.103.

For forms addressing general contract principles, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The California Arbitration Act Permits Enforcement of Clear Agreements for Judicial Review of Merits of Arbitration Award

The court in Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 , enforced a provision of an arbitration provision allowing for judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award. The portion of the decision addressing the general rule that judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is not available is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a1], above. The portion of the decision addressing the court's ruling that the preclusion in the Federal Arbitration Act on contractual expansion of judicial review of the merits of arbitration awards is discussed in § 20C.194[3][b], below. In response to the argument of the party seeking review to the effect that the provision of the arbitration agreement allowing judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award should be enforced, the court noted that the California rule is that the parties may obtain judicial review of the merits by express agreement, and that there is a statutory as well as a contractual basis for this rule, in that one of the grounds for review of an arbitration award is that "[t]he arbitrators exceeded their powers," as provided by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2(a)(4), 1286.6(b) (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1340) . However, in accordance with the special status of arbitration in the legal system, the court held that parties to an arbitration agreement may only take themselves out of the general rule that the merits of the award are not subject to judicial review by clearly agreeing that legal errors are an excess of arbitral authority reviewable by the courts under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1286.2, 1286.6. To so provide unambiguously, the parties may have to have expressly agreed both to (1) deprive the arbitrators of the power to commit legal error and (2) expressly provide for judicial review of such error. The court disapproved of decisions by the Courts of Appeals to the contrary, including the lower court's ruling in this case (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361) .

The arbitration agreement in this case provided that "[t]he arbitrators shall not have the power to commit errors of law or legal reasoning, and the award may be vacated or corrected on appeal to a court of competent jurisdiction for any such error" (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1340) . The court affirmed the trial court's conclusion that this provision of the arbitration agreement clearly and expressly reflected the agreement of the parties to allow judicial review of legal error by the arbitrator (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1361). The portion of the decision vacating the award and remanding the case to the arbitration panel for proper determination on the basis of contractual interpretation and applicable arbitration rules whether arbitration could proceed on a class basis is discussed in § 20C.105[3][a], above.

[b] The Federal Arbitration Act Does Not Preempt California Rule Allowing Arbitration Agreements to Expand Scope of Judicial Review

In Cable Connection, Inc. v. DIRECTV, Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 1334, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 229, 190 P.3d 586 , the court enforced a provision of the arbitration provision allowing for judicial review on the merits of the arbitration award. The portion of the decision addressing the general rule that judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is not available is discussed in § 20C.90[3][a1], above. The court next addressed the argument by the party opposing review of the award that the ruling in Hall Street Associates, L.L.C. v. Mattel, Inc. (2008) 552 U.S. 576, 128 S.Ct. 1396, 170 L. Ed. 2d 254 , to the effect that the Federal Arbitration Act (FAA) grounds for judicial review are exclusive should preempt state law on the subject. However, after considering the language of the FAA, the California Supreme Court ruled that the Hall Street holding is restricted to proceedings to review arbitration awards under the FAA, and does not require state law to conform with its limitations (44 Cal. 4th 1334, 1354) . The portion of the decision addressing the ability of the parties to contractually expand the scope of judicial review of the merits of an arbitration award is discussed in § 20C.194[3][a], above. The portion of the decision vacating the award and remanding the case to the arbitration panel for proper determination on the basis of contractual interpretation and applicable arbitration rules whether arbitration could proceed on a class basis is discussed in § 20C.105[3][a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities §§ 20C.195-20C.209

[Reserved]

§§ 20C.195[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.210

§ 20C.210 Award Based on Illegal Contract or Contract Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD NOT BE CONFIRMED BUT SHOULD BE VACATED BECAUSE IT IS [BASED ON AN ILLEGAL CONTRACT AND] CONTRARY TO PUBLIC POLICY.

A. Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable. An arbitration award made contrary to public policy is illegal, void, and unenforceable (Black v. Cutter Laboratories (1955) 43 Cal. 2d 788, 798-799, 278 P.2d 905).

B. Award Based on Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable. Because one may not bring an action based on an illegal contract, one may not attempt to confirm an award based on an illegal a contract. The issue of illegality of an entire transaction raised in a proceeding for the enforcement of an arbitration award is one for judicial determination. The arbitrator's determination on legality is not binding on the court (Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 609, 611-612, 204 P.2d 23 ; Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 889-893, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484).

[Optional] C. License Is Required to Confirm Award if License Is Required to Bring Action. If a law requires a party bringing an action to enforce a claim to prove that he or she is licensed as required by that law, as in the case of contractors, the party may not confirm an arbitration award based on such a claim without showing substantial compliance with such law (Franklin v. Nat C. Goldstone Agency (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 628, 632-633, 204 P.2d 37 ; All Points Traders, Inc. v. Barrington Associates (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 723, 736-738, 259 Cal. Rptr. 780).

[Optional] D. Legal and Illegal Transactions Under Similar Contracts. [See § 20C.133[1], Paragraph B.]

[Optional] E. Objection Is Not Waived if Used to Oppose Confirmation. Illegality of the contract under which arbitration was compelled is not waived by failure to move to vacate the arbitration award within 100 days, but may be raised inopposition to the other party's petition to confirm the award (South Bay Radiology Medical Associates v. Asher (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 269 Cal. Rptr. 15).

[Optional] F. Minor Was Entitled to, and Did, Disaffirm Contract Requiring Arbitration. In addition to the limited statutory grounds for vacating an arbitrator's award, exceptional circumstances justify judicial review of an arbitrator's decision when the decision would be inconsistent with the protection of a party's statutory rights. The statutory rights of a minor, [even one who has missed the deadline to petition to vacate the award], give the minor the power to disaffirm [both] the original agreement containing the arbitration provision [and the arbitration award itself], which is what the minor clearly did here (Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 816-820, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140).

[Optional] G. Award Against Unrepresented Minor Must Be Vacated. An award should be vacated against a minor for whom no guardian ad litem was appointed [especially in a situation in which the parent's interests were in conflict with the minor's and the minor was not represented at the arbitration hearing but the matter was treated as a default matter]. A minor in that situation is entitled to disaffirm the arbitration award, and any subsequent judgment rendered against _____ [him or her] (Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 821-822, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award on the ground that the contract under which the arbitration was conducted is contrary to public policy or wholly illegal. This is to be distinguished from the situation in which only a single provision of the contract is challenged as illegal [see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.44, and § 20C.133].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award. Counsel may wish to include the memorandum from Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.89, addressing illegality in the context of a defense to compelling arbitration.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should describe the law that voids the contract or the public policy contravened by the contract. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see § 20C.20 or 20C.21.

For memoranda addressing illegality of the contract as a grounds for resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.89.

For forms addressing unenforceability of void and illegal contracts in general, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

Black v. Cutter Laboratories (1955) 43 Cal. 2d 788, 278 P.2d 905 , arose out of a dispute over the discharge of an employee for concealment on her employment application of a number of her prior activities, including being a member of the Communist Party. The arbitration award ordered her reinstated, and the trial court confirmed the award and entered judgment thereon. Employer appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment affirming of the award and remanded the case to the trial court for proceedings not inconsistent with the Court's opinion (43 Cal. 2d 788, 809) . The Court agreed with the employer's contention that an arbitration award which directed that a member of the Communist Party who was dedicated to that party's program of sabotage, force, violence and the like be reinstated to employment in a plant which produced antibiotics used by both the military and civilians was against public policy, as expressed in both federal and state laws, and was therefore illegal and void and not to be enforced by the courts (43 Cal. 2d 788, 798-799) . The Court cited former Code Civ. Proc. § 1288 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] which provided for vacating an award where the arbitrators exceeded their powers (43 Cal. 2d 788, 798) .

Black arose in a political context and might not lead to the same result in a subsequent era; however, the holding appears to remain valid that, when any set offacts is determined to contravene public policy in a severe enough manner, an award based on those facts will not be enforced in the courts.

[b] Award Based on Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable

Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 204 P.2d 23 , arose out of a dispute between a building contractors' partnership and a party who had hired their services under an agreement requiring arbitration of disputes. The latter party contended that the partnership, as well as one of the partners individually, was unlicensed and therefore could not enforce the agreement. An award was granted for the contractors, and confirmed. The hiring party appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court found that there was a clear violation of the statutes regulating the contracting business, and noted that a contract made contrary to the terms of a law designed to protect the public and containing a penalty for violation is illegal and void, and no action may be brought to enforce the contract (33 Cal. 2d 603, 607) . A claim arising from an illegal transaction is not a proper subject matter for submission to arbitration. An award stemming from an illegal contract, which no court can enforce, cannot be supported any better than the contract itself (33 Cal. 2d 603, 610) . There is no distinction between bringing an action on an illegal contract and attempting to confirm an award based on one. Because laws in support of general public policy and in enforcement of public morality cannot be set aside by arbitration, persons with claims are forbidden by law are not allowed to enforce them through the transforming process of arbitration (33 Cal. 2d 603, 611-612) . The Court stated that the rules which give finality to the arbitrator's determination of ordinary questions of fact or of law are inapplicable when the issue of illegality of the entire transaction is raised in a proceeding for the enforcement of the arbitrator's award. When so raised, the issue is one for judicial determination on the evidence presented to the trial court. Any preliminary determination of legality by the arbitrator, whether a pure question of law or a mixed question of fact and law, is not binding on the trial court (33 Cal. 2d 603, 609, 614) . If uncontradicted evidence establishes that the contract is illegal, the court should deny confirmation and should vacate any award granting relief under the illegal contract on the ground that the arbitrator exceeded his or her powers in making the award (33 Cal. 2d 603, 610) [former Code Civ. Proc. § 1288, now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)]. A party seeking confirmation cannot rely on the arbitrator's conclusion of legality because paramount considerations of public policy require that this vital issue be determined by the court (33 Cal. 2d 603, 614) .

The facts and procedural background of Lindenstadt v. Staff Builders, Inc. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 484 , and the portion of the opinion addressing the proper procedure when both legal and illegal transactions are involved under the same or similar contracts, are discussed at § 20C.133[3][b]. The court of appeal said there is an exception to the general rule that an arbitration award may not be set aside even if the arbitrator made an error of law, and that exception applies when the entire contract is illegal. Failure of a party to the contract to be licensed as required by law renders the contract illegal and unenforceable (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 889-890) . The court of appeal then quoted the portions of Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 609-614, 204 P.2d 23 (discussed above), holding that the arbitrator's power is dependent on the existence of a valid contract under which rights may arise; and in the absence of a valid contract, no rights arise and no power can be conferred on the arbitrator. The question of the validity of the contract is basically a judicial one and remains such whether it is presented in a proceeding for an order directing arbitration or in a proceeding for an order confirming or vacating an award. A claim arising from an illegal contract is not a proper subject for arbitration and cannot stand on any higher ground than the contract itself. A party seeking confirmation cannot rely on the arbitrator's conclusion of legality because such paramount consideration so public policy require this vital issue to be committed to the court's defemination (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 890-891) . Thus, it did not matter that the arbitrator had decided the issue of illegality; the trial court is the tribunal which must determine the issue of illegality (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 892) . To the extent the arbitrator awarded plaintiff compensation for any transaction in which plaintiff acted as an unlicensed broker, the arbitrator exceeded her powers [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] (55 Cal. App. 4th 882, 893) .

[c] License Is Required to Confirm Award if License Is Required to Bring Action

Effective January 1, 1993, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031(a), (d) require licensure to be alleged, but it need be proven only if controverted.

Franklin v. Nat C. Goldstone Agency (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 628, 204 P.2d 37 , arose out of a dispute regarding services performed by interior decorators. The parties submitted their dispute to arbitration, and the award was in favor of the decorators. The decorators applied for an order confirming the award, but in the application failed to mention that they were licensed contractors. At the hearing, the attorney for the hiring party filed an affidavit on information and belief stating that neither of the decorators was licensed and that no allegation or proof of their license had been made during the arbitration. No counteraffidavit was filed, and the court confirmed the award. The hiring party appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court found no error on the face of the award and found that the affidavit by the attorney for the hiring party was based on hearsay with no proof of facts. This was not relevant, however, because the decorators were required by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 to demonstrate licensed capacity. The fact that they were not bringing an action but attempting to have the award confirmed made no difference. They were seeking the aid of the court through judicial proceedings in affirmance of alleged rights arising from a contract which violates public policy 33 Cal. 2d 628, 631-632) . The policy is for the safety and protection of the public, and it may not be circumvented according to the manner in which application is first made to a court for relief. Furthermore, a judgment entered in conformity with an order confirming an award has the same force and effect as a judgment in an action, and may be enforced likewise [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4] (33 Cal. 2d 628, 632) . Accordingly, the application for confirmation was an action for the collection of compensation as envisioned by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031, and proof of at least substantial compliance with licensing requirements was essential for recovery in the confirmation proceeding (33 Cal. 2d 628, 632-633) .

Plaintiff in All Points Traders, Inc. v. Barrington Associates (1989) 211 Cal. App.3d 723, 259 Cal. Rptr. 780 , was an investment banker who had arranged the sale of all defendant's stock. Plaintiff had neither a real estate and business opportunity broker's license nor a security broker's license, and considered itself exempt from the security broker's licensing requirements by virtue of 10 Cal. Code Reg. § 260.204.5. Defendant did not dispute that exemption. Thus, the lack of a real estate and business opportunity broker's license was the only issue before the court (211 Cal. App. 3d 723, 735 n.13). The trial court confirmed an arbitration award of a commission to plaintiff, and entered judgment thereon. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court said that one type of error of law that will warrant vacating an award is an award based on an illegal contract. The issue of the legality of the underlying agreement is a matter for judicial determination, although an arbitrator may make a preliminary finding that is not binding on the court. Vacating an award based on an illegal contract is required under the general rule that an illegal contract cannot be enforced and a claim arising out of an illegal transaction is not a proper matter for submission to arbitration, the court said, citing Loving & Evans v. Blick (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 603, 607, 609-610, 204 P.2d 23 . Citing former Code Civ. Proc. 1286.2(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(4)] and Abbott v. California State Auto Assn (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 763, 770-771, 137 Cal. Rptr. 580 , the court stated that in these situations, the award based on an error in law is set aside on the ground that it is in excess of the arbitrator's powers (211 Cal. App. 3d 723, 736-738) .

Note that the real estate and business opportunity broker licensing requirements do not apply to a person licensed as security broker [Bus. & Prof. Code § 10008.5; see Stats 1989, ch. 1116, § 8 (statement of legislative intent that rights and obligations of parties in All Point Traders are not affected)].

[d] Objection Is Not Waived if Used to Oppose Confirmation

South Bay Radiology Medical Associates v. Asher (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 269 Cal. Rptr. 15 , involved a dispute between a partner and fellow partners. After defendant was injured, the other partners declared that as a result of disability, defendant was a "dissolving partner" within the meaning of the partnership agreement and demanded the defendant submit the question of the value of his interest to arbitration so they could buy that interest. Defendant objected that the partnership agreement was illegal and void under Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602 in that it contained a covenant that defendant would not compete with the partnership but the valuation formula did not take goodwill into account. The arbitrator disagreed and issued an award valuing defendant's interest. Defendant did not file a petition to vacate or correct that award, but commenced a lawsuit regarding a related business. In conjunction with their demurrer, the continuing partners petitioned for confirmation of the arbitrator's award. The trial court affirmed the award, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the procedural propriety of raising the issue of illegality in opposition to a petition to confirm the award, but affirmed the confirmation, finding that in fact the contract was not illegal. If a contract is void as against public policy, no rights can arise and no power can be conferred on the arbitrator to determine those nonexistent rights. Because the question of the validity of the contract is essentially a judicial one, it remains whether presented in a proceeding for an order directing arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1282 or in a proceeding for an order confirming or vacating an award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1287 or 1288 (220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 1080) . Thus, the illegality defense may be raised for the first time in opposition to a motion to confirm (220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 1080-1081) . The laws in support of a general public policy and in enforcement of public morality cannot be set aside by arbitration, nor can persons with a claim forbidden by the law be permitted to enforce it through the process of arbitration. The illegality raised by defendant, if established, would constitute a defect in the arbitrator's award that would not be waived by failure to petition to vacate the award within 100 days as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 1288. Thus, defendant was free to raise the alleged violation of Bus. & Prof. Code § 16602 in response to the petition to confirm (220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 1081) .

[e] Minor Was Entitled to, and Did, Disaffirm Contract Requiring Arbitration

Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140 , was an action by plaintiff personal manager against defendants child star and the star's mother for unpaid commissions and loans. The contract was signed in 1999, when the child star was 10 years old. The contract was signed only by the mother, not by the child star, and expressly provided that any action the child star might take in the future pertaining to disaffirmance of the agreement, whether successful or not, would not affect mother's liability for any commissions due plaintiff. The agreement also provided that any disputes concerning payment or interpretation of the agreement would be determined by arbitration in accordance with the rules of Judicial Arbitration and Mediation Services, Inc. (JAMS). Four months prior to the expiration of the agreement, mother informed plaintiff that the agreement was terminated. Three years later, in 2004, plaintiff sued defendants for breach of the agreement, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, breach of an oral loan agreement, conversion and declaratory relief. After continuance to accommodate mother's hospitalization, the arbitration hearing commenced on February 7, 2005. Defendants' counsel failed to appear at the hearing, as did child star, but mother appeared, with child star's then talent agent, with whose assistance and advice mother presented her case. They argued that the agreement was invalid because the child star was a minor at the time it was executed and there had been no court approval of the agreement. Nevertheless, pursuant to JAMS rules, the arbitrator entered an award against both defendants, for commissions and interest of $154,714.15, repayment of personal loans and interest of $5,094, and attorney fees and costs of $13,762. He also awarded Berg $405,000 for future earnings projected on a minimum of 6 years for national syndication earnings, to vest and become final as monies earned after February 7, 2005, become due and payable. The award was served on February 14, 2005. Plaintiff petitioned to confirm the award, and defendants petitioned to vacate it but not until August 18, 2005, clearly beyond the 100 day limit provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1288. Child star also filed a "Notice of Disaffirmance of Arbitration Award by Minor," which stated that in addition to his disaffirmance of the agreement in 2001, child star was also disaffirming the arbitration award and all other proceedings and orders arising out of the parties' dispute. The trial court confirmed the award against both defendants, finding defendants' response and petition to vacate untimely. Judgment was entered; both defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to child star and affirmed as to the mother, finding that the minor had the statutory right to, and did, disaffirm the original contract, the arbitration award, and the judgment against him, both as a minor and because he was unrepresented at the arbitration hearing, but that mother had not provided any authority to support her challenge to the award (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 812, 823-824) . The court of appeal said it had no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that the minor was permitted to and did disaffirm the agreement and any obligations stemming from it, while the mother remained liable under the agreement and resulting judgment. The court was stunned that counsel, the arbitrator, and the trial court repeatedly and systematically ignored the minor's interests in the matter. From the time the mother signed the agreement, her interests were not aligned with the minor's. Given that conflict, a guardian ad litem should have been appointed for the minor (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 816) . The court discussed the limited grounds for review of an arbitration award, noting that in addition to the statutory grounds for vacating an arbitrator's award, some limited and exceptional circumstances justify judicial review of an arbitrator's decision. Those limited exceptions include cases in which granting finality to an arbitrator's decision would be inconsistent with the protection of a party's statutory rights. The court agreed with the minor: that despite missing the deadline to petition to vacate the award, the minor had the statutory right to disaffirm both the original agreement containing the arbitration provision and the arbitration award itself. The child star's minority status coupled with the absence of the appointment of guardian ad litem entitled him to disaffirm the arbitration award and judgment even after the statutory deadline for moving to vacate the arbitration award had passed (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 817) . The court discussed Fam. Code §§ 6700, 6710 and the reasons behind them. Fam. Code § 6710 allows a minor to disaffirm a contract before majority or within a reasonable time afterwards. The statute is intended to shield minors from their lack of judgment and experience, even if the disaffirmance is a hardship on those who deal with the minor. Plaintiff argued that Fam. Code § 6710 was inapplicable because the mother had signed the contract and because the contract was for necessities. The court of appeal disagreed with both contentions (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 818-820) . The court distinguished cases holding a minor to arbitrate under health care contracts signed by the parent on several grounds. Those cases involved a parent's duty to care for a child; the child was only a beneficiary under those contracts, and not, as here, a principal on whom the contract imposed significant obligations. An agreement for personal management services does not implicate a parent's fundamental duty to provide for the child. Further, there is a statutory procedure governing minor's contracts to render artistic services [see Fam. Code, §§ 6750, 6751(a)], which requires court approval of the contract, and which was not followed in this case (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 818-819) . The court distinguished the cases rejecting a minor's attempt to disaffirm a liability release signed by the parent on the ground that those cases involved a public policy to enforce releases, which was not applicable in this case (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 819) . Regarding the contention that the contract was one for necessities, the court found that the requirements of Fam. Code § 6712 were not met both in that the contract was not one for necessities and that there was no evidence that the mother was unable to provide for the family at the time the contract was signed. There is no special language required to disaffirm a contract. Both the notice given on September 11, 2001 and the one filed on August 8, 2005, adequately conveyed the minor's intent to repudiate the agreement. Thus, the court concluded that the minor was entitled to and did disaffirm the agreement which required him to arbitrate, which in turn required that the judgment confirming the arbitration award be reversed as to the minor (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 820) . The court found no basis for the mother to avoid her independent obligations under the agreement. Nor was there any excuse for her failure to file a timely petition to vacate the arbitration award. Thus, she was barred from challenging the judgment confirming the award (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 823) .

[f] Award Against Unrepresented Minor Must Be Vacated

The facts and procedural background of Berg v. Traylor (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 140 , are discussed at [e], above. Although unnecessary to its holding, the court also found that the award should be vacated as to the minor because he was never represented by an appointed guardian ad litem, despite the fact that his mother's interests were in conflict with his own, rendering her unable to adequately represent him (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 821) . The court reiterated that the agreement expressly provided that if even the minor disaffirmed, the mother would remain liable for commissions due defendant. Therefore, it was not in the mother's interest to have the minor disaffirm the agreement because defendant would look to her, personally, for satisfaction of the minor's obligations under the agreement (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 821-822) . It was clear that the mother, as the minor's guardian, could not adequately represent his interests. When there is a potential conflict between a perceived parental responsibility and an obligation to assist the court in achieving a just and speedy determination of the action, a court has the right to select a guardian ad litem who is not a parent if that guardian would best protect the child's interests. Thus, it was necessary for the minor to have a guardian ad litem appointed to separately represent his interests. It was irrelevant that the minor was represented on and off throughout the litigation by counsel also representing his mother. There was no evidence that counsel treated his interests separately from his mother's. Further, at the most crucial juncture of the proceedings--the arbitration hearing--no attorney appeared to represent the minor and the matter was treated as a default prove-up hearing. Thus, the minor was also entitled to disaffirm the arbitration award, and the subsequent judgment rendered against him on this second ground (148 Cal. App. 4th 809, 822) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable

In American & Nat. Etc. Assn. v. Major League Baseball Players Assn. (1976) 59 Cal. App. 3d 493, 130 Cal. Rptr. 626 , the club sought to vacate an award in favor of a player because it contained an annuity that the club urged was an attempt to evade taxes. The petition was denied. The court of appeal affirmed, but in discussing theissue, cited Black v. Cutter Laboratories (1955) 43 Cal. 2d 788, 278 P.2d 905 (discussed at [3][a], above) to the effect that if an award commands an act which is unlawful or against public policy it will be vacated (59 Cal. App. 3d 493, 498) .

The facts and procedural background of California State Council of Carpenters v. Superior Court (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 144, 89 Cal. Rptr. 625 , are discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.44[3][a]. The court of appeal held that the matter had to be arbitrated because the challenge only involved the legality of a single several provision of the contract, but in discussing the state of the law, the court noted that jurisdiction to determine the question of the illegality of a contract provision does not permit the making of an award the carrying out of which would require or permit the commission of a crime or illegal act (11 Cal. App. 3d 144, 157) .

[b] Award Based on Illegal Contract Is Unenforceable

Bayscene Resident Negotiators v. Bayscene Mobilehome Park (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 119, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 , involved arbitration under a municipal ordinance that required arbitration of disputes regarding rental rates at mobilehome parks when the dispute could not be resolved by negotiation. The city attorney threatened park owners with criminal prosecution, so they signed the submission agreement and submitted to arbitration, albeit with repeated and continual protests. Arbitration resulted in an award against the owners, which they appealed.

The court of appeal in vacated the award and found the ordinance unconstitutional because it deprived owners of their due process rights in that it did not provide for trial de novo or for judicial review of the sufficiency of the evidence supporting the award (15 Cal. App. 4th 119, 134-135) . The court of appeal also found that submitting to arbitration had not constituted waiver of the right to attack the constitutionality of the arbitration requirement in the ordinance because the owners continually raised the constitutional challenge both before and during the proceeding (15 Cal. App. 4th 119, 129) .

South Bay Radiology Medical Associates v. Asher (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 269 Cal. Rptr. 15 , discussed at [3][d], above, is authority for the proposition that an illegal contract will not support judicial action, arbitration, or an arbitration award (220 Cal. App. 3d 1074, 1080-1081) .

Joe A. Freitas & Sons v. Food Packers (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1210, 211 Cal. Rptr. 157 , arbitration by a noncertified employee organization pursuant to a collective-bargaining agreement. Lab. Code §§ 1153(f) and 1159 prohibit agreements between employers and employee organizations that are not certified for employee representation by the Agricultural Labor Relations Board. The trial court affirmed an award in favor of the noncertified employee organization. Employer appealed.

The court of appeal vacated the award, holding that the agreement violated Lab. Code §§ 1153(f) and 1159, and thus the agreement was void (164 Cal. App. 3d 1210, 1215-1218) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.211

§ 20C.211 Award That Cannot Be Reconciled With Terms of Court Order Must Be Vacated

[1] FORM

THE ARBITRATION AWARD _____ [specify what it does, e.g., REINSTATING JOHN DOE AS FOREMAN], _____ [CANNOT BE CONFIRMED or MUST BE VACATED] AS CONTRARY TO PUBLIC POLICY BECAUSE IMPLEMENTING THE AWARD WOULD REQUIRE DISOBEDIENCE TO THE _____ [INJUNCTION or COURT ORDER] ISSUED ON _____ [date].

A. Award Contrary to Public Policy Is Unenforceable. [See § 20C.210[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Award That Cannot Be Reconciled With Terms of Court Order Must Be Vacated. There is a strong public policy requiring obedience to judicial orders, as established by the fact that disobedience to judicial orders is punishable by civil contempt. Thus, an arbitration award that cannot be enforced without resulting in a violation of a court order is contrary to public policy and must be vacated (City of Palo Alto v. Service Employees Internat. Union (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 338-340).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award on the ground that the award is contrary to public policy because implementing the award would require disobedience to a court order.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award. Counsel may wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.210 expressing the general rule that public policy may provide grounds for vacating an award.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form, and in the other forms combined with this form, with the facts of his or her case. Certainly, the order which would be offended should be described in detail, a copy attached, and a request for judicial notice of that order made. Argument should specify the ways in which implementation of the award will require disobedience to the court order.

Counsel will wish to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms seeking to vacate an arbitration, as well as a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20, 20C.21, and 20C.210.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award That Cannot Be Reconciled With Terms of Court Order Must Be Vacated

City of Palo Alto v. Service Employees Internat. Union (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 327 , arose from one employee's threat to shoot and kill a co-worker and that co-worker's wife and child. The employee who made the threats had two previous disciplinary actions for violence or threats of violence. The employer, ("City") sought and obtained an injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8, which provided, among other things, that the employee who made the threats not make any contact with the threatened employee, and stay at least 100 yards away from the threatened employee, that employee's residence, place of work, children's school or place of child care, and the City's "Utility Department-Water/Wastewater/Gas Division work crew sites." City then terminated the employee who made the threats. The employee contested the termination and the matter was submitted to arbitration pursuant to a Memorandum of Understanding between City and the Union. The arbitrator ruled in favor of the employee, and awarded that he be reinstated to his former position as "leadman" with back pay, finding that the threats were merely "tough talk" and that City could find ways to insure the threatened employee's workplace safety, as required by Lab. Code § 6400 et seq. without terminating the employee who made the threats. The City petitioned to vacate the arbitration award on the grounds that it violated "the express legislated public policy of the State of California requiring employer intervention against threats of violence and it commands an illegal act." The Union cross-petitioned to confirm the award. The trial court confirmed the award, and the City appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court first cited the exception to the general rule of limited judicial review of an arbitration award applicable in those rare cases when according finality to the arbitrator's decision would be incompatible with the protection of a statutory right or when the award contravenes an explicit legislative expression of public policy. Vacating an award on this ground requires a clear expression of illegality or public policy (77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 334) . The court discussed Lab. Code § 6400 et seq. and the policy behind it, but concluded that the City failed to establish that public policy requires an employer to automatically fire any employee who makes a threat of violence against another employee (77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 334-338) . With respect to the injunction; however, which was based on clear and convincing evidence, the court of appeal said that a strong public policy requires obedience to judicial orders. In fact disobedience to judicial orders is punishable by civil contempt [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1209(a)(5)]. Furthermore, enforcement of certain protective-type orders, including orders issued pursuant to Code of Civ. Proc. § 527.8, is considered even more important: violation of those orders may be punishable as criminal contempt [see Pen. Code §§ 166(c), 273.6] (77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 338-339) . Because the injunction could not be complied with if the award was confirmed and the discharged employee was reinstated, the public policy requiring obedience to court orders required the award to be vacated (77 Cal. App. 4th 327, 339-340) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20C ARBITRATION: CONFIRMING, CORRECTING, OR VACATING THE AWARD
PART II. FORMS
E. Grounds for Vacating and Preventing Confirmation of Award

2-20C California Points & Authorities § 20C.212

§ 20C.212 Award Taken Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD _____ [NOT BE CONFIRMED or BE VACATED] BECAUSE IT WAS TAKEN AGAINST _____ [PETITIONER or RESPONDENT] THROUGH HIS/HER _____ [specify ground(s) for relief pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, e.g., EXCUSABLE NEGLECT].

A. Relief From Nonjudicial Arbitration Award Taken Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect. An arbitration award entered in a nonjudicial arbitration proceeding may be vacated pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 when the award was taken against the party seeking relief through his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (MJM, Inc. v. Tootoo (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 598, 604, 219 Cal. Rptr. 100).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a petition or response seeking to vacate an arbitration award on the ground that the award was taken through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473]. The authority on which this form is based was decided before Moncharsh v. Heily & Blase (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 1, 25-28, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 183, 832 P.2d 899 , reiterated the exclusivity of the statutory grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2 for setting aside an award. Nevertheless, a situation calling for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 might be distinguishablein that it would be based on facts other than the arbitrator's decision, while Moncharsh addressed the standards for review of an arbitrator's decision. In addition, counsel and/or the party seeking to vacate the award on this basis should be prepared to pay reasonable compensatory legal fees and costs to the opposing party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c), discussed at [3][a], below].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with the memorandum supporting the petition [see § 20C.20] or response [see § 20C.21] seeking to vacate the award. Counsel may wish to include the memorandum from § 20C.22, to seek rehearing after the award has been vacated. It appears that a petition or response seeking to vacate an award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is not governed by the time limits imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (reasonable time and in any event no later than six months after the judgment, order, or other proceeding was taken), but by those set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1288 [see MJM, Inc. v. Tootoo (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 598, 604, 219 Cal. Rptr. 100] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should describe the facts constituting mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. Generally, it will be appropriate to attach a copy of the award [see Shepherd v. Greene (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 230 Cal. Rptr. 233 (discussed under § 20C.12[3][a])].

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms addressing relief pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, as well as a research guide, and a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief from Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda to combine with this form, see §§ 20C.20 or 20C.21, and 20C.22[1].

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For discussion and memoranda supporting motions to set aside a default or default judgment for mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, see Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conditions for Relief Under Code Civ. Proc. § 473

Code Civ. Proc. § 473 generally permits the trial court to relieve a party from a judgment or order against him or her on the grounds specified and on "any terms as may be just." Courts have long construed this phrase to allow payment of costs or attorney's fees to the adverse party to compensate that party for any losses or expenses suffered by the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion [Hearst v. Ferrante (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 201, 204, 234 Cal. Rptr. 385] .

When relief from default is based on a sworn declaration of fault by the defaulting party's attorney, the court is required to order that attorney to pay reasonable compensatory legal fees and costs to opposing counsel or parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)]. In addition, courts granting relief from default under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 are expressly authorized to impose a penalty of up to $1,000 on an offending attorney or party, and to direct that an offending attorney pay up to $1,000 to the State Bar Client Security Fund [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(1)]. However, when the court grants relief from default based on the affidavit of the defaulting party's attorney attesting to the attorney's mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect, the relief is not to be made conditional on the attorney's payment of compensatory legal fees or costs or monetary penalties imposed by the court, or on compliance with other sanctions ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(2)].

[b] Relief From Nonjudicial Arbitration Award Taken Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

MJM, Inc. v. Tootoo (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 598, 219 Cal. Rptr. 100 , petitioner and respondents entered into a contract whereby petitioner was to perform construction work on respondents' home. A dispute arose, and petitioner commenced arbitration proceedings pursuant to the terms of the contract. After arbitration proceedings that were conducted in respondents' absence, an award was entered in petitioner's favor. Petitioner then filed a petition to confirm the award. Respondents filed a response to the petition, requesting that the award be vacated under both former Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(1)] and Code Civ. Proc. § 473. A supporting declaration of one of the respondents stated that he had a limited education and a poor understanding of the English language. Consequently, hewas unaware of the nature of the arbitration proceeding or of the documents mailed to him concerning that proceeding. He believed that he had effectively canceled the contract. The trial court denied the petition to confirm the award and ordered the award vacated. Petitioner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted its earlier decision in Alvarado v. City of Port Hueneme (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 695, 184 Cal. Rptr. 154 , in which it held that relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 was available in judicial arbitration proceedings conducted under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq. The court held by analogy that the same relief was also available in nonjudicial arbitration proceedings. Applying this rule, the court concluded that respondent's declaration was sufficient to support a determination of excusable neglect justifying relief from the arbitration award under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (173 Cal. App. 3d 598, 604) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING

2-20D California Points & Authorities 20D.syn

§ 20D.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20D: ARBITRATION: DISMISSING

§ 20D.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 20D.02 Governing Law

§ 20D.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 20D.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 20D.05-20D.09 [Reserved]

§ 20D.10 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action When Party Failed to Bring Claim to Arbitration Within Five Years

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Split in Authority Regarding Court's Jurisdiction to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding

[d] Commencement of Five-Year Period

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[f] Related Memoranda

[g] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Delay in Bringing Matter to Arbitration

[b] Jurisdiction to Dismiss Stayed Action

[c] Jurisdiction to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding

[d] Calculation of Five-Year Period

[e] Period Not Tolled Absent Showing of Reasonable Diligence

§ 20D.11 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action When Party Failed to Exercise Diligence in Prosecuting Claim as Required by Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Arbitration and Stayed Action for Lack of Reasonable Diligence Required Under Agreement

§ 20D.12 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding When Party Failed to Comply With Discovery Order

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Arbitration Is Appropriate Sanction for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order

§§ 20D.13-20D.19 [Reserved]

§ 20D.20 Opposing Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and/or Stayed Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Does Not Have Authority to Dismiss Arbitration or Stayed Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Does Not Have Authority to Dismiss Arbitration or Stayed Action

§ 20D.21 Opposing Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action--Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence in Prosecuting Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action Improper When Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence

[b] Calculation of Five-Year Period

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action Improper When Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.01

§ 20D.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda and contentions relating to dismissing contractual arbitration under private agreements pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsWaiversContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration Clauses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.02

§ 20D.02 Governing Law

Code Civ. Proc. § 1286 requires the court to confirm an arbitration award if it does not vacate the award, or to correct and then confirm the award, or to dismiss the proceeding [see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award]. Arbitration may be dismissed for several reasons, including when the plaintiff fails to bring the action to arbitration within five years after the complaint was commenced [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360(a); see § 20D.10], and when a party fails to comply with a discovery order [see § 20D.12].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration ClausesCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsWaivers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.03

§ 20D.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in a summary judgment proceeding. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, tables of contents and authorities, and proof of service are not counted. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Chapter 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other forms to form a complete memorandum. For detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06. For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.04

§ 20D.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of motions and other papers relating to private contractual arbitration proceedings, see:

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Chapters in this publication with related forms include:

- For compelling arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

- For resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting .

- For selecting arbitrators and determining whether an arbitrator is immune from suit, see Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity .

- For confirming, correcting, or vacating an arbitration award, see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award .

- For determining the effect of an arbitration award, see Ch. 20E, Arbitration: Effect of Award .

- For situations in which attorney's fees may be recovered, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

- For contract provisions in general, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

- For situations in which contracts may be avoided or declared void, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

- For requirements of injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

- For general principles relating to specific performance of contracts, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActArbitration AgreementsCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsFederal Arbitration ActOrders to Compel ArbitrationCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesSpecific Performance

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20D California Points & Authorities §§ 20D.05-20D.09

[Reserved]

§§ 20D.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.10

§ 20D.10 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action When Party Failed to Bring Claim to Arbitration Within Five Years

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
[or other as appropriate]

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS ARBITRATION AND STAYED ACTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: none

_____

THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING AND STAYED ACTION SHOULD BE DISMISSED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO BRING THE ACTION TO ARBITRATION WITHIN FIVE YEARS AFTER THE COMPLAINT WAS COMMENCED AGAINST THE DEFENDANT.

A. Five-Year Limit to Bring Action to Trial. An action must be brought to trial within five years after the action is commenced against the defendant; if not brought to trial within the five-year period, the action must be dismissed by the court on its own motion or on motion of the defendant (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360(a)).

B. Dismissal for Delay in Bringing Matter to Arbitration. In determining whether an action pending arbitration should be dismissed, the five-year mandatory dismissal period applies (Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325).

C. Jurisdiction to Dismiss Stayed Action. A court has jurisdiction to dismiss an action in which arbitration proceedings are pending (Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 898, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325).

D. Jurisdiction to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding. A court has the power to dismiss the arbitration proceedings, as well as the stayed action, for delay in bringing the matter to arbitration (Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882).

E. Calculation of Five-Year Period. In calculating whether the matter has been brought to arbitration within five years, the entire period from the date the action is commenced against the defendant is considered (Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325).

[Optional] F. Period Not Tolled Absent Showing of Reasonable Diligence. A period of time may not be excluded from calculation of the five-year period on the ground of impossibility, impracticality, or futility unless the plaintiff has demonstrated that he or she exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting the cause of action during this period (Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support a motion to dismiss an arbitration proceeding and an action stayed, pending arbitration, if the party pursuing a claim in the arbitration proceedings has failed to bring it to hearing within five years from the filing of the action. There is significant authority holding that the court lacks power to entertain the motion supported by this form, and criticizing the cases cited in this form [see [c], below].

Optional Paragraph F may be used if counsel wishes to anticipate opposition to the motion based on the ground that the five-year period has been tolled due to impossibility, impracticality, or futility [see § 20D.21]. Alternatively, this paragraph may be adapted for use in a supplemental memorandum to be submitted in reply to such opposition [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c) (permitting a supplemental memorandum in response to opposition to motion for discretionary dismissal for delay in prosecution of action)].

The use of the motion format contemplates that a petition to compel arbitration has been granted earlier in the matter, or that a motion to stay a proceeding involving the controversy that is the subject of arbitration has been granted; the present motion would be brought in the same judicial proceeding. The motion to dismiss the arbitration would be joined with one to dismiss the action as well. The memorandum in this form is for use in dismissing an action as well as the related arbitration.

For memorandum supporting a motion for dismissal based on a period of time required under the arbitration agreement for prosecution of a claim, see § 20D.11.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The argument should show the date when the action was commenced and trace the lengthy history of the litigation and arbitration. In addition, counsel should review the contrary authorities and considerpolicy reasons to defend the minority view reflected in this form.

[c] Split in Authority Regarding Court's Jurisdiction to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding

There is a split of authority regarding the court's power to dismiss a contractual arbitration proceeding and the action in which the order directing arbitration was made. The cases cited in this form, Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 898, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 (court properly dismissed both), discussed under [3][a], below, and Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (effect of dismissing action is to terminate the arbitration), discussed under [3][c], below, uphold that power.

However, more recent cases have criticized this view [see, e.g., Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 (dismissal of a previously stayed complaint has absolutely no effect on the pending arbitration because the parties had agreed by contract to arbitrate the dispute under Code Civ. Proc. § 1295)]. The court in Byerly said it was not aware of any authority of the trial court, in dismissing the court action, to dismiss the arbitration, even if it desired to accomplish that result [Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1314-1315, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749] . The court did acknowledge the contrary statement in Preston, but said that "[t]o the extent that Preston may be cited for the notion that dismissal of a complaint somehow includes termination of a pending arbitration matter, it is unsupported, and unsupportable, in law or logic; and we decline to follow it" [Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1316 fn.3, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; see also Kuzmanoff v. Kron (1988) 207 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 5, 255 Cal. Rptr. 168]. Further, in Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1549-1550, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 , the court held that there is nothing to preclude a plaintiff's dismissal of a complaint after a case has been ordered into arbitration, but before an arbitration has commenced. That court of appeal declined to exercise its discretion to review the trial court's order compelling arbitration and stated that an order compelling arbitration is nonappealable; however, the court also stated that after plaintiff's dismissal, the trial court no longer has jurisdiction to order the parties to complete the arbitration [Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1552-1553, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699] .

The contrary authorities are discussed in § 20D.20.

[d] Commencement of Five-Year Period

Several court of appeal decisions have rejected the assertion in Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 , discussed under [3][a], below, that the five-year period for mandatory dismissal is to be calculated from the filing of the complaint. These cases hold that, in the context of cases subject to contractual arbitration, the five-year period normally should be calculated from the date of the order for arbitration, as opposed to the date of the filing of the complaint [see, e.g., Gainey v. Occidental Land Research (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1054, 231 Cal. Rptr. 249 (citing Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882)]. However, this is based on the rationale that the period between the filing of the complaint and the order for arbitration should ordinarily be excluded as time during which it was not possible or practical for the plaintiff to prosecute the arbitration proceeding [see Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408-410, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882] . Another court of appeal has held that this rationale does not apply when the plaintiff fails to exercise reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her cause of action, and hence in this event the filing of the complaint and the order for arbitration is not excluded [see Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173 (discussed in [3][e] below)].

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the split of authority on this issue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to dismissal of actions in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[f] Related Memoranda

For memoranda addressing dismissal of civil actions in general, see Ch. 90, Dismissal .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[g] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 20D.20, and in an appropriate case, that set out in § 20D.21, may be used to oppose a motion to dismiss supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Delay in Bringing Matter to Arbitration

In Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 , defendant was granted an order to stay plaintiff's action and compel arbitration under the agreement between the parties. Plaintiff refused to answer defendant's interrogatories until a neutral arbitrator was selected. Defendant had appointed its arbitrator under the agreement, but plaintiff had failed to appoint its arbitrator, and thus a third, neutral arbitrator to be appointed by the two prior arbitrators had not been selected. A provision of the arbitration agreement stated that the claim would be waived or barred if the claimant failed to pursue the claim with reasonable diligence.

More than three years after the filing of the complaint, defendant moved to dismiss both the action and the arbitration proceedings. After denial of the motion without prejudice, the plaintiff appointed an arbitrator, after which the neutral arbitrator was chosen. Plaintiff paid his portion of the arbitrator's fee well over a half year later. A year later, more than five years after the complaint was filed, defendant again moved to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed the dismissal of the action and arbitration.

The court of appeal upheld the dismissal. It agreed with a noted commentator that practical consequences adverse to arbitration policy would arise if arbitrators did not abide by the regular statutes of limitations (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 895-896) . It noted that some standard should be set up to prevent matters from drifting on for unlimited periods. The time-tested series of limitations prescribed by the Legislature for lawsuits are well founded in common sense and practicality and should be applied in arbitration proceedings. It held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360), which provides that an action must be dismissed if not brought to trial within five years from filing of the action, should apply to contractual arbitration cases. As an alternative holding, the court upheld the dismissal because "reasonable diligence" required by the arbitration agreement had not been demonstrated by plaintiff (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896) .

The court in Lockhart-Mummery applied former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) as if the issue were failure to bring the case to trial rather than failure to bring the case to arbitration. However, another court of appeal has applied the statute only as a guideline in determining whether plaintiff had exercised due diligence as required by an arbitration agreement [see Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 409, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (discussed in [b], below and in § 20D.21[3][a])].

[b] Jurisdiction to Dismiss Stayed Action

Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 , is discussed under [a], above. In discussing whether the court has jurisdiction to dismiss an action in which arbitration proceedings are pending, the court found support for such authority in Kaplan v. Eldorado Ins. Co. (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 587, 591, 127 Cal. Rptr. 699 . The court in Lockhart-Mummery stated that if during arbitration the courts have jurisdiction to dismiss for refusal of discovery, as was held in Kaplan, they also should be empowered to dismiss if there has been no exercise of reasonable diligence. The court stated that to hold otherwise would place a defendant in an untenable position as it would be unable, without the appointment of plaintiff's arbitrator, to move the litigation along nor could it seek dismissal despite the passage of three years of inaction (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 898) .

[c] Jurisdiction to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding

The facts and procedural background of Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 are discussed in § 20D.21[3][a]. Although the court in that case reversed the trial court's dismissal, it stated that the effect of the dismissal was to vacate the order for arbitration and terminate the arbitration itself (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406) .

Other courts of appeal have expressly declined to follow Preston on this point [see Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1316 n.3, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; see also Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1552-1553, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 ; for discussion of these cases, see § 20D.20]. For further discussion, see [2][c], above.

[d] Calculation of Five-Year Period

The facts and procedural background of Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 , are discussed under [a], above. In affirming the trial court's dismissal of the action, the court in Lockhart stated that, in calculating whether the matter was brought to arbitration within five years, the entire period beginning with the date the action is commenced against the defendant is considered (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896) .

Other courts of appeal have regarded the Lockhart decision as unnecessarily broad on this point, and have held that the five-year period should normally be calculated from the date of the order for arbitration, as opposed to the date of the filing of the complaint [see, e.g., Gainey v. Occidental Land Research (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1054, 231 Cal. Rptr. 249] . For further discussion, see [2][d], above, and the discussion of Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173 under [e], below.

[e] Period Not Tolled Absent Showing of Reasonable Diligence

Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173 was an action for medical malpractice filed on December 22, 1980. On January 12, 1983, the parties stipulated to stay proceedings pending arbitration under a contractual arbitration provision. Four years and ten months after the complaint was filed, plaintiff designated her arbitrator and scheduled a hearing date. The matter lay dormant until October, 1985, when plaintiff designated her arbitrator, informed defendants of the name of her expert witness, and told defendants that she intended to arbitrate the matter on December 16, 1985. In response to defendants' conflict with that date, she offered to reschedule the hearing if defendants stipulated to extend the time for trial for 90 days. Defendants refused to so stipulate but selected their arbitrator and agreed not to move for an immediate dismissal if plaintiff promptly pursued her arbitration. However, more than a year elapsed and the arbitration never took place. In December, 1986, plaintiff moved for an order directing arbitration on a date certain. In response, defendants moved for mandatory dismissal under Code

Civ. Proc. § 583.310. The trial court dismissed the action, finding that plaintiff had not been reasonably diligent in pursuing her claim, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. The court held that the rule followed in Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 409, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (discussed in [c], above and in § 20D.21[3][a]), under which the time between the filing of the complaint and the order for arbitration is excluded from calculation of the five-year period on the ground that it was impossible, impracticable, or futile for plaintiff to bring the matter to arbitration or trial, does not apply when the plaintiff has not exercised reasonable diligence in pursuing his or her cause of action (206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374) . Looking for guidance to cases construing the impossibility, impracticability, or futility exception to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310, the court held that the exception did not apply because plaintiff's delay in scheduling her arbitration hearing was caused by matters within her control (206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374-1375) . The court observed that a claimant in arbitration can petition the court for assistance in expediting the proceedings by moving to appoint a neutral arbitrator, moving to set an arbitration date, moving to strike a defendant's answer, or entering a defendant's default (206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374) . Plaintiff, the court found, did not show due diligence in locating an expert witness, could have moved to set the arbitration date in a more timely fashion instead of attempting to schedule the hearing only days before the five-year period, and made a belated motion to set an arbitration date (206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374-1375) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.11

§ 20D.11 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action When Party Failed to Exercise Diligence in Prosecuting Claim as Required by Agreement

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 20D.10[1].]

THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING AND STAYED ACTION SHOULD BE DISMISSED BECAUSE THE CLAIMANT HAS FAILED TO EXERCISE REASONABLE DILIGENCE, AS REQUIRED UNDER THE ARBITRATION AGREEMENT, IN PROSECUTING HIS/HER/ITS CLAIM.

Dismissal of Arbitration and Stayed Action for Lack of Reasonable Diligence Required Under Agreement. If the arbitration agreement provides that the claimant must pursue the arbitration claim with reasonable diligence, the arbitration proceeding and any action stayed therefor may be dismissed on a showing that the claimant failed to exercise such diligence in prosecuting the matter (Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896, 898, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum may be used to support a motion to dismiss an arbitration proceeding and stayed action if the arbitration agreement requires a claimant to exercise reasonable diligence in pursuing a claim, but the claimant has not prosecuted the claim diligently. There is significant authority holding that the court lacks power to entertain the motion supported by this form, and criticizing the case cited in this form [see § 20D.10[2][c]].

For a memorandum supporting a motion to dismiss the arbitration and stayed action for failure to prosecute the claim within five years, see § 20D.10.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should identify the portion of the arbitration agreement requiring reasonable diligence in prosecuting the claim and lay out the facts that show the failure of the opposing party to exercise such diligence.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 20D.20 may be used to oppose a motion to dismiss supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Arbitration and Stayed Action for Lack of Reasonable Diligence Required Under Agreement

The facts and procedural background of Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 , are discussed at § 20D.10[3][a].

As a basis for its holding that the complaint and arbitration proceeding must be dismissed, the court concluded that whether or not the mandatory dismissal provision of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) was applicable, reasonable diligence as required by the arbitration agreement had not been demonstrated by the plaintiff (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896) . It observed that a precise contractual or judicial definition of the term "reasonable diligence" need not be delineated to perceive that the plaintiff's claim should be barred because of his delay, and that the plaintiff's activities could not measure up to any standard of the term (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 895) . The court noted that an earlier appellate court had dismissed an arbitration matter because during arbitration proceedings the plaintiff in that case had failed to comply with discovery orders issued by the court. The present court of appeal reasoned that if during arbitration the courts have jurisdiction to dismiss for refusal of discovery, a court also should be empowered to dismiss where there has been no exercise of reasonable diligence by the plaintiff. The court concluded by commenting that all the factors in the present case left the court unsympathetic to the contention of the plaintiff that he had been deprived of his day in court, for the court observed that such deprivation was caused by his own lack of reasonable diligence, and he had failed to sustain the burden of showing that the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action and arbitration (103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 898) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.12

§ 20D.12 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Arbitration Proceeding When Party Failed to Comply With Discovery Order

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 20D.10[1].]

THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING SHOULD BE DISMISSED BECAUSE PETITIONER HAS FAILED TO COMPLY WITH A DISCOVERY ORDER.

Dismissal of Arbitration Is Appropriate Sanction for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order. In keeping with the rule that a party's persistent refusal to make discovery results is a presumption that the claims asserted are without merit, arbitration compelled under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.2 should be dismissed, with prejudice, when petitioner refuses to comply with a discovery order (California Teachers Assn. v. Governing Board (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 393, 399-400, 207 Cal. Rptr. 659).

[OR, in uninsured motorist matter]

Dismissal of Arbitration Is Appropriate Sanction for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order. Discovery in uninsured motorist arbitration is governed by Section11580.2(f) of the Insurance Code, which adopts the entire California Civil Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.010 et seq.) and grants jurisdiction to the court, rather than to the arbitrator, to hear and determine discovery motions, including sanctions. Thus, the superior court has jurisdiction to dismiss uninsured motorist arbitration based on the insured's refusal to authorize release of medical records in accordance with a previous order. The court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the arbitration rather than imposing some lesser sanction (Miranda v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 920-921, 926, 928-929, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum may be used to support a motion to dismiss an arbitration proceeding when the party pursuing the claim has failed or refused to comply with a discovery order. The first option is for use in ordinary arbitrations pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq., in which discovery decisions are made by the arbitrator. The second options is for use in uninsured motorist matters, in which the superior court has jurisdiction over discovery matters, which may be conducted at any time after the accident, even before arbitration has been commenced [Ins. Code § 11580.2(f)]. The form contemplates that a petition to compel arbitration has been granted earlier and that the petitioner has then failed to comply with discovery.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Argument should disclose the discovery order or orders that have been made and any attempts to force compliance prior to this request for the ultimate sanction.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to dismissal of actions in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to dismissal as a discovery sanction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For forms of memoranda supporting motions to impose sanctions for failure to comply with discovery, see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse . For memoranda addressing dismissal of civil actions in general, see Ch. 90, Dismissal .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 20D.20 may be used to oppose a motion to dismiss supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Arbitration Is Appropriate Sanction for Failure to Comply With Discovery Order

In California Teachers Assn. v. Governing Board (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 393, 207 Cal. Rptr. 659 , a teachers Association and another association representing teachers in the district (the associations) brought a petition for writ of mandate to compel arbitration relating to a provision in the contract with the school district requiring the district to compel the payment by nonmember teachers of a service fee to the associations. The court issued an alternative writ directing the district to commence arbitration or to compel payment of the service fees. Arbitration was commenced, and eventually an order was made by the court requiring the associations to produce certain financial records or suffer dismissal of the arbitration proceeding. After continued failure of the associations to comply, the court dismissed with prejudice both the arbitration proceeding and the writ proceeding. Both parties filed memoranda for costs, the district also seeking attorney's fees pursuant to an indemnity provision in the contract. Both cost bills were stricken. The district appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the dismissal of the arbitration proceeding, and the dismissal being a judgment on the merits, upheld the payment to the district, as prevailing party, of its attorney's fees pursuant to an indemnity clause in the contract. The association's contention on appeal was that the trial court had no jurisdiction to award costs after the writ of mandate was issued compelling arbitration and that it had been the prevailing party because of the writ. The court of appeal said that mandate had been a misnomer; there had been only one type of relief available and that was to compel arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2. Mandate (Code Civ. Proc. § 1085) could not issue to compel arbitration because mandate could compel only acts required by law and the arbitration was pursuant to contract. In addition, the remedy of Code Civ. Proc. § 1281.2 was an adequate remedy at law, the existence of which also prevents the issuance of a writ of mandate. A waiver by the district of its claim to costs did not amount to a waiver of its right to attorney's fees (161 Cal. App. 3d 393, 398-401) .

Miranda v. 21st Century Ins. Co. (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 159 , arose from an accident plaintiff had with an underinsured motorist. She filed suit and after settling with that motorist, demanded underinsured motorist arbitration against her insurer. The insurer subpoenaed medical records relating to a prior medical condition of the insured. The medical facility refused to comply with the subpoena unless plaintiff authorized the release of the records. Plaintiff refused to do so. Defendant obtained an order from the superior court requiring plaintiff to authorize therelease of the medical records. When plaintiff still refused to sign the release, the insurer sought and obtained the ultimate sanction of dismissal of the arbitration and the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court discussed the procedure for discovery set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.2(f). Discovery in uninsured motorist arbitration is governed by Ins. Code § 11580.2(f), which adopts the entire California Civil Discovery Act (Code Civ. Proc. § 2016.010 et seq.) and grants jurisdiction to the court, rather than arbitrator, to hear and determine discovery motions, including sanctions (117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 920-921) . Thus, the superior court had jurisdiction to dismiss uninsured motorist arbitration for the insured's refusal to authorize release of medical records in accordance with a previous order (117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 926) . One rationale for having the court rather than the arbitrator determine motions with respect to uninsured motorist discovery is that discovery in uninsured motorist matters may take place any time after the accident, including before an arbitrator is appointed (117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 923) . Discovery motions relating to uninsured motorist claims may be heard in the superior court in and for any county that is a proper county for the filing of a suit for bodily injury against the uninsured motorist, or any county specified in the policy or an endorsement thereto as a proper county for arbitration or action thereon [Ins. Code § 11580.2(f)(1)] (117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 921) . It was not an abuse of discretion for the court to dismiss the arbitration rather than impose some lesser sanction. No other sanction would have sufficed nor provided defendant with the information it needed (117 Cal. App. 4th 913, 928-929) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities §§ 20D.13-20D.19

[Reserved]

§§ 20D.13[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.20

§ 20D.20 Opposing Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and/or Stayed Action

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING MOTION TO DIS-
	)	MISS ARBITRATION [AND STAYED ACTION]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Petitioner,	)	Time: _____
vs.	)	Location: _____
_____ [name],	)	[Judge: _____]
Respondent.	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: none
	)
	)
	)
	)
	)
_____

NEITHER THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING NOR THE AND STAYED ACTION MAY BE DISMISSED BECAUSE THE COURT HAS NO POWER TO DISMISS THE STAYED ACTION WHILE THE ARBITRATION IS PENDING, AND THE COURT HAS NO POWER TO TERMINATE THE ARBITRATION.

A. Court Does Not Have Authority to Dismiss Arbitration or Stayed Action. While an action is stayed under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1281.4 pending a nonjudicial arbitration, the court has no power to dismiss the action under Code of Civil Procedure Section [583.360 (failure to bring it to trial within five years or 583.410 (failure to bring it to trial within two years)]. Nor has the court any power to order terminate the arbitration, even if the arbitration is not being pursued diligently (Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 733, 737-738, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (2nd Dist., Div. 3) ; Titan/Value Equities Group, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487-488, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (4th Dist., Div. 1) ; Burgess v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1081, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 (1st Dist., Div. 5) ; Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801, 1805, 1808, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 (3rd Dist.)) .

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose a motion in the trial court seeking dismissal of the arbitration and/or the related stayed action on the ground that the court does not have authority to dismiss either one.

The form sets forth the majority view on this issue, as held by courts of appeal in the First, Third, and Fourth Appellate Districts and in the Second District, Division Three. In the Second District, Divisions One, Two, and Five have held that a court may dismiss a stayed action [see Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hosp. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 898, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 (2nd Dist., Div. 1) (dismissing both action and arbitration); Gainey v. Occidental Land Research (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1051, 1054, 231 Cal. Rptr. 249 (2nd Dist., Div. 5) ; Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (2nd Dist., Div. 2) (effect of dismissing action is to terminate arbitration)], although the Second District, Division Two, has also agreed that the arbitrator may dismiss the arbitration [Young v. Ross-Loos Medical Group, Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 669, 673, 185 Cal. Rptr. 536 (2nd Dist., Div. 2) (arbitrator's dismissal is in effect an award that plaintiff take nothing; arbitrator was in as good a position to administer test of reasonable diligence as was trial court in which proceedings had been stayed)].

Counsel may wish to incorporate memoranda from Ch. 90, Dismissal.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should note that the action was stayed and ask that judicial notice be taken of the order staying the action. Argument may also describe the facts constituting his or her client's reasonable diligence in trying to bring the arbitration to hearing and explain how every delay was caused by the other party or the other party's arbitrator, counsel, or witnesses. In this regard, it will be important to note any court intervention that has been necessary [see Titan/Value Equities Group, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 488, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (4th Dist., Div. 1) (discussed at [3][a], below); Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 (3rd Dist.) (discussed at [3][a], below); Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Health Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1374, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173 (1st Dist., Div. 5)] .

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement)].

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the split of authority on this issue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to dismissal of actions in general, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda addressing dismissal of civil actions in general, see Ch. 90, Dismissal .

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Does Not Have Authority to Dismiss Arbitration or Stayed Action

The facts and procedural background of Blake v. Ecker (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 422 (2nd Dist., Div. 3) , and the portion of the opinion addressing retroactive application of Armendariz v. Foundation Health Psychcare Services, Inc. (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 83, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 745, 6 P.3d 669 are discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.23[3][e]. Regarding the trial court's dismissal of the action after it had issued an order compelling arbitration, the court of appeal concluded that once the trial court granted defendants' motion to compel arbitration, it no longer had jurisdiction to hear or rule on defendants' motion to dismiss (93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 733) . Once the trial court stayed plaintiff's civil action, it was stayed for all purposes during the arbitration proceedings. Defendants' only avenue for redress when plaintiff failed to timely prosecute the arbitration was in the arbitration proceeding (93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 737) . The court of appeal quoted from Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1796, 1797-1801 , that "Once a court grants the petition to compel arbitration and stays the action at law, the action at law sits in the twilight zone of abatement with the trial court retaining merely a vestigial jurisdiction over matters submitted to arbitration. This vestigial jurisdiction over the action at law consists solely of making the determination, upon conclusion of the arbitration proceedings, of whether there was an award on the merits (in which case the action at law should be dismissed because of the res judicata effects of the arbitration award. [Citations.])." The court also retains a separate, limited jurisdiction over the contractual arbitration which was the subject of the section 1281.2 petition: "After a petition has been filed under this title [i.e., "title 9" (§§ 1280-1294.2)], the court in which such petition was filed retains jurisdiction to determine any subsequent petition involving the same agreement to arbitrate and the same controversy, and any such subsequent petition shall be filed in the same proceeding." (93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 737-738) . Thus, rather than seek relief from the trial court for plaintiff's failure to proceed, defendants should have sought relief in the arbitration proceeding, by pursuing the remedies available under the arbitration agreement and the rules of the arbitration association designated therein. The trial court had no jurisdiction to grant the motion to dismiss, and its order dismissing the action must be reversed (93 Cal. App. 4th 728, 738) .

Petitioners in Titan/Value Equities Group, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 (4th Dist., Div. 1) , opened securities accounts with Titan/Value Equities Group in 1992, and in so doing, signed an agreement that required them to submit any disputes between the parties to arbitration. In 1992, plaintiffs filed suit against Titan/Value, another company and its principal, and two Titan employees for alleged losses suffered in connection with the trading. In response to Titan's petition to compel arbitration, plaintiffs stipulated to arbitrate. They filed a submission of claims with the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD), agreeing that the matter be determined in accordance with the NASD's Code of Arbitration Procedure. In December, 1992, the court in which the petition to compel arbitration was filed dismissed the petition as moot, in view of the stipulation, and stayed the plaintiffs' action against Titan.

The arbitration never took place: (1) the employee defendants filed bankruptcy, and investors were not granted relief from the stay until December, 1993, (2) there were discovery disputes, and (3) there were scheduling conflicts. In February, 1994, at a progress conference before the Superior Court, which defendants did not attend, investors' counsel expressed frustration with the arbitration and asked the court to "take control of the case." The trial court reasserted jurisdiction, set the case for trial on June 10, 1994, and agreed that an informal notice of ruling should be sent to Titan. After receiving the notice, Titan defendants filed a motion seeking reconsideration, confirmation of their right to arbitrate, and order staying the superior court action, or, alternatively, an order compelling arbitration. The other company also moved to compel arbitration. The trial court compelled arbitration, required the Titan defendants to respond fully to discovery, and required arbitration to proceed by June 30, even though it kept the June 10 trial date on calendar and required all counsel to appear then and report the status of the arbitration. Defendants filed writs of prohibition and mandate contending that the trial court could not order a case to arbitration and stay the lawsuit while at the same time reserving authority over the arbitration.

The writs were granted (29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 489) . The court of appeal said that once a court stays an action submitted to arbitration, it has only vestigial jurisdiction over the matter [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.4, 1281.8(b), 1285 (things court can do after staying action)]. The arbitrator takes over. It is the job of the arbitrator, not the court, to resolve all questions needed to determine the controversy (29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487) , including deciding questions of procedure and discovery and granting relief from delay. In ordering arbitration to proceed under the stated conditions subject to reinstatement on the trial calendar, the trial court exceeded its jurisdiction (29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 488) . Under the procedures stipulated to by the parties, the director of the NASD proceedings sets the time and place of the hearing and has, among other things established procedures for discovery (29 Cal. App. 4th 482, 489) .

The parties in Burgess v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 (1st Dist., Div. 5) , stipulated to arbitration on June 20, 1986. The two party arbitrators did not appoint the third arbitrator until April, 1989. In April, 1990, the neutral arbitrator demanded a nonrefundable $1,000 deposit from each side before the scheduled hearing in July, 1990. In June, 1990, defendant designated eight experts. Plaintiffs did not pay the fee and made no further attempt to bring the matter to a hearing. In November, 1991, defendant requested the arbitrator to dismiss the matter. The arbitrator did so. Plaintiffs moved the court to vacate that order, arguing that the five-year period was tolled by (1) the arbitrator's demand for the fee, which plaintiffs contended was misconduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3) and (5)], (2) the defendant's burdensome designation of eight experts, and (3) the time taken by the party arbitrators' delay in appointing the third arbitrator. The trial court confirmed the order of dismissal, and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order confirming an arbitrator's dismissal and remanded with instructions to the superior court. The court of appeal agreed that the arbitrator, not the court, has authority to dismiss the arbitration for a party's failure to proceed with reasonable diligence (16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1081) . None of the causes advanced by plaintiffs tolled the five-year period. However, because there was no law on point at the time, plaintiffs' belief that it was tolled did not amount to failure of reasonable diligence (16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1082) . Plaintiffs' appropriate remedy, for delay by the arbitrator, relief from the reservation fee, or the burdensome designation of experts was to petition the court for an appropriate order expediting the arbitration proceeding (16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1081-1082) .

In Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 (3rd Dist.) , a medical malpractice action had been stayed pending conclusion of an arbitration between the patient and the health care provider. Five years and one month after the arbitration was begun, the health care provider moved the court to dismiss both the stayed action and the arbitration, on the grounds of (1) failure to bring the action to trial within five years [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] and (2) failure to prosecute the arbitration diligently, as required by the arbitration agreement. The trial court granted the motion and ordered entry of a judgment dismissing the action and the arbitration. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. Regarding dismissal of the stayed action, the court concluded that during the period while an action is stayed, the trial court has no power to dismiss it for failure to bring it to trial within five years (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801) . By statute, the applicable five-year period excludes any period during which the action is stayed [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b)]; therefore, while the stay is in effect,the five-year period cannot expire. The court cited with approval Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1314, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 (discussed at [4][a], below), which reached the same conclusion by slightly different reasoning based on a related statutory exclusion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)] (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797) . The Brock court criticized and declined to follow cases supporting the view that the stayed action may be dismissed for failure to bring it to trial [see Boutwell v. Kaiser Foundation Hospital Plan (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1371, 1373-1375, 254 Cal. Rptr. 173 (1st Dist. Div. 5) ; Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406-410, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (2nd Dist., Div. 2) ; Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hosp. (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 893-896, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 (2nd Dist., Div. 1)] (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797-1801) .

Regarding dismissal of the arbitration, the court of appeal concluded that a trial court has no power to terminate a nonjudicial arbitration, even if a party fails to prosecute the arbitration diligently and thus violates a provision of the arbitration agreement (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1805) . The court criticized and declined to follow cases supporting the view that a court has power to dismiss, or otherwise terminate, a nonjudicial arbitration (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801-1805) , and noted other cases holding a trial court has no power to terminate a nonjudicial arbitration once it has been ordered (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1805-1807) . A court's power respecting a pending arbitration is limited to confirming (or correcting and confirming) an award or vacating an award, then rendering judgment accordingly [Code Civ. Proc. § 1285 et seq.]. Only the arbitrator has power to terminate the arbitration. If a party has been dilatory or has violated a provision of the arbitration agreement requiring diligent prosecution of the arbitration, the arbitrator has power to terminate the arbitration with a take-nothing award against that party. Once the arbitration has been terminated, the trial court in which the stayed action is pending has power, on being petitioned for confirmation of the award, to lift the stay, confirm the award, and then dismiss the action on the ground that every claim at issue is res judicata [Young v. Ross-Loos Medical Group, Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 669, 673-674, 185 Cal. Rptr. 536 (2nd Dist., Div. 2)] (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1808) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Does Not Have Authority to Dismiss Arbitration or Stayed Action

The court of appeal in Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 (4th Dist., Div. 3) , held that once the related action is stayed, a trial court has no authority to dismiss the action; that is for the arbitrator to do (204

Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1315-1316) . The court of appeal criticized Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 , for its holding that dismissal of a previously stayed complaint terminates the underlying action, saying that mere dismissal of a previously stayed complaint has absolutely no effect on the pending arbitration because the parties had agreed by contract to arbitrate the dispute. The court said it was not aware of any authority of the trial court, in dismissing the court action, to dismiss the arbitration, even if it desired to accomplish that result (204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1314-1315) . The court said that "[t]o the extent that Preston may be cited for the notion that dismissal of a complaint somehow includes termination of a pending arbitration matter, it is unsupported, and unsupportable, in law or logic; and we decline to follow it" (204 Cal. App.3d 1312, 1316 n.3).

However, the case of Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1549-1550, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 , did not involve a stayed action; rather, the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed his complaint. The court held that there is nothing to preclude a plaintiff's dismissal of a complaint after a case has been ordered into arbitration, but before an arbitration has commenced. That court of appeal declined to exercise its discretion to review the trial court's order compelling arbitration and stated that an order compelling arbitration is nonappealable; however, the court also stated that after plaintiff's dismissal, the trial court no longer has jurisdiction to order the parties to complete the arbitration [Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1552-1553, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20D ARBITRATION: DISMISSING
PART II. FORMS

2-20D California Points & Authorities § 20D.21

§ 20D.21 Opposing Motion to Dismiss Arbitration and Stayed Action--Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence in Prosecuting Arbitration

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING MOTION TO DIS-
Plaintiff,	)	MISS ARBITRATION AND STAYED ACTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: none

_____

THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING AND STAYED ACTION SHOULD NOT BE DISMISSED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS AT ALL TIMES EXERCISED REASONABLE DILIGENCE IN PROSECUTING THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING.

A. Dismissal of Action Improper When Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence. The mandatory dismissal statute's five-year period merely provides a measuring rod to determine whether plaintiff has pursued his or her contractual arbitration claim with reasonable diligence (Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882).

[Optional] B. Calculation of Five-Year Period. When it was impossible or impractical for plaintiff to bring the matter to arbitration during the period between the filing of the complaint and the order for arbitration, the point for commencing the running of the five-year period is the order for arbitration (Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 409, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose a motion to dismiss an arbitration proceeding and an action stayed, pending arbitration, for failure to bring the matter to arbitration within five years. The ground for the motion is that dismissal is not warranted when the plaintiff can demonstrate that he or she has exercised reasonable diligence at all times in prosecuting the arbitration proceeding. Thus, for example, the time between the filing of the complaint and the date of the order compelling arbitration should be excluded from calculation of the five-year period when it was impossible, impractical, or futile for plaintiff to prosecute the action [Optional Paragraph B].

Counsel may wish to combine this form with the memorandum set out in § 20D.20, which presents a line of cases holding that the court lacks power to dismiss either an arbitration proceeding or an action stayed pending arbitration [see, e.g., Burgess v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1081, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 (discussed in § 20D.20[3][a])].

In an appropriate case, this form may be used to oppose a motion to dismiss supported by the memoranda set out in §§ 20D.10 and 20D.11.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The argument should highlight, for example, facts demonstrating plaintiff's exercise of reasonable diligence at all times, and point out how delay was caused by the other party or external sources for which the plaintiff was not responsible.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action Improper When Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence

Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 , involved an arbitration proceeding pursuant to a contract that required the claimant to pursue the arbitration claim with "reasonable diligence." Slightly over one year after plaintiff filed the complaint, defendants moved to stay the action, pending arbitration. The stay was granted approximately 11 months later. Because of delay caused by disputes over selection of the arbitrator, arbitration proceedings had not yet begun when five years passed from the date the complaint was filed. The trial court dismissed the action for failure to bring it to trial, because nearly six years had passed since the complaint was filed.

The court of appeal reversed the dismissal, remanding the case to the trial court for further proceedings. The court agreed with Lockhart-Mummery v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1980) 103 Cal. App. 3d 891, 896, 163 Cal. Rptr. 325 (discussed in § 20D.10[3][a]), that the five-year mandatory dismissal period contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583

[now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360(a)] may be applied in contractual arbitration proceedings to provide a measuring rod to determine whether plaintiff has pursued his or her arbitration claim with reasonable diligence, as required by the contract (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408) . However, the court gave a much less restrictive reading than Lockhart-Mummery to the term "measuring rod." Whereas Lockhart-Mummery held that the arbitration order does not toll the statute oflimitations and that the case should be dismissed if it has not been brought to arbitration within five years, Preston held that expiration of the five-year period alone does not justify dismissal of an arbitration case (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408) . The court emphasized that the real test to be applied was whether the plaintiff had in fact exercised reasonable diligence, and that the period set forth in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 should only be used as a guideline (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408-409) .

[b] Calculation of Five-Year Period

The facts and procedural background of Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 , are discussed under [a], above. In Preston, the court of appeal held that it was improper to dismiss the action, which had been stayed pending arbitration, when the dismissal was based solely on an elapse of five years between the filing of the complaint and the motion for dismissal (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 410). The court stated that language of the decision in Lockhart-Mummery, under which an arbitration should be dismissed after five years from the filing of the complaint, was unnecessarily broad. Instead, the court held that the real test is whether plaintiff pursued the arbitration claim with "reasonable diligence," as required by the arbitration contract (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408). In setting forth the principles for the trial court to apply on remand, the court held that the five-year limit of Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360(a)] cannot be imported into the test of reasonable diligence without also importing the judicially developed exceptions to the statute based on impossibility or impracticability [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]. Under the exceptions, the five-year statute is tolled during the time when it is impossible or impractical to bring an action to trial (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 408-409) . The court observed that, during the period between the filing of the complaint and the order for arbitration, it is generally not possible or practical for the plaintiff to bring the matter to arbitration or trial. Therefore, the court stated, the point for commencing the running of the five-year period will not ordinarily be the filing of the complaint but rather the order for arbitration (126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 409) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action Improper When Plaintiff Has Exercised Reasonable Diligence

The court of appeal in Burgess v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 488 , reversed an order confirming an arbitrator's dismissal and remanded with instructions to the superior court. The arbitrator dismissed the arbitration at defendant's request based on plaintiffs' alleged failure to diligently prosecute the matter. The parties stipulated to arbitration on June 20, 1986. The two party arbitrators did not appoint the third arbitrator until April, 1989. In April, 1990, the neutral arbitrator demanded a nonrefundable $1,000 deposit from each side before the scheduled hearing in July, 1990. In June, 1990, defendant designated eight experts. Plaintiffs did not pay the fee and made no further attempt to bring the matter to a hearing. In November, 1991, defendant requested the arbitrator to dismiss the matter. The arbitrator did so. Plaintiffs moved the court to vacate that order, arguing that the five-year period was tolled by (1) the arbitrator's demand for the fee, which plaintiffs contended was misconduct [Code Civ. Proc. § 1286.2(a)(3) and (5)], (2) the defendant's burdensome designation of eight experts, and (3) the time taken by the party arbitrators' delay in appointing the third arbitrator.

The court of appeal said that none of those causes tolled the five-year period, but since there was no law on point at the time, plaintiffs' belief that it was tolled did not amount to failure of reasonable diligence (16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1082) . Plaintiffs' appropriate remedy, for delay by the arbitrator, relief from the reservation fee, or the burdensome designation of experts was to petition the court for an appropriate order expediting the arbitration proceeding (16 Cal. App. 4th 1077, 1081-1082) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD

2-20E California Points & Authorities 20E.syn

§ 20E.syn Synopsis to Chapter 20E: ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD

§ 20E.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 20E.02 Governing Law

§ 20E.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 20E.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 20E.05-20E.09 [Reserved]

§ 20E.10 Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

§ 20E.11 Unconfirmed Award May Be Given Res Judicata Effect

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Effect of Unconfirmed Arbitration Award

§ 20E.12 Judgment Based on Arbitration Award Bars Subsequent Suit on Same Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Bars Subsequent Suit on Claim That Was Arbitrated

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Bars Subsequent Suit on Claim That Was Arbitrated

§ 20E.13 Court May Amend Judgment Based on Arbitration Award to Add Alter Ego

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court May Amend Judgment Based on Award to Add Alter Ego

§§ 20E.14-20E.29 [Reserved]

§ 20E.30 Person Who Was Not Party to Arbitration Cannot Assert Collateral Estoppel Effect of Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Collateral Estoppel Effect Without Arbitral Parties' Agreement

§ 20E.31 Res Judicata Does Not Prohibit Filing of Petition to Compel Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Does Not Prohibit Filing of Petition to Compel Arbitration

§ 20E.32 Judgment on Arbitration Award Does Not Bar This Lawsuit on the Basis of Res Judicata

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Is Not Applicable

§ 20E.33 Arbitrator, Not Court, May Modify or Dissolve Injunction Issued by Arbitrator

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Has No Power to Modify or Dissolve Injunction Issued by Arbitrator

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.01

§ 20E.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda and contentions relating to the effect of an arbitration award under private agreements pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1280 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsArbitrabilityCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsArbitration Clauses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.02

§ 20E.02 Governing Law

Once an arbitration award has been made, but has not been confirmed or vacated, it has the same force and effect as a written contract between the parties to the arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.6; see § 20E.11[1]]. If the award is confirmed, judgment is entered in conformity with the award, and is treated and may be enforced like any other judgment in a civil action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4].

Unlike a judicial arbitration award, a favorable award in a contractual arbitration proceeding is not a "prior action" that will provide the basis for a cause of action for malicious prosecution [Brennan v. Tremco Incorporated (2001) 25 Cal. 4th 310, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 790, 20 P.3d 1086 , approving Sagonowsky v. More (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 122, 125, 134, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , and disapproving, to the extent it is inconsistent, Rogers v. Peinado (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8-9, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 817].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionCivil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionArbitrationsWaivers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.03

§ 20E.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in a summary judgment proceeding. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, tables of contents and authorities, and proof of service are not counted. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Chapter 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other forms to form a complete memorandum. For detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06. For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeContent & FormCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.04

§ 20E.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of motions and other papers relating to private contractual arbitration proceedings, see:

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding (Matthew Bender).

- California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

Chapters in this publication with related forms include:

- For compelling arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

- For resisting arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting .

- For selecting arbitrators and determining whether an arbitrator is immune from suit, see Ch. 20B, Arbitration: Selecting Arbitrators; Arbitral Immunity .

- For confirming, correcting, or vacating an arbitration award, see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award .

- For dismissing an arbitration proceeding, see Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing .

- For situations in which attorney's fees may be recovered, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

- For contract provisions in general, see Ch. 50, Contracts .

- For situations in which contracts may be avoided or declared void, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

- For requirements of injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

- For general principles relating to specific performance of contracts, see Ch. 214, Specific Performance .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureAlternative Dispute ResolutionCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-20E California Points & Authorities §§ 20E.05-20E.09

[Reserved]

§§ 20E.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.10

§ 20E.10 Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

[1] FORM

THE ARBITRATION AWARD WAS JUDICIALLY CONFIRMED [AS TO ALL ISSUES PENDING IN THIS CASE] AND IS NOT SUBJECT TO COLLATERAL ATTACK BY THIS ACTION.

A. Judgment Confirming Award Has Same Effect as Judgment in Civil Action. If an award is confirmed, judgment must be entered in conformity with it. The judgment so entered has the same force and effect as, and is subject to all the provision of law relating to, a judgment in a civil action of the same jurisdictional classification; and it may be enforced like any other judgment of the court in which it is entered, in an action of the same jurisdictional classification (Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4).

B. Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack. The judgment confirming an arbitration award has the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action, carrying the effect of res judicata and not ordinarily subject to collateral attack (Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Williams (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 302, 309, 175 Cal. Rptr. 347 ; Klubnikin v. California Fair Plan Assn. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 393, 398, 148 Cal. Rptr. 563 ; see also Kelly v. Vons Companies, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335-1337, 1341, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 (upholding collateral estoppel effect of prior labor arbitration award without mentioning whether award had been confirmed)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that an arbitration award that has been confirmed as a judgment its not subject to collateral attack. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 221, Summary Judgments].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. A copy of the judgment entered on the award should be attached as an exhibit to the memorandum, or a declaration in support of it; and the memorandum or a declaration in support of it should request judicial notice be taken of the judgment. The argument should explain how the issues determined in the arbitration encompass those attempted to be litigated in the action in which the motion is made.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the scope of res judicata and collateral estoppel and a form of answer which raises the defense that the issue between the same parties was determined in a prior action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

For a form of summary judgment that may be used to raise the issue of res judicata, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

Division of Labor Standards Enforcement v. Williams (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 302, 175 Cal. Rptr. 347 , involved a dispute between the State Division of Labor Standards, Department of Industrial Relations, and several restaurants that was submitted to binding arbitration. The arbitration award was in favor of the restaurants, and the superior court confirmed the award. The department then brought an action for damages and an injunction against the employers, and the superior court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed, citing language from the opinion in Lehto v. Underground Constr. Co. (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 933, 939, 138 Cal. Rptr. 419 , that arbitration is a voluntary procedure for settling disputes, leading to a final determination of the rights of the parties. The policy of the law is to favor arbitration, and every reasonable intendment is indulged to give effect to those proceedings. Once a valid award is made by the arbitrator, it is conclusive on matters of fact and law, and all matters in the award are res judicata (121 Cal. App. 3d 302, 309) .

In Klubnikin v. California Fair Plan Assn. (1978) 84 Cal. App. 3d 393, 148 Cal. Rptr. 563 , an insured under a fire policy and the insurer submitted their dispute over a fire loss to appraisers. The insured did not file a petition to vacate the resultant low-figure award. Instead, he filed an action for breach of contract, asking for the amount of loss coverage under the policy, and also attacking the procedure employed during arbitration. The insurer filed a petition to confirm the award, answered the insured's amended complaint, which added a request for declaratory relief, and moved for summary judgment in the action. The insurer's petition to confirm the award was granted, and no appeal was taken. Thereafter, the insurer's motion was heard and summary judgment was granted. The insured appealed from that judgment.

Affirming the judgment, the court of appeal noted that the judgment confirming the arbitration award had the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action. It was not subject to collateral attack except for grounds that would be available to attack any other civil judgment. The binding res judicata effect of the confirmed award barred the relief the insured sought on appeal. The proper remedy would have been to seek to vacate or correct the award within the prescribed 100-day time period [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1288, 1288.2]. Otherwise, the award must be treated as final. The filing of the original complaint during that time period would not stop the time bar from running even if the complaint could be construed as seeking vacation or correction of the award, because it also must have been served; but there was no evidence the original complaint had ever been served within the statutory period (84 Cal. App. 3d 393, 398) .

