B. Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Original Taking Wrongful. No demand by plaintiff is necessary for the return of property wrongfully taken in order to institute an action for conversion of the property (see Civ. Code § 1713; Haydell v. Silva (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 23-24, 19 Cal. Rptr. 705).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention in an action for conversion that plaintiff must make a demand for the return of his or her property as a prerequisite to instituting an action for conversion of that property. This form sets forth the point that when the original taking was wrongful, no demand for its return by the plaintiff is necessary.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion showing that the original taking of plaintiff's personal property was wrongful.

This form may be used in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 51.35.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the substantive issue arises; for example, this form may be used in opposition to a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment, when counsel wishes to respond to an assertion bydefendant that a demand for the return of the property involved is a prerequisite to plaintiff instituting an action for conversion of that property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Return Property Obtained Without Consent or Unlawfully Taken

Civ. Code § 1712 provides that one who obtains a thing without the consent of its owner, or by a consent afterwards rescinded, or by an unlawful exaction that the owner could not at the time prudently refuse, must restore it to the person from whom it was obtained, unless he or she has acquired title to the property superior to that of the other person, or unless transaction was corrupt and unlawful on both sides.

[b] Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Original Taking Wrongful

Plaintiff in Haydell v. Silva (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 19 Cal. Rptr. 705 , brought an action for conversion of restaurant and bar equipment, fixtures, and stock. On failure to pay one month's rent, defendant lessor padlocked the premises and denied plaintiff access to her property. The trial court found that plaintiff had not made any demand for the return of her property, and therefore she was not entitled to any judgment for conversion of her personal property detained on defendant's premises. Plaintiff appealed the judgment entered on behalf of defendant.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment of the trial court, stating that plaintiff had not ipso facto forfeited her leasehold for failure to pay the rent due and that the lessor of the demised premises was not entitled to take possession by forcible entry under a provision in the lease to the effect that if rent is due and unpaid, the lessor could enter and remove all persons from the demised premises. Consequently, the court held, plaintiff had a right to occupy the premises under the lease and to continue her restaurant operations until her lease expired or was terminated by her landlord in the manner provided by law. Therefore, the court concluded, the trial court erred in finding that a demand was necessary under the facts of the case. Citing prior California law, the court held that since defendant's reentry was wrongful, no demand was necessary as a prerequisite to the accrual of a cause of action for damages for detention of personal property or for the conversion of personal property (201 Cal. App. 2d 20, 23-24) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Original Taking Wrongful

The facts and procedural background of Igauye v. Howard (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 249 P.2d 558 , are discussed in § 51.22[3][b]. Defendant landlord wrongfully evicted plaintiff from the premises and converted plaintiff's personal property to his own use. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff. The court held, among other things, that under the facts of the case, a demand for a return of the property was not a condition precedent to institution of the action when possession was originally acquired by a tort (114 Cal. App. 2d 122, 127) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 51 CONVERSION
PART II. FORMS

5-51 California Points & Authorities § 51.47

§ 51.47 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Required to Make Demand for Return of Property Before Bringing Action for Conversion-- Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Demand Would Be Futile

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEMAND BY PLAINTIFF FOR THE RETURN OF HIS/HER/ITS PERSONAL PROPERTY IS NOT NECESSARY IN ORDER TO BRING AN ACTION FOR CONVERSION OF PROPERTY WHEN A DEMAND WOULD BE FUTILE.

A. Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Demand Would Be Futile. A demand for the return of personal property is not necessary in order to bring an action for conversion of that property when the demand would be futile (Scott's Valley Fruit Exch. v. Growers Refrigeration Co. (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 450, 184 P.2d 183).

[Optional] B. Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Property Actually Converted. When there has been an actual conversion by wrongful disposition of personal property, a demand on the defendant for the return of the property before the institution of an action for conversion is not necessary (see Metzler v. Foster Holding Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 278, 282, 54 P.2d 467 ; Mier v. Southern Cal. Ice Co. (1922) 56 Cal. App. 512, 518, 206 P. 83).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant'scontention in an action for conversion that plaintiff must make a demand for the return of his or her property as a prerequisite to instituting an action for conversion of that property. This form sets forth the point that when a demand for the return of the property would be futile, plaintiff is not required to make a demand before bringing his or her action for conversion.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion showing that the property taken was actually converted through destruction, consumption, or use, or otherwise wrongfully disposed of, thus making any demand on the part of the plaintiff unnecessary.

This form may be used in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 51.35.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the substantive issue arises; for example, this form may be used in opposition to a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment, when counsel wishes to respond to an assertion by defendant that a demand for the return of the property involved is a prerequisite to plaintiff instituting an action for conversion of that property. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Demand Would Be Futile

Plaintiff in Scott's Valley Fruit Exch. v. Growers Refrigeration Co. (1947) 81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 184 P.2d 183 , brought an action against defendant corporation for conversion of fruit stored in its warehouse and allowed to decay. According to provisions of the Agriculture Code, it is a criminal offense to transport or sell pears that are not free from decay or other serious damage. Containers of pears cannot have more than 10 percent of the contents below these requirements. Plaintiff alleged that it had stored 1,816 lugs, or containers, of pears in defendant's warehouse, and that these lugs were 75 percent destroyed, with each lug being more than 10 percent defective in relation to the requirements of the Agriculture Code. Defendant appealed the resulting judgment of the trial court entered on behalf of plaintiff, contending, among other things, that there was no evidentiary support for the finding of the trial court that plaintiff had made a demand for the return of the pears on the date that it first discovered their destruction.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court, holding that under the circumstances of the case, no demand was necessary. A demand, the court stated, was normally a condition precedent to the bringing of a conversion action. However, the court pointed out, a demand is not always indispensable. The trial court's finding that the pears were 75 percent destroyed and that each lug was more than 10 percent defective was supported by the evidence, the court observed. Consequently, the court noted, it would have been unlawful, under the provisions of the Agriculture Code, to move the pears without resorting and repacking. Under such circumstances, the court held, a demand was unnecessary since the law does not require useless and futile acts, and it would have been futile to have demanded that defendant do something that the law forbade (81 Cal. App. 2d 437, 450) .

NOTE:

Scott's Valley Fruit Exchange was tried on the theory of defendant's negligent destruction of the pears. Although the court did not discuss the point, a demand for the return of the pears would probably have been futile on the ground that the pears were destroyed and unusable and were therefore already actually converted as a result of defendant's negligent conduct [see § 51.47[3][b]].

[b] Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Property Actually Converted

Metzler v. Foster Holding Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 278, 54 P.2d 467 , arose out of an action for conversion of animal stock and grain. Defendant's lessee executed and delivered to plaintiff a chattel mortgage to secure a note and attorney's fees in case of collection. The note was to cover indebtedness to other creditors, and a trust agreement was prepared with a list of creditors and amounts owed to each. However, the next day, the lessee quit the premises as requested by defendant. At that time, the lessee apparently told a representative of defendant that it could have what property he had on the ranch to apply to his indebtedness to defendant. Defendant corporation took possession of the ranch subsequent to the recordation of its lessee's chattel mortgage to plaintiff. It proceeded to consume the hay, ensilage, corn, and alfalfa, and to sell the livestock that the lessee had left on the ranch. Defendant applied the proceeds of the sale to the lessee's indebtedness to it. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, and defendant subsequently appealed from that judgment and from the court's judgment for plaintiff on defendant's cross complaint, contending, among other things, that a demand for the return of the property was a prerequisite to an action for conversion.

The Supreme Court affirmed, with some modification, the judgment of the trial court, holding that the trial court's findings were correct and supported by the evidence. Addressing itself to defendant's contention that a demand by plaintiff for the return of the property was a prerequisite to bringing the action for conversion, the Court replied that all the property was either sold or fed to stock. Consequently, the Court concluded, the sale and use of the property was sufficientto take the case out of the general rule that a demand for the return of the property was necessary (5 Cal. 2d 278, 282) .

Mier v. Southern Cal. Ice Co. (1922) 56 Cal. App. 512, 206 P. 83 , involved an action to recover damages for the conversion by defendants of a crane and its equipment. Plaintiff alleged that the crane was sold to him by defendants under an agreement to make delivery when requested. However, plaintiff contended that defendants had sold, unknown to him and without authority, the crane and attendant equipment to another party that it had been shipped to the purchaser, and that plaintiff therefore had lost his contract to sell the crane to a purchaser he had acquired. An agent for defendants subsequently offered to ship the crane to plaintiff's purchaser, but plaintiff refused. From the judgment on the verdict for plaintiff, defendants appealed, contending, among other things, that there was no evidence of a demand for the return of the property.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment of the trial court, found that the evidence supported the trial court's judgment. Addressing itself to the issue of whether or not a demand was necessary in order for plaintiff to bring his action, the court held that no demand was necessary. When defendants sold the crane to plaintiff, the court said, it became the property of plaintiff, and its subsequent unauthorized sale and shipment to another purchaser was a conversion. The rule in this case, the court declared, is that when there has been an actual conversion such as a wrongful sale of plaintiff's property, a demand on the defendant for the return of the property before the institution of the action for trover is not necessary. Demand and refusal, the court observed, do not of themselves constitute conversion, but are only evidence from which conversion in certain cases could be found. Moreover, the court concluded, the conversion may be established by proof of other acts on the part of the defendant, for example, a sale and delivery of plaintiff's property to some third person in defiance of the rights of the true owner (56 Cal. App. 512, 518) .

NOTE:

Metzler and Mier, the court was apparently distinguishing between property wrongfully withheld by a defendant, and property actually converted or appropriated to the defendant's own use. Plaintiff's property that has been wrongfully sold by defendant, or consumed, destroyed, or otherwise disposed of is property that has been converted in the sense of the very meaning of the word conversion, that is, property that was capable of being changed into another form, substance, or state; turned over, delivered, transformed, or appropriated for the use and benefit of the wrongdoer [see Olschewski v. Hudson (1927) 87 Cal. App. 282, 286, 262 P. 43 ; see also § 51.27[3][a]].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Demand for Return of Property Not Necessary When Property Actually Converted

In United Bank & Trust Co. v. Powers, (1928) 89 Cal. App. 690, 265 P. 403 , plaintiff brought an action for conversion of cattle subject to its chattel mortgage. Defendant also had a chattel mortgage on other cattle owned by the joint debtor; however, his mortgage was inferior to that of plaintiff's. On default by plaintiff's debtor, defendant took possession of all of the cattle and sold them to satisfy the debt owed to him by the mortgagor. The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment of the trial court in favor of plaintiff, rejected defendant's contention that, among other things, plaintiff had not made the necessary demand for return of its property. In reply, the court held that the record in the case showed that plaintiff's property was taken by defendant and sold by him before the beginning of the action. Consequently, the court concluded, no demand was necessary (89 Cal. App. 690, 694) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 51 CONVERSION
PART II. FORMS

5-51 California Points & Authorities § 51.48

§ 51.48 Opposing Contention That Plaintiff Waived Interest in Personal Property--No Intentional Relinquishment of Known Right of Property

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

TO CONSTITUTE A WAIVER OF INTEREST IN PROPERTY, THERE MUST BE A SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFF INTENTIONALLY RELINQUISHED A KNOWN RIGHT IN HIS/HER/ITS PROPERTY.

Plaintiff Waived Interest in Property. In order to show that plaintiff waived his or her interest in the property alleged to have been converted, there must be evidence that plaintiff intentionally relinquished a known right in his or her property (see Imperial NH3 v. Central Valley Feed Yards, Inc. (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518-519, 139 Cal. Rptr. 8).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's contention in an action for conversion that plaintiff waived his or her interest in the property alleged to have been converted. This form sets forth the point that in order to constitute a waiver of interest in the property, there must be a showing that plaintiff intentionally relinquished a known right in his or her property.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion showing that plaintiff's conduct in relation to the property alleged to have been converted did not constitute a waiver of interest in the property since he or she did not intentionally relinquish known rights in the property.

This form may be used in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 51.36.

These points and authorities may be combined, when appropriate, with points and authorities relating to the specific procedural context in which the substantive issue arises; for example, this form may be used in opposition to a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment, when counsel wishes to respond to an assertion by defendant that plaintiff waived his or her interest in the property alleged to have been converted. The points and authorities set forth in this form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Waived Interest in Property

Plaintiff in Imperial NH3 v. Central Valley Feed Yards, Inc. (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 513, 139 Cal. Rptr. 8 , brought an action against defendant to recover damages for the conversion of the proceeds of a hay crop in which plaintiff had perfected a security interest pursuant to the provisions of the California Uniform Commercial Code. Plaintiff fertilizer company had been supplying its customer, a farmer, with fertilizer and insecticide on credit. On learning of the customer's difficulties with his bank, plaintiff executed a security agreement and financing statement with its customer to secure past and future purchases. Thereafter, plaintiff continued to sell fertilizer to its customer, who continued to harvest and sell hay in the ordinary course of business. Afterwards, he would deliver proceeds from the crop to his bank, which had a first lien on the crops only. Defendant and plaintiff's customer agreed that in return for $68,000 advanced for operating expenses, the customer would deliver a certain large quantity of hay. Plaintiff's customer subsequently delivered the hay to defendant. When plaintiff discovered the arrangement between its customer and defendant, it advised defendant of its security interest and that it would not be waived. The trial court entered judgment for defendant on the theory that plaintiff had waived its security interest in the crop by impliedly authorizing its harvest and delivery to defendant. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment, contending that the trial court erred in concluding that plaintiff had waived its security interest in the crop and proceeds.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment of the trial court. Although waiver can be relied on as a defense to conversion, the court said, the evidence in the case was insufficient to establish an implied waiver. Citing prior California law, the court said that waiver is the intentional relinquishment of a known right. Plaintiff's acquiescence to its customer's delivery of the crop to his regular customers and the proceeds to his bank, the court said, was a recognition that the bank had a superior interest. However, the court pointed out, plaintiff acted promptly to protect its interest when it first learned of the arrangement between its customer and defendant, by informing defendant of its security interest in the crop and the proceeds, and that it would not waive that interest. The court held that there was nothing in the conduct of plaintiff that could be interpreted as relinquishing a known right (70 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518-519) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities 52.syn

§ 52.syn Synopsis to Chapter 52: CORPORATIONS

§ 52.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 52.02 Governing Statutes