Kelly v. Vons Companies, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335-1337, 1341, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 was an action for fraud and misrepresentation by 28 union members who lost their jobs when defendant closed its Santa Maria facility. When defendant acquired that facility, it assumed the collective bargaining agreement then in effect with plaintiffs' union. The union representing drivers at defendant's Los Angeles facility filed a grievance claiming the drivers from the Santa Maria facility had to join their union. During that grievance, which was eventually submitted to arbitration, defendant informed the Santa Maria drivers that they did not anticipate any job losses for those drivers as a result of that dispute. That dispute ended with an arbitration award finding that the members of the Los Angeles union were entitled to the Santa Maria work and awarding the union in excess of $250,000. Less than a year after that award was made, defendant closed the Santa Maria trucking facility for "economic reasons" and offered the drivers from that facility jobs in the Los Angeles area, although they were not all full-time positions. The union representing the Santa Maria drivers then filed a grievance, which went to arbitration, protesting the closure of the Santa Maria facility. That arbitration was terminated in favor of defendant, the award finding that the reason for closing the Santa Maria facility was economic and legitimate and that the decision in favor of the Los Angeles union, although it had a direct financial and operational impact on defendant's transportation system, was not the reason for closing the Santa Maria facility. Defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground that plaintiffs were collaterally estopped from seeking damages for misrepresentations about the labor dispute with the union representing the Los Angeles drivers because the award in the arbitration with the Santa Maria union necessarily determined that defendant closed the Santa Maria plant f economic reasons not related to the labor dispute and thus any alleged misrepresentations about that dispute could not have caused plaintiffs' damages. The trial court granted summary judgment. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiffs contended that collateral estoppel does not apply to findings made during a labor arbitration under a collective bargaining agreement. The court of appeal disagreed, and held that collateral estoppel does apply to such findings, so long as the customary elements required for the application of that doctrine are met (67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335) , which they found them to be in this case (67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335-1337, 1339-1341) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Confirming Award Is Not Subject to Collateral Attack

G.C. & K.B. Investments, Inc. v. Wilson (9th Cir. 2003) 326 F.3d 1096 , involved a judgment of the federal district court for the Central District of California confirming an arbitration award in favor of plaintiff/franchisor. The arbitration had taken place in New Orleans pursuant to the arbitration clause [see Ch. 20C, Arbitration: Confirming, Correcting, or Vacating the Award, § 20C.90[4][a]]. Defendants refused to participate in the arbitration, and instead filed suit in Hawaii state court seeking relief from the franchise agreement. The franchise was to operate a car service business in Hawaii. The federal court's order confirming the award was issued on August 14, 2000. Defendants appealed, claiming, among other things, that collateral estoppel and res judicata, based on two orders in the Hawaiian state court action, barred the order and judgment of the federal district court. One order from the Hawaiian state court was issued on June 27, 2000, and compelled arbitration of the claims asserted in the Hawaiian action in California, not Louisiana. The second was an order issued October 18, 2000, and enjoined plaintiff from any attempt to enforce its federal court judgment against defendants in Hawaii state court. Plaintiff applied for, and in March, 2001, received, an injunction from the federal district court preventing defendants from interfering any further with its attempts to enforce its judgment. On April 30, 2001, plaintiff obtained an order from the Hawaii state court finding the Louisiana arbitration award void, vacated, and that the federal district court had no subject matter jurisdiction over the proceedings. On the basis of that order, defendants applied for post-judgment relief in federal district court. That relief was denied, and defendants were sanctioned $19,350, which the court determined was plaintiff's reasonable attorneys fees for opposing the motion for post-judgment relief, their motion for reconsideration, and for seeking an injunction against the defendants' attempts to block the enforcement of judgment in Hawaii state court.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendants claimed that the Rooker-Feldman doctrine divested the federal district court of jurisdiction to enter judgment based on the arbitration award [see D.C. Court of Appeals v. Feldman (1983) 460 U.S. 462, 103 S. Ct. 1303, 75 L. Ed. 2d 206 ; Rooker v. Fidelity Trust Co. (1923) 263 U.S. 413, 44 S. Ct. 149, 68 L. Ed. 362] . Rooker-Feldman provides that a United States district court has no authority to review judgments of a state court in judicial proceedings, including decisions of lower state courts, even those interlocutory in nature (326 F.3d 1096, 1102) . The court of appeal noted that the claims at issue in Hawaii were raised after the arbitration took place. Further, in confirming the arbitration award, the district court did not have to find that the Hawaii state court order was wrong. It simply dealt with the confirmability of the award pursuant to the FAA, as opposed to the arbitrability of new claims raised in an amended complaint filed after the arbitration took place. There was no prohibited review of the Hawaii state court order and no collateral attack on any judgment of the Hawaiian state court. The district court had jurisdiction to issue the order confirming the arbitration award (326 F.3d 1096, 1104-1105) . Defendants also claimed the Anti-Injunction Act (28 U.S.C. § 2283) prevented the March, 2001, injunction of the federal district court. The court of appeals disagreed, noting that the Anti-Injunction Act does not prevent a federal district court from enjoining a state court from preventing, or interfering with, enforcement of the federal court's judgment. This "relitigation" exception grants a federal court the authority to issue injunctions in aid of its jurisdiction and to protect or effectuate its judgments (326 F.3d 1096, 1107) . The court of appeals affirmed the denial of defendants' motion for post-judgment relief, citing a 10th Circuit case for the proposition that it is error not to enjoin collateral attack by state court action on the validity of a federal judgment and pointing out that the motion was based on an order the defendants were properly enjoined from pursuing in the first place (326 F.3d 1096, 1108) . Lastly, the court affirmed the award of sanctions (326 F.3d 1096, 1109-1111) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.11

§ 20E.11 Unconfirmed Award May Be Given Res Judicata Effect

[1] FORM

THE AWARD DATED _____ AND ARISING OUT OF THE ARBITRATION BETWEEN _____ [name] AND _____ [name] MEETS THE REQUIREMENTS FOR APPLICATION OF RES JUDICATA AND SHOULD BE GIVEN THAT EFFECT.

A. Effect of Unconfirmed Arbitration Award. An award that has not been confirmed or vacated has the same force and effect as a contract in writing between the parties to the arbitration (Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.6).

B. Res Judicata Effect of Unconfirmed Arbitration Award. An unconfirmed arbitration award should be given res judicata effect to bar an action by one party to the arbitration against a party in privity with the other party to the arbitration if the subject of the subsequent action was raised and should have been fully determined in the arbitration (Thibodeau v. Crum (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 756-761, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that an unconfirmed arbitration award is entitled to res judicata effect in the present action so as to bar an attempt to litigate an issue that was, or should have been, totally resolved by a prior arbitration award. The claim sought to be barred should have been raised and completely addressed in the prior arbitration, and the arbitration must have been between the same parties or their privies as the subsequent litigation [see Thibodeau v. Crum (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 754-758, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 (discussed at [3][a], below)].

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 221, Summary Judgments].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should also attach a copy of the award as an exhibit to the papers in support of the memorandum. The argument should establish that the parties to the arbitration were the same as, or in privity with, the parties in the litigation and should show the extent to which the issues sought to be litigated were, or should have been, addressed in the prior arbitration.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the scope of res judicata and collateral estoppel and a form of answer that raises the defense that the issue between the same parties was determined in a prior action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

For a form of summary judgment that may be used to raise the issue of res judicata, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For a form for use to oppose Paragraph B of this form when a person who was not a party to the arbitration seeks to invoke collateral estoppel effect of the prior award against one of the parties to that arbitration, see § 20E.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Effect of Unconfirmed Arbitration Award

Thibodeau v. Crum (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 , began with arbitration between plaintiffs and the contractor who built their house, which, after setoffs for poor workmanship and unexcused delay, still resulted in a net award for the contractor. The arbitrator, believing he had no discretion in the matter, awarded the contractor attorney's fees as the prevailing party. In August, 1989, plaintiffs petitioned the court to correct the award to account for outstanding mechanics' liens that had not been considered, and contending that after the offsets, the contractor was not the prevailing party. The petition also sought confirmation of the award as corrected. The petition for correction and confirmation was never heard because the contractor filed bankruptcy and the automatic stay prevented continuation of the matter. Plaintiffs made no claim and sought no relief in the bankruptcy case, but in September, 1989, commenced the instant action against defendant, who was the subcontractor responsible for constructing the driveway. Judgment was entered for plaintiffs for $23,933, which reflected a deduction of the amount credited to plaintiffs by the arbitration award for driveway repairs. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the action was barred by res judicata. The court of appeal said res judicata precludes parties or their privies from relitigating a cause of action that has been finally determined by a court of competent jurisdiction (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 754) and applies not only to judicial proceedings but also to arbitration proceedings (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 755) . The court of appeal found that if the cracks in the driveway were not encompassed in the arbitration, they most certainly should have been. The driveway problems were within the scope of the arbitration and were mentioned several times in the arbitration award (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 756) . The court distinguished cases involving different plaintiffs and different defects (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 756-757) . This case did not involve successive breaches of obligations, separate and distinct torts, or new rights that accrued after the first proceeding. The arbitration award was mandated by the construction contract and was intended to settle all existing claims between the plaintiffs and their general contractor and/or subcontractors regarding the project (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 758) .

With respect to the fact that the award had not been confirmed, the court acknowledged that application of the doctrine of res judicata ordinarily requires a prior final judgment and that a contract between the parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.6] is ordinarily not the same thing as a final judgment but said that a valid arbitration award is conclusive on matters of fact and law and all matters in the award are res judicata. This is because of the very limited judicial review afforded arbitration awards (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 759) . The court of appeal distinguished Kahn v. Pelissetti (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 832, 67 Cal. Rptr. 517 , relied on by plaintiffs, in which the court denied res judicata effect to an unconfirmed award involving uninsured motorist coverage. The award had been in favor of an insurance company which had argued that its insured's injury was not caused by the uninsured motorist. In a later action between the insured and the uninsured motorist, the court denied res judicata effect to the award. The Thibodeau court noted that Kahn did not hold that an unconfirmed arbitration award can never have a res judicata effect. In Kahn, the parties to the insurance contract did not intend to benefit or affect uninsured motorists in general or that defendant in particular, while the construction contract in this case anticipated the involvement of third parties and was intended to affect and encompass all issues arising out of the work, including work done by subcontractors and any disputes regarding work done by subcontractors. Defendant's contract with the general contractor was subject to plaintiffs' contract with the general contractor. The arbitration concerned work done by the general contractor and by subcontractors, including defendant (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 761) .

The court concluded by noting the pendency of the petition to correct the award was of no import because the only matter challenged was the determination that the general contractor was the prevailing party and as such entitled to attorney's fees. An eventual decision on that petition to correct would not effect the substance of the arbitration award (4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 761) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.12

§ 20E.12 Judgment Based on Arbitration Award Bars Subsequent Suit on Same Claim

[1] FORM

THE JUDGMENT ENTERED ON _____ [date] _____ [AGAINST or IN FAVOR OF] _____ [name] AND BASED ON THE ARBITRATION AWARD DATED _____ AND ARISING OUT OF ARBITRATION BETWEEN _____ [name] AND _____ [name] MEETS THE REQUIREMENTS FOR THE APPLICATION OF THE DOCTRINE OF RES JUDICATA AND BARS THIS ACTION.

A. Res Judicata Bars Subsequent Suit on Claim That Was Arbitrated. A judgment based on a confirmed arbitration award should be given claim preclusion, or strict res judicata, effect, to bar a subsequent lawsuit on the same cause of action or another cause of action based on the same primary right [especially a cause of action that is totally derivative of the one that was arbitrated] (Richard B. LeVine, Inc. v. Higashi (2006) 131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 575-579, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244 ; (Brinton v. Bankers Pension Services, Inc. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 557-558, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469 ; accord Grinham v. Fielder (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1054-1055, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 (based on collateral estoppel)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that a judgment based on an arbitration award is entitled to res judicata effect in the present action so as to bar an attempt to litigate a claim that was resolved in the arbitration, including a claim that is derivative of the one determined by arbitration. This form does not provide a complete memorandum but is designed to be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which the issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 221, Summary Judgments].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, argument should establish that the parties to the arbitration where the same as, or in privity with, the parties in the litigation and should show that the claim sought to be vindicated in the litigation redresses the same primary right as the one that was the subject of the arbitration. Counsel should attach to the memorandum a copy of the arbitration award, any order confirming the award, and the judgment based on the award and/or request that judicial notice be taken of those documents. Counsel also should attach any other documents that establish privity or any other element of res judicata. For instance, in the case on with this form is based, the request for arbitration stated that the individual involved in the arbitration was the agent of the defendant in the subsequent lawsuit.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the effect of arbitration awards, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of the scope of res judicata and collateral estoppel and a form of answer which raises the defense that the issue between the same parties was determined in a prior action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

For a form of summary judgment that may be used to raise the issue of res judicata, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For forms addressing res judicata in particular procedural contexts, see Ch. 10 Abatement and Survival of Actions , Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 131, Judgments .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For a form opposing application of collateral estoppel effect of an arbitration award against a person who was not a party to the arbitration, see § 20E.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Bars Subsequent Suit on Claim That Was Arbitrated

Plaintiff in Richard B. LeVine, Inc. v. Higashi (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 570, 32 Cal. Rptr. 3d 244 , was a partner in a medical partnership that engaged defendant to provide accounting services to the partnership, including the calculation of each partner's share of the partnership profits and the amount of each partner's capital account. Dr. LeVine died in June 1995, and his wife became plaintiff's sole shareholder and president. The medical partnership bought out plaintiff's interest and paid plaintiff $239,501 as its share of profits accruing in 1995 before Dr. LeVine's death. The widow initiated an arbitration proceeding against the partnership and its partners pursuant to an arbitration provision in the partnership agreement. The arbitrator ruled that under the partnership agreement plaintiff was not entitled to partnership profits accruing after Dr. LeVine's death, and that plaintiff was not entitled to additional profits for 1995. The final arbitration award was made on September 7, 2000. In November, 2001, plaintiff sued Higashi alleging constructive and actual fraud, negligence, and conspiracy. The court sustained Higashi's demurrer to the constructive and actual fraud causes of action and later court granted Higashi's summary judgment to the remaining causes of action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the arbitration award between plaintiff, the partnership, and its partners collaterally estopped plaintiff from proceeding on the conspiracy claim. "Res judicata" describes the preclusive effect of a final judgment on the merits. Res judicata, or claim preclusion, prevents relitigation of the same cause of action in a second suit between the same parties or parties in privity with them. Collateral estoppel, or issue preclusion, precludes relitigation of issues argued and decided in prior proceedings. Under the doctrine of res judicata, if a plaintiff prevails in an action, the cause is merged into the judgment and may not be asserted in a subsequent lawsuit; a judgment for the defendant serves as a bar to further litigation of the same cause of action. Although the trial court invoked the narrower prong of the doctrine, collateral estoppel, the court of appeal thought it was more accurate to invoke the strict res judicata, or claim preclusion, aspect of the doctrine. Whatever name one attaches to the legal principle, the result is the same: plaintiff was precluded from pursuing this particular claim against Higashi. Any liability Higashi may have had to plaintiff was dependent on the commission of an underlying tort by the partnership and its partners, a claim decided adversely to plaintiff in the prior arbitration (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 573) . The arbitrator's findings had to be given preclusive effect. Those findings were based on Higashi's calculation of profits. Thus, the arbitrator's award in favor of the partners on plaintiff's claims of breach of fiduciary duty and conversion precluded the claims of civil conspiracy and aiding and abetting made against Higashi in the litigation (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 575) . Plaintiff, citing Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 (Vandenberg), contended that res judicata cannot be based on the arbitration award against it because Higashi was not a party to the arbitration. The court of appeal said Vandenberg did not apply because it does not bar application of res judicata to arbitration awards that eliminate the basis for a nonarbitrating party's derivative liability (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576) . The court went on to discuss other cases in which a claim preclusion or res judicata defense was available in situations where the liability of one of the parties would be derivative only (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 576-579) . The primary right asserted by plaintiff was not invaded--the partners did not breach their fiduciary duty, and plaintiff's rightful share of the partnership profits was not diverted. It would be anomalous to hold Higashi liable for conspiring to commit a tort, or for aiding and abetting its commission, when plaintiff has already asserted those rights against the direct tortfeasor, and it was determined plaintiff's rights were not violated (131 Cal. App. 4th 566, 579) .

Plaintiff in Brinton v. Bankers Pension Services, Inc. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 469 arbitrated fraud claims against an individual securities representative and one of the brokerage firms for which the representative worked. The statement requesting arbitration said that the individual was acting as agent of two brokerage firms, but only one firm was party to the arbitration agreement, so the other firm declined to arbitrate. After the arbitration award in favor of one firm and the individual representative was confirmed and judgment entered thereon, plaintiff filed suit against the second brokerage firm. That firm moved for summary judgment, claiming the arbitration award should be given res judicata effect to bar the lawsuit. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment and dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first discussed Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 824 n.2, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 [see § 20E.30[3][a]], noting that Vandenberg specifically limited its holding to its facts and made clear that nothing in that decision imposed or implied any limitation on strict res judicata or the claim preclusion effect of a California private arbitration award (76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 556-557) . The court of appeal set forth the elements of res judicata (76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 556) , applied the primary rights theory to the record before it, and concluded that the claim that was arbitrated and the lawsuit sought recovery for the same injury (76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 557) . Further, the lawsuit sought to hold defendant firm liable based on the agency theory. Thus, the claim asserted in the lawsuit was derivative of plaintiff's claim against the individual representative, so it was not necessary for defendant to have been a party to the arbitration in order to assert the claim preclusion defense (76 Cal. App. 4th 550, 557-558) .

Grinham v. Fielder (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 121 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 , arose from the cross-complaint in an action in Ventura County by Triple A Machine Shop against Grinham to set aside allegedly fraudulent property transfers by Grinham so Triple A could satisfy a judgment it had obtained against Grinham in Contra Costa County. The initial (Contra Costa County) judgment was based on an arbitration award entered against Grinham on a contract he entered into with Triple A. Grinham executed that contract as "Hydrex Termite Pest Control Co. San Jose," which did not exist. Fielders, Grinham's employers, did business as "Hydrex Pest Control of Santa Clara County." Triple A was dissatisfied with the work performed and brought the initial action for breach of contract against Grinham and "Hydrex Termite Pest Control Co. San Jose," joining the Fielders and "Hydrex Pest Control of Santa Clara County," when it learned that "Hydrex Termite Pest Control Co. San Jose" did not exist. The Fielders were not parties to the contract with Triple A, but appeared before the arbitrator to make that objection. Fielders participated in the arbitration and presented testimony regarding their non-liability. Grinham, although hospitalized, offered his declaration and appeared through his attorney. The arbitrator decided that Grinham was liable to Triple A for $14,822, plus interest; that the Fielders, both individually and doing business as Hydrex Pest Control of Santa Clara County were not liable to Triple A because Grinham exceeded the scope of his authority as their actual or ostensible agent; that Grinham used "an unregistered fictitious business name of Hydrex Pest Control San Jose" in order "to mislead" Triple A; that the "exact identity" of the contractor was "the subject of this dispute;" and that the dispute concerned "a question of credibility," because Grinham's declaration and the Fielders' testimony regarding the scope of his authority as their employee and agent differed. After the award was confirmed and judgment entered thereon, Triple A attempted to satisfy the judgment, could not, and bright the second action. Grinham cross-complained against Fielders for declaratory relief (with regard to comparative indemnity) and contribution. The Fielders answered the cross-complaint and pleaded the defenses of res judicata and collateral estoppel. They also sought summary judgment based on those defenses. Summary judgment was granted based on principles of collateral estoppel. Grinham appealed, contending that the Fielders, as non-parties to the construction agreement and the arbitration, cannot rely on the arbitrator's findings and decision.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that the party seeking collateral estoppel must establish that an issue raised in the present action is identical to one litigated in a prior proceeding, that the prior proceeding resulted in a final judgment on the merits, and that the party against whom the doctrine is being asserted was a party or in privity with a party to the prior proceeding. The court acknowledged that under Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 833-834, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 (discussed at § 20E.30[3][a]), preclusive effect of an arbitration award can have no collateral estoppel effect in favor of third persons unless the arbitrating parties have agreed that third parties may apply the doctrine to the arbitrator's findings. However, the court of appeal concluded that the circumstances here differed enough from the situation in Vandenburg that it was proper for the trial court to grant summary judgment. The issues of Grinham's actual or ostensible agency and the Fielders' liability for his actions were determined in the arbitration proceeding. The arbitrator specifically found that Grinham acted outside his actual agency or scope of employment when he entered into the Triple A agreement under a fictitious business name but with the Fielders' business address and telephone number. True, Fielders were not parties to the contract with Triple A; but they participated in the arbitration completely, and presented testimony and raised legal arguments concerning Grinham's actual and ostensible authority to bind Hydrex Pest Control of Santa Clara County. Moreover, the arbitration award recognized the Fielders and Hydrex Pest Control of Santa Clara County as parties to the proceeding who contested liability and who were entitled to recover costs of suit (99 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1054) . As to the claim for declaratory relief (comparative indemnity), the court of appeal said that cause of action is rooted in equity; and the arbitrator's findings that Grinham committed "wrongful" acts with the intent to mislead Triple A, and that he acted "in conscious disregard of the rights" of the Fielders were conclusive regarding that cause of action (99 Cal. App. 4th 1049, 1055) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Bars Subsequent Suit on Claim That Was Arbitrated

The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel in In re Khaligh (2006 9th Cir. BAP) 338 B.R. 817 , aff'd 506 F.3d 956, 957 (9th Cir. 2007) , affirmed the bankruptcy court's summary judgment in an adversary proceeding establishing a debt as malicious and willful, and therefore nondischargeable under 11 U.S.C. 523(a)(6), based on a state court judgment confirming an arbitration award for defamation. The award and judgment included punitive damages and were entitled to preclusive effect in the adversary proceeding because all pertinent issues regarding the defamation had been actually and necessarily litigated. Thus, except for attorney's fees and costs, the judgment was excepted from discharge in the amount of $100,000 in damages (plus judgment interest) established in the state court judgment (338 B.R. 817, 830-832) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.13

§ 20E.13 Court May Amend Judgment Based on Arbitration Award to Add Alter Ego

[1] FORM

THE AWARD SHOULD BE AMENDED BY INSERTING THE NAME OF _____ [specify alter ego] AS THE ALTER EGO OF _____ [specify person or party against whom award actually was made] BECAUSE THE ARBITRATOR HAD NO BASIS FOR EXERCISING JURISDICTION OVER _____ [specify person against whom award actually was made].

A. Judgment Confirming Award Has Same Effect as Judgment in Civil Action. [See § 20E.10[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Court May Amend Judgment Based on Award to Add Alter Ego. An arbitrator has no power to determine rights and obligations of one who is not a party to the arbitration proceedings. Nor can an arbitrator correct an award to add an alter ego. Only the superior court has jurisdiction to amend a judgment based on an arbitration award to add an alter ego (Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conf. Center Bd. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that an the court, not the arbitrator, has jurisdiction to amend a judgment based on an arbitration award to include a corporate party's alter ego as an additional judgment debtor.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 52, Corporations].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should establish that the entity sought to be added had control over a party to the arbitration.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of motion to amend a judgment to add an alter ego which this memorandum may support, as well as legal discussion and a procedural checklist, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms generally relating to judgments, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 318, Judgments (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court May Amend Judgment Based on Award to Add Alter Ego

Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conf. Center Bd. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 , arose from a dispute between an architect and the owner of a conference center. The record on appeal was less than clear. There were two agreements between the parties: one dated May 23, 1990, signed by and identifying respondent conference center as "Owner" and another dated April 27, 1990, executed by and identifying the California State Department of Parks and Recreation as "Owner." Both related to the same architectural services (phase two of the center). The architectural firm relied on the May agreement; and the conference center relied on the April agreement. The arbitration award recited that the arbitration provision was part of an agreement entered into on April 27, 1989. An arbitration award was entered in June, 1992. The award was confirmed and judgment entered thereon, awarding the architectural firm almost $100,000 in damages and attorney's fees. When the architectural firm tried to levy on respondent's bank accounts, it found that the only accounts were in the name of Marconi Conference Center Operating Corporation (MCCOC), a California nonprofit public benefit corporation. The architectural firm moved twice unsuccessfully to have the judgment amended under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 to add MCCOC as additional defendant and judgment debtor. In support of the second motion appellant submitted an agreement dated December, 1989, between California State Department of Parks and Recreation and MCCOC which vested the management of the conference center in MCCOC. The motions were denied on the ground that the court was without jurisdiction to make factual findings necessary to modify a previously confirmed arbitration award. The architectural firm appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with instructions to the trial court to conduct a hearing on the motion to amend the judgment (41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555-1556) . The court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4 gives a judgment entered in conformity with an arbitration award the same force and effect as a judgment in a civil action and renders that judgment subject to the provisions of law relating to judgments in civil actions, including Code Civ. Proc. § 187 (41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1554) , which provides for amendment of a judgment to add as an additional judgment debtor any person or entity that is the alter ego of the original judgment debtor. Amendment of a judgment to add an alter ego is an equitable procedure and provides a complete method to bind new defendants when it can be demonstrated that in their capacity as alter ego of the corporation they in fact had control of the previous litigation, and thus were virtually represented in the lawsuit. Given that an arbitrator has no power to determine rights and obligations of one who is not a party to the arbitration proceedings and that Code Civ. Proc. § 1284 forecloses the arbitrator from correcting an award to add an alter ego, only the superior court has jurisdiction to amend the award to add an alter ego (41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities §§ 20E.14-20E.29

[Reserved]

§§ 20E.14[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.30

§ 20E.30 Person Who Was Not Party to Arbitration Cannot Assert Collateral Estoppel Effect of Award

[1] FORM

_____ [Name of entity seeking to assert collateral estoppel effect of award] CANNOT ENFORCE ANY COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL EFFECT OF THE ARBITRATION AWARD DATED _____ AND ARISING OUT OF ARBITRATION BETWEEN _____ [name] AND _____ [name] BECAUSE THOSE PARTIES NEVER AGREED THAT THE AWARD SHOULD BE GIVEN COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL EFFECT.

A. No Collateral Estoppel Effect Without Arbitral Parties' Agreement. A private arbitration award, even if judicially confirmed, can have no collateral estoppel effect in favor of third persons unless the parties to the arbitration agreed, in the particular case, that such a consequence should apply (Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 836-837, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 ; Cuevas v. Truline Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 62, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 706).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose the contention that an arbitration award is entitled to collateral estoppel effect in favor of a person or entity who was not party to the arbitration when the parties to the arbitration did not specifically provide that the award be given collateral estoppel effect in favor of third parties. This California rule is admittedly a minority position [see Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 834, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229] and was not intended to limit Thibodeau v. Crum (1992) 4 Cal. App. 4th 749, 756-761, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 27 , or Kelly v. Vons Companies, Inc. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1329, 1335-1337, 1341, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 763 (relating to collateral estoppel implications of arbitrations conducted under collective bargaining agreements) on which § 20E.11[1], Paragraph B, is based [see Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 824 n.2, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229] .

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 221, Summary Judgments].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should also attach a copy of the award and of the agreement or stipulation to arbitrate as exhibits to the papers opposing application of collateral estoppel. The argument should establish that the parties to the arbitration did not intend the award to have nonmutual collateral estoppel effect with respect to the third party who is asserting the award as a basis for collateral estoppel.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the scope of res judicata and collateral estoppel and a form of answer that raises the defense that the issue between the same parties was determined in a prior action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

For a form of summary judgment that may be used to raise the issue of res judicata, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

This form may be used under appropriate facts to oppose the authorities in § 20E.11.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Collateral Estoppel Effect Without Arbitral Parties' Agreement

Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 , began with an action by a real property owner against Vandenberg, who had leased the property for 30 years, for damages for contamination of the soil and groundwater with oil waste from underground tanks. During those 30 years, Vandenberg had six liability insurers, to which he tendered the defense of the action. Only United States Fidelity & Guaranty Company ("USF&G") agreed to provide a defense. Owner, Vandenberg, and USF&G agreed to share the cost of remediation. Owner and Vandenberg agreed to arbitrate the breach of lease claim with USF&G providing Vandenberg's defense, while reserving the coverage and indemnity issues. The arbitrator entered an award for owner for over $4 million, finding that the contamination was caused by improper installation, maintenance, and use of the tanks. That award was confirmed by the superior court.

Vandenberg then sued the insurers. Some of the policies excluded claims for damages caused by pollution unless the discharge was sudden or accidental. Two insurers moved for summary judgment claiming the arbitration judgment precluded litigation of the issues of the source and cause of the contamination. All insurers moved for summary judgment on the ground that the arbitrator's decision was an award for damages for breach of lease, a contract cause of action not covered by a general liability insurance policy. The trial court granted both motions. Vandenberg petitioned for writs of mandate, and the court of appeal issued writs reversing both grants of summary judgment. The Supreme Court granted insurers' petitions for review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the court of appeal, holding that a judgment based on an arbitration award cannot be given collateral estoppel effect in favor of a third party unless the parties to the arbitration agreed that such a consequence should apply (21 Cal. 4th 815, 836-838) . The Court distinguished res judicata, which precludes parties or their privies from relitigating a cause of action. Res judicata fosters finality by precluding maintenance of a second action by the same parties or parties in privity. Collateral estoppel, which is what the court was concerned with in this case, need not be mutual. Ordinarily, it is not necessary that the earlier and later proceeding involve the same parties or their privies. Only the party against whom the doctrine is invoked must be bound by the prior proceeding. Thus, collateral estoppel may allow one who was not a party to prior litigation to take advantage, in a later unrelated proceeding, of findings made against his or her current adversary in an earlier proceeding. Collateral estoppel is intended to preserve the integrity of the judicial system, promote judicial economy, and protect litigants from harassment by vexatious litigation (21 Cal. 4th 815, 828-829) . Nevertheless, the Court continued, there are minimal prerequisites for invocation of collateral estoppel, including fairness, consistency with public policy, the judicial nature of the prior forum, its legal formality, and procedural safeguards, particularly the opportunity for judicial review of adverse ruling. The Court was particularly concerned with the lack of opportunity for judicial review implicit in private contractual arbitration in California and felt that parties who agreed to final and binding arbitration would generally not contemplate such remote and collateral ramifications as giving collateral estoppel effect to the award in a later action with some third party (21 Cal. 4th 815, 829) . Accordingly, the Court concluded that a private arbitration award, even if judicially confirmed, can have no collateral estoppel effect in favor of third persons unless the parties to the arbitration agreed in the particular case that such a consequence should apply (21 Cal. 4th 815, 833-834) . The court noted that it's holding was narrowly circumscribed, and did not imply any limitations on the res judicata effect of a private arbitration award, and did not address the collateral estoppel effect of a private arbitration award in subsequent litigation between the same parties on a different cause of action, or whether the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 1 et seq.) would have any affect on the ruling. Nor does the decision affect case law on arbitrations conducted under federal or state labor relations law or other statutory schemes (21 Cal. 4th 815, 824 n.2).

The Court noted that some commentators and most other courts addressing the issue have taken a contrary approach but found the premises on which those decisions and commentaries were based unpersuasive as giving insufficient weight to the voluntary, contractual, and informal nature of private arbitration agreements and to the reasonable expectations of the parties to the arbitration (21 Cal. 4th 815, 834-835) . The Court also addressed the dissenting opinion but reiterated that fairness and public policy counsel against application of nonmutual collateral estoppel unless the parties specifically agree to it. That California treats confirmed arbitration awards as judgments does not compel a contrary conclusion. Thus, the court adopted the rule that a private arbitration award cannot have nonmutual collateral estoppel effect unless the parties to the arbitration so agreed (21 Cal. 4th 815, 835-837 and n.10), and found no such agreement in this case, especially in view of the language used to reserve the coverage and indemnity issued between Vandenberg and USF&G (21 Cal. 4th 815, 837-838) .

Cuevas v. Truline Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 706 , arose an automobile accident in which plaintiff's ward suffered catastrophic brain injuries. Defendants included the owner and driver of the car in which the ward was a passenger and the owner and driver of a big rig that hit the car after the car ran a stop sign. The owner's and driver's insurers refused to settle for their policy limits. Owner and driver sued the insurers for bad faith. Because resolution of the bad faith action required a judgment in the underlying action, plaintiffs agreed to arbitrate the owner's and driver's liability for negligence. The arbitrator awarded plaintiffs $14.7 million in damages against owner and driver, only, whom they found to be 99% responsible for the accident. Though the owner and driver of the big rig did not participate in the arbitration, the arbitrator found them one percent responsible. The arbitrator's award was entered as a judgment against the owner and driver of the car in which the ward was a passenger. The driver and owner of the big rig moved for summary judgment. The court concluded that the earlier judgment confirming the arbitration award prohibited any recovery from the owner and driver of the big rig, granted the motion for summary judgment, and dismissed the complaint. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed (118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 62) . Owner and driver of the big rig argued that the one-final-judgment rule barred any judgment against them. The court of appeal found their position misguided. The one-final-judgment rule applies to appellate proceedings and does not prohibit separate or partial judgments against some, but not all, defendants. What the one-final-judgment rule prohibits is appealing from partial disposition while other unresolved matters remain pending. The fact that judgment had been entered as to some parties based on arbitration did not mean the trial court was prohibited by the one-final-judgment rule from hearing matters relating to the parties who did not participate in the arbitration (118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 60-61) . The court of appeal said that the trial court perhaps had believed any further proceedings against the driver and owner of the big rig would not the result in the same apportionment of fault and would result in inconsistent verdicts. That belief was wrong; the arbitrator's finding of one percent fault did not bind the court. A private arbitration award cannot have non-mutual collateral estoppel effect unless the parties to the arbitration so agree. Thus, the arbitrator's finding of one percent liability was a nullity as to the owner and driver of the big rig, and it did not matter if a jury found a different degree of responsibility (118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 62) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.31

§ 20E.31 Res Judicata Does Not Prohibit Filing of Petition to Compel Arbitration

[1] FORM

PETITIONER HAS NOT WAIVED HIS/HER RIGHT TO ARBITRATION MERELY BY FILING AN ACTION, AND THE RESULTING JUDGMENT IN THAT ACTION IS NOT RES JUDICATA WITH RESPECT TO THIS PETITION TO COMPEL ARBITRATION.

A. Res Judicata Does Not Prohibit Filing of Petition to Compel Arbitration. When a judgment is entered based on a motion for summary judgment or other method of establishing that the controversy was required to be arbitrated, the resulting judgment is not res judicata so as to prevent the plaintiff in that action from filing a petition to compel arbitration unless and until there is a finding that the plaintiff waived his or her right to arbitration (Johnson v. Siegel (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1099-1100, 1102, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in support of a petition to compel arbitration to anticipate any argument that a prior judgment establishing that the matter was subject to arbitration was res judicata as to petitioner's right to arbitrate. In many cases, petitioner's prior conduct may have amounted to waiver of his or her right to arbitrate, but unless the prior action was based on a finding of waiver, the judgment does not foreclose petitioner's remedies altogether as some cases have suggested.

This form is not intended as a complete memorandum, but should be combined with the memoranda in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, §§ 20.10, 20.11, and any others applicable to the particular situation. Petitioner may also wish to include authority from Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, §§ 20.80 and 20.81 to support the argument that no waiver has occurred.

As a tactical matter, counsel may wish to reserve these points for oral argument or for a reply memorandum. In deciding whether or not to reserve these arguments, counsel should consider local court rules and practice, as well as whether the moving party would be expected to raise these points in initial moving papers, to avoid the possibility of losing the opportunity to raise them.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, the argument should emphasize that any delay has not caused respondent any detriment or impairment of its ability to arbitrate the matter.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For other forms that negates a claim of waiver of the right to compel arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, §§ 20.80, 20.81.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For a form opposing this one, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, § 20A.80.

For forms that address other acts amounting to waiver of the right to compel arbitration, see Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting, §§ 20A.81 -20A.86.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Does Not Prohibit Filing of Petition to Compel Arbitration

The facts and procedural background of Johnson v. Siegel (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 are discussed in Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling, § 20.46[3][a]. Defendants also contended that the summary judgment precluded any further action on plaintiff's part, specifically, a petition to compel arbitration. Defendants relied on six cases: Charles J. Rounds Co. v. Joint Council of Teamsters No. 42 (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 888, 899-900, 95 Cal. Rptr. 53, 484 P.2d 1397 ; Gunderson v. Superior Court (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 138, 144, 120 Cal. Rptr. 35 ; Berman v. Renart Sportswear Corp. (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 385, 35 Cal. Rptr. 218 , Case v. Kadota Fig Asso. (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 596, 220 P.2d 912 ; Platt Pacific, Inc. v. Andelson (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 307, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 597, 862 P.2d 158 ; and 24 Hour Fitness, Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1199, 1216, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 533 , for the proposition that once a person commences an action, he or she waives his or her right to arbitration. The court of appeal distinguished all those cases (84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1096-1099) , and said that when, as here, no deadline for demanding arbitration is specified in the agreement, a party is allowed a reasonable time within which to demand arbitration before being considered to have waived the right to arbitrate. Furthermore, a plaintiff's suing on an arbitrable claim does per se result in a waiver of plaintiff's right to compel arbitration. The court concluded that plaintiff was not barred by res judicata from filing a petition to compel arbitration, but expressed no opinion on how the court should rule on such a petition if one was filed, saying that the trial court should weigh the same factors it would weigh in any case on a petition to compel arbitration: whether plaintiff took steps inconsistent with an intent to invoke arbitration, wether plaintiff unreasonably delayed in seeking arbitration, and whether defendant was prejudiced by any delay (84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1099-1100) . The court of appeal affirmed the judgment without prejudice to plaintiff's filing a new petition to compel arbitration (84 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1102) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.32

§ 20E.32 Judgment on Arbitration Award Does Not Bar This Lawsuit on the Basis of Res Judicata

[1] FORM

THE CLAIM SOUGHT TO BE VINDICATED AND THE RELIEF SOUGHT IN THIS _____ [LAWSUIT or MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] WERE NOT DETERMINED IN THE ARBITRATION BETWEEN _____ [name] AND _____ [name]; THUS, THE JUDGMENT RESULTING FROM THAT ARBITRATION AWARD DOES NOT BAR THIS _____ [LAWSUIT or MOTION].

A. Res Judicata Is Not Applicable. The claim for _____ [specify] raised by _____ [name] in the earlier arbitration against _____ [name] did not _____ [seek any redress against _____ (name) and/or did not address the same relief sought in this _____ (lawsuit or motion)]. Therefore, the judgement entered on the award in that arbitration does not bar this _____ (lawsuit or motion) on the basis of res judicata (see Cuevas v. Truline Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 60-62, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 706 ; Benasra v. Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 111, 114, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644 .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to oppose the contention that a judgment based on an arbitration award bars a later lawsuit or motion on the basis of res judicata when it can be shown that the claim or relief obtained or sought in the arbitration is different from, and not duplicative or derivative of, the claim or relief sought in the lawsuit or motion.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 221, Summary Judgments] or authority from § 20E.30, that an arbitration award ordinarily will have no effect on anyone who was not a party to the arbitration.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should also attach a copy of the judgment entered on the award. The argument should establish that the relief sought in the lawsuit is different from and not duplicative or derivative of the relief awarded or sought in the arbitration.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840] (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement).

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion of the scope of res judicata and collateral estoppel and a form of answer that raises the defense that the issue between the same parties was determined in a prior action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

For a form of summary judgment that may be used to raise the issue of res judicata, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

If the arbitration was between parties who are not party to the lawsuit, or are not named in the current motion, counsel may wish to add authority from § 20E.30.

[e] Opposing Memoranda

This form may be used under appropriate facts to oppose the authorities in § 20E.12.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Res Judicata Is Not Applicable

Cuevas v. Truline Corp. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 56, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 706 , is discussed at Ch. 20D, Arbitration: Dismissing, § 20D.20[3][a].

Plaintiffs in Benasra v. Mitchell, Silberberg & Knupp (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644 were a corporation and its officers. They sued defendant law firm for breach of loyalty based on the firm's representation of an opposing party in an earlier arbitration. The arbitration involved a license dispute in which plaintiff corporation was licensee and the opposing party in the arbitration was licensor. The license agreement soured in May, 1999. Prior to that time, defendant law firm had represented the corporate plaintiff in a few legal matters and had also performed substantial immigration work for principals and employees of the company and their family members. Plaintiffs also alleged that prior to May, 1999, defendant represented licensor in determining whether to terminate the licenses held by the corporate plaintiff before demanding arbitration and that as a result of defendant's representation of each of them, defendant was privy to confidential information which precluded its representation of a client adverse to them even after the representation ceased. Plaintiffs, though not all parties to the arbitration, made a motion to disqualify defendant. The arbitration panel denied the motion and eventually rendered an award for licensor. That award was confirmed. Defendant moved for summary judgment to bar plaintiff's lawsuit for breach of loyalty on the ground that it was foreclosed by res judicata on the basis of the unsuccessful motion to disqualify. The trial court granted the motion. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court began its analysis by discussing res judicata and the related doctrine of collateral estoppel. Res judicata, it said, gives conclusive effect to a former judgment in subsequent litigation involving the same controversy. The prior judgment is complete bar to a new action because it results in a merger, superseding the plaintiff's claim by the judgment. In a second action on a different cause of action, the former judgment is not a complete merger or bar, but is effective as a collateral estoppel, i.e., it is conclusive on issues actually litigated between the parties in the former action. The primary aspect of res judicata is sometimes referred to as "claim preclusion"; the secondary aspect is referred to as "collateral estoppel" or "issue preclusion". The rule of claim preclusion is that a party ordinarily may not assert a civil claim arising from a transaction with respect to which he or she has already prosecuted a claim, whether or not the two claims wholly correspond to each other. The rule of issue preclusion (collateral estoppel) is that a party ordinarily may not relitigate an issue that he or she fully and fairly litigated on a previous occasion. The parties agreed that, based on Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 836, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 (discussed at § 20E.30[3][a]), collateral estoppel cannot be used to foreclose later litigation on issues decided by private arbitrators. Vandenberg held that determinations on particular legal or factual issues made in private arbitrations do not be give collateral estoppel effect unless the parties clearly agreed otherwise. While the Vandenberg court was clear that an arbitration decision could not have collateral estoppel effect on later litigation, it recognized that claim preclusion was a different matter, stating in a footnote: "Nothing in our decision imposes or implies any limitations on the strict res judicata, or 'claim preclusive,' effect of a California law private arbitration award" [Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 824, n.2, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229] .

The court of appeal said that, in light of the foregoing distinction, the crucial issue here was whether the arbitrators' denial of the motion to disqualify was properly asserted as a complete bar to the present action for breach of duty of loyalty, or whether the trial court improperly used the arbitration panel's determination of a legal or factual issue for collateral estoppel purposes in violation of Vandenberg. Defendant urged the court to use a primary rights analysis, but the court found it had to compare the relief available in the arbitration proceeding. Although defendant argued that the ruling on the motion for disqualification was the functional equivalent of a request for permanent injunction, the court of appeal noted that the ruling on the motion for disqualification could only preclude the law firm from undertaking representation of a single client in a single matter; unlike a permanent injunction, an order of disqualification would not contain any broad or general prohibition against accepting representation of certain categories of clients or certain categories of disputes (96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 111) . In addition to this distinction, the court of appeal noted that the parties involved in the litigation were not the same parties involved in the arbitration. Most importantly, defendant law firm, which was alleged to have inflicted the injury sought to be redressed by the later action, was not a party to the arbitration.

The court discussed a number of other authorities on this issue, many from the Ninth Circuit, and pointed out that plaintiffs never had an opportunity to prosecute a full-blown claim for breach of duty of loyalty against defendant in any forum. The single issue of whether the representation of the licensor/opposing in the arbitration required use of confidential information was presented in summary fashion to the panel of arbitrators. On these facts, there was no true claim presented against defendant in the arbitration, and the claim preclusion aspect of res judicata is inapplicable (96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 114) . The court was also unpersuaded by defendant's claim that plaintiffs should be considered to have voluntarily become parties to the arbitration by their requests to disqualify defendant. The court did not consider plaintiffs' actions on those motions voluntary: corporate plaintiff agreed to arbitrate its contractual claims against licensor, but it did not agree to arbitrate its claims with defendant law firm or to allow licensor to have access to confidential information through employment of its former counsel (96 Cal. App. 4th 96, 114) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 20E ARBITRATION: EFFECT OF AWARD
PART II. FORMS

2-20E California Points & Authorities § 20E.33

§ 20E.33 Arbitrator, Not Court, May Modify or Dissolve Injunction Issued by Arbitrator

[1] FORM

ALTHOUGH THE INJUNCTION ISSUED BY THE ARBITRATOR MAY BE MODIFIED IN ACCORDANCE WITH CIVIL CODE SECTION 3424, IT IS THE ARBITRATOR, NOT THE COURT, THAT HAS AUTHORITY TO DO SO BECAUSE THE PARTIES HAVE AGREED THAT THEIR DISPUTES WILL BE SETTLED BY ARBITRATION RATHER THAN BY RESORT TO THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM.

A. Arbitrator, Not Court, May Modify or Dissolve Injunction Issued by Arbitrator. An injunction issued as part of an arbitration award[, which has been confirmed and entered as a judgment], may be modified or dissolved in accordance with Civil Code Section 3424 on a showing of material change in circumstances; but because the parties to the injunction have agreed to arbitrate their disputes, the court that confirmed the award and entered judgment thereon is not the proper tribunal in which to seek modification or dissolution. The party seeking modification or dissolution should initiate a new arbitration proceeding. The arbitrator's authority to act on a request for modification or dissolution does not arise only on referral by the superior court; and it is not necessary for the arbitrator to have reserved jurisdiction to modify the injunction (Swan Magnetics, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1509-1512, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used to support the contention that the arbitrator, and not the court that confirmed the award and entered judgment on it, is the proper entity to modify or dissolve an injunction issued as part of an arbitration award [see Civ. Code § 3424 (conditions for modification of dissolution of injunction)]. The authority on which this form is based suggests that it will not be necessary to obtain a court order compelling arbitration of the issue of changed circumstances [see Swan Magnetics, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1512, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541] , presumably because the original order compelling arbitration determined the existence and validity of the parties' agreement to arbitrate.

This form does not provide a complete memorandum but should be combined with authorities relating to the procedural context in which this issue is raised [see, e.g., Ch. 116, Injunctions , and Ch. 155, Motions After Trial].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. It is probably appropriate to attach copies of the arbitration agreement and the award to the papers supporting the memorandum. Argument should establish that modification or dissolution of the injunction remains within the scope of the arbitration agreement and should show why submission of the issue to a court would require redetermination of issues already decided in the initial arbitration.

It is advisable for counsel to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], by references to the court's file, including verified pleadings, or by affidavits or declarations [see Owens v. Intertec Design, Inc. (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 72, 74-75, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 840 (motion to compel arbitration improperly denied when plaintiff/respondent filed unverified complaint and presented no evidence, by declaration or otherwise, of grounds claimed for revocation of arbitration agreement); Strauch v. Eyring (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 181, 184-186, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 747] .

Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits on a motion), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, affidavits, and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, as well as a procedural checklist and research guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms generally relating to motions after trial, as well as a procedural checklist and research guide, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch.371, Motions After Trial (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Has No Power to Modify or Dissolve Injunction Issued by Arbitrator

Swan Magnetics, Inc. v. Superior Court (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 , began as a dispute under an exclusive license agreement between Swan, as licensee, and Antek Peripherals, Inc, as licensor. Swan wanted to use Antek's "air-bearing" technology in the manufacture of high-speed disk drives it was developing. The agreement provided that Antek would not engage in any product development that competed with Swan's use of the licensed technology and also provided for arbitration of any disputes regarding interpretation of the agreement. Swan sued Antek, claiming Antek and Mitsumi Electric Co. had agreed to develop a disk drive using the technology licensed to Swan. The suit resulted in an arbitration award that enjoined Antek from developing the Antek/Mitsumi product or any substantially similar product. The injunction was to remain in effect as long as Swan made timely payments under the license agreement. The award was confirmed and judgment was entered on it. Antek then filed notice of intent to move for a new trial, or in the alternative to vacate the judgment, because of drastic changes in circumstance, namely, Mitsumi's acquisition of Swan. Antek also sought discovery orders to obtain the facts regarding the Swan's and Mitsumi's agreement and plans. Swan contended the court had no authority to order discovery. The trial court found it had authority to modify the injunction, and ordered the discovery to allow Antek to gather the facts it would need to support modification. Swan petitioned for writ of mandate to vacate the discovery order.

The court of appeal issued the writ (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1512-1513) . If the superior court could modify or vacate the injunction, it properly allowed discovery for purpose of pursuing that motion. Antek maintained that Civ. Code § 3424 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4 [see § 20E.10[1], Paragraph A] authorized the court to dissolve or modify the injunction. Civ. Code § 3424, which provides for modification or dissolution of an injunction on a showing of material change in the facts or law on which the injunction was based or if it would serve the ends of justice, unquestionably permits modification and dissolution of court-ordered final injunctions (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1508-1509) . Nothing in the statutory scheme for arbitration indicates that this rule of modifiability is inapplicable to an arbitrated controversy. An injunction does not acquire greater finality merely by being the product of arbitration. The court concluded that injunctions issued by an arbitrator may be modified or dissolved on a material change in circumstances, but that the trial court was not the proper tribunal in which to do so (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1509-1510) . The court found that Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.4 did not aid either party (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1510) . The court relied on the judicial policy of deference to the judgment of arbitrators and the expectation of parties to an arbitration agreement that their dispute be resolved without necessity for any contact with the courts. A judicial decision on the continuing appropriateness of the injunction would require resolution of the merits of the parties' continuing dispute and invite reexamination of facts the arbitrator had previously determined. To permit renewal of litigation in the judicial arena would contravene the parties' expectations to resolve their differences through arbitration. Thus, the issue of the continued appropriateness of the injunction was not properly before the court. Antek's remedy was to initiate a new arbitration to address the new facts (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1511-1512) . The arbitrator's authority to act on a request for modification does not arise only on referral by the superior court. Nor was it necessary for the arbitrator to reserve jurisdiction to modify the injunction. The arbitrator's authority arises from the inherent modifiability of injunctions and the parties' agreement to arbitrate their disputes. Should Antek renew its request in the proper forum, the resulting arbitration would be a new proceeding, not a reopening of a final determination. Although the injunction was subject to modification or dissolution on a showing of changed circumstances, any assertion of that change had to be raised and presented through arbitration, not in superior court (56 Cal. App. 4th 1504, 1512) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY

2-21 California Points & Authorities 21.syn

§ 21.syn Synopsis to Chapter 21: ASSAULT AND BATTERY

§ 21.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 21.02 Governing Statutes

§ 21.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 21.04-21.19 [Reserved]

§ 21.20 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Basis of Civil Action for Assault

[b] Elements of Civil Assault

[c] Apparent Unlawful Intent to Inflict Injury Sufficient

[d] Apparent Present Ability to Inflict Injury Sufficient

[e] Physical Injury Not Required

§ 21.21 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery [Penal Code § 242]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability of Definition of Criminal Battery

[b] Elements of Battery

[c] Intent to Inflict Harm as Not Necessary if Act Unlawful or Wrongful

§ 21.22 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Doctrine of Transferred Intent Applies if Defendant Aims at One Person but Hits Another

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Transferred Intent

§ 21.23 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Performed Medical Treatment Without Consent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treatment Without Consent as Battery

[b] Skillful Performance of Treatment Without Consent as Battery

§ 21.24 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Did Not Have Consent to Perform Medical Treatment Because He or She Failed to Disclose Nature of Treatment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Consent if Nature of Treatment Not Disclosed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Consent if Nature of Treatment Not Disclosed

§ 21.25 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Exceeded Scope of Consent to Perform Medical Treatment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Willful Disregard of Conditional Consent

[b] Removing Organ Beyond Scope of Consent

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exceeding Scope of Consent

§ 21.26 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Consent for Medical Treatment Vitiated When Treatment Not for Therapeutic Purpose

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent Vitiated by Nontherapeutic Purpose

§ 21.27 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Sexual Battery [Civ. Code § 1708.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Cause of Action for Sexual Battery

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 21.28 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Tort of Stalking

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Cause of Action for Tort of Stalking

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 21.29 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Tort of Domestic Violence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Cause of Action of Domestic Violence

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable for Abuse Occurring More Than Three Years Before Suit Filed

§ 21.30 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant's Acts Did Not Constitute Self-Defense Because Plaintiff's Acts Were Not Violent or Hostile

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Establish Prima Facie Case of Self-Defense

§ 21.31 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Used Unreasonable Force in Defense of Himself or Herself

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Use of Unreasonable Force

§ 21.32 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Used Unreasonable Force in Defense of His or Her Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Privilege for Unreasonable Force

§ 21.33 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Did Not Have Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel Because Plaintiff Had Rightfully Acquired Possession

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel if Possession Rightfully Acquired

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel if Possession Rightfully Acquired

§ 21.34 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Failed to Warn Plaintiff, a Nonviolent Trespasser, Before Forcibly Ejecting Him or Her

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Warning Required to Eject Nonviolent Trespasser

§ 21.35 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Directed Intentional Tort Specifically at Public Employee in Performance of His or Her Duties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intentional Tort Specifically Directed at Public Employee

§ 21.36 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant at Time of Inflicting Injury to Plaintiff Knew or Should Have Known That Plaintiff Was Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel Employed by Public Entity [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Injury to Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel

[b] Sufficiency of Allegation That Conduct Causing Injury Consisted of "Slumping or Going Limp"

[c] Defense of Assumption of Risk

§ 21.36A Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Battery Action Against Police Officer Based on Unreasonable Use of Excessive Force in Effecting Arrest Is Not Precluded by Plaintiff's Conviction for Resisting Arrest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Battery Action Would Not Challenge Validity of Criminal Conviction

§ 21.37 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Plaintiff Consented to Participation in Illegal Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent as a Complete Defense

§ 21.38 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Had Implied Consent to Perform Medical Treatment Due to Emergency

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Consent in Emergency

§ 21.39 Opposing Contention That Defendant is Liable for Battery--Defendant Lacked Intent to Perform Procedure Without Complying With Conditions Placed on Patient's Consent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Physician Must Have Knowledge of Conditions Placed on Consent to Treatment

[b] Physician Must Have Specific Intent to Perform Without Abiding by Condition

§ 21.40 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Self-Defense and/or Defense of Relative, Household Member, or Guest [Civ. Code § 50]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Force Must Be Reasonable

[b] Determining if Force Excessive

[c] Reasonable Belief of Danger Required

[d] Person Confronted Not Bound to Retreat

§ 21.41 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Defense of Third Person Who Was Not Relative, Household Member, or Guest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Third Person

§ 21.42 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Defense of His or Her Property and/or Property of Relative, Household Member, or Guest [Civ. Code § 50]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Force Must Be Reasonable

§ 21.43 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Had Right to Eject Plaintiff Because He or She Was a Trespasser

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Eject Trespasser

[b] Prior Warning Not Required to Eject Felonious Trespasser

[c] Second Warning Not Required

§ 21.44 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Battery Action Is Not Proper When Purpose of Physician's Statement Inducing Plaintiff's Consent Was Therapeutic

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Essential Character of Action Was Therapeutic

§ 21.45 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Battery Action Against Police Officer Based on Excessive Force in Effecting Arrest Precluded if Plaintiff Has Valid Conviction for Resisting or Obstructing Police Officer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Has Valid Conviction for Resisting or Obstructing Police Officer

§ 21.46 Opposing Contention That Defendant is Liable for Battery--Teacher Not Liable for Reasonable Contact With Students Not Intended to Harm

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Teacher Lacked Intent to Harm Student

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.01

§ 21.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities relating to civil actions for assault, battery, or both. The chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities supporting [see §§ 21.20 -21.22, 21.23 -21.28, 21.30-21.36A] and opposing [see §§ 21.37, 21.38, 21.40-21.46] liability in such actions. Included are general forms for use in supporting a civil action for assault [see § 21.20] and a civil action for battery [see § 21.21]. This chapter also contains more specific forms to be used with the general forms as may be required by the specific fact situation of the case in question.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsIntentional TortsAssault & BatteryGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.02

§ 21.02 Governing Statutes

Civil actions for assault and battery are based on Civ. Code § 43, which states that every person has, subject to the qualifications and restrictions provided by law, the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm [see Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57] . In addition, Civ. Code § 1708 provides that every person is bound, without contract, to abstain from injuring the person or property of another, or infringing on any of his or her rights. The elements of the crime of battery are set forth in Penal Code § 242, which states that a battery is any willful and unlawful use of force or violence on the person of another; the elements of civil battery are the same as for criminal battery [Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382] . The rights of self-defense, defense of family or household member, and defense of property are governed by Civ. Code § 50, which states that any necessary force may be used to protect from wrongful injury the person or property of oneself, or of a wife, husband, child, parent, or other relative or member of one's family, or of a ward, servant, master, or guest.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Criminal Law & ProcedureCriminal OffensesCrimes Against PersonsAssault & BatteryGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsAssault & BatteryGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsAssault & BatteryDefensesTortsIntentional TortsAssault & BatteryElements of Battery

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.03

§ 21.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion of and forms of complaints for use in actions for damages for assault and battery, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 58, Assault and Battery (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to medical malpractice, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms relating to tort damages generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 177, Damages, § 177.40 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Points and Authorities

Related memoranda of points and authorities that may be useful in particular assault and battery cases may be found in the following chapters:

Ch. 15A, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability for Furnishing.

Ch. 64, Damages: Tort.

Ch. 114, Husband and Wife.

Ch. 117, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Actions Involving Mental Patients.

Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant.

Ch. 100A, Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior.

Ch. 175, Physicians and Surgeons: Medical Malpractice.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsDamagesCompensatory DamagesGeneral OverviewTortsDamagesPunitive DamagesGeneral OverviewTortsIntentional TortsAssault & BatteryGeneral OverviewTortsMalpractice & Professional LiabilityHealthcare Providers

115 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-21 California Points & Authorities §§ 21.04-21.19

[Reserved]

§§ 21.04[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.20

§ 21.20 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault--General Form

[1] FORM [The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT BECAUSE HE/SHE DEMONSTRATED AN UNLAWFUL INTENT TO INFLICT IMMEDIATE INJURY ON THE PERSON OF PLAINTIFF.

A. Basis of Civil Action for Assault. A civil action for assault is based on Section 43 of the Civil Code which states that every person has, subject to the qualifications and restrictions provided by law, the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57).

B. Elements of Civil Assault. Civil assault consists of (1) a demonstration of an unlawful intent by one person (2) to inflict immediate injury on the person of another then present (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7, 146 P.2d 57).

[Optional] C. Apparent Unlawful Intent to Inflict Injury Sufficient. A civil action for assault may be maintained if there is an apparent or mere demonstration of an unlawful intent, as well as if there is an actual intent to inflict injury (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57).

[Optional] D. Apparent Present Ability to Inflict Injury Sufficient. In a civil action for assault, the defendant need not have the actual present ability to inflict the threatened injury; all that is necessary is that defendant have the apparent present ability, unless the plaintiff knows that the defendant does not have the actual ability (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57).

[Optional] E. Physical Injury Not Required. For purposes of civil actions for assault, the term violent injury contemplated in Section 240 of the Penal Code (which defines criminal assault as an unlawful attempt, coupled with a present ability, to commit violent injury on the person of another), includes any wrongful act committed by means of physical force against the person of another, even though only the feelings of such person are injured by the act (Ware v. Dunn (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 936, 942, 183 P.2d 128).

[If appropriate, add further points and authorities relating to the particular fact situation in question (see, e.g., §§ 21.22, 21.30- 24).]

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Counsel should use this memorandum of points and authorities with caution. Some courts have applied the statutory definition of criminal assault [see Penal Code § 240] to civil assault cases [see Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 62 P.2d 783 ; McChristian v. Popkin (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 249, 171 P.2d 85] . Penal Code § 240 defines criminal assault as an unlawful attempt, coupled with a present ability, to commit a violent injury on the person of another. It should be noted, however, that in civil actions for assault, courts are not limited by a statutory definition and may expand the concept of civil assault beyond the criminal definition of Penal Code § 240, as the court did in Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6, 146 P.2d 57 [see § 21.20[3][a]].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that defendant is civilly liable for assault because he or she demonstrated an unlawful intent to inflict immediate injury on the person of plaintiff. This form is a general one that sets out the statutory basis for civil assault [Civ. Code § 43] and the elements that a party must show to establish that an assault was committed, which include a demonstration of an unlawful intent by one person to inflict immediate injury on the person of another then present. When appropriate, this general form may be combined with the points and authorities in §§ 21.22 and 21.30 -21.36.

This form may also be used if the assault in question involves an apparent unlawful intent rather than an actual intent to inflict injury (optional Paragraph C) or if the assault involves an apparent rather than present ability to inflict the injury (optional Paragraph D). The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of an assault. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question, and a discussion of any evidence showing the defendant's actual or apparent intent to inflict immediate injury, and the defendant's actual or apparent ability to inflict immediate injury.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 21.37, 21.38, and 21.40 -21.43 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Basis of Civil Action for Assault

In Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 146 P.2d 57 , plaintiff was assaulted by defendant's service station manager, who chased him from the station with an unloaded revolver in the belief that plaintiff was the accomplice of a bandit who was robbing the station. In running away from the station, plaintiff stumbled and received serious injuries for which he sued to recover damages. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment in defendant's favor.

The court of appeal stated that a civil action for assault is based on an invasion of the right of a person to live without being put in fear of personal harm. Citing Civ. Code § 43, the court went on to state that every person has the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm. It is clear, the court noted, that a person's right to live in society free from being put in fear of personal harm is invaded if he believes that an unloaded firearm being pointed at him is loaded; the pointing of a gun at another in a threatening manner is sufficient to cause fear of personal injury unless it is known by the person at whom the weapon is pointed that the gun is in fact unloaded (63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7) . The court of appeal, therefore, reversed the judgment in favor of defendant.

[b] Elements of Civil Assault

The facts and procedural background of Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 146 P.2d 57 , are discussed in § 21.20[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that civil actions for assault are based on Civ. Code § 43, which states that every person has the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm. The court of appeal then defined an assault as a demonstration of an unlawful intent by one person to inflict immediate injury on the person of another then present. Applying this definition to the facts at hand, the court held that plaintiff established a prima facie case of assault when he presented evidence showing that the defendant chased him, pointed a gun at him, and clicked it (63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 6-7) . The court of appeal, therefore, reversed the judgment in favor of defendant. The court of appeal further held that the pointing of an unloaded gun in a threatening manner is sufficient to cause fear of personal injury and, therefore, is sufficient to constitute an assault, unless the person at whom the weapon is pointed knows that it is not loaded. Thus, an apparent ability to inflict immediate injury was held to be sufficient to constitute an assault (63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7) .

[c] Apparent Unlawful Intent to Inflict Injury Sufficient

The facts and procedural background of Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 146 P.2d 57 , are discussed in § 21.20[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that civil actions for assault are based on Civ. Code § 43, which states that every person has the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm.

[d] Apparent Present Ability to Inflict Injury Sufficient

The facts and procedural background of Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 146 P.2d 57 , are discussed in § 21.20[3][a]. The court of appeal stated that civil actions for assault are based on Civ. Code § 43, which states that every person has the right of protection from bodily restraint or harm. The court of appeal further held that it was not necessary for the plaintiff to show that defendant's conduct was unlawful. Plaintiff established a prima facie case of assault when he presented evidence showing that the defendant chased him, pointed a gun at him, and clicked it. Thus, an apparent intent to inflict injury was held to be sufficient to constitute an assault (63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7) .

[e] Physical Injury Not Required

In Ware v. Dunn (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 936, 183 P.2d 128 , plaintiffs were assaulted by defendants when defendants, who were police officers, entered plaintiffs' hotel room and searched, detained, and questioned plaintiffs without a warrant, without plaintiffs' permission, and without a suspicion that plaintiffs had committed a felony. Defendants appealed from a judgment for plaintiffs.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that it was not necessary that plaintiffs sustain physical injury or bodily harm to maintain a civil action for assault and false imprisonment. Applying the criminal definition of assault found in Penal Code § 240 to the civil action, the court stated that the "violent injury" contemplated in Penal Code § 240 (which defines criminal assault as an unlawful attempt, coupled with a present ability, to commit a violent injury on the person of another), is not synonymous with bodily harm; violent injury includes any wrongful act committed by means of physical force against the person of another, even though only the feelings of such person are injured by the act (80 Cal. App. 2d 936, 942) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.21

§ 21.21 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery [Penal Code § 242]--General Form

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR BATTERY BECAUSE HE/SHE COMMITTED AN ACT THAT CONSTITUTED A WILLFUL AND UNLAWFUL USE OF FORCE OR VIOLENCE ON THE PERSON OF ANOTHER.

A. Applicability of Definition of Criminal Battery. Civil actions for battery are generally governed by the rules of criminal law that define assault and battery (Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382).

B. Elements of Battery. A battery is any willful and unlawful use of force or violence on the person of another (Penal Code § 242; see also Fluharty v. Fluharty (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 484, 497, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244).

[Optional] C. Intent to Inflict Harm as Not Necessary if Act Unlawful or Wrongful. In a case of civil battery, if the defendant committed an unlawful or wrongful act that was likely to prove injurious to another, he or she is answerable for the consequence that directly and naturally resulted from the conduct, even though he or she did not intend the particular injury that followed (Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111); in such a case intent is implied from the commission of wrongful acts evidencing wanton, willful, or reckless disregard for human safety (Newman v. Larsen (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 22, 24, 36 Cal. Rptr. 883).

[If appropriate, add further points and authorities relating to the particular fact situation in question (see §§ 21.22 -21.24)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that defendant is liable for battery because defendant's act constituted a willful and unlawful use of force or violence on the person of plaintiff. The form is a general one that sets out the elements that a party must show to establish that an assault was committed, including any willful and unlawful use of force or violence on the person of another.

This form may also be used if the battery in question involves an unlawful or wrongful act without an intent to inflict injury (optional Paragraph C). The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for battery if the defendant contends that the conduct in question did not constitute a battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of a battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question, a discussion of any facts showing that the act was willful, and a discussion of facts showing that the act was either wrongful and unlawful or performed with intent to inflict harm.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability of Definition of Criminal Battery

In Bartosh v. Banning (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 59 Cal. Rptr. 382 , plaintiff filed a civil action for battery for damages claimed to have been sustained as a result of an altercation between two defendants. During this fight, one defendant pushed the other defendant into plaintiff causing her injuries. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment of nonsuit in favor of one defendant and a judgment entered on the verdict in favor of the other.

The court of appeal held that a civil action for battery is generally governed by the rules of criminal law that define assault and battery and the right of self-defense, except as to proof beyond a reasonable doubt (251 Cal. App. 2d 378, 386) . Applying these rules, the court of appeal then reversed the judgment of nonsuit and the judgment entered on the verdict.

[b] Elements of Battery

In Fluharty v. Fluharty (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 484, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 244 , a son sued his father for assault and battery occasioned by his father's attempted suicide. Immediately after murdering plaintiff's mother, the father telephoned the son, told him what he had done, and advised him that he intended to take his own life. Plaintiff and his wife immediately drove to the father's home where he found his father with a shotgun pointed at his chin. He pleaded with him not to shoot himself and wrestled for control of the gun when it discharged, very slightly injuring plaintiff's wife. The court of appeal held that substantial evidence supported the trial court's implicit finding the conduct alleged to have constituted a battery was not unlawful or wrongful. It reasoned that the law imposed no criminal sanction for intentional acts of self-destruction; and that in the face of the attempted suicide, plaintiff initiated the physical contact between himself and defendant, defendant sought to avoid it and struggled with plaintiff to gain control of the shotgun in order to accomplish his goal of self-destruction. Because there was no intent to harm anyone other than himself, plaintiff's assault and battery claim was properly rejected (59 Cal. App. 4th 484, 497) .

[c] Intent to Inflict Harm as Not Necessary if Act Unlawful or Wrongful

In Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 246 P.2d 111 , plaintiff brought an action to recover damages resulting from a battery by defendant. During an altercation between defendant's son and another person, defendant came out of his house with a gun in his hand and fired two shots, one of them striking plaintiff, who was a bystander. Defendant appealed from a judgment awarding damages to plaintiff.

The court of appeal held that in order to establish a case of civil battery, all that is necessary is that the evidence show that plaintiff's injury was caused by defendant's violence, or that defendant acted with wanton, willful, or reckless disregard of plaintiff's rights. The general rule is that every person is presumed to intend the natural and probable consequences of his or her acts; if the cause of action is an alleged battery committed in the performance of an unlawful or wrongful act, the intent of the wrongdoer to injure is immaterial. In other words, if defendant committed an illegal act that was likely to prove injurious to another, he is answerable for the consequence that directly and naturally resulted from the conduct, even though he did not intend the particular injury that followed. Since defendant was acting unlawfully when he fired the gun and not in justifiable self-defense, the intent to commit plaintiff's gunshot injury was presumed (112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318) . The court of appeal then affirmed the judgment.

In Newman v. Larsen (1964) 225 Cal. App. 2d 22, 36 Cal. Rptr. 883 , plaintiff brought a civil action for damages for assault and battery after defendant was convicted in a prior criminal proceeding for assault with a deadly weapon. Defendant appealed from a judgment awarding damages to plaintiff.

The court of appeal held that specific intent is not necessary for the crime of assault with a deadly weapon [citing People v. Sandoval (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 348, 351, 35 Cal. Rptr. 227] . Intent may be implied from the commission of wrongful acts evidencing wanton, willful, or reckless disregard for human safety [see Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111 ; Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7, 146 P.2d 57 ; see also § 21.20[3][c]]. Thus, the minimal intent requirement of the crime for which defendant stood convicted, and therefore an issue necessarily decided in the criminal case, was that defendant had so acted with a wanton, willful disregard for human safety. The court concluded that if defendant's actions in committing the assault were such that his intent to injure is necessarily implied, then, with respect to any injury that resulted from the battery accomplished as a consequence of the assault, his intent to injure is also necessarily implied (225 Cal. App. 2d 22, 24) . The court of appeal then affirmed the judgment.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.22

§ 21.22 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Doctrine of Transferred Intent Applies if Defendant Aims at One Person but Hits Another

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in Forms 1 and/or 2.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S INJURY WAS THE DIRECT, NATURAL, AND PROBABLE CONSEQUENCE OF DEFENDANT'S WRONGFUL ACT, ALTHOUGH DEFENDANT AIMED AT ANOTHER PERSON.

Doctrine of Transferred Intent. If defendant unlawfully aims at one person and hits another, he or she is guilty of assault and battery on the party he or she hit because plaintiff's injury was the direct, natural, and probable consequence of defendant's wrongful act (Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318, 246 P.2d 111 ; see Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 301 P.2d 440).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the defendant is liable for assault and battery because the doctrine of transferred intent renders a defendant liable to the person he or she hits, even though the defendant aimed at another person. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of an assault and battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant's act caused plaintiff to be injured even though defendant was not aiming at plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Doctrine of Transferred Intent

The facts and procedural background of Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 246 P.2d 111 , are discussed in § 21.21[3][c]. The court of appeal held that if a defendant unlawfully aims at one person and hits another, he or she is guilty of assault and battery on the party he or she hit, the injury being the direct, natural, and probable consequence of the wrongful act (112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318) .

In Singer v. Marx (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 301 P.2d 440 , plaintiff was hit in the eye by a rock thrown by defendant. It was not clear from the evidence if defendant was aiming at plaintiff or another person when he threw the rock. Plaintiff sued defendant and his parents for damages in a civil action for negligence and battery. The trial court granted a nonsuit from which plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal held that even though the evidence warranted an inference that defendant threw at another and inadvertently struck plaintiff, the doctrine of transferred intent rendered him liable to plaintiff (144 Cal. App. 2d 637, 642) . The court of appeal therefore reversed the judgment as to defendant.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.23

§ 21.23 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Performed Medical Treatment Without Consent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in § 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT PERFORMED MEDICAL TREATMENT WITHOUT PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT.

A. Treatment Without Consent as Battery. If a person has been subjected to medical treatment without his or her consent, such treatment constitutes a battery (Estrada v. Orwitz (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 170 P.2d 43 ; Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142).

[Optional] B. Skillful Performance of Treatment Without Consent as Battery. If the plaintiff did not give his or her consent to the treatment, the performance of the treatment constitutes a technical battery whether or not the treatment was skillfully performed (see Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 803, 82 Cal. Rptr. 67 ; Pedesky v. Bleiberg (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123, 59 Cal. Rptr. 294).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for battery because defendant performed medical treatment without the consent of plaintiff. These points and authorities may also be used to support a contention that a battery was committed due to lack of consent even though the treatment in question was performed skillfully [optional Paragraph B]. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of a battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the medical treatment in question and a discussion of any facts showing that plaintiff did not consent to the treatment.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Treatment Without Consent as Battery

Plaintiff in Estrada v. Orwitz (1946) 75 Cal. App. 2d 54 , filed an action for wrongful, unauthorized, and improper extraction of teeth. Plaintiff claimed that he consented to the extraction of one tooth, but defendant in fact extracted six teeth. Defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal commented that there can be no doubt that an action based on the theory that an operation is performed without consent of the patient charges an assault and battery, and that negligence has nothing to do with such an action (75 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57) .

In Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 96 P.2d 142 , plaintiff filed an action to recover damages for alleged malpractice on the part of several defendants in performing an operation on plaintiff that resulted in the removal of an organ. Plaintiff claimed that she did not consent to removal of an organ but to a different operation on a different part of her body. Defendants contended that plaintiff did consent to the operation by signing a standard consent form on entering the hospital. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment of nonsuit.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment as to the defendants who diagnosed and performed the operation, holding that if a person has been subjected to an operation without his or her consent, such an operation constitutes technical assault and battery. As to the agreement that plaintiff signed, the court held that it did not constitute a consent to perform operations other than the one for which the operating surgeons were engaged by plaintiff to perform unless necessity for another operation arose during the authorized operation (35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491) .

[b] Skillful Performance of Treatment Without Consent as Battery

Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 82 Cal. Rptr. 67 , involved an action against two defendants for prescription and performance of treatment without consent of plaintiff. It was not clear from the evidence if the treatment was negligently performed. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, noting that if plaintiff did not give his informed or knowledgeable consent, the performance of the treatment would constitute a technical battery, for which defendant would be liable for all damages proximately resulting, whether or not the treatment was skillfully performed (1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 803) .

NOTE:

In cases that involve the issue of informed consent [see § 21.24[3][a]], the Supreme Court has limited the application of the battery theory of Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 804-805, 82 Cal. Rptr. 67 , to cases in which defendant performed a treatment that was substantially different from the treatment consented to by plaintiff. The battery theory is not applicable to cases involving the occurrence of an undisclosed inherent complication that required different and/or further treatment not consented to by plaintiff; such cases should be pleaded in negligence [Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 239, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1] .

Plaintiff in Pedesky v. Bleiberg (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 119 , filed an action claiming that the operation in question was negligently performed and that she did not consent to it. The trial court refused to instruct the jury on all aspects of plaintiff's battery theory. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment in favor of defendant.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. The court held that the trial court must, when requested, instruct on all vital issues involved and noted that the plaintiff, in her battery theory, may concede that the operation accomplished was performed skillfully (251 Cal. App. 2d 119, 123) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.24

§ 21.24 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Did Not Have Consent to Perform Medical Treatment Because He or She Failed to Disclose Nature of Treatment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in § 21.20].

No Consent if Nature of Treatment Not Disclosed. If the defendant doctor fails to disclose the nature of the treatment in obtaining consent from the plaintiff patient, there is no consent to perform that treatment, and a battery will result if it is performed (Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 803, 82 Cal. Rptr. 67).

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Counsel should use this memorandum of points and authorities with caution. Two different legal theories, negligence and battery, are relevant in pleading a cause of action against a physician for injuries resulting from a medical treatment that was performed without sufficient information for knowledgeable consent. Since battery is an intentional tort, the battery theory should be reserved for those circumstances in which a doctor performs an operation to which the patient has not consented. The battery theory applies, therefore, if the patient gives permission to perform one type of treatment and the doctor performs another because the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent is present. Thus, an action involving a physician's failure to disclose to the patient the known nature of the treatment that he or she intends to perform before he or she performs it sounds in battery. On the other hand, an action involving a physician's failure to disclose a risk involved in the treatment to be performed sounds in negligence because deliberate intent to deviate from the consent is not present [Nelson v. Gaunt (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 623, 634, 178 Cal. Rptr. 167 ; see Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 240, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1)].

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that defendant is liable for battery based on unauthorized medical treatment because defendant did not have consent to perform the medical treatment since he or she failed to disclose the nature of the treatment to plaintiff. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of the battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the medical treatment in question and a discussion of any evidence showing that defendant did not disclose the nature of the treatment to plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Consent if Nature of Treatment Not Disclosed

In Berkey v. Anderson (1969) 1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 82 Cal. Rptr. 67 , plaintiff brought an action for malpractice based on the prescription of treatment by defendant without the informed consent of plaintiff. Plaintiff claimed that all defendant had told him about the treatment in question, which was a serious operation involving a puncture of the spine, was that the treatment would be simply exploratory, that he had nothing to worry about, and that he would feel no discomfort. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment granting nonsuit.

The court of appeal characterized this issue in the case as whether defendant gave plaintiff sufficient information about the nature of the treatment so that plaintiff could intelligently decide whether he wished to have it. The court then stated that if defendant had not given sufficient information, he would be liable for all injury plaintiff sustained in the course of the treatment, whether or not the injury was the result of negligence. The court reasoned that because defendant did not contend that he had explained the nature of the treatment to plaintiff and accepting plaintiff's statement that defendant had characterized the treatment as simply exploratory, nothing to worry about, and nothing involving discomfort, the jury could have found that defendant had given plaintiff no information that would give him any conception of the procedure; in fact, the information given would have a tendency to mislead plaintiff in making his decision (1 Cal. App. 3d 790, 804-805) . The court of appeal therefore reversed the judgment.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Consent if Nature of Treatment Not Disclosed

In Nelson v. Gaunt (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 623, 178 Cal. Rptr. 167 , an action for assault and battery, fraud, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, defendant described a dangerous and disapproved of procedure as a simple and inexpensive treatment that was free of side effects. Based on defendant's characterization, plaintiff consented to the procedure that resulted in serious injuries to her. The court of appeal held that the evidence justified pleading a cause of action in battery because the procedure to which plaintiff consented was substantially different from that which was performed (125 Cal. App. 3d 623, 635) .

In Stone v. Foster (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 334, 164 Cal. Rptr. 901 , an action for medical malpractice and fraud, defendant failed to inform plaintiff of certain inherent risks involved in surgery performed on plaintiff, which later caused plaintiff injuries. Citing Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 240-241, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 , the court of appeal held that plaintiff must plead the action in negligence rather than fraud, due to policy factors such as the availability of punitive damages and the possibility of lack of malpractice insurance coverage in an intentional tort situation (106 Cal. App. 3d 334, 346-347) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.25

§ 21.25 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Exceeded Scope of Consent to Perform Medical Treatment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in § 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT EXCEEDED HIS/HER SCOPE OF CONSENT TO PERFORM MEDICAL TREATMENT.

A. Willful Disregard of Conditional Consent. An intent to willfully disregard plaintiff's conditional consent exists if a physician performed a type of treatment other than the one for which the patient gave permission (Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 613, 278 Cal. Rptr. 900).

[Optional] B. Removing Organ Beyond Scope of Consent. Consent to an operation carries with it a consent to remove an organ or body tissue that is a normal incident to the operation, but such a consent does not carry with it permission to remove a different organ or one that is not normally excised as an incident to the operation consented to (Rainer v. Community Mem'l Hosp. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 256, 95 Cal. Rptr. 901).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for battery because he or she exceeded his or her scope of consent to perform medical treatment. Optional Paragraph B is for use if the physician's conduct involved the removal of an organ beyond the scope of the patient's consent. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of a battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the medical treatment in question and a discussion of any evidence showing that the additional treatment was beyond the scope of the patient's conditional consent.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Willful Disregard of Conditional Consent

In Ashcraft v. King (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 278 Cal. Rptr. 900 , plaintiff brought a medical-malpractice action that included a cause of action for battery, based on the surgeon's use of hospital-supply blood in an operation to which she had consented provided only blood donated by her family would be used. Several years after the operation, the hospital discovered that the blood used in plaintiff's surgery contained blood from an HIV-positive donor, and plaintiff's blood subsequently tested HIV-positive. The trial court granted defendant's motion for nonsuit on the battery cause of action. The jury found in favor of the defendant on the cause of action in negligence, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with respect to the battery cause of action, affirming the judgment in other respects (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 608, 617) . The court noted that one who gives informed consent to a surgery cannot recover for resulting harm under a theory of battery (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 609) . However, a person may place conditions on the consent, and the rule of conditional consent has been applied in battery actions against physicians and surgeons. The court stated that plaintiff's claim of battery rested on the theory that although the operation was consented to, the consent was subject to a specific condition: only family-donated blood would be used. If plaintiff could establish the existence of this condition and its breach by the physician, she would establish a battery (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 610) . The court stated that to avoid a nonsuit, plaintiff had to introduce evidence of a battery, which is any intentional, unlawful, and harmful contact by one person with the person of another. A harmful contact, intentionally done, is the essence of a battery; a contact is "unlawful" if it is unconsented to. In order to recover on a theory of battery, plaintiff had to establish: (1) her consent to the operation was conditioned on the use of only family-donated blood; (2) defendant intentionally violated this condition while performing the operation; and (3) plaintiff suffered harm as a result of defendant's violation of the condition (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 611) . The court concluded that plaintiff's evidence was sufficient to meet this test, and therefore to overcome the motion for nonsuit (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 612) . The court stated that in an action for civil battery, the element of intent is satisfied if the evidence shows that defendant acted with a "willful disregard" of the plaintiff's rights. In the context of battery in a medical procedure, if the patient gives permission to perform one type of treatment and the doctor performs another, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given is present. The court observed that evidence in the instant case showed that defendant had permission to operate on condition he use family-donated blood, but that he operated using blood from the hospital's general supply. It stated that this evidence was sufficient to allow the jury to infer an intent to willfully disregard plaintiff's conditional consent. The court found no support for the defendant's assertion that even if plaintiff's consent to surgery was conditioned on the use of family-donated blood, his violation of that condition did not result in a battery because the condition related only to a "collateral matter" (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 613) . The court also rejected defendant's contention that if the trial court erred, the error was harmless; the trial court's failure to give instructions on battery was not cured by giving instructions on negligence, especially when the instructions omitted plaintiff's theory of conditional consent (228 Cal. App. 3d 604, 615-616) .

[b] Removing Organ Beyond Scope of Consent

Plaintiff in Rainer v. Community Mem'l Hosp. (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 240 , filed an action for malpractice claiming damages as the result of several operations performed by plaintiff. Plaintiff alleged that she only consented to the repair of an abnormal passage (fistula) and not to removal of an organ (coccyx); defendant admitted that there was not specific consent to remove the coccyx but claimed that such removal was incident to the fistula repair. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment in defendant's favor.

Concerning the issue of plaintiff's consent, the court of appeal held that the foreclosure of that issue from the jury's determination required reversal of the judgment. The court noted that consent to an operation carries with it a consent to remove an organ or body tissue that is a normal incident to the operation [see Bradford v. Winter (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 448, 454, 30 Cal. Rptr. 243] , but such a consent does not carry with it permission to remove a different organ or one that is not normally excised as an incident to the operation consented to [see Hundley v. St. Francis Hosp. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 800, 803, 806, 327 P.2d 131 (discussed in § 21.25[4][a]); Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491, 96 P.2d 142 (discussed in § 21.23[3][a])] (18 Cal. App. 3d 240, 256) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exceeding Scope of Consent

In Hundley v. St. Francis Hosp. (1958) 161 Cal. App. 2d 800, 327 P.2d 131 , an action for malpractice and technical battery, there was evidence that plaintiff did not consent to the removal of organs, and uncontradicted evidence established that the removal of the organs was not necessary. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in plaintiff's favor, commenting that surgical removal of portions of the body not authorized by the patient is actionable unless, in the course of the authorized surgery, a condition arose or was disclosed that necessitated further surgery (161 Cal. App. 2d 800, 806) .

The facts and procedural background of Valdez v. Percy (1939) 35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 96 P.2d 142 , are discussed in § 21.23[3][a]. The court held that the signing of a general consent agreement did not constitute consent to perform operations other than the one for which defendant was engaged to perform unless necessity for the additional operations arose during the authorized operation (35 Cal. App. 2d 485, 491) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.26

§ 21.26 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Consent for Medical Treatment Vitiated When Treatment Not for Therapeutic Purpose

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in § 21.21].

PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT DOES NOT NEGATE DEFENDANT'S LIABILITY FOR BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT INTENTIONALLY MISREPRESENTED TO PLAINTIFF THAT HIS/HER CONDUCT WAS THERAPEUTICALLY NECESSARY WHEN IT IN FACT HAD A NONTHERAPEUTIC PURPOSE.

Consent Vitiated by Nontherapeutic Purpose. A patient's consent to harmful or offensive touching as a therapeutic treatment is vitiated if the consent was given pursuant to the defendant's intentional misrepresentation that the touching was therapeutically necessary and the defendant actually administered such touching with improper ulterior and nontherapeutic motives (Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 941, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that plaintiff's consent to specified harmful or offensive touching for therapeutic purposes is vitiated by the fact that defendant actually administered the touching for improper ulterior and nontherapeutic motives. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of battery. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including facts and arguments showing the improper nontherapeutic purpose for which defendant engaged in his or her behavior or the ways in which this behavior failed to serve a therapeutic purpose.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent Vitiated by Nontherapeutic Purpose

In Rains v. Superior Court (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 198 Cal. Rptr. 249 , plaintiffs were patients in a residential group psychiatric treatment program maintained by defendants that included a technique sometimes referred to as "sluggo therapy," which involved the infliction of physical violence on patients for purportedly therapeutic purposes. Plaintiffs sued defendants for battery and other causes of action. Plaintiffs' second amended complaint conceded that they had consented to the use of physical violence against them as an aspect of psychiatric treatment. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer to the cause of action for battery without leave to amend. Plaintiffs subsequently filed a motion for reconsideration and leave to file a third amended complaint, which alleged that the real purpose for which defendants had inflicted violence on plaintiffs was to subjugate them and control their behavior to defendants' personal advantage. The trial court allowed the proposed third amended complaint, but struck the battery count. Plaintiffs petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the writ. The court stated that whether consent to an act otherwise constituting battery is vitiated by fraud or mistake depends on whether the fraud or mistake extends to the essential character of the act itself, rather than to some collateral matter that merely operates as an inducement (150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 939) . The court stated that although there appeared to be no California case on point, out-of-state cases supported a determination that a physician's intentional misrepresentation that an otherwise offensive touching is medically necessary vitiates the consent given in ignorance of the true nontherapeutic character of the touching (150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 940) . Thus, if a physician intentionally misrepresented to a patient that an unneeded operation was necessary for the sole secret purpose of generating a fee, the consent so obtained would be legally ineffective. The court concluded that the therapeutic versus nontherapeutic purpose of touching by a psychiatrist goes to the "essential character of the act itself" and thus vitiates consent obtained by fraud as to that character (150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 941) . The court rejected defendants' argument that according to Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 239-241, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1 , consent could only be vitiated when the act performed was qualitatively different from the act consented to. The court stated that Cobbs required only an intentional deviation from the consent given for the consent to be vitiated, and that such an intentional deviation exists when a physician intends to perform treatment for a nontherapeutic purpose after consent was given only for a therapeutic purpose (150 Cal. App. 3d 933, 941-942) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.27

§ 21.27 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Sexual Battery [Civ. Code § 1708.5]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR SEXUAL BATTERY WITHIN THE MEANING OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 1708.5, BECAUSE HIS/HER CONDUCT AS ALLEGED CONSTITUTES ACTS RESULTING IN SEXUALLY OFFENSIVE CONDUCT WITH PLAINTIFF AS DESCRIBED IN CIVIL CODE SECTION 1708.5(a).

[EITHER]

A. Contact With Intimate Part of Another. A person commits a sexual battery who acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with an intimate part of another, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results (Civ. Code § 1708.5(a)(1)).

[AND/OR]

B. Contact by Use of Intimate Part. A person commits a sexual battery who acts with the intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact with another by use of his or her intimate part, and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results (Civ. Code § 1708.5(a)(2)).

[AND/OR]

C. Imminent Apprehension of Conduct. A person commits a sexual battery who acts to cause an imminent apprehension of the conduct described in Civil Code section 1708.5(a)(1) or (2), and a sexually offensive contact with that person directly or indirectly results (Civ. Code § 1708.5(a)(3)).

[CONTINUE]

D. "Intimate Part" Defined. "Intimate part" means the sexual organ, anus, groin, or buttocks of any person, or the breast of a female (Civ. Code § 1708.5(d)).

E. "Offensive Contact" Defined. "Offensive contact" means contact that offends a reasonable sense of personal dignity (Civ. Code § 1708.5(f)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for sexual battery [see Civ. Code § 1708.5].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of a sexual battery. They may also be adopted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, and in any other relevant points and authorities combined with this form, to show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the conduct alleged to have been committed by defendant is proscribed under Civ. Code § 1708.5.

[b] Cause of Action for Sexual Battery

A person who commits a sexual battery on another is liable to that person for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code § 1708.5(b)]. The court in an action pursuant to Civ. Code § 1708.5 may award equitable relief, including, but not limited to, an injunction, costs, and any other relief the court deems proper [Civ. Code § 1708.5(c)]. The rights and remedies provided in Civ. Code § 1708.5 are in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law [Civ. Code § 1708.5(e)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms regarding statutory sexual battery, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 58, Assault and Battery (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.28

§ 21.28 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Tort of Stalking

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial appellate brief]

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR THE TORT OF STALKING WITHIN THE MEANING OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 1708.7 BECAUSE HIS OR HER CONDUCT AS ALLEGED CONSTITUTES A PATTERN OF CONDUCT THE INTENT OF WHICH WAS TO FOLLOW, ALARM, OR HARASS PLAINTIFF.

A. Pattern of Conduct to Stalk Another. A person is liable for the tort of stalking by engaging in a pattern of conduct the intent of which is to follow, alarm, or harass another (Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(1)). A "pattern of conduct" means conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose. Constitutionally protected activity is not included within the meaning of "pattern of conduct" (Civ. Code § 1708.7(b)(1)).

B. Reasonable Fear for Safety. A person is liable for the tort of stalking when, as a result of the person's pattern of conduct, another reasonably fears for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member (Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(2)).

[Optional] C. "Immediate Family" Defined. "Immediate family" means a spouse, parent, child, any person related by consanguinity or affinity within the second degree, or any person who regularly resides, or, within the six months preceding any portion of the pattern of conduct, regularly resided, in the same household (Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(2)).

[EITHER]

D. Credible Threat Made and Not Abated After Demand to Cease. A person is liable for the tort of stalking if he or she, as a part of the pattern of conduct intended to follow, harass, or alarm, made a credible threat with the intent to place another in reasonable fear for his or her safety, or the safety of an immediate family member and, on at least one occasion, the person who is the target of the threat clearly and definitively demanded that the person cease and abate his or her pattern of conduct and the person persisted in his or her pattern of conduct (Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(3)(A)).

E. "Credible Threat" Defined. "Credible threat" means a verbal or written threat, including that communicated by means of an electronic communication device, or a threat implied by a pattern of conduct or a combination of verbal, written, or electronically communicated statements and conduct, made with the intent and apparent ability to carry out the threat so as to cause the person who is the target of the threat to reasonably fear for his or her safety or the safety of his or her immediate family (Civ. Code § 1708.7(b)(2)).

[AND/OR]

F. Violation of Restraining Order. A person is liable for the tort of stalking for having violated a restraining order, including, but not limited to, any order issued pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.6, prohibiting any act described in Civil Code Section 1708.7(a) (Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(3)(B)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for the tort of stalking [see Civ. Code § 1708.7].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the pattern of conduct constituting the tort of stalking. They may also be adopted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, and in any other relevant points and authorities combined with this form, to show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel must support plaintiff's allegations of defendant's pattern of conduct with independent corroborating evidence [see Civ. Code § 1708.7(a)(1)].

[b] Cause of Action for Tort of Stalking

A person who commits the tort of stalking on another is liable to that person for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code § 1708.7(c)]. The court in an action under Civ. Code § 1708.7 may grant equitable relief, including, but not limited to, an injunction [Civ. Code § 1708.7(d)]. The rights and remedies provided in Civ. Code § 1708.7 are cumulative and in addition to any other rights and remedies provided by law [Civ. Code § 1708.7(e)]. Civ. Code § 1708.7 shall not be construed to impair any constitutionally protected activity, including, but not limited to, speech, protest, and assembly [Civ. Code § 1708.7(f)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms regarding the statutory tort of stalking, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 58, Assault and Battery (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.29

§ 21.29 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Tort of Domestic Violence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR THE TORT OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1708.6 BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT AS ALLEGED CONSTITUTES DOMESTIC ABUSE.

A. Tort of Domestic Violence. A person is liable for the tort of domestic violence if the plaintiff proves both: (1) that injury resulting from abuse, as defined in Penal Code Section 13700(a), was inflicted on the plaintiff; and (2) that the abuse was committed by the defendant, a person having a relationship with the plaintiff as defined in Penal Code section 13700(b) (Civ. Code § 1708.6).

B. Definition of Abuse. Abuse means intentionally or recklessly causing or attempting to cause bodily injury, or placing another person in reasonable apprehension of imminent serious bodily injury to himself or herself, or to another (Penal Code § 13700(a)).

C. Definition of Domestic Violence. Domestic violence means abuse commit ted against an adult or a fully emancipated minor who is a spouse, former spouse, cohabitant, former cohabitant, or person with whom the suspect has had a child or is having or has had a dating or engagement relationship (Penal Code § 13700(b)).

D. Definition of Cohabitant. A "cohabitant" is one of two unrelated adult persons living together for a substantial period of time, resulting in some permanency of relationship. Factors that may determine whether persons are cohabiting include, but are not limited to: (1) sexual relations between the parties while sharing the same living quarters; (2) sharing of income or expenses; (3) joint use or ownership of property; (4) whether the parties hold themselves out as husband and wife; (5) the continuity of the relationship; and (6) the length of the relationship (Penal Code § 13700(b)).

[Optional] E. Damages Recoverable for Abuse Occurring More Than Three Years Before Suit Filed. Although the three-year statute of limitations of Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.15(a) uses the "last act" of domestic violence as a trigger, a plaintiff may recover for domestic violence occurring more than three years before suit is brought if plaintiff proves a continuing course of abusive conduct and files suit within three years of the last act (Pugliese v. Superior Court (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1451, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 681).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the plaintiff's contention that the defendant is liable for the tort of domestic violence [see Civ. Code 1708.6].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of domestic violence. They may also be adopted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument into this form, and in any other relevant points and authorities combined with this form, to show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Cause of Action of Domestic Violence

A person is liable for the tort of domestic violence if the plaintiff proves both of the following elements [Civ. Code 1708.6(a)]:

- The infliction of injury on the plaintiff resulting from abuse, defined by Penal Code § 13700(a) as intentionally or recklessly causing or attempting to cause bodily injury, or placing another person in reasonable apprehension of imminent serious bodily injury to himself or herself, or another; and

- That the abuse was committed by the defendant, a person having a relationship with the plaintiff as defined in Penal Code § 13700(b).

Domestic violence means abuse committed against an adult or a fully emancipated minor who is a spouse, former spouse, cohabitant, former cohabitant, or person with whom the suspect has had a child or is having or has had a dating or engagement relationship. A "cohabitant" is one of two unrelated adult persons living together for a substantial period of time, resulting in some permanency of relationship. Factors that may determine whether persons are cohabiting include, but are not limited to: (1) sexual relations between the parties while sharing the same living quarters; (2) sharing of income or expenses; (3) joint use or ownership of property; (4) whether the parties hold themselves out as husband and wife; (5) the continuity of the relationship; and (6) the length of the relationship [Penal Code § 13700(b)].

A person who commits an act of domestic violence is liable to the victim for damages, including, but not limited to, general damages, special damages, and punitive damages [Civ. Code 1708.6(b)]. In a domestic violence action, the court, may grant to a prevailing plaintiff equitable relief, an injunction, costs, and any other relief that the court deems proper, including reasonable attorney's fees [Civ. Code 1708.6(c)].

An action based on the tort of domestic violence must be brought within three years after the date of the last act of domestic violence by the defendant against the plaintiff or within three years after the date that the plaintiff discovers or reasonably should have discovered that an injury or illness resulted from an act of domestic violence by the defendant against the plaintiff [Civ. Code § 1708.6(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 340.15].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms regarding the statutory tort of domestic violence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 58, Assault and Battery (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Recoverable for Abuse Occurring More Than Three Years Before Suit Filed

In Pugliese v. Superior Court (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 681 , plaintiff filed suit against her husband in April 2004 for assault and battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and civil rights violations based on a pattern of physical and mental abuse beginning shortly after their marriage in 1989. Plaintiff alleged that the physical abuse ended in April 2001, although the emotional abuse continued until April 2004. Defendant filed a motion in limine to exclude evidence of any assaults and batteries that occurred more than three years before suit was filed, arguing that plaintiff could not recover damages for acts occurring before that time because the three-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.15 barred recovery. The trial court agreed and granted the motion. Plaintiff sought a writ overturning the trial court's order.

The court of appeal granted the writ of mandate. The court first held that plaintiff's assault and battery claims were barred by the applicable two-year statute of limitations (146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1450) . However, the court also noted that while plaintiff did not specifically allege a cause of action under the domestic abuse statute, Civ. Code § 1708.6, her allegations described conduct that constituted abuse under that statute. As such, the three-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.15 applied to determine whether she had stated a timely claim for relief under the domestic abuse statute. Because suit was filed within three years of the date that the last act of physical domestic abuse was alleged to have occurred in April 2001, the domestic abuse cause of action was timely filed (146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1450-1451) . The court then held that plaintiff was entitled to seek damages for acts of abuse that occurred more than three years before suit was filed. The court concluded that by using the "last act" of domestic violence as the trigger to begin the limitations period, the Legislature adopted a continuing torts theory under which a domestic violence victim could recover damages for all acts of domestic violence occurring during the marriage, provided that the victim proves a continuous course of abusive conduct and files suit within three years of the last act of abuse (146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1451) . The court noted statements in the legislative history of Civ. Code § 1708.6 suggesting that the Legislature intended to provide a mechanism for victims to recover completely for the harm caused by domestic violence and that they understood the tort of domestic violence to encompass a series of acts and an oppressive, continuous atmosphere of control (146 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1455) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.30

§ 21.30 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant's Acts Did Not Constitute Self-Defense Because Plaintiff's Acts Were Not Violent or Hostile

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S ACTS WERE NOT HOSTILE OR VIOLENT AND THEREFORE, DEFENDANT DID NOT ACT IN SELF-DEFENSE.

Failure to Establish Prima Facie Case of Self-Defense. A prima facie case of self-defense is not established unless defendant shows a specific overt act of hostility or threat of violence on the part of plaintiff that would justify the actions of defendant (Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 456, 23 Cal. Rptr. 617).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery when defendant failed to establish a prima facie case of self-defense. The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of self-defense. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that plaintiff did not act in a violent or hostile way so as to justify defendant's act.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Establish Prima Facie Case of Self-Defense

Plaintiff in Villines v. Tomerlin (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 448 , filed an action for damages for assault and battery against defendant for allegedly pushing plaintiff and injuring him. On the night in question, plaintiff became intoxicated at defendant's bar and was asked to leave by defendant. Plaintiff proceeded to leave after apologizing to defendant and shaking his hand. On route to a waiting cab, plaintiff slammed a glass door causing defendant to shout at him. Defendant then followed plaintiff on his way to the cab and when he caught plaintiff he shoved him. Plaintiff fell to the ground and severely injured an ankle. Defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding in part, that because defendant did not establish a prima facie case of self-defense, testimony of prior and collateral acts of misconduct by plaintiff could not be admitted into evidence. The court stated that unless the defendant can show a specific overt act of hostility or threat of violence on the part of an aggressor plaintiff tending to justify the actions of defendant as defense of self or property, and thereby establishing a prima facie case of self-defense, testimony of prior acts of plaintiff could not be admitted into evidence. Because the evidence did not depict defendant as an innocent person suddenly confronted with imminent danger of great bodily harm or destruction of his or her property at the hands of plaintiff, defendant failed to establish a prima facie case of self-defense (206 Cal. App. 2d 448, 456) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.31

§ 21.31 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Used Unreasonable Force in Defense of Himself or Herself

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities set forth in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE HE/SHE USED UNREASONABLE FORCE IN DEFENSE OF HIMSELF/HERSELF.

Use of Unreasonable Force. A defendant's actions do not constitute self-defense if the force used by the defendant was more than would appear reasonably necessary judged by the situation as it reasonably appeared to the defendant at the time of the assault (Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 318-319, 246 P.2d 111).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery because defendant used unreasonable force in defense of himself or herself. The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery in response to defendant's contention that he or she is not liable because he or she acted in self-defense.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of self-defense. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant used unreasonable force in defense of himself or herself.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Use of Unreasonable Force

The facts and procedural background of Lopez v. Surchia (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 246 P.2d 111 , are discussed in § 21.21[3][c]. The court held that the firing of the gun was unlawful because the evidence did not warrant a finding that defendant had cause to believe that his son was in imminent danger of death or great bodily harm. There was no evidence that the boy who had fought with defendant's son was armed in any way; on the contrary, the conflict appeared to be nothing more than the not unusual fist fight between men or boys (112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 317-319) . The court, therefore, held that the force used was more than would appear reasonably necessary judged by the situation as it reasonably appeared to defendant at the time of the assault (112 Cal. App. 2d 314, 317-319) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.32

§ 21.32 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Used Unreasonable Force in Defense of His or Her Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE HE/SHE USED UNREASONABLE FORCE IN DEFENSE OF HIS/HER PROPERTY.

No Privilege for Unreasonable Force. The actor is not privileged to use any means of defending his or her land or chattels from intrusion that are intended or likely to cause bodily harm or confinement in excess of that which the actor correctly or reasonably believes to be necessary to prevent or terminate the other's intrusion (Deevy v. Tassi (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 109, 130 P.2d 389).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery because defendant used unreasonable force in defense of his or her property. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery in response to, or in anticipation of, defendant's argument that he or she is not liable because he or she was acting in defense of his or her property.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defense of property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that the force defendant used in defense of his or her property was unreasonable.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Privilege for Unreasonable Force

In Deevy v. Tassi (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 109, 130 P.2d 389 , plaintiffs filed an action for assault and battery that arose, in part, out of an altercation between one of the plaintiffs and one of the defendants. The altercation was over defendant's right, under a chattel mortgage, to take possession of cattle that were in plaintiff's possession. In attempting to recover the cattle, defendant struck plaintiff with a leather lash and rode a horse against her and over her. Defendants appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiffs.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, stating that the attack with the leather lash and the horse on plaintiff, a 55-year-old woman, by defendant, a 180-pound man, was shockingly out of proportion to that which would have been reasonably necessary to offset or interrupt her efforts to control the herd of cattle. The rule in such a case is that the actor is not privileged to use any means of defending his or her land or chattels from intrusion that are intended or likely to cause bodily harm or confinement in excess of that which the actor correctly or reasonably believes to be necessary to prevent or terminate the other's intrusion (21 Cal. 2d 109) . Defendant's use of force, therefore, was not privileged.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.33

§ 21.33 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Did Not Have Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel Because Plaintiff Had Rightfully Acquired Possession

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAD RIGHTFULLY ACQUIRED POSSESSION OF THE CHATTEL AND THEREFORE, DEFENDANT DID NOT HAVE THE RIGHT TO FORCIBLY RETAKE IT.

No Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel if Possession Rightfully Acquired. The use of force against another for the purpose of recapture of a chattel, which the other is tortiously withholding from the actor, is not privileged if the other's possession was rightfully acquired (Deevy v. Tassi (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 109, 130 P.2d 389).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery because plaintiff had rightfully acquired possession of the chattel in question and therefore, defendant did not have the right to forcibly retake it. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery in response to, or in anticipation of, defendant's argument that he or she had the right to use force to retake a chattel that belonged to him or her.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defense of property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that the chattel was rightfully acquired by plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel if Possession Rightfully Acquired

The facts and procedural background of Deevy v. Tassi (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 109, 130 P.2d 389 , are discussed in § 21.32[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the assumed fact that plaintiffs were in default under the terms of the chattel mortgage and that defendant had a legal right to acquire possession of some or even all of the cattle he attempted to take did not justify the commission of assault and battery in effecting recaption. The Court stated that the use of force against another for the purpose of recaption of a chattel, which the other is tortiously withholding from the actor, is not privileged if the other's possession was rightfully acquired (21 Cal. 2d 109) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Right to Forcibly Retake Chattel if Possession Rightfully Acquired

In Rogers v. Kabakoff (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 487, 184 P.2d 312 , an action for assault and battery, defendant forcibly took his car from the possession of a parking attendant after a disagreement over the price of the parking. Defendant urged that his conduct was not unlawful because plaintiff made an excessive and unlawful charge for parking defendant's car and was unlawfully withholding the car. The court of appeal ruled that the fact that defendant was entitled to the right of possession of the automobile did not entitle him to take the same from respondent, who was in the actual rightful possession, by force or violence (81 Cal. App. 2d 487, 490) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.34

§ 21.34 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Failed to Warn Plaintiff, a Nonviolent Trespasser, Before Forcibly Ejecting Him or Her

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF, A NONVIOLENT TRESPASSER, WAS NOT REQUESTED OR WARNED BY DEFENDANT TO LEAVE PRIOR TO BEING FORCIBLY EJECTED BY DEFENDANT.

Warning Required to Eject Nonviolent Trespasser. A property owner should request or warn a trespasser to leave before forcibly ejecting him or her if the trespasser is not engaged in a violent act that would call for his or her immediate forcible ejectment (see Chapell v. Schmidt (1894) 104 Cal. 511, 513-514, 38 P 892).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery because plaintiff, a nonviolent trespasser, was not requested or warned by defendant to leave prior to being forcibly ejected by defendant. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery in response to, or in anticipation of, defendant's contention that he or she had the right to forcibly eject plaintiff from his or her land.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defense of property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that plaintiff was a nonviolent trespasser and that defendant failed to request him or her to leave prior to forcibly ejecting him or her.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Warning Required to Eject Nonviolent Trespasser

Plaintiff in Chapell v. Schmidt (1894) 104 Cal. 511, , filed an action through his guardian to recover damages for an assault and battery committed by defendant. Defendant had observed plaintiff, an elderly man, picking flowers in defendant's garden. Without giving any request to leave or warning to plaintiff, defendant rushed into the garden and beat plaintiff very severely, causing injuries from which plaintiff never recovered. Defendant appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiff.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, holding that plaintiff was not using such force and violence as would have justified defendant to assault and beat him without any warning whatsoever (104 Cal. 511, 514) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.35

§ 21.35 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Directed Intentional Tort Specifically at Public Employee in Performance of His or Her Duties

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in § 21.20 and/or 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT DIRECTED AN INTENTIONAL TORT SPECIFICALLY AT A PUBLIC EMPLOYEE IN THE PERFORMANCE OF HIS/HER DUTIES.

A. Intentional Tort Specifically Directed at Public Employee. If defendant directs an intentional tort, such as an assault or battery, specifically against a public employee with the intention of interfering with or preventing the performance of the employee's duties, he or she is liable for the injuries caused to such employee because this risk is not one that the public employee necessarily assumes (Krueger v. City of Anaheim (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 166, 171-172, 181 Cal. Rptr. 631).

[Optional] B. Injury to Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel. Notwithstanding statutory or decisional law to the contrary, any person is responsible not only for the results of that person's willful acts causing injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or any emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, but also for any injury occasioned to that person by the want of ordinary care or skill in the management of the person's property or person when the conduct causing the injury was intended to injure the peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(3)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a party's contention that the defendant is liable for assault and battery because he or she directed the assault and battery specifically at a public employee in the performance of his or her duties. Optional Paragraph B may be used in support of a party's contention that a defendant is liable for injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity under the circumstances in Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(3).

The arguments supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery in response to, or in anticipation of, defendant's contention that liability is precluded by the "firefighter's rule" [see § 21.35[3][a]].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the commission of an assault and battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant directed the assault and battery at plaintiff who was a public employee in performance of his or her duties.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intentional Tort Specifically Directed at Public Employee

In Krueger v. City of Anaheim (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 166, 181 Cal. Rptr. 631 , plaintiff brought an action for injuries received during his encounter with stadium security guards. One of the guards and the city cross complained for damages, seeking reimbursement for workers' compensation payments made to the guard. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment, holding that the "fireman's rule" prevented recovery for any of the security guard's injuries.

The court of appeal reversed, stating that the "fireman's rule," which provides that firemen and policemen, whose occupations by their very nature expose them to particular risks of harm, cannot complain of negligence because they knowingly confront the hazard, is not applicable to cases in which the defendant directs an intentional tort specifically at a public employee in performance of his or her duties. The court held that the person who intentionally interferes with a fireman or policeman in the performance of his or her duties should be liable for the injuries that the person may cause because this risk is not one that the public employee necessarily assumes (130 Cal. App. 3d 166, 171-172) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.36

§ 21.36 Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant at Time of Inflicting Injury to Plaintiff Knew or Should Have Known That Plaintiff Was Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel Employed by Public Entity [Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief, and should be combined with the general points and authorities in §§ 21.20 and 21.21].

DEFENDANT IS LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF WAS A _____ [PEACE OFFICER or FIREFIGHTER or EMERGENCY MEDICAL PERSONNEL] EMPLOYED BY A PUBLIC ENTITY AND DEFENDANT KNEW, OR SHOULD HAVE KNOWN, OF HIS/HER PRESENCE.

A. Liability for Injury to Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel. Notwithstanding statutory or decisional law to the contrary, any person is responsible not only for the results of that person's willful acts causing injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or any emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity, but also for any injury occasioned to that person by the want of ordinary care or skill in the management of the person's property or person when the conduct causing the injury occurs after the person knows or should have known of the presence of the peace officer, firefighter or emergency medical personnel (Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1); see Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012-1016, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283).

[Optional] B. Sufficiency of Allegation That Conduct Causing Injury Consisted of "Slumping or Going Limp." An allegation in a complaint for personal injuries suffered by a court bailiff to the effect that when the judge ordered plaintiff to take defendant in a criminal prosecution into custody, defendant's act of "slumping or going limp" caused plaintiff's knee to be injured is generally sufficient to state cause of action for negligence or assault and battery (Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283).

[Optional] C. Defense of Assumption of Risk. The doctrine of assumption of the risk does not negate the cause of action, because the cause of action is expressly authorized by Section 1714.9 of the Civil Code (Gibb v. Stetson (1988)

199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's contention that the defendant is liable for assault and battery or negligence because defendant knew at the time of the conduct causing plaintiff's injury that plaintiff was a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity [see Civ. Code § 1714.9(a)(1)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of the liability of a tortfeasor for injury to a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel employed by a public entity. For example, they may be used in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint by the public employee for damages or to a defense motion for summary judgment predicated on the ground that the action is barred by the fireman's rule. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should point out that at the time of the injury he or she was a public employee working as a peace officer, firefighter, or emergency medical personnel; describe the tortious conduct in question; and describe his or her injury.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Injury to Peace Officer, Firefighter, or Emergency Medical Personnel

Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283 , was an action by a municipal court bailiff for personal injuries sustained when, while taking defendant, who was appearing as the accused in a criminal case, into custody on the judge's order, defendant "slumped and went limp," causing her body weight to fall against plaintiff's right leg and right knee causing injury. From a summary judgment for defendant on the ground the action was barred by the fireman's rule, plaintiff appealed. The appellate court reversed. The court acknowledged that the fireman's rule, which provides that negligence in causing a fire furnishes no basis for liability to a professional firefighter injured fighting the fire, applies to police officers as well (199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1010 n.2, 1013) and that a deputy marshal acting as a bailiff is a peace officer under Penal Code § 830.1 (199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1015 n.4), but held that the case came within the exception to the rule established by Civ. Code § 1714.9, in part in Paragraph A (199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012-1016) .

[b] Sufficiency of Allegation That Conduct Causing Injury Consisted of "Slumping or Going Limp"

Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283 , is discussed in § 21.36[3][a]. The plaintiff's complaint alleged that defendant's act of "slumping or going limp" caused his knee to be injured. The court said that such an allegation is generally sufficient to state a cause of action for negligence or assault and battery (199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1012) .

[c] Defense of Assumption of Risk

Gibb v. Stetson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 245 Cal. Rptr. 283 , is discussed in § 21.36[3][a]. In reversing the summary judgment for defendant, the court of appeal said that defendant's alternate argument that summary judgment was properly granted because plaintiff assumed the risk that caused the injury was not well taken. After the decision in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , assumption of the risk of the sort involved here is not a complete defense but is part of the evaluation of comparative negligence. In any event, the doctrine of assumption of the risk could not provide a complete defense, since Civ. Code § 1714.9 permits the present cause of action, "[n]otwithstanding statutory or decisional law to the contrary" (199 Cal. App. 3d 1008, 1016 n.5).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.36A

§ 21.36A Supporting Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Battery Action Against Police Officer Based on Unreasonable Use of Excessive Force in Effecting Arrest Is Not Precluded by Plaintiff's Conviction for Resisting Arrest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY PURSUE A BATTERY ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT POLICE OFFICER BASED ON DEFENDANT'S UNREASONABLE USE OF EXCESSIVE FORCE WHEN EFFECTING PLAINTIFF'S ARREST BECAUSE SUCCESS IN THE CIVIL ACTION WOULD NOT CALL INTO QUESTION THE VALIDITY OF PLAINTIFF'S ARREST AND CRIMINAL CONVICTION.

Battery Action Would Not Challenge Validity of Criminal Conviction. Despite plaintiff's standing conviction for resisting arrest, a battery claim brought against a police officer based on the unreasonable use of excessive force when effecting the arrest is not barred when such claim would not call into question the validity of plaintiff's arrest and conviction (Yount v. City of Sacramento (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 885, 898-900, 902, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787, 183 P.3d 471).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a plaintiff's cause of action for battery brought against a police officer is not barred despite the fact that the plaintiff's criminal conviction for resisting arrest has not been invalidated. The basis for the contention supported by this form is that plaintiff's claim that defendant police officer used unreasonably excessive force to effect the arrest would not call into question the validity of plaintiff's arrest and criminal conviction.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the contention that the battery action is not barred. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts describing the circumstances of plaintiff's arrest and defendant's use of force to effect that arrest, and include argument that the force used was unreasonable and excessive under the circumstances.

[c] Opposing Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 21.45 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Battery Action Would Not Challenge Validity of Criminal Conviction

In Yount v. City of Sacramento (2008) 43 Cal. 4th 885, 902, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787, 183 P.3d 471 , plaintiff, attempting to drive while very drunk, was stopped in his vehicle by a police officer in the parking lot of a convenience store. Plaintiff strenuously resisted his arrest, at one point shattering a window on the police car, and several more police officers arrived on the scene to help subdue him. The police managed to pin plaintiff to the ground, although he continued to resist, and one police officer, under the mistaken belief that he had drawn his taser from his holster, shot plaintiff in the buttock with his firearm. Plaintiff subsequently pleaded no contest to driving under the influence and resisting a police officer. He was sentenced to time in jail, a fine, and five years probation. He then brought suit against the city and the officer who shot him, eventually proceeding on one claim for federal civil rights violations under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 and one claim for battery brought under state law. Plaintiff's claims were based on allegations that plaintiff posed no real threat to the officers at the time he was shot and that the officer's use of his firearm to effectuate the arrest was excessive, unnecessary, and unlawful. The parties agreed to bifurcate the trial and first try before the court the issue of whether the civil rights action was precluded under the United States Supreme Court's holding in Heck v. Humphrey (1994) 512 U.S. 477, 114 S. Ct. 2364, 129 L. Ed. 2d 383 , which bars a plaintiff from prosecuting an action under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 that would necessarily imply the invalidity of his or her criminal conviction or sentence until that conviction or sentence has first been invalidated, and whether the battery action was precluded for the same reasons under Susag v. City of Lake Forest (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269 , discussed in § 21.45[3][a]. The trial court ruled that the civil claims were barred under these legal authorities and entered judgment for defendants. The court of appeal reversed, disagreeing with the analysis of Susag and finding that the officer's alleged use of excessive force may have been temporally distinct from the acts that formed the basis of the no contest plea to resisting the officers sufficient to avoid the bar imposed by Heck.

The California Supreme Court granted review and affirmed the court of appeal in part and reversed in part. The Supreme Court first addressed the federal civil rights claim and the application of Heck to the facts of this case. The trial court had found that plaintiff's criminal conviction established his culpability during the entire episode with the police officers, and the Supreme Court concluded that this finding was supported by sufficient evidence. Thus, any civil action that would be inconsistent with even a portion of plaintiff's conviction for resisting the officers would be barred under Heck (43 Cal. 4th 885, 896) . However, while recognizing that this conclusion meant that plaintiff could not sustain a claim that the officers had no right to utilize reasonable force to effect his arrest, the Supreme Court noted that the misconduct alleged by plaintiff was that the deadly force employed against him when he was shot was unjustified and excessive. Because the record developed at trial did not justify the use of deadly force against plaintiff, nor did plaintiff's criminal conviction in itself establish a justification for the use of deadly force, the Court held that plaintiff's claim that the deadly force used against him was unreasonable and excessive was not barred. Concluding otherwise would mean that any arrestee who offers resistance to the police could be subdued by any force the police chose to employ, with no possibility that the police could be held civilly liable for using excessive force (43 Cal. 4th 885, 898-900) . The Court made explicit, however, that it had not been asked to decide whether plaintiff could recover damages under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983 for an officer's accidental use of deadly force (43 Cal. 4th 885, 900 n.2). Noting that the parties had not separately addressed the effect of plaintiff's criminal conviction on his claim for battery brought under state law, the Court concluded that the analysis of the state law claim mirrored that of the federal claim brought under 42 U.S.C.S. § 1983. Thus, so long as plaintiff did not deny that he resisted the officers and they thus had the right to employ reasonable force, plaintiff could proceed on a battery action that would require plaintiff to prove that the force used against him was unreasonable (43 Cal. 4th 885, 902) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.37

§ 21.37 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Plaintiff Consented to Participation in Illegal Act

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF CONSENTED TO PARTICIPATION IN THE ILLEGAL ACT.

Consent as a Complete Defense. Plaintiff's consent to participation in an illegal act with defendant is a complete defense to a claim that such act constituted an assault and battery on plaintiff by defendant (see Sayadoff v. Warda (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 629-632, 271 P.2d 140).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery when plaintiff consented to participation in the illegal act in question. The form sets out the rule that consent is a complete defense to such an action.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to oppose in the issue of consent to the alleged assault and battery. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should also insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that plaintiff consented to his or her participation in the act in question.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consent as a Complete Defense

In Sayadoff v. Warda (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 271 P.2d 140 , plaintiff brought an action based on a conspiracy by defendant boyfriend to commit assaults and batteries on plaintiff by arranging an abortion for plaintiff that resulted in injuries. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment of nonsuit.

The court of appeal held that plaintiff consented to the abortion. As to plaintiff's ability to consent to participation in an illegal act, the court stated that admittedly the court should discourage the violation of the penal statutes of this state, but that it is highly doubtful that this end should be sought through the medium of civil litigation because the court doubted that any deterrent would be afforded by allowing damages in such a case as this. The court reasoned that such a holding might well encourage a line of conduct such as this, that is, the submission to abortions with no complaint if they are successful but with the assurance of financial reward if the woman participant is injured (125 Cal. App. 2d 626, 631) . The court of appeal therefore affirmed the judgment.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.38

§ 21.38 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Battery--Defendant Had Implied Consent to Perform Medical Treatment Due to Emergency

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAD IMPLIED CONSENT TO PERFORM MEDICAL TREATMENT DUE TO AN EMERGENCY.

Implied Consent in Emergency. In cases of emergency or unanticipated conditions when some immediate action is found necessary for the preservation of the life or health of a patient and it is impracticable to first obtain consent to the operation or treatment that the surgeon deems to be immediately necessary, the surgeon is justified in extending the operation to remove and overcome such conditions without the express consent of the patient thereto (Preston v. Hubbell (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 53, 58, 196 P.2d 113).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for battery when defendant had implied consent to perform medical treatment due to an emergency. The form sets out the rule that when it is impracticable to obtain express consent due to an emergency, consent to perform necessary medical treatment will be implied, and such implied consent is a complete defense to such an action.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of implied consent to medical treatment. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the medical treatment in question and a discussion of facts showing that an emergency situation existed that made the treatment in question necessary and that made it impracticable to obtain plaintiff's consent in advance.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Consent in Emergency

Preston v. Hubbell (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 53, 196 P.2d 113 , involved an action for damages resulting from alleged negligence in the removal of a tooth. The operation was a difficult one and during the procedure a fracture occurred, which defendant repaired. At a later date the jaw became infected and plaintiff was required to have another operation. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment in favor of defendant.

Although the court of appeal reversed the judgment on other grounds, the court noted that the only rational answer to the question of consent is that plaintiff must be deemed to have consented to the repair of the fracture. It was necessary that the broken jaw be repaired promptly. It is the general rule that in cases of emergency or unanticipated conditions when some immediate action is found necessary for the preservation of the life or health of a patient and it is impracticable to first obtain consent to the operation or treatment that the surgeon deems to be immediately necessary, the surgeon is justified in extending the operation to remove and overcome such conditions without the express consent of the patient thereto (87 Cal. App. 2d 53, 57-58) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.39

§ 21.39 Opposing Contention That Defendant is Liable for Battery--Defendant Lacked Intent to Perform Procedure Without Complying With Conditions Placed on Patient's Consent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT LACKED INTENT TO PERFORM MEDICAL TREATMENT WITHOUT ABIDING BY KNOWN CONDITION ON CONSENT TO TREATMENT IMPOSED BY PATIENT.

A. Physician Must Have Knowledge of Conditions Placed on Consent to Treatment. If general consent to medical treatment is conditioned on obtaining additional consent before administering a specific treatment, a physician is not personally liable for battery for failing to abide by the condition unless the physician has knowledge of that condition (Piedra v. Dugan (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1498, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 36).

B. Physician Must Have Specific Intent to Perform Without Abiding by Condition. To be liable for performing a medical procedure while failing to abide by a known condition imposed by the patient, the doctor must have intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition, and negligent failure to abide by the condition is an insufficient basis for liability for battery (Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540, 544, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a physician may be liable for battery for failing to obtain consent before performing certain medical procedures. The grounds for the opposition are that even though the plaintiff may have placed conditions on consent otherwise given for medical treatment, the physician had no knowledge of those conditions or did not otherwise have the specific intent to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition imposed by plaintiff.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law raised. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the defendant lacked knowledge that the plaintiff had placed any conditions on the consent to treatment otherwise given.

These points and authorities may be combined with a memorandum of points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel is responding to the contention that a physician may be liable for battery. For example, it may be used in support of a demurrer to a complaint or in a motion for summary judgment. It may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Physician Must Have Knowledge of Conditions Placed on Consent to Treatment

In Piedra v. Dugan (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 36 , the plaintiff was a child who brought suit (through his parents) against a physician after medical treatment for seizures and cardiac arrest left the plaintiff in a vegetative state. When the plaintiff was admitted to the hospital, his parents filled out an admissions form through which they consented to treatment for their child's condition. However, because their child had suffered serious reactions to medication that he was given in the past, his mother told the admitting person, two nurses, and one physician that they were not to give her son any medication without her knowledge and approval. The next day, the defendant, a physician, was providing treatment to the child, whose condition was serious and deteriorating, and he administered drugs without first notifying the child's parents. However, the defendant had no knowledge of the statements made by the child's mother about receiving specific consent before administering drugs. During the treatment, the child suffered cardiac arrest as a rare adverse effect of one of the administered drugs, resulting in severe brain damage. The plaintiff sued the defendant and other parties, but went to trial only against the defendant. The trial court granted a nonsuit on the plaintiff's battery claim, and the jury found for the defendant on a claim of negligence and failure to inform. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first found that there was substantial evidence to support the jury's verdict on the claim of negligent failure to inform, because the drug administered was considered very safe and was administered under emergency situations (123 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1490-1491) . As to the battery claim, the court noted initially that the consent clause contained in the admissions form was sufficient to constitute general consent to treatment (123 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1496) . The court then held that although a patient or his or her representative may give consent to a general course of treatment, it is possible for that consent to be made conditional, as the plaintiff's mother apparently did in this particular case. However, the court held that the defendant could not be liable for administering drugs without obtaining further consent from the child's parents, because neither the parents nor the hospital staff informed the defendant about the condition placed on the consent, and the condition was not noted on the child's chart. Because battery is an intentional tort, the defendant could not have the requisite intent to commit battery without that knowledge (123 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1498) .

[b] Physician Must Have Specific Intent to Perform Without Abiding by Condition

In Dennis v. Southard (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 540, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 559 , plaintiff conditioned her consent to knee surgery on the use of prostheses not manufactured by a particular company. The doctor performed successful surgery using a prosthesis manufactured by another company. Four months later, plaintiff returned for similar surgery on the other knee, but in the meantime, the hospital had switched to using prostheses manufactured by the company disfavored by the plaintiff. The doctor completed the surgery using a prosthesis from that company, and also inadvertently damaged plaintiff's medial collateral ligament. Plaintiff sued the doctor for malpractice and included a cause of action for battery for performing the surgery while failing to abide by the condition plaintiff placed on her consent. The jury found for the physician and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court rejected plaintiff's argument that the trial court erred in instructing the jury with CACI No. 530B, which requires a finding that the defendant intended to perform the procedure with knowledge that the condition had not occurred. The court noted that intent to perform the procedure itself is not sufficient intent to impose liability for battery. Instead, in a case of conditional consent, the requisite element of deliberate intent to deviate from the consent given cannot be presumed simply from the act itself, but requires proof that the physician intended to perform the procedure without abiding by the condition placed on the patient's consent. Without such a requirement, a jury could impose liability for battery when a physician was merely negligent in failing to abide by the patient's stated condition (174 Cal. App. 4th 540, 544) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.40

§ 21.40 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Self-Defense and/or Defense of Relative, Household Member, or Guest [Civ. Code § 50]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED IN _____ [SELF-DEFENSE and/or DEFENSE OF A _____ (RELATIVE and/or HOUSEHOLD MEMBER and/or GUEST)].

A. Scope of Privilege. Any necessary force may be used to protect from wrongful injury the person of oneself, or of a wife, husband, child, parent, or other relative, or member of one's family, or of a ward, servant, master, or guest (Civ. Code § 50).

B. Force Must Be Reasonable. The force that one may use in self-defense is that which reasonably appears necessary, in view of all the circumstances of the case, to prevent the impending injury (Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d, 586, 600, 191 P.2d 432).

C. Determining if Force Excessive. In determining whether the particular means used is or is not excessive, the amount of force exerted, the means or instrument by which it is applied, the manner or method of applying it, and the circumstances under which it is applied are factors to be considered (Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 745, 62 P.2d 783).

D. Reasonable Belief of Danger Required. The rule for determining when a person may act on appearances is whether a reasonable person, situated as defendant was, seeing what he or she saw, and knowing what he or she knew, would be justified in believing himself or herself in danger (Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 782, 790-791, 130 P.2d 1).

[Optional] E. Person Confronted Not Bound to Retreat. A person confronted or attacked is not bound to retreat but is entitled to stand and defend himself or herself and act as a reasonable person under the circumstances to prevent the injury (McAfee v. Ricker (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 630, 635, 15 Cal. Rptr. 920).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery when defendant was acting in self-defense or in defense of a relative, household member, or guest. The arguments supported by this memorandum may be used to oppose an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of self-defense. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant acted in self-defense or in defense of a relative, household member, or guest.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Force Must Be Reasonable

Vaughn v. Jonas (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 586, 191 P.2d 432 , involved an action for damages against defendant for shooting and severely wounding plaintiff. The shooting took place following an argument between plaintiff and defendant after which defendant claimed plaintiff advanced toward him in a threatening manner with a rock in his hands. Defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, commenting that the court below had incorrectly stated the rule regarding the use of reasonable force. The Supreme Court then stated that the correct rule for determining the force that one may use in self-defense is that one may use force that reasonably appears necessary, in view of all circumstances of the case, to prevent the impending jury (31 Cal. 2d 586, 600) . In the case at hand, however, the Court found that the error was not prejudicial.

[b] Determining if Force Excessive

Plaintiff in Fraguglia v. Sala (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 62 P.2d 783 , filed an action against defendant for assault and battery. The altercation in question occurred when defendant, a sub-boss on a garbage truck, gave plaintiff, an employee on the truck, an order that resulted in a fight. Defendant appealed from a judgment in plaintiff's favor.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, due in part to an incorrect instruction given on the subject of excessive force. The instruction stated that if the jury found it to be a fact that plaintiff was not free from fault, the jury was nevertheless not prevented from rendering a verdict in favor of plaintiff if it further found that the resulting assault and battery on plaintiff by defendant was accompanied by greater force than was reasonably necessary for the purpose of self-defense. The court held that the instruction was based on a misconception of the law because if excessive violence and unnecessary force is used in repelling an assault, one becomes liable as a trespasser and subject to an action for assault and battery. In determining whether the particular means used is or is not excessive, the amount of force exerted, the means or instrument by which it is applied, the manner or method of applying it, and the circumstances under which it is applied are all factors to be considered (17 Cal. App. 2d 738, 745) .

[c] Reasonable Belief of Danger Required

The facts of Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1942) 54 Cal. App. 2d 782, 130 P.2d 1 (Lowry I) , are the same as those in Lowry v. Standard Oil Co. (1944) 63 Cal. App. 2d 1, 146 P.2d 57 (Lowry II) , which is discussed in § 21.20[3][a]. The plaintiff obtained judgment against defendant, and the court of appeal reversed, in part, because of erroneous jury instructions given by the trial court. The instructions amounted to a pronouncement that there could be no justification under any circumstances if the plaintiff was not in fact an actual participant in the holdup out of which the alleged assault arose. The court of appeal noted that the effect of the instruction would be to unduly restrict a person in the exercise of his or her right to defend himself or herself or his or her property, or to apprehend the perpetrator of a felony when as an ordinary, reasonable person, he or she has reasonable cause for believing that a person has committed a felony. The court then held that the test for determining whether a person may act on appearances is whether a reasonable person, situated as defendant was, seeing what he or she saw, and knowing what he or she knew, was justified in believing himself or herself to be in danger (54 Cal. App. 2d 782, 790-791) .

[d] Person Confronted Not Bound to Retreat

McAfee v. Ricker (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 630, 15 Cal. Rptr. 920 , arose out of an assault and battery action filed against a neighbor for his alleged attack on plaintiffs. Plaintiffs claimed that defendant came out on the street where their car was parked and struck both of them several times because they had parked their car in front of defendant's house. Defendant claimed that he was acting in self-defense because one of the plaintiffs had taken off his jacket and glasses and was gesturing in a threatening manner with his fists clenched, seeking and inviting combat with defendant. Defendant appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiffs.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, stating that from the evidence the trial court had a right to believe that defendant had knocked plaintiffs down on two occasions without sufficient justification or provocation and without either plaintiff turning a hand indicating a fist fight with defendant; therefore, the continuance of the assault was unnecessary, and accordingly, defendant exceeded the right of self-defense. The court then stated in dicta that a person confronted or attacked is not bound to retreat but is entitled to stand and defend himself or herself and act reasonably under the circumstances as they may appear to him or her (195 Cal. App. 2d 630, 635) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.41

§ 21.41 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Defense of Third Person Who Was Not Relative, Household Member, or Guest

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED IN DEFENSE OF A THIRD PERSON.

Defense of Third Person. If one goes to the assistance of another being assaulted by a third person, and uses no more force than necessary to prevent the assault, he or she is acting within his or her legal right in preventing the commission of a public offense (Ward v. De Martini (1930) 108 Cal. App. 745, 748, 292 P 192).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery when plaintiff acted in defense of a third person. The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised by defendant in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defense of a third person. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant acted in defense of a third person to prevent the commission of a public offense.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defense of Third Person

Ward v. De Martini (1930) 108 Cal. App. 745, 292 P 192 , arose out of an action for assault and battery filed against defendant for his alleged attack on plaintiff, which took place during an altercation between defendant and a third person. Plaintiff had attempted to separate defendant and the third person because defendant, who was the larger man, was beating the third person with his fists. Defendant claimed that there was no evidence that an assault was being committed and therefore, plaintiff was not justified in intervening. Defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, stating that if one goes to the assistance of a third person being assaulted by another, and uses no more force than necessary to prevent the assault, he or she is acting within his or her legal right in preventing commission of a public offense. The court then held that there was sufficient evidence to show that an offense was being committed by defendant at the time plaintiff intervened (108 Cal. App. 745, 748-749) .

139 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.42

§ 21.42 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Acted in Defense of His or Her Property and/or Property of Relative, Household Member, or Guest [Civ. Code § 50]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACTED IN DEFENSE OF _____ [HIS/HER PROPERTY and/or THE PROPERTY OF A _____ (RELATIVE and/or HOUSEHOLD MEMBER and/or GUEST)].

A. Scope of Privilege. Any necessary force may be used to protect from wrongful injury the property of oneself, or of a wife, husband, child, parent, or other relative, or member of one's family or of a ward, servant, master, or guest (Civ. Code § 50).

B. Force Must Be Reasonable. The degree of force that may be used by a person in defense of his or her property must be limited to such force as would have appeared to be necessary to a reasonable person in all of the circumstances, knowing what the defendant knew, and facing the facts that presented themselves at the time to the defendant (Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for an assault and battery on plaintiff when defendant acted in defense of his or her property or the property of a relative, household member, or guest. The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of defense of property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that defendant was acting in defense of his or her property, or the property of a relative, household member, or guest.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Force Must Be Reasonable

In Boyer v. Waples (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 24 Cal. Rptr. 192 , an action for assault and battery, plaintiffs sued for injuries that they sustained while trespassing at night on the home property of defendant. Defendant, allegedly acting in defense of his family and his home, fired shots from a.22 rifle, three of which took effect in each of plaintiffs. Plaintiffs had indulged in a long series of acts of misconduct toward defendant and his family and on the night in question approached defendant's house, despite several warning shots fired by defendant, carrying an object that defendant thought was dynamite. Plaintiffs appealed from a judgment in favor of defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, ruling that the degree of force that may be used by a person in defense of himself or herself, his or her family, or his or her property must be limited to such force as would have appeared to be necessary to a reasonable person in all of the circumstances, knowing what defendant knew, and facing the facts that presented themselves at the time to defendant (206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 727) . The court of appeal then held that the trial court had substantial evidence before it on which to base the finding that defendant justifiably acted in defense of his family and his home and that the force employed by him was not excessive (206 Cal. App. 2d 725, 730) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.43

§ 21.43 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Defendant Had Right to Eject Plaintiff Because He or She Was a Trespasser

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE PLAINTIFF WAS A TRESPASSER AND DEFENDANT, THEREFORE, HAD A RIGHT TO FORCIBLY EJECT HIM/HER.

A. Right to Eject Trespasser. An owner has the right to forcibly eject trespassers, and if the force used is not excessive, the trespasser has no personal action against the owner (MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 389, 74 P.2d 276).

[Optional] B. Prior Warning Not Required to Eject Felonious Trespasser. In the case of a felonious trespasser, defendant has a right as a reasonably prudent person to assume that if he or she gave any warning, he or she would have to pay for his or her charity with his or her own life or to his or her great bodily harm (Nakashima v. Takase (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 39, 46 P.2d 1020).

[Optional] C. Second Warning Not Required. A trespasser does not have to be given more than one notice or request or order; if plaintiff has been ordered to remain away from the premises on a prior occasion, it is not a requirement that on reentry he or she should again be ordered to leave (Phelps v. Arnold (1931) 112 Cal. App. 518, 524, 297 P 31).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant is liable for assault and battery when plaintiff was a trespasser on defendant's property. These points and authorities may also be used to support the contentions that a prior warning is not required to eject a felonious trespasser [optional Paragraph B] or that a second warning is not required [optional Paragraph C].

The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to oppose the issue of defense of property or ejectment of a trespasser. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that plaintiff was a trespasser on defendant's property.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Eject Trespasser

Plaintiff in MacLeod v. Fox W. Coast Theatres Corp. (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 383, 74 P.2d 276 , filed an action against defendant for forcibly ejecting plaintiff from the lobby of defendant's theatre. Defendant had agreed with a film corporation to hold a preshowing of a certain film. Part of the agreement was that the audience to this preshowing be restricted to members of the press and a limited number of the film corporation's employees. Contrary to this agreement, an employee of the film corporation invited plaintiff, then a radio announcer for a rival motion picture producer, to attend the preshowing. When plaintiff tried to attend the preshowing, he was ejected from the theatre lobby by police officers, after being told several times that he would not be allowed admission into the theatre. Defendant appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiff.

The Supreme Court stated that an owner has the right to forcibly eject trespassers, and if the force used is not excessive, the trespasser has no personal action against the owner (10 Cal. 2d 383, 389) . The Court then held that in ejecting plaintiff from the theatre, neither excessive force nor more force than reasonably necessary was exerted, and plaintiff thus had no cause of action against defendants (10 Cal. 2d 383, 388) .

[b] Prior Warning Not Required to Eject Felonious Trespasser

In Nakashima v. Takase (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 46 P.2d 1020 , plaintiff filed an action against defendant for allegedly shooting plaintiff's son, which resulted in his death. The deceased was allegedly shot by defendant after he and a third person had burglarized defendant's business at night and were apparently in the act of committing a theft. Earlier on the day in question defendant had noticed that the glass surrounding the lock in the door to his business had been cut but not removed. After contacting the police, he returned to his business and waited in the dark with a gun. When deceased and the third person broke into defendant's business and approached the area where he was standing, defendant allegedly fired one shot that hit deceased and later resulted in his death. Defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal held that when two people feloniously break into the premises of another, the person in rightful possession is not called on to give any warning to prevent another felony, such as theft of property, when, as a reasonably prudent person, he or she is justified in concluding from the circumstances of the entry that the felons have not only already committed one crime, burglary, but are about to commit another, theft, both with force and violence. In this case, there was force and violence used in the act of breaking in, and defendant, as a reasonable person, had a right to assume that the two burglars were armed (although evidence in this case showed that they were not), and that, if interfered with, they would use further force and violence to consummate the theft they had planned or to make good their escape. Under such circumstances, defendant had a right as a reasonably prudent person to assume that if he gave any warning, he would have to pay for his charity with his own life or to his great bodily harm (8 Cal. App. 2d 35, 38-39) .

[c] Second Warning Not Required

Phelps v. Arnold (1931) 112 Cal. App. 518, 297 P 31 , concerned an action for assault and battery against defendants for forcibly ejecting plaintiff from defendants' home and property. Prior to the occasion of the ejectment, a feud had arisen between plaintiff and defendants that resulted in defendants ordering plaintiff to remain away from their home and property. Despite this order, plaintiff entered defendants' property for the purpose of serving them with a demand letter. During the presentation of this letter, plaintiff alleged that defendants forcibly ejected her from their property and that such forcible ejectment constituted an assault and battery. Defendants appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, ruling that a trespasser does not have to be given more than one notice, request, or order. After an unfriendly feeling has developed, culminating in a quarrel and an encounter, and plaintiff has then been ordered to remain away from the premises, it is not a requirement that on reentry he or she should again be ordered to leave, it being apparent that his or her entry was hostile and in defiance of the former order (112 Cal. App. 518, 524) .

141 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.44

§ 21.44 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Battery Action Is Not Proper When Purpose of Physician's Statement Inducing Plaintiff's Consent Was Therapeutic

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT IS NOT LIABLE FOR ASSAULT AND BATTERY BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT INDUCING PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT TO TREATMENT HAD AS ITS ESSENTIAL CHARACTER A THERAPEUTIC PURPOSE.

Essential Character of Action Was Therapeutic. If the essential character of a statement made by a physician to induce acceptance of treatment is therapeutic, an action for battery is not proper, even if the particular therapy was misapplied because of negligence or deception (Freedman v. Superior Court (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 734, 738-739, 263 Cal. Rptr. 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to plaintiff's contention that defendant committed a battery by inducing plaintiff's acceptance of an improper therapy. The argument supported by this memorandum may be raised in an action for damages for assault and battery.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue of therapeutic purpose. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include a description of the act in question and a discussion of any facts showing that the essential character of defendant's action was therapeutic.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Essential Character of Action Was Therapeutic

In Freedman v. Superior Court (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 734, 263 Cal. Rptr. 1 , plaintiff's battery action against her doctor was based on damages from complications arising from his prescribing a drug for her while she was in labor. Plaintiff claimed that the doctor told her the drug's purpose was to avoid infection while she was in labor but that the drug's actual purpose was to induce labor, and that its use caused augmentation of labor contractions, resulting in the necessity of pain medication and anesthesia, and ultimately, the need for a caesarian section. The trial court granted a demurrer, stating that although a case in fraud might have been proper, the therapeutic nature of the doctor's actions precluded a battery cause of action. Plaintiff applied for an extraordinary writ.

The court of appeal denied the petition, concluding that the trial court decision was correct. The court stated that a cause of action for battery was not proper since the intended purpose of a prescribed drug is therapeutic, even if it is improperly prescribed. Thus, the essential character of defendant's act was therapeutic. The court stated that the proper pleading of such a case should be restricted to negligence, or possibly, under appropriate facts, deceit (214 Cal. App. 3d 734, 737-741) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.45

§ 21.45 Opposing Contention That Defendant Is Liable for Assault and Battery--Battery Action Against Police Officer Based on Excessive Force in Effecting Arrest Precluded if Plaintiff Has Valid Conviction for Resisting or Obstructing Police Officer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT PURSUE AN ASSAULT AND BATTERY CLAIM AGAINST DEFENDANT BASED ON DEFENDANT'S ALLEGED USE OF EXCESSIVE FORCE IN EFFECTING THE ARREST OF PLAINTIFF BECAUSE PLAINTIFF WAS PREVIOUSLY CONVICTED OF RESISTING OR OBSTRUCTING A POLICE OFFICER BASED ON THE SAME EVENTS AND THAT CONVICTION HAS NOT BEEN INVALIDATED THROUGH POSTCONVICTION RELIEF.

Plaintiff Has Valid Conviction for Resisting or Obstructing Police Officer. A plaintiff may not pursue state-law tort claims against a police officer based on the conduct of the officer in effecting the plaintiff's arrest, including claims for assault and battery, if the plaintiff was convicted of resisting or obstructing a police officer, based on the same events, and the plaintiff has not previously been granted postconviction relief that invalidates that conviction (Susag v. City of Lake Forest (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1413, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a police officer may be sued for assault and battery based on the use of excessive force in effecting an arrest. The grounds for the opposition are that the plaintiff's common law tort claims are precluded because the plaintiff was previously convicted for resisting or obstructing a police officer, based on the same arrest, and that conviction has not been invalidated through postconviction relief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the plaintiff was previously convicted for resisting or obstructing a police officer based on the same arrest and that this conviction has not been invalidated through postconviction relief.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which these points are raised. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Has Valid Conviction for Resisting or Obstructing Police Officer

In Susag v. City of Lake Forest (2002) 94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 269 , the plaintiff was arrested after he tried to prevent a deputy sheriff from towing a vehicle with an expired registration while it was parked in front of an auto body shop owned by the plaintiff's family. The plaintiff attempted to drive away in the vehicle, resisted orders to get out of the car, cursed at the deputy, and physically resisted. The plaintiff eventually got out of the car and went inside the auto body shop, where he was joined by his father and brother. Following the arrival of nine other deputies at the scene and an altercation with the plaintiff's father, the plaintiff was finally handcuffed and taken away. After a jury trial, the plaintiff was convicted of the misdemeanor charge of resisting or obstructing a peace officer. The plaintiff and his father then brought a civil action against the 10 deputies and the relevant public entities for violation of their civil rights, assault and battery and use of excessive force, false imprisonment, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. The defendants successfully moved for summary judgment against the plaintiff on the ground that his valid criminal conviction precluded his action as a matter of law. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first noted that under United States Supreme Court precedent, in order to pursue a federal civil rights action to recover damages for allegedly unconstitutional conviction or imprisonment, or for other harm caused by actions whose unlawfulness would render a conviction or sentence invalid, a plaintiff must prove that the conviction or sentence has been invalidated through postconviction relief. Because he failed to prove that the conviction for resisting or obstructing a police officer had been invalidated, the court held that the plaintiff's civil rights action was precluded (94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1408-1410) . Applying the same rationale, the court then held that the plaintiff could not pursue his state law tort claims based on the conduct of the officers in effecting the plaintiff's arrest, including claims for assault and battery and false imprisonment, if the plaintiff's criminal conviction had not previously been invalidated through postconviction relief. Because the earlier criminal conviction necessarily included a determination that the deputies' conduct in effecting the arrest was reasonable, and that conviction had not been invalidated, the plaintiff's state law claims were barred (94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1413) . In justifying this conclusion, the court noted that its decision was consistent with the rule under California case law that as a prerequisite to an action for attorney malpractice against a criminal defense attorney, the plaintiff must prove actual innocence of the underlying criminal charges, and that if the plaintiff was convicted in the underlying criminal proceeding, the plaintiff must obtain reversal or other exoneration by postconviction relief to establish actual innocence (94 Cal. App. 4th 1401, 1411-1412) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 21 ASSAULT AND BATTERY
PART II. FORMS

2-21 California Points & Authorities § 21.46

§ 21.46 Opposing Contention That Defendant is Liable for Battery--Teacher Not Liable for Reasonable Contact With Students Not Intended to Harm

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT TEACHER MAY NOT BE HELD LIABLE FOR BATTERY WHEN PHYSICAL CONTACT WITH STUDENT WAS REASONABLE, EVEN IF MADE WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF THE STUDENT, AND DEFENDANT HAD NO INTENT TO HARM.

Teacher Lacked Intent to Harm Student. To hold a teacher liable for battery of a student, the plaintiff must prove that the contact with the student was unreasonable and the teacher intended to harm the student (Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 872-876, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 454).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a school teacher may be liable for battery when making physical contact with a student that is reasonable under the circumstances, in the absence of proof that the teacher intended to harm the student.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the issue of defendant's liability arises, or combined with other forms in this chapter, as appropriate. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include those facts explaining and justifying the defendant teacher's physical contact with the student and argue that the contact was made without an intent to harm the student.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Teacher Lacked Intent to Harm Student

In Austin B. v. Escondido Union School Dist. (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 57 Cal. Rptr. 3d 454 , plaintiffs were two autistic children who sued their special education preschool instructor, the school, and several other school employees. Plaintiffs sued for battery and related causes of action based on abusive conduct allegedly committed by the instructor at school. Plaintiffs presented evidence suggesting that the instructor was using excessive force when responding to his students' behavior, although defendant instructor testified that his conduct was appropriate and denied harming or inflicting pain on any student. At trial, the jury found for the defendants and awarded attorneys' fees and costs to defendants. Plaintiffs appealed, arguing in part that the trial court erred when instructing the jury that the plaintiffs were required to prove that the instructor intended to harm the children and that his touching was unreasonable.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the trial court did not err in requiring plaintiffs to prove that the instructor intended to harm the children when he touched them, as well as show that the touching was unreasonable. The court noted that under both the Restatement (Second) of Torts and standard jury instructions approved by the Judicial Counsel for use in California, intent to cause a harmful or offensive contact was an element of a cause of action for battery (149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 872) . The court also stressed that a school teacher stands in loco parentis to the students. The court noted that teaching autistic children by touching and guiding them is not unlawful, and students, by virtue of their attendance at a school, consent to some amount of touching as necessary to control and protect them and other students. Despite plaintiffs' claim that the instructor's conduct was unlawful as a matter of law, the evidence as to whether the instructor's conduct was appropriate under the circumstances was hotly disputed at trial, and plaintiffs failed to request a specific finding by the jury that the instructor's conduct was unlawful (149 Cal. App. 4th 860, 873-876) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

2-22 California Points & Authorities 22.syn

§ 22.syn Synopsis to Chapter 22: ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS

§ 22.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 22.02 Remedies for Improper Expulsion or Exclusion

§ 22.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 22.04-22.19 [Reserved]

§ 22.20 Supporting Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Not Based on Violation of Rules or Objects of Association

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Review of Grounds

[b] Court Intervention to Protect Member's Property Interests

[c] Membership Itself Protected

[d] Member's Expulsion Must Be Based on Violation of Association's Rules or Objects

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Membership Itself Protected

§ 22.21 Supporting Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Based on Rule Which Is Unreasonable, Contrary to Public Policy, or Substantively Capricious

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rule and Its Interpretation Must Be Reasonable

[b] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Contrary to Public Policy

[c] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Substantively Capricious

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rule and Its Interpretation Must Be Reasonable

[b] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Contrary to Public Policy

§ 22.22 Supporting Contention That Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Exclusion Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Economic Advantages as Prerequisite for Judicial Intervention

[b] Exclusion Cannot Be Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

[c] Association's Standards for Admission Cannot Be Unreasonably Susceptible of Arbitrary or Discriminatory Application

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusion Cannot Be Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

[b] Association's Standards for Admission Cannot Be Unreasonably Susceptible of Arbitrary or Discriminatory Application

§ 22.23 Supporting Contention That Expulsion or Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Procedure Unfair

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fair Procedure Required

[b] Fair Procedure Includes Notice and an Opportunity to Defend Oneself

[c] Association's Adjudicators Must Be Impartial

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fair Procedure Required

[b] Fair Procedure Includes Notice and an Opportunity to Defend Oneself

[c] Association's Adjudicators Must Be Impartial

§ 22.24 Supporting Contention That Discipline by Association Less Than Expulsion or Exclusion Was Improper--Procedure Unfair

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Organization With Public Stature May Not Discipline Member Without Fair Proceeding

[b] Public Censure as Affecting Substantial Property, Contract, or Other Economic Rights

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Organization With Public Stature May Not Discipline Member Without Fair Proceeding

§ 22.25 Supporting Contention That an Action for Damages Is Proper--Intentional Interference With Right to Pursue Profession--Lack of Sufficient Justification

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Alternate Action for Restraint of Trade

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Damages Lies

[b] Determining Sufficient Justification

§ 22.26 Supporting Contention That Court Can Review the Association's Decision to Expel or Exclude Person From Membership--Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Excused

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Internal Remedies Subject to Certain Exceptions

[b] Association's Remedies Inadequate or Unavailable

[c] Association Violated Own Rules for Review

[d] Invocation of Remedies Would Prove Futile

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Remedies Inadequate or Unavailable

§ 22.27 Supporting Contention That Action Was Not Protected by Freedom of Association

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Only Intimate or Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

[b] Commercial Associations Are Not Constitutionally Protected

§ 22.28 Opposing Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Expulsion for Violating Rules of Association

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Association's Rules Are Controlling

[b] Expulsion Proper for Violating Rules

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Rules Control

§ 22.29 Opposing Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Expulsion Based on Rule Which Is Reasonable and Reasonably Interpreted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Rules Reasonably Construed Will Be Upheld

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable Rules Reasonably Construed Will Be Upheld

§ 22.30 Opposing Contention That Court Can Review Association's Decision to Exclude Person From Membership--Substantial Economic Interests Not Affected

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Practice or Gain Specialist Recognition Must Be Affected

§ 22.31 Opposing Contention That Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Associations Permitted to Make Rules and Regulations Governing Admission

[b] Court Will Uphold Exclusion When Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Will Uphold Exclusion When Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

§ 22.32 Opposing Contention That Expulsion or Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Procedure Followed Was Fair

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Procedure Fair

[b] Formal Procedures Not Required

§ 22.33 Opposing Contention That an Action for Damages Is Proper--Intentional Interference With Right to Pursue Profession--Sufficient Justification

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Association's Action Justified

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Action Justified

§ 22.34 Opposing Contention That Court Can Review the Association's Decision to Expel or Exclude Person From Membership--Internal Remedies Not Exhausted

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Required

§ 22.35 Opposing Contention That Association May Be Required to Divulge the Names of Its Members

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intimate Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

[b] Constitutional Protection Extends to Nondisclosure of Membership List

[c] Forced Disclosure Requires Compelling State Interest

§ 22.36 Opposing Contention that Association May Be Required to Accept Individual As Member

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

[b] Only Compelling State Interest that Is Unrelated to Context and Unachievable Through Less Restrictive Means Justifies Infringement on Expressive Associations

[c] Compelling State Interest Cannot Justify Severe Intrusion on Freedom of Expressive Association

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.01

§ 22.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities relating to actions challenging membership decisions of an association. It contains forms of points and authorities for use in supporting [see §§ 22.20 -22.23] and opposing [see §§ 22.28, 22.29, 22.31, and 22.32] the contention that expulsion or exclusion from membership in an association was improper, and for use in supporting [see § 22.25] and opposing [see § 22.33] an action for damages from the association's intentional interference with the member's or applicant's right to pursue a profession. It contains forms supporting [see § 22.26] and opposing [see §§ 22.30 and 22.34] the court's right to review the association's decision, as well as a form supporting the contention that an action is not protected by the constitutional right of freedom of association [see § 22.27]. Finally, this chapter contains a form opposing the contention that an association may be required to divulge the names of its members [see § 22.35] and a form opposing the contention that an association may be required to accept certain members [see § 22.36].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsConstitutional LawBill of RightsFundamental FreedomsFreedom of Association

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.02

§ 22.02 Remedies for Improper Expulsion or Exclusion

A party who has been improperly excluded or expelled from membership in an association or society has a number of possible judicial remedies available to him or her. First, he or she may seek to compel admission or reinstatement to membership in the association by traditional mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 [see generally Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition]. If the law requires that the association grant the member or applicant an evidentiary hearing, the association's final administrative decision may be reviewed by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 [see generally Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law]. Alternatively, the applicant or member may seek injunctive relief against the association [see generally Ch. 116, Injunctions]. Although no appellate decision has explicitly addressed the question of when relief should be sought by injunction rather than mandate, it appears that injunctive relief is generally sought to prevent a threatened expulsion or exclusion [see, e.g., Riviello v. Journeymen Barbers etc. Union (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 123, 124, 240 P.2d 361] . Mandate, on the other hand, is sought after the expulsion or exclusion has occurred [see, e.g., Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 311, 17 P. 217] . In addition to or in lieu of seeking admission or reinstatement, an aggrieved applicant or member may bring an action for damages for intentional interference with the right to pursue a profession [see, e.g., Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 810, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568] . The points and authorities set out in the forms in this chapter may be used in any of the above types of proceedings.

A person excluded or expelled from membership in an unincorporated membership on a basis prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act [Civ. Code § 51] may also bring an action for damages and injunctive relief under that Act [see, e.g., Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776] . For points and authorities for use in actions under the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.03

§ 22.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of and forms for use in actions involving associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs . For discussion of injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions . For discussion of mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion of judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

For discussion of liability for interference with contractual and other business relationships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[2] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions in this set. For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to judicial review of administrative decisions by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to intentional interference with business relationships generally, see Ch. 122, Interference .

For points and authorities for use in an action under the Unruh Civil Rights Act to challenge an association's allegedly discriminatory membership decisions, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act .

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to conspiracy to interfere with a trade or business, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy .

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum of points or authorities or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a completememorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs at the beginning of Volume 1.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawUnincorporated AssociationsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceBusiness RelationshipsGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsCommercial InterferenceEmployment RelationshipsGeneral Overview

148 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-22 California Points & Authorities §§ 22.04-22.19

[Reserved]

§§ 22.04[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.20

§ 22.20 Supporting Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Not Based on Violation of Rules or Objects of Association

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXPULSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS IMPROPER BECAUSE EXPULSION WAS NOT BASED ON THE MEMBER'S VIOLATION OF THE ASSOCIATION'S RULES, WHICH WERE SUBSCRIBED OR ASSENTED TO BY THE MEMBERS AND THAT PROVIDE FOR EXPULSION FOR SUCH VIOLATION, OR ON CONDUCT THAT VIOLATED THE OBJECTS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

A. Court Review of Grounds. In the matter of expulsion, an association acts in a quasi-judicial character, and so far as it confines itself to the exercise of the powers vested in it, and in good faith pursues the methods prescribed by its laws, such laws not being in violation of the laws of the land or any inalienable right of the member, its sentence is conclusive. The courts will, however, decide whether the ground for expulsion is well taken (Otto v. Tailors' P & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 314, 17 P 217).

B. Court Intervention to Protect Member's Property Interests. Courts will interfere with an association's decisions for the purpose of protecting property rights of its members (Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 313, 17 P 217).

C. Membership Itself Protected. Membership in an association, with its associated privileges, once attained, is a valuable interest which cannot be arbitrarily withdrawn (Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 273, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32).

D. Member's Expulsion Must Be Based on Violation of Association's Rules or Objects. The right of expulsion from an association must be based and upheld on either of two grounds: (1) a violation of the established rules of the association that have been subscribed or assented to by the members and that provide expulsion for such violation; or (2) conduct that clearly violates the fundamental objects of the association, which, if persisted in and allowed, would thwart those objects or bring the association into disrepute (Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 314, 17 P 217).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that expulsion from membership in an association was improper because expulsion was not based on the member's violation of the association's rules, which were subscribed to by the members and that provide for expulsion for such violation, or on conduct that violated the objects of the association.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 to seek reinstatement to membership in the association. If the law required the association to grant the member an administrative trial, the member may petition the court for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review the administrative decision and order reinstatement. The argument can also be used when a member is seeking an injunction against the association. Although the cases do not specify when to seek an injunction rather than a writ of mandate, it appears that an injunction rather than writ of mandate, it appears that an injunction is sought prior to the actual expulsion as a prohibitive measure [see, e.g., Riviello v. Journeymen Barbers etc. Union (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 123, 124, 240 P.2d 361] . A writ of mandate would be sought once expulsion had been completed [see, e.g., Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 311, 17 P 217] . This argument may also be used to support the contention that damages should be awarded for improper expulsion [see, e.g., Smetherham v. Laundry Workers' Union (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 135, 111 P.2d 948] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member's expulsion was improper because it was not based on violation of the rules or objects of the association. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate court.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the association wrongfully expelled the member, counsel should show that the member did not violate any rules or objects of the association or, if the member did violate a rule of the association, that either the rule was not assented to by the members or the penalty proscribed for violation of the rule did not include expulsion.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to actions involving associations and clubs, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions in that set. For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 22.28 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Review of Grounds

In Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 17 P. 217 , an association (a union) expelled one of its members for working for a firm which the association had called a strike against. The rules of the association provided that members working for parties against whom a strike was declared were subject to a fine. The expelled member petitioned the superior court for a writ of mandate compelling the association to reinstate him to membership. The superior court granted the writ. The association appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the decision.

The Court held that the expulsion was improper because petitioner had violated an association rule for which the only penalty prescribed was a fine. In so finding, the Court stated that the courts would decide whether the ground for expulsion on which the association based its decision was well taken (75 Cal. 308, 314) .

[b] Court Intervention to Protect Member's Property Interests

The facts and procedural background of Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 17 P. 217 , are discussed in § 22.20[3][a]. In Otto, the superior court granted petitioner a writ of mandate ordering his reinstatement to membership in the society. The society appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the decision. The Court stated that it would interfere with an association's decision to expel a member for the purpose of protecting property rights of the members (75 Cal. 308, 313) . In this case, the Court found that plaintiff, as a member of the associationin good standing who had paid all his dues and assessments and who was thereby entitled to participate in a benefit feature of the association, had a property right involved (75 Cal. 308, 314) . The Court found that these rights were violated when the member was expelled and that the court could therefore interfere with the association's decision (75 Cal. 308, 316) .

[c] Membership Itself Protected

Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32 , was an action by a physician for damages and injunctive relief against the chief of surgery and others at the hospital at which he was a resident. Plaintiff was encouraged by defendants to join the residency program at the hospital. One month after he was rehired to the residency program for the second year, plaintiff was told that his residency would be terminated in six months. Because plaintiff was given no reasons for the hospital's decision and was afforded neither a hearing nor opportunity to respond, he contended that his dismissal did not comport with the common law right of fair procedure. The trial court sustained defendant hospital's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend and dismissed the action. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of dismissal and remanded with directions to overrule the demurrer.

The Court held that plaintiff had stated a valid claim for wrongful denial of the common law right of fair procedure and was entitled to judicial protection from arbitrary exclusion because of his membership status. The Court explained that the common law protection against arbitrary expulsion was of broader application than that against arbitrary exclusion and had been extended not only to labor unions and professional and trade organizations but to mutual benefit societies and other fraternal and social groups (20 Cal. 3d 267, 272-273) . It found that the underlying theme of the decisions granting protection from arbitrary expulsion was that membership, with its associated privileges, once attained, was a valuable interest which could not be arbitrarily withdrawn (20 Cal. 3d 267, 273) . Therefore, the Court held that as a member or participant in the residency program, plaintiff was entitled to fair-procedure protection prior to his dismissal from the residency program (20 Cal. 3d 267, 275) .

In Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) , plaintiff sued the Boy Scouts for unfair procedure and violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) after he was expelled from the Boy Scouts and rejected as a "Scouter" on the basis of his status as a homosexual. The court of appeal held that plaintiff stated a cause of action against the organization under both theories. The issue arose as to whether the fair procedure cause of action was one for expulsion from membership already attained or exclusion from becoming a member. The court stated that if the case involves expulsion, the determination of whether a cause of action is stated turns on the application of the broader principle applicable to an important benefit or privilege that has already been conferred, (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 722 , citing Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 273, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32 (discussed in § 22.20[3][c]) . The court concluded that the case did involve expulsion and found that an expulsion from a private association under the circumstances before it was both procedurally unfair and substantively unreasonable (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 723) . Counsel should note that subsequently the California Supreme Court held that the Boy Scouts is not a "business establishment" subject to the Unruh Act for the purposes of its membership decisions, but is subject to the Unruh Act to the extent it engages in business transactions with nonmembers (17 Cal. 4th 670, 696-700) . For discussion, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act .

[d] Member's Expulsion Must Be Based on Violation of Association's Rules or Objects

The facts and procedural background of Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 17 P. 217 , are discussed in § 22.20[3][a]. In Otto, the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's decision to grant a writ of mandate ordering plaintiff's reinstatement to membership in the society. The Court found that petitioner's expulsion was improper because the only penalty prescribed in the rules for petitioner's behavior was a fine. The Court held that expulsion from an association must be based and upheld on either of two grounds; (1) a violation of the established rules of the association that have been subscribed or assented to by the members and that provide expulsion for such violation; or (2) conduct that clearly violates the fundamental objects of the association, which, if persisted in and allowed, would thwart those objects or bring the association into disrepute (75 Cal. 308, 314) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Membership Itself Protected

Dingwall v. Amalgamated Asso. (1906) 4 Cal. App. 565, 88 P. 597 , was a proceeding in mandamus for an order commanding plaintiff's reinstatement to membership in defendant association. Plaintiff was charged with violating his obligation to the association by holding secret meetings and conspiring against the welfare of the union. He was found guilty of the charges and expelled from the association. The trial court granted plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's decision.

The court of appeal stated that membership in a social or beneficial association was a personal right and that the holder of the right was entitled to be protected in its enjoyment against any unauthorized act of the association. The court said that the right of a member to retain his or her membership was subject to the termsand conditions contained in the constitution articles, bylaws, and rules as may be adopted by the members, and that whenever it was sought to deprive a person of membership, the person has the right to insist upon a strict observance of the rules (4 Cal. App. 565, 569) . The court found that the rules that plaintiff had violated did not provide expulsion as a penalty. Therefore, it held that the action of the defendant in expelling plaintiff was without authority (4 Cal. App. 565, 570) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.21

§ 22.21 Supporting Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Based on Rule Which Is Unreasonable, Contrary to Public Policy, or Substantively Capricious

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXPULSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS IMPROPER BECAUSE EXPULSION WAS BASED ON [AN INTERPRETATION OF] A RULE WHICH IS _____ [UNREASONABLE and/or CONTRARY TO PUBLIC POLICY and/or SUBSTANTIVELY CAPRICIOUS].

A. Court Review of Grounds. [See § 22.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Court Intervention to Protect Member's Property Interests. [See § 22.20, Paragraph B.]

C. Membership Itself Protected. [See § 22.20, Paragraph C.]

[EITHER]

D. Rule and Its Interpretation Must Be Reasonable. An association's rules must be reasonable, and it must be presumed that the association intended its rules to be reasonably construed. When one construction would make a rule unusual or extraordinary, courts are to disregard such construction if the rule may reasonably be subject to a construction which is fair and just (see Smetherham v. Laundry Workers' Union (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 138, 111 P.2d 948).

[AND/OR]

E. Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Contrary to Public Policy. An association's rule that is contrary to public policy will not stand. If the rule can be interpreted consistently with public policy, the court will do so (see Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 720-721, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) ; Bernstein v. Alameda etc. Med. Assn. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 241, 246-247, 293 P.2d 862).

[AND/OR]

F. Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Substantively Capricious. An expulsion from membership in an association cannot rest on a rule that is substantively capricious (Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 720-721, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that expulsion from membership in an association was improper because the rule on which the member's expulsion was based was unreasonable, contrary to public policy, or substantively capricious.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 to seek reinstatement to membership in the association. If the law required the association to grant the member an administrative trial, the member may petition the court for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review the administrative decision and order reinstatement. The argument may also be used when a member is seeking an injunction against the association. Although the cases do not specify when to seek an injunction rather than a writ of mandate, it appears that an injunction is sought prior to the actual expulsion as a prohibitive measure [see, e.g., Riviello v. Journeymen Barbers etc. Union (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 123, 124, 240 P.2d 361] . A writ of mandate would be sought once expulsion had been completed [see, e.g., Otto v. Tailors' P. & B. Union (1888) 75 Cal. 308, 311, 17 P. 217] . This argument may also be used to support the contention that damages should be awarded for improper expulsion [see, e.g., Smetherham v. Laundry Workers' Union (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 135, 111 P.2d 948] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member's expulsion was improper because the rule on which expulsion was based was unreasonable, contrary to public policy, or substantively capricious. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts and the case and the points of law stated. If the rule on which expulsion was based is unambiguous, counsel should demonstrate that it is unreasonable, contrary to public policy, substantively capricious, or that the association attempted to change its meaning by unreasonably construing the provision. If the rule is ambiguous, counsel should show that the association has interpreted it in a manner that is unreasonable, contrary to public policy, or substantively capricious.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions . For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition .

For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474, Availability of Judicial Review of Agency Decisions et seq.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 22.29 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rule and Its Interpretation Must Be Reasonable

Smetherham v. Laundry Workers' Union (1941) 44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 111 P.2d 948 , was a proceeding in mandamus seeking reinstatement to membership in defendant association. Plaintiff was expelled for assaulting another member of the union. Her expulsion was based on a bylaw that stated that no member could injure the interests of another member by undermining him or her in wages or in any other willful manner, by which "the interests of the other may be placed in jeopardy." The trial court granted plaintiff's petition for the writ of mandate. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court found that the union's bylaw did not purport to regulate the personal conduct of members of the union which did not affect their interests in relation to the organization or their employment. Therefore, the court held that plaintiff was wrongfully expelled (44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 136) . It said that to hold otherwise, one must read into the bylaw something beyond a reasonable and proper construction. The court held that when one construction would make a contract unusual or extraordinary, courts are to disregard that construction if the contract may reasonably be subject to a construction which is fair and just (44 Cal. App. 2d 131, 138) .