[1] In General

[2] Application of General Corporation Law

[3] Existing Corporations

[4] Limited Liability Companies

[5] Foreign Corporations

[6] Alter Ego Doctrine

[7] Corporate Records

[8] Duties and Liabilities of Directors and Managers

[9] Involuntary Dissolution

§ 52.03 Other Procedures for Imposing Alter Ego Liability

§ 52.04 Alter Ego Liability Is Joint and Several

§ 52.05 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 52.06 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

§ 52.07 Related Memoranda Chapters

§§ 52.08-52.19 [Reserved]

§ 52.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action Maintained by Foreign Corporation--Corporation Transacting Intrastate Business Without Having Obtained Certificate of Qualification [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

[b] Nonqualified Foreign Corporation Barred From Maintaining Suit

[c] Action by Assignee of Nonqualified Foreign Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

§ 52.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action Maintained by Foreign Corporation--Foreign Corporation Not Subject to California Registration Suspended Under Law of State of Incorporation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Law of State of Incorporation as Determining Continuing Corporate Status of Foreign Corporation

§ 52.22 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue--To County of Corporation's Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Change of Venue

[b] Venue of Corporations

[c] Proper County When General Venue Provisions Govern

[d] Foreign Corporations

[e] Two or More Corporate Defendants

[f] Place of Making of Contract

[g] Anticipatory Breach of Contract

[h] Place of Performance of Contract

[i] Place of Performance In Payment of Debt

[j] Where Tort Liability Arises

[k] Allegation of "Doing Business"

§ 52.23 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Removal of Director--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 304]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.24 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Application for Order to Compel Holding of Annual Shareholder's Meeting--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 600(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.25 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Determination of Shares as Dissenting Shares and/or Value of Such Shares--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1304(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.26 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Proceeding to Enforce Right of Inspection of Corporate Records and Reports--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1603(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.27 Supporting Corporate Defendants' Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1800(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation's Right to Control Venue in Mixed Action

§ 52.28 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Petition for Court to Take Jurisdiction of Voluntary Dissolution--To County of Corporation's Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1904]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.29 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Determination of Right or Interest in Real Property--To County Where Real Property Is Situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determination That Action Is Local in Nature

[b] Proper County for "Local" Action

§ 52.30 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Plaintiff--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code--Defendant Foreign Corporation Is "Nominally Foreign" Corporation and Subject to the Provisions of California General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 2115]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Nominally Foreign" Corporations

[b] Foreign Parent Corporations Not Transacting Intrastate Business

[c] Commencement of Time Period Subjecting Foreign Corporations to California Law

[d] Cumulative Voting Required

§ 52.31 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Corporation--Corporate Powers of Plaintiff or Defendant Suspended or Forfeited for Nonpayment of Franchise Tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Powers of Domestic or Foreign Corporation

[b] Effective Date of Suspension or Forfeiture

[c] Inability to Prosecute Action

[d] Inability to Defend Action

[e] Waiver of Defense

[f] Accrual of Substantive Defense

[g] No Substantial Compliance Is Shown

[h] Directors May Not Be Substituted in Place of Suspended Corporation

[i] Liability Insurer May Not Defend in Name of Suspended Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Defense

[b] Accrual of Substantive Defense

[c] Renewal of Judgment

§ 52.32 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract [Civ. Code § 3300 or 3384]--By Defendant--Against Corporation That Was Suspended at Time Contract Was Formed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Limitations on Declaring Contract Voidable

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Is Voidable

[b] Avoidance Not Barred by Equitable Estoppel

[c] When Prior Law Is Determinative

§ 52.33 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment Against Corporation--Corporate Powers Suspended for Failure to File Required Information Statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Corporate Powers for Failure to File Required Information Statement

§ 52.34 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit When It Is Not Considered to Be Transacting Intrastate Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure

[b] Summary Judgment Not Proper When Triable Issue Remains as to Whether Foreign Corporation Transacted Intrastate Business

[c] Burden of Proof

[d] Single, Isolated Transactions

[e] Actions Arising Out of Interstate or Foreign Commerce

[f] Jurisdictional Requirements Distinguished From Intrastate Business Transaction Requirements

[g] Corporations Incorporated Under Act of Congress

[h] Goods Transported in Interstate Commerce

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

[b] Goods Transported in Interstate Commerce

§ 52.35 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit When It Has Filed Designation of Agent for Service Under Old Law and Filed Amended Statement Designation [Corp. Code § 2102]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Filing of Designation of Agent Under Previous Law

§ 52.36 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit Without Providing Proof of Payment of State Taxes When It Has Obtained Certificate of Qualification Before Commencing Suit [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Qualification Obtained Before Action Commenced

§ 52.37 Opposing Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue--Insufficient Showing That Venue Was Improper

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption That Venue Is Proper

[b] Burden of Proof on Motion to Change Venue, Generally

[c] Corporation's Burden of Proof

[d] Foreign Corporation's Burden of Proof

[e] When Corporation Is Permitted to Change Venue

[f] Foreign Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State

[g] Domestic Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State

[h] Continuing Effect of Tortious Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption That Venue Is Proper

[b] Corporation's Burden of Proof

§ 52.38 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code Against Foreign Corporation--Nationally Traded or Wholly Owned Corporation Is Not Subject to California Law [Corp. Code § 2115(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nationally Traded or Wholly Owned Corporation is Not Subject to California Law

§ 52.39 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code Against Foreign Corporation--Inapplicability of "Nominally Foreign" Status to Defendant Corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(a), (d), (e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Period in Which "Nominally Foreign" Status Applicable to Foreign Corporation

[b] Nominee Holders

[c] "Voting Power"

§ 52.40 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Forfeiture of Corporate Powers Not Effective Because Preliminary Notification or Transmission to Secretary of State Was Not Made [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Notice Requirement

[b] Transmission to Secretary of State

§ 52.41 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Suspension and Forfeiture Provisions Do Not Apply Unless Foreign Corporation Has Qualified to Do Business in California [Corp. Code § 2105; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension Provision Not Applicable to Unqualified Foreign Corporation

§ 52.42 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Reinstatement of Corporate Powers Following Payment of Franchise Tax as Validating Prior Acts [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plea in Abatement

[b] Effect of Issuance of Certificate

[c] Satisfying Purpose for Suspension or Forfeiture

[d] Effect of Revival of Corporate Powers

[e] Suspension or Forfeiture Does Not Affect Court's Jurisdiction

[f] Substantial Compliance

[g] Bond, Deposit, or Other Security for Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plea in Abatement

[b] Effect of Revival of Corporate Powers

§ 52.43 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract [Civ. Code § 3300 or 3384]--By Corporation That Was Suspended at Time Contract Was Formed--Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Entered Into Before January 1, 1991

§§ 52.44-52.59 [Reserved]

§ 52.60 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Failure to Allege Facts Showing That Individual and Corporation Are Same Entity and That Recognition of Separate Entity Would Consummate Wrong

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine

[b] Allegation of Control and Domination of Corporation

[c] Pleading of Consummation of Wrong

[d] Allegation That Corporation Is Alter Ego of Stockholder

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pleading Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine

[b] Allegation of Control and Domination of Corporation

[c] Pleading of Consummation of Wrong

§ 52.61 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual On Corporate Obligations--Failure to Allege That Individual Defendant Had Beneficial Ownership in Corporation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Beneficial Ownership

[b] Failure to Allege Beneficial Ownership

§ 52.62 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Amend Judgment to Include as Judgment Debtor Name of Individual Who Was Alter Ego of Corporate Judgment Debtor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Amendment to Include Alter Ego Litigant

[b] Hearing of Extrinsic Evidence

[c] Requirements For Holding Individual as Alter Ego of Corporation

[d] Factors Pertinent to Court's Determination

[e] Evidence of Equitable Ownership

[f] Ownership of One Share

[g] Alter Ego Doctrine Aplicable to Tort Claim

[h] Liability of Two or More Controllers or Dominators

[i] Wholly Owned Subsidiaries

[j] Manipulation of Corporate Affairs to One's Own Ends

[k] Inadequate Capitalization and Active Corporate Participation

[l] Concentration of Liabilities in Insolvent Corporation

[m] Holding Oneself Out as Personally Liable

[n] Settlement With Corporation Does Not Bar Alter Ego Liability

[o] Confirmation of Arbitration Award

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Amendment to Include Alter Ego Litigant

[b] Requirements for Holding Individual as Alter Ego of Corporation

[c] Wholly Owned Subsidiaries

§ 52.63 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Allegations in Plaintiff's Complaint Satisfy Liberal Requirements for Pleading Alter Ego Doctrine

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liberal Policy in Pleading Alter Ego Doctrine

[b] Essential Facts Required to Be Pleaded

[c] Proof of Actual Fraud as Unnecessary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Essential Facts Required to be Pleaded

§ 52.64 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Allegation Charging Defendant With Liability Sufficient to Raise Alter Ego Doctrine on Defendant's Denial Thereof if Defendant Is Not Prejudiced Thereby

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial of Liability by Individual Defendant is Sufficient to Place Alter Ego Liability at Issue

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Denial of Liability by Individual Defendant is Sufficient to Place Alter Ego Liability at Issue

§ 52.65 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Insufficient Showing to Bind Individual to Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Required Showing

[b] Question of Fact

[c] Inadequacy of Capitalization

[d] Mere Existence of Unsatisfied Creditor Is Insufficient Showing

§ 52.66 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Plaintiff Estopped to Deny Corporate Existence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel of Plaintiff to Deny Corporate Existence

[b] Knowledge of Shareholder's Relationship With Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel of Plaintiff to Deny Corporate Existence

§ 52.67 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Failure to Observe Corporate Formalities Pursuant to Shareholders' Agreement Is Not a Basis for Imposition of Alter Ego Doctrine [Corp. Code § 300(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Informalities in Conduct of Close Corporation's Affairs

§ 52.68 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Greater Inequity Resulting From Imposition of Alter Ego Doctrine

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alter Ego Doctrine Inapplicable if Greater Inequity Results

[b] Obligation Inflicted on Innocent Corporation or Minority Shareholders

§ 52.69 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Judgment Not Binding on Individual Who Was Not Party to and Had No Control of Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirements for Binding Individual to Judgment

[b] Due Process Requirement

[c] Degree of Control Required

[d] Similarity of Interests Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirements for Binding Individual to Judgment

§ 52.70 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--No Showing of Due Diligence in Seeking Amendment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Due Diligence Required

§§ 52.71-52.79 [Reserved]

§ 52.80 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Ground That Corporation Was Alter Ego of Shareholder-Defendant--Outside Reverse Piercing of Corporate Veil Is Not Recognized in California

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outside Reverse Piercing Not Recognized

§§ 52.81-52.89 [Reserved]

§ 52.90 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] Enforcing Legal Right--By Shareholder--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce a Legal Right

§ 52.91 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Open Its Books, Records, and Minutes for Inspection--By Shareholder [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus as Enforcing Legal Right

[b] Shareholder's Inspection Rights

[c] Establishment of Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose

[d] Effect of Majority Shareholders on Policy Is Reasonable Purpose

[e] Directors Unfriendly to Minority Shareholders Is Reasonable Purpose

[f] Ascertaining Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose

[g] Investigation to Determine Validity of Shareholder Records Is Reasonable Purpose

[h] Beneficial Interest Is Unnecessary for Registered Shareholder

[i] Inspection of Books of Successor Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Shareholder's Inspection Rights

§ 52.92 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of Corporate Property--By Shareholder

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right

[b] Right to Inspect Corporate Property

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nominally Foreign Corporations as Subject to Shareholder's Inspection Rights

§ 52.93 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of Corporate Books, Records, Documents, and Properties--By Director [Corp. Code § 1602]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce A Legal Right

[b] Restrictions on Director's Rights of Inspection

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Director's Rights of Inspection

[b] Restrictions on Director's Rights of Inspection

[c] Right Extended to Foreign Corporations

§ 52.94 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of the Record of Shareholders--By Major Stockholder [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inspection of Record of Shareholders

§ 52.95 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Petitioner Is Not Registered Shareholder [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inspections Rights Available Only to Shareholders of Record

[b] Inspection Rights Unassignable

§ 52.96 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Petitioner Does Not Have a Reasonable Purpose for Inspection [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right of Inspection Limited

[b] Shareholders' Rights of Inspection Limited

[c] Necessity of a Hearing as to Purpose

§§ 52.97-52.109 [Reserved]

§ 52.110 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Liability Created by Statute Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 359]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] When Action Must Be Brought

[c] Creation of Liability

[d] Obtaining Judgment Against Corporation

[e] Illegal Distribution of Assets by Directors

[f] Director's Negligence or Breach of Fiduciary Duty to Corporation

[g] When Directors Liable for Failure to Cause Corporation to File Lawsuit

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Action Must Be Brought

§ 52.111 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraud Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

[c] Statute Not Tolled

§ 52.112 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicable Statute of Limitations

§ 52.112A Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Directors Owe No Fiduciary Duty to Creditor of Insolvent Corporation

[b] No Fiduciary Duty When Corporation Operates in "Zone of Insolvency"

§ 52.113 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Removal of Directors of Corporation for Cause [Corp. Code § 304]--Failure of Complaint to Allege Facts Rather Than Conclusions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Facts Adequate to Show Fraud Are Required

§ 52.114 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Petition for Appointment of Provisional Director of Corporation When Board Is Deadlocked [Corp. Code § 308]--Estoppel and Unclean Hands Not Defenses

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel and Unclean Hands Are Not Defenses

§ 52.115 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--Director Lacks Authority to Institute Action in Name of Corporation Against Codirector and Equal Shareholder

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Authority for Director to Bring Action Against Codirector Who Is Equal Shareholder

§ 52.116 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--In Action to Remove Defendant From Office for Acts Committed as Director [Corp. Code § 314]--Defendant Reelected After Acts Complained Of

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Subsequently Reelected Director Not Removable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Subsequently Reelected Director Not Removable

§ 52.117 Supporting Motion for Indemnification of Director, Officer, or Other Agent of Corporation--For Expenses in Defending Suit Without Success on Merits [Corp. Code § 317(b), (c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Expenses Incurred in Criminal Proceeding

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Corporate Agent

[b] Expenses for Purposes of Indemnification

§ 52.118 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraud Against Directors of Corporation--Proper Statute of Limitations Is Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) Rather Than Code Civ. Proc. § 359

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability of Section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure

[b] When Liabilities Are Created by Common Law

[c] Statute of Limitations for Fraud Actions Against Directors

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicability of Section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure

§ 52.119 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty Against Directors--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]--Statute Was Tolled

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Against Directors in Control

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Against Directors in Control