[b] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Contrary to Public Policy

Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) , was an action by a boy who was expelled from the Boy Scouts because he was a homosexual. Plaintiff brought causes of action based on unfair procedure and violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) against the organization. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that plaintiff had stated a cause of action against the organization under both theories. Regarding plaintiff's cause of action for denial of the right to fair procedure, the court stated that a two-step analysis must be made. First, the court must determine whether the procedure was fair and afforded the expelled person adequate notice of the charges and a reasonable opportunity to respond. Second, the court must determine whether or not the expulsion rests on a rule that is substantively capricious or contrary to public policy (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 720-721) . The court held that based on the facts alleged in the case before it, the expulsion of plaintiff was both procedurally unfair and substantively unreasonable because plaintiff was not given adequate notice and reasonable opportunity to be heard and because an expulsion from an association on the basis of a person's homosexual orientation is both capricious and offensive to public policy. The court said that the mere status of homosexuality without more does not connote immorality and that the inhibition of an association member's public and civic rights in this way is contrary to public policy (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 723) . The court stated that before homosexual conduct may lawfully be used as a basis to expel a person from membership in an organization, a connection must be demonstrated between the homosexual conduct and any significant danger of harm to the association resulting from that person's continued membership (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 725) .

Bernstein v. Alameda etc. Med. Assn. (1956) 139 Cal. App. 2d 241, 293 P.2d 862 , was an action by a physician seeking a writ of mandate to restore him to membership in a medical association and for monetary damages for injuries sustained as a result of his expulsion from it. The association based his expulsion on the finding that he had violated seven of the Principles of Medical Ethics adopted by the association. The association contended that plaintiff had violated medical ethics by giving a report to the attorney of the widow of a deceased patient. This report identified the cause of death as industrial injury and criticized the pathological report done at the time of death. The trial court, finding plaintiff guilty of this charge and others, gave judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed as to this charge.

The court found that the physician's report was a privileged publication sinceit was requested by a litigant for use as evidence in a judicial proceeding, that the report was prepared and delivered by the doctor solely for that purpose, and was put to that very use by the litigant (139 Cal. App. 2d 241, 245) . Public policy dictates that publications be privileged to alleviate parties' and witnesses' fears of being subject to slander and libel actions so that the administration of justice would not be hampered or the judicial process throttled. The court held that this policy would ban a medical association bylaw which threatens each member with expulsion if in his or her testimony before a court or other judicial body he or she disparages, by comment or insinuation, another physician (139 Cal. App. 2d 241, 246) . The court, however, found that it was not necessary to ban the bylaw because it could be interpreted consistently with public policy. The court said that since the bylaw did not contain language about the duty of one physician toward another when testifying as a witness in a judicial proceeding, it could be inferred from such silence that the association did not intend to arrogate to itself the state's prerogative of defining the duties of witnesses in judicial proceedings and the proscribing of penalties for the violation of those duties, and therefore, that the physician had not by his actions violated the bylaw (139 Cal. App. 2d 241, 247) .

[c] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Substantively Capricious

Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) , is discussed in § 22.21[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rule and Its Interpretation Must Be Reasonable

Gonzales v. Internat. Asso. of Machinists (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 207, 298 P.2d 92 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel a union to restore membership to plaintiff and to recover damages. Plaintiff, believing that the Grand Lodge's International Representative to the local union had instigated a rejected applicant to physically assault him, filed suit against both for his injuries. The International Representative thereupon filed charges with the local against plaintiff for violation of a provision of the Grand Lodge's constitution which prohibited any member from circulating false or malicious statements about any officer of the association. The penalty for violation of this provision was a fine, expulsion, or both. The local's trial committee tried plaintiff, found him guilty, and recommended his expulsion. The local's constitution required a majority vote by secret ballot to uphold the committee's finding and provided that the membership could substitute another punishment for that recommended by the committee. The constitution itself contained no provision for rescinding a vote but incorporated Robert's Rules which required that a vote be rescinded in the same manner as originally taken. The membership originally voted by secret ballot not to sustain the committee's finding, then rescinded it by a standing vote. The membership then revoted to sustain the finding. Plaintiff appealed this decision to the Grand Lodge's president. The president upheld the membership's action in convicting plaintiff, but changed the penalty from expulsion to a fine and an apology. The trial court granted plaintiff a writ of mandate and damages. The court of appeal affirmed. The court, stating that a clearly erroneous administrative construction of a definite and unambiguous provision of the constitution cannot operate to change its meaning, held that the actions of the president, in interpreting the constitutions to allow the rescission, and change of penalty by him to something other than a fine or expulsion, were not reasonable (142 Cal. App. 2d 207, 216-217) .

Mandracio v. Bartenders Union, Local 41 (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 81, 256 P.2d 927 , was an action to recover damages for loss of wages during the time plaintiff was refused membership by defendant union. Plaintiff was a member of a local bartenders union in San Diego which was affiliated with the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union. The International's constitution provided that local unions shall be compelled to recognize and admit members who travel from one city to another and that members so admitted shall be allowed to participate in all of the work coming under the jurisdiction of the local subject to the rules for employment prevailing in the local accepting the traveler. Plaintiff moved to San Francisco and applied for membership, but he was not admitted due to a policy of the local which restricted admission of travelers until all local members had been placed in jobs. Defendant local contended that this policy was authorized under its president's interpretation of the International constitution. This interpretation allowed local unions to subject travelers to their local work rules. The trial court, finding that the local union was governed by the International Union's constitution and that the action taken by the local with respect to plaintiff's admission was in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, gave judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Court found that the provisions of the constitution were plain and unambiguous and that they clearly require a local union to grant admission to a member from another city who tenders properly authenticated credentials. Therefore, the Court held that denial of membership was improper. The Court further held that if the president interpreted the union's constitution as permitting the procedure followed in this case, then his construction was not a reasonable one, was not binding on the members of the union, and would not be recognized by the courts (41 Cal. 2d 81, 85) .

[b] Rule and Its Interpretation Cannot Be Contrary to Public Policy

Malibou Lake Mountain Club, Ltd. v. Robertson (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 181, 33 Cal. Rptr. 74 , was an action by a club, owning vacation property on which it licensed its members to construct dwellings, to expel one of its members and fordeclaratory relief as to its right to do so. The bylaws of plaintiff association provided that a member's license for dwellings was terminable by forfeiture for failure to pay dues, assessments, and for conduct unbecoming a member. Plaintiff expelled defendant from membership in its association and terminated his license to use the property for conduct unbecoming a member. Plaintiff based this charge on defendant's activities in prosecuting a receivership action against the association. The trial court gave judgment for defendant member. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court held that defendant's conduct was not a legally adequate cause for expulsion from the association. The court based its decision on the fact that by expelling defendant for his participation in the receivership action, the association would be prosecuting the defendant for exercising a legal right. Since this is against public policy, the court held that this particular conduct could not fall within the category of conduct unbecoming a member as prescribed by the bylaws (219 Cal. App. 2d 181, 186) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.22

§ 22.22 Supporting Contention That Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Exclusion Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXCLUSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS IMPROPER BECAUSE THE EXCLUSION DEPRIVED THE APPLICANT OF SUBSTANTIAL ECONOMIC ADVANTAGES AND WAS ARBITRARY, UNREASONABLE, AND CONTRARY TO PUBLIC POLICY.

A. Substantial Economic Advantages as Prerequisite for Judicial Intervention. By showing that exclusion from membership in an association deprives him or her of substantial economic advantages, a person establishes a right to judicial intervention with respect to the denial of his or her application for membership (Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 164-165, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495).

B. Exclusion Cannot Be Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy. An association must not exercise its power to exclude persons from membership in an arbitrary or unreasonable manner, and its decisions cannot be contrary to public policy (James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 731-732, 739, 155 P.2d 329).

[Optional] C. Association's Standards for Admission Cannot Be Unreasonably Susceptible of Arbitrary or Discriminatory Application. An association cannot adopt standards for admission to membership whose terms are unreasonably susceptible of arbitrary or discriminatory application (Miller v. Eisenhower Medical Center (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 614, 627, 166 Cal. Rptr. 826, 614 P.2d 258).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support the contention that exclusion from membership in an association was improper because the exclusion was arbitrary, unreasonable, or contrary to public policy.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 to seek admission to membership in an association. If the law required the association to grant the applicant an administrative trial or hearing, the applicant may raise the argument supported by this form in support of a petition to the court for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review the administrative decision and order admission. The argument may also be used when an applicant is seeking an injunction against the association. Although the cases do not specify when to seek an injunction rather than a writ of mandate, it appears that an injunction is sought prior to the actual denial of the applicant's request for admission as a prohibitive measure [see, e.g., Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 164, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495] . A writ of mandate would be sought once the application had been denied [see, e.g., Miller v. Eisenhower Medical Center (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 614, 618, 166 Cal. Rptr. 826, 614 P.2d 258] . This argument may also be used to support the contention that damages would be awarded for improper exclusion [see, e.g., Directors Guild of America, Inc. v. Superior Court (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 42, 43, 48 Cal. Rptr. 710, 409 P.2d 934] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the applicant's exclusion from the association was improper because the exclusion was arbitrary, unreasonable, or contrary to public policy. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the association has arbitrarily excluded the applicant, counsel may show, for example, that although the applicant was qualified for membership, the association excluded the applicant because of his or her race [see, e.g., James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 736-737, 745, 155 P.2d 329] or because he or she was not a relative of an existing member [see, e.g., Directors Guild of America, Inc. v. Superior Court (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 42, 45, 48 Cal. Rptr. 710, 409 P.2d 934] .

Optional Paragraph C should be used when the standards governing admission to the association are so vague or ambiguous that they pose a danger of being applied arbitrarily or discriminatorily.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions in that set. For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 22.31 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Economic Advantages as Prerequisite for Judicial Intervention

In Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495 , a dentist was denied admission into the American Association of Orthodontists (AAO). Membership, if not absolutely essential, was at least extremely helpful in obtaining certification by the American Board of Orthodontics (ABO). Membership may also have been a prerequisite to attaining membership in certain foundations dedicated to special orthodontic techniques and to being admitted to certain advanced educational programs. The dentist sued to enjoin the AAO from excluding him from membership in the organization. The trial court denied the injunction, but the Supreme Court reversed and remanded the case to the trial court with instructions to issue an injunction compelling the association to set aside the rejection of the dentist's application and to reconsider the application.

The Court held that the doctrine of strict economic necessity as a prerequisite to judicial intervention, established in James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 155 P.2d 329 (discussed in § 22.22[3][b]), did not apply when membership was necessary to achieve the higher financial advantages of a professional specialization (1 Cal. 3d 160, 166) . The Court said that plaintiff could, by showing that exclusion from membership in defendant association deprived him or her of substantial economic advantages, establish a right to judicial intervention with respect to the denial of his or her application for membership. The Court found that membership in this association was the only available sanction of specialized professional qualification. The Court also noted that membership, although not essential in order for the dentist to practice orthodontics, would nevertheless mean an increase in the amount of money that he could earn and would have a direct bearing on the number of referrals he received (1 Cal. 3d 160, 165) .

[b] Exclusion Cannot Be Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 155 P.2d 329 , was an appeal from an order of the superior court issuing a preliminary injunction to restrain an employer from discharging black employees because they were not members of a union with which the employer had a closed shop agreement. The union excluded the blacks because of their race. The Supreme Court sustained the order. The Court said that when a union has a monopoly of the supply of labor it occupies a quasi-public position and has certain corresponding obligations. It may no longer claim the same freedom from legal restraint enjoyed by golf clubs or fraternal associations. The union's asserted right to choose its own members does not merely relate to social relations but affects the fundamental right to work for a living (25 Cal. 2d 721, 731) . The Court expounded the principle that the holder of a monopoly could not exercise its power to exclude in an arbitrary, unreasonable manner so as to bring injury to others (25 Cal. 2d 721, 732) . The Court found that the union held a monopoly and held that the exclusion of blacks from the union was arbitrary, unreasonable, and contrary to public policy (25 Cal. 2d 721, 739-740) .

It should be noted that although the Court in James seemed to require the association to have a monopoly over the supply of labor, the Court did not determine the issue (25 Cal. 2d 721, 734) . It is obvious that subsequent cases have liberalized this requirement [see, e.g., Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 277, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32 , in which the Court stated that the application of the common law rule did not depend on the existence of monopoly power; Ascherman v. Saint Francis Memorial Hosp. (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 507, 511, 119 Cal. Rptr. 507 , in which the court held that the availability of other nearby hospitals was not a bar to a claim for wrongful denial of staff privileges; Williams v. Int. etc. of Boilermakers (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 586, 589, 165 P.2d 903 , in which the Court stated that failure to allege monopoly power was not fatal to the case]. The*James* Court also seemed to require that the association's decision affect the applicant's fundamental right to work. This standard has also been liberalized [see, e.g., Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 165-166, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495 , in which the Court found that, although not essential to plaintiff's practice of orthodontics, membership in defendant association would provide plaintiff with substantial economic advantages and therefore held that he had a right to judicial intervention with respect to denial of his application for membership].

[c] Association's Standards for Admission Cannot Be Unreasonably Susceptible of Arbitrary or

Discriminatory Application

Miller v. Eisenhower Medical Center (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 614, 166 Cal. Rptr. 826, 614 P.2d 258 , was a proceeding in mandamus to order defendant hospital to grant staff membership and privileges to plaintiff. Plaintiff's application for staff membership was denied on the basis of recommendations from references. The hospital bylaws required an applicant for staff membership to possess an ability to work with others. From plaintiff's references, defendant concluded that sufficient doubt existed concerning plaintiff's ability to work with others to warrant his exclusion. Plaintiff contended that the hospital's requirement that a physician be able to work with others was so vague and uncertain that it provided a substantial danger of arbitrary or discriminatory application. The trial court denied plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate. The Supreme Court reversed with directions for the lower court to issue a peremptory writ of mandate directing defendant to either admit plaintiff or undertake further proceedings consistent with the Court's opinion.

The Court stated that a hospital may not adopt rules for admission to membership which permit exclusion on an arbitrary or irrational basis, and that a rule governing the admission to membership could not stand if it established a standard for admission which was substantively irrational or otherwise unreasonably susceptible of arbitrary or discriminatory application (27 Cal. 3d 614, 626-627) . The Court held that the hospital's requirement would not be invalid under this rule if the rejection was accompanied by a showing that the applicant's inability to work with others in the hospital setting would present a real and substantial danger that patients treated by the applicant might receive other than a high quality of medical care at the facility if he or she were admitted to membership (27 Cal. 3d 614, 628-629) . In this case, the Court found that the hospital had failed to make such a showing (27 Cal. 3d 614, 632) .

The rule stated in this case appears to be applicable to associations in general, since the courts have dealt with hospitals in various exclusion cases in the same manner as other associations.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusion Cannot Be Arbitrary, Unreasonable, or Contrary to Public Policy

In Gay Law Students Assn. v. Pacific Tel. & Tel., Co. (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 458, 156 Cal. Rptr. 14, 595 P.2d 592 , a group of law students instituted a suit against a utility company, seeking declaratory and injunctive relief, and monetary damages for discrimination in hiring, firing, and promotion of homosexuals. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend and entered judgment for defendants. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment. The Court held that it need not directly decide whether California common law prohibits a public utility from arbitrarily discriminating in employment because the common law had been codified in this instance to specifically prohibit this type of action by a public utility. However, the Court stated in dicta that in the past two decades numerous California decisions have explicitly established that professional and business associations and public and private hospitals are bound, under common law principles, to refrain from arbitrary exclusion of individuals from employment opportunities (24 Cal. 3d 458, 483) .

Directors Guild of America, Inc. v. Superior Court (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 42, 48 Cal. Rptr. 710, 409 P.2d 934 , was a proceeding in prohibition to restrain further prosecution of a pending superior court action in which plaintiff (real party in interest) sought relief by way of damages and injunction on the ground that a labor union arbitrarily excluded him from membership. Because plaintiff was offered employment as a second-assistant director for the filming of a television series, he applied for union membership. His membership was rejected because he was not a relative of an existing member and the union officers did not choose to admit him for reasons of personal friendship or favoritism. Because plaintiff was refused membership in the union, his prospective employer refused to employ him. The Supreme Court granted the union a peremptory writ.

The Court recognized that a union cannot arbitrarily exclude from membership a person employed in the craft or industry whose employees are represented by the union even when the union does not have a union shop contract. The Court, however, held that relief in such a situation could only be afforded to those who are employed in such a craft or industry because the basis for membership lies in the right and desirability of representation, not in the union's economic control of jobs (64 Cal. 2d 42, 51, 54) . Finding that plaintiff had not alleged that he had actually been employed as a second-assistant director, the Court held that he could not be granted any relief (64 Cal. 2d 42, 51) .

In Olympic Club v. Superior Court (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 358, 282 Cal. Rptr. 1 , a city brought an action against a private club, alleging that it discriminated in its membership policies by excluding blacks from membership. In its investigatory efforts, the city asked the club for a list of the names and business addresses of the applicants rejected for membership. The club resisted, asserting the associational privacy rights of the rejected applicants. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to order the club to produce the names and to establish notification procedures enabling rejected applicants to seek a protective order to preserve their anonymity (229 Cal. App. 3d 358, 361-365) . The issue of whether exclusion of blacks from membership is permissible was not raised by either side, each tacitly acknowledging that such exclusion is prohibited by the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51). For discussion and forms of memoranda of points and authorities for actions under the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act .

Kronen v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 46 Cal. Rptr. 808 , was an action by a dentist for declaratory and injunctive relief to determine his eligibility for membership in two professional organizations for orthodontists. The trial court denied relief, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal, citing a New Jersey case for the proposition that the power of exclusion should be exercised in a reasonable and lawful manner, held that it was within the province of the trial court to review and inquire into the facts and circumstances pertinent to the alleged exclusion of plaintiff from defendant organizations to determine whether the power of these groups was exercised arbitrarily or unlawfully to prevent plaintiff from successfully practicing orthodontics (237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 305) . In this instance, however, the doctor had not complied with a rational requirement for admission. Thus, the exclusion was held to be proper (237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 307) .

Thorman v. Intl. Alliance etc. Employees (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 629, 320 P.2d 494 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel a union to admit plaintiff to membership in the union. Plaintiff, an experienced moving-picture machine operator and a member of local subsidiary of the union, applied for membership in the union. Plaintiff's application was rejected because it failed to receive a favorable two-thirds vote of the members voting, as required by the union's constitution. Plaintiff was subsequently ousted from his job as a moving-picture machine operator and replaced by a union member. The trial court granted plaintiff a writ of mandate ordering his admission to membership in the union. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court found that the union exercised a monopoly over all employment in the occupation of moving-picture machine operators by maintaining and enforcing closed shop agreements with all employers who own or operate motion picture theaters covering the employment of moving-picture machine operators (49 Cal. 2d 629, 632-633) . The court held that it was clear that plaintiff's cause of action fell within the principles announced in James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 155 P.2d 329 (discussed in § 22.22[3][b]) (49 Cal. 2d 629, 634) . The Court, by thus holding, apparently found the requirement that an application must receive a two-thirds vote to be arbitrary.

Williams v. Int. etc. of Boilermakers (1946) 27 Cal. 2d 586, 165 P.2d 903 , was an action for injunctive relief to restrain defendants from interfering with plaintiffs' employment or reemployment because plaintiffs were not members of the local labor union. Because plaintiffs were black they could only be members of the union if they consented to segregation into separate auxiliaries. As members of the auxiliaries, plaintiffs would have been in an unequal and disadvantageous position as compared with other members of the local unions. Plaintiffs contended this was equivalent to denial of membership. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrers to the complaint and dismissed the action. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment of dismissal.

The Court held that these rules and practices of the union were held discriminatory in James v. Marinship Corp. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 721, 737-739, 155 P.2d 329 (27 Cal. 2d 586, 593) . The Court further held that plaintiffs' failure to allege a monopoly of labor was not fatal to their cause of action (27 Cal. 2d 586, 590) . The Court said that although the court in the James case treated the existence of such a monopoly as an important reason for granting relief, the decision was not made dependent thereon (27 Cal. 2d 586, 589) .

[b] Association's Standards for Admission Cannot Be Unreasonably Susceptible of Arbitrary or Discriminatory Application

Rosner v. Eden Township Hospital Dist. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 592, 25 Cal. Rptr. 551, 375 P.2d 431 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel the admission of plaintiff to membership on the medical staff of a hospital maintained by defendant hospital district. Because plaintiff had made criticisms relating to the treatment of patients and hospital practices, defendant denied his application for staff membership on the grounds that he was not temperamentally suitable for hospital staff practice. The trial court denied plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate. Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the fact that a doctor was "unable to get along with" some doctors or hospital personnel was not a sufficient ground on which to exclude plaintiff. The Court stated that a hospital district should not be permitted to adopt standards for the exclusion of doctors from the use of its hospital which are so vague and ambiguous as to provide a substantial danger of arbitrary discrimination in their application. It found that in this case there was a danger that the hospital's requirement of temperamental suitability would be applied as a subterfuge when considerations having no relevance to fitness were present (58 Cal. 2d 592, 598) .

Martino v. Concord Community Hosp. Dist. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 51, 43 Cal. Rptr. 255 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel defendant hospital district to act on plaintiff's application for appointment to the hospital's medicalstaff and to enjoin the hospital from denying the application on the grounds that plaintiff refused to take an examination covering those areas of medicine and surgery in which the hospital required its staff to be qualified. Defendant contended that plaintiff had not completed his application for membership because he had not taken the hospital's examination. Plaintiff contended that the examination requirement was invalid because it was vague, ambiguous, and uncertain. The trial court denied the writ of mandate and injunction on the ground that plaintiff had not exhausted the association's internal remedies and the trial court declined to determine the validity of the examination requirement. The court of appeal reversed. The court found that the hospital's credentials committee had no standards to guide it in determining what tests to require of an applicant or in determining whether an applicant had successfully passed whatever tests it may have required (233 Cal. App. 2d 51, 59) . Therefore, the court held that the examination requirement was vague and ambiguous and could not be enforced (233 Cal. App. 2d 51, 60) .

Wyatt v. Tahoe Forest Hospital Dist. (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 709, 345 P.2d 93 , involved a mandamus action to compel a hospital to admit a physician to staff membership. The trial court denied relief, and the court of appeal reversed, holding that the hospital's rules regarding admission were too vague and uncertain to be used as the basis for the exclusion (174 Cal. App. 2d 709, 715) . The court said that a hospital district, in the exercise of its duty to prescribe reasonable rules and regulations, must set up standards or qualifications for those who wish to serve in the hospital which are general, but not arbitrary or discriminatory. These rules should be clear, not vague, ambiguous, or uncertain (174 Cal. App. 2d 709, 715) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.23

§ 22.23 Supporting Contention That Expulsion or Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Procedure Unfair

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [EXPULSION or EXCLUSION] FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS IMPROPER BECAUSE THE PROCEEDING FOLLOWED BY THE ASSOCIATION IN REACHING THE DECISION TO _____ [EXPEL or EXCLUDE] THE _____[MEMBER or APPLICANT] WAS NOT FAIR.

[EITHER, if member improperly expelled]

A. Membership Itself Protected. [See § 22.20, Paragraph C.]

[OR, if applicant improperly denied membership]

A. Substantial Economic Advantages as Prerequisite for Judicial Intervention. [See § 22.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Fair Procedure Required. Whenever a private association is legally required to refrain from arbitrary action, the association's action must be procedurally fair (Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 550, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 ; Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 936, 947-950, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 ; Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1445, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819).

C. Fair Procedure Includes Notice and an Opportunity to Defend Oneself. Fair procedure requires that before expulsion or denial of an application, the member or applicant must be notified of the reason for the proposed expulsion or rejection and given a fair opportunity to defend himself or herself (Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 278, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32 ; Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 555, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253).

[Optional] D. Association's Adjudicators Must Be Impartial. Fair procedure rights include impartiality of the adjudicators, who must be free from any practical probability of unfairness (Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1448-1449, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819 ; Applebaum v. Board of Directors (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 648, 656-657, 659, 163 Cal. Rptr. 831).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support the contention that expulsion or exclusion from membership in an association was improper because the procedure followed by the association in reaching the decision to expel or exclude was not fair.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 to seek reinstatement or admission to membership in the association. If the law required the association to grant the member or applicant an administrative trial, the member or applicant might raise the argument supported by this form in support of a petition to the court for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review the administrative decision and order reinstatement or admission. The argument may also be used when a member or applicant is seeking an injunction against the association. Although the cases do not specify when to seek an injunction rather than a writ of mandate, it appears that an injunction is sought prior to the actual expulsion of a member or the denial of an applicant's request for admission as a prohibitive measure [see, e.g., Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253] . A writ of mandate would be sought once a member had been expelled or an applicant's request for admission had been denied [see, e.g., Applebaum v. Board of Directors (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 648, 163 Cal. Rptr. 831] . This argument may also be used to support the contention that damages should be awarded for improper expulsion or exclusion [see, e.g., Cason v. Glass Bottle Blowers Asso. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 134, 146-147, 231 P.2d 6 ; Ascherman v. San Francisco Medical Society (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 623, 630, 664, 114 Cal. Rptr. 681] .

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member's expulsion or the applicant's exclusion from membership was improper because the procedure followed by the association in reaching the decision to expel or exclude was not fair. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the member or applicant was expelled or excluded in violation of the fair procedure requirement, counsel may show, for example, that (1) no notice was given to the plaintiff of the reasons for his or her rejection, (2) the plaintiff was not given an opportunity to respond to the charges against him or her, or (3) the people making the decision to expel or exclude plaintiff were not or may not have been impartial.

When a person is or was a member of the association seeking to expel him or her, the first alternative Paragraph A should be used to assert the jurisdiction of the court to review the association's decision. If the person is applying for membership, the second alternative Paragraph A should be used.

Optional Paragraph D should be used when the member or applicant was denied fair procedure because the adjudicators deciding to exclude or expel the applicant or member were not impartial. Counsel may show that the adjudicators were not impartial by showing, for example, that members of the investigative body or the accuser were part of the decision-making body.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions in that set. For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 22.32 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fair Procedure Required

The issue in Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 (Pinsker II), was whether or not a dentist who was denied membership in respondent association was entitled to notice and an opportunity to respond to charges against him. The Supreme Court in Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495 (Pinsker I) (discussed in § 22.22[3][a]), remanded the case to the trial court with instructions to order the American Association of Orthodontists (AAO) to reconsider the dentist's application and give a reason for rejection. The AAO reconsidered the dentist's application for membership and again rejected it. The association based their denial of the application on the ground of the dentist's continuing violation of one of the society's "Principles of Ethics" prohibiting an orthodontist from "delegating to a person less qualified any services or operation which requires the professional competence of an orthodontist." The AAO did not give the dentist an opportunity to respond to these charges. The dentist sought to enjoin the AAO from denying his application. The trial court denied the request for the injunction.

The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's denial. The Court held that whenever a private association is legally required to refrain from arbitrary action (as the Court required of the AAO in Pinsker I), the association's action must be both substantively rational and procedurally fair (12 Cal. 3d 541, 550) . In this case, the Court held that the procedure followed by the association in rejecting the dentist's application was not fair because the dentist was not given an opportunity to respond to the charges (12 Cal. 3d 541, 556) .

In Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819 , plaintiff, an endocrinologist, made a timely request for a review hearing after his staff privileges at a hospital were suspended. The hospital scheduled thehearing and notified plaintiff that legal counsel would not be allowed. Through letters from his counsel, plaintiff requested a postponement of the hearing and a more complete statement of the charges, including the specific acts or omissions alleged. He also objected to denial of his right to counsel at the hearing and requested a list of the members of the review committee in order to investigate any bias, a list of witnesses, and copies of all medical charts and records. The hospital denied all of plaintiff's requests, and the hearing panel upheld his suspension. After exhausting the review process within the hospital, plaintiff filed a petition for a writ of mandate to compel the hospital to reinstate his medical staff membership and clinical privileges, claiming he was denied a fair hearing. The trial court denied the petition, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and directed the trial court to grant the petition for a writ of mandate compelling the hospital to afford plaintiff a fair hearing. Plaintiff contended he was denied his right to a fair procedure because: (1) he was given inadequate notice of the charges against him; (2) he was not provided an opportunity to copy the medical records in the cases in which his professional judgment was challenged; (3) the ultimate decision to revoke his staff privileges was vague and conclusory; (4) he was not provided a meaningful opportunity through voir dire to determine any potential bias of those colleagues charged with judging him; and (5) the hospital improperly shifted to him the burden of proving his innocence. The court of appeal agreed with plaintiff, explaining that there is a common-law right to fair procedure protecting individuals from arbitrary exclusion or expulsion from private organizations that control important economic interests. Such a private organization's actions must be both substantively rational and procedurally fair. What constitutes a fair procedure is not fixed or judicially prescribed. The associations themselves should retain the initial and primary responsibility for devising a method that provides an applicant adequate notice of the charges against him or her and a reasonable opportunity to respond. In drafting such a procedure the organization should consider the nature of the tendered issue and should fashion its procedure to insure a fair opportunity for an applicant to present his or her position. Although the association retains discretion in formalizing such procedures, the courts remain available to afford relief if that discretion is abused. In evaluating whether the hospital provided plaintiff a fair hearing, the court said the inadequacy of the notice, the refusal to permit copying of medical records, and the vagueness of the administrative findings are inextricably related. Having reviewed the cumulative impact of the manner in which the hospital initiated its proceedings, responded to plaintiff's repeated requests for specificity, and ultimately rendered judgment on his professional competency, the court concluded the proceedings had a notable stench of unfairness (231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1445) .

In Potvin v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 936, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 202 , defendant, a mutual insurance company offering networks of health care providers, delisted plaintiff physician under their physician agreement, which provided that plaintiff was an independent contractor and that the agreement could be terminated by either party on 30 days' notice with or without cause. After several requests by plaintiff for the reason for the termination, defendant gave the reason as plaintiff's malpractice history. Although plaintiff attempted to explain the history, i.e. that the malpractice insurer had settled a claim against him although he had not been at fault, and requested a hearing, defendant never provided the hearing. As a result of the termination, plaintiff lost a large percentage of his patients, was terminated by other managed care entities, was rejected by physician groups that require that members be one of defendant's health care providers, and lost referrals from physicians who were members of defendant's health care provider networks. Plaintiff sued for, inter alia, violation of fair procedure. The trial court granted defendant's motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeal reversed. The court found that the common law right of fair procedure is applicable to professional organizations in which membership may be an economic necessity for pursuit of the profession, or which wield such power as to affect significant economic and professional concerns, clothing them with a public interest. Defendant in this case also controls substantial economic interests. This extends to health care providers' membership in provider networks, and overrides the provision in the agreement allowing termination without cause. The question was whether plaintiff's delistment was arbitrary, capricious or contrary to public policy as a matter of law, which would entitle plaintiff to summary adjudication as a matter of law under Code. Civ. Proc. § 437c. The court found that plaintiff had presented at least a triable issue of fact as to whether it was arbitrary, but had not yet demonstrated entitlement to summary adjudication of the cause of action for violation of the common law right to fair procedure.

[b] Fair Procedure Includes Notice and an Opportunity to Defend Oneself

The facts and procedural background of Ezekial v. Winkley (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 267, 142 Cal. Rptr. 418, 572 P.2d 32 , are discussed in § 22.20[3][c]. In Ezekial, the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal and remanded the case with directions to overrule defendant's demurrer. Plaintiff had alleged that the circumstances of his dismissal did not comport with common law right of fair procedure because he was not given any reasons for the dismissal nor was he afforded a hearing or an opportunity to respond. The Court held that plaintiff had stated a valid claim for wrongful denial of the common law protection of fair procedure, and that fair procedure at a minimum required some meaningful opportunity for the adversely affected individual to be heard in his or her defense. The Court noted that it had not set a rigid procedure for associations to follow, but that the associations themselves were to devise practical methods of providing anadversely affected individual with adequate notice of the charges and a reasonable opportunity to respond (20 Cal. 3d 267, 278) .

In Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 , the facts of which are set out in § 22.23[3][a], the Supreme Court held that fair procedure requires that before the denial of an application, an applicant must be notified of the reason for the proposed rejection and be given a fair opportunity to defend himself or herself (12 Cal. 3d 541, 555) . Because the dentist was not given a chance to respond to the society's rejection, the Court held that he was not accorded fair procedure (12 Cal. 3d 541, 556) . Therefore, the Court reversed the trial court's decision denying relief to the dentist (12 Cal. 3d 541, 561) .

[c] Association's Adjudicators Must Be Impartial

The facts and procedural background of Rosenblit v. Superior Court (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 282 Cal. Rptr. 819 , are discussed in § 22.23[3][a]. In Rosenblit, the court of appeal directed the trial court to grant the petition for a writ of mandate compelling the hospital to afford plaintiff a fair hearing. In discussing the specific reasons why plaintiff was not afforded a fair hearing, the court examined his contention that he was not provided a meaningful opportunity through voir dire to determine any potential bias of those colleagues charged with judging him. The court said that the right to a fair procedure includes the right to impartial adjudicators. Fairness requires a practical method of testing impartiality. Plaintiff contended the secret voir dire of the hearing panel impermissibly compromised his ability to obtain a fair hearing. The hospital argued that by his failure to object at the time of the secret voir dire, plaintiff waived his right to object. The court disagreed, saying that without his counsel, plaintiff hardly could be expected to risk the wrath of those sitting in judgment by challenging their representation of impartiality. Because members of review committees are under no explicit or statutory duty to recuse themselves, the court said that a physician must be afforded the opportunity to conduct a liberal and probing oral examination of the committee members that is calculated to discover possible bias or conflicts of interest. The chairmen of the two in-house hospital review committees had been treating physicians on one of the cases under scrutiny. In these circumstances, an opportunity to expose bias is essential. The court said plaintiff was denied any semblance of fairness by the secret unreported voir dire conducted by the members themselves (231 Cal. App. 3d 1434, 1448-1449) .

Applebaum v. Board of Directors (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 648, 163 Cal. Rptr. 831 , was a proceeding in mandamus for judicial review of defendant hospital's administrative decision to suspend plaintiff from its staff. Plaintiff was accused of poor medical judgment and incompetence in the performance of obstetrical deliveries and in the care of the newborn. The hospital's ad hoc committee, on which plaintiff's accuser sat, found plaintiff guilty of these charges and recommended his suspension. The executive committee, which consisted of 12 members, five of whom were on the ad hoc committee, suspended plaintiff. Plaintiff appealed internally, and the appeal committee, two out of three of whom later became members of the executive committee, after agreeing to refrain from future consideration of plaintiff's case before the executive committee, upheld the suspension. Plaintiff contended that the hospital proceedings violated due process because the committees were prejudiced against him. The trial court, finding that the hospital's proceedings were impermissibly tainted by the role of plaintiff's accuser in the adjudicatory process, issued an order compelling the hospital to reinstate plaintiff as a member of its staff. The hospital appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal held that the hospital had violated plaintiff's fair procedure rights by not having impartial tribunals. The court found that these tribunals were not impartial because of the presence of judges on more than one committee.

The court held that this, apart from any question of bias on the part of those involved, presents a violation of fair procedure rights to an impartial tribunal by virtue of a practical probability of unfairness (104 Cal. App. 3d 648, 659) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fair Procedure Required

Cason v. Glass Bottle Blowers Asso. (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 134, 231 P.2d 6 , involved a mandate action by a union member who was suspended from membership in the union without notice or a hearing. The trial court granted a writ ordering his reinstatement. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that it would intervene in an association's decision to expel one of its members if the accused member has not been afforded those rudimentary rights that provide a reasonable opportunity to defend himself or herself against the charges made (37 Cal. 2d 134, 143) . The Court also held that it is a fundamental principle of justice that no person may be condemned or prejudiced in his or her rights without an opportunity to make a defense and that this principle is applicable not only to courts, but also to labor unions and similar organizations (37 Cal. 2d 134, 143) .

In Youngblood v. Wilcox (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1368, 255 Cal. Rptr. 527 , plaintiffs, a husband and wife who were members of defendant country club, sued defendant and its president, alleging that their membership had been wrongfully terminated in retaliation for plaintiff husband's proper and lawful activities as president of a homeowners' association. After a hearing, the trial court issued a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from interfering with plaintiffs' rights as lifetime members of defendant. The court of appeal affirmed. The court explained that common-law protections are available to members of private unincorporated associations. The expulsion of a person from membership in such an association is deemed arbitrary and in violation of the common-law right of fairprocedure when the expulsion is substantively unreasonable, internally irregular, or procedurally unfair. Procedural fairness requires adequate notice of the charges and a reasonable opportunity to respond. Furthermore, an expulsion cannot properly rest on a rule that is substantively capricious or contrary to public policy (207 Cal. App. 3d 1368, 1373-1374) .

A two-step analysis is used by the court to determine whether expulsion was arbitrary. First, it determines if the procedure followed by the association is fair. Second, it determines whether the expulsion rests on a rule that is substantively capricious or contrary to public policy. The court said that membership in an association, with its associated privileges, once attained, is a valuable interest that cannot be arbitrarily withdrawn. The fair procedure requirements are not limited to expulsions from organizations that have the power to foreclose a person's participation in a trade or profession (207 Cal. App. 3d 1368, 1374) . In response to defendant's contention that plaintiffs' rights were circumscribed by the terms of their membership contract, which incorporated the club by-laws, including the provision that the club could terminate membership at will, the court said a member of an unincorporated association may not be suspended or expelled without charges, notice, and a hearing, even though the rules of the association make no provision for any of those things. The requirements of notice, hearing, and a fair trial before expulsion are so fundamental that they are imposed on an association even though its own constitution, charter, or rules fails to make such provision (207 Cal. App. 3d 1368, 1375) .

Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) , involved the expulsion of a member of the Boy Scouts because of his homosexuality. Prior to his expulsion plaintiff was given no notice or opportunity to be heard. Plaintiff's suit against the Boy Scouts based on unfair procedure and civil rights violations was dismissed by the trial court after defendant's demurrer was sustained. The court of appeal reversed, stating that the use of the status of homosexuality as a basis for expulsion is substantively arbitrary and therefore violative of the common-law right of fair procedure (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 717) . The court held that the elements of adequate notice of charge and reasonable opportunity to respond are basic to common law fair procedure and that expulsion based on homosexuality is capricious and offensive to public policy. Before homosexuality could be used as a basis to expel, a rational basis must be demonstrated between homosexual conduct and any significant danger of harm to the association resulting from the continuing membership of the homosexual person (147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 725) .

Hackethal v. California Medical Assn. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 187 Cal. Rptr. 811 , involved a mandate action by a medical doctor who had been expelled from the state and county medical societies. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's granting a writ of mandate ordering reinstatement pending a proper administrative hearing. The court held that when a private organization consisting of licensed professional persons attempts to expel a member, the common-law principle of fair procedure applies (138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 441-442) .

[b] Fair Procedure Includes Notice and an Opportunity to Defend Oneself

In Lasko v. Valley Presbyterian Hospital (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 519, 225 Cal. Rptr. 603 , a physician brought a petition for writ of mandate to compel, inter alia, a hospital to admit him to its medical staff, alleging that the hospital had violated due process requirements in conducting proceedings against him when it denied him permission to conduct voir dire of the examining panel regarding possible bias against him. The trial court denied the writ, and the court of appeal reversed and remanded (for determination of the issue of laches), holding that basic notions of fairness dictate that a person whose right to practice a livelihood at a particular hospital is being revoked has a right to examine the members of the tribunal for possible bias against him (180 Cal. App. 3d 519, 530) .

Curran v. Mount Diablo Council of the Boy Scouts (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 712, 195 Cal. Rptr. 325 , app. dismissed, 468 U.S. 1205, 104 S. Ct. 3574, 82 L. Ed. 2d 873 (1984) , on review after remand, 17 Cal. 4th 670, 72 Cal. Rptr. 2d 410, 952 P.2d 218 (1998) , is discussed in § 22.23[3][a].

The facts and procedural background of Hackethal v. California Medical Assn. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 187 Cal. Rptr. 811 , are discussed in § 22.23[4][a]. In that case, the court of appeal noted that adequate notice of charges and a reasonable opportunity to respond are basic to both due process and fair procedure (138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 442) . The court held that a medical doctor was denied the right to a fair procedure, including the opportunity to defend himself when he and his attorney were excluded from private executive sessions of the disciplinary panel hearing his case, thus depriving the member of the right to know accusations made against him, the right to confront and cross examine, and the right to refute or present evidence (138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 442-444) .

[c] Association's Adjudicators Must Be Impartial

The facts and procedural background of Hackethal v. California Medical Assn. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 187 Cal. Rptr. 811 , are discussed in § 22.23[4][a]. In that case, the court of appeal noted that fair procedure requires that an individual faced with expulsion from a professional organization has a right to a tribunal that meets the prevailing standards of impartiality (138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 442) . The court held that a medical doctor was denied an impartial hearing when the hearing panel restricted the member's right to question the panel and to challenge members who the member believed may have been biased against him.The hearing panel's restriction, the court stated, necessarily had the effect of reducing the member's opportunity to expose facts that would require disqualification of individuals on the panel (138 Cal. App. 3d 435, 443) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.24

§ 22.24 Supporting Contention That Discipline by Association Less Than Expulsion or Exclusion Was Improper--Procedure Unfair

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [specify discipline less than expulsion or exclusion, e.g., PUBLIC CENSURE] BY THE _____ [specify private organization or association having public stature or purpose, e.g., NATIONAL DENTAL SOCIETY] WAS IMPROPER BECAUSE THE PROCEEDING FOLLOWED BY THE _____ [specify organization or association, e.g., NATIONAL DENTAL SOCIETY] IN REACHING THE DECISION TO _____ [specify discipline, e.g., PUBLICLY CENSURE] PLAINTIFF WAS NOT FAIR.

A. Private Organization With Public Stature May Not Discipline Member Without Fair Proceeding. A private organization, if tinged with public stature or purpose, may not expel or discipline a member by adversely affecting substantial property, contract, or other economic rights, except as a result of fair proceedings that may be provided for in organization bylaws, and carried forward in an atmosphere of good faith and fair play (Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1125, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352).

[Optional] B. Public Censure as Affecting Substantial Property, Contract, or Other Economic Rights. Public censure by a professional organization imminently threatens irreparable injury because it tends to impair a person's opportunity to earn a livelihood through the practice of his or her chosen profession (Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1124, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that disciplinary action taken by an association that is less than expulsion or exclusion is improper if it is the result of an unfair proceeding. If a private organization is tinged with public stature or purpose, such as a professional organization, it may not expel or otherwise discipline a member by adversely affecting the member's substantial property, contract, or other economic rights unless the discipline is the result of a fair proceeding [Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1124-1125, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352] . Optional Paragraph B has been provided for use in cases where a member is subject to public censure by a professional organization. However, this form may also be useful in cases involving other types of discipline less than expulsion or exclusion, such as suspension [see Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1123, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352 (noting that courts have squarely held that suspension cases will be afforded the same scrutiny accorded those involving expulsion)].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that a proceeding in which a private organization decided to discipline one of its members was unfair. For example, a member of a professional organization may wish to petition for a writ of mandate to compel the organization to give him or her a fair proceeding. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the member's substantial property, contract, or other economic rights have been interfered with. For example, petitioner may argue that the organization has deprived him or her of the opportunity to earn a livelihood.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Organization With Public Stature May Not Discipline Member Without Fair Proceeding

In Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352 , petitioner orthodontist was publicly censured by two related state and national private dental organizations of which he was a member. A local member organization peer review committee held a hearing relating to petitioner's treatment of two minor patients. Neither petitioner nor his attorney were permitted to attend the hearing. After the hearing and the committee's findings, the committee recommended that petitioner be expelled unless he returned fees collected from the parents of the two patients. The state organization informed petitioner that he would be expelled unless he complied. Petitioner was also advised that he could appeal the decision based on sufficiency of the evidence or any defects in the procedure of the local committee. However, the state organization denied the request of petitioner's attorney to review the evidence offered at the hearing, and any transcript or record of the proceedings. Petitioner appealed to the national organization, which reduced the proposed penalty from expulsion to public censure. The national organization conceded that petitioner's case was not handled fairly or in accordance with the bylaws. Petitioner sought a writ of mandate in the superior court to overturn the censure and require a new hearing. He alleged that he was denied due process in violation of the bylaws, andsuffered damage to his dental practice and reputation as a result. The court granted defendant organizations' demurrers, finding that judicial review of disciplinary procedures of private professional organizations is, as a matter of law, only available when the punishment is expulsion or exclusion from membership. Petitioner appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that a private organization, if tinged with public stature or purpose, may not expel or discipline a member by adversely affecting substantial property, contract or other economic rights, except as a result of fair proceedings that may be provided for in organization bylaws and carried forward in an atmosphere of good faith and fair play (176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1125) . The court held that both defendant dental associations were of "quasi-public significance." Public censure by such organizations threaten imminent irreparable injury that tends to impair the opportunity to earn a livelihood through the practice of a chosen profession. This is because membership may appear to be a tangible demonstration of professional competence and skill, professional responsibility, and acceptance by one's professional peers (176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1124) . Thus, the court held that due process considerations come into play. The court also held that even if the organizations did not have quasi-public status, the discipline imposed was public censure, and the organizations could be seen to have created their own exception (176

Cal. App. 3d 1118, 1125) .

[b] Public Censure as Affecting Substantial Property, Contract, or Other Economic Rights

Salkin v. California Dental Ass'n. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 1118, 224 Cal. Rptr. 352 , is discussed in § 22.24[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Organization With Public Stature May Not Discipline Member Without Fair Proceeding

Delta Dental Plan v. Banasky (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 381 , involved a dispute between plaintiff dentists and defendant, an organization that operated the largest dental health plan in California, covering over 8,000,000 individuals. Plaintiffs, who were participating dentists in defendant's dental plan, challenged defendant's decision to lower the fee rate it would pay on claims by plaintiffs' patients. The plan's rules provided for review of fee decisions by a review committee, whose decision was final and binding on both the dentists and the defendant plan. Plaintiffs sought to require defendant to arbitrate their fee dispute under a separate provision of the defendant's rules. The trial court declined to compel arbitration and instead granted defendant an injunction barring plaintiffs from attempting to submit the dispute to arbitration or to any other forum. The court of appeal reversed in part. Though agreeing that the dispute was not arbitrable (27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1605) , the court held that the defendant's rules were infirm to the extent they purported to preclude further review of the review committee's decision. The court noted that California courts have long recognized a common law right to fair procedure protecting individuals from arbitrary exclusion or expulsion from organizations that control important economic interests. The court stated that fair procedure comes into play when organizations are tinged with public stature or purpose or attain a quasi-public significance, as contrasted with private associations that have no larger purpose or stature than pleasant, friendly, and congenial relationships. The court further noted that the right to fair procedure with respect to membership actions is not limited to matters of exclusion or expulsion. Because defendant controlled an important economic interest as the largest dental plan in California, the court held that continued membership on defendant's panel of participating dentists, and defendant's modification of a participating dentist's list of usual, customary, and reasonable fees, implicate the right to fair procedure (27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1607) . The court further held that though the plaintiff dentists must submit disputes over usual, customary, and reasonable fees to the defendant's internal review procedure, that procedure must include notice and a hearing, and the review committee's decision will be subject to judicial review by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 (27 Cal. App. 4th 1598, 1608) .

154 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.25

§ 22.25 Supporting Contention That an Action for Damages Is Proper--Intentional Interference With Right to Pursue Profession--Lack of Sufficient Justification

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN ACTION FOR DAMAGES IS PROPER BECAUSE THE ASSOCIATION INTENTIONALLY INTERFERED WITH THE _____ [MEMBER'S or APPLICANT'S] RIGHT TO PURSUE A PROFESSION AND THE ASSOCIATION DID NOT HAVE SUFFICIENT JUSTIFICATION FOR SUCH INTERFERENCE.

A. Action for Damages Lies. An action for damages against an association will lie when the association has intentionally interfered with a person's right to pursue a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation, either by unlawful means or means otherwise lawful when there is a lack of sufficient justification (Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 810, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568 , overruled on another ground in Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 925, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375).

B. Determining Sufficient Justification. Whether there is justification is determined not by applying precise standards, but by balancing, in the light of allthe circumstances, the respective importance to society and the parties of protecting the activities interfered with on the one hand and permitting the interference on the other hand (Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 810, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568 , overruled on another ground in Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 925, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support the contention that a member of or applicant to an association should be awarded damages because the association intentionally interfered with his or her right to pursue a profession when the association did not have sufficient justification for such interference.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that damages should be awarded for intentional interference with the right to pursue a profession. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel must show that the interference by the association with the member's or applicant's right to pursue a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation was intentional, and that the interference was either by unlawful means, such as an illegal contract, or that the association used lawful means but did not have sufficient justification for such interference, such as limiting admission to reduce competition.

[b] Alternate Action for Restraint of Trade

Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 810, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568 , on which this form is based, held that the Cartwright Act (Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16700-16758 [now Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16700-16770]) did not apply to professions, but that the complaint involved stated a common-law cause of action for intentional interference with a right to pursue a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation. With respect to the holding that the Cartwright Act did not apply to professions, Willis was overruled in Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 925, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 .

Cianci was an action to dissolve a limited partnership comprised of medical doctors, for an accounting and damages, and to impress a constructive trust. The case arose out of a dispute among the doctors over the establishment, funding, and operation of a hyperbaric medicine department at a city hospital. One of the defendant doctors filed a cross complaint against plaintiffs and their attorneys setting forth nine causes of action. The first six alleged intentional and negligent interference and conspiracy to interfere with the right to practice hyperbaric medicine. The seventh and eighth alleged violation of, and conspiracy to violate, the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Practices Act (RICO, 18 U.S.C. §§ 1961-1968). The ninth alleged a conspiracy to violate the Cartwright Act. Demurrers to the seventh, eighth, and ninth causes of action were sustained on the grounds that federal courts had exclusive jurisdiction over RICO claims and that the Cartwright Act did not apply to the professions. Review of the order sustaining the demurrers was sought by prerogative writ. In ordering issuance of a writ of mandate, the Supreme Court held that state courts have concurrent jurisdiction over RICO claims and that the Cartwright Act does apply to professions.

The first six causes of action, relating to interference, were not before the Supreme Court; consequently, the Court did not rule on their sufficiency or the desirability of pleading them. A fortiori, the Court did not rule that such causes of action were improper or unnecessary. Nevertheless, if the facts of a case would bring it within the proscriptions of the Cartwright Act, counsel will no doubt want to sue under the act, rather than under the common-law action, because the Cartwright Act authorizes recovery of treble damages, interest on actual damages, and attorney fees, as well as costs [Bus. & Prof. Code § 16750(a)].

For discussion and forms relating to actions under the Cartwright Act for restraint of trade, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 565, Unfair Competition, § 565.70 et seq.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to conspiracy to interfere with business relationships, see Ch. 126, Conspiracy . For discussion and forms relating to unfair interference with business relations, see Ch. 565, Unfair Competition .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to intentional interference with business relationships generally, see Ch. 122, Interference . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to conspiracy to interfere with a trade or business, see Ch. 46, Conspiracy .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 22.33 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Damages Lies

Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568 , overruled on another ground in Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 925, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 (discussed in § 22.25[2][b]), was an action by an osteopathic physician against defendant hospital association for damages for alleged conspiracy of defendants to dominate and control the practice of osteopathic medicine in the county and for alleged interference with plaintiff's practice. The trial court dismissed the action after it had sustained demurrers to the complaint with leave to amend and plaintiff declined to amend. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the complaint stated a cause of action at common law. The Court held that an action for damages would lie when the right to pursue a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation is intentionally interfered with either by unlawful means or by means otherwise lawful when there is a lack of sufficient justification. The Court found that plaintiff's complaint stated a cause of action in that it alleged that a physician of the highest qualifications was denied access to necessary hospital facilities as the result of a conspiracy designed to restrain competition and deprive him of his practice in order to benefit competing members of the conspiracy (58 Cal. 2d 806, 810) .

[b] Determining Sufficient Justification

The facts and procedural background of Willis v. Santa Ana etc. Hospital Assn. (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 806, 26 Cal. Rptr. 640, 376 P.2d 568 , overruled on another ground in Cianci v. Superior Court (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 903, 925, 221 Cal. Rptr. 575, 710 P.2d 375 (discussed in § 22.25[2][b]), are discussed in § 22.25[3][a]. The Willis Court held that plaintiff's complaint had stated a cause of action for damages and should not have been dismissed. In holding that an action for damages would lie for intentional interference with one's right to pursue a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation by lawful means without sufficient justification, the Court established a guide for determining sufficient justification. The Court said that whether there is justification is to be determined by balancing, in the light of all the circumstances, the respective importance to society and the parties of protecting the activities interfered with on the one hand and permitting the interference on the other hand (58 Cal. 2d 806, 810) .

155 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.26

§ 22.26 Supporting Contention That Court Can Review the Association's Decision to Expel or Exclude Person From Membership--Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Excused

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] CAN SEEK RELIEF FROM THE COURT FOR IMPROPER _____ [EXCLUSION or EXPULSION] FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION BECAUSE THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] WAS EXCUSED FROM EXHAUSTING THE ASSOCIATION'S INTERNAL REMEDIES.

A. Exhaustion of Internal Remedies Subject to Certain Exceptions. The rule that internal remedies must be exhausted before seeking relief from the courts is subject to certain exceptions (Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 844, 313 P.2d 857).

[Optional] B. Association's Remedies Inadequate or Unavailable. The rule that a party must exhaust his or her administrative remedies prior to seeking relief in the courts has no application in a situation in which an administrative remedy is unavailable or inadequate (Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 829, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162).

[Optional] C. Association Violated Own Rules for Review. When an association violates its rules regulating procedure on appeal, a claimant is excused from exhausting the association's internal remedies (Schou v. Sotoyome Tribe, No. 12 (1903) 140 Cal. 254, 259 ; Bush v. International Alliance (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 357, 365, 130 P.2d 788).

[Optional] D. Invocation of Remedies Would Prove Futile.A member or applicant for membership in an association is not required to pursue the association's administrative remedies when to do so would prove a futile, useless, and idle act (Thorman v. Intl. Alliance etc. Employees (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 629, 635, 320 P.2d 494).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of the contention that the court can grant relief to a member or applicant from an association's actions because the member or applicant was excused from exhausting the association's internal remedies.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in support of a petition fora writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086, when petitioner is seeking reinstatement or admission to membership in the association. If the law required the association to grant the member or applicant an administrative trial, the member or applicant may raise the argument in support of a petition to the court for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review the administrative decision. The argument might also be raised by plaintiff in an action against the association for injunctive relief or damages.

These points and authorities may be used in response to the association's argument that judicial relief is not proper because of the member's or applicant's failure to exhaust the association's internal remedies, or in anticipation of such an argument.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member or applicant was excused from exhausting the association's internal remedies. It may also be combined with other points and authorities relating to the specific relief being sought from the court. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the member or applicant was excused from exhausting the association's internal remedies, counsel may show that the association's remedies were inadequate or not available [see optional Paragraph B], that the association violated its own rules for review [see optional Paragraph C], or that invocation of the association's remedies would prove futile [see optional Paragraph D].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see Ch. 303, Injunctions in that set. For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition . For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For other memoranda of points and authorities relating to exhaustion of internal remedies, see Ch. 67, Declaratory Relief . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Internal Remedies Subject to Certain Exceptions

Mooney v. Bartenders Union Local No. 284 (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 841, 313 P.2d 857 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel a labor union to permit a member to inspect its books and records. Plaintiff demanded an itemized accounting of all income and expenses of the union because it appeared that expenditures had exceeded income and there was no detailed explanation as to certain large outlays. Plaintiff's request was denied. The union's constitution provided an appeal procedure which plaintiff followed except for the last step. Defendant contended that plaintiff was thereby barred from seeking relief from the courts. The trial court gave judgment for the plaintiff. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that the requirement that internal remedies be exhausted was subject to certain exceptions and that the internal procedure must be such as will afford a member substantial justice. The Court specified that further pursuit of internal relief is excused when a union violates its rules for review or when invocation of those rules would be futile. In the application of the principles excusing exhaustion of internal remedies and determining the appropriate internal procedure, the Court held that both the protection of the rights of the individual members in the specific matter involved and the right of the union to govern itself must be weighed. In this case, the Court found that to deny a member access to the records and require him to exhaust all internal remedies in the preliminary matter of inspection would unduly hamper the member's right and possibly defeat the purpose of the investigation. In addition, the Court found that it was in the best interests of the union that any misuse of its funds be immediately revealed (48 Cal. 2d 841, 844) . Therefore, the Court held that plaintiff need not exhaust all internal remedies before resorting to the court (48 Cal. 2d 841, 845) .

[b] Association's Remedies Inadequate or Unavailable

In Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162 , a physician petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel a private, nonprofit hospital to reappoint him to its medical staff. He had been a staff member for 13 years when his privileges were suspended. The hospital granted him a preliminary hearing and a formal hearing. At both, his suspension was upheld. When the physician sought judicial relief, he raised for the first time the issue of the validity of a bylaw. The hospital contended that the doctor could not raise this issue before the trial court because it violated the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies. The trial court agreed and denied the petition. The Supreme Court reversed. The Court noted that the physician hadlacked an appropriate opportunity to raise the issue at an earlier stage and held that he need not exhaust the hospital's administrative remedies (19 Cal. 3d 802, 828-829) . The Court held that the rule that a party must exhaust his or her administrative remedies prior to seeking relief in the courts had no application in a situation where an administrative remedy is unavailable or inadequate (19 Cal. 3d 802, 829) .

[c] Association Violated Own Rules for Review

Schou v. Sotoyome Tribe, No. 12 (1903) 140 Cal. 254 , was an action to recover sick benefits due to a member of the defendant tribe. The constitution and bylaws of defendant provided for sick benefits to be paid when a member was disabled by sickness or accident unless caused by intemperance or immoral conduct. Plaintiff's husband became insane, and plaintiff applied for the benefits. The tribe denied benefits. Appealing from an order denying a new trial, defendant contended that plaintiff was barred from seeking relief from the courts because she had not exhausted the tribe's internal remedies. The Supreme Court affirmed the decision denying a new trial. The Court held that plaintiff was excused from exhausting the tribe's remedies because the tribe had not observed its rules regulating procedure on appeal (140 Cal. 254, 259) .

In Bush v. International Alliance (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 357, 130 P.2d 788 , a union member was expelled from a union for extorting money from a deceased union member's widow. The expelled member petitioned the trial court for a writ of mandate to compel reinstatement. The trial court granted the petition. The court of appeal reversed, holding that petitioner had not exhausted the union's internal remedies. The court noted that when an organization has violated its own laws and regulations and has arbitrarily violated a member's property rights, the member need not exhaust his or her remedies within the organization before resorting to the courts, but held that this exception was not involved in this case (55 Cal. App. 2d 357, 365) .

[d] Invocation of Remedies Would Prove Futile

Thorman v. Intl. Alliance etc. Employees (1958) 49 Cal. 2d 629, 320 P.2d 494 (also discussed in § 22.22[4][a]), was a proceeding in mandamus to compel a union to admit plaintiff to membership. Plaintiff's application was rejected by defendant union because it did not receive a favorable two-thirds vote of the voting members. Plaintiff contended that his exclusion was arbitrary and therefore improper. Defendant contended that plaintiff had not exhausted the union's internal remedies and was barred from seeking judicial relief. The trial court granted plaintiff relief. The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that plaintiff was not required to pursue the union's administrative remedies because to do so would have been a futile, useless, and idle act (49 Cal. 2d 629, 635) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Remedies Inadequate or Unavailable

Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 , was a suit for damages resulting from, among other things, denial of plaintiff's application for staff privileges at a hospital. The hospital's bylaws gave a right to appeal to a member, but did not mention an applicant, and the hospital did not inform plaintiff that she had such a right. Plaintiff did not appeal internally, and defendant contended that she could not seek relief from the courts. The trial court denied a motion by defendant for summary judgment. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court denied relief. The Court held that, although plaintiff must exhaust all available internal remedies before instituting any judicial action, in this case the hospital did not provide a remedy (17 Cal. 3d 465, 478) .

Martino v. Concord Community Hosp. Dist. (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 51, 43 Cal. Rptr. 255 (also discussed in § 22.22[4][b]), was a mandamus proceeding to compel defendant hospital to act on plaintiff's application for appointment to their medical staff and to enjoin the hospital from denying the application on the grounds that plaintiff refused to take an examination covering those areas of medicine and surgery in which the hospital required its staff to be qualified. The hospital's bylaws provided that a person whose application had been denied or rejected could appeal internally. Plaintiff's application was deferred on the ground that it was incomplete. Plaintiff did not appeal the decision. Defendant contended that plaintiff was barred from seeking relief from the courts because he had not exhausted the hospital's internal remedies. The trial court agreed and denied plaintiff relief. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the rule that a party must exhaust his or her administrative remedies prior to seeking relief in the courts had no application in a situation when an administrative remedy is unavailable or inadequate. Here the court found that no internal remedy was available to plaintiff since his application had been deferred, not rejected or denied (233 Cal. App. 2d 51, 56) .

156 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.27

§ 22.27 Supporting Contention That Action Was Not Protected by Freedom of Association

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ACTIONS TAKEN BY THE ASSOCIATION IN _____ [specify, e.g., EXCLUDING PLAINTIFF FROM MEMBERSHIP or IMPLEMENTING ITS HIRING POLICIES] ARE NOT WITHIN THE PROTECTION OF THE CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHT TO FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION BECAUSETHEY DO NOT INVOLVE AN INTIMATE ASSOCIATION OR AN ASSOCIATION FORMED FOR THE PURPOSES OF EXPRESSION.

A. Only Intimate or Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected. The constitutional right of freedom of association protects only the formation and maintenance of intimate associations and associations formed for purposes of expression encompassed by the First Amendment--speech, assembly, petition for the redress of grievances, and the exercise of religion (see Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 544-546, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 ; Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 624, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 ; Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769).

[Optional] B. Commercial Associations Are Not Constitutionally Protected. Associations that are "commercial" in nature, or involve primarily business activities, such as the formation of business deals or the making of personal contacts that are valuable for business purposes, employment, and professional advancement, and involve regular participation by nonmembers, are not protected by the right of freedom of association (see New York State Club Ass'n. v. NYC (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 12-14, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support the contention that an action is not protected by the right of freedom of association.

The argument supported by this form may be raised in support of a petition for a writ of mandate, an action for declaratory or injunctive relief, or other similar procedure. The argument may be raised by a member or potential member seeking either membership or the application of state law to an association.

These points and authorities may be used in response to an association's argument that judicial relief is not proper because its action is protected by freedom of association.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that an action is not protected by freedom of association. The points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel may demonstrate lack of intimacy in the association by including facts showing the lack of selectivity in the membership.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to the Unruh Civil Rights Act, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Only Intimate or Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

In Bd. of Dirs. of Rotary Int'l v. Rotary Club (1987) 481 U.S. 537, 107 S. Ct. 1940, 95 L. Ed. 2d 474 , plaintiff, a local Rotary Club, admitted three women to active membership in violation of defendant international club rules that limited membership to men. After its charter membership in the international association was revoked and its membership terminated, plaintiff brought suit against defendant, alleging a violation of the prohibition in the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51) of discrimination against women, and seeking injunctive and declaratory relief. The trial court judgment in favor of defendant was reversed by the state court of appeals. Defendant appealed.

The United States Supreme Court affirmed. The Court discussed the two protections from unjustified government interference afforded by the First Amendment freedom of association: an individual's right to enter into and maintain certain intimate relationships, and the right to freely associate for the purpose of engaging in protected speech or religious activities (481 U.S. 537, 544-546) . The Court concluded that neither one was interfered with by application of the Unruh Act. The First Amendment protects those intimate relationships that presuppose deep attachments and commitments to the necessarily few other individuals with whom one shares a special community of thoughts, experiences, and beliefs, as well as distinctively personal aspects of one's life (481 U.S. 537, 545) . The Court found that the relationship among club members was not the kind of intimate or private relation to warrant constitutional protection, and its purpose did not suggest the kind of private or personal relationship to which protection under the First Amendment has been afforded. Thus, the application of the Unruh Act to local Rotary Clubs did not interfere unduly with the members' freedom of private association (481 U.S. 537, 546-547) .

The Court then addressed the second protection afforded by the First Amendment, the right to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, or similar ends. The Court said there was no evidence that admitting women to the club would affect in any significant way the existing members' ability to carry out their various purposes. The Unruh Act did not require the clubs to abandon or alter any of their activities, basic goals, classification system, or to admit members who do not reflect a cross section of the community. Thus, its application would not violate the right of expressive association afforded by the First Amendment (481 U.S. 537, 548-549) .

Warfield v. Peninsula Golf & Country Club (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 594, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 50, 896 P.2d 776 , involved a country club that had a policy of excluding women from proprietary membership. Plaintiff's husband had a proprietary family membership in the defendant club, under which plaintiff was permitted to use the club's facilities. When plaintiff and her husband dissolved their marriage, the family law court awarded the family membership to plaintiff. The defendant then terminated the membership, tendering plaintiff the "redemption value" of the family membership. Plaintiff sued defendant for violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act (Civ. Code § 51). The trial court granted defendant a directed verdict, in part on the ground that the club was not a "business establishment" within the meaning of the Act. The court of appeal affirmed.

On review, the California Supreme Court reversed. The Court first held that the defendant club was a "business establishment" within the meaning of the Unruh Civil Rights Act under the facts of this case (10 Cal. 4th 594, 621-623) . The Court then rejected the defendant's contention that application of the Act to prohibit the club from excluding women from proprietary membership would represent an unconstitutional infringement of the club members' rights of association and privacy under the federal and California constitutions (10 Cal. 4th 594, 624-630) . The Court reviewed previous U.S. Supreme Court decisions, including Rotary Club (discussed above) and New York State Club Ass'n. v. NYC (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1 (discussed in § 22.27[3][b]), and noted that, in the context of private club memberships, the constitutional freedom of association has two aspects: (1) the freedom of intimate association; and (2) the freedom of expressive association (10 Cal. 4th 594, 624) . The Court stated that the teachings of U.S. Supreme Court precedent make clear that the application of Civ. Code § 51 to the defendant club in Warfield did not violate the club members' federal constitutional right of association. First, the Court noted, the defendant did not contend that it was organized for, or regularly engaged in, the type of expressive activities that fall within the protection of the First Amendment. Thus, application of Civ. Code § 51 to the club would have no appreciable effect on club members' freedom of expressive association (10 Cal. 4th 594, 628-629) . Second, the Court found untenable any claim that application of Civ. Code § 51 infringes on club members' freedom of intimate association. Comparing defendant's characteristics and activities to those of the associations considered by the U.S. Supreme Court in its previous decisions, the California Court noted that the size of defendant's membership, about 700 members, was considerably larger than the clubs found not to be protected in the prior cases, and that the 700-member figure significantly understated the number of persons with unrestricted access to the club. Furthermore, as with the organizations involved in the prior U.S. Supreme Court decisions, the premises and activities of the defendant club were not narrowly restricted to club members (or their families), but were open to numerous nonmembers, including invited guests, participants in sponsored events, and patrons of the club's golf and tennis pro shops. Finally, and in the Court's view most importantly, the defendant could not persuasively claim that elimination of the men-only requirement for proprietary membership would fundamentally alter the nature of the club or its specific purposes, since the club's recreational facilities have generally been open to women and women have routinely held nonproprietary classes of membership within the club (10 Cal. 4th 594, 629) . The Court also rejected the defendant's claim that the California constitutional right to freedom of association under Cal. Const., art. I, § 1, provided a greater protection to discriminatory membership policies of a large private club than that afforded by the federal constitution (10 Cal. 4th 594, 629-630) .

Bohemian Club v. Fair Employment & Housing Com. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 231 Cal. Rptr. 769 , involved a private nonprofit association whose membership was limited to men professing devotion to the arts. Members were chosen by a highly selective process that involved extensive interviewing. The Department of Fair Employment and Housing filed an accusation against the club for alleged violation of the Fair Employment and Housing Act by pursuing a discriminatory hiring policy that systematically excluded women. The club contested the accusation, and after a hearing, the administrative law judge found in its favor. The Fair Employment and Housing Commission rejected that finding and ordered the club to institute an affirmative action program. The club filed a petition for writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5. The Department opposed the petition and filed its own petition in intervention to set aside a ruling regarding backpay. The trial court granted the club's petition, denied the intervention petition as moot, and dismissed the underlying accusation. The club was awarded costs, but was denied attorney's fees. Both parties appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and gave directions to the trial court to reinstate the commission's findings. The issue of the nature of the associational interests of the club's members arose in the context of determining the proper standard of review for the trial court to have applied in reviewing the administrative law judge's decision. The court of appeal concluded that since the members' associational rights did not rise to the level of a fundamental vested interest for which an independent judicial evaluation and judgment was required, the substantial evidence test was the proper standard of review (187 Cal. App. 3d 1 ,10-11). The nature of the members' associational rights was discussed in detail. Petitioner argued that the forced hiring of women violated the members' constitutional right of association. The court observed that most association cases involve the relationship of member to member and not member to employee, and cited Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 617-618, 104 S. Ct. 3244, 82 L. Ed. 2d 462 , for an articulation of the essence of the right of association. The United States Constitution protects only intimate and expressive associational rights. The first aspect protects the formation and preservation of some highly personal relationships. An individual's choice to enter into and maintain certain intimate human relationships must be secure against undue intrusion by the state because of the role of those relationships in safeguarding individual freedom. The second aspect encompasses an individual's right to associate for the purpose of engaging in those activities protected by the First Amendment--speech, assembly, petition for the redress of grievances, and the exercise of religion. This right is constitutionally guaranteed as an indispensable means of preserving other individual liberties (187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12) . The court said that because the instant case concerned the impact of women employees on the club, and did not concern the separate issue of women as members, the first inquiry was whether hiring females would unduly interfere with the members' intimate associational rights. In determining the intimacy of a relationship and the corresponding entitlement to protection from state intrusion, pertinent factors to consider are the size, purpose, policies, selectivity, congeniality, and other characteristics that in a particular case may be pertinent. While the club's membership was selective, and the consequent relationship among members was intimate in associational terms, the same was not true for the associational rights of members and employees. The hiring procedure was not selective and little was known concerning employees at hiring (187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12-13) .

The court next considered whether the club's purposes of promoting male fellowship and appreciation of the arts would be undermined by hiring female employees in selective capacities. The court said the existence of the rule prohibiting employees from fraternizing with the members rendered implausible any assertion that the members' intimate associational rights would be infringed by hiring female employees. Moreover, even though the club contended that the mere presence of women on a regular basis would change the spirit of the organization and destroy the bohemian feeling, those feelings are not afforded constitutional protection, since the right to freedom of association only protects highly personal relationships (187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 13) . The members' relationship with the employees could not reasonably be termed intimate within the letter or spirit of that term. Even if the members' associational rights would be constricted by forcing the club to hire women, that infringement would be justified by the state's compelling interest in eradicating employment discrimination (187 Cal. App. 3d 1, 14) .

[b] Commercial Associations Are Not Constitutionally Protected

In New York State Club Ass'n. v. NYC (1988) 487 U.S. 1, 108 S. Ct. 2225, 101 L. Ed. 2d 1 , defendant city amended its Human Rights Law to prohibit discrimination in private clubs that were determined to be "public" in nature. The statutory amendment was based on defendant's findings that in some membership organizations in which business deals are made and personal contacts are formed for business purposes, employment, or professional advancement, discriminatory practices created a barrier to the advancement of women and minorities in business and professional life, and that the public interest in equal opportunity outweighs the interest in private association of club members. By the statute defendant extended anti-discrimination to any "public" club, that is, a club that has more than 400 members, provides regular meal service, and regularly receives payment for dues, fees, use of space, facilities, services, meals, or beverages directly or indirectly from or on behalf of nonmembers for the furtherance of trade or business. After the statute became effective plaintiff, a consortium of private clubs and associations, filed suit in state court, seeking a declaration that the law is invalid on various state grounds and is unconstitutional on its face under the First and Fourteenth Amendments and requesting that defendants be enjoined from enforcing it. On cross motions for summary judgment, the trial court upheld the law against all challenges. Higher levels of the state appellate courts affirmed. Plaintiff appealed.

The United States Supreme Court affirmed. The Court explained that to succeed on its challenge of the constitutionality of the statute on its face, plaintiff must demonstrate that the statute could never be applied in a valid manner, or that, even though it may be validly applied to plaintiff and others, it nevertheless is so broad that it may inhibit the constitutionally protected speech of third parties. The first kind of facial challenge will not succeed unless a court finds that every application of the statute creates an impermissible risk of suppression of ideas. The second kind of facial challenge will not succeed unless the statute is substantially overbroad, which requires a court to find a realistic danger that the statute itself will significantly compromise recognized First Amendment protections of parties not before the court (487 U.S. 1, 11-12) . The Court found that plaintiff was unable to succeed in either of these facial challenges. Plaintiff conceded that the anti-discrimination provisions of the statute could be constitutionally applied to large clubs. The Court pointed out that the clubs covered under the statute contain at least 400 members, and are comparable in size to local chapters of a national association that were not protected private associations. The Court also observed that clubs within the statute provide regular meal service and receive regular payments directly or indirectly from or on behalf of nonmembers for the furtherance of trade or business. The Court said these two characteristics are significant in pinpointing organizations that are "commercial" in nature, in that members often make business deals and form personal contacts valuable forbusiness purposes, employment, and professional advancement. The Court observed that while a considerable amount of private or intimate association occurs in such a setting, that fact alone does not afford the entity as a whole any constitutional immunity to practice discrimination when the government has bared it from doing so (487 U.S. 1, 11-12) . The Court also observed that the statute did not infringe on every club member's right of expressive association. It explained that the ability and opportunity to combine with others to advance one's views is a powerful means of ensuring the perpetuation of the freedoms the First Amendment has guaranteed to individuals. Effective advocacy of both public and private points of view, particularly controversial ones, is undeniably enhanced by group association. However, this does not mean that in every setting in which individuals exercise some discrimination in choosing associates, their selective process of inclusion and exclusion is protected by the Constitution. The Court said that on its face the statute does not affect in any significant way the ability of individuals to form associations that will advocate public or private viewpoints. It does not require the clubs to abandon or alter any activities that are protected by the First Amendment. If a club seeks to exclude individuals who do not share the views that the club's members wish to promote, the statute does not erect any obstacles. Instead, it merely prevents an association from using race, sex, and other specified characteristics as shorthand measures in place of more legitimate criteria for determining membership. It is conceivable that an association might be able to show that it is organized for specific expressive purposes and that it will not be able to advocate its desired viewpoints nearly as effectively if it cannot confine its membership to those who share the same sex, for example, or the same religion (487 U.S. 1, 13-14) . The Court found that plaintiff also failed on the challenge that the statute was overbroad (487 U.S. 1, 14) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.28

§ 22.28 Opposing Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Expulsion for Violating Rules of Association

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXPULSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS PROPER BECAUSE EXPULSION WAS BASED ON A VIOLATION OF THE ASSOCIATION'S RULES THAT WERE SUBSCRIBED OR ASSENTED TO BY THE MEMBERS AND WHICH PROVIDE FOR EXPULSION FOR SUCH VIOLATION.

A. Association's Rules Are Controlling. Members of an association may prescribe rules of conduct for themselves with penalties for the violation of such rules. The rules constitute an agreement and, unless they contravene some law of the land, are regarded in the same light as the terms of any other contract (Lawson v. Hewell (1897) 118 Cal. 613, 618-619, 50 P. 763).

B. Expulsion Proper for Violating Rules. An association may expel a member for violation of established rules of the association that have been subscribed or assented to by the members and that provide for expulsion for such violation (Smith v. Kern County Medical Asso. (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 263, 270, 120 P.2d 874).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that expulsion from membership in an association was improper because expulsion was not based on a violation of the association's rules [see § 22.20].

The argument supported by this form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when the member is seeking reinstatement in the association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from expelling the member or to oppose an action for damages.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member's expulsion was proper because it was based on violation of the rules of the association. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To show that expulsion was proper, counsel should show that the association had rules governing the conduct of the members, that the members had agreed to these rules, that the member's expulsion was for violation of these rules, and that expulsion was the prescribed penalty for such violation.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrativemandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Association's Rules Are Controlling

In Lawson v. Hewell (1897) 118 Cal. 613, 50 P. 763 , plaintiff was accused of conduct unbecoming a mason and charges were brought against him within the association. Plaintiff brought an action to restrain the association from proceeding with a trial on the charges. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint, and plaintiff appealed. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court held that the members of an association may prescribe rules of conduct for themselves during their membership, with penalties for the violation of such rules (118 Cal. 613, 618) . The Court said that these rules constituted the members' agreement and would be regarded in the same light as the terms of any other contract (118 Cal. 613, 619) . It held that the courts would assume jurisdiction only when there is an abuse of discretion and a clear, unreasonable, and arbitrary invasion of private rights (118 Cal. 613, 620) . This was not the case here (118 Cal. 613, 621-622) .

[b] Expulsion Proper for Violating Rules

In Smith v. Kern County Medical Asso. (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 263, 120 P.2d 874 , a physician sought a writ of mandate to compel his reinstatement in the county medical society. His petition was denied by the superior court, and he appealed from the judgment dismissing the proceeding. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. The Court found that the association was governed by a constitution and bylaws and that membership of qualified applicants was acquired by signing the constitution and bylaws of the society (19 Cal. 2d 263, 265) . The society adopted a rule requiring members to resign from the staff of a particular hospital because unsatisfactory conditions existed at that hospital.

Failure to resign was to be construed as a violation of the society's ethics and expulsion was provided as a possible penalty (19 Cal. 2d 263, 266) . The society expelled appellant for failing to resign from the offending hospital. The Court held that expulsion from an association could be based on and upheld for violation of established rules of the association that have been subscribed or assented to by the members and that provide for expulsion for such violation. It held that because appellant had violated the society's rule, his expulsion was valid (19 Cal. 2d 263, 270) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Rules Control

In Anderson v. Los Angeles County Employee Relations Com. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 817, 280 Cal. Rptr. 415 , plaintiff, a sheriff sergeant, was expelled for dual unionism from the union that was the certified bargaining representative for his bargaining unit when he helped organize a rival union. After the rival union was dissolved, the certified union denied plaintiff's application for reinstatement, and plaintiff filed charges with the county employee relations commission. When he did not receive the relief he sought, plaintiff filed a petition for a writ of mandate seeking a peremptory writ ordering the certified union to reinstate him. The court of appeal upheld the trial court's denial of that petition. Though most of its opinion focused on rules specific to labor unions, the court said that in reviewing the expulsion of a member from a voluntary unincorporated association, the only function a court may perform is to determine whether the association has acted within its powers in good faith in accord with its laws and with the laws of the land. An organization has the natural right of self-preservation, and may with properly expel members who show their disloyalty by joining a rival organization. The sole question in such a case is whether the disloyal members were tried and expelled in accord with the constitution and bylaws of the association (229 Cal. App. 3d 817, 826) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.29

§ 22.29 Opposing Contention That Expulsion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Expulsion Based on Rule Which Is Reasonable and Reasonably Interpreted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXPULSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS PROPER BECAUSE THE ASSOCIATION'S RULE ON WHICH THE EXPULSION WAS BASED, AND ITS INTERPRETATION OF THAT RULE, IS REASONABLE.

Reasonable Rules Reasonably Construed Will Be Upheld. The practical and reasonable construction of the constitution and bylaws of a voluntary organization by its governing board is binding on the membership and will be recognized by the courts (DeMille v. American Fed. of Radio Artists (1947) 31 Cal. 2d 139, 147, 187 P.2d 769).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that expulsion from membership in an association was improper because the rule on which expulsion was based was unreasonable [see § 22.21].

The argument supported by this form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when the member is seeking reinstatement in the association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from expelling the member or to oppose an action for damages.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue that the member's expulsion was proper because the rule on which the member's expulsion was based was reasonable, not contrary to public policy, and reasonably construed. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If the rule is unambiguous, counsel should show that it is reasonable and that the association did not try to change its meaning by interpreting it unreasonably [see, e.g., Sanchez v. Grain Growers Asso. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451, 176 Cal. Rptr. 655] . If the rule is ambiguous, counsel should show that the association construed it in a practical and reasonable manner [see, e.g., DeMille v. American Fed. of Radio Artists (1947) 31 Cal. 2d 139, 147, 187 P.2d 769] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Rules Reasonably Construed Will Be Upheld

DeMille v. American Fed. of Radio Artists (1947) 31 Cal. 2d 139, 187 P.2d 769 , was an action to restrain a union from suspending plaintiff for failure to pay an assessment. Defendant union's local board voted to assess every member $1 to help pay for a fight against anti-labor legislation. The local board prescribed automatic suspension for failure to pay. The local board's actions were subsequently approved by the union's national board. Plaintiff did not pay the assessment. Plaintiff contended, among other things, that the union had no authority under its constitution and bylaws to levy the assessment, and that if it did, the power was not duly exercised. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint and dismissed the action. The Supreme Court affirmed.

The Court found that the union's constitution and bylaws cover opposition to contemplated legislation (31 Cal. 2d 139, 144-145) and although the constitution does not explicitly grant the power to levy assessments it does give the national board power to interpret the constitution and bylaws. The Court held that a practical and reasonable construction of the constitution and bylaws of a voluntary organization by its governing board was binding on the membership and would be recognized by the courts. The Court found the national board's interpretation in this case to be reasonable and held that plaintiff was bound by it (31 Cal. 2d 139, 147) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable Rules Reasonably Construed Will Be Upheld

Sanchez v. Grain Growers Asso. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 444, 176 Cal. Rptr. 655 , was an action for money due, declaratory relief, and an accounting. Defendant association expelled plaintiffs, but refused to return any contributions made by plaintiffs. The association's bylaws provided that contributions known as retains, which were the source of capital for the association's operation, could be paid only at the end of a crop year and only if there was a surplus. The bylaws also state that the member's interest in the association has no intrinsic value. Plaintiff contended that these bylaws were void. The trial court agreed and gave judgment for plaintiffs. The court of appeal reversed. The court said that bylaws must be given a reasonable construction and when reasonably susceptible, should be given a construction that will sustain their validity (123 Cal. App. 3d 444, 451) . Thecourt held that the association's bylaws were reasonable in that they promoted fiscal stability of the association and that plaintiffs were contractually bound by them (123 Cal. App. 3d 444, 452-453) .

159 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.30

§ 22.30 Opposing Contention That Court Can Review Association's Decision to Exclude Person From Membership--Substantial Economic Interests Not Affected

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

JUDICIAL REVIEW OF THE ASSOCIATION'S DECISION TO EXCLUDE _____ [name] FROM MEMBERSHIP IS IMPROPER BECAUSE THE DECISION TO EXCLUDE DID NOT SIGNIFICANTLY AFFECT THE APPLICANT'S SUBSTANTIAL ECONOMIC INTEREST IN THAT THE APPLICANT'S RIGHT TO PRACTICE IN A CHOSEN OCCUPATION WAS NOT AFFECTED AND MEMBERSHIP WOULD NOT INDICATE ANY QUALIFICATION FOR ANY SPECIALIZED FIELD.

Right to Practice or Gain Specialist Recognition Must Be Affected. Admission to membership in a voluntary association will not be ordered, even though denial of admission affects a person's professional and economic interests, if membership does not affect his or her right to practice in a chosen occupation or indicate any qualification for any specialized field (Blatt v. University of So. California (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 935, 942, 85 Cal. Rptr. 601).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that exclusion from membership in an association was improper [see §§ 22.22 and 22.23]. The ground of opposition set forth is that the courts may not review the applicant's exclusion from membership because the association's decision to not admit the applicant does not affect a substantial economic interest of the applicant.