§ 52.120 Opposing Motion for Indemnification of Director, Officer, or Other Agent of Corporation--For Expenses in Defending Suit Without Success on Merits--Derivative Suit [Corp. Code § 317(c)]--Indemnification Forbidden by Statute [Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)-(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Judgment Against Agent

[c] Settlement of Action

§ 52.121 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees and Expenses--Outside Attorney Retained to Represent Corporation Is Not Corporate Agent Entitled Under Corp. Code § 317(d) to Recover Attorney's Fees and Costs in Subsequent Malpractice Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outside Attorney Sued for Malpractice Is Not Corporate Agent for Purposes of Corporations Code Section 317

§§ 52.122-52.139 [Reserved]

§ 52.140 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure Specifically to Allege Facts Rebutting Applicability of Business Judgment Rule [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule Under Common Law

[b] Business Judgment Rule Codified Under Corporations Code Section 309

[c] Assumption Underlying Business Judgment Rule

[d] Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule

[e] Specific Allegations of Fraud or Bad Faith Required

[f] Acts Clearly Opposed to Corporation's Interest

[g] Decisions Regarding Litigation

[h] Decisions Regarding Executive Compensation

[i] Presumption Favors Board

[j] Reliance on Board Committee

[k] Litigation Committee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule

§ 52.141 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Suit Improperly Filed in an Individual Capacity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stockholder's Individual Suit Distinguished from a Derivative Suit

[b] Injury to Corporation Maintained in Representative Capacity Only

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stockholder's Individual Suit Distinguished from a Derivative Suit

[b] Injury to Corporation Maintained in Representative Capacity Only

§ 52.142 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Registered or Beneficial Shareholder or Holder of a Voting Trust Certificate [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Objection by Demurrer

[b] Registered Shareholder or Holder of Voting Trust Certificates Condition

§ 52.143 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Has Informed Board of Directors or Corporation of Lawsuit [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Inform Board of Directors or Corporation

§ 52.144 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege With Particularity Efforts to Secure Action by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]--By Director

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Make Demand

§ 52.145 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege With Particularity Facts to Establish Futility of Demanding Action by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Reasons for Futility

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Reasons for Futility

§ 52.146 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Posting Bond [Corp. Code § 800(e)] Is Not Substitute for Prefiling Demand or Sufficient Allegation of Futility of Demand [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Posting Bond No Substitute for Demand

§ 52.147 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--Good-Faith Business Judgment by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Procedural Alternatives Available to Corporation

[b] Adoption of Means Not Limited by Law

[c] Hindsight Not Relevant

§ 52.148 Supporting Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings--Shareholder's Derivative Action Against Corporation's Outside Counsel Cannot Proceed in Absence of Corporation's Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Derivative Lawsuit for Malpractice Against Corporate Outside Counsel Raises Unique Attorney-Client Issues

§ 52.149 Supporting Motion for Security [Corp. Code §§ 800(c)-(f)]--In a Derivative Action [Corp. Code §§ 800(a), (b)]--By Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Aggregate Amount of Security Limited

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] No Benefit to Corporation

§ 52.150 Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Plaintiff(s) in Shareholders' Derivative Suit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Benefit Rule

[b] Beneficiaries Must Share Litigation Expenses

§ 52.150A Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Successful Defendants in Derivative Action--Security Posted by Plaintiff [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Has Recourse to Security

[b] Absence of Benefit to Corporation Need Not Be Shown

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Has Recourse to Security

§ 52.151 Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Successful Defendants in Derivative Action [Civ. Code § 1717]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provided by Contract

[b] Nonsignatories May Be Liable for Attorney's Fees

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provided by Contract

[b] Nonsignatories May Be Liable for Attorney's Fees

§ 52.152 Supporting Motion to Permit Plaintiff in a Derivative Action to Waive Requirement of Being Shareholder, Registered or Beneficial, or Holder of Voting Trust Certificates at Time of Wrongdoing to the Corporation [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.153 Supporting Motion for Order Approving Compromise Settlement Between Plaintiff Shareholder and Defendant in Shareholder's Derivative Suit and for Judgment Entered Thereon

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compromise Settlement as Permitted if Corporation's Rights Fully Protected

§ 52.154 Supporting Motion for Order Modifying Amount of Bond Plaintiff Must Post in Shareholder's Derivative Suit [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Limitation on Aggregate Amount of Security

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expenses to Be Incurred on Appeal

§ 52.155 Supporting Motion for Order and Judgment Dismissing Shareholder's Derivative Suit for Failure to Post

Security [Corp. Code § 800(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action for Failure to Furnish Security for Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Failure to Furnish Security

§ 52.155A Supporting Motion for Order and Judgment Dismissing Shareholder's Derivative Suit--Plaintiff Is No Longer Shareholder [Corp. Code § 800(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal Is Required When Plaintiff Is No Longer Shareholder

§ 52.156 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff-Shareholder Has Satisfied the Requirements to File Derivative Action on Behalf of Corporation [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Elements for Derivative Action

[b] Derivative Action as Equitable Remedy

[c] Directors Required to Be Diligent

[d] Plaintiff's Right to Amend Complaint to Include Particulars

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Right to Amend Complaint to Include Particulars

§ 52.157 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff Suing as Representative of Shareholder's Estate [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Powers of Representative of Estate

[b] Representative of Estate as Bringing Derivative Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representative of Estate as Bringing Derivative Action

§ 52.158 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff as Beneficial Owner of Shares in Corporation [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficial Ownership of Shares

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Beneficial Ownership of Shares

§ 52.159 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff Suing in a Derivative Action as Shareholder by Operation of Law [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 52.160 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff as Pledgee of Stock of Corporation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pledgee of Stock as Plaintiff

§ 52.161 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Demand for Action by Board of Directors Would Be Futile [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand for Action Not Required When It Would Have Been Futile

§ 52.161A Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Equitable Considerations Warrant Exception to Continuous Ownership Requirement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Equitable Considerations May Warrant Exception to Continuous Ownership Requirement

[b] Equitable Considerations Might Apply If Plaintiff Was Wrongfully Deprived of Standing

§ 52.162 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff's Cause of Action Is in Individual Capacity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Individual Suit to Enforce Shareholder's Individual Right

[b] Minority Shareholder May Maintain an Individual Action Against Majority Shareholders for Diminution in Value of Stock

[c] Minority Shareholder May Maintain Individual Action for Deprivation of Proportional Share of Corporate Profits or Value of Corporate Assets

[d] Person Injured Both As Individual and As Owner

§ 52.163 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Application of Business Judgment Rule [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prerequisites for Application of Business Judgment Rule

[b] Regular Rules Governing Summary Judgment Apply

[c] "Similar Circumstances" Within Meaning of Corporations Code Section 309(a)

[d] Right to Rely on Committee's Recommendation

[e] "Golden Parachute" Defined

[f] Purpose of "Golden Parachutes"

[g] Application of Business Judgment Rule to Approval of "Golden Parachutes"

[h] Business Judgment Rule Is Not Applicable to Conduct of "Inside Director" in Obtaining Agreement From Which He or She Benefits

[i] Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Committee Members Exercised Their Best Business Judgment

[j] Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Members Exercised Their Best Business Judgment in Relying on Recommendation of Board Committee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Regular Rules Governing Summary Judgment Apply

§ 52.164 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Compliance With Corp. Code § 310 Does Not Bar Derivative Action Regarding Same Transaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compliance With Corp. Code § 310 Does Not Bar Derivative Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compliance With Corp. Code § 3310 Does not Bar Derivative Action