The argument supported by the form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when the applicant is seeking admission to the association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from denying admission to the applicant.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the impropriety of judicial review of the association's decision to exclude the applicant. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the court should not interfere with the association's decision to exclude the applicant, counsel should show that exclusion from the association would not deprive the applicant of his or her right to practice, nor would membership indicate his or her qualification for a specialized field of practice.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Practice or Gain Specialist Recognition Must Be Affected

Blatt v. University of Southern California (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 935, 85 Cal. Rptr. 601 , involved an action by an attorney seeking to compel his admission to membership in a university chapter of a national honorary society. Plaintiff, an attorney, alleged that refusal of membership would affect his professional and economic interest. The trial court sustained defendant's general demurrer to plaintiff's second amended complaint and entered a judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that because membership in the societydid not affect an attorney's right to practice or indicate any qualification for any specialized field of practice, plaintiff had failed to plead any justiciable issue (5 Cal. App. 3d 935, 942) . The court said that to adopt the contention that the court may compel admission to membership in voluntary organizations in any situation in which membership may enhance or affect one's professional or economic interests would subject to judicial review the membership selection activity and policies of every voluntary organization, because it is difficult to conceive of any organization that does not in some respect involve or affect professional or economic interests of its members (5 Cal. App. 3d 935, 942) .

Counsel should note that the court in Blatt gave a very narrow interpretation to the substantial economic effect rule set out in Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 160, 164-165, 81 Cal. Rptr. 623, 460 P.2d 495 , and it is not clear whether the Supreme Court intended that its holding in Pinsker be limited to situations in which the association's decision affected the applicant's right to practice a profession or gain specialist recognition.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.31

§ 22.31 Opposing Contention That Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

EXCLUSION FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS PROPER BECAUSE THE EXCLUSION WAS NOT ARBITRARY OR UNREASONABLE.

A. Associations Permitted to Make Rules and Regulations Governing Admission. Under California law, a voluntary association need not open its membership rolls to all who apply; the availability of judicial review does not prevent the association from setting reasonable standards for admission (Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 920, 938, 130 Cal. Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833).

B. Court Will Uphold Exclusion When Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable. Exclusion for failure to comply with reasonable and nonarbitrary requirements for membership in an association will not be interfered with by the courts (see Kronen v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 305-307, 46 Cal. Rptr. 808).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that exclusion from membership in an association was improper because it was arbitrary or unreasonable [see § 22.22].

The argument supported by the form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when the applicant is seeking admission to the association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from denying admission to the applicant or to oppose an action for damages.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive point that the applicant's exclusion was proper because it was not arbitrary or unreasonable. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the exclusion was not arbitrary or unreasonable, counsel may show, for example, that the rules governing admission to the association dealt only with the professional qualifications of the applicant and were not applied in an arbitrary or discriminatory manner [see Kronen v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 307, 46 Cal. Rptr. 808] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Associations Permitted to Make Rules and Regulations Governing Admission

In Marin County Bd. of Realtors, Inc. v. Palsson (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 920, 130 Cal. Rptr. 1, 549 P.2d 833 , a real estate salesman who was denied membership in the county board of realtors on the ground that he was not primarily engaged in the real estate business contested the board's decision. The board filed an action seeking a declaration that the exclusion was valid. The salesman filed a cross complaint seeking declaratory relief and an injunction granting him board membership. The trial court ruled in favor of the board. The Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that an association could set reasonable standards for admission (16 Cal. 3d 920, 938) . In this case, however, the Court concluded that the bylaw, requiring that a person be primarily engaged in the real estate business in order to be admitted to membership on the board, was not reasonable (16 Cal. 3d 920, 940) .

[b] Court Will Uphold Exclusion When Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

Kronen v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 46 Cal. Rptr. 808 , was an action by a dentist for declaratory and injunctive relief to enjoin respondent association from denying his application to membership. The trial court denied him relief, and the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. The society had denied his application for membership because he did not have two sponsors, as required by the society's rules. The court of appeal found that this requirement was directed only at petitioner's professional qualifications and held that it was not arbitrary or unreasonable, or applied in an arbitrary, unreasonable, or wrongful manner (237 Cal. App. 2d 289, 307) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Will Uphold Exclusion When Not Arbitrary or Unreasonable

Lewin v. St. Joseph Hospital of Orange (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 368, 146 Cal. Rptr. 892 , was a proceeding in mandamus to gain admission to defendant hospital's renal hemodialysis facility. Defendant operated this facility on a closed-staff basis. Plaintiff contended that it was the legal duty of the hospital to refrain from interfering with plaintiff's legitimate practice of his profession and that the exclusive contract for the use of the facilities was therefore unlawful. The trial court granted plaintiff a writ of mandate.

Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. The court held that a rule or policy decision of general application adopted by the governing authority of a hospital or professional society impinging upon the right of a physician to practice his or her profession fully will not be set aside by a court unless it is substantively irrational, unlawful, contrary to established public policy, or procedurally unfair (82 Cal. App. 3d 368, 385) . The court found that defendant hospital's decision to maintain a closed-staff operation in the renal hemodialysis facility was not substantively irrational, arbitrary, capricious, or wholly lacking in evidentiary support. The hospital had determined that this method of operation was preferable because it would facilitate hospital administration and improve patient care (82 Cal. App. 3d 368, 391) . Therefore, the court held that plaintiff was not entitled to admission (82 Cal. App. 3d 368, 394) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.32

§ 22.32 Opposing Contention That Expulsion or Exclusion From Membership in an Association Was Improper--Procedure Followed Was Fair

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [EXPULSION or EXCLUSION] FROM MEMBERSHIP IN THE ASSOCIATION WAS PROPER BECAUSE THE PROCEDURE FOLLOWED BY THE ASSOCIATION IN _____ [EXPELLING or EXCLUDING] THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] WAS FAIR.

A. Procedure Fair. The common law requirement of fair procedure is fulfilled when the accused is afforded notice and an opportunity to be heard by the association (Smith v. Kern County Medical Asso. (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 263, 268-269, 120 P.2d 874).

B. Formal Procedures Not Required. Fair procedure does not compel the association to provide a member or applicant with formal proceedings having all the embellishments of a court trial, nor does it require that the association adhere to a single mode of process (Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 829, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162 ; Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 555, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that expulsion or exclusion from membership in an association was improper because the procedure followed by the association in making the decision was not fair [see § 22.23].

The argument supported by the form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when a member or applicant is seeking reinstatement or admission to the association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from expelling the member or excluding the applicant or to oppose an action for damages for such expulsion or exclusion.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue of the fairness of the procedure followed in making the decision to expel or exclude. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the procedure provided by the association was fair, counsel may show, for example, that the member or applicant was given notice of the charges against him or her, that he or she was given an opportunity to respond, and that the association's adjudicators were impartial.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Procedure Fair

The facts and procedural background of Smith v. Kern County Medical Asso. (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 263, 120 P.2d 874 , are discussed in § 22.28[3][b]. In affirming the superior court's judgment denying relief to petitioner, the Supreme Court held that the requirements of the law are fulfilled when the accused is afforded notice and an opportunity to be heard. In this case, the society followed the procedure provided by its rules and the petitioner was accorded every opportunity to defend himself. Therefore, the Court held that his exclusion was valid (19 Cal. 2d 263, 268-269) .

[b] Formal Procedures Not Required

Anton v. San Antonio Community Hosp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 802, 140 Cal. Rptr. 442, 567 P.2d 1162 , was a mandamus proceeding in which plaintiff sought reinstatement to membership on defendant hospital's medical staff. Plaintiff contended, among other things, that the proceedings at which defendant decided to expel him were unfair because he was required to proceed with a hearing without the assistance of counsel and because the hospital's bylaw placed the burden of proof on him.

The trial court denied plaintiff a writ of mandate, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment, but held that the denial of representation by counsel and the enforcement of the bylaw placing the burden of proof on plaintiff did not constitute an abuse of the association's discretion in formalizing the procedures that would afford the affected party a fair opportunity to present his or her position (19 Cal. 3d 802, 829) and, therefore, that these rules were not violations of the standard of fair procedure (19 Cal. 3d 802, 827) .

The facts and procedural background of Pinsker v. Pacific Coast Society of Orthodontists (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 541, 116 Cal. Rptr. 245, 526 P.2d 253 , are discussed in § 22.23[3][a]. In Pinsker, the Supreme Court held that the association's exclusion of an applicant must be procedurally fair. However, the Court said that fair procedure does not compel formal proceedings with all the embellishments of a court trial, or adherence to a single mode of process; fair procedure may be satisfied by any one of a variety of procedures which afford a fair opportunity for an applicant to present his or her position. Therefore, the court should not attempt to fix a rigid procedure that must invariably be observed. Instead, the associations themselves should retain the initial and primary responsibility for devising a method that provides an applicant adequate notice of the charges against him or her and a reasonable opportunity to respond (12 Cal. 3d 541, 555-556) .

In Tiholiz v. Northridge Hospital Foundation (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 1197 , 199 Cal. Rptr. 338 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's denial of a writ of administrative mandate. The petitioner, a physician, was suspended from access to a hospital following his violation of the hospital's bylaws. The court explained that an institution affected with a public interest may not deprive an individual of fundamental interests without affording the individual fair procedure rights, and that a physician's access to a hospital is a protected fundamental interest. Fair procedure does not require rigid adherence to any particular procedure or timetable and must be assessed on an individual case basis; it requires, at a minimum, adequate notice of the administrative action proposed and a reasonable opportunity to be heard (151 Cal. App. 3d 1197, 1202) . Petitioner's failure to attend meetings of the executive committee prior to the formal decision to suspend his access rights, necessitating that the hearing be held after suspension began, was considered by the court. Because he was partially responsible for the delay and was given the opportunity to defend himself, these facts did not invalidate the hearing decision (151 Cal. App. 3d 1197, 1203) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.33

§ 22.33 Opposing Contention That an Action for Damages Is Proper--Intentional Interference With Right to Pursue Profession--Sufficient Justification

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DAMAGES SHOULD NOT BE AWARDED TO THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] OF THE ASSOCIATION FOR THE ASSOCIATION'S ALLEGED INTENTIONAL INTERFERENCE WITH THE _____ [MEMBER'S or APPLICANT'S] RIGHT TO PURSUE A PROFESSION BECAUSE THE ASSOCIATION HAD SUFFICIENT JUSTIFICATION FOR SUCH INTERFERENCE.

Association's Action Justified. An association is not liable for damages for intentional interference with a lawful business, calling, trade, or occupation if its actions are justified. Unless the action of the association is unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious, it is valid and justified (Centeno v. Roseville Community Hospital (1979) 107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 69, 73-74, 167 Cal. Rptr. 183).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that damages should be awarded to a member of or applicant to an association when the association intentionally interfered with the member's or applicant's right to pursue a profession [see § 22.25].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive point that damages should not be awarded to the member or applicant for the association's intentional interference with the member's or applicant's right to pursue a profession because the association's action was justified. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If the association involved is a hospital, counsel may show, for example, that the interference was reasonable in that it promoted the welfare of the hospital and its patients.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Association's Action Justified

Centeno v. Roseville Community Hospital (1979) 107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 167 Cal. Rptr. 183 , involved an action for declaratory judgment, injunctive relief, and damages from defendant hospital. The hospital refused to allow plaintiff to use its radiology facilities once he had withdrawn from a partnership with which the hospital had an exclusive contract. The trial court entered judgment for defendant. On appeal, the plaintiff challenged the exclusive contract on the grounds that itwas not justified under a standard of balancing the hardships to him versus those to the hospital. Affirming the trial court's decision, the court of appeal held that an action for damages did not lie because the association's action was justified. The court held that whether there was justification for the contract is determined by a balancing test, in the light of all the circumstances, weighing the respective importance to society and the parties of protecting the activities interfered with on the one hand and permitting the interference on the other hand (107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 69) . The court further held that unless the hospital's action was unreasonable, arbitrary, or capricious, it was valid and justified under the balancing test (107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 73-74) . The court, finding that the contract was reasonable, not against public policy, and therefore valid and justified, held that plaintiff was not entitled to relief (107 Cal. App. 3d 62, 77) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Association's Action Justified

Blank v. Palo Alto-Stanford Hospital Center (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 377, 44 Cal. Rptr. 572 , was an action for injunctive relief and damages for wrongful exclusion from hospital facilities. The board of directors of the hospital had adopted an exclusive contract method of operating their diagnostic x-ray department. Plaintiff applied to use the facilities, but was denied its use because of the exclusive contract. Plaintiff contended that his exclusion from the hospital facilities was unreasonable and arbitrary, that the hospital and its staff had combined and agreed to exclude him from using the hospital facilities without sufficient justification, and that they were therefore liable for the resulting damage. Plaintiff took the position that the test of whether an exclusion is unreasonable or arbitrary involved the same criteria and considerations as the test to determine whether persons combining to restrict the activities of another had sufficient justification for their actions. The trial court gave judgment for defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court found that the contract method of operating the diagnostic radiology department was adopted by the hospital board because it would result in better patient care and more efficient hospital administration. Therefore, the court held that the hospital board's decision was not unreasonable, but was justified in view of the ends to be accomplished (234 Cal. App. 2d 377, 394) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.34

§ 22.34 Opposing Contention That Court Can Review the Association's Decision to Expel or Exclude Person From Membership--Internal Remedies Not Exhausted

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] OF THE ASSOCIATION SHOULD BE BARRED FROM SEEKING JUDICIAL RELIEF BECAUSE THE _____ [MEMBER or APPLICANT] DID NOT EXHAUST THE ASSOCIATION'S INTERNAL REMEDIES.

Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Required. A member of or applicant for membership in an association must exhaust the association's internal remedies before seeking judicial relief (Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 474, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 ; Holderby v. Internat. Union etc. Engrs. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 843, 846, 291 P.2d 463).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that the court can review an association's decision. The argument may be made by the association whenever a member or applicant is seeking some form of judicial relief, if he or she has not exhausted the association's internal remedies.

The argument supported by the form may be raised in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1086 or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 to review an administrative decision, when a member or applicant is seeking reinstatement or admission to an association. The argument can also be used to oppose an application for an injunction to restrain the association from expelling the member or excluding the applicant or to oppose an action for damages resulting from improper expulsion or exclusion and from intentional interference with right to pursue a profession.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive point that the member or applicant is barred from seeking judicial relief because he or she did not exhaust the association's internal remedies. This issue is likely to be raised either by demurrer to the petition or complaint or by a motion for summary judgment. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. To demonstrate that the member or applicant has not exhausted the association's internal remedies, counsel may show that remedies were available to the member or applicant and that he or she was not excused from exhausting these remedies [see § 22.26].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms relating to injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of petitions for judicial review of a final administrative order by administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 474C, Procedures in Reviewing Agency Decisions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctive relief generally, see Ch. 116, Injunctions . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda of points and authorities for use in mandate proceedings to review administrative decisions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5, see Ch. 195, Public Administrative Law .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Required

Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 (also discussed in § 22.26[4][a]), was a suit for damages resulting from, among other things, denial of plaintiff's application for staff privileges at defendant hospital. Defendant contended that plaintiff could not seek relief from the courts because she had not appealed internally. The trial court denied a motion by defendant for summary judgment. Defendant sought a writ of mandate to reverse the decision, but the Supreme Court denied relief. The Court noted that plaintiff was required to exhaust all available internal remedies of the association before seeking relief from the courts, but found that defendant hospital did not provide such an internal remedy (17 Cal. 3d 465, 478) .

In Holderby v. Internat. Union Engrs. (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 843, 291 P.2d 463 , a union member instituted an action seeking reinstatement in a union as a member in good standing and for damages for unlawful exclusion. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiff. Defendant union appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that one who seeks judicial relief against an organization of which he or she is a member must first invoke and exhaust the remedies provided by the organization that are applicable to his or her grievance (45 Cal. 2d 843, 846) . Because plaintiff made no attempt to obtain an internal appeal when one was open to him, the Court held that he had no right to invoke the aid of the courts (45 Cal. 2d 843, 849) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Association's Internal Remedies Required

Zepeda v. Internat. Hodcarriers' etc. Union (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 609, 300 P.2d 251 , was a proceeding in mandamus to compel a union to post a member's name in its hiring hall and to dispatch the member to prospective employers from those lists in the same manner as other members of the union. Plaintiff, a union member, contended that the union wrongfully refused to dispatch him to jobs. The union contended that plaintiff was not qualified or fit for the jobs, and that he was barred from seeking judicial relief because he had not exhausted the union's internal remedies. The court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment in favor of defendant. It held that if the internal appeal process is not invoked, an aggrieved party foregoes the right to a judicial review. The court found that none of the exceptions to the exhaustion of remedies requirement were present, and that plaintiff was barred from seeking judicial relief (143 Cal. App. 2d 609, 614-615) .

Plaintiff in DeVaughn Peace, M.D., Inc. v. St. Francis Medical Center (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 454, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 , brought a civil action alleging various tort causes of action against a hospital based on the hospital's alleged wrongful deprivation of his medical staff privileges at the hospital during a 3-month period. Plaintiff's privileges had been summarily suspended for failure to comply with certain rules of the hospital's pediatrics department. Plaintiff never filed an appeal with the hospital medical staff's judicial review committee, as required by the medical staff bylaws. Later, his privileges were reinstated. The trial court granted the defendant a judgment of nonsuit, and the court of appeal affirmed. Citing Westlake Community Hosp. v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 465, 131 Cal. Rptr. 90, 551 P.2d 410 (discussed in § 22.34[3][a]), the court of appeal held the plaintiff's failure to exhaust intra-organizational remedies and, thereafter, to file a petition for writ of mandate as provided in the medical staff bylaws, was fatal to his claim (28 Cal. App. 4th 454, 459-460) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.35

§ 22.35 Opposing Contention That Association May Be Required to Divulge the Names of Its Members

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ASSOCIATION IS AN INTIMATE ASSOCIATION PROTECTED BY THE FIRST AMENDMENT'S FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION, AND IT IS NOT REQUIRED TO DISCLOSE THE IDENTITIES OF ITS MEMBERS.

A. Intimate Associations Are Constitutionally Protected. The right to intimate association is constitutionally protected. Whether or not a particularassociation warrants protection as an intimate association depends on its size, purpose, policies, selectivity, congeniality, and other characteristics that in a particular case may be pertinent (Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 71-73, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287 ; see Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788-789, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705).

[Optional] B. Constitutional Protection Extends to Nondisclosure of Membership List. The constitutional protection afforded an association extends to protect its membership list from forced disclosure when the organization makes a prima facie showing that disclosure of the list would cause an objective chilling of associational rights, such as harassment or loss of membership (Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 75-78, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287 (specter of tax audit is sufficiently chilling)).

[Optional] C. Forced Disclosure Requires Compelling State Interest. The protection from forced disclosure may only be overcome if disclosure is both justified by a compelling state interest and is the least intrusive method to satisfy that interest. Only the gravest abuses, endangering a paramount state interest, give occasion for permissible limitation. Moreover, even if such a compelling interest is present, it cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can be more narrowly achieved (Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 78, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that an association may be required to reveal its membership list.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive point that the association should not be compelled to disclose the identities of its members. The points and authorities in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should include the specific characteristics of the association that indicate its intimate nature, such as its small size and its highly selective membership procedures.

Optional Paragraph B sets forth the federal test. Although California cases seem to assume that once a group qualifies for the right of associational privacy, any disclosure of members is adverse, there has been no clear and unequivocal articulation of a rule different from the federal one [see Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 76, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in mandate proceedings generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to mandate proceedings generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intimate Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

In Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287 , the Franchise Tax Board issued an administrative subpoena duces tecum for a private club's membership list, including the names, addresses, and Social Security numbers of its members, for the purpose of determining whether members deducted club-related business expenses on their state income tax returns in violation of a ban against such deductions. The Board indicated that the list would be used to conduct random audits of individual club members' state income tax returns, even though it had no evidence that any club member took improper deductions and it did not expect to find much noncompliance. The club had informed its membership that business deductions for club expenses were illegal.

After the club resisted the subpoena, citing its members' First Amendment right of associational privacy, the Board petitioned the trial court for an order for its enforcement. The club is an organization with a solely social purpose. It maintains a restaurant and other facilities for the exclusive use of members and a few guests. Members are prohibited from conducting business on club premises, and must certify that charges incurred for use of any club facilities were not incurred in the furtherance of any business. Membership is limited, and is very selective, without any advertising or recruiting. The membership list is not revealed to outsiders. Club functions are private, with photographs or public descriptions prohibited. Admission is a deliberate qualification process, with a waiting period of up to one year, throughout which the candidate is continuously and subjectively evaluated for congeniality and compatibility with members. Membership is ultimately decided by a secret ballot, in which only two negative votes defeat the application. The club admits that it discriminates on the basis of age by requiring all prospective members to be at least 25. It is widely reputed to discriminate against women. The trial court granted the motion for enforcement of the order and directed disclosure of the membership list, but stayed its order pending theappellate challenge. The club petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order enforcing the subpoena.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate commanding the trial court to vacate its order and to enter a new order denying the motion for enforcement. The court began its analysis by explaining that the freedom of association has two components: the freedom of intimate association and the freedom of expressive association. It said that the club, as a purely social organization, must base its associational privacy claim on the freedom of intimate association. Intimate association is protected because choices to enter into and maintain certain relationships must be secured against undue intrusion by the state because of the role those relationships play in safeguarding individual freedom (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 71) . The court reviewed the qualitative continuum of personal relationships, from the most intimate which are protected by the freedom of association, to the most public and impersonal, which are not. It said that the determination of which relationships in between the extreme ends of the continuum warrant protection is based on a careful assessment of where that relationship's objective characteristics locate it on the spectrum. Relevant factors are size, purpose, policies, selectivity, congeniality, and other characteristics that in a particular case may be pertinent (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 72-73) .

The court distinguished the associational characteristics of the club from those of organizations to which the right to protected association did not apply [see cases discussed in § 22.27]. It said the club was near the intimate end of the spectrum. Specific determinative features included the club's small membership, organizational structure, and geographic focus, its fixed membership, the limited geographic area in which most of its members live, its lack of affiliation with any formal national organization, and its failure to advertise or recruit new members (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 73) . The court also discussed the club's very limited purpose: it exists solely for the enjoyment of social intercourse among members carefully chosen for their congeniality and social compatibility. It makes no pretense of any civic or community objectives. Further, the club bars its doors, does not publicize itself, and prohibits members from describing or photographing its proceedings. The court concluded that the club's carefully enforced intimacy clearly made it a purely private social group that is entitled to the protection of freedom of intimate association (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 74-75) .

In Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 , after plaintiff, a member of the Church of Scientology, was denied membership in defendant, an organization devoted to informing the public about the harmful effects of mind control and the unethical practices employed by cults, he filed an action for damages and preliminary and permanent injunctive relief alleging that defendant's actions constituted religious discrimination in violation of the Unruh Civil Rights Act. Defendant opposed the action, arguing that it was a truly private association to which the Unruh Act did not apply. When the trial court denied the application for preliminary injunction, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court explained that the freedom of association encompasses two freedoms: the freedom of private association, and the freedom of expressive association (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 787) . The freedom of private association refers to the freedom to enter into and carry on certain intimate or private relationships. Although the precise boundaries of this freedom have not been drawn, it protects those relationships that presuppose deep attachments and commitments to those individuals with whom one shares not only a special community of thought, experiences, and beliefs, but also distinctively personal aspects of one's life. The court said that determining the limits of state authority over an individual's freedom to enter into a particular association entails a careful assessment of where that relationship's objective characteristics locate it on a spectrum from the most intimate to the most attenuated of personal attachments. The factors that may be relevant include size, purpose, policies, selectivity, and congeniality (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788) . The court found that the relationship among defendant's members is the type of intimate and private relationship that warrants constitutional protection, and enumerated some of the factors it found relevant. Defendant is not a large and basically unselective group; membership is only open to families and former members of destructive groups and others committed to exposing these groups. Membership is subject to approval by the membership committee, which has great discretion, and requires a very detailed and personalized application. Finally, defendant is a well-defined subgroup whose membership is highly restricted and selective, based on shared opinions, thoughts, and concerns with respect to destructive cults. The court distinguished defendant from groups that have been found not to be truly private associations. Its purpose is narrow and its membership is limited; it carefully inquires into the background of its prospective members and examines their reasons for wanting to join. Moreover, it does not offer any goods and services to the general public; rather, it counsels and provides support to its very selective membership. Thus, the court concluded that the relationship between defendant's members primarily involves the intimate personal concerns and activities deserving of a high level of constitutional protection. Application of the Unruh Act to defendant would infringe on its members' rights of private association (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 788-789) .

[b] Constitutional Protection Extends to Nondisclosure of Membership List

The facts and procedural background of Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287 , are discussed in 22.35[3][a]. After concluding that the club was a purely private social group entitled to the protection of freedom of intimate association, the court addressedthe issue of whether or not that protection extends to the membership list. The board argued that disclosure to a duly authorized taxing authority would be an insignificant infringement on any right to associational privacy that the club might have. It argued that disclosure would not alter, restrict, or otherwise tangibly impair the social relationships among club members because the governmental activity involved is not the prevention of their association.

The court observed that in the federal cases, to maintain the confidentiality of its membership list, an organization must make a prima facie showing that the disclosure of that list would cause an objective chilling of associational rights, such as harassment or loss of membership. Under that test, a merely subjective fear of reprisal or other adverse impact is insufficient to show an infringement of associational rights. The court went on to observe that the California cases seem to assume that once a group qualifies for the right of associational privacy, any disclosure of members is adverse. Without indicating which it thought was the proper test, the court opined that the club had easily met the federal test. It found the testimony by various members compelling. The members cherished their personal relationships, which had been established after a painstaking selection process. The elimination of privacy would change the environment of the club, discourage present members from maintaining their memberships, and inhibit applications for new members. Additionally, submission to a tax audit solely because of club membership would be harassing and annoying. Public criticism might subject members to public abuse and contempt if the fact of their membership was disclosed. The court concluded that all these concerns exceeded merely subjective concerns. It suggested that the specter of a tax audit solely because of membership in a group alone is sufficiently chilling (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 76) . The court was not persuaded by the Board's argument that the club's concern over public disclosure is ill founded because the members' identities will be kept confidential. The club's main privacy objection is to the dissemination to the Board itself, which would use the previously confidential information to conduct a tax audit on selected club members. The court said the right to privacy exists to permit citizens to shield themselves from the prying eyes of government agents; government intrusion must have some oher justification than the promise that the information will not be shared (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 77) .

The court also rejected the Board's attempt to discriminate between expressive and intimate associations, through its contention that only expressive associations enjoy membership list protection. The court felt that intimate associations are just as entitled to constitutional protection, perhaps even more so. It concluded that the club's membership list is protected by its members' First Amendment right of intimate associational privacy (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 77-78) .

[c] Forced Disclosure Requires Compelling State Interest

The facts and procedural background of Pacific-Union Club v. Superior Court (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 283 Cal. Rptr. 287 , are discussed in 22.35[3][a]. After concluding that the club's membership list is protected by its members' First Amendment right of intimate associational privacy, the court said that right is not absolute. The state may overcome that right if disclosure is both justified by a compelling state interest and is the least intrusive method to satisfy that interest. The court explained that the state bears a particularly heavy burden of establishing a compelling state interest. No showing merely of a rational relationship to some colorable state interest is sufficient; only the gravest abuses, endangering paramount interests, give occasion for permissible limitation. Moreover, even if such a compelling interest is present, it cannot be pursued by means that broadly stifle fundamental personal liberties when the end can be more narrowly achieved (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 78) . The Board implied that the regulation against tax deductions for discriminatory club expenses furthers the public policy against discrimination by preventing taxpayer subsidization of that behavior. While not disagreeing with the Board, the court said it confused public discrimination, which is illegal, and private discrimination, which seems not to be. The court framed the issue before it as whether the list may be disclosed to enforce the regulation against prohibited tax deductions (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 79) . That depends on whether the state's interest in combating discrimination is sufficiently compelling to require disclosure of a constitutionally protected list of intimate associates.

The court concluded that the Board has no compelling state interest because it had no reason to suspect that club members are violating the regulation. Instead, the Board was fishing, and it wanted the membership list so it could determine whether or not a violation occurred by conducting random audits of club members. The court observed that the only evidence of possible violations showed compliance, and that the Board had no factual basis for a compelling state interest sufficient to overcome the club's right of privacy. Government administrative agencies are not permitted to subpoena constitutionally protected information regarding an individual's intimate personal associations simply to seek assurance the law is not violated (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 79-80) . Moreover, the court continued, even assuming a compelling state interest, the Board would have to establish that disclosure is the least intrusive method available to achieve its objective. Random audits of persons based solely on their membership in a private organization are serious intrusions. The court said there are alternative, less intrusive, methods of making this determination, including audits focusing on wealthier male Bay Areans with certain occupations, certain income levels, and excessive business deductions, or amendment of state tax forms to require attachment of a schedule listing the names of all organizations to whom the taxpayer has paid business expenses that are deducted. The court concluded the club is constitutionally entitled to protect its membership list from disclosure (232 Cal. App. 3d 60, 80-81) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 22 ASSOCIATIONS AND CLUBS
PART II. FORMS

2-22 California Points & Authorities § 22.36

§ 22.36 Opposing Contention that Association May Be Required to Accept Individual As Member

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ASSOCIATION IS AN EXPRESSIVE ASSOCIATION PROTECTED BY THE FIRST AMENDMENT'S FREEDOM OF ASSOCIATION, AND IT IS NOT REQUIRED TO ACCEPT AS A MEMBER A PERSON WHO WOULD IMPEDE ITS ABILITY TO ENGAGE IN PROTECTED EXPRESSIVE ACTIVITIES.

A. Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected. The freedom to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends is constitutionally protected. This freedom encompasses the right not to associate, and an association need not admit as members persons who would impede its ability to engage in protected activities and to disseminate its preferred views (Boy Scouts of America v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554 ; Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 790, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705).

[Optional] B. Only Compelling State Interest that Is Unrelated to Context and Unachievable Through Less Restrictive Means Justifies Infringement on Expressive Association. Although the right to associate for expressive purposes is not absolute, infringements on that right may only be justified by regulations adopted to serve compelling state interests, unrelated to the suppression of ideas, that cannot be achieved through means significantly less restrictive of associational freedoms (Boy Scouts of America v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554 ; Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 791, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to the contention that an association may be required to accept as a member a specified individual. The form is based on the right of expressive association. If the facts indicate that the right of intimate association is also implicated, counsel may include authorities from § 22.35.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive point that the association should not be compelled to accept certain persons as members. The points and authorities set out in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should include the specific activities and views of the association that indicate its expressive purposes, as well as how admission of the person seeking membership would interfere with its right of expressive association.

These points and authorities may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the contention set forth in § 22.27.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For pleading and practice forms relating to associations and clubs, see Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the Unruh Act, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments . For discussion and forms relating to injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities Forms

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to the Unruh Act, see Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to injunctions, see Ch. 116, Injunctions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expressive Associations Are Constitutionally Protected

In Boy Scouts of America v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554 , the Boy Scouts of America revoked the adult membership of an assistant scoutmaster on learning that he was gay and a gay rights activist, on the ground that the Boy Scouts specifically forbid membership to homosexuals. The assistant scoutmaster filed a complaint against the Boy Scouts in New Jersey Superior Court alleging that his expulsion violated New Jersey's public accommodations law, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation in places of public accommodation. The New Jersey Superior Court granted summary judgment in favor of the Boy Scouts on the ground that the Boy Scouts was not a place of public accommodation and, alternatively, the Boy Scouts is a distinctly private group exempted from coverage under the public accommodations statute. The New Jersey Superior Court's Appellate Division reversed, holding that the public accommodations law applied to the Boy Scouts, and the Boy Scouts violated it. The New Jersey Supreme Court affirmed the Appellate Division, and held that application of the public accommodations law did not violate the Boy Scouts' federal constitutional associational rights, because the Boy Scouts' size, nonselectivity, inclusive rather than exclusive purpose, and practiceof inviting or allowing nonmembers to attend meetings establish that the Boy Scouts is not sufficiently personal or private to warrant constitutional protection, and that the assistant scoutmaster's membership does not violate the Boy Scouts' right of expressive association because his inclusion would not affect in a significant way existing members' ability to carry out their purposes; further, the court held that New Jersey has a compelling interest in eliminating discrimination and the public accommodations law abridges no more speech than is necessary to effect that purpose.

The United States Supreme Court reversed. The Court found that there is implicit in the First Amendment is a right to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends [530 U.S. 640, 647 , citing Roberts v. United States Jaycees (1984) 468 U.S. 609, 622] . The Court found that the Boy Scouts is protected by the First Amendment associational right because it seeks to transmit a system of values, thus engaging in expressive activity [530 U.S. 640, 647-650]. The Court also found that the forced inclusion of an unwanted person in a group infringes the group's freedom of expressive association if the presence of that person affects in a significant way the group's ability to advocate public or private viewpoints [530 U.S. 640, 649], and held that the forced inclusion of a gay man as an assistant scoutmaster would significantly affect the Boy Scouts' ability to advocate public or private viewpoints, since the Boys Scouts sincerely hold the view that homosexuality is inconsistent with the Boy Scout requirement that a Boy Scout be morally straight and the presence of an gay rights activist would significantly burden the Boy Scouts' desire not to promote homosexual conduct [530 U.S. 640].

The facts and procedural background of Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 , are discussed in § 22.35[3][a]. In Hart, after finding that the association of defendant and its members was truly private and warranted constitutional protection, the court of appeal addressed the issue of the freedom of expressive association (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 790) . It said that this freedom refers to the freedom to associate with others in pursuit of a wide variety of political, social, economic, educational, religious, and cultural ends. This freedom plainly presupposes a freedom not to associate. The court said there was substantial evidence to support the conclusion that admitting plaintiff and other Scientologists as members would impede defendant's ability to engage in protected activities and to disseminate its preferred views. Plaintiff's admitted purpose was to change defendant's belief that Scientology is a destructive cult. Obviously, this purpose is incompatible with defendant's work in counseling and providing support for ex-cult followers and the families of current cult followers. The court concluded that application of the Unruh Act would place a heavy burden on defendant's constitutionally protected freedom of expressive association (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 790) .

[b] Only Compelling State Interest that Is Unrelated to Context and Unachievable Through Less Restrictive Means Justifies Infringement on Expressive Associations

The facts and procedural background of Hart v. Cult Awareness Network (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 , are discussed in § 22.35 under Discussion of Authorities, Intimate Associations Are Constitutionally Protected. In Hart, after finding that application of the Unruh Act would interfere with defendant's constitutionally protected freedom of expressive association, the court of appeal cautioned that the right to associate for expressive purposes is not absolute. It said that infringements on that right may be justified by regulations adopted to serve compelling state interests, unrelated to the suppression of ideas, that cannot be achieved through means significantly less restrictive of associational freedoms. Plaintiff contended that the privacy rights of defendant's members are outweighed by the state's compelling interest in eradicating religious discrimination. The court said that plaintiff did not identify any compelling state interest unrelated to the suppression of ideas that justified application of the Unruh Act to defendant, and explained that what plaintiff characterized as religious discrimination is defendant's expression of its own ideas and beliefs in a private and highly selective forum. Under the circumstances, any state action compelling defendant to accept Scientologists as members would be tantamount to governmental sponsorship or promotion of one group's religious beliefs at the expense of another group. Courts may not interfere with the expression of First Amendment freedoms on the ground that they view a particular expression as unwise or irrational (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 791) . The court also observed that in light of the establishment clause of the U. S. Constitution and the religion clause of the California Constitution, it is difficult to postulate any state interest that would justify application of the Unruh Act. It concluded that plaintiff failed to identify any state interest, let alone one which is sufficiently countervailing or compelling, as to justify the infringements on the constitutional right of defendant which would occur were the Unruh Act applied (13 Cal. App. 4th 777, 791-792) .

[c] Compelling State Interest Cannot Justify Severe Intrusion on Freedom of Expressive Association

The facts and procedural background of Boy Scouts of America v. Dale (2000) 530 U.S. 640, 120 S. Ct. 2446, 147 L. Ed. 2d 554 are discussed in § 22.36[3][a]. In Dale, after concluding that the Boy Scouts is protected by the First Amendment associational right and that the forced inclusion of a gay rights activist as an assistant scoutmaster would significantly burden the Boy Scouts' desire not to promote homosexual conduct, the Court found that although the state has a compelling interest in eliminating discrimination, that interest did not justify enforcement of New Jersey's public accommodations law prohibiting discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation against the Boy Scouts since it would besuch a severe intrusion on the Boy Scouts' rights to freedom of expressive association [530 U.S. 640, 655-657].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT

2-23 California Points & Authorities 23.syn

§ 23.syn Synopsis to Chapter 23: ATTACHMENT

§ 23.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 23.02 Governing Statutes

§ 23.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 23.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 23.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 23.06-23.19 [Reserved]

§ 23.20 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action Based on Noncontractual Claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attachment Authorized Only in Action Based on Contract

[b] Strict Construction of Attachment Law

[c] Fundamental Basis for Cause of Action as Determinative

[d] Attachment Unauthorized in Tort or Equity Actions

[e] Action for Breach of Duty Growing Out of Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fundamental Basis for Cause of Action as Determinative

[b] Strict Construction of Attachment Law

[c] Attachment Unauthorized in Tort or Equity Actions

§ 23.21 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action Not Based On Claim for Money [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Obligation Other Than Payment of Money

§ 23.22 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action on Claim Not Arising Out of Individual Defendant's Trade, Business, or Profession [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Personal, Family, or Household Claim Against Individual

§ 23.23 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action on Claim Secured by Real Property [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Secured Claim

[b] Executory Contract for Sale of Realty

[c] Waiver of Security

[d] Inadequacy of Security at Time of Giving Mortgage

§ 23.24 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Sum Claimed Not Readily Ascertainable Amount of $500 or More [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity of Determining Measure of Liability

§ 23.25 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Application or Accompanying Affidavit Fails to Meet Statutory Requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.020, 484.030]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Insufficient Affidavit

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Application as Required to Describe Property and State That Such Property Is Subject to Attachment

§ 23.26 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Failure of Plaintiff to Establish Probable Validity of Claim or That Attachment Sought for Legitimate Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)(2), (3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 23.27 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Exempt From Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Liberal Construction of Exemption Statutes

[c] Plaintiff's Failure to Oppose Exemption Claim

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Execution Law to Attachment Law

§ 23.28 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Necessary for Support of Defendant or Family or Compensation for Personal Services [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.020(b), (c), 706.011]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Necessary for Support of Individual or Household as Exempt

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compensation for Personal Services as Exempt

§ 23.29 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Not Subject to Attachment Is Exempt From Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Not Subject to Attachment as Exempt

§ 23.30 Supporting Defendant's Motion of Objection to Plaintiff's Required Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 489.210, 995.930, 995.940]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 23.31 Supporting Motion for Recovery of Damages for Wrongful Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.010, 490.020, 996.440]--By Defendant [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.410, 996.430, 996.460]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 23.32 Supporting Defendant's Application to Vacate or Stay Attachment--Action Against Service Member [Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 23.33 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Based on Quasi-Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contracts Implied in Law

[b] Failure of Consideration

[c] Waiver of Tort

[d] Recovery of Funds Collected From Third Persons

[e] Action Based on Judgment

[f] Establishment of Tort Immaterial

[g] Joinder of Contract Count With Other Counts

§ 23.34 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Proceeding to Confirm Arbitration Award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1285]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attachment Permissible in Proceeding to Confirm Arbitration Award

§ 23.35 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Is on Claim Arising out of Defendant's Trade, Business, or Profession [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Individual Engaged in Trade, Business, or Profession

[b] Activities of Guarantor

[c] Personal Borrowing for Loan to Partnership

§ 23.36 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Against Guarantor Who by Express Contract Has Waived All Rights in Security

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security by Express Contract

§ 23.37 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Real Property Securing Claim Sued on Has Become Valueless or Decreased in Value to Less Than Amount Owing [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Security

[b] Security Only as Required to Be Valueless

§ 23.38 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Damages Readily Ascertainable and Their Basis for Computation Reasonable and Definite

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Satisfaction of Requirement That Claim Be for Readily Ascertainable Amount

[b] Damages as Not Required to Be Known by Plaintiff

§ 23.39 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Verified Complaint in Lieu of Affidavit Is Insufficient to Support Opposition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 482.040]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Verified Pleading Cannot Be Considered as Affidavit

[b] When Verification Limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 446 Apply to Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040

§ 23.40 Opposing Motion for Recovery of Damages for Wrongful Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.020, 996.440]--Plaintiff's Liability Limited by Amount of Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Plaintiff's Liability

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.01

§ 23.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains forms of memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 23.20 -23.26] and opposing [see §§ 23.33 -23.38] a defendant's notice of opposition to a plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment, in supporting a claim of exemption [see §§ 23.27 -23.29], in supporting a defendant's objection to plaintiff's required undertaking [see § 23.30] in supporting [see § 23.31] and opposing [see § 23.40] a motion for recovery for damages for wrongful attachment, and in supporting defendant/service member's application to stay or vacate a writ of attachment [see § 23.32].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.02

§ 23.02 Governing Statutes

The Attachment Law, as it may be known and cited [see Code Civ. Proc. § 482.010], is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 481.010-493.060.

The Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (Civ. Code §§ 3439.01-3439.12) allows a creditor to attach an asset, or its proceeds, that has been fraudulently transferred by the debtor, whether the creditor's claim has matured or not [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2), (b)]. Limitations on attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset in the hands of the transferee are governed by Civ. Code §§ 3439.08-3439.09.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachments

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.03

§ 23.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda of points and authorities, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachments

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.04

§ 23.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in attachment proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for use in other proceedings involving attachments, see in that set the following chapters:

- Ch. 40, Appeal: An Overview, et seq.
- Ch. 135, Contempt.
- Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments.
- Ch. 276, Garnishment.
- Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus.
- Ch. 294, Homesteads.
- Ch. 350, Logs and Timber.
- Ch. 361, Mechanics' Liens.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachments

171 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.05

§ 23.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureAppealsBriefs

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2-23 California Points & Authorities §§ 23.06-23.19

[Reserved]

§§ 23.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.20

§ 23.20 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action Based on Noncontractual Claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF NOTICE OF OPPOSITION
vs.	)	TO RIGHT TO ATTACH ORDER
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT BE ISSUED IN AN ACTION ON A CLAIM WHICH IS NOT BASED ON AN EXPRESS OR IMPLIED CONTRACT.

A. Notice of Opposition Against Issuance of Right to Attach Order. A defendant who desires to oppose the issuance of the right to attach order sought by plaintiff, or who objects to the amount sought to be secured by the attachment, must file and serve on plaintiff, no later than five court days prior to the date set for the hearing, a notice of opposition stating the grounds on which defendant opposes the issuance of the order or objects to the amount sought to be secured by the attachment. The notice must be accompanied by an affidavit supporting any factual issues raised and points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised. A claim of exemption pursuant to Section 484.070 of the Code of Civil Procedure may be included in the notice of opposition (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a), (b)).

B. Required Court Findings. At the hearing on the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order, the court may issue such order only if it finds, among other findings, that the claim on which the attachment is based is one on which an attachment may be issued (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)).

C. Attachment Authorized Only in Actions Based on Contract. Except as otherwise provided by statute, an attachment may be issued only in an action on a claim or claims for money, each of which is based on a contract, express or implied (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)).

D. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. Proceedings by attachment are statutory and special, and the provisions of the statute must be strictly followed or no rights will be acquired thereunder (Sousa v. Lucas (1909) 156 Cal. 460, 463, 105 P. 413).

E. Fundamental Basis of Cause of Action as Determinative. When a party seeks the remedy of attachments, it is the fundamental basis of his/her cause of action, rather than the form or phraseology of his/her pleadings, which determines his/her right to the writ (DeMirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 905, 908, 206 P.2d 20).

F. Attachment Unauthorized in Tort or Equity Actions. A writ of attachment is unauthorized where the foundation of the action is in tort or is a demand for equitable relief (Hallidie v. Enginger (1917) 175 Cal. 505, 508-509, 166 P. 1).

[Optional] G. Action for Breach of Duty Growing Out of Contract. A writ of attachment may not be granted in an action in which plaintiff's complaint seeks damages which arise out of the breach of a duty growing out of contract between plaintiff and defendant, since the claim for damages lies in the breach of the duty imposed by law, and the allegations of the contract relations between the parties are made merely for the purpose of showing that plaintiff was not a trespasser or that he/she was lawfully in the position or situation at the time defendant's breach occurred (DeMirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 905, 909, 206 P.2d 20).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order soughtby a plaintiff in an action on a claim which is not based on an express or implied contract [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 483.010(a), 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this points and authorities may be submitted in support of a notice of motion for an order to set aside a right to attach order, quash a writ of attachment, and release property levied on pursuant to the writ where defendant's property has been attached pursuant either to a writ issued ex parte under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 485.010-485.540, (issuance of attachment on showing of great or irreparable injury) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 485.240(a), (b) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised in notice of motion as required to accompany notice)], or to a writ issued ex parte under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 492.010-492.090 (nonresident attachment) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050(a), (b) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised in notice of motion as required to accompany notice)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attachment Authorized Only in Action Based on Contract

The Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010(a) sets forth the following statutes which specifically provide for the right to have an attachment issued in actions in which the underlying claim is noncontractual in nature: Fin. Code § 3144 (right of attachment of Superintendent of Banks in action to collect sums due on assessment from stockholder of bank who fails to pay in full); Food & Agric. Code § 281 (attachment by Director of Agriculture in suit in name of people for recovery of license or fee); Health & Safety Code § 11501 (right of attachment in action maintained by State of California against person engaged in unlawful sale of controlled substances for recovery of public funds); Lab. Code § 5600 (attachment by Workman's Compensation Appeals Board on behalf of injured employee); and Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 6713 (attachment in action by Attorney General to collect taxes), 7864 (attachment in action by Attorney General to recover unpaid license tax, interest, penalties, and costs), 8972 (attachment in action by Attorney General to recover fuel tax), 11473 (attachment in action by Attorney General to recover private car tax), 12680 (action by Attorney General to recover tax assessed against insurer), former § 18883 (attachment in action by Attorney General or counsel for Franchise Tax Board to recover personal income tax), 26351 (attachment in action by Attorney General or counsel for Franchise Tax Board to collect tax due under Bank and Corporation Tax Law), 30302 (attachment in action by Attorney General to collect cigarette tax), 32352 (attachment in action by Attorney General to recover alcoholic beverage tax).

In addition, notwithstanding Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010, an attachment may be issued in any action for the recovery of money brought against a nonresident individual, an unqualified foreign corporation, or a foreign partnership which has not filed a designation pursuant to Corp. Code § 15700 [Code Civ. Proc. § 492.010]. However, after the defendant has filed a general appearance in the action, only nonexempt property of the defendant may be levied upon, and property previously levied upon which is exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020 [see §§ 23.27 -23.29] must be released on order of the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 492.040]. The Law Revision Commission Comment to this section states that a defendant who has made a general appearance may, in addition, secure a release of all property attached if there is authorization for the attachment apart from the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 492.010-492.090 governing nonresident attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050 (at hearing of defendant's application for quash of attachment, court as required to determine whether plaintiff entitled to right to attach order)].

[b] Strict Construction of Attachment Law

Sousa v. Lucas (1909) 156 Cal. 460, 105 P. 413 , was an action for the foreclosure of a chattel mortgage given on a growing crop of hay. The hay had been previously attached by a defendant sheriff acting for a second defendant in an action commenced against the person who had given the mortgage. The trial court denied defendants' motion for nonsuit and, on defendants' appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. In pertinent part, the defendants argued that the complaint was insufficient to warrant entitling the plaintiff to any relief. However, the Court held that the prior chattel mortgage was valid and sufficient to give plaintiff priority over any interest which could have been acquired by the attachment. Because the attaching sheriff failed to follow the statutory procedures then in force in order to afford plaintiff protection for his secured claim, the defendant, thus, had no lien on or legal right to the property. In support of this conclusion, the Court stated that proceedings by attachment are statutory and special, and that the provisions of the statute must be strictly followed or no rights will be acquired thereunder (156 Cal. 460, 463) .

[c] Fundamental Basis for Cause of Action as Determinative

In DeMirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 905, 206 P.2d 20 , a lessor sued his lessee for damage to the leased premises and to the lessor's adjoining property from a fire caused by the lessee's storage of flammable materials on the leased premises. The first three causes of action were based oncontract and predicated on a lease provision that the lessee would hold the lessor harmless from the use, misuse, and neglect of the premises. The lessor obtained a writ of attachment and levied upon the lessee's bank account. The lessee moved to have the writ discharged, and, on the trial court's denial of his motion, the lessee appealed. The court of appeal reversed and held that, despite plaintiffs' artfully contrived attempt to state causes of action within the scope of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)], they had failed to do so. The court stated that when a party seeks the remedy of attachment, it is the fundamental basis of the cause of action, rather than the form or phraseology of the pleadings which determines the party's right to the writ. The court noted that, although there are certain situations in which a plaintiff may elect to sue on a contract theory, rather than on a tort theory, it invariably appears that the alleged tortious conduct is merely incidental to the contractual liability relied upon, and that it was unnecessary in these situations to prove the commission of a tort in order to make the contract counts good. The court further explained that, if the complaint states a cause of action for breach of a promise set forth in the contract, the action is regarded as ex contractu, but, if it seeks damages arising out of the breach of a duty growing out of the contract, the action will be regarded as ex delicto. In such cases, the tort which is the basis of the claim for damages lies in the breach of the duty imposed by law, and the allegations of the contract relations between the parties are made merely for the purpose of showing that the plaintiff was not a trespasser or that he or she was lawfully in the position or situation at the time the defendant's breach occurred. The court found that these principles had governed such prior California decisions as Williamson v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 250, 153 P.2d 990 (motion for change of venue to defendant's residence granted where cause of action against carrier for personal injuries, although pleaded as breach of contract for safe conveyance, sounded in tort); Automobile Ins. Co. v. Union Oil Co. (1948) 85 Cal. App. 2d 302, 193 P.2d 48 (statute of limitations as not barring action for injury to property caused by defective product, although pleaded in terms of breach of warranty); and Harding v. Liberty Hosp. Corp. (1918) 177 Cal. 520, 171 P. 98 (one-year statute of limitations for negligence as applicable in action for malpractice based on alleged breach of contract to provide competent medical care). In applying these principles, the court concluded that the relationship between plaintiffs and defendant was created by contract, but that the duty to exercise reasonable care and to respond in damages for a failure to do so was imposed by force of law, independent of any contract or the terms thereof (91 Cal. App. 2d 905, 909) .

[d] Attachment Unauthorized in Tort or Equity Actions

Hallidie v. Enginger (1917) 175 Cal. 505, 166 P. 1 , was an action by a trustee for stockholders of a corporation brought against a defendant who had allegedly fraudulently induced the corporation to sell certain shares of another corporation to the defendant for a mere fraction of their real value. Plaintiff levied a writ of attachment which defendant moved to discharge. The motion was granted and plaintiff appealed contending that her action was upon an implied contract for the payment of money and that, therefore, the attachment was legal. The Supreme Court, however, affirmed and held that plaintiff's action sounded in tort for fraud. The Court observed that the attachment law, insofar as it limited the type of action in which an attachment may issue to an action on contract, express or implied, was derived from the common-law distinction between actions ex contractu and ex delicto. The distinguishing features of the two actions consisted in the nature of the obligation violated, since a tort was a violation of a duty imposed by the general law on all persons occupying the relation involved in a given transaction, while a breach of contract was a violation of a specific duty created by the contract. Although the law of contract had evolved to include contracts implied by law, so that a plaintiff whose watch had been stolen could treat the theft as a contract of sale and sue in like manner ex contractu, such a plaintiff could not sue in both tort and contract. Thus, if the plaintiff waived his or her contract and sued in tort, the complaint alleged only a cause of action in tort. The Court stated that these distinctions were still valid for purposes of attachment law and that, thus, the statute limiting attachment to actions arising on contract leaves no room for using it in actions founded in tort. The Court added that for the same reasons, the writ is unauthorized in actions where the foundation of the demand is for equitable relief, unless it could be stated that the exercise of the curt's equitable powers, such as in settling accounts and striking a balance, was incidentally involved in the action. In the case before it, the Court noted that at common law it would have been an action of trespass on the case damages for deceit. The allegations touching the contract of sale of stock were useful and valuable only as showing the relationship of the parties by virtue of which the fraud has been perpetrated and not as establishing the nature of the action itself (175 Cal. 505, 508-509) .

[e] Action for Breach of Duty Growing Out of Contract

DeMirjian v. Ideal Heating Corp. (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 905, 909, 206 P.2d 20 , is discussed in § 23.20[c].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fundamental Basis for Cause of Action as Determinative

In San Francisco Iron & Metal Co. v. Abraham (1931) 211 Cal. 552, 296 P. 82 , plaintiff's complaint was in two counts, one specifically pleading a cause of action for deceit and the second pleading a cause of action for money had and received. It was stipulated at trial that both counts were but different methods of pleading one transaction which arose out of a dissolution of partnership agreement between plaintiff and defendant by which the defendant transferred to plaintiff all of his interest and the plaintiff assumed all of the obligations of the partnership. The trialcourt granted defendant's motion for an order discharging an attachment, and, on plaintiff's appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The plaintiff contended that his count for money had and received sounded in contract and that he was, thus, entitled to a writ of attachment. The Court pointed out, however, that it was not what the plaintiff pleaded, but what in truth and in fact, was his grievance which was determinative. In this respect, the count for money had and received was evidence on the issue before the Court but no more conclusive than any other item of evidence before the Court. The Court added that, although the same act or transaction may constitute a cause of action in contract and tort permitting a plaintiff to elect to pursue either remedy, for the purpose of the attachment law, a right of action in contract cannot be created on the theory of waiving the tort which gave rise to the action.

[b] Strict Construction of Attachment Law

In Vershbow v. Reiner (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 879, 282 Cal. Rptr. 684 , the court of appeal affirmed an order denying an application for an order that would authorize the sale of real property attached to satisfy the judgment, because plaintiff had failed to post a bond before the writ of attachment was issued as required by both the Attachment Law statutes (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 489.210, 489.220) and a court order. The court of appeal said that the Attachment Law statutes (Code Civ. Proc. § 481.010 et seq.) are subject to strict construction because they are purely the creation of the Legislature (231 Cal. App. 3d 879, 882) .

In Bank of America v. Salinas Nissan, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 254 Cal. Rptr. 748 , the court of appeal, in reversing that portion of trial court's order granting plaintiff the right to attach assets claimed to be exempt, which claim was neither opposed in writing by plaintiff nor argued at the hearing, said that attachment procedures are solely creatures of statute and the statutes must be strictly construed (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 270) .

Nakasone v. Randall (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 181 Cal. Rptr. 324 , was an appeal by defendant from the trial court's order denying her motion for an order quashing a writ of attachment and release of the attached property, in an action for breach of contract to sell real property. The right to attach order had been issued pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 492.010 on the ground that defendant was a nonresident. Thereafter, defendant filed an answer to the complaint and moved to set aside the right to attach order, to quash the writ of attachment, and to release the attached property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050]. The motion was denied apparently on the ground that the claim arose out of defendant's conduct of a trade, business, or profession [see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010]. In reversing the order on the ground the evidence did not support the trial court's implied finding that defendant was engaged in a trade, business, or profession, the court of appeal said that inasmuch as the attachment procedures are purely the creation of the Legislature, the statute is subject to strict construction (129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 761) .

[c] Attachment Unauthorized in Tort or Equity Actions

In Waffer Internat. Corp. v. Khorsandi (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241 , an action for breach of contract, negligence, fraud and conversion, in reversing a summary judgment on the tort claims in defendants' favor based on the doctrine of election of remedies, the court of appeal, quoting in part from Baker v. Superior Court (1983) 150 Cal. App. 3d 140, 146-147, 197 Cal. Rptr. 480 noted that the Legislature has determined attachments may properly issue only to secure anticipated recoveries on contract claims in fixed and readily ascertainable amounts. By necessary implication, attachments are generally unavailable on tort claims due to their unascertainable amounts and because under Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a) attachment is available only on claims based on a contract, express or implied. Thus, unless perhaps a tort claim were characterized as a claim of implied contract or quasi-contract, attachment would not be available on a tort claim due to the necessity of satisfying the contract element. Quoting further from Baker, the court noted, however, it does not automatically follow that where contract and tort causes of action are joined the creditor loses his or her right to attach. Attachment should always be available to secure liquidated contract claims seeking damages completely separate from those sought under a tort claim even when the claims are based on common facts (69 Cal. App. 4th 1261, 1277) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.21

§ 23.21 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action Not Based On Claim for Money [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT BE ISSUED IN AN ACTION NOT BASED ON A CLAIM OR CLAIMS FOR MONEY.

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Required Court Finding. [See § 23.20, Paragraph B.]

C. Claim as Required to Be for Money. Unless otherwise provided by statute, an attachment may be issued only in an action on a claim or claims for money (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)).

D. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. [See § 23.20, Paragraph D.]

[Optional] E. Breach of Obligation Other Than Payment of Money. Where damages are sought for breach of an express obligation to do something other than pay money, a common count does not lie and an attachment is not authorized (Allen v. Merchants Elec. Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 67, 69, 4 Cal. Rptr. 527, 351 P.2d 799 [decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1); now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order sought by a plaintiff in an action to enforce a claim other than one for money as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Obligation Other Than Payment of Money

Allen v. Merchants Elec. Co. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 67, 4 Cal. Rptr. 527, 351 P.2d 799 , was an appeal from an order discharging a writ of attachment. The sole question presented was whether the action in which the attachment was issued on a contract for the direct payment of money as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a) set forth in Paragraph C of this form]. The complaint was in four counts and, in general, alleged the breach of three contracts for the furnishing and installation of certain electrical equipment. The breach caused plaintiff damages representing the reasonable value of the work not performed, other reasonable costs expended in obtaining substitute labor, and an unascertained amount for injury to plaintiff's business. The third count apparently stated a cause of action for the restitution of money paid on two of the contracts. The Supreme Court stated that the three counts stated causes of action for damages for breach of express contractual obligations to do things other than pay money, and that nothing had been alleged from which an obligation to pay money could be implied in fact. Although such an obligation may be implied in law in situations where a common count would lie, it was settled that, where damages were sought for breach of an express obligation to do something other than pay money, a common count does not lie and the attachment is, thus, unauthorized (54 Cal. 2d 67, 69) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.22

§ 23.22 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action on Claim Not Arising Out of Individual Defendant's Trade, Business, or Profession [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT BE ISSUED ON A CLAIM AGAINST AN INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANT WHICH _____ [DOES NOT ARISE OUT OF THE CONDUCT OF SUCH DEFENDANT OF A TRADE, BUSINESS, OR PROFESSION or IS BASED ON _____ (THE SALE OR LEASE OF PROPERTY OR A LICENSE TO USE PROPERTY OR THE FURNISHING OF SERVICES OR THE LOAN OF MONEY) WHEN THE _____ (PROPERTY SOLD OR LEASED or PROPERTY LICENSED FOR USE OR SERVICES FURNISHED OR MONEY LOANED) WAS USED BY SUCH INDIVIDUAL PRIMARILY FOR PERSONAL, FAMILY, OR HOUSEHOLD PURPOSES].

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Required Court Finding. [See § 23.20, Paragraph B.]

C. Personal, Family, or Household Claim Against Individual. An attachment may not be issued on a claim against an individual which is based on the sale or lease of property, a license to use property, the furnishing of services, or the loan of money when the property sold or leased, or licensed for use, the services furnished, or the money loaned was used by the individual primarily for personal, family, or household purposes (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010; Medford v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239-240, 189 Cal. Rptr. 227 (lease of property); Nakasone v. Randall (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 761-763, 181 Cal. Rptr. 324 (sale of property)).

D. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. [See § 23.20, Paragraph D.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of an individual defendant's notice of opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order sought by a plaintiff in an action on a claim which either does not arise out of the conduct by the defendant of a trade, business, or profession, or is based on the sale or lease of property, a license to use property, the furnishing of services, or the loan of money when the property sold or leased, or licensed for use, the services furnished, or the money loaned was used by the defendant primarily for personal, family, or household purposes as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Personal, Family, or Household Claim Against Individual

In Medford v. Superior Court (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 189 Cal. Rptr. 227 , petitioner was defendant in an unlawful detainer action. After she abandoned possession of the premises, she sought to cross-complain against her landlord and others. The trial court (on its own motion) required her to deposit with the court $3,050 in back rent alleged to be owing on the unlawful detainer complaint before the cross-complaint would be allowed. When the court later denied a motion for the return of this deposit, the petition for a writ of mandate followed. The court of appeal granted the writ, holding that the deposit was in effect a prejudgment attachment against a residential tenant, which is prohibited by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c) (140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 239-240) . The court held that the prohibited attachment could not be imposed in the guise of a condition for the exercise of the trial court's discretion, here, to permit the filing of a cross-complaint after the filing of an answer (140 Cal. App. 3d 236, 240) .

Nakasone v. Randall (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 181 Cal. Rptr. 324 , was an action for damages for breach of a sale contract of real property. Plaintiff secured issuance of a right to attach order and writ of attachment on the ground that defendant was a nonresident [see Code Civ. Proc. § 492.010]. Thereafter, defendant filed an answer to the complaint and moved to set aside the right to attach order, to quash the writ of attachment, and to release the attached property [Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050]. The motion was denied, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court pointed out that under Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050, since defendant filed a general appearance (answer), the right to attach order had to be set aside unless it could be supported by the statutory provisions on ordinary attachment and that the burden of showing such support was on plaintiff (129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 761) . The court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010, the availability of prejudgment attachment is limited to specific types of claim and that there are four restrictions on the kinds of actions in which attachment is authorized: (1) the action must be on a claim for money based on contract; (2) the total amount of the claim must be fixed or readily ascertainable and not less than $500; (3) the claim must not be secured or the security must be valueless; and (4) if the action is against an individual, the claim must arise out of the individual's trade, business, or profession (129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 761-762) . The court held that there was no substantial evidence to support the trial court's implied finding that defendant, an 86-year-old woman in poor health who was selling her own real property for her own account, was engaged in a trade, business, or profession, and that her activity was not the type to which the attachment statute was intended to apply (129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 762-763) . The court concluded that plaintiff had failed to sustain his burden and reversed the trial court's order denying defendant's motion (129 Cal. App. 3d 757, 765) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.23

§ 23.23 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Action on Claim Secured by Real Property [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT BE ISSUED ON A CLAIM WHICH IS SECURED BY ANY INTEREST IN REAL PROPERTY ARISING FROM AGREEMENT, STATUTE, OR OTHER RULE OF LAW.

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Required Court Finding. [See § 23.20, Paragraph B.]

C. Secured Claim. An attachment may not be issued on a claim which is secured by any interest in real property arising from agreement, statute, or other rule of law (including any mortgage or deed of trust of realty and any statutory, common law, or equitable lien, but excluding any security interest in fixtures subject to Commercial Code Section 9101 et seq. (security interests in personal property and fixtures)) (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)).

[Optional] D. Executory Contract for Sale of Realty. A Seller under an executory contract for the sale of real property, who retains title until all payments are made as security for the payment of the purchase price, has security which prevents him/her from obtaining an attachment in a legal or equitable action to recover the unpaid balance on the contract. (In this situation, in contrast to the implied equitable lien rule applicable when title has passed to the buyer, the security title to the realty retained by the seller acts as security for the full purchase price of both the realty and any personalty which was to pass to the buyer under the contract) (Lencioni v. Dan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 105, 109, 111-112, 275 P.2d 101).

[Optional] E. Waiver of Security. Although a seller retaining title may waive his/her security by suing at either law or equity, such seller does not, thus, become an unsecured creditor for purposes of the Attachment Law permitting him/her to secure an attachment to replace the waived security (Lencioni v. Dan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 105, 111, 275 P.2d 101 [dictum]).

[Optional] F. Inadequacy of Security at Time of Giving Mortgage. If the value of the security at the time of the giving of a mortgage was valueless, that fact does not give a plaintiff the right to maintain an action on the obligation secured without foreclosure, and consequently does not give him/her the right to maintain the attachment (Barbieri v. Ramelli (1890) 84 Cal. 154, 157-158, 23 P. 1086 ; Giandeini v. Ramirez (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 469, 471-472, 54 P.2d 91).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order sought by a plaintiff in an action on a claim which is secured by an interest in real property which arises from agreement, statute, or other rule of law as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Secured Claim

Before January 1, 1990, Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b) also prohibited an attachment on a claim secured by any interest in personal property, including any security interest in fixtures subject to Com. Code § 9101 et seq. (security interests in personal property and fixtures). Starting January 1, 1996, this prohibition is reinstated [see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b), (c) (Stats. 1990, ch. 943, § 1.5)].

[b] Executory Contract for Sale of Realty

In Lencioni v. Dan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 105, 275 P.2d 101 , plaintiffs brought an action to compel performance by defendants of their written agreement to pay the purchase price of certain real and personal property, or, in thealternative, to recover the brokerage commission fee paid in connection with the sale. After plaintiffs secured a writ of attachment, defendants moved to dissolve the attachment, which motion was denied. On appeal, the defendants contended that the attachment should not have been issued because the plaintiffs were secured creditors within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)]. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal agreed with the defendants' contention and held that the contract was an executory contract of sale under the terms of which plaintiffs retained title as security for the payment of the purchase price. A seller under such a contract has security which prevents him or her from obtaining an attachment in a legal or equitable action to recover the unpaid balance on the contract. The plaintiffs contended in return, that since part of the property involved was personal property, the security which was stated to be in the nature of an implied vendor's lien did not exist as to the personal property where title and possession had passed. Although the court noted that this was undoubtedly the law with respect to personal property, the security of the plaintiffs as sellers of the real property was not that of an implied lien where title had passed to the defendants, but that based on the terms of the contract under which title did not pass. In such a situation, the security title to the realty retained by the seller acts as security for the full purchase price of both the realty and personalty.

[c] Waiver of Security

In Lencioni v. Dan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 105, 275 P.2d 101 , the facts of which are discussed in § 23.23[3][b], the plaintiffs also argued on appeal that if the obligation sued upon was originally secured, they have waived such security by bringing their action, which they urged to be one at law on the debt. Although the court found that, in fact, the plaintiffs had not waived their security, it suggested in a footnote that, although a seller retaining title may waive his or her security and sue either at law or in equity, such a seller does not thus become an unsecured creditor and entitled to secure an attachment to replace the security. The policy of the law is that a creditor holding security may not resort to attachment until the security has been exhausted. The court thought it could be argued that such a policy would be violated if a secured creditor were permitted to waive his or her security at will and then seek further security by way of attachment.

It should be noted that in Engelman v. Bookasta (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 915, 71 Cal. Rptr. 120 , the court explicitly found this dictum in Lencioni inapplicable to the case before it. In Engelman, plaintiff was permitted to have an attachment in his suit on a secured note against the guarantor of the note who had executed a written, express waiver of all rights in the security. The court held that this was an effective waiver and permitted the plaintiff to state in his affidavit that his action was on an unsecured claim. The court stated that it could see no reason why a guarantor should not be permitted to waive his or her right by contract to require the creditor to proceed against security provided by the principal debtor.

[d] Inadequacy of Security at Time of Giving Mortgage

In Barbieri v. Ramelli (1890) 84 Cal. 154, 23 P. 1086 , plaintiff sought to recover a sum of money lent to defendants. Under the loan agreement, defendants executed a mortgage on a tract of land to secure payment. At the time of suit, when payment was due, prior mortgages on the land made plaintiff's security valueless, since defendants had made no improvements on the land from the time of their agreement with plaintiff to equal the amount of the sums due on the indebtedness secured by the prior mortgages. The trial court gave judgment in favor of plaintiff, and defendants appealed, contending that Code Civ. Proc. § 726 controlled. This section provides, in pertinent part, that only one action may be brought for the recovery of a debt secured by a mortgage. The Supreme Court agreed and reversed the trial court's judgment. The Court held that under this statute, plaintiff could only bring a foreclosure action. Although plaintiff apparently sought no attachment on the filing of its action, it contended that former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)] allows an attachment to issue where the debt is secured and the security, without any act of plaintiff, had become valueless. However, the Court noted that the original value of the land did not appear, nor was it clear, whether the land had depreciated. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) applies only where the security has changed in the value it had when originally taken, and has no reference to a case where there had been no evident change of value. Thus, having elected to take the security at the value it possessed when the mortgage was originally executed, and no change in value having since occurred, the plaintiff could not be allowed to urge, in order to evade compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 726, that the land had become valueless.

Giandeini v. Ramirez (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 469, 54 P.2d 91 , involved an action on a note which was secured by a mortgage on real property, but which plaintiffs alleged to be valueless at the time the note was given. Plaintiffs obtained a writ of attachment which defendant moved to dissolve. On the trial court's order refusing to dissolve, defendant appealed. The court of appeals reversed, holding that the debt had originally been secured and that it had not later become valueless. The court followed the Barbieri decision and found that, applying the principle of that case to the one at bar, it was scarcely necessary to state that if the security had no value at the time it was given, it could not have become less valuable thereafter.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.24

§ 23.24 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Action Is One in Which Attachment Unauthorized--Sum Claimed Not Readily Ascertainable Amount of $500 or More [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT ISSUE IN AN ACTION ON A CLAIM IN WHICH THE TOTAL SUM CLAIMED IS NOT A FIXED OR READILY ASCERTAINABLE AMOUNT OF FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS ($500) OR MORE, EXCLUSIVE OF COSTS, INTEREST, AND ATTORNEY'S FEES.

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Required Court Finding. [See § 23.20, Paragraph B.]

C. Claim as Required to Be for Readily Ascertainable Amount. Unless otherwise provided by statute, an attachment may be issued only in an action on a claim or claims for money in which the total sum claimed is a fixed or readily ascertainable amount not less than five hundred dollars ($500), exclusive of costs, interest, and attorney's fees (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)).

D. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. [See § 23.20, Paragraph D.]

E. Necessity of Determining Measure of Liability. Where the contract does not furnish the measure of the liability of the defendant, and the damages are unliquidated, an attachment cannot be had (Hathaway v. Davis (1867) 33 Cal. 161, 167-168 ; Lewis v. Steifel (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 648, 650, 220 P.2d 769).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to a plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment on the grounds that plaintiff's action is not one in which an attachment is authorized in that the total sum claimed is not a readily ascertainable amount of $500 or more, exclusive of costs, interest, and attorney's fees.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations supporting any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this memorandum may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity of Determining Measure of Liability

Hathaway v. Davis (1867) 33 Cal. 161 , is the leading case in construing the terms "direct payment of money" as those terms were used in former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) with respect to the types of actions in which attachments may issue. Although present Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a) substitutes the terms "fixed or readily ascertainable amount," the Law Revision Commission Comment to this subdivision states that these terms continue former law. In Hathaway, defendant appealed from the trial court's order denying defendant's motion to dissolve an attachment. Defendant contended that plaintiff's action was not for the "direct payment of money." Although the Supreme Court upheld the trial court's order, it limited the types of actions in which an attachment may issue. The Court found that, based on legislative intent and statutory construction, the plaintiff's right to an attachment is confined to cases of contract, when the liability of the defendant can be ascertained with certainty and is not in doubt until after trial, or, in other words, when the amount to be paid is fixed by the terms of the contract, or can be readily ascertained from the information which it affords. The Court added that every such case is clearly within the policy of the Attachment Law, which is designed for the benefit of acknowledged creditors, and not those who may or may not turn out to be such according to the finding of the jury.

Lewis v. Steifel (1950) 98 Cal. App. 2d 648, 220 P.2d 769 , is referred to in the Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010 as authority for the fact that the limitation on actions in which attachments may issue to a claim or claims for money when the total amount is a fixed or readily ascertainable amount continues the limitation which existed under former attachment law. In Lewis, plaintiff sued defendants for breach of an oral one-year employment contract on being discharged after three months' service. Plaintiff alleged that the contract included plaintiff's weekly salary and the time at which plaintiff's services were to commence. Defendants moved to discharge the attachment on the ground, among others, that plaintiff's claim was not one for the"direct payment of money," but one for damages for breach of contract and that such damages were unascertainable, speculative, and uncertain. The trial court discharged the attachment, and plaintiff appealed. Plaintiff contended on appeal that his claim came within the rule that an attachment will lie on a cause of action for damages for breach of contract when the damages were readily ascertainable by reference to the contract and when the basis of the computation of damages appears to be reasonable and definite. Finding that plaintiff's contention was well taken since it stated a well-recognized rule of law in California, the court reversed the trial court. However, quoting from Force v. Hart (1928) 205 Cal. 670, 673, 272 P 583 , the court did note that the contract sued upon must furnish a standard by which the amount due may be clearly ascertained and that there must exist a basis on which the damages can be determined by proof.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.25

§ 23.25 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Application or Accompanying Affidavit Fails to Meet Statutory Requirements [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.020, 484.030]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

A PLAINTIFF'S _____ [APPLICATION FOR A RIGHT TO ATTACH ORDER AND WRIT OF ATTACHMENT or ACCOMPANYING AFFIDAVIT] IS DEFECTIVE WHEN IT DOES NOT STATE THE INFORMATION OR OTHERWISE MEET STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Statement in Application as Required to Show That Claim Is One on Which Attachment May Issue. The application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must include a statement showing that the attachment is sought to secure the recovery on a claim on which an attachment may be issued (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(a)).

[OR]

B. Application as Required to Describe Property and State That Such Property Is Subject to Attachment. The application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must include a description of the property to be attached under the writ of attachment and a statement that the plaintiff is informed and believes that such property is subject to attachment (when the defendant is a natural person, the description of the property must be reasonably adequate to permit the defendant to identify the specific property sought to be attached) (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(e)).

[OR]

B. Application as Required to State Claim Not Barred by Bankruptcy Proceeding. The application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must include a statement that the applicant has no information or belief that the claim is discharged or that the prosecution of the action is stayed in a proceeding under Title 11 of the United States Code (Bankruptcy) (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(d)).

[OR]

B. Application as Required to State Attachment Is for Recovery of Claim. The application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must include a statement that the attachment is not sought for a purpose other than the recovery on the claim on which the attachment is based (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(c)).

[OR]

B. Application as Required to State Amount of Claim. The application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must include a statement of the amount to be secured by the attachment (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(b)).

[OR]

B. Affidavit Required to Support Application. An application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment must be supported by an affidavit showing that the plaintiff on the facts presented would be entitled to a judgment on the claim on which the attachment is based (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.030).

C. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. [See § 23.20, Paragraph D.]

[Optional] D. Facts Required to Be Stated in Affidavit. The facts stated in each affidavit must be set forth with particularity. Except when matters are specifically permitted by the Attachment Law to be shown by information and belief, each affidavit must show affirmatively that the affiant, if sworn as a witness, can testify competently to the facts stated therein. As to matters shown by information and belief, the affidavit must state the facts on which the affiant's belief is based, showing the nature of his or her information and the reliability of the informant (Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040).

[Optional] E. Insufficient Affidavit. A writ of attachment should not be issued when the statutory requirements with respect to affidavits for attachment have not been strictly complied with (Anaheim Nat'l Bank v. Kraemer (1932) 120 Cal. App. 63, 65, 7 P.2d 765 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 338; now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 482.040, 484.030).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order sought by plaintiff when the application or the accompanying affidavit does not meet the statutory requirements with respect to the information required to be stated in the application or affidavit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the description of the property to be attached contained in the application fails to include information about location or parcel size and is inadequate to permit identification of the property by defendant. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations that support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

[b] Insufficient Affidavit

Anaheim Nat'l Bank v. Kraemer (1932) 120 Cal. App. 63, 7 P.2d 765 , illustrates the strictness of procedures which courts under former attachment law required plaintiffs to follow in obtaining writs of attachment. It should be noted, however, that at least in the noticed hearing procedure provided for in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.010-484.110, a defect in the plaintiff's application or affidavit, which the plaintiff could correct, and which is not prejudicial to the defendant may now not be a ground for denying the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order.

In Anaheim, defendant moved to dissolve an attachment issued to plaintiff on the ground that the statement in plaintiff's affidavit, which was to the effect that the debt sued upon was secured by a mortgage which had been rendered valueless without the act of plaintiff or any person to whom the security was given, was insufficient, since it failed to negative the existence of any security other than that specified. The statute in force at the time required the affidavit to specify that the plaintiff had, in addition, no lien or mortgage on personal property or a pledge of personal property. The trial court ordered the writ discharged and, on plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that proceedings by attachment are statutory and special, and the provisions of the statute must be strictly followed or no right will be acquired thereunder. What the statute required to be stated in the affidavit must be stated, and truly stated in the affidavit; and if not stated in the affidavit, the attachment should be dissolved. The court concluded that the necessary fact which must have appeared is the lack of security and that this was required to be indicated by language so clear and unambiguous as to leave it free from any doubt (120 Cal. App. 63, 65) .

The precise objection defendant had to plaintiff's affidavit in Kraemer may be meritorious under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(a), since that subdivision requires the application for a right to attach order to include a statement that the attachment is sought to secure the recovery on a claim on which an attachment may issue which may require plaintiff to state the nonexistence of any form of security provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b).

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Application as Required to Describe Property and State That Such Property Is Subject to Attachment

Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(e) allows an attachment application simply to request attachment of all corporate property that is subject to attachment when the defendant is a corporation, but when defendant is a natural person the description of the property must be reasonably adequate to permit the defendant to identify the specific property to be attached. In construing this latter provision, the court in Bank of America v. Salinas Nissan, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 254 Cal. Rptr. 748 , stated that the requirement of specificity appears designed to avoid unnecessary hearings in which an individual defendant is willing to concede that certain described property is subject to attachment. The court did not understand the requirement that prohibited a plaintiff from targeting for attachment everything an individual defendant owns; so long as the property descriptions are adequate, Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(e) allows for the possibility that a plaintiff may want to make such a comprehensive attempt, possibly in order to provoke and resolve an individual defendant's exemption claims all at once. When a plaintiff notices a hearing on an attachment application, the defendant must assert any exemption claims for targeted personal property not less than five court days before the hearing or such claims are deemed waived, absent a change of circumstances (citing Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070(a), (e) (subsequently amended by Stats. 1998, ch. 932, § 14, to add word "court" before "days"), 482.100) (207Cal. App. 3d 260, 268) . The court concluded that the plaintiff's application in the case before it, though all-inclusive, was reasonably adequate to inform the defendants what property was targeted for attachment (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 268) . Plaintiff's application was to attach all of the following types of property owned by defendants: real property, personal property, equipment, motor vehicles, chattel paper, negotiable and other instruments, securities, deposit accounts, safe deposit boxes, accounts receivable, general intangibles, property subject to pending actions, final money judgments, and personalty in estates of decedents (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 264) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.26

§ 23.26 Supporting Defendant's Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]--Failure of Plaintiff to Establish Probable Validity of Claim or That Attachment Sought for Legitimate Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)(2), (3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.20.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY NOT BE ISSUED IF _____ [THE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT ESTABLISHED THE PROBABLE VALIDITY OF HIS/HER CLAIM or IT IS SOUGHT FOR A PURPOSE OTHER THAN THE RECOVERY ON THE CLAIM] ON WHICH THE ATTACHMENT IS BASED.

A. Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.20, Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Required Court Determination. At the hearing on the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order, the court must issue such order only if it finds, among other findings, that the plaintiff has established the probable validity of the claim on which the attachment is based (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)(2)).

[OR]

B. Required Court Determination. At the hearing on the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order, the court must issue such order only if it finds, among other findings, that the attachment is not sought for a purpose other than the recovery on the claim on which the attachment is based (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)(3)).

[Optional] C. Affidavit Required to Support Application. [See § 23.25, Paragraph B.]

D. Strict Construction of Attachment Law. [See § 23.20, Paragraph D.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's notice of opposition to plaintiff's application for a right to attach order where the plaintiff has failed to establish either by his or her affidavit the probable validity of the claim sued on or that the attachment is not sought for a purpose other than the recovery on the claim on which the attachment is based [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised as required to accompany notice of opposition)].

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.20[2].

180 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.27

§ 23.27 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Exempt From Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF CLAIM OF EXEMPTION
	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

PROPERTY _____ [describe property exempt from execution, e.g., CONSISTING OF HOUSEHOLD FURNISHINGS, APPLIANCES, AND WEARING APPAREL USED BY A DEBTOR AND HIS/HER RESIDENT FAMILY] WHICH IS EXEMPT FROM EXECUTION UNDER SECTION _____ [specify code section relied on for claim of exemption, e.g., 704.020 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE] IS EXEMPT FROM ATTACHMENT.

A. Claim of Exemption. If a defendant claims that the property described in the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and a writ of attachment, or a portion of such property, is exempt from attachment, he or she may claim the exemption as provided in Section 484.070 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(a), (b)). If the court determines that property of the defendant is exempt from attachment, in whole or in part, the right to attach order must describe the exempt property and prohibit attachment of the property (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(c)).

B. Liberal Construction of Exemption Statutes. Statutes exempting personal property from forced sale are remedial in character and are to be liberally construed, so as to effectuate the humane purpose designed by the lawmakers (In re McManus (1890) 87 Cal. 292, 294) .

C. Application of Execution Law to Attachment Law. All property exempt from enforcement of a money judgment by writ of execution is exempt from attachment except as provided in Section 3439.07(a)(2) of the Civil Code (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 699.010).

D. Property Exempt Under Section _____ [specify specific code section relied on in claim of exemption, e.g., 704.020 of the Code of Civil Procedure]. The following property is exempt from execution: _____ [set forth property exempt under statute, e.g., household furnishings, appliances, provisions, wearing apparel, and other personal effects ordinarily and reasonably necessary to, and personally used or procured for use by, the judgment debtor and members of his or her family at the judgment debtor's principal place of residence (Code Civ. Proc. § _____ [specify section number(s) as above, e.g., 704.020]).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's claim of exemption in which defendant claims that property described in plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010, or in plaintiff's application for a writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.310, is exempt from attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a) which exempts property from attachment if such property is exempt from enforcement of a money judgment. This is a general form which may be used whenever property sought to be attached is exempt from execution.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the property for which the exemption is being claimed consists entirely of household furnishings and personal effects used by the judgment debtor personally in his or her principal place of residence and is thus exempt under Code Civ. Proc. § 704.020(a). In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in the claim of exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070(d), 484.350(c)].

[b] Liberal Construction of Exemption Statutes

In re McManus (1890) 87 Cal. 292, 25 P. 413 , involved an application of that portion of the Insolvent Act which required a court having jurisdiction of insolvency proceedings to exempt and set apart for the use and benefit of the insolvent such property which is exempt from execution. The insolvent was engaged in the business of a jeweler and watch-repairer and owned and used in his business a jeweler's safe. Against the objections of certain creditors, and on the basis of certain evidence respecting the necessity of such a safe in the jeweler's business, the court set apart the safe as property exempt from execution under former Code Civ. Proc. § 690(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.060]. On the creditors' appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court stated that statutes exempting personal property from forced sale are remedial in character, and are evidently intended to protect and enable the debtor to follow his or her vocation, and thus earn a support for himself or herself and family. The Court stated further that the general rule is that such statutes are to be liberally construed, so as to effectuate the humane purpose designed by the lawmakers. In applying these general principles to the ruling of the lower court, the Court could see no error.

[c] Plaintiff's Failure to Oppose Exemption Claim

A plaintiff's failure to oppose a timely exemption claim concedes its propriety, and absent such opposition, defendant is not required to prove the claim. Moreover, the trial court has no discretion, absent some opposition by plaintiff, to ignore the claim [Bank of America v. Salinas Nissan, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 270, 254 Cal. Rptr. 748] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Execution Law to Attachment Law

The reference in Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020 to Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2) reflects the right of a creditor under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (Civ. Code § 3439.01 et seq.) to attach a fraudulently transferred asset, or its proceeds, in the hands of the transferee even if the creditor's claim has not matured [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2)]. If the creditor's claim has matured, attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset or its proceeds in the hands of the transferee in an action on that claim is authorized by Civ. Code § 3439.07(b). Limitations on attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset in the hands of the transferee are governed by Civ. Code §§ 3439.08-3439.09.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.28

§ 23.28 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Necessary for Support of Defendant or Family or Compensation for Personal Services [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.020(b), (c), 706.011]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.27.]

ALL _____ [PROPERTY NECESSARY FOR THE SUPPORT OF DEFENDANT OR HIS/HER FAMILY WHEN THE FAMILY IS SUPPORTED IN WHOLE OR IN PART BY DEFENDANT and/or COMPENSATION PAID OR PAYABLE TO DEFENDANT AS AN EMPLOYEE FOR PERSONAL SERVICES PERFORMED] IS EXEMPT FROM ATTACHMENT EXCEPT AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 3439.07(a)(2) OF THE CIVIL CODE.

A. Claim of Exemption. [See § 23.27, Paragraph A.]

B. Liberal Construction of Exemption Statutes. [See § 23.27, Paragraph B.]

[EITHER]

C. Property Necessary for Support of Individual or Household as Exempt. Property which is necessary for the support of defendant who is a natural person and members of his or her household is exempt from attachment except as provided in Section 3439.07(a)(2) of the Civil Code (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(b)).

[AND/OR]

D. Compensation for Personal Services as Exempt. All compensation payable by an employer to an employee for personal services performed by such employee whether denominated as wages, salary, commission, bonus, or otherwise is exempt from attachment except as provided in Section 3439.07(a)(2) of the Civil Code (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.020(c), 706.011).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of adefendant's claim of exemption in which defendant claims that property described in plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010, or in plaintiff's application for a writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.310, is exempt from attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(b) or (c). That is, the property sought to be attached is property necessary for the support of the defendant and members of his or her household [Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(b)] or is compensation payable by an employer to an employee for personal services performed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.020(c), 706.011].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the property for which the exemption is claimed consists entirely of wages and bonuses paid by his or her employer to defendant for personal services performed by defendant. In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations that support any factual issues raised in the claim of exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070(d), 484.350(c)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Necessary for Support of Individual or Household as Exempt

The reference in Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020 to Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2) reflects the right of a creditor under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (Civ. Code §§ 3439.01-3439.12) to attach a fraudulently transferred asset, or its proceeds, in the hands of the transferee even if the creditor's claim has not matured [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2)]. If the creditor's claim has matured, attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset or its proceeds in the hands of the transferee in an action on that claim is authorized by Civ. Code § 3439.07(b). Limitations on attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset in the hands of the transferee are governed by Civ. Code §§ 3439.08-3439.09.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compensation for Personal Services as Exempt

California State Employees' Assn. v. State of California (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 374, 243 Cal. Rptr. 602 , involved a plan by the State of California to make certain deductions from the salaries of state employees to recoup prior overpayments, pursuant to Gov. Code § 17051 (procedure for payment of a warrant drawn against the state when the validity or amount is in question). The California State Employees' Association appealed the trial court's denial of its petition for a writ of mandate to compel the state to make salary payments without the deductions. The court of appeal reversed, holding, inter alia, that the attachment law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 481.010-493.060) takes precedence over the general provisions of Gov. Code § 17051 (198 Cal. App. 3d 374, 378) and expressly prohibits any prejudgment attachment or levy of execution against wages (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(c)) (198 Cal. App. 3d 374, 377) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.29

§ 23.29 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070, 484.350]--Property Not Subject to Attachment Is Exempt From Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(d)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.27.]

ALL PROPERTY NOT SUBJECT TO ATTACHMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 487.010 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE IS EXEMPT FROM ATTACHMENT EXCEPT AS PROVIDED IN SECTION 3439.07(a)(2) OF THE CIVIL CODE.

A. Claim of Exemption. [See § 23.27, Paragraph A.]

B. Liberal Construction of Exemption Statutes. [See § 23.27, Paragraph B.]

C. Property Not Subject to Attachment as Exempt. All property not subject to attachment pursuant to Section 487.010 of the Code of Civil Procedure is exempt from attachment except as provided in Section 3439.07(a)(2) of the Civil Code (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(d)).

[EITHER]

D. Property of Natural Person Subject to Attachment. When the defendant is a natural person, only the following property is subject to attachment: (1) interests in real property except leasehold estates with unexpired terms of less than one year; (2) accounts receivable, chattel paper, and general intangibles arising out of the conduct by defendant of a trade, business, or profession, except any such individual claims with a principal balance of less than $150; (3) equipment; (4) farm products; (5) inventory; (6) final money judgments arising out of the conduct by defendant of a trade, business, or profession; (7) money on the premises where a trade, business, or profession is conducted and, except for the first $1,000, money located elsewhere than on such premises and deposit accounts; however, if the defendant has more than one deposit account or has at least one deposit account and money located elsewhere than on such premises, the plaintiff may apply for an order that the writ of attachment be levied so that an aggregate amount of $1,000 in the form of such money and in such accounts remains free of levy; (8) negotiable documents of title; (9) instruments; (10) securities; and (11) minerals or the like (including oil and gas) to be extracted (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.010(c)).

[OR]

D. Property of Corporate Defendant Subject to Attachment. When thedefendant is a corporation, corporate property is not subject to attachment unless it is corporate property for which a method of levy is provided by Sections 488.300 through 488.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.010(a), 487.020(b)).

[OR]

D. Partnership Property Subject to Attachment. When the defendant is a partnership or other unincorporated association, partnership or association property is not subject to attachment unless it is property for which a method of levy is provided by Sections 488.300 through 488.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.010(b), 487.020(d)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's claim of exemption in which defendant claims that property described in plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010, or in plaintiff's application for a writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.310, is not subject to attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.010 and is, therefore, exempt from attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(d).

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the property for which the right to attach order is sought is not subject to attachment because it consists entirely of inventory with a unit retail value of less than $500, held for sale by defendant, a retail merchant as defined by Code Civ. Proc. § 488.405(c)(2). In addition, counsel must attach affidavits or declarations that support any factual issues raised in the claim of exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.070(d), 484.350(c)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Not Subject to Attachment as Exempt

The reference in Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020 to Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2) reflects the right of a creditor under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (Civ. Code §§ 3439.01-3439.12) to attach a fraudulently transferred asset, or its proceeds, in the hands of the transferee even if the creditor's claim has not matured [Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2)]. If the creditor's claim has matured, attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset or its proceeds in the hands of the transferee in an action on that claim is authorized by Civ. Code § 3439.07(b). Limitations on attachment of the fraudulently transferred asset in the hands of the transferee are governed by Civ. Code §§ 3439.08-3439.09.

183 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.30

§ 23.30 Supporting Defendant's Motion of Objection to Plaintiff's Required Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 489.210, 995.930, 995.940]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION OF OBJECTION
	)	TO UNDERTAKING
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

A COURT MUST ORDER THE REQUIRED UNDERTAKING, FILED BY PLAINTIFF PURSUANT TO SECTION 489.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, TO BE REFILED WITH SUFFICIENT SURETIES IN A SUFFICIENT AMOUNT IF IT DETERMINES ON DEFENDANT'S OBJECTION THAT THE UNDERTAKING IS INSUFFICIENT.

A. Objection to Undertaking. A beneficiary on noticed motion may object to an undertaking on the ground(s) that the _____ [sureties are insufficient and/or the amount of the undertaking is insufficient and/or the undertaking, from any other cause, is insufficient] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.210(b), 995.920, 995.930).

B. Plaintiff's Required Undertaking. Before issuance of a _____ [writ of attachment or temporary protective order or order under Section 491.415(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure], the plaintiff must file an undertaking to pay the defendant any amount the defendant may recover for any wrongful attachment by the plaintiff in the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 489.210).

C. Required Court Determination. If the court determines that an undertaking is insufficient, it must specify in what respect it is insufficient and order that an undertaking with sufficient sureties and in a sufficient amount be given within five days. If a sufficient undertaking is not given within the time required by the court order, all rights obtained by giving the undertaking immediately cease and the court may on ex parte motion order the cessation of those rights (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.210(b), 995.960(b)(1).

D. When Probable Recovery Exceeds Amount of Undertaking. If, on objection to the undertaking, the court determines that the probable recovery for wrongful attachment exceeds the amount of the undertaking, it must include in its order that the amount of the undertaking be increased to the amount it determines to be the probable recovery for wrongful attachment if it is ultimately determined that the attachment was wrongful. (Code Civ. Proc. § 489.220(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010).

[Optional] E. Amount of Undertaking Generally. Except as provided in subdivision (b) of Section 489.220 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the amount of an undertaking filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 489.210 through 489.320 must be ten thousand dollars ($10,000) (Code Civ. Proc. § 489.220(a)).

[Optional] F. Number of Sureties. Unless the statute providing for the undertaking requires execution by an admitted surety insurer, an undertaking must be executed by two or more sufficient personal sureties, by one admitted surety insurer, or by any combination of sufficient personal sureties and admitted surety insurers (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.210(b), 995.310).

[Optional] G. Personal Sureties Not Sufficient. A personal surety on an undertaking is sufficient only if all the following conditions are satisfied: (1) the surety is a person other than the principal and is not an officer of the court or a member of the State Bar; (2) the surety is a resident, and either an owner of real property or householder, within the state; and (3) the surety is worth the amount of the undertaking in real or personal property, or both, situated in this state, over and above all debts and liabilities, exclusive of property exempt from enforcement of a money judgment (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.210(b), 995.510).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant's motion objecting to the sufficiency of plaintiff's undertaking required under Code Civ. Proc. § 489.210. This is a general form and may be used tosupport the specific ground of objection stated in defendant's motion whether the objection is based on the insufficiency of the sureties, the insufficiency of the amount of the undertaking, or the insufficiency of the undertaking for any other cause [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.920].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, if the ground for objection is that the amount of undertaking is insufficient, counsel should explain why the amount is insufficient, include an estimate of the amount that will be sufficient, and argue the reasons therefor [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.930(a)]. If the ground for objection is the insufficiency of a personal surety, counsel should explain how the surety does not meet the qualifications set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 995.510 and may refer to the affidavit of qualifications that each personal surety must submit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.520]. If counsel objects to the sufficiency of an admitted surety insurer, he or she should explain the reasons why the surety insurer is not sufficient, for example, because the certificate of authority of the surety has been revoked and not renewed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.650(a)]. An objection made on this ground must be accompanied by a certificate by the county clerk and an affidavit stating facts that establish the insufficiency of the insurer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.650(a), (b)]. Furthermore, if the objection is made on any of the aforementioned grounds, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations supporting any factual issues raised in the motion.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.31

§ 23.31 Supporting Motion for Recovery of Damages for Wrongful Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.010, 490.020, 996.440]--By Defendant [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.410, 996.430, 996.460]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR RECOVERY
vs.	)	OF DAMAGES FOR WRONGFUL ATTACHMENT
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.020, 996.440]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE DEFENDANT SHOULD RECOVER DAMAGES PROXIMATELY CAUSED BY THE WRONGFUL ATTACHMENT AND ALL COSTS AND EXPENSES, INCLUDING ATTORNEY'S FEES, REASONABLY EXPENDED IN DEFEATING THE ATTACHMENT WHEN _____ [THE ATTACHMENT WAS LEVIED UNDER A WRIT OF ATTACHMENT or A PROTECTIVE ORDER WAS SERVED] _____ [ON PROPERTY EXEMPT FROM ATTACHMENT or IN AN ACTION IN WHICH _____ (AN ATTACHMENT WAS NOT AUTHORIZED or PLAINTIFF DID NOT RECOVER JUDGMENT)].

A. Recovery of Damages for Wrongful Attachment. A defendant may recover damages for wrongful attachment by motion made in the trial court without necessity of an independent action (see Code Civ. Proc. § 996.440(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020).

B. Liability for Wrongful Attachment. The liability of a plaintiff for causing a wrongful attachment includes all damages proximately caused to the defendantby the wrongful attach ment, and all costs and expenses, including attorney's fees, reasonably expended in defeating the attachment (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(a)(1), (2)).

C. Liability Limited to Amount of Undertaking. The liability of a plaintiff for wrongful attachment pursuant to Section 490.010 of the Code of Civil Procedure is limited by the amount of the undertaking (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(b)).

[EITHER]

D. Action in Which Attachment Unauthorized. A wrongful attachment consists of the _____ [levy under a writ of attachment or service of a protective order] in an action in which attachment is not authorized (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010(a)).

[OR]

D. Plaintiff's Failure to Recover Judgment. A wrongful attachment consists of the _____ [levy under a writ of attachment or service of a protective order] in an action in which the plaintiff does not recover judgment (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010(b)).

[OR]

D. Levy on Property Exempt From Attachment. A wrongful attachment consists of the levy of exempt property under a writ of attachment obtained ex parte _____ [pursuant to Sections 484.510-484.530 of the Code of Civil Procedure or pursuant to Section 485.010 of the Code of Civil Procedure], unless the plaintiff shows that he or she reasonably believed that the property attached was not exempt from attachment (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010(c)).

[Optional] E. Joinder of Sureties. The defendant may join in his or her motion for recovery of damages for wrongful attachment the sureties on an undertaking for wrongful attachment liability, and any judgment of liability binds the plaintiff and sureties jointly and severally (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.430(a), 996.460(a)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities is a general form which may be submitted in support of a motion for damages for wrongful attachment if the attachment was wrongful under Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should state facts showing that the attachment was wrongful under Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010 and should discuss the damages proximately caused by the wrongful attachment and the costs and expenses reasonably expended in defeating the attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(a)(1), (2)]. Since the action is on an undertaking filed by plaintiff pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 489.210, the Bond and Undertaking Law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.010-996.560) governs any subsequent action on the undertaking [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.040(a), 996.410-996.495]. Therefore, counsel is advised to consult this law in addition to the law regarding wrongful attachments when moving for the recovery of damages and costs in an action involving a wrongful attachment [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.010-490.060].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.32

§ 23.32 Supporting Defendant's Application to Vacate or Stay Attachment--Action Against Service Member [Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)(2)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name]	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF APPLICATION TO VACATE
vs.	)	OR STAY ATTACHMENT AGAINST SERVICE
_____ [name]	)	MEMBER
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

AN ATTACHMENT ISSUED AGAINST A SERVICE MEMBER MAY BE VACATED OR STAYED.

A. Stay of Attachment for Service Members. In any action against a service member, before or during the period of the service, or within 60 days thereafter, the court may vacate or stay any attachment (Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)(2)).

B. "Service Members" Defined. "Service members" include officers and enlisted members of the National Guard called or ordered into active state service by the Governor or into active federal service by the President (Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)(1)). "Service members" also include reservists of the United States Military Reserve who have been called to full-time active duty (Mil. & Vet. Code § 400(a)(2)).

C. Court's Authority. The court must grant the stay upon application by the service member or some person on his or her behalf (Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)). The court may deny the motion only if in the opinion of the court the defendant's ability to comply with the order entered or sought is not materially affected by reason of his or her military service (Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)).

D. Length of Stay. A stay of attachment ordered by any court may be ordered for the period of military service and three months thereafter or any part of that period, and subject to those terms as may be just, including terms with respect to payment in installments of those amounts at those times as the court may fix (Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(d)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's application to stay or vacate an attachment because the defendant is a service member pursuant to Military & Veterans Code § 403(c)(2).

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In this instance, for example, counsel may argue that the defendant's ability to comply with the order entered or sought has been materially affected by reason of his or her military service (see Mil. & Vet. Code § 403(c)).

In addition, it is advisable for counsel to attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issue raised in the application. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to affidavits and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations (Matthew Bender).

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of declarations in support of this application, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.33

§ 23.33 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Based on Quasi-Contract

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff	)	IES IN REPLY TO NOTICE OF OPPOSITION TO
vs.	)	RIGHT TO ATTACH ORDER
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]
Defendant	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

AN ATTACHMENT MAY BE ISSUED WHERE PLAINTIFF'S ACTION IS BASED ON QUASI-CONTRACT.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. A plaintiff may file and serve a reply to defendant's notice of opposition on the opposing party two court days prior to the date set for the hearing (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)).

B. Contracts Implied in Law. Where plaintiff's action is based on a quasi-contract, that is, on a promise implied by law, the plaintiff may have a writ of attachment (McCall v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 527, 533, 36 P.2d 642 ; Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845, 853-854, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603).

[Optional] C. Failure of Consideration. Where there has been a total failure of consideration as to one party, the law implies a promise on the part of the other to repay what has been received by him/her under the contract; and in such a case an attachment, even though there was no rescission by plaintiff, will lie (Bennett v. Superior Court (1933) 218 Cal. 153, 162, 21 P.2d 946).

[Optional] D. Waiver of Tort. Where the facts show _____ [a misappropriation of funds or that personal property was wrongfully converted or fraud or misappropriation of funds by agent in breach of his/her fiduciary duty to his/her principal or state other facts showing tortious conduct in which law implies promise to pay money], one may waive the tort and sue on an implied contract for money had and received. Such an action, although based on tort, is one ex contractu in which the plaintiff may have a writ of attachment (Hill v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 527, 530-531, 106 P.2d 876 (misappropriation of funds); Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Hill (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 495, 499-500, 71 P.2d 258 (conversion); McCall v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 527, 538-540, 36 P.2d 642 (fraud); Arcturus Mfg. Corp. v. Rork (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 208, 213, 17 Cal. Rptr. 758 (breach of fiduciary duty)).

[Optional] E. Recovery of Funds Collected From Third Persons. A contract implied in law, qualifying as a basis for attachment, is not confined to instances where one seeks to get back what he/she has paid out under circumstances permitting a rescission, but also includes instances wherein the defendant is in possession of funds collected by him/her from third persons for which he/she is under a legal duty to account to the plaintiff (Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 267, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 [decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1), now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]).

[Optional] F. Action Based on Judgment. An action based on a judgment is an action based on a contract, since the judgment becomes a debt which the judgment debtor is obligated to pay and the law implies a contract on his part to pay it (Minor v. Minor (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 277, 279, 345 P.2d 954).

[Optional] G. Establishment of Tort Immaterial. It is immaterial that one may have to establish a tort in order to arrive at the contract implied in law on which the attachment is based (Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 268, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 ; Klein v. Benaron (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 607, 609-610, 56 Cal. Rptr. 5 [decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1), now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]).

[Optional] H. Joinder of Contract Count With Other Counts. Joinder of a contract count with other counts claiming damages, which are unliquidated, or which sound in tort, does not militate against a party's right to an attachment on the contract count within the attachment statute (Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 267, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 [decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1), now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c)]).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's notice of opposition which opposes plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that plaintiff's action against defendant is based on an express or implied contract as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a).

This memorandum, however, should be used with caution in the light of the decision in Gill v. De Sanz (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 457, 466-467, 125 Cal. Rptr. 384 . The court there held that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537.1, an interim section of the attachment law enacted in 1972, a plaintiff could not frame his or her grievance in the form of a common count based on a fictitious promise in order to have an attachment issue. However, the Legislature, in enacting former Code Civ. Proc. § 537.1, deleted the reference to contracts "express or implied" in former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1), in force prior to 1972. Thus, it would appear that this holding does not apply to present Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a), since this section specifically retains the language in former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) requiring attachments to issue only in actions on contracts, express or implied.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting any factual issues raised as required to accompany defendant's notice of opposition)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a defendant's notice of motion for an order to set aside a right to attach order, quash a writ of attachment, and release property levied on pursuant to the writ where defendant's property has been attached pursuant either to a writ issued ex parte under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 485.010-485.540 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 485.240] or to a writ issued ex parte under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 492.010-492.090 (nonresident attachment) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 492.050].

In addition, it should be noted that, although the code does not require points and authorities to accompany a plaintiff's application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010 in a notice hearing procedure pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.010-484.110, local court rule or custom may require points and authorities in support of any legal issues raised to accompany the application. In such a case, these may also be submitted in support of such an application where plaintiff's claim is based on quasi-contract.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contracts Implied in Law

In McCall v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 527, 36 P.2d 642 , the trial court gave its decree, as prayed for by plaintiffs, for restoration of the consideration plaintiffs paid to defendants following the court's confirmation of plaintiffs' rescission of their contract to purchase land with defendants. The rescission had been based on fraudulent representations on material matters inducing the purchase. An attachment had been issued in the action, and, after the trial court gave its judgment, one defendant sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to discharge the attachment. Although the Supreme Court granted the requested relief conditioned on the failure of plaintiffs to show that their security had become valueless, since plaintiffs failed to make such a showing in the trial court, the Court held that the action before it was of the type in which an attachment could issue. The Court stated the basic rule that, where a party to an executory contract parts with money or goods as the result of fraudulent representations as to material elements of the transaction, he or she has an election of remedies, one of which is to waive the tort, rescind the contract, and sue in assumpsit, on the promise implied by law, for a return of the consideration paid. In such a case, where nothing has been received, the plaintiff may sue on the common counts. In turning to the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)] permitting attachments to issue only on contracts, express or implied, the Court stated that there are at least three classes of promises to pay--an express promise, a promise implied from the facts of the case, and a promise implied by law, and that this latter promise was ex contractu in its nature. The Court concluded that, so far as attachment was concerned, it could not see any distinctions among the three promises. Although there was good reason not to allow a plaintiff to have an attachment where the action sounded n damages, since the value of the property encumbered may be out of all proportion to the sum finally recovered, in assumpsit, where the tort is waived, the sum sued for is the benefit unjustly retained by the defendant, not the damage to the plaintiff, usually more uncertain in amount.

In Goldstein v. Barak Construction (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 845, 853-854, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 603 , the plaintiffs and the defendants entered into a construction contract to remodel the plaintiffs' home. The defendants represented to the plaintiffs that they were licensed contractors. The defendants were not licensed contractors. They performed shoddy work and abandoned the job before it was completed. The plaintiffs sued for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, concealment, negligence, breach of implied warranties, breach of contract and unfair business practices, and pursuant to the Contractors' State License Law, Bus. & Prof. Code § 7000 et seq. (CSLL), sought recovery of money paid to an unlicensed contractor. After the defendants filed their verified answer, the plaintiffs filed an application for a right to attach order and order for issuance of a writ of attachment against the defendants, which the trial court granted.

On appeal, the defendants argued that the claim was not one upon which attachment can be issued because the plaintiffs sought attachment based upon a statute, the CSLL, rather than upon an express or implied contract. The court of appeal discussed the background and purpose of the CSLL and held that a claim brought under the CSLL against an unlicensed contractor may form the basis for a right to attach order because the claim is based on an agreement for the performance of services (164 Cal. App. 4th 845, 853) .

[b] Failure of Consideration

In Bennett v. Superior Court (1933) 218 Cal. 153, 21 P.2d 946 , plaintiffs obtained a writ of attachment in their action to rescind an agreement with defendants for the purchase of a certain piece of land and for return of the consideration paid for the land. The basis for plaintiffs' rescission was the defendants' failure to deliver the land. One defendant moved for the dissolution of the writ on the ground that the court was without jurisdiction to issue the attachment, since the complaint and prayer invoked the aid of the equity side of the court. Based on the announced intention of the trial court to dissolve the writ,plaintiffs sought a writ of prohibition which the Supreme Court granted. In pertinent part, the Court stated that the fact that plaintiffs prayed for a rescission of the agreement did not make the case exclusively one of equitable cognizance. Plaintiffs, by their act and in accordance with statutory procedures, had extinguished the contract and, thus, there was no occasion to invoke the equity side of the court. However, once the rescission was completed, plaintiffs were entitled to the aid of the court in securing to themselves the results of their rescission. The Court stated that, in such a case, it is settled law that, where the consideration has totally failed, an implied promise to repay the money paid under the rescinded agreement arises. An action brought for this repayment is an action ex contractu, and, thus, an attachment in such an action is proper.

[c] Waiver of Tort

In Hill v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 527, 530-531, 106 P.2d 876 , petitioner sought a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from dissolving a writ of attachment which had been issued to petitioner in his action as administrator of an estate to recover money from his predecessor who was alleged to have embezzled the money from the estate. The principal contention of the defendant in opposing the issuance of the writ was that the complaint did not state a cause of action in contract on which an attachment could issue. Based on the allegations of the complaint, the Supreme Court disagreed and granted the writ. The Court held that by the first count of the complaint, since petitioner charged that defendant converted property to his own use, petitioner stated a cause of action ex delicto which could not be the basis of an attachment. However, in the other counts of petitioner's complaint, there was alleged an implied contract for money had and received. The Court stated that petitioner was permitted to plead thus in the form of common counts since, where the facts show a misappropriation of funds, a plaintiff may waive the tort and sue on an implied contract for money had and received. Such an action, although based on the tort of embezzlement, is one ex contractu, in which petitioner was permitted to have a writ of attachment.

In Bank of America Nat. Trust & Sav. Ass'n v. Hill (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 495, 499-500, 71 P.2d 258 , plaintiff sought to foreclose its trust deed on property which previously had been attached and executed upon in an action against the person who had executed the trust deed. Plaintiff contended that the judgment rendered in the prior action was for the recovery of damages only in an action in tort, and that, thus, the attachment was extinguished or discharged by the judgment. The pertinent causes of action stated in the complaint in the prior action were for conversion of personal property and to recover a certain indebtedness, both of which were based on the same transaction. After a trial on the merits, the trial court gave judgment for defendant.

Plaintiff appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that, based on a reading of the trial court's findings and judgment in the prior action, there was no doubt but that that action had been in assumpsit and that the court had given judgment to plaintiff on his debt. The Court stated that, where personal property is wrongfully converted, the owner thereof may sue ex delicto for the wrong, or may waive the wrong and sue either for the value of property converted or for the money had and received. Where the complaint is thus framed on the theory of an implied contract, court is not without jurisdiction to issue an attachment.

The facts of McCall v. Superior Court (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 527, 538-540, 36 P.2d 642 , are discussed in § 23.33[3][a]. In holding that an attachment may issue in an action on a common count for money had and received where the money was obtained by fraudulent representations, the Court overruled the decision in Stone v. Superior Court (1931) 214 Cal. 272, 4 P.2d 777 . In that case the plaintiff had made a proper rescission and brought an action in assumpsit to secure a return of consideration paid for worthless stock received based on the fraudulent representations of the defendant. The Court in Stone held that the plaintiff was not entitled to an attachment. In overruling this decision, the Court in McCall stated that it would be perplexing to have the right of an attachment in all other quasi-contract cases and to deny it in cases of fraud. Since the law implies the quasi-contractual promise and affords an added remedy if the injured party elects to follow it, the action is not on the fraud, failure of consideration, or duress, but on the quasi-contract imposed by law.

In Arcturus Mfg. Corp. v. Rork (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 208, 17 Cal. Rptr. 758 , plaintiff sought in the first cause of action of his complaint to recover secret profits and kickbacks which defendant had received as an employee of plaintiff and in breach of his fiduciary duty to plaintiff. In the second cause of action, plaintiff alleged that defendant received to and for the use and benefit of plaintiff certain sums of money. Defendant moved to dissolve an attachment which had been issued to plaintiff, which motion the trial court denied. On defendant's appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended on appeal that (1) the second cause of action based on a common count would not support an attachment if the first cause of action was in tort, and (2) that the gravamen of the first cause of action was in tort. The court held, however, that the gist of the action as pleaded was in quasi-contract to recover property belonging to plaintiff. Although fraud was involved, and there was alleged a breach of a fiduciary obligation, the gravamen of the complaint was to recover against the defendant agent on the promise implied by law to pay to the plaintiff principal the specific secret profits and kickbacks received. This suit on the promise to disgorge secret profits and kickbacks was ex contractu and, thus, supported the attachment.

[d] Recovery of Funds Collected From Third Persons

In Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 , plaintiff's complaint alleged 11 separate causes of action. In pertinent part, thecomplaint sought to quiet title to certain real property based on defendants' breach of contract, and of certain fiduciary obligations, to rescind a deed on the ground of fraud and set forth a common count for money had and received by defendants in the form of rent while defendants were in possession of the property. One defendant moved to quash a writ of attachment which had been issued plaintiffs. On the trial court's denial of the motion, the defendant sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to dissolve the writ. In denying the issuance of the writ of mandate, the court of appeal held that the action was a proper one in which to issue an attachment. The court stated that the complaint, along with the declaration of the attorney for plaintiffs, set forth an implied contract for the payment of money within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)]. The joinder of the contract count with other counts claiming damages which were unliquidated or which sounded in tort did not militate against plaintiff's right to an attachment on the contract count. Moreover, a contract implied in law, qualifying as a basis for attachment is not confined to instances where one seeks to get back what had been paid out under circumstances permitting rescission. It also includes instances wherein the defendant is in possession of funds collected from third persons for which he or she is under a legal duty to account to the plaintiff.

It should be noted that plaintiffs' attachment consisted of a garnishment of the rental monies payable to petitioner but alleged to be owed to plaintiffs. Although the court held this was a proper levy, since the defendants' right to the fund garnished was such that they could have instituted an action for debt at common law against the holder of the fund, the court stated that the more appropriate procedure for impounding the rentals pendente lite to assure their application in conformity with any final judgment to be rendered would be through a receiver.

[e] Action Based on Judgment

Minor v. Minor (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 277, 345 P.2d 954 , involved the question of whether a writ of attachment may issue for unpaid installments in a property settlement agreement. Plaintiff's complaint alleged in pertinent part that in consideration for plaintiff's waiver of her claim to alimony, defendant was to pay a certain sum of money on an installment basis; that plaintiff, thereafter, secured an interlocutory decree of divorce which incorporated plaintiff's agreement with defendant; and that defendant failed to make the payments and repudiated the agreement. After a writ of attachment was issued to plaintiff, defendant moved to dissolve it on the ground that the decree did not incorporate the agreement and that the complaint showed that only a small portion of the amount claimed was due. On defendant's appeal from the trial court's denial of the motion, the court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that, although it was unclear if the divorce court decree awarding plaintiff the sum of money sued upon was based on plaintiff's agreement with defendant, this was immaterial, since if the contract were a part of the decree, it was well settled that an action based on a judgment is an action based on a contract. The judgment becomes a debt which the judgment debtor is obligated to pay and the law implies a contract on the debtor's part to pay it. Thus, if the agreement was merged in the decree and the attachment was based thereon or if it was based on the agreement itself, an attachment would lie under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a)], providing that an attachment may be had in an action on a contract, express or implied.

[f] Establishment of Tort Immaterial

In Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 , the facts of which are discussed in § 23.33[3][d], the court stated that it was immaterial that one may have to establish a tort in order to arrive at the contract implied in law on which the attachment is based. In support of this rule, the court cited Klein v. Benaron (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 607, 56 Cal. Rptr. 5 , a case in which defendant fraudulently induced plaintiff to part with a large sum of money in return for nearly worthless stock. Plaintiff's complaint was drafted in five counts, the first of which was in fraud, with exemplary damages requested, and the fourth in the form of a common count (money had and received) for the sum of money lent. On defendant's motion, the trial court dissolved a writ of attachment issued to plaintiff, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed the trial court, stating that, in the situation before it, the plaintiff had a choice between two causes of action, on one of which an attachment could issue, and the plaintiff had acted upon that one. Although it was beyond question that the first cause of action was one in fraud, a tort, the facts of that tort revealed plaintiff's money going from his hand to defendant's based on defendant's misrepresentations and, thus, presented a case where the law implies a promise on defendant's part to repay it.

It should be noted that the court added that plaintiff, by his election, had possibly elected to have the case tried on the basis of the common count, thereby ending his chances of recovering exemplary damages.

[g] Joinder of Contract Count With Other Counts

This portion of Samuels v. Superior Court (1969) 276 Cal. App. 2d 264, 267, 81 Cal. Rptr. 216 , is discussed in § 23.33[3][d].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.34

§ 23.34 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Proceeding to Confirm Arbitration Award [Code Civ. Proc. § 1285]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY ISSUE ON THE PETITION OF A PLAINTIFF TOCONFIRM AN ARBITRATION AWARD.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Effect of Arbitration Award. An arbitration award which has not been confirmed or vacated has the same force and effect as a contract in writing between the parties to the arbitration (Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.6).

C. Attachment Permissible in Proceeding to Confirm Arbitration Award. Upon the petition for confirmation of an arbitration award pursuant to Section 1285 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a plaintiff is entitled to the issuance of an attachment to secure the satisfaction of any judgment which might be entered on the award (Ross v. Blanchard (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 739, 743-744, 59 Cal. Rptr. 783).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to defendant's notice of opposition which opposes the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that the action is not one based on a contract, express or implied as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting factual issues raised as required to accompany defendant's notice of opposition)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attachment Permissible in Proceeding to Confirm Arbitration Award

Ross v. Blanchard (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 739, 59 Cal. Rptr. 783 , was an appeal from an order discharging an attachment entered by the trial court at the time of its confirmation of an arbitration award. The writ had been issued to plaintiffs after commencement of their action for breach of contract and before the filing of defendant's affirmative defense of a demand for arbitration and subsequent stay of the action until disposition of the arbitration. The order discharging the attachment was apparently based on the defendants' argument that, since plaintiffs were bound to arbitrate under the contract, their filing of the lawsuit was wrongful, and they should not be allowed to profit from their own wrong. The court of appeal reversed the trial court, concluding that provisional remedies, in general, are available in whole or in part to a party which has contracted to arbitrate disputes which may thereafter arise. The court stated, as part of its reasoning, that plaintiff was not precluded by arbitration law from initially resorting to the courts. Therefore, since the plaintiffs complied with arbitration and obtained an award, they became eligible to secure confirmation of the award and entry of judgment. At this stage, by virtue of Code Civ. Proc. § 1287.6 [see Paragraph A of this form], plaintiffs occupied the position of litigants seeking judgment on a written contract, who would have available for their security various provisional remedies, including attachment.

It should be noted that the court recognized the right of defendants at any time from the stay of the action by the trial court to apply for a vacation of the attachment. However, by itself the stay of the action kept all matters relating to the attachment in status quo.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.35

§ 23.35 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Is on Claim Arising out of Defendant's Trade, Business, or Profession [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY ISSUE ON A CLAIM ARISING OUT OF THE CONDUCT OF A BUSINESS INVOLVING AN ACTIVITY ENGAGED IN FOR PROFIT WITH FREQUENCY AND CONTINUITY IN CASES IN WHICH THE ISSUANCE OF THE ATTACHMENT IS OTHERWISE CONSISTENT WITH THE PURPOSE OF THE ATTACHMENT LAW.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Individual Engaged in Trade, Business, or Profession. The conduct of a business by an individual for the purpose of permitting an attachment in an action against such individual encompasses almost any activity engaged in for profit with frequency and continuity when such interpretation is consistent with the purpose of the attachment law (Advance Transformer Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 127, 139, 118 Cal. Rptr. 350 [construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 537.1, requiring individual defendant to be engaged in trade or business]).

[Optional] C. Activities of Guarantor. Where the sum total of the factual circumstances justifies the conclusion that a guarantor occupied himself/herself to a substantial degree and on a continuing basis in promoting his/her own profit through the providing of credit or management to the primary obligor, a guarantee executed in the course of such activity may properly be considered an obligation arising out of the conduct of the guarantor's business (Advance Transformer Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 127, 144, 118 Cal. Rptr. 350 [construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 537.1, requiring individual defendant to be engaged in trade or business]).

[Optional] D. Personal Obligation for Partnership Business. An attachment against an individual is proper in an action on an obligation signed in a personal capacity, if the proceeds of the obligation were used in the business of a general partnership in which he or she is a partner (Security Pacific National Bank v. Matek (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1073-1077, 223 Cal. Rptr. 288).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to an individual defendant's notice of opposition which opposes plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that plaintiff's claim against defendant does not arise out of his or her conduct of a trade, business, or profession.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting factual issues raised in defendant's notice of opposition as required to accompany such notice)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Individual Engaged in Trade, Business, or Profession

In Advance Transformer Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 127, 118 Cal. Rptr. 350 , plaintiff brought suit against Supreme Lighting, a corporation, and Joseph and Margery Shapiro on a note representing the amount due on account resulting from a series of business transactions between plaintiff and Supreme Lighting. The note was executed by the Shapiros both on behalf of the corporation and individually, as guarantors of the corporate obligation. Plaintiff applied for an attachment in a noticed hearing under the interim attachment law (effective 1972-1976). The trial court decided that in the absence of any alter-ego allegations, a writ of attachment could not be issued on any attachable assets of the Shapiros since, otherwise, the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(c) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c)], limiting attachments in actions against individual defendants to attachable assets of individuals engaged in a trade or business, would not be met. Therefore, the application was granted only insofar as it affected attachable assets of the corporation. Plaintiff then sought a writ of mandamus to compel the trial court to grant a new hearing on his application for an attachment against the Shapiros. The court of appeal granted the writ and held that the trial court had adopted an erroneous standard for determining the availability of the attachment remedy, since to require the establishment of identify between the defendant guarantor and the primary obligor on the basis of the alter-ego doctrine resulted in the failure to find facts which properly governed the determination of whether the Shapiros were engaged in a trade or business. The court of appeal stated that this determination required the trial court to find first whether the Shapiros were involved in any activity which could be considered a "business." Based on prior California decisions, the court defined a "business" as embracing any activity engaged in for profit or for gain. Secod, the trial court must find whether the Shapiros were "engaged in business," which the court stated to be generally held to imply a business activity of a frequent or continuous nature. This latter definition was based on the court's examination of a number of California decisions, interpreting various business license acts, and federal decisions, interpreting the income tax and bankruptcy laws. Thus, the proper standard for determining whether a defendant guarantor or accommodation maker is engaged in business so as to make issuable an attachment against him orher is the application of these general principles as stated in these authorities, giving due consideration to the purposes of the attachment law. If the defendant is engaged generally in the business of guaranteeing for consideration the debts of others, that is, lending credit, any liability incurred as a result is a debt arising out of the conduct of his or her business. At the opposite extreme, a retired person, with no financial stake in the success of the primary obligor, cannot properly be held engaged in business solely by virtue of an isolated instance in which he or she guarantees a commercial obligation out of friendship and without compensation. Cases falling between these extremes will require the exercise of judgment on a case-to-case basis to determine whether the defendant's activity with respect either to the extension of credit generally, or to the business of the primary obligor, is such as to justify the conclusion that the guarantee of the primary obligor's debt sued upon is part and parcel of an activity which occupies the time, attention, and effort of the guarantor for the purpose of livelihood or profit on a continuing basis. Finally, in cases involving guarantees by principal shareholders of closely held corporations, if the sum total of the circumstances justifies the conclusion that the guarantor occupied himself or herself to a substantial degree and on a continuing basis in the business of the primary obligor, a guarantee executed in the course of that activity may properly be considered an obligation arising out of the conduct of the guarantor's business.

It should be noted that the court limited the scope of former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(c) by authorizing attachments in actions against individual defendants to those actions arising out of the conduct of the individual's trade, business, or profession. This limitation has been codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c). It would appear, therefore, that Advance Transformer is good authority for the necessary factual findings which must be made in determining whether an attachment is authorized under Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c) in an action against an individual.

[b] Activities of Guarantor

Advance Transformer Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 44 Cal. App. 3d 127, 118 Cal. Rptr. 350 , is discussed in § 23.35[3][a].

[c] Personal Borrowing for Loan to Partnership

Security Pacific National Bank v. Matek (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 223 Cal. Rptr. 288 , was an action on a note signed by defendant as an individual. Defendant earned his livelihood as a real estate broker and claimed he was only a passive investor in the general partnership to which he reloaned the proceeds. Further, he contended that even though the partnership agreement specified that the partnership was a general one, it was in fact a limited one because the agreement delegated day-to-day management to partners other than defendant. Plaintiff had made secured loans to the partnership. The partnership could not meet installment payments on the secured loans, and plaintiff refused to extend it unsecured credit. The managing partner asked defendant to borrow sufficient funds in his own name and reloan them to the partnership. Plaintiff conditioned the loan to defendant on the immediate transmittal of the loan proceeds to the partnership. The trial court granted a prejudgment attachment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c), and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that in the absence of substantial compliance with Corp. Code § 15502, a general partnership is formed and all partners are treated as general partners, even if day-to-day management is delegated to less than all of them (175 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1075-1076) . Each partner is an agent of the partnership and his or her actions will bind the partnership even if he or she signs as an individual. There was no dispute here that the loan proceeds were used in the partnership business. Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(c) makes no distinction between those sued individually as partners and those sued as sole proprietors (175 Cal. App. 3d 1071, 1076-1077) .

189 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.36

§ 23.36 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Action Against Guarantor Who by Express Contract Has Waived All Rights in Security

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY BE ISSUED IN AN ACTION ON A SECURED OBLIGATION BROUGHT AGAINST A GUARANTOR OF THAT OBLIGATION IF THE GUARANTOR HAS WAIVED BY EXPRESS CONTRACT ALL RIGHTS IN THE SECURITY.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Waiver of Security by Express Contract. When a defendant guarantor waives by contract any and all rights arising out of, or incidental to, the existence of a security given by the defendant debtor and is without limitation, the defendant may not oppose the right of a plaintiff to an attachment on the ground that the obligation sued upon was secured (Engelman v. Bookasta (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 915, 918, 71 Cal. Rptr. 120).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's notice of opposition which opposes the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that the claim sued upon was secured by an interest in real or personal property arising from an agreement, statute, or other rule of law as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting factual issues raised in defendant's notice of opposition as required to accompany such notice)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Security by Express Contract

In Engelman v. Bookasta (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 915, 71 Cal. Rptr. 120 , plaintiffs sued defendant on his guaranty of a note for which the primary obligor had executed a trust deed and an assignment of rents as security for the payment of the note. Defendant had waived in a written agreement any right to require the holder of the note to proceed against the maker or to apply any security it may hold, or to proceed to first exhaust any security it may hold. The trial court denied defendant's motion to dissolve an attachment which had been issued to plaintiff. The denial of the motion was on the ground that former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1) [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)], limiting attachments to unsecured claims, was inapplicable in view of defendant's waiver. Plaintiff appealed and the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order. The court interpreted the defendant's waiver as expressing an intention to waive any and all rights arising out of, or incidental to, the existence of the security given by the maker of the note. The waiver was without limitation, and it constituted a contract between the plaintiffs and the defendant that for all purposes the debt of the defendant created by his guaranty was to be considered as unsecured. In light of this interpretation, the court was unable to entertain any argument which stated that plaintiffs' claim was secured since such an argument was relying on rights which defendant had waived (264 Cal. App. 2d 915, 918) .

The court, in addition, explicitly rejected the argument in a dictum in the decision in Lencioni v. Dan (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 105, 275 P.2d 101 . The footnote had stated that it could be argued that it would violate the policy of the law to permit a creditor to waive his or her security and sue and attach property of the debtor. However, it should be noted that the plaintiff in Lencioni was arguing that, merely by suing on his debt rather than foreclosing on his security, he was waiving his rights in his security and, thus, should be permitted to attach defendant's property. In Engleman, the defendant, not the plaintiff, had executed a waiver which was express and in writing (264 Cal. App. 2d 915, 918) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.37

§ 23.37 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Real Property Securing Claim Sued on Has Become Valueless or Decreased in Value to Less Than Amount Owing [Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY ISSUE ON A CLAIM ORIGINALLY SECURED BY REAL PROPERTY IF WITHOUT ANY ACT OF THE PLAINTIFF OR THE PERSON TO WHOM THE SECURITY WAS GIVEN, THE SECURITY HAS BECOME VALUELESS OR DECREASED IN VALUE TO LESS THAN THE AMOUNT THEN OWING ON THE CLAIM.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Inadequate Security. An attachment may be issued when the claim was originally secured by an interest in real property arising from an agreement, statute, or other rule of law as provided in Section 483.010(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure and, without any act of the plaintiff or the person to whom the security was given, has become either valueless or decreased in value to less than the amount then owing on the claim (Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b); Bank of America v. Salinas Nissan, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 273, 254 Cal. Rptr. 748).

C. Security Only as Required to Be Valueless. The requirement that the security be rendered valueless in order to permit an attachment to issue does not mean that the property secured must itself become valueless; it is sufficient if property secured has ceased to have any value as a security (see Williams v. Hahn (1896) 113 Cal. 475, 477, 45 P. 815 ; Western Bd. of Adjusters, Inc. v. Covina Pub., Inc. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 659, 672, 88 Cal. Rptr. 293 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 537(1), now see Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b))).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's notice of opposition which opposes the plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that the claim sued on is secured by an interest in real property arising from an agreement, statute, or other rule of law as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting factual issues raised in defendant's notice of opposition as required to accompany such notice)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Security

Code Civ. Proc. § 483.101(b) authorizes an attachment, as an exception to the general prohibition on issuance of an attachment on a secured claim, when the security has decreased in value through no fault of the plaintiff. Under these circumstances, the amount to be secured by the attachment must not exceed the lesser of (1) the amount of the decrease, or (2) the difference between the value of the security and the amount then owing on the claim.

In Bank of America v. Salinas Nissan, Inc. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 254 Cal. Rptr. 748 , a bank brought an action against defendant car dealerships for breach of "flooring and security" contracts, under which the bank financed defendants' purchase of new cars and defendants agreed to repay the bank from the proceeds once the cars were sold. The agreements were secured by defendants' inventory, among other property. The bank applied for an attachment order under Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b), which prohibited any attachment on a claim secured by an interest in real or personal property but made an exception when, without any act of the plaintiff, the security became valueless or decreased in value to less than the amount owing on the claim. Plaintiff submitted a declaration that defendants' security was less than the debt owing and offered evidence of defendants' contract breaches. Plaintiff did not, however, expressly disclaim responsibility for any diminution in the value of its security. The trial court issued the order of attachment and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a plaintiff seeking to attach on an originally secured contract has the burden to prove (1) the security has diminished in value and (2) plaintiff was not responsible for the diminution, but these averments do not need to appear in plaintiff's affidavit in support of the application for attachment (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 273) . In addition, the court held that the trial court was not required to make a specific finding that the security's value had diminished through no fault of plaintiff because that finding was implied in the court's order and was supported by the evidence (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 273-274) . The court recognized that cases interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 537, 538 did require that the plaintiff's affidavit aver that the plaintiff had not caused the security to become valueless (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 271) . The court analyzed the conflicting indications in the newer, applicable statutes. On the one hand, (1) the attachment statutes do not expressly require an applicant's affidavit to contain every fact specified elsewhere in the statutes, (2) an application for a right to attach must be supported by an affidavit showing that the plaintiff on the facts presented would be entitled to a judgment on the claim on which the attachment is based (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 484.030), and (3) the affidavit should be geared to establishing the probable validity of the plaintiff's claim (citing Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.090(a)(2), 481.190) (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 272) . On the other hand, (1) the application must be executed under oath and must include a statement showing that the attachment is sought to secure recovery on a claim on which an attachment may be issued (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 484.020(a)), and (2) plaintiff is required to establish that the claim on which the attachment is based is one on which an attachment may be issued (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(a)(1)) (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 272) . The court looked to other parts of the attachment law to find what claims warrant attachment, "since elated statutory provisions should be harmonized," and said that Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010 spells out what claims authorize attachment (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 272) . The court further pointed out that under the attachment law, the court will generally evaluate the attachment application based solely on the pleadings and supporting affidavits without taking additional evidence (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 484.090(d)) (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 272-273) . Reading these parts of the statute together, the court concluded that it remained the plaintiff's burden to prove that the security's value had diminished through no fault of plaintiff but that it is no longer necessary for the plaintiff's affidavit to contain such averments. Such averments are still prudent, because thetrial court need not consider additional evidence at the attachment application hearing without good cause (207 Cal. App. 3d 260, 273) .

Counsel should note that the statute construed by the court in Bank of America prohibited issuance of an attachment on a claim secured by personal property. This prohibition has been deleted from Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b).

[b] Security Only as Required to Be Valueless

In Williams v. Hahn (1896) 113 Cal. 475, 45 P. 815 , defendant executed a promissory note for $2,000 secured by collateral security consisting of a quantity of wine. On the defendant's failure to pay the note, plaintiff sold the wine pursuant to his agreement with defendant, and thereafter, commenced this action to recover the amount remaining due on the note. After a writ of attachment was issued to plaintiff, defendant moved to dissolve it, on the ground that the note was originally secured by a pledge of personal property, and that the same had not become valueless. The court denied the motion, and, on defendant's appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court stated that the language used in former Code Civ. Proc. § 537 [now Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b)] should not be construed to mean that the property pledged must itself have become valueless before the plaintiff can have an attachment, but rather, that the property pledged has ceased to have any value as a security. That is to say, if the property has been disposed of in accordance with the very terms under which it was given and held as a security, the "security" has ceased to exist, and is therefore valueless (113 Cal. 475, 477) .

In Western Bd. of Adjusters, Inc. v. Covina Pub., Inc. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 659, 88 Cal. Rptr. 293 , plaintiff brought an action against several defendants on two notes and for money had and received by defendants. Plaintiff obtained one writ of attachment in order to gain protection for collection of judgment on one note. The declaration supporting the attachment recited that the amount of the note was secured but that the security had become valueless. Two defendants moved to quash the writ on the ground that the conceded security had not become valueless. The security consisted of an assignment of copyrights and negatives of publications owned by one defendant and of accounts receivable and general intangibles then owed, or to become owed, to this defendant. After an extensive hearing, the trial court denied the motion after finding that the security had been rendered valueless, or that its worth was incapable of being determined. The defendants appealed and the court of appeal affirmed. In pertinent part, the court stated that the primary issue was whether the evidence supported the finding, implied from the term "rendered valueless," that at least some of the security had value when given and had become valueless as such at the time the writ of attachment was applied for. It is enough, in answering this question, that part of the security had value. In addition, the degree of worthlessness need only be that for security purposes. In reviewing the trial court's findings, the court found substantial evidence to justify the trial court's conclusion (9 Cal. App. 3d 659, 672) .

The rule that the degree of worthlessness need only be that for security purposes has, in effect, been codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b), which now permits an attachment to issue on secured claim where the security, without any act of plaintiff or the person to whom the security was given, has decreased in value to less than the amount then owing on the claim.

Counsel should note that the statute construed by the court in Williams and Western Bd. of Adjusters prohibited issuance of an attachment on a claim secured by personal property. This prohibition, has been deleted from Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(b).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.38

§ 23.38 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Damages Readily Ascertainable and Their Basis for Computation Reasonable and Definite

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT MAY ISSUE IN AN ACTION ON A CLAIM WHERE THE DAMAGES ARE READILY ASCERTAINABLE BY REFERENCE TO THE CONTRACT AND THE BASIS FOR THE COMPUTATION OF DAMAGES APPEARS TO BE REASONABLE AND DEFINITE.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Satisfaction of Requirement That Claim Be for Readily Ascertainable Amount. An attachment will lie on a cause of action for damages for breach of contract where the damages are readily ascertainable by reference to the contract and the basis for the computation of damages appears to be reasonable and definite (Force v. Hart (1928) 205 Cal. 670, 673, 272 P. 583).

[Optional] C. Damages as Not Required to Be Known by Plaintiff. It is unnecessary to support an attachment that the complaint show the entire amount due or that the amount owing be fixed with absolute certainty. Thus, an attachment is proper even though the exact amount due is unknown to the attaching party (Peninsula Properties Co. v. Santa Cruz County (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 626, 213 P.2d 489).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's notice of opposition which opposes plaintiff's application for a right to attach order on the ground that the sum claimed in plaintiff's complaint or affidavit is not a fixed or readily ascertainable amount as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 483.010(a).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support any factual issues raised in opposing defendant's notice of opposition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (affidavits supporting factual issues raised as required to accompany defendant's notice of opposition)].

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment preceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Satisfaction of Requirement That Claim Be for Readily Ascertainable Amount

Force v. Hart (1928) 205 Cal. 670, 272 P. 583 , was an appeal from an order denying defendant's motion to discharge an attachment. Defendant sought to have an attachment issued to plaintiff on plaintiff's cause of action for breach of contract. This contract was for the construction of an apartment house which the defendant allegedly refused to allow to be built. Plaintiff was to receive $68,500 under the contract, and he alleged that he had been damaged in the sum of $5,700. Defendant argued that, since the contract was mainly executory--performance having progressed merely to the point of securing a permit for the erection of the building--the contract as pleaded left as a matter of conjecture the cost to the plaintiff of the construction of the building. However, it was apparently conceded that, if the pleading had alleged that the cost of the building to the plaintiff would have been $62,800, an affidavit under the attachment law then in effect, which stated that the defendant was indebted to plaintiff in the sum of $5,700, would have been justified. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's order and held that the damages were readily ascertainable by reference to the contract and the basis of the computation of damages appeared to be reasonable and definite. The obligation by the defendant was fixed by contract. The difference between the contract price and the cost of the building appeared in effect in the allegations of the complaint and of the affidavit. The damages alleged appeared to be the direct and immediate consequences of the repudiation of the contract by defendant. The cost of labor and materials for construction appeared to be capable of definite ascertainment and the pecuniary value of the contract right taken from the plaintiff, thus, was fixed at the trial.

[b] Damages as Not Required to Be Known by Plaintiff

The pertinent portion of Peninsula Properties Co. v. Santa Cruz County (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 626, 213 P.2d 489 , involved an attachment issued on a cross-complaint which sought to recover rents, issues, and profits taken and retained by cross-defendants after cross-complainant allegedly became owner of certain property. Cross-defendants moved to dissolve the attachment, and, on the trial court's denial of the motion, the cross-defendants appealed. In affirming the trial court's order, the Supreme Court stated, in response to the contentions that the amount sued upon was not definite and certain, that it was unnecessary in order to support an attachment that the complaint show the entire amount due. The fact that the amount claimed was alleged on information and belief was not in violation of the statutory requirements for the issuance of an attachment since the amount owing need not be fixed with absolute certainty, and an attachment was proper even though the exact amount due was unknown to the attaching party.

192 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.39

§ 23.39 Reply to Notice of Opposition to Plaintiff's Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(c)]--Verified Complaint in Lieu of Affidavit Is Insufficient to Support Opposition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 482.040]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 23.33.]

AN ATTACHMENT SHOULD ISSUE BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAS FAILED TO MAKE A VALID EVIDENTIARY SHOWING IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S APPLICATION; DEFENDANT'S OPPOSITION IS ACCOMPANIED ONLY BY A COMPLAINT VERIFIED BY _____ [A CORPORATE OFFICER or A PUBLIC AGENCY OFFICER or DEFENDANT'S ATTORNEY], AND IS OTHERWISE UNACCOMPANIED BY AN AFFIDAVIT SUPPORTING ANY FACTUAL ISSUES RAISED.

A. Reply to Defendant's Notice of Opposition. [See § 23.33, Paragraph A.]

B. When Verified Pleading Cannot Be Considered as Affidavit. When verification is made on behalf of a corporation or public agency by an officer of the corporation or agency, or when verification is made by an attorney because the parties are either absent from the county where the attorney has his or her officeor otherwise unable to verify, the pleadings shall not otherwise be considered as an affidavit or declaration establishing the facts alleged (Code Civ. Proc. § 446; Lorber Industries v. Turbulence, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 536, 221 Cal. Rptr. 233).

C. When Verification Limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 446 Apply to Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040. The limitations of Section 446 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on verified pleadings that may be considered as affidavits, antedate and apply to Section 482.040 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Therefore a verified complaint may not be used in lieu of an affidavit to accompany an opposition to an application for a right to attach order when the complaint is verified on behalf of a corporation or public agency by one of its officers, or when the complaint is verified by an attorney because the parties are either absent from the county where the attorney has his or her office or otherwise unable to verify it (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 446, 482.040, 484.060(a); Lorber Industries v. Turbulence, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 536, 221 Cal. Rptr. 233).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's notice of opposition to plaintiff's application for a right to attach order. The form is for use when plaintiff opposes defendant's opposition to the application on the ground that defendant's verified complaint, submitted in lieu of the required affidavit under Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a), cannot support defendant's opposition to the application because the complaint is verified by (1) a corporate officer on behalf of a corporation, or (2) an officer of a public agency on behalf of the agency, or (3) an attorney because the parties are either absent from the county where the attorney has his or her office or otherwise unable to verify it. Code Civ. Proc. § 446 provides that, in these cases, pleadings shall not otherwise be considered as an affidavit or declaration establishing the facts alleged [Code Civ. Proc. § 446].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted in other attachment proceedings. For a discussion of these related uses, see § 23.33[2].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For general forms of affidavits and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in verifying pleadings, see Ch. 572, Verification in that publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Verified Pleading Cannot Be Considered as Affidavit

In Lorber Industries v. Turbulence, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 221 Cal. Rptr. 233 , plaintiff was a corporation engaged in manufacturing and printing textiles, and defendant was a corporation engaged in the distribution of wearing apparel. The parties entered into a series of written agreements under which defendant ordered fabrics from plaintiff, and plaintiff prepared and delivered the materials. These deliveries continued until the company that financed plaintiff's accounts receivable charged plaintiff several thousand dollars for defendant's alleged failure to pay for goods received. As a result of these chargebacks, plaintiff filed a complaint against defendant for money damages, alleging that defendant owed a stated sum for goods delivered. Thereafter, plaintiff filed a notice of application for a right to attach order and writ of attachment. Defendant then filed a cross complaint, alleging that the material was defective when received, and filed its opposition to plaintiff's application for a right to attach order. The trial court found that plaintiff had established the probable validity of its claim under the attachment law and granted the application. Defendant appealed from the judgment granting the order.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that defendant made no valid evidentiary showing in opposition to plaintiff's application. In so holding, the court noted that, in opposing the application, defendant relied on its cross complaint, which was verified by its vice president and had documentary evidence attached. Defendant did not dispute the price of delivery of the materials. It argued that the damaged condition of the merchandise showed that plaintiff had not established the probable validity of its claim, or at least entitled defendant to an offset. The court held that the trial court properly rejected defendant's arguments because defendant could not base them on the verified cross complaint. The court held that, under Code Civ. Proc. § 446, when the verification is made on behalf of a corporation or public agency by any of its officers, the pleadings shall nototherwise be considered as an affidavit or declaration establishing the facts alleged (175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 536) .

[b] When Verification Limitations of Code Civ. Proc. § 446 Apply to Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040

The facts stated in each affidavit filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 482.010-493.060 (the attachment law) shall be set forth with particularity. Except when matters are specifically permitted by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 482.010-493.060 to be shown by information and belief, each affidavit shall show affirmatively that the affiant, if sworn as a witness, can testify competently to the facts stated. In regard to matters shown by information and belief, the affidavit shall state the facts on which the affiant's belief is based, showing the nature of his or her information and reliability of his or her informant. The affiant may be any person, whether or not a party to the action, who has knowledge of the facts. A verified complaint that satisfies the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040 may be used in lieu of or in addition to an affidavit [Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040].

The facts and procedural background of Lorber Industries v. Turbulence, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 221 Cal. Rptr. 233 , are discussed in § 23.39[3][a]. In Lorber, the court of appeal harmonized the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a) (providing that an opposition to attachment must be accompanied by an affidavit supporting any factual issues raised), Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040 (providing that a verified complaint may be used in lieu of or in addition to an affidavit, and discussed supra), and Code Civ. Proc. § 446 (governing verification of pleadings, generally, and discussed in § 23.39[4][a]). The court held that the specification in Code Civ. Proc. § 446 that when verification is made on behalf of a corporation or public agency by any of its officers, the pleadings shall not otherwise be considered as an affidavit or declaration establishing the facts alleged, and that such a situation governs Code Civ. Proc. § 482.040. Therefore, a verified cross complaint cannot support an opposition to an application for a right to attach order when the verification is made by a corporate officer on behalf of a corporation. The court also noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 446 antedates both Code Civ. Proc. §§ 482.040 and 484.060 (175 Cal. App. 3d 532, 536) .

193 of 193 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2 Chapters 20-23 ARBITRATION---to---ATTACHMENT
CHAPTER 23 ATTACHMENT
PART II. FORMS

2-23 California Points & Authorities § 23.40

§ 23.40 Opposing Motion for Recovery of Damages for Wrongful Attachment [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.020, 996.440]--Plaintiff's Liability Limited by Amount of Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR RECOV-
_____ [name],	)	ERY OF DAMAGES FOR WRONGFUL ATTACH-Defendant.	)	MENT
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.020, 996.440]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
		Location: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S LIABILITY FOR WRONGFUL ATTACHMENT IS LIMITED BY THE AMOUNT OF UNDERTAKING FILED BEFORE ISSUANCE OF THE _____ [WRIT OF ATTACHMENT OR PROTECTIVE ORDER].

A. Limitation on Plaintiff's Liability. The liability of a plaintiff for wrongful attachment pursuant to Section 490.010 of the Code of Civil Procedure is limited by the amount of the undertaking which the plaintiff must file before the issuance of a writ of attachment or a protective order (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 489.210, 490.020).

[Optional] B. Damages Reduced by Unsatisfied Amounts Owed to Plaintiff. The amount of any recovery for wrongful attachment must be offset insofar as possible against any unsatisfied amounts owed to the plaintiff by the defendant on the judgment in the action for which wrongful attachment damages are awarded (Code Civ. Proc. § 490.040).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by counsel for plaintiff in opposition to a defendant's motion for recovery for damages for wrongful attachment.

Counsel should insert argument in this memorandum, showing the relation between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

In 1982, the Legislature repealed Code Civ. Proc. § 490.030, which set forth the procedures regarding the recovery of damages for wrongful attachment. In its place, the Legislature enacted more general procedural statutes in the Bond and Undertaking Law (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.010-996.560). The procedures for enforcing the liability on a bond or undertaking against the principal and sureties are now contained in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.410-996.495.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation on Plaintiff's Liability

It would appear that the limitation on liability of a plaintiff for wrongful attachment set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(b) is a limitation on the total amount which the defendant could recover on his or her motion and does not affect the type of damages which may be recovered as described in Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020(a).

Two references are made to the limitation on plaintiff's liability in the Law Revision Commission Comment. In its Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 490.010, the Commission states that the plaintiff's liability is limited to the amount of undertaking he has filed only if he has proceeded by way of a noticed hearing. In its Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 490.020, the Commission notes that the liability of the surety and the plaintiff together is limited to the amount of the undertaking, but that this limitation does not apply where an independent action is brought based on a common-law theory of recovery [see Code Civ. Proc. § 490.060 (nothing in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 490.010-490.060 as limiting right to recover damages for wrongful attachment on common-law theory of recovery)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR

2A-24 California Points & Authorities 24.syn

§ 24.syn Synopsis to Chapter 24: ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR

§ 24.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 24.02 Governing Statutes

§ 24.03 Rules of Court

§ 24.04 Rules of Professional Conduct

§ 24.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 24.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 24.07-24.19 [Reserved]

§ 24.20 Supporting Motion for Order Permitting Substitution of Attorney on Application of Client [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Power and Right to Discharge

[b] Right Independent of Statutory Authority

[c] Detriment to Attorney as Immaterial

[d] Substitution as Unaffected by Contingent Fee Agreements

[e] No Statutory Rights of Attorney/Employee Affected

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Detriment to Attorney as Immaterial

[b] Substitution is Unaffected by Contingent Fee Agreement

§ 24.21 Opposing Client's Motion for Order Permitting Substitution of Attorney [CCP § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest of Attorney

[b] Attorney in Representative Capacity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interest of Attorney

§ 24.22 Supporting Motion for Order Permitting Withdrawal of Attorney From Case [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Withdrawal

[b] Withdrawal Normally Permitted

[c] Corporate Client

[d] Refusal to Pay Attorney's Fees

[e] Withdrawal to Prevent Frivolous Appeal or Delaying Tactics

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Withdrawal

[b] Withdrawal Normally Permitted

§ 24.23 Opposing Attorney's Motion for Order Permitting Withdrawal From Case [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Deny Withdrawal

[b] Injustice to Third Party

[c] Prejudice to Client

[d] Refusal to Consent to Increase in Attorney's Fee Insufficient Reason for Withdrawal

§ 24.24 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Injunctive Relief

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Disqualify

[b] Attorney's Duty to Client

[c] Rule Against Conduct or Disclosure Adverse to Former Client

[d] Rules of Professional Conduct Prohibit Adverse Representation

[e] Actual Misuse of Confidential Information Not Necessary

[f] Prejudice to Adverse Party Irrelevant

[g] Injury to Former Client Presumed

[h] No Joint Client Exception

[i] Disqualification of Former Judicial Officer and Officer's Law Firm

[j] Disqualification of Law Firm That Formerly Represented Parent Corporation of Adverse Corporate Party

[k] Disqualification of Entire Public Law Office When Attorney Leaves Private Practice to Become Head of Public Law Office

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rule Against Conduct or Disclosure Adverse to Former Client

[b] Rules of Professional Conduct Prohibit Adverse Representation

[c] Actual Misuse of Confidential Information Not Necessary

§ 24.25 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Communicated With Represented Adverse Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Communication With Adverse Party

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Communication With Adverse Party

§ 24.26 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Concurrently Represents Adverse Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Adverse Concurrent Representation

[b] Withdrawal of Representation Before Hearing Does Not Cure Violation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Adverse Concurrent Representation

[b] Withdrawal of Representation Before Hearing Does Not Cure Violation

§ 24.27 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Opposing Attorney Who Retained Expert Witness Previously Interviewed by Moving Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Opposing Attorney for Retaining Previously Interviewed Expert Witness

§ 24.28 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--No Actual Attorney-Client Relationship Existed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confidential Attorney-Client Relationship Required

[b] Attorney for Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Confidential Attorney-Client Relationship Required

§ 24.29 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Client Consented to Adverse Representation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Client's Consent Prevents Disqualification

[b] Substantial Relationship Test Is Not Necessarily Dispositive in Case Involving Former Joint Clients

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Client's Consent Prevents Disqualification

§ 24.30 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Previous Mutual Representation of Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Former Mutual Representation May Prevent Disqualification

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] In General

§ 24.31 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Present Representation Not in Conflict With Previous Representation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Conflict With Earlier Employment

[b] Former Government Employee's Current Law Firm

[c] Former Judicial Officer's Current Law Firm

[d] No Confidential Information Obtained in Earlier Employment

[e] Confidential Information Obtained in Mediation in Related Action Against Same Defendant

[f] No Disqualification of Lawyer's Former Firm Required When No Opportunity for Confidential Information to Be Divulged

[g] Presumption of Automatic Vicarious Disqualification is Rebuttable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Conflict With Earlier Employment

[b] No Confidential Information Obtained in Earlier Employment

§ 24.32 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Extreme Delay of Moving Party in Bringing Motion Constitutes Implied Waiver of Right to Disqualify

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Extreme Delay Constitutes Implied Waiver

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 24.33 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Communicated With Represented Adverse Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Ex Parte Communication Permitted

[b] Who Is a Party Represented by Counsel

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Ex Parte Communication Permitted

§ 24.34 Supporting Motion by Client or Adverse Party to Dismiss Complaint Based on Attorney's Lack of Authority to File Suit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Discussions

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Dismiss Proper

[b] Motion by Supposed Client or Opposing Party

[c] Presumption of Authority Rebuttable

[d] Client's Death or Incapacity

[e] Inadequate Substitution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Dismiss Proper

§ 24.35 Supporting Motion by Defendant to Withdraw Defendant's Appearance and Strike Answer or by Plaintiff to Strike Answer Based on Attorney's Lack of Authority to File Answer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Discussions

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Strike Proper

[b] Motion to Withdraw Proper

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Strike Proper

§ 24.36 Opposing Motion by Plaintiff or Defendant to Dismiss Complaint on Asserted Ground That Attorney Unauthorized to File Suit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Authority

[b] License Prima Facie Evidence of Authority

[c] Burden of Proof

[d] Motion to Dismiss Denied on Finding of Authorization

[e] Insufficient Declaration by Moving Party

[f] Indirect Authorization

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption of Authority

[b] License Prima Facie Evidence of Authority

[c] Motion to Dismiss Denied on Finding of Authorization

§ 24.37 Opposing Motion by Defendant to Withdraw Defendant's Appearance and Strike Answer or by Plaintiff to Strike Answer on Asserted Grounds That Attorney Unauthorized to Defend Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Strike Should Be Denied

§ 24.38 Supporting Defendant's Motion to Strike Complaint of Corporation Appearing in Propria Persona, or by Agent Who Is Not Licensed Attorney [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation Must Appear Through Attorney

[b] Court Will Strike Complaint by Corporation Without Attorney

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Corporation Must Appear Through Attorney

§ 24.39 Supporting Defendant's Motion to Strike Complaint of Unincorporated Association or Club Appearing in Propria Persona, or by Agent Who Is Not Licensed Attorney [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unincorporated Association Must Appear Through Attorney

§ 24.40 Supporting Defendant's Motion to Compel Trustee Who Is Not Licensed Attorney But Appears as Attorney For Trust to Withdraw and Hire Licensed Member of Bar to Prosecute or Defend Lawsuit [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6125]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonattorney Trustee May Not Represent Trust in Court Action

§ 24.41 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Based on Contact With Opposing Party's Expert Witness--No Presumption that Confidential Information Was Imparted Exists When There Is No Impediment to Opposing Party's Ability to Obtain Information From Expert Regarding What Actually Was Disclosed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Moving Party Has Burden of Proving Expert's Improper Disclosure of Confidential Information to Opposing Party's Attorney When Expert Remains Under Control of Moving Party.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.01

§ 24.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda relating to an attorney's substitution, withdrawal, removal, and authority to appear in actions or proceedings.

It includes memoranda for use in supporting [see § 24.20] and opposing [see § 24.21] motions for substitution of an attorney.

In most cases, substitution is by mutual consent of the attorney and the client. In those cases, the one-page Substitution of Attorney form approved by the Judicial Council as MC-050 (or the substitution of attorney form prescribed by local rule in that particular county, such as Los Angeles) should be used. For a blank form of Judicial Council Form MC-050 that counsel can reproduce and fill in, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms (Matthew Bender); for an illustrative, filled-in version of Judicial Council Form MC-050, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.350 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

If the parties do not agree, and the case is already under the jurisdiction of a court, motions for change in attorney representation are necessary. This part also includes memoranda for use in supporting [see § 24.22] and opposing [see § 24.23] motions for withdrawal of an attorney from a case, supporting [see §§ 24.24 -24.27] and opposing [see §§ 24.28 -24.33, 24.41] motions to disqualify opposing counsel for conflicting representation, supporting [see §§ 24.34, 24.35] and opposing [see §§ 24.36, 24.37] motions to dismiss a complaint or strike an answer for lack of the attorney's authority, supporting [see §§ 24.38, 24.39] motions to strike a complaint filed by a corporation or unincorporated association in propria persona, and supporting [see § 24.40] motions to compel trustee to hire licensed member of bar to prosecute or defend lawsuit.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselDisqualificationsCivil ProcedureCounselSubstitutionsCivil ProcedureCounselWithdrawals

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.02

§ 24.02 Governing Statutes

Substitution and withdrawal are governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 284, 285, and 285.2-285.4. Code Civ. Proc. § 284 sets forth when and how an attorney may be changed during an action, and Code Civ. Proc. § 285 provides requirements for notice to the adverse party. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 285.2-285.4 establish procedures for the withdrawal of a legal service agency attorney when a reduction in public funding for legal service materially impairs his or her ability to represent an indigent client. Regarding disqualification of opposing counsel, Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e) defines the attorney's duty to maintain a former client's confidences. Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8 allows the recovery of treble damages, and costs and attorney's fees at the discretion of the court, when an unlicensed person causes injury or damage to another while providing goods or performing services for which specified licenses are required.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselDisqualificationsCivil ProcedureCounselSubstitutionsCivil ProcedureRemediesDamagesGeneral OverviewLegal EthicsClient RelationsConfidentiality of InformationLegal EthicsUnauthorized Practice of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.03

§ 24.03 Rules of Court

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1362, governs the procedure for obtaining an order relieving counsel. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1115, provides special format requirements for a paper substituting a party as attorney in propria persona.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselDisqualificationsCivil ProcedureCounselSubstitutions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.04

§ 24.04 Rules of Professional Conduct

The Board of Governors of the State Bar has adopted, and the Supreme Court has approved, Rules of Professional Conduct to regulate professional conduct of members of the State Bar. These rules contain several provisions concerning the topics discussed in this part, violation of which may be cause for attorney discipline [see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rules 2-100 (communication with a represented party), 3-310 (avoiding representation of adverse interests), 3-700 (termination of employment), 5-210 (restriction on attorney acting as advocate and testifying witness in single proceeding); see also Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-100 (State Bar authorized to discipline attorney for wilful breach of Rules)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselDisqualificationsCivil ProcedureCounselSubstitutionsLegal EthicsClient RelationsConflicts of InterestLegal EthicsProfessional ConductOpposing Counsel & PartiesLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.05

§ 24.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

- For discussion and forms relating to admission of an attorney to the bar and attorney discipline, see Ch. 70, Attorney Admission , and Ch. 71, Attorney Discipline .

- For discussion and forms relating to an attorney's association, substitution, withdrawal, removal and authority to appear, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics .

- For discussion and forms relating to legal malpractice, see Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureCounselDisqualificationsCivil ProcedureCounselSubstitutionsLegal EthicsClient RelationsConflicts of InterestLegal EthicsSanctionsGeneral OverviewTortsMalpractice & Professional LiabilityAttorneys

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.06

§ 24.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

- For discussion regarding attorney malpractice, see Ch. 24A, Attorney at Law: Malpractice .
- For collecting or defending against the collection of attorney's fees from clients, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .
- For obtaining attorney's fees from the opposing party on motion, see Ch. 60, Costs .
- For contractual issues and defenses generally, see Ch. 50, Contracts .
- For sanctions that may be imposed during discovery proceedings, see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse .
- For proceedings for and defending against claims for indemnity and contribution, see Ch. 115, Indemnity and Contribution .
- For intervention generally, see Ch. 124, Intervention .
- For negligence generally, see Ch. 165, Negligence .
- For a discussion of how to use the forms in this Chapter to draft a memorandum of points or authorities or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryDisclosuresSanctionsLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesGeneral

OverviewTortsMalpractice & Professional LiabilityAttorneysTortsNegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART I. INTRODUCTION

2A-24 California Points & Authorities §§ 24.07-24.19

[Reserved]

§§ 24.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.20

§ 24.20 Supporting Motion for Order Permitting Substitution of Attorney on Application of Client [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	SUBSTITUTION OF ATTORNEY
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A PARTY TO AN ACTION OR PROCEEDING HAS BOTH THE POWER AND THE RIGHT TO SUBSTITUTE ATTORNEYS, AT ANY TIME, WITH OR WITHOUT CAUSE.

A. Motion to Substitute. The attorney in an action or special proceeding may be changed at any time before or after judgment or final determination, by an order of the court on the client's application after notice to the attorney (Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)).

B. Power and Right to Discharge. The client has the power and right to discharge or substitute attorneys, with or without cause and at any time (Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 790, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; see General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1173-1177 ; Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 555, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142).

C. Right Independent of Statutory Authority. Inherent in the attorney-client relationship is the basic, implied right of the client to discharge the attorney, and such right would exist without statutory provision for it (Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Echlin v. Superior Court (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368, 371).

D. Detriment to Attorney as Immaterial. Unless the attorney has an interest in the subject matter of the action, which exists apart from the attorney-client relationship, the client's right to discharge remains absolute, and the fact that the attorney has performed labor or expended money in behalf of the client is immaterial (Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 714, 36 P.2d 1069).

[Optional] E. Substitution as Unaffected by Contingent Fee Agreements. A discharged attorney employed under a contingent fee contract has adequate remedies for recovering fees, and he or she cannot prevent substitution (Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 791-792, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 ; Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 714, 716, 717, 36 P.2d 1069).

[Optional] F. No Statutory Rights of Attorney/Employee Affected. The client is not discharging the attorney primarily for asserting his or her statutory rights as an employee, but for providing inadequate representation (Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 555, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

When substitution is by mutual consent of the attorney and the client, the one-page Substitution of Attorney form approved by the Judicial Council as MC-050 (or the substitution of attorney form prescribed by local rule in the particular county, such as Los Angeles) should be used. For the Judicial Council form, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Judicial Council Forms (Matthew Bender). If the parties do not agree, and the case is already under the jurisdiction of a court, motions for change in attorney representation are necessary. This memorandum may be submitted in support of a client's motion to substitute attorneys, if the attorney sought to be discharged does not consent to the substitution.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

The caption shown on this form complies with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1110 for a memorandum filed separately from a notice of motion and motion. However, to the extent practicable, a memorandum supporting a motion must be attached to the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113]. When the memorandum is attached to the notice of motion, the caption on the notice of motion will include the memorandum in the title of the paper describing the nature of the documents being filed [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112]. Thus, a supporting memorandum should be filed separately, and have its own caption, only if it is not practicable to attach it to the notice of motion.

[b] Related Uses

This memorandum may be adapted for use in support of a writ of mandate to compel a lower court to grant substitution [see Downer v. Norton (1860) 16 Cal. 436, 440 (mandate proper)].

This may also be adapted for use in criminal actions or proceedings [see People v. Bouchard (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 438, 441-442, 317 P.2d 971] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion, supporting declaration, and order granting a motion for substitution of attorneys, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Power and Right to Discharge

General Dynamics Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 1164 , involved a complaint for wrongful termination filed by in-house counsel against his former employer. The employer claimed that the California Supreme Court's decision in Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 (discussed below) was dispositive of all issues raised by the plaintiff in his complaint because the client has an absolute right to substitute attorneys at any time. In rejecting this contention, the Supreme Court noted that although Fracasse stands for the proposition that a personal injury client has the right and power to discharge his or her attorney with or without cause, it is not the rule that all clients may unilaterally terminate the attorney-client relationship under all circumstances without consequences. While the client's unfettered right to discharge an attorney at any time is an important right that should be upheld in most cases, the legal consequences of the discharge will vary depending on the competing interests involved in a particular case. The Court concluded that, although the employer had the right to discharge its in-house counsel, it was not immune from liability for wrongful termination (7 Cal. 4th 1164, 1173-1177) .

In Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142 , an attorneys' association made up of and representing attorneys in a county counsel's office brought a mandate action against the county for breach of its duty to bargain in good faith under the Meyers-Milias-Brown Act (Gov. Code § 3500 et seq.) (right to form local public employee organizations). The Association asked the court to enjoin the county from discharging any of its members after filing the mandate petition. The request was made in response to the county counsel's opinion that the association's members were required to resign before filing the petition. The trial court granted this injunctive relief (7 Cal. 4th 525, 555 n.11).

On appeal, the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether the client has the right to discharge an attorney in whom the client has purportedly lost faith. The Court noted that this question is distinct from the question of attorney loyalty to the client. Regardless of an attorney's actual loyalty, a public employer should, nonetheless, have the right to discharge the attorney, for example, because of inadequate job performance, or nonobservance of the Rules of Professional Conduct. The Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 284 gives clients, beyond the context of litigation, the power to discharge an attorney, with or without cause. The statute recognizes that the client's interest in successful prosecution or defense of an action is superior to the attorney's interest, in continued employment (7 Cal. 4th 525, 555) . The Court, however, also recognized that the client's right to discharge an attorney may be limited by statute (discussed in § 24.20[3][e]).

In Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 , the plaintiff, an attorney, filed an action against defendant client for breach of a contingency fee agreement. The agreement stated that plaintiff would receive a percentage by settlement or judgment in the client's personal injury action. Prior to settlement of the suit, the client discharged plaintiff, and substituted another attorney. Plaintiff alleged that the substitution was made without cause, and the complaint sought declaratory judgment by the trial court that the contingent fee contract was enforceable, and that plaintiff had a specific percentage interest in the client's ultimate recovery. The trial court sustained the client's general demurrer, without leave to amend, on the basis that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. The Supreme Court affirmed, and held that discharging an attorney cannot amount to a breach of contract, since the right to discharge is implied in the attorney-client relationship (6 Cal. 3d 784, 791) . The power to do so is necessarily absolute to assure protection of the client's legal interests (6 Cal. 3d 784, 790) .

[b] Right Independent of Statutory Authority

The facts and procedural background of Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 , are discussed in § 24.20[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the client's right to discharge his or her attorney, with or without cause, is inherent in the attorney-client relationship. That relationship, the Court said, is unique, since it exists to protect the client's rights and interests, and the client is therefore justified in terminating it at will (6 Cal. 3d 784, 790-791) .

In Echlin v. Superior Court of San Mateo County (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 368 , plaintiff in a pending personal injury suit sought an order granting substitution. The trial court denied substitution on the basis of a 1935 amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2). The amendment, which was later repealed, stated that substitution of an attorney who had a contingent fee contract was to be treated differently from other cases of attorney substitution, such that when substitution was sought in such cases, the court would determine the attorney's compensation under the contract.

Plaintiff sought a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to order substitution. The Supreme Court held for petitioner, and issued a writ of mandate compelling substitution. Aside from its holding that the 1935 amendment was unconstitutional (13 Cal. 2d 368, 374-375) , the Court also held that a client's right to substitute attorneys is not affected by attorney's fees considerations, and in fact exists at common law apart from the statutory authority of Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2) (13 Cal. 2d 368, 371-372) .

[c] Detriment to Attorney as Immaterial

In Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 36 P.2d 1069 , the client, during an appeal, made a motion to substitute a new attorney in place of the law firm that had been representing her. The law firm opposing the motion and the client each submitted affidavits regarding grievances alleged by the client against the law firm. Attorneys from the law firm argued that due to their contractual agreement with the client, their interest in the action rendered their employment irrevocable. The Court, relying on the leading case of Gage v. Atwater (1902) 136 Cal. 170, 68 P. 581 (discussed in § 24.20[3][a]), granted the client's motion, and held that unless the attorney has a relation to the subject matter of the action which exists outside the employment relation, the attorney's powers, interests, contributions, or expenditures in an action do not affect the client's right to discharge (1 Cal. 2d 712, 714) . This applies in spite of contractual provisions attempting to establish an irrevocable employment of the attorney (1 Cal. 2d 712, 716) .

[d] Substitution as Unaffected by Contingent Fee Agreements

The facts and procedural background of Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 , are discussed in § 24.20[3][a]; The Court in Fracasse stated that a client has the power to discharge an attorney without cause, even when the attorney is employed under a contingent fee contract, and the client discharges him or her just prior to trial or settlement (6 Cal. 3d 784, 791) . Some circumstances may justify a finding that the entire fee was the reasonable value of the attorney's services. The substitution of an attorney and compensation for his or her services are two separate issues. Whether compensation is owed is not properly discussed or determined by a court at the time an attorney is discharged (6 Cal. 3d 784, 790-791) . A cause of action for compensation pursuant to a contingent fee contract does not accrue until the contingency has occurred, and is adjudicated in a separate action (6 Cal. 3d 784, 792) .

The facts and procedural background of Estate of Cazaurang (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 712, 36 P.2d 1069 , are discussed in § 24.20[3][c]. The Court held that a contingent fee contract, regardless of its language, cannot itself create any rights in the attorney sufficient to affect a client's right to substitute (1 Cal. 2d 712, 716) .

[e] No Statutory Rights of Attorney/Employee Affected

The facts and legal background of Santa Clara County Counsel Attys. Assn. v. Woodside (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 525, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 617, 869 P.2d 1142 , are discussed above, under Power and Right to Discharge. The Supreme Court concluded that the Meyer-Milias-Brown Act (Gov. Code § 3500 et seq.) creates an exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 284 that a client may discharge an attorney at will. The Act prohibits a public employer from terminating an attorney solely or chiefly because he or she has engaged in lawful union activity (7 Cal. 4th 525, 554-556) .