§ 52.165 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Doctrine of Corporate Ratification Not Applicable to Bar Derivative Action Regarding Ratified Transaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporate Ratification Does Not Bar Derivative Action

§ 52.166 Opposing Motion for Security Requested Pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)--Action Not a Derivative Suit--By Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Provision Requiring Security Improperly Applied

§ 52.167 Opposing Motion for Security Requested Pursuant to Corp. Code § 800--Aggregate Amount of Security Is Limited to $50,000

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Aggregate Amount of Security Is Limited

§ 52.168 Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees by Successful Defendant in Derivative Action--Recovery Is Limited to Security Posted by Plaintiff [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Limited by Posted Security

§§ 52.169-52.179 [Reserved]

§ 52.180 Supporting Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Winding Up of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Corporation Dissolved at Election of Shareholders [Corp. Code § 1900(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation in Process of Winding Up

[b] Validity of Election

[c] "Vote" as Including Written Consent

[d] Determination of Good Faith

[e] Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation

[f] Parties in Interest

[g] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Deadlocked

[h] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan

[i] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Dissension Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Determination of Good Faith

[b] Parties in Interest

§ 52.181 Supporting Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Winding Up of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Corporation Dissolved at Election of Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 1900(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation in Process of Winding Up

[b] Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation

[c] Parties in Interest

[d] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan

[e] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Discussion Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Parties in Interest

§ 52.182 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Complaint Seeking Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1800]--No Jurisdiction of Subject Matter If Filed by Unauthorized Person

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Appearance

[b] Strict Construction of Statute Authorizing Action

[c] Court Without Jurisdiction

[d] Constructive Transfer or Surrender of Shares

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiffs Authorized by Statute

§ 52.183 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--Involuntary Dissolution Not Reasonably Necessary to Protect Shareholder Rights or Interests [Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liquidation Must be Reasonably Necessary to Protect Shareholder Rights or Interests.

§ 52.184 Supporting Motion by Shareholder or Creditor to Intervene [Code Civ. Proc. § 387; Corp. Code § 1800(c)]--In Action for Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1800(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Intervene Unqualified

[b] Intervention Takes Place When Order Is Made

[c] Intervention Before Hearing Is Timely

[d] Right of Shareholder Not of Record to Intervene

[e] Intervention After Default But Before Hearing Is Timely

[f] Security for Costs Not Required

[g] Ex Parte Motion Permissible

[h] Right to Bring Separate Action Does Not Preclude Intervention

[i] Timely Intervention Does Not Depend on Service of Complaint

§ 52.185 Supporting Petition for Determination of Identity of Directors or for Appointment of Directors to Wind up Affairs of Corporation [Corp. Code § 2003]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interested Person

§ 52.186 Supporting Motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1003] to Approve Intermediate Accounts of Directors [Corp. Code § 1806(d)] and to Determine Claims Against Corporation [Corp. Code § 1806(b)] and Rights of Shareholders to Assets [Corp. Code § 1806(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction of Court to Determine Creditors' Rights

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rights of Shareholders to Assets

§ 52.187 Supporting Motion for Order Staying Dissolution Proceedings and Appointing Appraisers to Ascertain Value of Stock [Corp. Code §§ 2000(a)-(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority for Purchase

[b] Election to Purchase by Corporation

[c] Stay of Proceedings Mandatory

[d] Determination of Fair Value

[e] Court May Choose Between Discordant Appraisals

[f] Purchase by Majority Shareholders Does Not Justify Devaluation of Minority Shares in Closely Held Corporation

[g] Majority's Personal Control Over Sales Does Not Justify Reduction in Value of Minority Shares

[h] Fair Value of Shares Includes Value and Effect of Pending Derivative Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority for Purchase

[b] Stay of Proceedings Mandatory

[c] Determination of Fair Value

[d] Purchase by Majority Shareholders Does Not Justify Devaluation of Minority Shares in Closely Held Corporation

§ 52.188 Supporting Petition for Order Declaring Corporation Duly Wound Up and Dissolved [Corp. Code § 1907]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 52.189 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--In Action by Creditor Against Dissolved Corporation--Failure to Present Claim in Timely Manner Bars Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 52.190 Opposing Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code §

1904]--No Valid Election to Dissolve

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limits on Jurisdiction

[b] Requirement of Statutory Compliance

[c] Requirement of Election to Dissolve

[d] Court Without Jurisdiction In Futuro

§ 52.191 Opposing Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Election to Dissolve Revoked

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limits on Jurisdiction

[b] Revocation Terminates Dissolution Process

[c] Failure to File with Secretary of State as Not Affecting Validity of Revocation.

§ 52.192 Opposing Motion to Approve Intermediate Accounts of Directors [Corp. Code § 1806(d)] and to Determine Claims Against Corporation [Corp. Code § 1806(b)] and Rights of Shareholders to Assets [Corp. Code § 1806(c)]--Objection by Creditor to Claim of Competing Creditor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standing of Creditor to Object to Another Creditor's Claim

[b] Failure to Perfect Personal Property Tax Lien Bars Priority Claim

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.01

§ 52.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda dealing with legal issues arising specifically with respect to corporations, including forms dealing with the following:

- Supporting [see §§ 52.20, 52.21] and opposing [see §§ 52.34 -52.36] a motion for summary judgment in an action maintained by a foreign corporation that has not qualified to transact intrastate business or is suspended under the laws of its state of incorporation.

- Supporting [see § 52.30] and opposing [see §§ 52.38, 52.39] a motion for summary judgment on the ground that a defendant foreign corporation is a "nominally foreign" corporation.

- Supporting [see § 52.31] and opposing [see §§ 52.40 -52.42] a motion for summary judgment on the ground that a corporate party has had its powers suspended or forfeited for nonpayment of its franchise taxes.

- Supporting [see § 52.32] and opposing [see § 52.43] a motion for summary judgment on the ground that a contract is voidable when entered into by a corporation during a period of suspension or forfeiture.

- Supporting a motion for summary judgment against a corporation that has had its corporate powers suspended in failure to file the information statement required by law [see § 52.33].

- Supporting [see §§ 52.22 -52.29] and opposing [see § 52.37] a motion for change of venue by a defendant corporation.

- Supporting [see §§ 52.60, 52.61] and opposing [see §§ 52.63, 52.64] a demurrer to a complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation based on the alter ego doctrine.

- Supporting [see § 52.62] and opposing [see §§ 52.65 -52.70] a plaintiff's motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation so as to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of a corporate judgment debtor.

- Opposing a plaintiff's motion to amend a judgment so as to include as a judgment debtor the name of a corporation in which the defendant happens to own shares, when the motion is based on the doctrine of outside reverse piercing of the corporate veil (a theory that the corporation, as the alter ego of the shareholder, can be liable to a third-party judgment creditor of the shareholder, which is not recognized in California) [see § 52.80].

- Supporting [see §§ 52.90 -52.94] and opposing [see §§ 52.95, 52.96] petitions for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit inspection of its books, records, and other documents and its properties under Corp. Code §§ 1600-1605. (Note that not all corporate inspection rights will be governed by Corp. Code § 1600 et seq. For instance, inspection rights of shareholders of state savings and loan associations are governed by Fin. Code § 6050 [Feldman v. San Mateo Financial Corp. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 543, 547, 276 Cal. Rptr. 285] .)

- Supporting [see §§ 52.110 -52.112] and opposing [see §§ 52.118, 52.119] demurrers to complaints for damages against directors and other agents of the corporation, on the ground of expiration of the period of the statute of limitations.

- Supporting a demurrer to a creditor's complaint for damages against directors of an insolvent corporation, on the ground that the directors owe no fiduciary duty to creditors of an insolvent corporation [see § 52.112A].

- Supporting a demurrer to a complaint for removal of directors for failure of the complaint to state a cause of action [see § 52.113].

- Supporting a demurrer to an answer to a petition for appointment of a provisional director on the ground that estoppel and unclean hands are not defenses in such proceedings [see § 52.114].

- Supporting a motion by a defendant for summary judgment on the ground that a director lacks authority to institute an action in the corporation's name against a co-director and equal shareholder [see § 52.115].

- Supporting a motion by defendant for summary judgment in an action to remove a director from office [see § 52.116].

- Supporting [see § 52.117] and opposing [see § 52.120] a motion by a corporate agent for indemnification of expenses incurred in defending claims.

- Supporting [see §§ 52.140 -52.146] and opposing [see §§ 52.156 -52.162] demurrers to a complaint in a derivative action on the basis that there has been a failure to meet the statutory prerequisites for a derivative action.

- Supporting [see § 52.149] and opposing [see §§ 52.166, 52.167] a defendant's motion for security for attorney's fees and costs in a derivative action.

- Supporting a successful plaintiff's motion [see § 52.150], or supporting [see §§ 52.150A, 52.151] and opposing [see § 52.168] a successful defendant's motion, for attorney's fees and costs in a derivative action.

- Supporting a motion to permit a plaintiff to waive the requirement of being a registered or beneficial shareholder or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time of the wrongdoing to the corporation [see § 52.152].

- Supporting motions to approve a compromise settlement [see § 52.153], to modify the amount of the bond [see § 52.154], and to dismiss for failure to post security [see § 52.155] or because the plaintiff no longer is a shareholder of the corporation [see § 52.155A].

- Supporting [see § 52.147] and opposing [see §§ 52.163 -52.165] a motion for summary judgment based on application of the business judgment rule.

- Supporting a motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that a derivative action against the corporation's outside counsel cannot proceed in the absence of a corporate waiver of the attorney-client privilege [see § 52.148].

- Supporting [see §§ 52.180, 52.181] and opposing [see §§ 52.190, 52.191] a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a corporation.

- Supporting a motion to dismiss a complaint seeking involuntary dissolution of a corporation [see § 52.182].

- Supporting a motion for summary judgment on the ground that involuntary dissolution is not reasonably necessary to protect shareholder rights or interests [see § 52.183].

- Supporting a motion by a shareholder or creditor to intervene in an action for involuntary dissolution [see § 52.184].

- Supporting a petition for the determination of the identity, or for the appointment of directors during dissolution proceedings [see § 52.185].

- Supporting [see § 52.186] and opposing [see § 52.192] a motion for approval of intermediate accounts of directors, determination of claims of creditors and rights of shareholders to assets.

- Supporting a motion for stay of dissolution proceedings and for appointment of appraisers to ascertain the value of stock in connection with the exercise of statutory "buy-out" rights [see § 52.187].

- Supporting a petition for an order declaring a corporation duly wound up and dissolved [see § 52.188].

- Supporting a motion for summary judgment by the defendant in an action by a creditor against a dissolved corporation [see § 52.189].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionFraudBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsDirectors & OfficersManagement Duties & LiabilitiesCauses of ActionNegligent Acts of Directors & OfficersBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentWritten Motions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.02

§ 52.02 Governing Statutes

[1] In General

The law governing corporations is contained in Division I of the Corporations Code [Corp. Code § 100 et seq.], referred to in this chapter as the General Corporation Law. In addition to the provisions of the General Corporation Law, provisions governing the jurisdiction of, and service of process on corporations are contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10 et seq., and provisions governing the suspension or forfeiture of corporations for their failure to pay franchise taxes are governed by the Corporation Tax Law [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.].

Limited liability companies [see § 52.02[4]] are governed by the Beverly-Killea Limited Liability Company Act [Corp. Code § 17000 et seq.].

[2] Application of General Corporation Law

Subject to the transitional provisions of Corp. Code § 2300 et seq., the General Corporation Law applies to corporations organized under the General Corporation Law and to domestic corporations that were not subject on December 31, 1976, to Corp. Code § 5000 et seq. (nonprofit corporations), Corp. Code § 12000 (corporations for specific purposes), Corp. Code § 12200 et seq. (consumer cooperative corporations), Corp. Code § 13200 et seq. (fish marketing), Corp. Code § 14000 et seq. (small business financial development corporations), and that are not organized or existing under any statute of California other than the Corporations Code. The General Corporation Law applies to any other corporation only to the extent expressly included in a particular provision of the General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 102(a)].

[3] Existing Corporations

The existence of a corporation formed or existing on the date of enactment or reenactment of the General Corporation Law is not affected by the enactment or reenactment of the General Corporation Law, nor by any change in the requirements for the formation of corporations, nor by the amendment or repeal of laws under which they were formed [Corp. Code § 102(b)].

In addition, no repeal effected by the enactment or reenactment of the General Corporation Law, nor the enactment of Title 1 of the Corporations Code [Corp. Code § 1 et seq.], nor the amendment of Title 1, impairs or takes away any existing liability or cause of action against any corporation, its shareholders, directors, or officers incurred prior to the time of the enactment, reenactment, or amendment [Corp. Code § 102(c)].

[4] Limited Liability Companies

A limited liability company or domestic limited liability company (LLC) is an entity that has one or more members, is organized under the Beverly-Killea Limited Liability Company Act, and is subject to the provisions on personal liability of members set forth in Corp. Code § 17101 [Corp. Code § 17001(t); see Corp. Code § 17000 et seq.]. A properly structured California LLC can have essentially the income tax transparency of a partnership on both the federal and California level, without some of the restrictions imposed on corporations and limited partnerships [see I.R.C. § 701; Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-2; Rev. Proc. 95-10, 1995-1 C.B. 501 ; FTB Notice 92-5]. Properly structured LLCs can provide their members, managers, and officers with limited liability similar to that enjoyed by corporateshareholders; that is, liability generally limited to their investments and commitments to invest in the LLC [Corp. Code §§ 17101(a), 17158; see Corp. Code §§ 17101(b), (c), 17153, 17254(e), 17255(a); Rev. & Tax Code § 6829(c) (exceptions to limited liability)]. LLCs offer great flexibility of form and structure, which can range from extremely simple to very complex and, if desired, can closely approximate management and ownership structures of either corporations or partnerships.

An LLC may engage in any lawful business activity (subject to any limitations contained in its articles of organization and to compliance with any applicable laws), whether or not for profit, except banking, insurance, or trust company business [Corp. Code § 17002(a); see Corp. Code § 17002(b) (LLC may operate as health care service plan)]. An LLC also may not render professional services that may be lawfully rendered only pursuant to a license, certification, or registration authorized by the Business and Professions Code, Chiropractic Act, or Osteopathic Act [see Corp. Code § 13401(a)], or pursuant to a license, certification, or registration authorized by the Yacht and Ship Brokers Act [see Corp. Code § 13401.3; see also Harb. & Nav. Code § 700 et seq.] in California [Corp. Code § 17375 (codifying previously uncodified provision); see Stats. 1994, ch. 1200, § 93].