The Court held that the Legislature could legitimately decide that the general rule that a client's interest in selecting representation is paramount should be altered in those limited class of cases in which the attorney is the client's employee, and the attorney is being discharged primarily for the assertion of his or her statutory rights as an employee, rather than for providing inadequate representation. Accordingly, attorneys who believe that they have been discriminated against for engaging in activity protected by statute, have standing to bring an antidiscrimination action against their employer (7 Cal. 4th 525, 557) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Detriment to Attorney as Immaterial

For additional cases holding that compensation owed by the client to the attorney in the form of fees, or proceeds from the litigation, will not preclude substitution, see Gage v. Atwater (1902) 136 Cal. 170, 172, 68 P. 581 ; Meadow v. Superior Court (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 610, 616, 30 Cal. Rptr. 824, 381 P.2d 648 ; Scott v. Superior Court (1928) 205 Cal. 525, 531, 271 P. 906 ; Wright v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 139, 141-142, 88 P.2d 125 ; Joseph E. Di Loreto, Inc. v. O'Neill (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 149 (attorney may be able to recover "expectation interest" of contract).

[b] Substitution is Unaffected by Contingent Fee Agreement

The Court of Appeals in Jalali v. Root (2003) 109 Cal. App. 4th 624, 633-634, 135 Cal. Rptr. 2d 168 relied upon Fracasse v. Brent (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 784, 100 Cal. Rptr. 385, 494 P.2d 9 in reiterating that a client has "the unilateral right to discharge his or her attorney with or without cause at any time" regardless of the existence of a contingency fee contract.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.21

§ 24.21 Opposing Client's Motion for Order Permitting Substitution of Attorney [CCP § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	FOR SUBSTITUTION OF ATTORNEY
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]
	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE CLIENT MAY NOT SUBSTITUTE BECAUSE THE ATTORNEY HAS AN INTEREST IN THE SUBJECT MATTER OF THE ACTION WHICH IS UNRELATED TO COMPENSATION FOR HIS/HER SERVICES AS AN ATTORNEY.

A. Interest of Attorney. A client may not substitute an attorney out of an action if the attorney has a specific, beneficial interest in the subject matter of the litigation, other than that arising from his or her employment as an attorney in the action (see O'Connell v. Superior Court (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 418, 421-423, 41 P.2d 334 ; Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45).

[Optional] B. Attorney in Representative Capacity. If the attorney opposing substitution is acting in a representative capacity, representing both the client and some separate entity, that entity's interest in the action may prevent substitution (Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 594-595, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by an attorney in opposition to his or her client's motion for substitution of attorney, if the attorney has an interest in the subject matter of the action which is unrelated to compensation for his or her services as an attorney in the action.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest of Attorney

O'Connell v. Superior Court (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 418, 41 P.2d 334 , was a mandate proceeding to compel a superior court to grant a motion for substitution. The employment agreement between client and attorney provided that the attorney was entitled to a one-half share of the client's interest in the contract being litigated. The attorney argued that he could not be substituted out of the case because he had a beneficial interest in the subject matter of the action. The Supreme Court acknowledged that there is an exception to a client's right of substitution when the attorney has an interest in the subject matter of the litigation (2 Cal. 2d 418, 421) . The attorney's interest must be present, specific, beneficial, and must exist apart from his or her employment as an attorney (2 Cal. 2d 418, 421-423) . Under the facts of this case however, the Court compelled substitution because the interest conveyed was intended as compensation for the attorney's services, and therefore did not exist apart from his employment (2 Cal. 2d 418, 424-425) .

In Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45 , a city redevelopment agency brought two eminent domain actions to condemn land belonging to third parties. The city attorney represented the agency. However, while the matter was pending, the agency sought to substitute its own attorney instead. The city attorney did not consent to a substitution. The agency then made a motion in each action for an order of substitution. The court denied the motions, and the agency petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate compelling substitution.

The court of appeal denied the writ, relying on earlier California law [see O'Connell v. Superior Court (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 418, 41 P.2d 334 (discussed above); Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 184 P. 684 (discussed in § 24.21[4][a]], which recognized the exception to a client's right of substitution when the attorney has an interest in the subject matter of the action (195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 593) . The court listed the necessary elements of an attorney's interest in an action sufficient to prevent substitution. The interest must be specific, it must be an interest in the subject matter of the action itself, and it must be beneficial (195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595) . Because this particular case involved a city attorney, the court analyzed the city's interest in the subject matter of the action, and applied its holding to the attorney in his representative capacity, rather than as an individual (195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595) . In denying substitution, the court noted that in eminent domain actions, the city has an interest in the funding and implementation of redeveloping the subject land, and the beneficial use of that land by its citizens (195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 594-595) .

Counsel should note that in this case substitution was prevented by the interest of a municipality, rather than the interest of an individual attorney, and the court's holding applies to the attorney only in his representative capacity for the city. In cases in which an attorney seeks to show an individual power and interest, opposition to substitution has been less successful (Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 184 P. 684 (discussed in § 24.21[4][a]); O'Connell v. Superior Court (1935) 2 Cal. 2d 418, 41 P.2d 334 (discussed above)].

[b] Attorney in Representative Capacity

The case of Redevelopment Agency v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Cal. App. 2d 591, 16 Cal. Rptr. 45 , is discussed in § 24.21[4][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interest of Attorney

In Todd v. Superior Court of San Francisco (1919) 181 Cal. 406, 184 P. 684 , the superior court in a probate proceeding denied a motion for substitution of an attorney. The Supreme Court issued a writ of mandate to compel substitution, but at the same time established the existence of an exception to the client's right of substitution. An attorney cannot be substituted, the Court said, when he or she has a beneficial interest in the subject matter of the action, apart from the proceeds arising from performance of his or her services as an attorney (181 Cal. 406, 413) . The exception did not apply in the case at hand, however. Although the employment contract between attorney and client expressed the employment in irrevocable terms, and granted the attorney a share of the client's interest in the subject estate, the attorney's interest was not a separate interest in the subject matter of the employment because it was intended merely as compensation for his services (181 Cal. 406, 419) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.22

§ 24.22 Supporting Motion for Order Permitting Withdrawal of Attorney From Case [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF Plaintiff,	)	_____'s [name of attorney] MO-
vs.	)	TION FOR PERMISSION TO WITHDRAW AS AT-
_____ [name],	)	TORNEY OF RECORD
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT IN ITS DISCRETION SHOULD NORMALLY PERMIT THE ATTORNEY TO WITHDRAW FROM THE CASE AT ANY TIME.

A. Motion for Withdrawal. An attorney in an action or special proceeding may be permitted to withdraw at any time before or after judgment or final determination, by an order of the court, on the attorney's application, after notice to the client (Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)).

B. Discretion of Court to Allow Withdrawal. It is within the court's sound discretion to allow an attorney to withdraw from a case (People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; Jones v. Green (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 231, 168 P.2d 418).

C. Withdrawal Normally Permitted. When a reason is given, an attorney should normally be permitted to withdraw, unless prejudice to any party would result, or some other compelling reason exists forcing him or her to continue in the case (Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 914-916, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 ; People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; Heple v. Kluge (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 461, 462, 231 P.2d 505 ; Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 725, 250 P. 880).

[Optional] D. Corporate Client. An attorney may be permitted to withdraw, whether the client is an individual or a corporation (Ferruzzo v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 501, 504, 163 Cal. Rptr. 573).

[Optional] E. Refusal to Pay Attorney's Fees. Withdrawal may be permitted when the client fails or refuses to pay or secure the proper attorney's fees after being reasonably requested to do so (People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406-407, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197).

[Optional] F. Withdrawal to Prevent Frivolous Appeal or Delaying Tactics. The high ethical and professional standards as a bar member and court officer require an attorney to inform his or her client that the attorney's professional responsibility precludes him or her from pursuing an appeal that is frivolous or taken for the purpose of delay and to withdraw from representation of the client (Cosenza v. Kramer (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1100, 1103 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 907; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form memorandum may be submitted in support of an attorney's motion to withdraw from a criminal or civil case, where the client does not consent to the withdrawal. It is advisable to always afford the client the opportunity to consent to substitution, preferably documented in writing. The attorney should also be very careful not to reveal or imply any facts detrimental to the client's cause of action, or from which a negative inference could be drawn. The court will always consider any possible prejudice to the client. See Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-700. Most courts will also consider the effect of substitution on the court's calendar, particularly in "fast-track" cases.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

The caption shown on this form complies with the requirements of Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1111 for a memorandum filed separately from a notice of motion and motion. However, to the extent practicable, a memorandum supporting a motion must be attached to the notice of motion [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1113]. When the memorandum is attached to the notice of motion, the caption on the notice of motion will include the memorandum in the title of the paper describing the nature of the documents being filed [Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 3.1112]. Thus, a supporting memorandum should be filed separately, and have its own caption, only if it is not practicable to attach it to the notice of motion.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion, supporting declaration, order granting the motion, and notice of withdrawal, as well as a form of withdrawal by mutual consent when a motion is not necessary, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Withdrawal

People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 , was an appeal from a judgment in superior court against a defendant in a criminal case. One of the contentions on appeal was that the trial court had improperly allowed defendant's attorney to withdraw. The court of appeal held that with respect to withdrawal, the lower court had acted properly. The court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2), an attorney for a defendant in a criminal case may move the court for withdrawal, and granting or denying the motion lies within the court's sound discretion (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406) .

Jones v. Green (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 168 P.2d 418 , was an appeal from a judgment in a paternity suit. The appellant's principal contention was that the trial court had abused its discretion in granting his attorney's motion to withdraw, and, without granting a continuance, in proceeding immediately thereafter to trial. The court of appeal reversed one part of the judgment on other grounds, but affirmed the judgment against appellant. The court held that it is within a court's sound discretion to permit withdrawal, and that in most cases it is proper to do so (74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 231) . In this case, because no meritorious defense had been shown, and appellant had said that he had no money to pay an attorney and was ready to proceed to trial, the lower court had not abused its discretion (74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 230-231) .

[b] Withdrawal Normally Permitted

In Aceves v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280 , the supervising deputy in a public defender's office asked that the deputy assigned as trial counsel and the public defender's office as a whole be allowed to withdraw from representing defendant because of a conflict of interest. The supervising deputy asserted that he was unable to relate the facts that generated the conflict without breaching client confidences. He was able to tell the court, however, that the conflict was created by a statement from the client that caused a complete breakdown of the attorney-client relationship. The trial court conditioned withdrawal on divulging the facts underlying the conflict and denied the motion (51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 587) . The court of appeal held that where the duty not to reveal confidences prevented counsel from further disclosure and the trial court accepted the good faith of counsel's representations, the trial court should have found the conflict sufficiently established and permitted withdrawal 51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 592) .

In Ramirez v. Sturdevant (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 , the attorney informed the client of his intention to withdraw from the case after judgment unless the client agreed to enter into a new retainer agreement that would apply to prosecution of the appeal of the judgment. The initial retainer agreement between the attorney and the client provided that the attorney, on notice, might withdraw at any time. The client contended that, absent cause for withdrawal, the attorney was unconditionally obligated to prosecute her appeal (21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 914-915) .

The court of appeal held that there is no basis in the law, or in logic, for a conclusion that an attorney may never withdraw from a case except for cause. Although an attorney violates his or her ethical duty by abandoning a client or by withdrawing at a critical point in the litigation and thereby prejudicing the client's case, there is no authority preventing an attorney from withdrawing from a case if withdrawal can be accomplished without undue prejudice to the client's interests. Implicit in Code Civ. Proc. § 284 and Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-700, is that an attorney is entitled to withdraw, either with the consent of the client, or without that consent if withdrawal is approved by the court. The court of appeal concluded that there was no reason in this case why a court might decline to permit withdrawal, since the attorney was prepared to file a notice of appeal and appropriate post-judgment motions to protect the client's interests, whether or not he continued as her attorney (21 Cal. App. 4th 904, 915) .

People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 , is discussed in § 24.22[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal held that where a motion is properly made, an attorney is warranted in withdrawing from the case, so long as the attorney's withdrawal will not result in prejudice to the rights or interests of any party to the case (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406-407) .

In Heple v. Kluge (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 461, 231 P.2d 505 , attorneys for one of the parties made a motion for withdrawal during an appeal. Although they opposed the motion, the clients had earlier expressed distrust of the attorney's willingness to represent the clients' best interests in the case. The court of appeal granted the motion, holding that because an attorney's position is one of the highest confidence, whenever a client questions an attorney's good faith, the attorney is justified in seeking to withdraw, and should be permitted to do so, absent some very compelling reason indicating otherwise (104 Cal. App. 2d 461, 462) .

In Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 250 P. 880 , an attorney petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate compelling the superior court to grant his motion to withdraw from a pending case. The court of appeal denied the writ, but stated that as a rule, an attorney should be permitted to withdraw in most cases unless withdrawal would work an injustice on a third party (79 Cal. App. 721, 725) . The exception applied in this case because the motion was brought the day before trial, and a possible injury to a third party existed. The trial court's decision had therefore not been an abuse of its discretion (79 Cal. App. 721, 725-726) .

[c] Corporate Client

In Ferruzzo v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 501, 163 Cal. Rptr. 573 , an attorney represented a corporation, and individuals connected with the corporation, in three separate actions. For each action, the attorney brought a motion in the superior court for permission to withdraw. The motions were granted with respect to the individuals, and denied with respect to the corporation. The court believed it had no discretion to grant a motion for withdrawal since the corporation would be left without an attorney, in violation of the rule that a corporation cannot appear in propria persona.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing that the attorney be permitted to withdraw. It held that proper grounds apply to permit withdrawal, whether the client is an individual or a corporation (104 Cal. App. 3d 501, 504) . A court's permission for withdrawal by an attorney is governed by a separate rule from that forbidding a corporation's self-representation. The rule that an attorney may be allowed to withdraw is not inconsistent with the rule forbidding a corporation to represent itself, since permitting withdrawal simply requires the corporation to obtain another attorney (104 Cal. App. 3d 501, 504) .

[d] Refusal to Pay Attorney's Fees

People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 , is discussed in § 24.22[3][a], [b]. In that case, the court of appeal held that if a client refuses or fails to pay attorney's fees after a reasonable request to do so, or if he or she deliberately disregards an agreement or obligation to pay such fees, the attorney is justified in seeking withdrawal from the case (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406-407) . In such a case, the court may properly permit withdrawal, absent a showing of prejudice or injustice (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406) .

[e] Withdrawal to Prevent Frivolous Appeal or Delaying Tactics

Cosenza v. Kramer (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1100 , was a contract action for the balance owed for roofing work. Defendant filed a cross-complaint alleging breach of contract and fraud. Judgment was given in favor of plaintiff on the complaint and against defendant on the cross-complaint. Defendant appealed and the court of appeal affirmed and imposed a penalty on defendant and his attorney pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 907 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.272.

The court found that defendant and his attorney had joined together to misuse the appellate process to delay the payment of a legitimate obligation. The court stated that an attorney in a civil case is not a hired gun required to carry out every direction given by the client. It held that counsel has a professional responsibility not to pursue an appeal that is frivolous or taken for purpose of delay just because the client instructs him or her to do so. The court further held that under such circumstances the high ethical and professional standards as a bar member and court officer require the attorney to inform the client that the attorney's professional responsibility precludes him or her from pursuing such an appeal and to withdraw from representation of that client (152 Cal. App. 3d 1100, 1103) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Withdrawal

Hodcarriers, Bldg. & Common Laborers Local Union v. Miller (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 52 Cal. Rptr. 251 , involved an appeal from a superior court judgment in an intraunion controversy. One of the issues on appeal was whether the lower court should have granted one of the party's attorneys' motion to withdraw, where the attorneys had asserted conflict of interest. The trial court had denied the motion, which had been brought during the trial. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and the lower court's decision on the motion. It held that since during a trial the court must retain ultimate control, the determination of an attorney's motion to withdraw must remain within its sound discretion (243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395) . A court should have wide latitude in deciding such questions, considering such factors as possible injustice to other parties in the case (243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395) .

[b] Withdrawal Normally Permitted

Jones v. Green (1946) 74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 168 P.2d 418 , is discussed in § 24.22[3][a]. There, in affirming the trial court's decision to allow withdrawal, the court of appeal cited Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 250 P. 880 discussed in § 24.22[3][b], and emphasized that case's holding that in most instances the attorney should be permitted to withdraw (74 Cal. App. 2d 223, 231) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.23

§ 24.23 Opposing Attorney's Motion for Order Permitting Withdrawal From Case [Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO
vs.	)	_____'s [name of attorney] MOTION FOR PERMISSION TO WITHDRAW AS ATTORNEY OF RECORD
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 284(2)]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT IN ITS DISCRETION SHOULD DENY _____'s [name of attorney] MOTION TO WITHDRAW BECAUSE _____ [WITHDRAWAL WOULD WORK AN INJUSTICE ON A THIRD PARTY or WITHDRAWAL WOULD RESULT IN PREJUDICE TO THE CLIENT'S INTEREST].

A. Discretion of Court to Deny Withdrawal. A court may act in its discretion to deny an attorney's motion to withdraw from a case (Hodcarriers, Bldg. & Common Laborers Local Union v. Miller (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395, 52 Cal. Rptr. 251 ; People v. McCracken (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 336, 350, 246 P.2d 913).

[EITHER, if third party opposing withdrawal]

B. Injustice to Third Party. A court should deny an attorney's motion to withdraw if withdrawal would result in injustice to a third party (Manfredi & Levine v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1132, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 ; Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 725, 250 P. 880).

[OR, if client opposing withdrawal]

B. Prejudice to Client. An attorney's motion to withdraw from a case should be denied when the withdrawal would result in possible prejudice to the client (Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 197, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401 ; People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197).

[Optional] C. Refusal to Consent to Increase in Attorney's Fee Insufficient Reason for Withdrawal. When the attorney and client have agreed to a certain fee, the client's refusal to consent to an increase in the fee is not a sufficient reason to permit the attorney's withdrawal from the case (Cassel v. Gregori (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 769, 771, 70 P.2d 721).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to an attorney's motion to withdraw from a case, by a party to the litigation or proceeding other than the client, who would be affected by the withdrawal, or the client who does not consent to withdrawal.

If appropriate, the alternate paragraphs in the form may both be used when there are arguments that withdrawal will result in both an injustice to a third party and prejudice to the client.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Deny Withdrawal

Hodcarriers, Bldg. & Common Laborers Local Union v. Miller (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 52 Cal. Rptr. 251 , is discussed in § 24.22[4][a]. One issue in that case was whether the lower court should have granted an attorney's motion to withdraw during the trial. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, and held that the trial court had properly denied the motion to withdraw. The court stated that allowing or disallowing an attorney's withdrawal is within the sound discretion of the court (243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395) . This is especially true if the motion to withdraw is brought during trial, when the court must retain ultimate control, and therefore should have wide latitude in determining such questions considering such factors as possible injustice to other parties in the case (243 Cal. App. 2d 391, 395) .

People v. McCracken (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 336, 246 P.2d 913 , was an appeal from a criminal conviction in superior court. One argument asserted on appeal was that the trial court's refusal to permit defendant's court-appointed attorney to withdraw had resulted in prejudice to the defendant. The attorney had made two motions to withdraw: one before, and one following the first of defendant's two trials. Each motion had been denied. Defendant claimed that had withdrawal been permitted, the public defender, who would have been substituted, could have afforded to hire independent experts, which defendant otherwise could not obtain. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment, and held that a court may, in its discretion, refuse permission to withdraw, having in mind such considerations as whether injustice could result (39 Cal. 2d 336, 350) .

[b] Injustice to Third Party

In Manfredi & Levine v. Superior Court (1998) 66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 78 Cal. Rptr. 2d 494 , plaintiff's counsel moved to withdraw for an alleged, but undisclosed, conflict of interest. The trial court summarily denied counsel's motion after counsel declined the court's request to disclose the nature of the conflict to the court. The court expressed its concern that counsel's withdrawal motion was merely a delaying tactic. Counsel petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to grant the withdrawal motion. The defendants in the underlying action sought to oppose the writ petition.

The court of appeal denied without prejudice the petition for a writ of mandate, holding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying counsel's withdrawal motion where counsel had declined to explain the true nature of the alleged conflict to the trial court (66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136) . The trial court need not accept a sweeping claim of conflict and "rubber-stamp" counsel's request to withdraw (66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1134) , especially where counsel could have requested an in camera hearing to provide sufficient information to the trial court regarding counsel's alleged conflict (66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1136) . Additionally, the court stated that granting a motion to be relieved as counsel may work an injustice on a third party and, as such, held that the defendants in the underlying action had standing to oppose counsel's writ petition as parties whose interests would be directly affected by the writ proceeding (66 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1132) .

In Linn v. Superior Court (1926) 79 Cal. App. 721, 250 P. 880 , an attorney petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to grant his motion to withdraw from a pending case. The attorney asserted that he had an unqualified right to withdraw at any time, and that the client had breached their agreement regarding the attorney's compensation. The court of appeal found that the trial court had not abused its discretion in refusing to permit withdrawal. The court held that an attorney does not have an unqualified right to withdraw (79 Cal. App. 721, 723) . The motion to withdraw had been brought the day before trial, the attorney had represented the client for over two and half years and had collected fees from her, and the trial court had advanced trial of the case on the court calendar. The court held that all of these facts should be considered in deciding a motion to withdraw (79 Cal. App. 721, 725) . In this case, permitting withdrawal would have required that the court grant a continuance, and might have worked an irreparable injury on a third party (79 Cal. App. 721, 725) . Although the court does not specifically discuss either the identity of the third party, or the possible injury to it, aside from a reference to hardship on "members of the profession," the court stated that the trial court must be presumed to have had important reasons for advancing the case on its calendar (79 Cal. App. 721, 725-726) . In addition, the court pointed out that in a pending case, the client and his or her attorney both have obligations to the court and the adversary to proceed with the trial (79 Cal. App. 721, 724) . It can be inferred from the court's discussion then, that if either the court or the adversary may be injured by an attorney's withdrawal from a pending case, the motion for withdrawal should be denied

[c] Prejudice to Client

In Aceves v. Superior Court (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280 , the supervising deputy in a public defender's office asked that the deputy assigned as trial counsel and the public defender's office as a whole be allowed to withdraw from representing defendant because of a conflict of interest. The supervising deputy asserted that he was unable to relate the facts that generated the conflict without breaching client confidences. He was able to tell the court, however, that the conflict was created by a statement from the client that caused a complete breakdown of the attorney-client relationship. The trial court conditioned withdrawal on divulging the facts underlying the conflict and denied the motion (51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 587) . The court of appeal held that where the duty not to reveal confidences prevented counsel from further disclosure and the trial court accepted the good faith of counsel's representations, the trial court should have found the conflict sufficiently established and permitted withdrawal. (51 Cal. App. 4th 584, 592) .

Vann v. Shilleh (1975) 54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 126 Cal. Rptr. 401 , involved an appeal from a superior court judgment in a breach of contract case. The appellant challenged the judgment on several grounds, one of which was that the court had improperly denied his motion for continuance, following his attorney's withdrawal from the case. The court of appeal reversed the judgment, and held that continuance should have been granted, to allow the appellant time to obtain new counsel.

The court of appeal discussed the attorney's right to withdraw from the case. In his motion to withdraw, the attorney had asserted noncooperation of the client, when just before trial the client refused to accept a negotiated settlement that he had earlier authorized. The attorney withdrew the next day, which was the Friday before the Monday morning of trial. The court of appeal held that the right of an attorney to withdraw from a case is not absolute. An attorney should not be permitted to withdraw until he or she has taken reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable prejudice to the client's rights. It is the duty of a trial court to see that a client is protected from the consequences of an attorney's abandonment of a case (54 Cal. App. 3d 192, 197) .

People v. Prince (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 74 Cal. Rptr. 197 , was an appeal from a superior court conviction in a criminal case. One of the appellant's contentions was that the lower court should not have granted his attorney's motion to withdraw. The court of appeal found that the trial court had not abused its discretion in granting the motion. The court held that although the question of an attorney's withdrawal lies within the sound discretion of the trial court, that court must consider whether withdrawal would result in any injustice in the handling of the case (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406) . Distinguishing the case at hand from those in which withdrawal was denied, the court said that it is proper to deny a motion to withdraw when possible prejudice to the interests of the client, or any other interested party will result (268 Cal. App. 2d 398, 406) .

[d] Refusal to Consent to Increase in Attorney's Fee Insufficient Reason for Withdrawal

In Cassel v. Gregori (1937) 28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 769, 70 P.2d 721 , a client appealed an order granting his attorney's motion to withdraw. The attorney had submitted an affidavit in support of the motion, stating only that mutual disagreements had arisen between client and attorney, making it impossible for the attorney to continue. The client's counter-affidavit stated that initially a contingent fee agreement had been made, and later the attorney had asked that it be changed to provide a fixed monthly retainer. The client had not consented. The court of appeal reversed the order granting withdrawal, and held that a client's refusal to consent to an increase in attorney's fees is not a sufficient reason for the attorney's withdrawal from the case (28 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 769, 771).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.24

§ 24.24 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT
_____ [name],	)	OF MOTION TO DISQUALIFY
Plaintiff,	)	_____ [name of attorney] FROM
vs.	)	REPRESENTATION ADVERSE TO FORMER CLI-
_____ [name],	)	ENT
Defendant.	)	[Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED FROM THE CASE BECAUSE HE/SHE IS REPRESENTING AN INTEREST ADVERSE TO THAT OF A FORMER CLIENT, AND MAY EITHER INJURE THE FORMER CLIENT, OR BE REQUIRED TO DISCLOSE CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION OBTAINED

FROM THE FORMER CLIENT.

A. Motion to Disqualify. When an attorney, or the law firm to which he or she belongs, is representing an interest adverse to that of a former client, and there exists the potential for injury to the former client or the attorney's disclosure of confidential information obtained from the former client, that client as a party to the action may properly make a motion in the trial court at any time to disqualify the attorney from the case (Meehan v. Hopps (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 213, 214, 216, 288 P.2d 267 ; Big Bear Mun. Water Dist. v. Superior Court (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 919, 927, 75 Cal. Rptr. 580 ; Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709).

B. Attorney's Duty to Client. It is the duty of an attorney to maintain inviolate the confidence, and, at every peril to himself or herself, to preserve the secrets of his or her client (Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e); Styles v. Mumbert (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1167, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880).

C. Rule Against Conduct or Disclosure Adverse to Former Client. An attorney is forbidden from doing anything which will injure a former client in any matter in which the attorney formerly represented him or her, or in any use of confidential information gained in the course of the former employment (Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 573-574, 15 P.2d 505 ; Meza v. H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 977-978, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 ; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1843-1845, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327).

D. Rules of Professional Conduct Prohibit Adverse Representation. A member of the State Bar may not, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client or former client when, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the member has obtained confidential information material to the employment (Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E); Farris v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Company (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 679-681, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 618 ; Henriksen v. Great American Savings & Loan (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184).

E. Actual Misuse of Confidential Information Not Necessary. The subsequent representation of another against a former client is forbidden not merely when the attorney will actually be called upon to use confidential information obtained in the course of the former employment, but in every case when, by reason of such subsequent employment, he or she may potentially be called upon to use such confidential information (Galbraith v. State Bar (1933) 218 Cal. 329, 332-333, 23 P.2d 291).

F. Prejudice to Adverse Party Irrelevant. On hearing a motion to disqualify an attorney from representing a party adverse to a former client, the issue of possible prejudice to the adverse party is irrelevant (Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709).

G. Injury to Former Client Presumed. On considering a motion to disqualify an attorney who engages in representation adverse to a former client, absent contrary proof, injury to the former client will be presumed (Weidekind v. Water Co. (1887) 74 Cal. 386, 389, 19 P. 173 ; Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386).

[Optional] H. No Joint Client Exception. There is no joint client exception to the prohibition against representation adverse to a former client (Western Continental Operating Co. v. Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761, 261 Cal. Rptr. 100).

[Optional] I. Former Judicial Officer Who Participated in Action as Judicial Officer and Officer's Current Law Firm May Be Prohibited from Later Participation in Identical Case. A former judicial officer who received confidential information during settlement discussions must be disqualified from later participation in the same case. The judicial officer's firm must also be disqualified, regardless of any screening provisions the firm may have in place ( Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 119-126, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863).

[Optional] J. Law Firm That Formerly Represented Parent Corporation May Be Disqualified From Later Representation of Party Adverse to Subsidiary of Parent Corporation. A law firm that received confidential information during a prior representation of a parent corporation may be disqualified from later representation of a party in an action against a wholly-owned subsidiary of the parent corporation (Morrison Knudsen Corp. v. Hancock, Rothert & Bunshoft (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425).

[Optional] K. When Attorney Leaves Private Practice to Become Head of Public Law Office, Vicarious Disqualification of Entire Public Law Office Required. When an attorney leaves private practice to become the head of a public law office, vicarious disqualification of the entire public law office generally is required in all matters substantially related to the head of office's earlier private representations (City and County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 304, 316, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 400).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's motion to disqualify an opposing attorney or law firm from further participation in the case, when the moving party is the former client of the attorney or firm now representing interests adverse to, and conflicting with, those of the moving party.

Counsel should note that the motion to disqualify is available only when the former client is also a party to the action, since only a party to an action may bring a motion pertaining to it [see Difani v. Riverside County Oil Co. (1927) 201 Cal. 210, 214, 256 P. 210] . When the former client seeks to disqualify an attorney from participating in a suit to which that client is not a party, he or she should seek an alternate remedy [see § 24.24[2][a]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Injunctive Relief

A former client may also bring a separate action to enjoin an attorney from participating in a case, or from revealing confidential information obtained from the former client [see Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 567, 15 P.2d 505 ; Meehan v. Hopps (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 213, 216, 288 P.2d 267] . However, if an action was filed to evade a disqualification order in a prior action, the former client need not file a collateral action, and may make the motion in the pending action [Machado v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 875, 881-882, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 902] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for a notice of motion for an order disqualifying an attorney, and an order granting the motion, see Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 24.28 -24.32 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Disqualify

Meehan v. Hopps (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 213, 288 P.2d 267 , concerned a motion to dismiss an appeal from a superior court order in a pending civil case. The trial court denied a motion to disqualify opposing counsel, who was formerly defendant's attorney, from participating in the case and from disclosing confidential information pertaining to it. Defendant appealed the trial court's order to the Supreme Court. Plaintiffs then moved the Supreme Court to dismiss the appeal, contending that the lower court order was not appealable, and that the appropriate review would be an appeal from final judgment. The Supreme Court denied the motion to dismiss, stating that the court's order was final for the purposes of appeal (45 Cal. 2d 213, 217-218) . In the course of its opinion, the Court held that a motion to disqualify an attorney is appropriate, and may properly be made directly to the trial court, although if he or she chooses, the former client may also bring an independent action seeking injunction (45 Cal. 2d 213, 216) .

In Big Bear Mun. Water Dist. v. Superior Court (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 919, 75 Cal. Rptr. 580 , plaintiff in an eminent domain action brought a motion to disqualify the attorney for an intervening party, on the grounds that the attorney had previously represented the plaintiff in connection with the action. The superior court originally believed it lacked jurisdiction to decide the issue, and denied the motion. On reconsideration, the court granted the motion. The intervening party, as the attorney's current client, petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to dismiss the action on unrelated grounds, and to vacate its order disqualifying the attorney. The court of appeal denied the writ as to both matters. With regard to the disqualification order, it held that a former client may properly bring a motion in the trial court to disqualify an attorney from adverse representation (269 Cal. App. 2d 919, 927) . The motion may be heard on affidavits, and the trial court's resolution of conflicting evidence will be conclusive on appeal (269 Cal. App. 2d 919, 927) .

Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703 , involved a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to hear and determine a motion to disqualify a law firm from a pending action. A partner in the defendants' attorneys' law firm had previously been a member of plaintiff's attorneys' law firm, and had had access to confidential information relevant to the pending action. The superior court denied plaintiff's motion to disqualify defendants' law firm, by issuing a minute order saying that because the motion was brought during trial instead of at the outset of the case, the delay was prejudicial to the defendants. Plaintiff then brought a motion for reconsideration, which the trial court also denied. The court of appeal issued the writ of mandate, and held that the trial court had abused its discretion in refusing to hear the motion on its merits. It held that a motion to disqualify an attorney or law firm should not be denied because it is filed late (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 707) . A former client can raise the issue of his or her attorney's adverse representation in any one of several ways, and at any time during a pending action (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709) .

[b] Attorney's Duty to Client

In Styles v. Mumbert (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1167, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 880 , Styles sued Mumbert, and Mumbert retained Pagkas to represent him. While Pagkas represented Mumbert, the trial court ordered terminating sanctions against Mumbert for failing to respond to discovery. The trial court ultimately entered a default judgment against Mumbert. Mumbert filed a separate suit against Pagkas for malpractice. In that suit, Pagkas cross-complained for quantum meruit for services rendered.

While Mumbert's appeal from the default judgment was pending, Styles assigned her rights to the judgment to Pagkas. Pagkas sought to substitute into the appeal as the respondent. Claiming that he and Mumbert were adverse parties as a result of the malpractice action, Pagkas argued that he should be allowed to substitute in as the respondent in the appeal of the default judgment in order to offset any malpractice award against him.

Mumbert argued that Pagkas and Mumbert were adverse parties in the malpractice litigation, but that in the default appeal, Pagkas was Mumbert's former attorney and continued to owe him professional duties. The court of appeal agreed. It held that even though Pagkas no longer represented Mumbert, he continued to owe Mumbert the duty to protect their prior confidential relationship [164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1167]. If a substantial legal and factual relationship exists between a former representation and the attorney's current position, the court held, a presumption arises that the attorney possesses confidential information about the former client which would be compromised if an attorney were allowed to take an adverse position after the representation ended [164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1167]. In the default appeal, Pagkas was not only attempting to represent the opposing side, he was trying to be the opposing side. This, the court held, was more than merely a substantial legal and factual relationship between the prior representation and the current appeal [164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1168].

Pagkas contended that he should be entitled to reveal Mumbert's confidences to defend himself. The court held that there was no legal support for his position; while he could reveal confidences to defend against the malpractice claim or in a fee dispute, this case was not the malpractice action. The court held that under any analysis, it was certain that Pagkas possessed confidential information adverse to Mumbert which would be compromised if Pagkas were allowed to be in the case [164 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1168].

[c] Rule Against Conduct or Disclosure Adverse to Former Client

In Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 15 P.2d 505 , a water company brought suit against its former attorney, seeking to enjoin him from representing its adversaries in pending litigation and from disclosing information obtained through his employment with it. The attorney had for several years been the water company's receiver and sole attorney. He had attended meetings of directors, and had advised and represented the company in actions to determine its water rights. The company fired the attorney, who later brought the pending litigation against it on behalf of other water companies and involving the same issues of water rights. The superior court found for the attorney, and the water company appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment, and held that with regard to former clients, an attorney will be enjoined from doing either of two things. First, the attorney may not do anything injuriously affecting a former client in any matter in which the attorney formerly represented the client (216 Cal. 564, 573) . Second, the attorney may not use against the client any information acquired confidentially from the client in the course of the former employment (216 Cal. 564, 574) . Because the relation of attorney and client is one of highest confidence, the rule applies in spite of the fact that the former client discharged the attorney without justification (216 Cal. 564, 571) .

Meza v. H. Muehlstein & Co. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 977-978, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 , involved a personal injury action against 17 defendants for damages caused by exposure to toxic chemicals. Defendant Joe's Plastics was represented by attorney Drouet. The defendants' counsel, including Drouet, entered into a joint cost sharing agreement whereby the defendants shared discovery and trial strategy. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the defendants on the ground that the plaintiff failed to show any admissible expert evidence establishing causation. The plaintiff appealed. While the appeal was pending, Drouet became an associate of the firm representing the plaintiff. The plaintiff dismissed Joe's Plastics from the lawsuit. Several defendants filed a motion disqualifying Drouet's new firm from representing the plaintiff. In opposition, the plaintiff filed Drouet's declaration in which he stated that he never directly communicated with defendants other than Joe's Plastics, and that counsel for the other defendants never disclosed to him any communications they had with their clients. The trial court granted the defendants' motion to disqualify Drouet and his firm from representing the plaintiff.

The court of appeal held that when an attorney successively represents clients with adverse interests, the attorney has a potential conflict of interest. If there is a substantial relationship between the subjects of the representations, the attorney must be disqualified [176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 977-978]. The court held that Drouet was clearly disqualified from representing the plaintiff in that there was more than a mere substantial relationship between the plaintiff's suit and Drouet's representation of Joe's Plastics. The court held this was a per se conflict of interest under Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)(2) [176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 977-978].

In addition, the court held that Drouet's entire firm was disqualified from representing the plaintiff. The court held that as a general rule in California, if an attorney is disqualified from representation, the entire law firm is vicariously disqualified as well, especially when the attorney's disqualification is due to his or her prior representation of the opposing side during the same lawsuit [176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 978]. The court also held that the moving defendants had standing to move to disqualify Drouet even though he did not represent them, because they had an interest in protecting confidential attorney work product disclosed to Drouet [176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 980-981].

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327 , counsel represented Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ("MGM") and Tracinda Corp. ("TC"). Counsel had been MGM's corporate counsel for a number of years, including during a very significant earlier transaction, a merger which had been completed. Counsel continued to represent MGM in a class action which was initiated before the merger. Counsel later was retained by "TC" to represent it in a lawsuit involving financing which related to the valuation of stock in MGM, but in which MGM was not a party. When it became apparent to MGM that TC's interest in the financing suit rested on facts which were adverse to MGM's interests, MGM brought a motion to disqualify counsel from representing TC, citing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310. TC opposed the motion on the basis that counsel did not represent MGM and TC in the same matter. The trial court denied the motion to disqualify and MGM appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that it was unnecessary for the clients to be parties to the same matter (36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1843) . The proscription against representing concurrent adverse interests exists where counsel's employment is adverse to the interests of a client or former client and can exist even when a prior client is not a party to the litigation. Based on counsel's past employment by MGM as corporate counsel and on the specific current representation in the merger which gave rise to the financing lawsuit, the court of appeal reversed the trial court and disqualified counsel (36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1843-1845) .

[d] Rules of Professional Conduct Prohibit Adverse Representation

In Farris v. Fireman's Fund Insurance Company (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 618 , attorney James H. Wilkins and his prior law firm, McCormick Barstow Sheppard Wayte and Carruth, LLP (McCormick), represented Fireman's Fund Insurance Company for many years. McCormick's work for Fireman's consisted primarily of advising it regarding insurance coverage issues. While at McCormick, Wilkins issued formal coverage opinions, gave informal advice, consulted on coverage matters, and handled the litigation of coverage disputes and bad faith cases. Wilkins was hired as an associate at McCormick in 1984 and became a partner in 1990. During his entire tenure at McCormick, Wilkins worked as key member of the firm's insurance coverage department. Wilkins was an experienced and valued coverage attorney for McCormick, personally responsible for 27 percent of the work Fireman's sent to McCormick from 1984 to 1997. Wilkins left McCormick in 1997 to start Wilkins, Drolshagen & Czeshinski (WDC).

While working at WDC, Wilkins was retained by respondents Jason Farris and others to sue Fireman's for alleged bad faith and breach of an insurance contract issued by Fireman's. Respondents' complaint asserted that Fireman's wrongfully failed to provide benefits under the insurance contract and wrongfully denied coverage by failing to defend Farris in a personal injury action.

In the trial court, Fireman's moved to disqualify Wilkins and WDC from representing Farris against Fireman's pursuant to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E), arguing that Wilkins had previously represented Fireman's, and, as a result, had access to confidential information material to the action brought by Farris. In response, Wilkins argued that the bulk of his work for Fireman's while at McCormick consisted of issuing coverage opinions, which he said consisted of applying the facts and circumstances of a case to the particular terms and provisions of the policy in issue. Wilkins characterized this as a "very factual and legally specific" analysis. The trial court denied Fireman's motion on the ground that there had been no showing that the Wilkins's services as a "coverage" attorney for Fireman's were substantially related to the services a lawyer would perform defending a bad faith action (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 678) . Fireman's appealed.

The court of appeal applied the two-part test set forth in Jessen v. Hartford Casualty Insurance Company (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 698, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 877 . Under that test, the trial court must first identify where the former representation placed the attorney with respect to the prior client. If the placement was direct and personal, the court must then determine whether there was a connection between the two successive representations. This analysis may not include an "inquiry into the actual state of the lawyer's knowledge" acquired while representing the former client (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 678-679) .

The court of appeal held that it was undisputed that Wilkins's relationship with Fireman's was personal and direct. Wilkins acted as a coverage attorney for Fireman's for 13 years and actively participated, by personal contacts with key Fireman's employees, in representing Fireman's with respect to coverage and bad faith cases (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 679) .

Because Wilkins's representation of Fireman's was direct, the only issue before the court was whether there was a substantial relationship between the work Wilkins did for Fireman's and what Wilkins sought to do for Farris. Successive representations are substantially related when "information material to the evaluation, prosecution, settlement or accomplishment of the former representation given its factual and legal issues is also material to the evaluation, prosecution, settlement or accomplishment of the current representation given its factual and legal issues" (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 679) . The court held that the information acquired during the first representation must be "material" to the second representation; that is, it must be directly at issue in, or have some critical importance to, the second representation (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 680) . The trial court found that Wilkins's services for Fireman's were not "substantially related to the services that a litigator/trial lawyer would perform defending a bad faith action (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 681) ." However, the court of appeal held, the attorney's services do not determine whether disqualification is required. Rather, it is "the similarities between the legal problem involved in the former representation and the legal problem involved in the current representation" (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 681) . Whether Wilkins actually possessed confidential information that would work to his advantage in representing Farris is not the test. The proper test is whether a substantial relationship exists between the subjects of the two compared representations (119 Cal. App. 4th 671, 683) .

In Henriksen v. Great American Savings & Loan (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 , plaintiffs sought review of an order that disqualified plaintiffs' law firm from representing them. The law firm, during the course of the lawsuit, hired an attorney from the defendants' law firm as an associate. The associate had previously participated in the same lawsuit on behalf of the defendants' law firm, spending over 200 hours in preparation, including court appearances and discovery. After the attorney joined the plaintiffs' law firm, defendants formally moved to disqualify plaintiffs' entire law firm from representing plaintiffs in the action. In opposition, plaintiffs argued that it would "unfairly prejudice" their ability to try the "ready for trial" case and subject them to a "financial hardship in having to bring a replacement law firm up to speed." The plaintiffs' firm alleged that it had and would continue to isolate the new associate from any involvement in or discussion about the lawsuit. Despite firm's attempts at building an ethical wall, the trial court ruled that the plaintiffs' entire firm was disqualified from further representing plaintiffs in the lawsuit. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order of disqualification, finding no abuse of discretion (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 113, 117) . The court noted that under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 3-310(D) [now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)], an attorney may not represent a new client whose interests are adverse to those of a former client on a matter in which the attorney has obtained confidential information (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 113) . Clearly, the associate would be disqualified under the rule, because he possessed confidential information while representing the defendants (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 114) . With respect to disqualification of the entire firm, an on-point and controlling case with facts similar to those in the instant case, Dill v. Superior Court (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 301, 306, 205 Cal. Rptr. 671 (discussed in § 24.24[4][b]), requires that the entire firm be disqualified (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 111, 115) . The court noted that California cases have not endorsed the ethical-wall concept where a nongovernmental attorney armed with confidential information switches sides during the pendency of litigation (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 115) . It held that when an attorney is disqualified because he or she formerly represented and therefore possesses confidential information regarding the adverse party in the current litigation, vicarious disqualification of the entire firm is compelled as a matter of law (11 Cal. App. 4th 109, 117) .

Henriksen was decided under a prior version of the Rules of Professional Conduct, Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 3-310(D). Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E), the current rule on adverse representation, is similar to the former rule, with only minor technical changes; it provides that a State Bar member cannot, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client or former client where, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the member has obtained confidential information material to the employment. For purposes of Rule 3-310(E), "informed written consent" means the client's or former client's written agreement to the representation following written disclosure [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(A)(2)]. "Disclosure" means informing the client or former client of the relevant circumstances and of the actual and reasonably foreseeable adverse consequences to the client or former client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(A)(2)]. "Written" means any writing as defined in Evid. Code § 250 [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(A)(3)].

[e] Actual Misuse of Confidential Information Not Necessary

Galbraith v. State Bar (1933) 218 Cal. 329, 23 P.2d 291 , was a Supreme Court review of the State Bar's recommendation to suspend an attorney for misconduct. The attorney had, in several cases, used information obtained confidentially from client who was a criminal defendant, to bring a subsequent civil action on behalf of the victim against the former client. The Supreme Court ordered suspension for a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct. It held that the correct interpretation of the rule forbidding adverse representation is a broad one. The rule should be imposed not merely when the attorney will be required to use confidential information against a former client, but in every case when he or she may be required to do so (218 Cal. 329, 332-333) .

Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 , is discussed in § 24.24[4][b]. The court of appeal held that the rules governing an attorney's conduct prohibit adverse employment involving prior confidential information when there is potential, as well as actual use of such information (90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675) .

[f] Prejudice to Adverse Party Irrelevant

Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386 , is discussed in § 24.24[3][a]. In that case, the trial court refused to hear a motion to disqualify an attorney on the ground that delay in bringing the motion was prejudicial to the adverse party being represented by the attorney in question. The court of appeal held that possible prejudice to the adverse party is not a valid reason for denying a motion to disqualify the attorney (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 707) . The proper issue for consideration by the court is prejudice to the former client, and possible prejudice to the adverse party as the attorney's current client is irrelevant (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709) .

Counsel should note River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33 , discussed in § 24.32[3][a], which states, contrary to the rule in Earl Scheib, Inc., above, that delay in bringing a disqualification motion for conflict of interest, and consequent prejudice to the adverse party, can properly be considered by the court.

The court in River West found that the defendant's delay in making a disqualification motion (47 months after answer was filed) was so great that the law must assume an implied waiver of the right to disqualify opposing counsel (188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313) . The court noted that the Earl Scheib court acknowledged federal cases indicating that the motion for disqualification is equitable in nature and that reasonable diligence is required. The delay in Earl Scheib was only four months, and the Earl Scheib court distinguished the case at hand from two federal cases in which there were four-year and twenty-year delays. The River West court assumed that the reference in Earl Scheib to the federal cases was a recognition that delay and prejudice might be relevant under circumstances other than those present in the Earl Scheib case (188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1305) .

Counsel should also note Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 902-903, 175 Cal. Rptr. 575 , discussed in § 24.31[3][b], dealing with the issue of vicarious disqualification. That case held that when a court decides a motion by the state to disqualify an adverse party's law firm because one of its members used to represent the state, the adverse effect on the current client is one important basis for a policy of requiring evidence that confidential information was previously acquired, and that it could be used against the state.

[g] Injury to Former Client Presumed

In Weidekind v. Water Co. (1887) 74 Cal. 386, 19 P. 173 , a plaintiff in a civil action appealed a superior court judgment and order refusing a new trial. Plaintiff's original attorney was discharged after judgment for defendant in the original trial. The attorney had a contingent fee agreement, and received no compensation. Two appeals and two new trials followed, in which the attorney was not involved. At the most recent trial, however, the attorney appeared for defendant, and the court denied plaintiff's motions to disqualify him. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment and order, and remanded the case for a new trial. It held that it is a trial court's right and duty to forbid an attorney from changing sides in the same action, even if there are different trials involved (74 Cal. 386, 388) . In that situation, in the absence of contrary proof, injury to the former client must be presumed (74 Cal. 386, 389) .

Earl Scheib, Inc. v. Superior Court (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 61 Cal. Rptr. 386 , is discussed in § 24.24[3][a], [e]. In that case, the court held that when a former client brings a motion to disqualify an adverse party's attorney, the question raised is whether the former client has been prejudiced (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709) . The court stated that when the attorney is representing interests that conflict with those of a former client, injury to the former client will be presumed (253 Cal. App. 2d 703, 709) .

[h] No Joint Client Exception

In Western Continental Operating Co. v. Natural Gas Corp. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 261 Cal. Rptr. 100 , the law firm for the plaintiffs in the underlying action represented both the plaintiffs and defendants jointly in a prior dispute against a third party. Defendants moved to disqualify plaintiffs' law firm. The trial court granted the motion based on a finding that the plaintiff's firm had previously represented the defendant in a substantially related matter. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, plaintiffs contended that the State Bar rule prohibiting representation adverse to a former client [Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 4-101; now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)] had a "joint client exception" applicable if the attorney jointly represented the parties in the former matter. In support of this argument, plaintiffs relied on Evid. Code § 962, which sets forth a joint client exception to the evidentiary privilege accorded to attorney-client communications. The court of appeal rejected the plaintiff's argument, noting that the issue at hand was not the discovery of allegedly privileged communications, but the propriety of an attorney's representation adverse to a former client (212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761) . The court noted that the rule against representing conflicting interests is broader than the attorney-client evidentiary privilege (212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 761-762) . The court also noted evidence that, in the prior dispute, the disclosures made to plaintiff's counsel by defendants were made with an expectation of confidentiality (212 Cal. App. 3d 752, 762-763) .

[i] Disqualification of Former Judicial Officer and Officer's Law Firm

In Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 , a former judge had an "of counsel" relationship with a law firm after retiring from the bench. The law firm represented a client in an action in which the former judge had conducted three settlement conferences before retiring. The plaintiff moved to disqualify the entire law firm because the former judge had acquired confidential information from the parties during settlement discussions. The trial court denied the plaintiff's motion, based on the law firm's argument that it had put extensive screening provisions in place to shield the firm from any confidential information the former judge had acquired before the screening measures. The plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed.

The court found that this case was distinguishable from Higdon v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 278 Cal. Rptr. 588 , discussed in § 24.03[3][c]. In Higdon, the court held that the law firm's screening measures were sufficient to prevent disqualification. The former judge had not been in a position to acquire confidential information, and any appearance of impropriety could be dispelled by appropriate screening measures. In Cho, however, the court held that even with the extensive screening mechanisms in place, the vital importance of maintaining confidences disclosed in settlement discussions required disqualification of the entire firm. The paramount objective is the maintenance public confidence in the court and the legal profession (39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 125-126) .

[j] Disqualification of Law Firm That Formerly Represented Parent Corporation of Adverse Corporate Party

In Morrison Knudsen Corp. v. Hancock, Rothert & Bunshoft (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 , the trial court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining a law firm from representing a client in an action against a wholly-owned subsidiary of a parent corporation the law firm had represented previously. In the current matter, the law firm represented a water district in a negligent construction dispute with a construction company. Although the law firm never represented the construction company, it had previously represented the construction company's parent corporation (Morrison) as a defendant on negligent engineering and construction management claims. Additionally, for a substantial period of time continuing up until the time of the current dispute, the law firm had been retained by insurance underwriters of the parent corporation to monitor defense attorneys the parent corporation retained on errors and omissions claims.

The court of appeal affirmed the disqualification, holding that the trial court had reasonable basis to find that a substantial relationship existed between the law firm's former representation of the parent corporation and its current representation of a client against the parent corporation's wholly-owned subsidiary (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 235-236) . The current and former representations involved similar construction defect issues, and in defending the parent company previously, the law firm held in-depth discussions with the parent corporation regarding construction defect litigation and settlement strategies that were relevant to the current matter (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 235-236) . The court also upheld the disqualification based on the law firm's ongoing representation of the insurance underwriters of the parent corporation. Although the law firm never represented the parent corporation, it was privy to confidential information about the parent corporation's financial condition, gained through the law firm's representation of the insurance underwriters, that could be useful to an adversary and was substantially related to the law firm's representation in the current matter (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 236-238) .

In determining whether the parent corporation and its wholly owned subsidiary should be treated as one entity for conflict of interest purposes, the court first applied the traditional "alter ego" test, but acknowledged that neither parent nor subsidiary claimed to be the alter ego of the other in this case (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 248) . The court then applied a "unity of interest" test, and held that the insurance underwriters, the parent corporation and its subsidiary were related closely enough to be treated as one entity for conflict of interest disqualification (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 238-252) .

[k] Disqualification of Entire Public Law Office When Attorney Leaves Private Practice to Become Head of

Public Law Office

In City and County of San Francisco v. Cobra Solutions, Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 304, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 400 , Dennis Herrera, San Francisco's City Attorney, was a lawyer in private practice when Cobra Solutions, Inc. retained him and his firm to represent it in a range of business matters, including dealings with the City of San Francisco and an ongoing dispute with the City's Department of Building Inspections. About a year later, Herrera was elected San Francisco City Attorney and left private practice.

Under Herrera's predecessor, the San Francisco City Attorney's Office began to investigate the City's technology contracting. The investigation turned up evidence that Marcus Armstrong, the head of the City's Department of Building Inspections, had authorized prepayments on a city contract with Government Computer Sales, Inc. (GCSI) in violation of City law, and that GCSI had failed to fulfill the contract. The City sued GCSI, Armstrong, and others, alleging that GCSI paid Armstrong kickbacks through various fictitious business entities in order to have him select GCSI for the contract and authorize illegal prepayments. Further investigation uncovered evidence of payments by Cobra to Armstrong's fictitious business entities, and the City added Cobra as a defendant in the GCSI lawsuit.

Cobra moved to disqualify Herrera and the entire City Attorney's Office. It argued that Herrera had previously represented it in matters substantially related to the GCSI lawsuit, and that therefore both Herrera and the City Attorney's Office were barred from representing the City against Cobra. The City Attorney's Office responded that it had instituted an ethical screen immediately upon discovering Cobra's alleged involvement in the kickback scheme.

The trial court granted the motion to disqualify Herrera and the City Attorney's Office. The trial court based its ruling on the grounds that Herrera had personally represented Cobra, that he had obtained confidential information from Cobra, and that the subject of the prior representation was substantially related to the current lawsuit.

The court of appeal reviewed the cases decided under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E). However, it noted that to date, California civil cases had dealt exclusively with migration from private office to private office, from public office to private office, and from public office to public office. None had addressed migration from private office to public office (119 Cal. App. 4th 304, 315-316) . To decide the case, the court did not determine what the general rule should be, because this case involved a unique subset of private-public migration in which the attorney left private practice to become the head of a public law office. Where the attorney leaves private practice to become the head of a public law office, the court held that vicarious disqualification of the entire public law office generally is required in all matters substantially related to the head of office's earlier private representations (119 Cal. App. 4th 304, 316) . The court held that when the disqualified attorney is the head of a public law office, an ethical screen cannot adequately address the special issues that may arise, particularly the preservation of the public trust in the administration of justice and the integrity of the bar (119 Cal. App. 4th 304, 318) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rule Against Conduct or Disclosure Adverse to Former Client

Grove v. Grove Valve & Regulator Co. (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 29 Cal. Rptr. 150 , was an appeal from a superior court order enjoining a law firm and one of its members from appearing in an action, and from disclosing confidential information, when the individual attorney had formerly represented the defendant corporation as its patent attorney, and currently represented the plaintiff, a former employee of the company, in a dispute over rights to the employee's inventions. The court of appeal affirmed the order enjoining the attorney and his firm from appearing, and stated the general rule prohibiting employment adverse to a former client, which is injurious to the former client because of its relation to the subject matter of the previous employment, or because of the potential for using confidential information against the former client (213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 651-652) .

The court added, however, that there are some generally recognized exceptions to this rule. They are when the relationship of attorney and client never in fact existed between the attorney and the complaining party, when the new employment is not inconsistent with the former employment, and when the client expressly or impliedly consents to the adverse representation (213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 652-653) . When exceptions do not apply, as in this case, the general rule disqualifying the attorney from adverse representation will control (213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 653) .

[b] Rules of Professional Conduct Prohibit Adverse Representation

In United States Fire Ins. Co. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 1617, 1625-1629, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 669 , a law firm was accused of breaching its duty of confidentiality under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E). The law firm claimed its challenged litigation activity was protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation (anti-SLAPP) statute. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that the main issue in the disqualification suit was the firm's representation of a client adverse to the former client. The evidence regarding the actual litigation was to explain the disqualification issue and thus was not protected under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16.

In American Airlines, Inc. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1017 , plaintiff airline company sued an attorney and his law firm for breach of fiduciary duty and professional negligence when, after the law firm terminated the representation without the consent of the airline, the attorney agreed to be the Federal Rule 30(b)(6) spokesperson for an aircraft broker in a matter against an aircraft manufacturer. The court found that the attorney and the his law firm breached their fiduciary duty to the former client.

The court recognized that the proscription against adverse representation may exist in circumstances where an attorney assumes a role other than as an attorney adverse to an existing client; the proscription also exists when a former client was not a party to the litigation (96 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1039) . The attorney could not avoid his fiduciary duty by promising to maintain the confidences of the former client because that would be entirely dependant on his self-assumed position as arbiter of his own fidelity (96 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1039) .

In Klein v. Superior Court (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 894, 244 Cal. Rptr. 226 , one of the partners in the law firm representing the plaintiffs had been associated with a firm that provided general tax advice and immigration assistance to the defendants. The trial court disqualified the attorney, finding that the attorney may have received confidential information at his previous firm that was possibly relevant to the lawsuit at hand. The defendants subsequently petitioned for a writ of mandate to have the attorney's present firm disqualified. The court of appeal reviewed previous cases, and found that as a general rule, California courts do not permit disqualification of an individual attorney for a conflict without disqualifying the entire firm. The court held that when an attorney is disqualified from representation because of his or her prior receipt of confidential information and the attorney's law firm makes no attempt to screen the attorney from the litigation at hand (the law firm in the instant case made no such attempt), the entire law firm must also be disqualified from the litigation (198 Cal. App. 3d 894, 913-914) .

In Dill v. Superior Court (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 301, 205 Cal. Rptr. 671 , plaintiff sought a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to grant a motion to disqualify the law firm representing defendant in the underlying civil action because one of the attorneys in the firm had accepted employment adverse to petitioner, a former client, in violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 4-101 [now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)]. The court of appeal granted the writ. The court held that actual possession of confidential information is not required for disqualification under former Rule 4-101 (158 Cal. App. 3d 301, 304) . When a substantial relationship has been shown to exist between the former representation and the current representation, and when it appears by virtue of the nature of the former representation or relationship of the attorney to the former client that confidential information material to the current dispute would normally have been imparted to the attorney, the attorney's knowledge of confidential information is presumed (158 Cal. App. 3d 301, 304-305) .

In Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 197 Cal. Rptr. 185 , the wife in a dissolution proceeding moved to disqualify her husband's attorney, who was also counsel for a family business that was a focus of the dissolution proceeding. The trial court denied the motion, and the court of appeal reversed. The court held that as counsel for the family business, the husband's attorney was continuing to represent the wife, and therefore his representation of the husband in the dissolution matter was barred by former Rule 4-101 of the Rules of Professional Conduct [now see Rule 3-310(E)] (149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 934-935) .

In Global Van Lines, Inc. v. Superior Court (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 483, 192 Cal. Rptr. 609 , defendant in an action for breach of contract moved to disqualify opposing counsel on the ground that the attorney had been defendant's former general counsel and had participated in the establishment of the contract at issue. The trial court denied the motion but the court of appeal reversed, stating that the ethics of the legal profession prohibit a lawyer from accepting employment adverse to a former client relating to a matter in reference to which he or she has obtained confidential information by reason of or in the course of the former employment. In the present case, a substantial relationship existed between the attorney's former representation of defendant and his current representation as opposing counsel, and he therefore should have been disqualified (144 Cal. App. 3d 483, 487-488) .

In Yorn v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 153 Cal. Rptr. 295 , a codefendant in a criminal action petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to reverse the superior court's order granting the other codefendant's motion to disqualify petitioner's attorney. The motion had been made on the grounds of a prior attorney-client relationship which conflicted with the attorney's representation of petitioner. The court of appeal denied the writ, and upheld the disqualification. It held that former Rule 4-101 of the Rules of Professional Conduct [now see Rule 3-310(E)] applies in civil and criminal cases to prohibit an attorney's acceptance of employment adverse to his or her former client, if it would result in a conflict of interests (90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675) . The purpose of the rule is to prevent dishonest conduct, and also to avoid placing an attorney in a position where he or she would be required to choose between conflicting duties (90 Cal. App. 3d 669, 675) .

[c] Actual Misuse of Confidential Information Not Necessary

The factual background of American Airlines, Inc. v. Sheppard, Mullin, Richter & Hampton (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 1017 is discussed in § 24.24[4][b]. In finding the attorney breached his fiduciary duty to a former client, the court held that the actual use or misuse of confidential information does not determine whether an attorney has breached his professional responsibilities to a current or former client; it is the possibility of breach of confidence that controls (96 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1043) .

The factual and procedural background of Morrison Knudsen Corp. v. Hancock, Rothert & Bunshoft (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 81 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 are discussed in § 24.24[3][i]. The court of appeal upheld the disqualification of a law firm from representing a client in an action against a wholly-owned subsidiary of a corporation it had previously represented, as well as its ongoing representation of the parent corporation's insurance underwriters, on the grounds that, inter alia, although the law firm had never represented the wholly-owned subsidiary being sued, the firm was privy to confidential information about the parent corporation's financial condition, gained through the law firm's ongoing representation of the insurance underwriters, which could be useful to an adversary and was substantially related to the law firm's representation in the current matter (69 Cal. App. 4th 223, 236-238) .

The facts and procedural background of Woods v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 197 Cal. Rptr. 185 , are discussed in § 24.24[4][b]. The court of appeal in Woods held that the husband's attorney in a dissolution proceeding who was also the attorney for a family business should be disqualified even though there was no showing that the attorney had in fact obtained confidential information from his position as counsel for the business. Ethical considerations require disqualification not only when it is clear that the attorney will be adverse to his or her former client, but also when it appears that he or she might (149 Cal. App. 3d 931, 936) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.25

§ 24.25 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Communicated With Represented Adverse Party

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DISQUALIFY _____ [name of attorney] FROM REPRESENTATION OF CLIENT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED FROM THE CASE BECAUSE HE/SHE HAS IMPROPERLY COMMUNICATED WITH AN ADVERSE PARTY, KNOWING THAT THE PARTY WAS REPRESENTED BY COUNSEL, WITHOUT THE CONSENT OF SUCH COUNSEL, IN VIOLATION OF RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, RULE 2-100.

A. Disqualification of Attorney for Communication With Adverse Party. When an attorney violates Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 2-100, the rule restricting ex parte communications on a subject of controversy between an attorney and a represented adverse party, the trial judge may disqualify the attorney from acting as counsel in an action related to the subject of controversy, when the misconduct will have a continuing effect on the proceedings before the court (Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 131-133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; Chronometrics, Inc. v. Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 607, 168 Cal. Rptr. 196).

B. Prohibition on Communication With Adverse Party. When representing a client, a State Bar member must not communicate directly or indirectly about the subject of the representation with a party known to be represented by another lawyer in the matter, unless the member has the consent of the other lawyer (Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(A)).

[Optional] C. Officer, Director, or Managing Agent as Party. For purposes of Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 2-100, restricting communications between attorneys and represented adverse parties, the term "party" includes an officer, director, or managing agent of a corporation or association, and a partner or managing agent of a partnership (Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(1)).

[Optional] D. Employee or Association Member as Party. For purposes of Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 2-100, restricting communications between attorneys and represented adverse parties, the term "party" includes an association member or an employee of an association, corporation, or partnership, if the subject of the communication is any act or omission of such person in connection with the matter that (1) may be binding on or imputed to the organization for purposes of civil or criminal liability or (2) whose statement may constitute an admission on the part of the organization (Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(2)).

[Optional] E. Class Members as Party. For purposes of Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 2 100, restricting communications between attorneys and represented adverse parties, the term "party" includes class members after the court conditionally certified the class [Hernandez v. Vitamin Shoppe Industries Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1459-1461, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734].
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's motion to disqualify an opposing attorney from further participation in a case, when the opposing attorney has communicated about the subject of the case with a party represented by another attorney, without obtaining the other attorney's consent.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts concerning the opposing counsel's contact with the represented party, and show how the communication will have a continuing effect on the proceedings at hand.

[b] Opposing Authorities

The memoranda set out in § 24.33 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Communication With Adverse Party

Hernandez v. Vitamin Shoppe Industries Inc. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1459-1461, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 734 , involved various class actions against the defendant for alleged nonpayment of overtime wages, meal and rest period violations, and other labor violations. The parties in one action reached a settlement and moved for preliminary approval. Despite opposition by Spencer, counsel for the plaintiffs in another action, the court approved the settlement. After the court had conditionally certified the class and approved the notice of proposed class settlement, but before the claims administrator sent the notice to the putative class members, Spencer sent letters to the putative class members advising them to oppose the settlement, opt out of the class, and join the class he was representing in a separate action. Pursuant to Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2 100, the class counsel moved to enjoin Spencer from communicating with class members, disqualify him from further participation in the action, and impose monetary sanctions against him. Spencer argued that his letters were proper because he had sent them as counsel in a separate action and that the recipients were not yet represented by class counsel, but were members of a conditionally certified class. The trial court enjoined Spencer and imposed sanctions against him.

On appeal, the court held that Spencer did not have the right to unilaterally contact class members after the court conditionally certified the class and appointed and designated other class counsel. The court held that Rule 2-100 was triggered by the court's conditional certification of the class, even if notice had not yet been sent to the class members, and that absent class members of a conditionally certified class are "parties" represented by class counsel [174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1460]. In addition, the court held that Rule 2-100 is not limited to communications by opposing counsel, but by any counsel [174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1460]. The court also rejected Spencer's argument that if class counsel is not required to notify an unnamed class member of a settlement offer pursuant to Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-510, then the party can not be considered a represented party for purposes of Rule 2-100 either. The court held that just because class counsel may have heightened obligations to named representatives with respect to settlement offer communications does not mean that class counsel does not represent the entire class [174 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1461].

Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 , was an appeal from a trial court order directing the disqualification of defendant's law firm in an unlawful detainer action. Plaintiff corporation had originally consented to an assignment of a lease to defendant of certain of the corporation's real property. However, after a change in corporate management, plaintiff corporation filed an unlawful detainer action that in effect repudiated the consent to the assignment. Defendant's attorney arranged a meeting with the plaintiff corporation's former president, who had consented to the original assignment while he was president. At this meeting, the former president (who was also a current director of plaintiff corporation) informed the attorney of various matters of record, but disclosed nothing confidential.

The court of appeal affirmed the order disqualifying the attorney who communicated with the former president, but reversed the order disqualifying the attorney's entire firm (186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 121, 138) . Construing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-103 [now see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100], which prohibited ex parte communication on a subject of controversy with a party known to be represented by counsel, the court held that when the represented party is a corporation, the prohibition on ex parte communication extends to corporate directors, as well as current employees of the corporation (186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 129) . The court held that the defendant's attorney violated former Rule 7-103, at least insofar as he failed to seek leave of court to interview the former president of plaintiff corporation without the participation of plaintiff corporation's counsel (186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 131) . It found that the trial court's disqualification was proper, and that the trial court was justified in finding that the attorney might possess an unfair advantage due to his ex-parte contact with the former president (186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 133) . However, it found that disqualification of the entire law firm was unduly punitive in the absence of some showing that prejudice actually resulted to plaintiff (186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 136) .

In Chronometrics, Inc. v. Sysgen, Inc. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 168 Cal. Rptr. 196 , defendants and cross complainants in a civil action appealed from a court order that their law firm be disqualified. An attorney in the law firm was president of Chronometrics, one of the defendants and cross complainants. He communicated with a cross defendant respecting a subject of controversy in the civil action. The attorney knew that the cross defendant was represented by counsel. However, he did not obtain the consent of cross defendant's counsel prior to the communications.

The court of appeal modified the trial court order to provide for the disqualification of the cross complainants' attorney, rather than the entire firm (110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 608) . The court noted that, prior to its decision, there apparently had been no reported California cases in which an attorney had been disqualified for communications with a represented party (110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 603) . The court reviewed several California and federal cases involving disqualification in other contexts, and detected a common theme: If the status or misconduct that is urged as a ground for disqualification will have a continuing effect on the judicial proceedings that are before the court, a court is justified in refusing to permit the lawyer to participate in such proceedings. If, on the other hand, the court's purpose is to punish a transgression that has no substantial continuing effect on the judicial proceedings to occur in the future, neither the court's inherent power to control its proceedings, nor Code Civ. Proc. § 128 (enumerating the statutory powers of courts) can be stretched to support the disqualification. In applying these principles to the instant case, the court found that the information learned by the cross complainants' attorney could not be unlearned and that, whether the attorney was disqualified as counsel, he could use the information this information as president of Chronometrics. Still, as counsel, the attorney would have the improperly obtained facts instantly available in his mind in questioning witnesses, making and responding to objections, and addressing the court and jury. The attorney would be in quite a different position from a substituted counsel who might acquire the information second hand by discussions with the attorney before or after court sessions or during recesses. Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to permit the wrongfully obtained information to be used by the attorney directly in the readings before the court. However, the extension of disqualification to the attorney's entire law firm would have no purpose but a punitive one (110 Cal. App. 3d 597, 607-608) .

In Continental Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 , the defendants brought a motion to disqualify plaintiffs' attorney because of improper contact with two former employees of defendants. Defendants alleged that plaintiffs' counsel communicated with the former employees in violation of Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100. The trial court denied the motion to disqualify, but prohibited plaintiffs from using the testimony of the two former employees, finding that plaintiffs' counsel's contact was improper and in violation of Rule 2-100 (32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 107) .

The court of appeal agreed that plaintiffs' counsel should not be disqualified (32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 103) , but vacated the order prohibiting the testimony of the former employees. The court found that plaintiffs' counsel's communications with the former employees was not improper and was not in violation of Rule 2-100 (32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 111) . The court discussed at length the policy, history and cases relating to that rule, and then held that Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 does not apply to former employees not represented by counsel (32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 118) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Communication With Adverse Party

In County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 647 , a medical malpractice action, the plaintiff's attorney contacted a physician who had been withdrawn as the defendant's expert but who remained as a medical consultant to the defendant. The plaintiff's attorney interviewed the physician and obtained information about a report the physician had prepared for the defendant's attorneys in preparation for trial. The court of appeal held that the plaintiff's attorney would have to be disqualified from the case, because he obtained the opposing attorney's work product, which was privileged under Code Civ. Proc. § 2018 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.030 effective July 1, 2005), and there was no way the attorney could separate that knowledge from his preparation of the case (222 Cal. App. 3d 647, 658) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.26

§ 24.26 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Concurrently Represents Adverse Party

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISQUALIFY _____ [name of attorney] FROM REPRESENTATION OF CLIENT
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED FROM THE CASE BECAUSE (1) HE/SHE CURRENTLY REPRESENTS MOVANT IN A SEPARATE MATTER, AND (2) REPRESENTATION OF THE ADVERSE PARTY IN THIS CASE WAS ACCEPTED WITHOUT CONSENT OF MOVANT IN VIOLATION OF RULE 3-310(B) OF THE RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT.

A. Disqualification of Attorney for Adverse Concurrent Representation. An attorney violates Rule 3-310(C) of the Rules of Professional Conduct when he or she, while representing a party in an unrelated matter, agrees to represent an adverse party in the case in issue (Gilbert v. National Corp. For Housing Partnerships (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204 ; State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Federal Insurance Co. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 ; Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1845, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327 ; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1054-1055, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228).

B. Withdrawal of Representation Before Hearing Does Not Cure Violation. An attorney may not cure a violation of the concurrent representation rule by withdrawing from the adverse representation before the hearing on the motion to disqualify (Cal West Nurseries, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 170 ; Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1056-1060, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's motion to disqualify an opposing attorney from further participation in a case, when the opposing attorney is concurrently representing the party in an unrelated matter.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the attorney for the opposing party also represents the moving party in an unrelated matter, and that the attorney did not obtain the moving party's informed consent before undertaking representation of the opposing party.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Adverse Concurrent Representation

In Gilbert v. National Corp. For Housing Partnerships (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204 , the court of appeal upheld an order disqualifying plaintiff's counsel based upon a conflict of interest, when the attorney simultaneously represented other clients in a different action against the same defendant.

In the instant matter, the attorney represented a plaintiff in a wrongful termination action brought against a corporation. In another matter, the attorney represented four plaintiffs in a racial harassment and discrimination action brought against the same corporation. The four plaintiffs in the other matter had signed individual settlement agreements with the defendant corporation. These agreements, negotiated by the attorney, each contained a confidentiality clause. Subsequently, the attorney attempted to advance his client's interests in the instant matter by calling one or more of the four plaintiffs from the other matter to testify as witnesses in the client's case.

The court of appeal found that the attorney represented currently and simultaneously both the plaintiff in the instant matter and the four plaintiffs in the other matter (71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1252). The court found that an inherent conflict of interest existed where the attorney had a duty to advance his client's interests in the instant matter by offering testimony favorable to his client, while having a simultaneous, competing duty to assist his other four clients in avoiding potential breach of the confidentiality clauses in their settlement agreements (71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1254). The court found no evidence that the attorney had obtained the informed written consent of any of his clients to this conflict of interest, as required by Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C), relating to simultaneous representation of clients whose interests conflict (71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1255). As a result, the court of appeal concluded that the trial court's disqualification of the attorney was proper (71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 1256).

In State Farm Mutual Automobile Ins. Co. v. Federal Insurance Co. (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 , a law firm represented State Farm in an action against Federal Insurance Company for declaratory relief and subrogation damages arising from a coverage dispute, and, at the time the action was filed, represented Federal and its insured in an unrelated case that settled three months later. Federal brought motion to disqualify the law firm from representing State Farm, alleging a conflict of interest. In denying this motion, the trial court utilized the "substantial relationship" test, which applies to conflicts of interest in successive representations. Under this test, when a court finds that there is a substantial relationship between the subjects of a current and a former representation, it will presume that confidences disclosed in the former representation may have value in the current representation, and disqualification may therefore be proper after a "balancing of competing interests" (72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1430) .

The court of appeal vacated the trial court order of denial and directed the trial court to enter a new order granting disqualification (72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1435) . The appellate court reasoned that, since Federal was a client of the law firm at the time the law firm filed its action against Federal on behalf of State Farm, the adverse representation was concurrent rather than successive. In adverse concurrent representations, the fiduciary value at stake is the attorney's duty of loyalty, and mandatory disqualification is proper for the protection of this value. In contrast, the fiduciary value protected in adverse successive representations is client confidentiality, which requires a discretionary rather than mandatory rule of disqualification. The trial court erred when it failed to apply the proper rule under which disqualification was mandatory (72 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1430-1433) .

In Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Inc. v. Tracinda Corp. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 327 counsel represented Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer ("MGM") and Tracinda Corp. ("TC"). Counsel had been MGM's corporate counsel for a number of years, including during a very significant earlier transaction, a merger which had been completed. Counsel continued to represent MGM in a class action which was initiated before the merger. Counsel later was retained by "TC" to represent it in a lawsuit involving financing which related to the valuation of stock in MGM, but in which MGM was not a party. When it became apparent to MGM that TC's interest in the financing suit rested on facts which were adverse to MGM's interests, MGM brought a motion to disqualify counsel from representing TC, citing Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310. TC opposed the motion on the basis that counsel did not represent MGM and TC in the same matter. The trial court denied the motion to disqualify and MGM appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that it was unnecessary for the clients to be parties to the same matter (36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1843) . The proscription against representing concurrent adverse interests exists where counsel's employment is adverse to the interests of a client or former client and can exist even when a prior client is not a party to the litigation. Based on counsel's past employment by MGM as corporate counsel and on the specific current representation in the merger which gave rise to the financing lawsuit, the court of appeal reversed the trial court and disqualified counsel (36 Cal. App. 4th 1832, 1843-1845) .

In Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 , plaintiff (Truck) sought indemnification from defendant (FFIC) for maintaining a defense of Kaiser Corporation in asbestos-related bodily injury lawsuits. After FFIC successfully brought a motion to disqualify Truck's counsel, Truck asked another law firm (Crosby) to represent it. Crosby discovered that it also represented an affiliate of FFIC in two unrelated wrongful termination lawsuits. When FFIC objected to the concurrent representation, Crosby sought to withdraw from the wrongful termination cases. FFIC then filed a motion to disqualify Crosby from representing Truck on the ground that FFIC did not consent to Crosby's representation of Truck and that Crosby thereby breached its duty of loyalty to FFIC. Such a breach would result in a per se disqualification. Truck argued that because of Crosby's withdrawal from representing FFIC in the unrelated matters, FFIC was a former client. Thus, since there was no factual or legal connection between the present case and the wrongful termination cases, the per se disqualification rule did not apply. Crosby could continue to represent Truck because it possessed no confidential information that could be misused to FFIC's prejudice. After a hearing, the trial court ruled that although the situation presented an existing representation with an intent to depart, the per se disqualification rule applied because Crosby was concurrently representing FFIC and Truck.

On appeal, the court affirmed the trial court's disqualification order. The court of appeal reviewed the trial court's ruling using the abuse of discretion standard. Truck argued that the trial court erred in failing to exercise its discretion as required by the "former client rule" and in applying the per se rule. The court of appeals disagreed, holding that the undisputed facts established adverse concurrent representation, that Crosby did not obtain FFIC's informed written consent to represent Truck, and proceeded to represent Truck anyway. Thus, Crosby violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B) (now see Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)) on its face (6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1055-1056) .

[b] Withdrawal of Representation Before Hearing Does Not Cure Violation

In Cal West Nurseries, Inc. v. Superior Court (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 170 a corporation that was sued in personal injury action, cross-complained against a nursery and a construction company for equitable contribution and indemnity. The nursery cross-complained against the corporation and construction company for implied indemnity and comparative apportionment. After the parties settled the underlying personal injury action, the cross-complaints remained in effect. The corporation and the construction company filed association of counsel designating Lewis Brisbois Bisgaard & Smith as counsel on the cross-complaints. When the firm discovered it represented the nursery in unrelated litigation, it filed a "disassociation of counsel" in which it sought to cease it representation of the corporation and the construction company only insofar as the pleadings involved rights and duties between its two clients. The nursery moved to disqualify the firm from continuing to represent the corporation and construction company. The trial court denied the motion on the ground that the nursery did not make any showing that the law firm obtained any material confidential information. The nursery petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that in a case involving concurrent representation, the absence of a violation of confidentiality is irrelevant (129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175) . It held that absent informed written consent, a lawyer may not concurrently represent clients who have actual or potential conflicts; nor may a lawyer represent one client against another in an unrelated matter. It is immaterial whether the lawyer possesses confidential information that could be misused to the prejudice of either client (129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1175) . The court held that the corporation was still adverse to the nursery by virtue of its cross-complaint against the nursery. The fact that Lewis did not represent the corporation on that cross-complaint did not eliminate the adverse relationship between the two parties. A client who learns that his or her lawyer is also representing a litigation adversary, even with respect to a matter wholly unrelated to the one for which counsel was retained, cannot long be expected to sustain the level of confidence and trust in counsel that is one of the foundations of the professional relationship (129 Cal. App. 4th 1170, 1176) .

The facts and procedural background of Truck Ins. Exchange v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 228 , are discussed in § 24.26[3][a]. Truck held that Crosby violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(B) (now see Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C)) by concurrently representing Truck and FFIC without obtaining FFIC's informed consent (6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1055-1056) . The court also held that Crosby, by unilaterally withdrawing prior to the disqualification hearing, could not transform concurrent representation into former representation (6 Cal. App. 4th 1050, 1060) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Attorney for Adverse Concurrent Representation

In McPhearson v. The Michaels Company (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 843, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , an attorney represented a client in an action against the client's former employer for discrimination and harassment. At the time of the filing of the action, the attorney also represented another client in a similar action against the same employer and intended to have the former client testify as a witness against the employer notwithstanding the former client was subject to a confidential settlement agreement.

The court in McPhearson distinguished Gilbert v. National Corp. for Housing Partnerships (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1240, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 204 , which is discussed in § 24.26[3][a].

In Gilbert, the attorney for former clients who were subject to a confidential settlement agreement intended to call one or more of the former clients as witnesses in the second similar matter. The Gilbert court upheld an order disqualifying plaintiff's counsel based on the conflict of interest created when, in an effort to advance the interests of the current client, he placed the former clients in a position to breach the confidential settlement agreement if they testified against the defendant.

The court in McPhearson held that the disqualification of McPhearson's attorney was not warranted stating that Gilbert exaggerated the conflict of interest posed by the confidentiality agreements, particularly when, unlike in fact in Gilbert, both the plaintiff and the employee who entered into the settlement agreement waived the conflict posed by the representation (96 Cal. App. 4th 843, 845) .

In In re Cliffton B. (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 415, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 778 , the court of appeal found that the trial court's appointment of a single attorney to represent two brothers concurrently in a permanency hearing created conflict of interest where the trial court was considering post-termination sibling visitation issues. The court of appeal found that an actual conflict of interest existed in the concurrent representation of the two brothers that resulted in ineffective assistance of counsel (81 Cal. App. 4th 415, 427-428).

The facts and procedural background of Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , are discussed in § 24.28[3][b]. In that case, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's disqualification of counsel who simultaneously represented two closely held corporations and two of the corporations' three shareholders in a shareholder's derivative action, but permitting counsel to continue to represent the two majority shareholders. The court held that under Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C), counsel could not simultaneously represent the corporations and the two majority shareholders in the action because the two shareholders, as directors, were accused of embezzling from the corporations, which created a conflict of interest between the corporations and the two majority shareholders (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 74) . Due to this conflict, the majority shareholders' prior consent on behalf of the corporations to the lawyer's simultaneous representation of the corporations and the majority shareholders was not valid under either Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rules 3-310 or 3-600 (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 74-76) . In permitting the lawyer to continue to represent the majority shareholders, the court reasoned that counsel would likely hold a residual bias in favor of the majority shareholders, even where the court permitted counsel to continue representation of the corporations only. The court rejected the argument that the lawyer should be disqualified under Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) for possessing confidential information that could prejudice the corporations. The court found that there was no confidential information particular to the corporations, in that the majority shareholders were "the sole repositories" of all corporate information (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 81-82) .

In Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 419 , the trial court granted plaintiff corporation's motion to disqualify defendant's counsel for a conflict of interest where defendant's counsel represented plaintiff's subsidiaries in unrelated litigation. The court of appeal ordered issuance of a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its disqualification ruling and to rehear the motion on defendant's application. The court held that while the duty of loyalty embodied in Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(C), prohibits an attorney from undertaking a representation that is directly adverse to an existing client (60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 255-256) , in the corporate context it is only where one corporation is the alter ego of the other that parent and subsidiary corporations should be treated as the same entity for conflict purposes (60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 257-258) . The court directed the trial court to reconsider whether an alter ego relationship existed between the parent and subsidiary corporations in the instant matter.

[b] Withdrawal of Representation Before Hearing Does Not Cure Violation

In People ex rel. Dept. of Corporations v. Speedee Oil Change Systems (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1135, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 816 , the California Supreme Court disqualified plaintiff's law firm for a conflict of interest when an attorney who was "of counsel" to the law firm had consulted with the defendant in the same case. An "of counsel" attorney is considered under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 1-400(E)(8) to have a "close, personal, continuous, and regular" relationship with the law firm to which the attorney is publicly affiliated as "of counsel" (20 Cal. 4th 1135, 1153-1154) . This publicized, close relationship justified the same rule of vicarious disqualification that is applied to partners and associates in a law firm (20 Cal. 4th 1135, 1152-1154) . The Court held that when the of counsel consulted with the opposing party and gained confidential information, the law firm was vicariously disqualified from further representation along with its of counsel, even where the of counsel's consultation with, and representation of, the opposing party terminated quickly, in advance of the disqualification hearing (20 Cal. 4th 1135, 1147-1156) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.27

§ 24.27 Supporting Motion for Order Disqualifying Opposing Attorney Who Retained Expert Witness Previously Interviewed by Moving Party

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
vs.	)	ORDER DISQUALIFYING OPPOSING ATTOR-
_____ [name],	)	NEY _____ [name of attorney]
Defendant.	)	WHO RETAINED EXPERT WITNESS PREVI-)	OUSLY INTERVIEWED BY MOVING PARTY
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [Name of opposing attorney] SHOULD BE DISQUALIFIED FROM REPRESENTING _____ [specify opposing party, e.g., DEFENDANT] IN THIS CASE BECAUSE HE/SHE RETAINED _____ [name of expert] AS AN EXPERT WITNESS IN THIS CASE AFTER THIS EXPERT HAD BEEN INTERVIEWED BY _____ [name of moving party's attorney] ON _____ [specify moving party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S BEHALF AND HAD RECEIVED CONFIDENTIAL INFORMATION ABOUT _____ [specify moving party, e.g., PLAINTIFF].

Disqualification of Opposing Attorney for Retaining Previously Interviewed Expert Witness. An attorney may be disqualified from representing an opposing party if that attorney interviewed an expert witness already interviewed by the moving party's attorney when the moving party's attorney imparted confidential information to the expert before deciding not to retain the expert as a witness in the case (Shadow Traffic Network v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 1078-1088, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693 ; see also Western Digital Corporation v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a party's motion to disqualify an opposing attorney from further participation in the case, when the opposing attorney has retained an expert witness previously interviewed by the moving party's attorney and to whom the moving party's attorney imparted confidential information before deciding not to retain the expert as a witness in the case.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts showing that the attorney for the moving party imparted confidential information to the expert about the case with the reasonable expectation that this information would remain confidential and subsequently decided not to retain the expert as a witness in the case, and that the opposing attorney thereafter retained the same expert as a witness for the opposing party.

In an appropriate case, the memoranda in this form may be rebutted by those in § 24.41, which deal with shifting the burden of proof in these types of cases when the expert remains under the control of the moving party, or is otherwise fully accessible to that party.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Disqualification of Opposing Attorney for Retaining Previously Interviewed Expert Witness

In Shadow Traffic Network v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693 , the trial court granted the plaintiff's motion to disqualify the defendant's attorneys from representing the defendant in the action, on the basis that the defendant's attorneys had retained as an expert witness an accounting firm previously interviewed by the plaintiff's attorneys for the same lawsuit. After imparting confidential information about the case to the accounting firm, including their factual and legal theories about the case, the plaintiff's attorneys decided not to retain the firm as an expert witness for the plaintiff (24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 1071-1078) .

The court of appeal denied the defendant's petition for a writ of mandate, holding that substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that the plaintiff's attorneys had imparted confidential information to the firm with the reasonable expectation that this information would remain confidential. The fact that the plaintiff's attorneys decided not to retain the accounting firm as an expert witness did not, as a matter of law, render the imparted information nonconfidential. The court held that communications made to a potential expert in a retention interview can be considered confidential and therefore subject to protection from subsequent disclosure even if the expert is not thereafter retained, as long as there was a reasonable expectation of confidentiality; the existence of a formal relationship between the expert and the attorney is just one factor the court should consider in making this determination. Once a court finds that confidential information was disclosed, there is a presumption that the expert disclosed this information to the attorneys who subsequently retained the expert. These attorneys then have the burden of showing, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the confidential information was not disclosed to them (24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 1078-1088) .

NOTE:

Counsel opposing a motion to disqualify an opposing attorney based on Shadow Traffic should review Collins v. State of California (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1127-1129 ; 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112 and Shandralina G. v. Homonchuk (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 395, 412, 54 Cal. Rptr. 3d 207 , discussed in § 24.41[3][a], in which the court held that the rebuttable presumption established in Shadow Traffic was inapplicable because there were no legal impediment to the defendant's ability to obtain evidence from the expert regarding the content of the communication.

Western Digital Corporation v. Superior Court (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179 , was an action by a computer manufacturer against a hard disk manufacturer, in which plaintiff's counsel interviewed but did not retain members of a consulting firm as expert witnesses. Following disclosure of confidences to the consulting firm, a new member joined the consulting firm and was later hired by defense counsel as an expert witness. Thereafter, applying the holding in Shadow Traffic Network v. Superior Court (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1067, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 693 , the trial court granted plaintiff's motion to disqualify defendant's counsel and the expert witness for a conflict of interest on the grounds that plaintiff had disclosed confidential information about the lawsuit to members of the consulting firm.

The court of appeal ordered issuance of a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order and to enter a new order denying the disqualification motion, on defendant's application. The court found that substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that confidential information had been disclosed by the plaintiff to the consulting firm, thereby creating a rebuttable presumption under Shadow Traffic that the disqualified expert shared plaintiff's confidential information with defense counsel (60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 1480, 1485) . However, examining the facts before it, the court found that the instant matter was distinguishable from Shadow Traffic, in which the expert hired by defense counsel had personally participated in the initial interview with plaintiff's counsel. Here, the expert was retained by the consulting firm following the interview with plaintiff's counsel and had not personally participated in that interview. Additionally, the court found that defense counsel presented a preponderance of evidence to rebut the presumption that any of the plaintiff's confidential information had been disclosed to the new member of the consulting firm retained as an expert by the defense (60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 1488) . The court held that disqualification of an expert (and, by extension, the law firm that retained the expert) can only be justified where the moving party establishes that the expert actually possesses confidential attorney-client information materially related to the proceedings before the court (60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 1487) . Showing merely potential access to confidences without actual exposure is insufficient. The threat to confidentiality must be real, not hypothetical (60 Cal. App. 4th 1471, 1487) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.28

§ 24.28 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--No Actual Attorney-Client Relationship Existed

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	TO DISQUALIFY _____ [name of
vs.	)	attorney] FROM REPRESENTATION ADVERSE
_____ [name],	)	TO FORMER CLIENT
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED FROM REPRESENTING AN INTEREST ADVERSE TO THE COMPLAINING PARTY BECAUSE NO CONFIDENTIAL ATTORNEY-CLIENT RELATIONSHIP EVER EXISTED BETWEEN _____ [name of attorney] AND THAT PARTY.

A. Confidential Attorney-Client Relationship Required. An attorney will not be disqualified from representing a party on the ground that he or she formerly represented an adverse party if there is no showing that a confidential attorney-client relationship actually existed between the attorney and the complaining party (Med-Trans Corporation v. City of California City (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 666-669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 17 ; Adams v. Aerojet-General Corporation (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1334-1337, 1340, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 ; Strasbourger Pearson Tulcin Wolff Inc. v. Wiz Technology, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 1404, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 ; Responsible Citizens v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1733, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 ; In re Marriage of Zimmerman (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 563, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 ; Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v. Consortium Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 443, 448-449, 212 Cal. Rptr. 497).

[Optional] B. Attorney Represents Only Corporation. An attorney for a corporation represents the corporation and only represents its shareholders and officers in their representative capacity, and there is no confidential attorney-client relationship between the attorney and any individual in the corporation (Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290, 301 P.2d 10).

[Optional] C. Attorney Represents Both Closely-Held Corporation and Shareholders. When an attorney jointly represented a closely-held corporation and the majority stockholders individually, the attorney may continue to represent one of the clients, since no confidential information was obtained (Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a party's motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case when no confidential attorney-client relationship ever in fact existed between the moving party and the attorney for the opposing party. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may combine this form with §§ 24.29-24.31.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case, such as the memorandum set out in § 24.24.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confidential Attorney-Client Relationship Required

In Med-Trans Corporation v. City of California City (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 666-669, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 17 , the plaintiff transportation company sued the defendant city for breach of a contract to provide air ambulance services for the defendant. During the course of the litigation, it was disclosed that the defendant's attorney had met with the defendant's fire chief several years earlier. In that meeting, the attorney was representing a third party in a federal lawsuit against Kern County for antitrust violations based on Kern County's alleged failure to issue ambulance service permits to qualified applicants. The plaintiff's attorney had approached the chief, and they had discussed, among other things, the federal lawsuit against Kern County and the defendant's potential joinder in it.

The defendant moved for the disqualification of the plaintiff's attorney, arguing that the meeting constituted a preliminary consultation giving rise to duties of loyalty and confidentiality to the defendant on the part of the attorney with respect to the subject matter communicated at the meeting. The defendant argued that when the attorney later exploited the meeting and the matters discussed therein as a basis for potential liability in the present lawsuit against the defendant, it allegedly resulted in a conflict of interest warranting the attorney's disqualification [156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 661-662] .

The trial court granted the motion for disqualification. It held that there was sufficient evidence that the plaintiff's attorney had solicited the defendant's participation in the federal lawsuit against Kern County, which gave rise to discussions involving the subject of the instant case. In view of the substantial relationship between the subject matter of the prior conversations and the current litigation, the court concluded that disqualification was necessary. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that as a matter of law the substantial relationship test was not met because there was no evidence that any confidential information was discussed at the meeting. The court held that for purposes of a conflict of interest analysis, if the former contact with the attorney was a preliminary conversation that did not result in professional employment or services, the party seeking disqualification must show, directly or by reasonable inference, that the attorney acquired confidential information in the conversation; in other words, the presumption that confidential information was conveyed does not apply [156 Cal. App. 4th 655, 668] .

In Adams v. Aerojet-General Corporation (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1341, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 116 , the trial court disqualified plaintiff's lawyer and his law firm for an alleged conflict of interest, based upon a finding that the lawyer's former law firm had represented the defendant on a similar matter, while the lawyer was a member of that former firm. The court of appeal reversed and remanded, stating that disqualification should not be ordered where there is no reasonable probability that the firm-switching lawyer had access to confidential information while at the former firm that is related to the current representation (86 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1335-1336, 1340).

When the representation undertaken by a lawyer's old firm is substantially related to the lawyer's current representation, but the lawyer did not personally represent the former client who now seeks disqualification, the court of appeal specified the following review approach for trial courts. The trial court should apply a modified version of the "substantial relationship" test described in H.F. Ahmanson & Co. v. Salomon Brothers, Inc. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1445 (86 Cal. App. 4th. 1324, 1340). The trial court should determine whether confidential information material to the current representation would normally have been imparted to the lawyer during his or her tenure at the former firm. It should focus on the relationship, if any, between the lawyer and the former client's representation. It should consider any time spent by the lawyer working on behalf of the former client and the lawyer's possible exposure to formulation of policy or strategy in matters relating to the current dispute. The trial court should also take into account whether the lawyer worked out of the same branch office that handled the former client's litigation, or whether the lawyer's administrative or management duties may have placed the lawyer in a position where he or she would have been exposed to matters relevant to the current dispute. If a substantial relationship is shown, the lawyer whose disqualification is sought should carry the burden of proof that he or she had no exposure to confidential information relevant to the current action while a member of the former law firm (86 Cal. App. 4th 1324, 1340-1341).

Strasbourger Pearson Tulcin Wolff Inc. v. Wiz Technology, Inc. (1999) 69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 82 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 , was an action by an investment banking firm brought an action against a corporation for which it acted as underwriter for the corporation's public stock offering. The trial court disqualified the plaintiff's law firm for a conflict of interest pursuant to Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E), finding that the law firm represented plaintiff in connection with the underlying stock offering and the representation had been paid for by the corporation.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that an attorney-client relationship must have existed before disqualification is proper (69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 1404) . The fact that the defendant had paid the law firm's attorney fees pursuant to the underlying underwriting agreement was not determinative in itself and the defendant did not thereby show the requisite attorney-client relationship necessary to disqualify the law firm from the case (69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 1404, 1409) . Additionally, any information the law firm had concerning the defendant came from the investment banking firm, its client, and as such could not form the basis for disqualification (69 Cal. App. 4th 1399, 1411) .

In Responsible Citizens v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 , petitioner's law firm provided legal services to a partnership of which respondent was a partner. The trial court found that, as a matter of law, an attorney-client relationship existed between the law firm and respondent. Accordingly, the trial court disqualified petitioner's law firm on the grounds of conflict of interest.

In vacating the trial court's order, the appellate court stated that an attorney representing a partnership does not necessarily have an attorney-client relationship with an individual partner for purposes of applying the conflict of interest rules. Whether a relationship exists turns on finding an agreement, express or implied, that the attorney also represented the partner. Some factors that might support or undercut the implication of an attorney-client relationship with an individual partner in any particular case include the type and size of the partnership, the nature and scope of the attorney's engagement by the partnership, the kind and extent of the contact between the attorney and the individual partner, and the attorney's access to information relating to the individual partner's interests (16 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1733) .

In re Marriage of Zimmerman (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 , was a post dissolution proceeding in which the ex-wife sought to disqualify her former husband's attorney. The ex-wife claimed that she had contacted a partner of her former husband's attorney concerning the matter. The contact consisted of a phone call in which the partner concluded by suggesting that the wife contact an attorney with domestic relations expertise. The partner never represented the ex-wife in the matter. He did not recall that he had spoken to her, nor did he take any notes of the conversation. The trial court denied the motion to disqualify.

In affirming the lower court's decision, the appellate court used the "substantial relationship" test. Under this test, possession of confidential information is presumed if two criteria are met. First, a substantial relationship must have existed between the former representation and the current representation. Second, it must appear that, by virtue of the nature of the former representation or the relationship of the attorney to the former client, confidential information material to the current dispute would normally have been imparted to the attorney. The appellate court concluded that there was no disputing the substantiality of the relationship between the former and the instant litigation since they both involved the same matter (16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 563) . However, the second prong of the test was not met. The ex-wife failed to provide evidence that any confidential information had actually been imparted. Further, the nature of the relationship of the partner was preliminary and peripheral. Consequently, the relationship was not such that confidential information material to the current dispute would normally have been imparted to the attorney (16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 564-565) .

Maruman Integrated Circuits, Inc. v. Consortium Co. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 443, 212 Cal. Rptr. 497 , was a declaratory relief action by a corporation against its former chief executive officer and the developers of a facility contemplated in a long-term lease, to declare the lease void. Plaintiff moved to disqualify defendant officer's attorney on the ground that another of plaintiff's former employees had disclosed confidential information to defendant's attorney. The former employee was an administrator and assistant to the corporate secretary while in plaintiff's employ and later went to work for defendant officer, after defendant officer left plaintiff's employ. Plaintiff specifically claimed that former employee's revelations of conversations she had with plaintiff's attorneys while in plaintiff's employ and her postemployment delivery to defendant's attorney of two letters written between plaintiff and plaintiff's attorneys required disqualification of the attorney. The trial court denied the motion, heard one day before the date set for trial, stating that the motion was unmeritorious and taken for the purpose of delaying trial. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the communications revealed by the former employee were not obtained during an attorney-client relationship between plaintiff and defendant's attorney, and, therefore, plaintiff could not complain of a breach of duty to maintain plaintiff's confidences. Citing Cooke v. Superior Court (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 582, 591, 147 Cal. Rptr. 915 , the court reasoned that confidences acquired in the course of an attorney-client relationship are protected by preventing the recipient of those confidences from representing an adverse party. There was no prior representation of plaintiff by defendant's attorney here (166 Cal. App. 3d 443, 448-449) . The court noted that the Cooke court declined to extend the general rule of confidentiality of attorney-client communications to the situation in which confidential information is communicated by a third party, outside the attorney-client relationship. The policy underlying the rule, to protect a relationship of confidence and trust between client and attorney, did not warrant an extension of the rule (166 Cal. App. 3d 443, 447-448) .

[b] Attorney for Corporation

In Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , the attorney represented two related closely-held corporations and two of the three shareholders of both corporations in a series of actions. The third shareholder moved to disqualify the attorney from representing any of the parties. The trial court disqualified the attorney from concurrently representing the corporations and majority shareholders, but ruled that the attorney could continue to represent the majority shareholders.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that a case involving a corporation and shareholders is distinguishable from other cases involving more separate parties (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 80) . The attorney's representation of the multiple parties was originally a joint representation, not a situation in which there was an existing client and a new client (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 80-82) . The attorney received no information that was confidential as between the clients, and therefore no consent by the corporations was required (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 82) .

Meehan v. Hopps (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 301 P.2d 10 , was an action brought by policyholders, creditors, and stockholders of an insurance company against certain officers and directors for managing company business in violation of their fiduciary duties. Defendants made a motion in the trial to enjoin plaintiffs' law firm from further participation in the case, and from disclosure of confidential information relating to the case. The law firm had represented the corporation, and had obtained information from one of the defendants. The trial court denied the motion.

Defendants appealed the order, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the attorney for a corporation represents the corporation and its stockholders and officers in their representative, not individual capacities (144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290) . It is a corporate officer's duty to disclose all necessary information to the corporation's attorney, and in doing so, the officer has not disclosed any information confidential to himself or herself (144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 293) . The attorney is not disqualified from representing the corporation in an action brought by it against one of its officers, since a confidential attorney-client relationship between the attorney and the officer personally never existed (144 Cal. App. 2d 284, 290) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Confidential Attorney-Client Relationship Required

In Ochoa v. Fordel, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 898, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 277 , the court of appeal held that mere access to or opportunity to obtain confidential information does not create a substantial relationship that mandates attorney disqualification (146 Cal. App. 4th 898, 911-912) .

In Derivi Construction & Architecture, Inc. v. Wong (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 329 , the court of appeal held that an attorney was not disqualified from representing a client solely because the attorney's spouse worked for a firm that had previously been disqualified in that suit. The court agreed that, under the imputed knowledge theory, knowledge by any member of a law firm is imputed to all attorneys in the firm, whether partners or associates, and that disqualification of an attorney extends vicariously to the entire firm (118 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1273) . The court rejected the argument, however, that there should be a double imputation of knowledge from the disqualified firm to the firm of the spouse of an attorney in the disqualified firm (118 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1275-1276) .

In Ward v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 23, 138 Cal. Rptr. 532 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate compelling the superior court to vacate its order disqualifying the county counsel from the case. The suit involved a county assessor who sued county supervisors and certain city employees for defamation and violation of civil rights. The assessor argued that because the county counsel had worked with the tax assessor's office, and now represented the defendants, the county counsel should be disqualified. The court of appeal held that because the county counsel's client is the county, and not any individual officer, and because the counsel's relations with the assessor dealt with the operation of the tax assessor's office, which was public information, no confidential attorney-client relationship existed between the counsel and the complaining party (70 Cal. App. 3d 23, 34-35) . When no attorney-client relationship ever existed, it is error for a trial court to grant a motion disqualifying the attorney from participation in the case (70 Cal. App. 3d 23, 36) .

Kraus v. Davis (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 484, 85 Cal. Rptr. 846 , involved a case in which certain defendants refused to testify at depositions, and argued against a motion to compel answers, alleging that the attorney for plaintiffs formerly held an attorney-client relationship with some of the defendants. The motion to compel was granted, and defendants appealed the order. Plaintiffs moved to dismiss the appeal. At the hearing on the motion to dismiss, both parties stipulated that the appeal should be heard as an appeal from the lower court order overruling defendants' objection to the participation of plaintiffs' attorney.

The court of appeal sustained the lower court's ruling that the attorney was not disqualified. The attorney had previously practiced law with one of the defendants, who had served as attorney for some of the other defendants. There was no evidence indicating that the attorney had acquired any knowledge of confidential affairs of any of the parties, or that he had ever represented them either alone or in association with another attorney. Under those circumstances, no attorney-client relationship was found (6 Cal. App. 3d 484, 491) . The court of appeal held that if the relationship of attorney and client was never in fact created between the attorney and the complaining party, the attorney will not be disqualified for acting against that party, on behalf of another (6 Cal. App. 3d 484, 490) .

In Towns v. Towns (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 88, 96 P.2d 971 , plaintiff brought an action to cancel an assignment of a portion of his interest in an estate. Plaintiff and his brothers had originally agreed to each make such assignments to defendant, and defendant's attorney had drawn up the requested documents. The trial court found for defendant, and plaintiff appealed the judgment. One contention on appeal was that the trial court erred in permitting defendant's attorney to participate, since he had earlier performed services for plaintiff. The court of appeal upheld the judgment, and said that because the attorney had merely prepared documents for plaintiff, there was no evidence of confidentiality in the relationship between the two. An attorney-client relationship sufficient to disqualify the attorney from representing an adverse party must also be a confidential relationship (36 Cal. App. 2d 88, 91) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.29

§ 24.29 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Client Consented to Adverse Representation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 24.28.]

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED FROM THE CASE BECAUSE THE COMPLAINING PARTY CONSENTED TO THE ATTORNEY'S ADVERSE REPRESENTATION.

A. Client's Consent Prevents Disqualification. The rule prohibiting an attorney from engaging in representation adverse to a client or former client does not apply when that client has expressly or impliedly consented to the adverse representation (People v. Rocco (1930) 209 Cal. 68, 72-73, 285 P. 704 ; Sharp v. Next Entertainment, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37 ; Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1303, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 ; Cornish v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 467, 478, 257 Cal. Rptr. 383 ; People v. Johnson (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 884, 892, 164 Cal. Rptr. 746 ; see Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 3-310(E)).

[Optional] B. Substantial Relationship Test Is Not Necessarily Dispositive in Case Involving Former Joint Clients. When the former representation involves joint clients, whether the attorney may be disqualified turns more upon whether the subsequent representation is within the scope of the consent of the former joint clients, as opposed to whether there is a substantial relationship between the subsequent and former representation (Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1294-1295, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a party's motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in a civil or criminal case, when the moving party has given express or implied consent to the adverse representation. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may combine this form with §§ 24.28, 24.30-24.32.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case, such as the memorandum set out in § 24.24.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should refer to facts in declarations and attached exhibits submitted in opposition to the motion that tend to establish consent by the former client to the adverse relationship. For example, counsel may refer in his or her argument to a written waiver signed by the former client; to evidence tending to establish that advice was rendered to the former client to retain separate counsel; and to admissions made at a deposition.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for written consent and disclosure to joint representation, and to consent by former client to adverse subsequent representation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics, § 72.190 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Client's Consent Prevents Disqualification

People v. Rocco (1930) 209 Cal. 68, 285 P. 704 , was an appeal by one of two codefendants from a superior court judgment of conviction in a criminal case. Among other contentions, the appellant argued that the trial court erred in not permitting the two attorneys appointed to represent the two defendants to withdraw. The attorneys had acted jointly in preparing the defense and had received confidential communications from each of the defendants. On receipt of the information, the two attorneys determined that it would be unethical for them to continue, either jointly or separately, and moved the court to withdraw, intimating that the defenses of the two defendants were adverse to each other. The superior court denied the motion to withdraw after lengthy discussion with counsel and with defendants separately.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment and the lower court's refusal to permit withdrawal. The record showed that defendants had knowledge of any possible conflicts of interest, and because they expressly consented to the continued representation of the attorneys in spite of that knowledge, they waived any of the rights to disqualify counsel that were being asserted on their behalf (209 Cal. 68, 72-73) .

In Sharp v. Next Entertainment, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 37 , the Writer's Guild of America investigated litigation against reality television employers for wage and house litigation. The Guild recruited employees of the reality television shows to act as named plaintiffs in two class action suits. A law firm that had represented the Guild in previous cases represented the employees in the suits. The employees were informed that the Guild would subsidize the cost of the litigation. Each of the employees signed a conflict waiver acknowledging that the Guild would subsidize the attorney's fees for the class action lawsuits and that the firm represented the Guild in other matters.

The defendants brought a motion to disqualify the plaintiff's law firm, arguing that the Guild conceived, developed, and implemented the class action lawsuits to advance its efforts to organize employees working on reality television programming. The trial court denied the disqualification motion, holding that the Guild had not taken any direct action to interfere with the efforts to obtain maximum compensation for class members nor any steps to ascertain the defendants' counter-organizing strategy. However, the trial court was concerned about potential conflicts of interests and the hypothetical possibility that the Guild would control, influence, or interfere with the lawsuits.

The court of appeal held that, while there was a potential conflict, the plaintiffs had adequately consented in writing under Rule 3-310(A)(2) to continued representation by the Guild's attorneys [163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 431]. The court further held that each potential class member was not required to sign a waiver because the class certification process would address any potential conflict [163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 432-433]. In addition, the court noted the fact that the motion to disqualify was brought by opposition parties who are not directly touched by the purported conflict. The court stated that it was skeptical of the defendants' motive for making the motion [163 Cal. App. 4th 410, 432-433].

In Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 , counsel at one point represented both Zador and Kwan in a lawsuit regarding a transfer of property. Several cross-complaints were filed between the numerous parties. After counsel advised Kwan to retain a separate attorney, Zador sued Kwan. Kwan moved to disqualify counsel based on his previous representation of Kwan. The trial court granted the motion and Zador appealed (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1292) .

The court of appeal discussed at length the policy, history and cases involving disqualification of counsel for one party after there had been joint representation of both parties. The court then reviewed the details of this case. The court found that counsel, before undertaking to represent Kwan, gave Kwan an extensive "consent form" which set out the potential conflicts and advised that actual conflicts might arise. The consent form stated that if an actual conflict arose, counsel would so advise Kwan, but provided that if that should occur, Kwan would not seek to disqualify counsel from representing Zador. Kwan studied the consent form, discussed it with counsel, and then signed it. Some time later, it appeared to counsel that there was a likely conflict. He so advised Kwan and suggested that he retain a separate attorney. Counsel again asked Kwan to agree that he could continue to represent Zador and Kwan agreed. Counsel confirmed their discussion in writing. Later, after Kwan had retained an independent attorney, Zador cross-complained against Kwan. Kwan moved to disqualify counsel (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300) .

The court of appeal reversed the trial court and held that not every conflict of interest requires disqualification. Where one party has executed detailed informed consent and has explicitly agreed that counsel could continue to represent the other party, disqualification was improper. The court of appeal also observed that Kwan had waited almost three years after the conflict became apparent to move to disqualify counsel. The court noted that motions to disqualify are sometimes used as litigation tactics and that fact could be considered in its determination (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300-1303) .

In Cornish v. Superior Court (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 467, 257 Cal. Rptr. 383 , the court of appeal denied a peremptory writ of mandate to a plaintiff who sought to disqualify defense counsel on the ground that defense counsel had represented plaintiff in prior matters related to the litigation at hand and had thereby acquired confidential information. At the time defendant's counsel represented plaintiff in the prior matters, plaintiff had maintained an attorney-client relationship with his own personal attorney. Prior to agreeing to represent plaintiff, defendant's counsel wrote to plaintiff's personal attorney advising him that it (defendant's counsel) would only represent plaintiff on the condition that no conflict of interest would be deemed to exist if plaintiff and defendant became adversaries in future litigation. The court found that at the time of the prior representation, plaintiff knew that defendant's counsel considered defendant its primary client and knew that in the event of a conflict between plaintiff and defendant, defendant's counsel would continue to represent defendant (209 Cal. App. 3d 467, 478) .

People v. Johnson (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 884, 164 Cal. Rptr. 746 , involved an appeal from a superior court judgment of conviction in a criminal case. The defendant appealed, arguing that his motion to suppress evidence should have been granted, and contending for the first time on appeal that the district attorney should have been disqualified because his law firm had represented the defendant in an earlier action based on the same facts.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, and held that the motion to suppress had properly been denied. With regard to the district attorney, the court said that it would not be proper for a district attorney to prosecute a client or former client, without the client's consent, when the attorney had obtained confidential information from the client regarding the subject matter of the case. Therefore, the superior court could have disqualified the district attorney from the case (105 Cal. App. 3d 884, 891) . However, because defendant had not made the appropriate motion, there was no evidence that either the superior court or the district attorney was aware of the potential conflict. Since defendant was in the best position to assert that conflict, and since he never raised the issue at trial, he impliedly consented to the adverse representation. When the former client either expressly or impliedly consents to the adverse representation, the attorney will not be disqualified (105 Cal. App. 3d 884, 892) .

Counsel should note that some cases cited in this memorandum were decided prior to the enactment of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310, the current rule prohibiting an attorney from engaging in representation adverse to a client or former client. Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) provides that a member must not, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client or former client when, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the member has obtained confidential information material to the employment.

[b] Substantial Relationship Test Is Not Necessarily Dispositive in Case Involving Former Joint Clients

In Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 , a corporate client appealed after the trial court disqualified its attorney. The disqualification was a ruling on a motion made by a former client of the attorney, in consideration of which the trial court concluded that there was a substantial relationship between the current action and the attorney's prior representation of the former client and moving party.

The Court of appeal reversed, noting that the present and former clients had been joint clients in the former representation by the attorney. In a joint client case, disqualification does not turn on a substantial relationship test, but on whether subsequent representation is within the scope of the consent of the former joint clients. A substantial relationship between the former joint representation and the subsequent representation is inherent; it determines whether confidences that could impact the subsequent representation were disclosed in former representation, and such disclosure necessarily occurs in a joint client situation (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1294-1295) . In this instance, the record showed that, in fact, the former joint client had executed a detailed waiver and consent form agreeing not to disqualify the attorney notwithstanding any adversity that might subsequently develop between the joint clients. Thus the court concluded that the trial court erred in granting a disqualification based on a test that was not dispositive under the circumstances of the case (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300-1303) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Client's Consent Prevents Disqualification

Grauberger v. Light (1932) 127 Cal. App. 576, 16 P.2d 188 , was an appeal from a judgment against plaintiff in an action to rescind a contract of employment between plaintiff and her attorneys. Plaintiff was the administrator of her deceased husband's estate in California, and hired defendant attorneys to represent her interests in his estate in Colorado. The attorneys sought to enforce a claim against the estate in California on behalf of a third party. Plaintiff alleged that the attorneys fraudulently induced her to enter into the contract with them, and used her knowledge of the estate against her. The superior court ruled in favor of defendants. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The evidence indicated that the third-party claim had been filed against the estate before plaintiff hired defendants to represent her in Colorado. Plaintiff knew the attorneys represented the claimant at the time she hired them. The court of appeal held that although an attorney may not assume a position adverse to a client, there is an exception when the client gives informed consent to the adverse representation (127 Cal. App. 576, 579) .

19 of 163 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.30

§ 24.30 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Previous Mutual Representation of Parties

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 24.28.]

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED WHEN HE/SHE FORMERLY REPRESENTED BOTH THE COMPLAINING AND THE OPPOSING PARTY ON A MATTER OF MUTUAL INTEREST, AND CURRENTLY REPRESENTS ONLY ONE OF THEM.

Former Mutual Representation Prevents Disqualification. When the attorney previously represented both the complaining and the opposing party together in a matter of their common interest with their consent, and with the attorney's full disclosure to both, the attorney will not be disqualified for later representing one against the other in the same matter (Arden v. State Bar (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 310, 317-319, 341 P.2d 6 ; Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1303, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 ; Croce v. Superior Court (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 18, 20, 68 P.2d 369).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a party's motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case, when the attorney formerly represented both the complaining and the opposing party on a matter of mutual interest. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may combine this form with §§ 24.28, 24.29, 24.31.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation, such as the memorandum set out in § 24.24.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Former Mutual Representation May Prevent Disqualification

Arden v. State Bar (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 310, 341 P.2d 6 , was a proceeding to review a recommendation by the Board of Governors of the State Bar that an attorney be suspended for misconduct. The attorney represented both a woman seeking adoption of her child and the couple who adopted the child. The attorney later assisted in the representation of the couple at a hearing on the woman's petition to revoke consent to the adoption. A committee of the State Bar found that the attorney had violated the Rule of Professional Conduct prohibiting an attorney from accepting employment adverse to a client or former client without the client's consent.

The Supreme Court ruled against suspension and held that the attorney had not violated the rule against adverse employment. The Court stated that when an attorney who represents one party in an action formerly represented both parties mutually, the representation is proper. The Court reasoned that the common employment of the attorney removed the communications of the parties to each other and to the attorney from being privileged. Since the communications are not confidential when the adverse party already has heard them, there is no impropriety in later adverse representation on the same matter by the attorney (52 Cal. 2d 310, 318) . The Court added, however, that this exception to the rule against adverse employment would apply only when there is full disclosure of all information between the attorney and all clients during the time of mutual representation (52 Cal. 2d 310, 319) .

In Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 , counsel at one point represented both Zador and Kwan in a lawsuit regarding a transfer of property. Several cross-complaints were filed between the numerous parties. After counsel advised Kwan to retain a separate attorney, Zador sued Kwan. Kwan moved to disqualify counsel based on his previous representation of Kwan. The trial court granted the motion, and Zador appealed (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1292) .

The court of appeal discussed at length the policy, history and cases involving disqualification of counsel for one party after there had been joint representation of both parties. The court then reviewed the details of this case and found that counsel, before undertaking to represent Kwan, gave Kwan an extensive "consent form" which set out the potential conflicts and advised that actual conflicts might arise. The consent form stated that if an actual conflict arose, counsel would so advise Kwan, but provided that if that should occur, Kwan would not seek to disqualify counsel from representing Zador. Kwan studied the consent form, discussed it with counsel, and then signed it. Some time later, it appeared to counsel that there was a likely conflict. He so advised Kwan and suggested that he retain a separate attorney. Counsel again asked Kwan to agree that he could continue to represent Zador and Kwan agreed. Counsel confirmed their discussion in writing. Later, after Kwan retained an independent attorney, Zador cross-complained against Kwan. Kwan moved to disqualify counsel (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300) .

The court of appeal reversed the trial court and held that not every conflict of interest requires disqualification. When one party executed detailed informed consent and explicitly agreed that counsel could continue to represent the other party, disqualification was improper. The court also observed that Kwan waited almost three years after the conflict became apparent to move to disqualify counsel. The court noted that motions to disqualify are sometimes used as litigation tactics and that fact could be considered in its determination (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300-1303) .

Croce v. Superior Court (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 18, 68 P.2d 369 , involved litigation of the issue of whether a partnership existed. The parties disputing the matter had earlier been represented by one attorney, who handled their business enterprise and later represented only one client, plaintiff, in the litigation against the other business associates. Defendants moved to disqualify plaintiff's attorney, asserting that he had acquired confidential information from defendants that he would be in a position to use against them in the case. The trial court denied the motion, and defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel disqualification. The court of appeal sustained the trial court's ruling. The court held that when two or more parties hire the same attorney to handle a matter of common interest, the communications between the parties and the attorney are not confidential and privileged as between any of the parties and the attorney. When a previous confidential communication is presented as the basis for disqualifying an attorney from later representing one party against the other, the motion to disqualify should be denied (21 Cal. App. 2d 18, 20) .

It should be noted that at least one case has questioned, but not overruled Croce [see Industrial Indem. Co. v. Great American Ins. Co. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 529, 536, 538, 140 Cal. Rptr. 806] . In that case, the court said that the joint-clients exception to the rule against representation adverse to a former client should only apply when the joint representation was undertaken with full disclosure of conflicting interests, and with written consent of the clients (73 Cal. App. 3d 529, 538) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] In General

The facts and procedural background of Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , are discussed in § 24.28[3][b]. There, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order disqualifying counsel from representing the corporations but permitting counsel to continue to represent the two majority shareholders on the ground that counsel could not simultaneously represent the corporations and the two majority shareholders in the action because the two shareholders, as directors, were accused of embezzling from the corporations, which created a conflict of interest between the corporations and the two majority shareholders (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 74) . In permitting the lawyer to continue to represent the majority shareholders, the court reasoned that counsel would likely hold a residual bias in favor of the majority shareholders, even if the court permitted counsel to continue representation of the corporations only (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 81) . The court rejected the argument that the lawyer should be disqualified under Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) for possessing confidential information that could prejudice the corporations, finding that there was no confidential information particular to the corporations, because the majority shareholders were "the sole repositories" of all corporate information (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 82) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.31

§ 24.31 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Present Representation Not in Conflict With Previous Representation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 24.28.]

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED BECAUSE HIS/HER REPRESENTATION OF THE MOVING PARTY WAS UNRELATED TO, OR NOT IN CONFLICT WITH, HIS/HER REPRESENTATION OF AN ADVERSE PARTY IN THIS ACTION.

A. No Conflict With Earlier Employment. An attorney will not be disqualified from representing a party on the grounds that he or she formerly represented an adverse party, if the former employment involved matters unrelated to, or not in conflict with, the present representation (In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 145, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597, 194 P.3d 330 ; Abbott v. United States Internal Revenue Service (9th Cir. 2005) 399 F.3d 1083, 1086-1087 ; Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1581, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 ; see Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 573, 15 P.2d 505).

[Optional] B. Former Government Employee's Current Law Firm. A motion by the government for vicarious disqualification of the adverse party's law firm, made on the ground that one of the firm's members used to be a government employee, should be denied when there is no evidence that the member had acquired pertinent confidential information while employed by the government, and when the law firm has screened that member from participation in the subject action (see Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 903, 175 Cal. Rptr. 575).

[Optional] C. Former Judicial Officer's Current Law Firm. A motion for vicarious disqualification of the adverse party's law firm, made on the ground that one of the firm's members was formerly a judicial officer who had heard earlier proceedings in the subject action, should be denied when there is no showing of an actual conflict of interest and when any appearance of impropriety is overcome by a showing that the firm screened the attorney from participation in the subject action (see Higdon v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 1680, 278 Cal. Rptr. 588).

[Optional] D. No Confidential Information Obtained in Earlier Employment. An attorney may accept employment adverse to a former client if the matter has no relationship to confidential information acquired by reason of or in the course of employment by the former client. Confidential information is initially determined by whether the former representation is substantially related to the current representation (Elliott v. McFarland Unified School Dist. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 568-569, 211 Cal. Rptr. 802). If there has been a determination that the former representation is substantially related to the current representation, then the court must determine whether the nature of the contact with the attorney was such that confidential information material to the dispute would have been disclosed (In re Marriage of Zimmerman (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 563-564, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132).

[Optional] E. Earlier Representation of a Different Plaintiff in Mediation in a Related Case Against the Same Defendant Does Not Require Disqualification. An attorney who represented a different plaintiff in an earlier, related case against the same defendant need not be disqualified from representing the plaintiff in the instant action, even if the attorney may have acquired confidential information regarding the defendant during a mediation in the previous case (Barajas v. Oren (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 209, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62).

[Optional] F. No Disqualification of Lawyer's Former Firm Required When No Opportunity for Confidential Information to Be Divulged. An attorney's presumed possession of confidential information concerning a former client does not automatically cause the attorney's former firm to be vicariously disqualified when no one other than the departed attorney had any dealings with the client or obtained confidential information (Goldberg v. Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 762-766, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116).

[Optional] G. Presumption of Automatic Vicarious Disqualification is Rebuttable. The presumption that an attorney's entire law firm is vicariously disqualified from representing a client adverse to the attorney's former client may be rebutted by evidence of effective ethical screening (Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 620).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a party's motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case when the attorney's relationship with the moving party either does not conflict with the attorney's representation of an adverse party in the present action, or does not involve the same subject matter as that of the present action. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may combine this form with §§ 24.28-24.30.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case such as the memorandum set out in § 24.24.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Conflict With Earlier Employment

In re Charlisse C. (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 145, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 597, 194 P.3d 330 , involved the Children's Law Center of Los Angeles (CLC), a publically-funded, nonprofit law office that represented parties in dependency court. CLC included three units: a core unit (Unit 1) and two conflict units (Units 2 and 3). Unit 3 represented Charlisse when a juvenile dependency petition was filed alleging that she was at substantial risk of being abused or neglected due to the emotional and mental problems of her mother, Shadonna C. Shadonna was a former client of CLC's Unit 1, and objected to CLC's representation of Charlisse. Shadonna argued that CLC's prior representation of her substantially related to CLC's current representation of Charlisse, that disqualification was appropriate unless CLC showed that it maintained ethical walls among its units, and that CLC's overlapping administrative structure created a de facto conflict of interest for every client with an adverse interest to another client. The juvenile court granted the disqualification motion, holding that CLC breached any purported ethical walls between its units and thereby created the appearance of a conflict of interest.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that in a successive representation case such as this one, disqualification turned on the likelihood that confidential information relating to the prior representation would be shared with or be readily accessible to the current attorney. The court of appeal held that Shadonna failed to establish such a likelihood, and, therefore, disqualification was unwarranted.

The California Supreme Court agreed. It held that the juvenile court applied the stricter standard required in simultaneous representation cases instead of the standard applicable in successive representation cases. It held that in successive representation cases, the primary fiduciary value to be protected is client confidences, whereas in simultaneous representation cases the primary fiduciary value is loyalty [45 Cal. 4th 145, 159-160]. The Court held that in this successive representation case, involving vicarious disqualification of the entire CLC, the juvenile court should have determined whether CLC adequately protected, and would continue to adequately protect, Shadonna's confidences through timely, appropriate, and effective screening measures and/or structural safeguards [45 Cal. 4th 145, 165]. The Court also noted that the standard for a nonprofit law firm should be less strict. A nonprofit law firm does not have the same financial incentives as a private firm insofar as the clients do not pay for the services; therefore no single client becomes more important than others [45 Cal. 4th 145, 165]. The Court held that whether CLC's disqualification is warranted turns on the likelihood that the Unit 3 attorney representing Charlisse had obtained or would acquire, either intentionally or inadvertently, confidential information CLC acquired through Unit 1's prior representation of Shadonna [45 Cal. 4th 145, 166].

The Court also held that the evidentiary burden on the disqualification issue should not fall on Shadonna, the party seeking disqualification. Instead, the Court held, the burden should be on CLC to show that the confidential information acquired during Unit 1's prior representation of Shadonna had been, and would be, adequately protected during Unit 3's representation of Charlisse. The Court held that CLC should have this burden because it has unique access to the relevant information [45 Cal. 4th 145, 166].

In Abbott v. United States Internal Revenue Service (9th Cir. 2005) 399 F.3d 1083, 1086-1087 , Ann Sexton Peterson was executor of the estate of Lucille Abbott Sexton. On behalf of the estate, Peterson filed a tax return, which the IRS audited. The IRS ruled that the estate owed substantially more tax. During settlement negotiations with the IRS, Peterson was represented by Dennis Harkavy, a lawyer and CPA. During the period he represented the estate, Harkavy was also employed as a consultant by the IRS in an unrelated matter. When Peterson learned of this employment, she moved the Tax Court to set aside the settlement agreement on the ground that the estate had not been properly represented. The Tax Court denied her motion, holding that there was "no credible evidence" that Harkavy failed to properly represent the estate. Peterson appealed.

The Ninth Circuit affirmed the Tax Court's judgment. The court held there was no evidence that Harkavy's employment by the IRS was adverse to the estate. In addition, the court held there was no evidence that Harkavy disclosed any confidential information of the estate to the IRS (399 F.3d 1083, 1086-1087) .

In Rhaburn v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 , at issue was whether a public defender whose office had previously represented a witness for the prosecution was subject to automatic disqualification for conflict of interest under Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E). The trial court held that the public defender should be disqualified.

The court of appeal disagreed. It held that the trial court erred in applying a rigid rule of vicarious disqualification. Here, the public defender did not have a direct and personal relationship with the witness, and the direct acquisition of confidential information should not have been presumed. Instead, the appellate court held, the trial court should have evaluated the totality of the circumstances in determining whether there was a reasonable possibility that the individual attorney representing defendant either had obtained confidential information about the witness collected by his or her office, or might inadvertently acquire such information through file review, office conversation, or otherwise. The court held that in cases that do not involve direct and personal representation of the witness, trial courts should accept counsel's representation that he or she had not come into possession of any confidential information acquired from the witness and would not seek to do so (140 Cal. App. 4th 1566, 1581) .

Wutchumna Water Co. v. Bailey (1932) 216 Cal. 564, 15 P.2d 505 , is discussed in § 24.24[3][b]. An attorney switched sides in an action, and one of the parties brought suit in superior court to enjoin him from further participation in the case. The lower court found for the attorney, and the Supreme Court reversed. Analyzing a wide range of authority, the Court attempted to clarify when conduct opposing a former client is impermissible, and when it is proper. The Court noted that text writers condensed earlier case law into a rule that an attorney who represented one client is not precluded from accepting employment adverse to that client in a matter that is unrelated to the previous employment. Nor is the attorney precluded from representing a second client even in the same general matter when the second employment is not actually adverse to the first (216 Cal. 564, 573) .

[b] Former Government Employee's Current Law Firm

In Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 175 Cal. Rptr. 575 , plaintiffs sued the state for negligence in a personal injury action. The state moved to disqualify plaintiffs' law firm on the ground that a member of the firm was previously employed by the state. The state contended that the attorney in question, while employed by the state, had access to confidential information from similar cases, and had discussed the subject case itself with another employee. An opposing declaration by the attorney in question, stated that while employed by the state he had never worked on the subject case, and had only briefly discussed its facts with another attorney. Further, the declaration stated that the attorney's current firm screened him from any participation in the subject suit, and that he had specifically conditioned his employment with the firm on a refusal to discuss any cases he had worked on as a state employee. The trial court granted the state's motion and denied plaintiffs' motion for reconsideration. Plaintiffs then sought a writ of mandate in the court of appeal.

The court of appeal issued the writ, compelling the trial court to deny the state's motion. The court noted initially that vicarious disqualification of a former government employee's current law firm was an issue of first impression in California (121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 894) . It then stated that a conflict in representation requires a threatened disclosure of confidential information acquired from the former client (121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 897) . The court cited with approval several federal cases dealing with vicarious disqualification of former government employees' current law firms, that held that when there is no actual threatened disclosure of confidential information acquired from the government, as, for example, when a law firm has screened the attorney in question from participation in the action, other policy considerations outweigh any need to disqualify. Such policy considerations include, among others, the interest of the government and law firms in hiring attorneys, the interest of attorneys in finding jobs after leaving employment with the government, and the interests of the client both in hiring the law firm of his or her choice, and in avoiding prejudice resulting from having to change law firms during the course of litigation (121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 900-902) . The court applied this reasoning to the case at hand, and held that the trial court had abused its discretion by disqualifying the plaintiffs' law firm, since, under the facts, there was no evidence of a threatened disclosure of confidential information. The court added that disqualification of plaintiffs' attorneys some three years after the action was commenced, would result in undue prejudice and delay (121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 903) .

[c] Former Judicial Officer's Current Law Firm

Higdon v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 278 Cal. Rptr. 588 , involved two marital dissolution actions in which the wives sought to disqualify the law firm representing their husbands. One of the associates for the husbands' law firm had been a judicial officer and had heard earlier proceedings in the dissolution actions. The wives cited no actual conflict of interest, but claimed that the representation was improper because it created the appearance of impropriety. The trial court granted the motions for disqualification of the husbands' entire law firm, holding that the representation would indeed give the appearance of impropriety.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the vicarious disqualification, made without an inquiry into whether the associate was screened from the two dissolution cases, was an abuse of judicial discretion. The court stressed that there had been no actual conflict shown, and noted that generally, a judge's role in a court proceeding does not afford the opportunity for receipt of confidential information. The court directed the trial court to conduct a further hearing at which the husbands' law firm would have the burden to show that effective screening had taken place. The court noted that appropriate screening would include both screening from participation in and receipt of fees from the dissolution cases (227 Cal. App. 3d 1667, 1680) .

However, in Cho v. Superior Court (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 113, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 863 , discussed in § 24.24[3][h], a former judge was now "of counsel" to one of the parties' law firms but had acquired confidential information from the parties during settlement discussions in the same case while still on the bench. The court of appeal distinguished that case from Higdon, and held that even with the extensive screening mechanisms in place, the vital importance of maintaining confidences disclosed in settlement discussions required disqualification of the entire firm.

The 9th Circuit addressed the disqualification of a former judicial officer's current law firm in In re County of Los Angeles (Forsyth) (9th Circuit 2000) 223 F.3d 990 , also discussed in § 24.24[3][h]. The court, predicting California law based on the recent development in California case law, held that the vicarious disqualification of a law firm does not automatically follow the personal disqualification of a former settlement judge, when the former settlement judge presided over negotiations that were substantially related, but not identical, to a current case involving a law firm client (223 F.3d 990, 997) . As in Higdon, the court held that screening mechanisms that are implemented in a timely and effective way, can rebut the presumption that a lawyer has contaminated the entire firm (223 F.3d 990, 996) .

[d] No Confidential Information Obtained in Earlier Employment

In Elliott v. McFarland Unified School Dist. (1985) 165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 211 Cal. Rptr. 802 , defendant school district (original district) employed plaintiff teacher for four years, during which time he accumulated unused vacation time. When he was transferred to the newly created defendant school district (new district), he was partially paid for the unused vacation time. After plaintiff's demand for payment or credit was refused, he filed a writ of mandate to compel payment. A school legal services organization (the organization) initially represented both defendants in the mandamus proceedings. The organization provided legal services to school districts under a joint powers agreement. After the organization filed memoranda on behalf of both defendants and arranged a continuance, the organization called to the new district's attention a conflict in the legal positions of defendants. The new district substituted county counsel for the organization as its legal representative. Four days before trial, the new district filed a cross complaint against the original district, an objection to counsel, and a demand to disqualify counsel of the original district. The trial court denied the objection without prejudice. Defendant new district appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court described a joint powers agreement to which both defendants were parties, which included a paragraph constituting written consent to the organization's continued representation of the original district. The court noted that if the organization were to be disqualified in plaintiff's proceeding it would have to be for violation of former Rules of Professional Conduct, Rule 4-101 (protecting confidential information obtained from former client; now see (Rules of Prof. Cond., Rule 3-310). Rule 4-101 is aimed to protect the confidential relationship between attorney and client, but nothing in the rule prohibits an attorney from accepting employment adverse to a former client if the matter has no relationship to confidential information acquired by reason of or in the course of employment by the former client. Confidential information is initially determined by whether the former representation is substantially related to the current representation (165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 568-569) . Absent a showing of a substantial relationship, courts have been reluctant to disqualify attorneys despite misgivings about the attorney's conduct. The organization merely filed a memorandum brief arguing plaintiff's petition was without merit; no presumption of disclosure of confidential information arose from that relationship. The organization did not advise the new district how to handle plaintiff's claim to minimize the possibility of liability or how to preserve a claim for indemnity against the original district and then later represent the latter. In addition, the parties entered into an agreement to preserve the benefits of common representation while anticipating the situation that arose. To permit disqualification without a showing that privileged or confidential information was imparted to the organization in connection with the prior representation would defeat the purpose of the agreement. The declarations filed by the new district to support a finding of the imparting of confidential information contained only conclusory allegations and set forth nothing to show the nature of alleged confidential communications or their relationship to any factual issue or tactical decision. A party seeking disqualification is not required to disclose the actual communications it contends are confidential, but conclusory statements are insufficient. A requirement that there be some showing of the nature of the communications or a statement of how they relate to the current representation without disclosing what was actually communicated is not burdensome or prejudicial (165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 570-572) . By signing the joint powers agreement, the new district waived its right to disqualify the organization from representing other signatures to that agreement based on a presumption of a substantial relationship between the organization's former representation and its current representation. It did not waive its right to disqualify the organization if the organization acquired in the former representation confidential information pertaining to the current representation. However, the new district offered no substantial evidence that it had imparted confidential information to the organization (165 Cal. App. 3d 562, 573) .

For a discussion of In re Marriage of Zimmerman (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 556, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 132 , see § 24.28[3][a].

[e] Confidential Information Obtained in Mediation in Related Action Against Same Defendant

In Barajas v. Oren (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 209, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 62 , the defendant moved to disqualify plaintiffs' attorney on the ground that he previously represented a different plaintiff in an earlier related case against the same defendant. The defendant alleged that plaintiffs' attorney had obtained confidential information regarding the defendant in the successful mediation of the previous case. The trial court granted the motion, based on the proposition that, to promote full disclosure at mediations, Evid. Code § 1152.5(a)(3), requiring that all communications by and between participants in a mediation remain confidential, mandates that an attorney who represents a plaintiff in a mediation is disqualified from representing a different plaintiff in a related case against the same defendant.

The court of appeal reversed. The court found that the language and history of Evid. Code § 1152.5 reflect an intent to promote and encourage mediation, and that although the trial court's mediation-disqualification interpretation of Evid. Code § 1152.5 might encourage defendants to be forthcoming in mediation, it would discourage plaintiffs from agreeing to mediate (57 Cal. App. 4th 209, 213) . The court also found that if disqualification in different-but-related cases after mediation were required, disqualification in the very same case would necessarily also be required after unsuccessful mediation (57 Cal. App. 4th 209, 215) . Examining the language and history of Evid. Code § 1152.5 and mediation practices common at the time of enactment of that section, the court found that a mediation-disqualification rule conflicts with legislative intent of Evid. Code § 1152.5, so that an attorney may participate in mediation without exposing himself or herself to disqualification in other cases (57 Cal. App. 4th 209, 217-219) .

[f] No Disqualification of Lawyer's Former Firm Required When No Opportunity for Confidential Information to Be Divulged

In Goldberg v. Warner/Chappell Music, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 762-766, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 116 , Ilene Goldberg sued her former employer for wrongful termination. Goldberg moved to disqualify the employer's counsel, Mitchell Silberberg & Knupp LLP (MS&K). Goldberg claimed that six years earlier she had consulted with J. Eugene Salomon, a former partner with MS&K who had left the firm three years prior to the underlying lawsuit. The consultation involved Goldberg's written contract with her employer. MS&K argued in opposition to the disqualification motion that the consultation had been brief and informal, and that no one else at MS&K had any knowledge concerning either the consultation or any confidential information imparted to Salomon. The trial court denied the motion to disqualify. Goldberg appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the trial court's denial of the disqualification motion. The court first summarized the relevant law: Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) provides that an attorney "shall not, without the informed written consent of the client or former client, accept employment adverse to the client, or former client where, by reason of the representation of the client or former client, the member has obtained confidential information material to the employment" (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 759) . The court held that an attorney must be disqualified when representing a party adverse to a former client if the attorney possesses confidential information that could be helpful to the new client and hurtful to the old (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 759) . In addition, if a substantial relationship exists between the former representation and the current representation, and if it appears that confidential information material to the current dispute would normally be imparted to the attorney or to subordinates for whose legal work the attorney was responsible, the attorney's knowledge of confidential information is presumed (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 759) . The court further noted that if an attorney is disqualified from representation due to an ethical conflict, the disqualification extends to the entire firm (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 759) .

However, the court noted a limited exception to the conclusive presumption if the attorney can show there was no opportunity to divulge confidential information (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 760) . If Salomon were still working at MS&K, MS&K would likely be disqualified from the Goldberg litigation because there would be no practical way of ensuring that, despite his best intentions, Salomon would not inadvertently disclose confidential information. But, the court held, Salomon was no longer with MS&K. Therefore, there was no possibility that he would inadvertently pass on confidential information to his colleagues. It was appropriate for the trial court to assess whether Salomon actually passed on confidential information. Since the court found he had not, there was no basis for disqualification (125 Cal. App. 4th 752, 762) .

[g] Presumption of Automatic Vicarious Disqualification is Rebuttable

Kirk v. First American Title Ins. Co. (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 620 , arose from four related class actions brought against the defendant for violation of various consumer protection laws. While the case was pending, plaintiffs' counsel contacted the chief counsel for another insurer, seeking to employ him as a consultant regarding insurance matters. During the conversation, plaintiffs' counsel disclosed privileged attorney work product regarding the case. The prospective consultant declined the consultant position, citing a possible conflict between his employer and the defendant. About a year later, the attorney in question became a partner in a law firm. Soon after, the defendant's lawyers joined the same law firm, although none were in the same office as the attorney who had been approached as a consultant. When alerted by the plaintiffs' counsel about a possible conflict, the law firm established an ethical wall around the attorney, prohibiting firm employees from disclosing any confidences or secrets relating to the class actions to any lawyer working on the defendant's defense. The attorney did some work for the defendant in another case, however, and some of the legal research done in that case applied in the class actions.

The plaintiffs moved to disqualify the entire law firm from representing the defendant. The trial court granted the motion, holding that when an attorney possesses disqualifying confidential client information, vicarious disqualification of the law firm is automatic, regardless of any ethical wall. In addition, the trial court held that the ethical wall was not successful insofar as the attorney worked on a matter for the defendant with arguments similar to those in the class actions. The attorney in question subsequently left the law firm.

On appeal, the court noted that the law regarding vicarious disqualification of an entire law firm is based on decisional law, rather than statute. The court discussed the development of the case law regarding vicarious disqualification, from Chambers v. Superior Court (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 893, 175 Cal. Rptr. 575 , through Meza v. H. Muehlstein & Co., Inc. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 969, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 422 (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 793-800). The court concluded that the current law required a case-by-case analysis based on the circumstances present in, and policy interests implicated by, the case, and automatic vicarious disqualification only in cases when a tainted attorney possessing actual confidential information switches sides in the same case (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 800). The court also cited three factors that led to its conclusion that ethical walls should be recognized in California and that vicarious disqualification is not automatic (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 801-805): (1) the changing realities in the practice of law which undermine the rationale for an automatic rule of vicarious disqualification; (2) California's favorable experience with ethical walls in other circumstances; and (3) an understanding of policy considerations which support the recognition of ethical walls in proper cases.

The court held that an effective ethical screen must include the following (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 810-814): imposition of the screen when the conflict first arises; physical, geographic, and departmental separation of attorneys; prohibitions against and sanctions for discussing confidential matters; established rules and procedures preventing access to confidential information and files; procedures preventing a disqualified attorney from sharing in the profits from the representation; the disqualified attorney having no supervisory powers over the attorneys involved in the litigation, and vice versa; and notice to the former client. Thus, the court concluded that when a tainted attorney moves from one private law firm to another, the law gives rise to a rebuttable presumption of imputed knowledge to the law firm, which may be rebutted by evidence of effective ethical screening (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 814-815).

With respect to the attorney's departure from the law firm, the court of appeal remanded the case to the trial court to determine whether the attorney transmitted any confidences to the defendant's counsel. The court held that the trial court should deny the motion for disqualification if the law firm could overcome the rebuttable presumption that confidential information was transmitted by offering sufficient evidence that confidential information was not, in fact, transmitted and if the trial court, in the exercise of its discretion, concluded that the implicated policy considerations favor allowing the law firm to remain as counsel (183 Cal. App. 4th 776, 816).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Conflict With Earlier Employment

In H. F. Ahmanson & Co. v. Salomon Brothers, Inc. (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 280 Cal. Rptr. 614 , defendants' attorneys had provided legal advice to plaintiffs in a prior matter. Plaintiffs moved to disqualify defendants' attorneys on the ground of conflict of interest, but the trial court denied the motion. The court of appeal affirmed. The appellate court adopted the analytical framework proposed in Silver Chrysler Plymouth, Inc. v. Chrysler Mot. Corp. (9th Cir. 1975) 518 F.2d 751, 760 (conc. opn. of Adams, J.). It compared the prior representation of plaintiff with the current representation of defendant, focusing on the legal questions posed and on the similarities between the factual situations (229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1456-1457) . It also examined the nature and extent of the attorneys' involvement with plaintiff, examining the time spent by the attorneys on the earlier representation, the type of work performed, and the attorneys' possible exposure to formulation of policy or strategy (229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1457-1458) . The court concluded that plaintiffs failed to establish a substantial relationship between the defense attorneys' representation of plaintiffs in the prior matter and representation of defendants in the current matter (229 Cal. App. 3d 1445, 1459) .

Grove v. Grove Valve & Regulator Co. (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 29 Cal. Rptr. 150 , was an appeal from a superior court order enjoining a law firm from representing one party to an action when one member of the firm formerly represented a corporation as its patent attorney, and currently represented an ex-employee who was suing the company over rights to certain inventions. The court of appeal affirmed the order. In the course of its discussion however, the court reiterated a generally recognized exception to the rule prohibiting adverse representation when the attorney's new employment is not inconsistent with his or her former employment (213 Cal. App. 2d 646, 652) .

[b] No Confidential Information Obtained in Earlier Employment

The facts and procedural background of Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , are discussed in § 24.28[3][b]. In Forrest, the court of appeal affirmed that trial court's disqualification of counsel from representing the corporations but permitting counsel to continue to represent the two majority shareholders, on the ground that counsel could not simultaneously represent the corporations and the two majority shareholders in the action because the two shareholders, as directors, were accused of embezzling from the corporations, which created a conflict of interest between the corporations and the two majority shareholders (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 74) . In permitting the lawyer to continue to represent the majority shareholders, the court rejected the argument that the lawyer should be disqualified under Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 3-310(E) for possessing confidential information that could prejudice the corporations, finding that there was no confidential information particular to the closely held corporations, because the majority shareholders were "the sole repositories" of all corporate information (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 82) .

In In re Jessica B. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 504, 254 Cal. Rptr. 883 , a district attorney who had concurrently represented a brain-damaged infant and a local social services department in a proceeding to determine parental visitation rights concerning the infant, withdrew from representing the infant when it became apparent that he could not represent the child's interests and the department's interests at the same time. The attorney continued to represent the social services department. On appeal from a trial court order adjudicating parental rights, one of the parents asserted that at the time the district attorney recognized the conflict of interest between the department and the infant, he should have recused or disqualified himself from representing either. The court of appeal disagreed. The court refused to presume prejudice merely because of the substantial relationship between the attorney's former representation of the infant and current representation of the department, since there was no possibility of communication between the attorney and the brain-damaged infant. The court concluded that the attorney's continued representation of the department could not have resulted in prejudice to the infant (207 Cal. App. 3d 504, 512) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.32

§ 24.32 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney From Engaging in Representation Adverse to Former Client [Bus. & Prof. Code § 6068(e)]--Extreme Delay of Moving Party in Bringing Motion Constitutes Implied Waiver of Right to Disqualify

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 24.28.]

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED, BECAUSE THE MOVING PARTY'S DELAY IN MAKING THE DISQUALIFICATION MOTION IS SO UNREASONABLE, AND THE RESULTING PREJUDICE SO GREAT, THAT THE LAW MUST ASSUME AN IMPLIED WAIVER OF THE RIGHT TO DISQUALIFY _____ [name of attorney].

Extreme Delay Constitutes Implied Waiver. An attorney will not be disqualified from representing a party on the ground that he or she formerly represented an adverse party when the party moving to disqualify the attorney has engaged in extreme delay in bringing the motion and disqualification would cause extreme prejudice to the represented party. Under such circumstances, the court will find an implied waiver of the right to disqualify the attorney (Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1292, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 ; River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a party's motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case when the moving party has engaged in extreme delay in bringing the motion. Depending on the facts of the case, counsel may combine this form with §§ 24.28-24.31.

This form may be used in opposition to a memorandum in support of a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in the case, such as the memorandum set out in § 24.24.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Extreme Delay Constitutes Implied Waiver

In River West, Inc. v. Nickel (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 234 Cal. Rptr. 33 , defendant brought a motion in superior court to disqualify plaintiff's counsel during litigation concerning water rights. Defendant alleged that one of plaintiffs' attorneys had represented defendant approximately 30 years earlier in litigation concerning the same general subject matter as the present litigation. The superior court granted defendant's motion, despite the fact that defendant made the motion to disqualify 47 months after filing its answer to plaintiff's complaint, and that plaintiffs' disqualified counsel had engaged in over 3,000 hours of litigation effort at a cost to plaintiffs of $387,000. Plaintiffs appealed the trial court's disqualification order.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the delay in making the disqualification motion was so unreasonable and the resulting prejudice so great that the law would have to assume an implied waiver of the right to disqualify plaintiff's counsel (188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313) . The court also held that the implied waiver of objection would extend to co-counsel associated with the formerly disqualified attorney (188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1313) . It rejected defendant's argument that an earlier motion for disqualification would have been futile because of a change of venue, judicial disqualifications, and the parties' difficulty in locating an "acceptable" judge to hear the case (188 Cal. App. 3d 1297, 1311-1312) .

In Zador Corp. v. Kwan (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 754 , discussed in § 24.30[3][a], the trial court granted a motion to disqualify an attorney who had at one point represented both of the now-opposing parties in the litigation. The court of appeal reversed on the ground that the party moving to disqualify had executed a detailed informed consent and explicitly agreed that the attorney could continue to represent the other party. The court also observed that Kwan had waited almost three years after the conflict became apparent to move to disqualify counsel. The court noted that motions to disqualify are sometimes used as litigation tactics and that fact could be considered in its determination (31 Cal. App. 4th 1285, 1300-1303) .

[4] Additional Authorities

The facts and procedural background of Forrest v. Baeza (1997) 58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , are discussed in § 24.28[3][b]. There the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's disqualification of counsel from representing the corporations but permitting counsel to continue to represent the two majority shareholders, on the ground that the evidence supported the trial court's implied finding that any delay was insufficiently extreme to warrant denial of the disqualification motion. Although inexcusable delay may occasion denial of a disqualification motion, the court stated the common law rule that the delay must be extreme in terms of time and consequence (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 77) . In Forrest, however, the two majority shareholders (and by inference, the two closely held corporations) had notice of the third shareholder's wish to disqualify their counsel as a result of an earlier disqualification motion brought by the third shareholder at the time the third shareholder obtained independent counsel following the breakdown of the relationship between the majority shareholders and the third shareholder. Any perceived delay in bringing the subsequent disqualification motion (based on different grounds than the first disqualification motion) was a result of settlement negotiations between the parties. Following repudiation of the settlement agreement, the third shareholder had obtained a deposition transcript containing admissions of fraud and embezzlement against the corporations by one of the two majority shareholders, and thereafter promptly filed his disqualification motion. Thus, neither the two majority shareholders nor their counsel could have been misled into thinking that the third shareholder had consented to counsel's adverse representation. Additionally, neither the corporations nor the two majority shareholders suggested extreme time delay or extreme prejudice as a result of the allegedly latest qualification motion (58 Cal. App. 4th 65, 77-79) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.33

§ 24.33 Opposing Motion for Order Disqualifying Attorney Who Communicated With Represented Adverse Party

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name]	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	TO DISQUALIFY _____
vs.	)	[name of attorney] FROM REPRESENTATION OF
_____ [name],	)	CLIENT
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [Name of attorney] SHOULD NOT BE DISQUALIFIED FROM THE CASE BECAUSE HIS/HER EX PARTE COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE _____ [PRESENT and/or FORMER] EMPLOYEES OF AN ADVERSE PARTY ARE PERMITTED UNDER RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT, RULE 2-100.

A. When Ex Parte Communication Permitted. When the opposing party is a corporation, opposing counsel may initiate ex parte contacts with unrepresented former employees of the corporation, and present employees of the corporation (other than officers, directors, or managing agents) who are not separately represented, so long as the communication does not involve the employee's act or failure to act in connection with the matter that may bind the corporation, be imputed to it, or constitute an admission of the corporation for purposes of establishing liability (Jorgensen v. Taco Bell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1401-1403, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178 ; Continental Insurance Co. v. Superior Court (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 94, 118, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 843 ; Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 140, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100).

[OR]

A. When Ex Parte Communication Permitted. When the opposing party is a corporation, opposing counsel may initiate ex parte contact with current employees of that corporation, where opposing counsel has no actual knowledge that the corporation or its employees are represented by counsel on the matter at the time of the ex parte contact (Truitt v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1183 ; see Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100).

B. Who Is a Party "Represented by Counsel." As part of routine pre-litigation investigation, there is no proscription against counsel interviewing employees of a corporation that is a potential defendant, if those employees are not individuals specified in Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(1), and if those individuals are not represented by counsel (Jorgensen v. Taco Bell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1401-1402, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178).

[OR]

B. Who Is a Party "Represented by Counsel." When a party has dismissed the party's claims in an action prior to the communication with counsel, he or she is no longer a party represented by counsel; this is true notwithstanding the fact that Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(1) is not limited to litigants (Jackson v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1168, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 66).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to disqualify an attorney from further participation in a case, when the ground for the disqualification motion is that the attorney has communicated about the subject of the case with a party represented by another attorney, without obtaining the other attorney's consent, in violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 [see Mills Land & Water Co. v. Golden West Refining Co. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 116, 230 Cal. Rptr. 461 (upholding disqualification of attorney who violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, former Rule 7-103, predecessor of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100)]. This form may be used when the communications at issue are not prohibited under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100.

This form may be used in opposition to a disqualification motion supported by the memoranda set out in § 24.25.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts concerning the corporate position of the contacted parties.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Ex Parte Communication Permitted

In Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 , the trial court issued a preliminary injunction prohibiting state and local authorities from contacting all present and certain former employees of a corporation in connection with civil and criminal proceedings against the corporation for alleged unlawful disposal of hazardous wastes. On seeking the injunction, the corporation alleged that state and local authorities contacted its high level managerial employees without its notice or consent, in violation of the California Rules of Professional Conduct. The state and local authorities appealed the injunction.

The court of appeal reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction, finding that no evidence was presented that the authorities violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, prohibiting ex parte contacts with represented adverse parties (213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 140, 146) . The court noted that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, permits opposing counsel to initiate ex parte contacts with unrepresented former employees, and present employees (other than officers, directors, or managing agents) who are not separately represented, so long as the communication does not involve the employee's act or failure to act in connection with matter that may bind the corporation, be imputed to it, or constitute an admission of the corporation for purposes of establishing liability. In the instant case, none of the persons contacted were represented by counsel, none except for one was a present employee of the corporation, and none were officers, directors, or managing agents of the corporation. The court concluded that there was no basis for the injunction under Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100; no persons covered by the rule were actually contacted, and governmental authorities had no plans to contact persons covered by the rule in the future (213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 140) .

In Truitt v. Superior Court (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 1183 , an employee brought an action against his corporate employer under the Federal Employers' Liability Act. Following the filing of the employee's complaint, but prior to receiving service of the defendant corporation's answer, an investigator for the plaintiff's attorneys interviewed and obtained a written statement from a corporate employee who had struck the plaintiff while operating a front-end loader. After obtaining the written statement and receiving defendant's answer, the plaintiff's attorneys noticed the deposition of the employee-operator of the front-end loader. The corporation then filed a motion to quash the deposition subpoena for the employee-operator and for a protective order as well as evidentiary and monetary sanctions. The trial court granted the motion in part, permitting the deposition to go forward but requiring plaintiff's attorneys to turn over to corporation's counsel the original and all copies of the employee-operator's written statement, as well as all notes pertaining to the statement. The trial court also prohibited the plaintiff's attorneys from using the written statement or its contents for any purpose, but denied the request for monetary sanctions against the plaintiff's attorneys. The trial court held that the plaintiff's attorneys violated Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, because they knew at the time of their ex parte contact, that the corporation was represented by counsel on the matter. The court of appeal, on plaintiff's application, issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order, and to enter a new and different order denying the motion to quash and for sanctions in its entirety (59 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1191).

The court of appeal held that although Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100, prohibits an attorney, either before or after the commencement of litigation, from communicating ex parte with a covered employee of a corporation about a matter where the attorney actually knows the corporation and its employees are represented by an attorney in the matter at the time of the ex parte communication, constructive or presumptive knowledge of representation is insufficient to bring the ex parte contact prohibition into play (59 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1190). Under the facts of the case, there was no evidence that the plaintiff's attorneys or their investigator had any actual knowledge that the corporation and its employees were represented by counsel at the time of the interview with the covered employee.

[b] Who Is a Party Represented by Counsel

In Jorgensen v. Taco Bell (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 178 , defendant brought a motion to disqualify plaintiff's counsel for interviewing defendant's employees (not officers, directors, managing agents, or other employees specified in Cal. Rules of Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100(B)(1)) who were potential witnesses to the subject of the law suit, without permission of defendant's counsel. The interviews took place before any lawsuit was filed, and the employees were not represented by counsel. Defendants alleged that the employees were represented by defendant's

"house counsel" even though no lawsuit had yet been filed. The trial court denied the motion on the basis that there was no lawsuit pending, and that the employees were not represented by counsel in the matter. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order on the basis that the employees were not represented by counsel in the matter (50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1401-1402) . The court found that this was a routine prelitigation investigation to determine if a lawsuit should be filed. The court also held that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 is not limited to matters in litigation, if the attorney knows in fact that the employee being interviewed is represented by counsel when that interview is being conducted (50 Cal. App. 4th 1398, 1401-1402) .

In Jackson v. Ingersoll-Rand Co. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 66 , plaintiff's counsel brought a motion to disqualify defendants' counsel for communicating with plaintiff's former wife, whose loss of consortium cause of action had been dismissed more than two years prior to the communication. The trial court granted the motion and found that defendants' counsel had violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 (42 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1166) . Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's disqualification order and found that there was no violation of Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100. The court held that the rule is not limited to litigants, so the fact that the former wife's cause of action was dismissed was not determinative. The court found, however, that the former wife was no longer represented by counsel in the matter, and therefore was not a party represented by counsel (42 Cal. App. 4th 1163, 1168) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Ex Parte Communication Permitted

In McMillan v. Shadow Ridge at Oak Park Homeowner's Association (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965-968, 81 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550 , the plaintiff was representing herself. An attorney, not of record, told the defendant's counsel that he would be making occasional appearances in the case. When the defendant's counsel contacted the plaintiff directly to discuss the case, the plaintiff filed a motion to disqualify the defendant's counsel on the ground that the conversation violated Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100. The court of appeal rejected the disqualification motion, holding that Cal. Rules Prof. Conduct, Rule 2-100 does not bar an attorney from communicating directly with the opposing party not represented by counsel of record. The court held that attorneys have the right to rely on the current court records to determine whether a party is represented by counsel [165 Cal. App. 4th 960, 965-968] .

23 of 163 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.34

§ 24.34 Supporting Motion by Client or Adverse Party to Dismiss Complaint Based on Attorney's Lack of Authority to File Suit

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF_____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DISMISS COMPLAINT
	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

WHEN THE ATTORNEY PURPORTING TO REPRESENT THE PLAINTIFF LACKS THE AUTHORITY TO DO SO, THE ATTORNEY'S AUTHORITY MAY BE CHALLENGED AND A MOTION TO DISMISS THE COMPLAINT SHOULD BE GRANTED.

A. Motion to Dismiss Proper. When the attorney purportedly bringing an action is without authority to do so, a motion to dismiss is properly granted (Ventura County v. Clay (1897) 119 Cal. 213, 216, 51 P. 189 ; see also People v. Madden (1901) 133 Cal. 347, 348, 65 P. 741).

B. Motion by Supposed Client or Opposing Party. Proper challenge to an attorney's authority to appear may be made either by the attorney's supposed client, or by an opposing party in the action (Clark v. Willett (1868) 35 Cal. 534, 540) .

C. Presumption of Authority Rebuttable. The presumption that an attorney has authority to appear on behalf of the party for whom he or she purports to appear, is rebuttable (Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 190, 244 P. 343 ; Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780, 228 P.2d 331).

[Optional] D. Client's Death or Incapacity. The death, incapacity, or insanity of a client terminates an attorney's authority to represent that client (see Civ. Code § 2356(a)(2) (termination of agency on death of principal); Deiter v. Kiser (1910) 158 Cal. 259, 262, 110 P. 921 ; Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 527-528, 128 P.2d 128 ; Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 192, 244 P. 343).

[Optional] E. Inadequate Substitution. An attorney will not have authority to appear on behalf of his or her purported client when substitution of the attorney into the case has failed to provide effective notice to the client and the court (In re Marriage of Park (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 337, 343, 165 Cal. Rptr. 792, 612 P.2d 882).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion brought either by plaintiff or defendant, to dismiss a complaint filed by an attorney on behalf of a plaintiff, but without authority to file it.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion for order dismissing complaint, supporting declaration, and order granting the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics and Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Discussions

In an appropriate case, counsel may wish to move to strike the complaint. For a discussion of motions to strike complaints, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 375, Motions to Strike (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

the memoranda set out in § 24.36 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Dismiss Proper

In Ventura County v. Clay (1897) 119 Cal. 213, 51 P. 189 , the district attorney, on behalf of the county, sued to recover money from the county treasurer and others. The defendants moved to dismiss the action on the ground that the district attorney had no statutory authority to bring the suit. The trial court denied the motion initially, but granted it later on rehearing. The plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court, arguing first that the district attorney had the required authority, and second, that once the superior court denied dismissal, it was an abuse of discretion to permit renewal of the motion to dismiss based on the same grounds. The Supreme Court upheld the dismissal. The Court stated that when the authority of the plaintiff's attorney is challenged, a motion to dismiss is the proper procedure (119 Cal. 213, 215) . Where no authority is found, a motion to dismiss is properly granted (119 Cal. 213, 216) . Further, the Court held that where a trial court has reason to believe it has erred in denying a motion, it is proper to permit a renewal and rehearing of the motion (119 Cal. 213, 215) .

People v. Madden (1901) 133 Cal. 347, 65 P. 741 , was an appeal from a judgment dismissing an action brought by the county to recover money from county employees. An intervener in the suit brought a motion in superior court to dismiss, on the ground that the district attorney commenced the action without the authority of any government officials. The county board of supervisors and the grand jury later ratified the attorney's actions. The superior court granted the motion to dismiss, but the Supreme Court reversed. In the course of its discussion, however, the Court stated the rule that a defendant has the right, absent subsequent ratification by a plaintiff, to move to dismiss an action for lack of authority of the plaintiff's attorney. This right exists in order to protect a party from the possibility of having to litigate the same cause of action twice (133 Cal. 347, 348) .

[b] Motion by Supposed Client or Opposing Party

In Clark v. Willett (1868) 35 Cal. 534 , plaintiffs sued for an injunction to prevent defendants from continuing construction work which allegedly interfered with the plaintiff's irrigation rights. Following judgment for defendants, plaintiffs appealed first to the court of appeal, then to the Supreme Court. In addition to their arguments regarding the merits of the case, plaintiffs alleged that the trial court had erred in granting the motion by one of the plaintiffs to dismiss the suit on his behalf. The attorneys for plaintiffs believed they were authorized to instigate a cause of action on behalf of the entire group of plaintiffs, all of whom owned real property affected by defendant's construction. One plaintiff however, asserted that he had never granted the attorney authority to bring the suit, and therefore wanted the action discontinued as to him. The trial court granted the motion.

The Supreme Court upheld the dismissal. It held that because an attorney is an officer of the court, and is answerable to it, the court has the power to inquire as to the attorney's authority to appear on behalf of a supposed client (35 Cal. 534, 539) . It is proper for the court to require an attorney to produce evidence of his or her authority, either on application of the supposed client, or on motion by the opposing party (35 Cal. 534, 540) . The Court found that in this case counsel was employed by the plaintiffs to represent the entire group, though apparently at some point, one plaintiff expressed his opposition to the suit, and his desire to discontinue it. Such a situation could potentially occur often, the Court stated, and no misconduct should be imputed to the attorneys (35 Cal. 534, 541) .

[c] Presumption of Authority Rebuttable

Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 244 P. 343 , involved a petition to the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel a superior court judge to certify a transcript. The case originated when two parties filed a petition in superior court for an order declaring their relative to be legally incompetent. The court so ordered, and appointed the petitioners as legal guardians of the relative. A party claiming to be the relative's attorney filed a notice of appeal from the order, and a notice to the clerk of the court to prepare a transcript of the proceeding. The superior court judge refused to certify the transcript, on the grounds that the attorney had no authority to represent the relative.

The Supreme Court denied the writ, and held the attorney had no authority. It stated that although an attorney's appearance on behalf of a party raises a presumption of the attorney's authority to represent that party, the presumption is rebuttable. The fact that an attorney may be authorized to represent a client in one action is not evidence of his or her authority to do so in a separate action (198 Cal. 183, 190) . In this case, the Court held that even if the attorney had previously been authorized to represent the client, that authority was terminated once the client became legally incompetent (198 Cal. 183, 192) .

In Wilson v. Barry (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 228 P.2d 331 , plaintiffs in a civil case filed a complaint naming several defendants. In response, an attorney filed a demurrer and motion for summary judgment on behalf of all defendants, supported by an affidavit of one of the defendants. The attorney later filed a demurrer to the amended complaint, again on behalf of all defendants. Shortly thereafter, the same attorney filed a motion to withdraw the appearances of most of the defendants, on the grounds that he had merely assumed from conversations with one of them that he was to represent them all, being unaware that the others had not authorized anyone to appear for them. The superior court granted the motion to withdraw appearances, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order with respect to the defendant who had submitted the affidavit in support of summary judgment, saying that doing so amounted to a general appearance (102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 781) . The court affirmed the order as to the other defendants, however. It held that although an attorney's authority to represent a supposed client is presumed, the presumption is disputable. The attorney's affidavit explaining his mistake was sufficient evidence to rebut the presumption with regard to most of the defendants (102 Cal. App. 2d 778, 780) .

[d] Client's Death or Incapacity

Deiter v. Kiser (1910) 158 Cal. 259, 110 P. 921 , was a motion to dismiss an appeal from a superior court judgment in favor of defendants, and to dismiss an appeal from an order denying a new trial. The attorney who filed the appeals had appeared for the plaintiff and cross defendants from the outset of the case. The plaintiff died shortly after entry of the judgment, and before the appeals were filed. The respondents argued that the attorney no longer had authority to appear on behalf of the plaintiff. The Supreme Court agreed, and dismissed the appeals as to the plaintiff. It held that a client's death terminates the authority of an attorney to act on his or her behalf (158 Cal. 259, 262) .

Swartfager v. Wells (1942) 53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 128 P.2d 128 , was a quiet title action. The plaintiff was an attorney who had represented his client in a previous title action involving the same property. Pending trial in the previous action, the client executed a deed to the land to the attorney, then died. Subsequently, judgment in favor of the adverse party was entered, and the attorney brought another quiet title action against him. The trial court found against the attorney, and held that the previous suit was res judicata and conclusive of the issues. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the former decree was void, in part because the client's estate's administrator had hired a different attorney to prosecute the suit to final judgment. The court of appeal affirmed, and held that the death of the client terminated absolutely the authority of his attorney to represent him in the suit (53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 527-528) . The administrator was properly substituted as a party in the pending litigation, and had a right to hire his own attorney. To assert an interest in the action, the attorney should have moved to substitute himself as a party in the place of the former client, but he had no right to continue as the attorney representing the former client's interests (53 Cal. App. 2d 522, 528) .

Sullivan v. Dunne (1926) 198 Cal. 183, 244 P. 343 , is discussed in § 24.34[3][c]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that because an agent's power is terminated by the incapacity of a principal to contract, a proper application of the law of principal and agent dictates that an attorney's authority is terminated by the insanity or incapacity of the client (198 Cal. 183, 192) .

[e] Inadequate Substitution

In re Marriage of Park (1980) 27 Cal. 3d 337, 165 Cal. Rptr. 792, 612 P.2d 882 , involved a wife's appeal from a superior court's denial of her motion to vacate a judgment of dissolution of marriage. The wife had been suddenly deported to Korea, just before the dissolution hearing, and had been unable to notify her attorney. The husband had been the only other person aware of her deportation. Prior to the hearing, the wife's attorney had asked another attorney to take over the case in his place, and to appear at the hearing on behalf of the wife. No formal substitution was filed. At the hearing, the new attorney apparently did nothing more than appear, and the husband was awarded child custody, and most of the community property.

On her return to the United States a short time later, the wife learned what had happened, immediately hired a new attorney, and moved to vacate the judgment. The superior court denied her motion. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the wife had not received a fair trial. One of the bases for the Court's holding was that the attorney who purported to represent her at the hearing lacked the authority to do so. The Court stated that when a substitution, rather than a mere association of attorneys is attempted, if it does not comply with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 284 so as to provide notice to the client and the court, the attorney has no authority to appear (27 Cal. 3d 337, 343) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Dismiss Proper

Title Insurance & Trust Co. v. California Dev. Co. (1914) 168 Cal. 397, 143 P. 723 , involved motions to dismiss appeals from a superior court judgment. One of the grounds for the motions was that a corporate appellant's attorney had no authority to make the appeal on the corporation's behalf. The attorney for appellant argued that he had acted in good faith in assuming his client's authorization, and that the corporate board later ratified his actions. The Court granted the motions to dismiss. It held that where it is clearly shown that an attorney has no authority, the supposed client can claim no rights from the unauthorized acts of the attorney. In this case, the client's ratification occurred after the time for appeal had expired. The Court, citing Civ. Code § 2313, stated that although a client's ratification would ordinarily be treated as precedent authorization, an unauthorized act cannot be validated retroactively to the detriment of any third person without that person's consent (168 Cal. 397, 401) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 2A Chapters 24-33 ATTORNEYS AT LAW---to---CARRIERS
CHAPTER 24 ATTORNEYS AT LAW: SUBSTITUTION, WITHDRAWAL, DISQUALIFICATION, AND AUTHORITY TO APPEAR
PART II. FORMS

2A-24 California Points & Authorities § 24.35