The Beverly-Killea Limited Liability Company Act is designed especially to assist the formation and operation of small, closely-held or closely-controlled business arrangements. Unlike the limited liability company statutes of some other states, the California Act permits structures sufficiently flexible to be attractive to larger, more complex business ventures. Business areas in which the LLC structure seems particularly useful include real estate, joint ventures (particularly ventures with foreign partners), high technology and venture capital, oil and gas, and theatrical investments. It seems likely that LLCs may often be used when a partnership or S corporation previously might have been used.

For more detailed discussion of LLCs, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 27, Limited Liability Companies (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the formation and operation of LLCs, see California Legal Forms, Ch. 12C, Limited Liability Companies (Matthew Bender). For forms relating to litigation involving LLCs, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 346, Limited Liability Companies (Matthew Bender).

[5] Foreign Corporations

Corp. Code §§ 171, 191, 2100-2260 govern foreign corporations generally, and in particular, Corp. Code § 2105 governs the qualifications of foreign corporations transacting intrastate business; Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2117, and 2117.1 govern statements required to be filed by foreign corporations transacting intrastate business in California; and Corp. Code § 2115 governs "nominally foreign" corporations, that is, corporations that are subject to those corporate laws of California contained in Corp. Code § 2115(b). Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 governs the venue of an action maintained against a corporation. In addition, Corp. Code §§ 2108(d), 2204-2206, govern forfeiture or suspension of powers of foreign corporations for failure to comply with California reporting requirements, and Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 et seq. govern the suspension and forfeiture of corporations that have failed to pay their franchise taxes.

If a foreign corporation is not transacting sufficient California business to be subject to the registration requirements, California law will apply the law of the state of incorporation to determine the continuing existence of the foreign corporation [CM Records Corp. v. MCA Records, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967, 214 Cal. Rptr. 409] .

[6] Alter Ego Doctrine

Although the General Corporation Law does not contain provisions governing, in general, the alter ego doctrine, Corp. Code § 300(e) does provide that the relaxation of the formalities of directors and shareholders meetings in a close corporation pursuant to a shareholder's agreement [see Corp. Code § 300(b)] is not to be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations.

[7] Corporate Records

Corporate records and reports and the rights of inspection of shareholders and directors are governed by Corp. Code §§ 1500-1605. Provisions regarding the issuance of writs of mandate are governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085 and 1086.

[8] Duties and Liabilities of Directors and Managers

The duties and liabilities of directors and managers generally are governed by Corp. Code § 300 et seq.

The provisions for maintaining a derivative action are set forth in Corp. Code § 800(a)-(f). The business judgment rule, which is often applied in derivative actions, is codified in Corp. Code § 309. Corp. Code §§ 310-317 address other aspects of directors' duties and liability, including those involved in transactions between a director and the corporation.

[9] Involuntary Dissolution

Provisions relating to involuntary dissolution are contained in Corp. Code § 1800 et seq. Voluntary dissolution proceedings are governed by Corp. Code § 1900 et seq. Corp. Code § 2000 et seq. contain general provisions relating to dissolution. Definitions and general provisionsapplicable to all sections of the General Corporation Law are found in Corp. Code § 100 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsFinanceFranchise TaxGeneral OverviewBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersActions Against CorporationsDerivative ActionsEnforcement of Corporate RightsBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersShareholder Duties & LiabilitiesPersonal LiabilityBusiness & Corporate LawForeign BusinessesQualificationsCivil ProcedureVenueCorporations

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.03

§ 52.03 Other Procedures for Imposing Alter Ego Liability

The following procedures provide the bases for the forms in this part:

- Alleging the facts for imposition of alter ego liability in the complaint and proving them at trial, or

- Moving after trial to amend the judgment against the corporation to include the alter egos as additional judgment debtors.

In addition, the following procedures may be used to obtain a judgment imposing alter ego liability on an entity or person who was not a party to the initial action against the corporation, although not all of these procedures will be appropriate in every situation:

- Petition for an order to show cause why the judgment should not be amended to add the controlling person as judgment debtor [Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 174-176, 331 P.2d 1 ; Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359] ;

- Separate action against the controlling person or entity to establish its liability for the original judgment [Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 151-152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; Taylor v. Newton (1953) 117 Cal. App. 2d 752, 753-757, 257 P.2d 68] ; or

- Joint debtor proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 989-993 [see Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 147-148, 152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 (dictum); Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 211 n.3, 141 Cal. Rptr. 890 (dictum)]. Joint debtor proceedings are limited to establishing liability for contract obligations and are only available against a person who was named as a defendant, albeit a fictitious one, in the original complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 989; Vincent v. Grayson (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905-906, 106 Cal. Rptr. 733 ; McRae v. Bates (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 510, 512, 16 Cal. Rptr. 565] . For further discussion of joint debtor proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments (Matthew Bender).

When a person is sued on the theory that a corporation is the person's alter ego, that person has standing to enforce the corporation's agreement to arbitrate the underlying dispute, even though that person was not a party to the agreement [Rowe v. Exline (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1276, 1285, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 787] . For points and authorities supporting a motion to compel arbitration pursuant to an agreement to arbitrate, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling , and Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoCorporate FormalitiesBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoInadequate CapitalizationCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & Amend

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.04

§ 52.04 Alter Ego Liability Is Joint and Several

If the corporate veil is pierced, each defendant as to whom it is pierced is jointly and severally liable for the full amount of the corporation's obligation. Alter ego liability is not apportioned according to the ownership interests of each defendant. A person who is not made a defendant or against whom alter ego liability is not established does not have to contribute to payment of the corporate obligation [Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1028-1029, 253 Cal. Rptr. 908] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoCorporate FormalitiesBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoInadequate CapitalizationCivil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsMultiple Claims & Parties

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.05

§ 52.05 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, an opening or responding memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. The page limit does not include exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, or the proof of service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. A memorandum that exceeds 10 pages must include a table of contents and a table of authorities. A memorandum that exceeds 15 pages must also include an opening summary of argument [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(f)]. Pagination of a memorandum that includes a table of contents and authorities is governed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(h). For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProceduresSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.06

§ 52.06 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for allegations and affirmative defenses involving the organization and existence of corporations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chapters 160-170 (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for use in particular cases involving the jurisdiction, capacity, and venue of corporations, see the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions.
- Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances.
- Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers.
- Ch. 571, Venue.

For a discussion and a complaint, allegations, an affirmative defense, a notice, of motion, and an order to amend a judgment to include an alter ego litigant, and a declaration in support of such a motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 161, Corporations: Alter Ego Liability (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion, procedural guide, and forms for use in mandate proceedings, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For a discussion and forms for petitions for writs of mandate to enforce rights of inspection, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms relating to actions and proceedings involving directors, officers, and controlling shareholders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and related forms for filing a derivative action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion and forms for certificates, petitions, motions, declarations, orders, and a complaint relating to the dissolution of corporations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

For discussions and forms relating to particular procedural issues, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances.
- Ch. 324, Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 371, Motions After Trial.
- Ch. 395, Parties.
- Ch. 537, Summary Judgment.

For discussions and forms for use in actions involving control and management of corporations generally, of particular types of corporations and other business organizations, and for use in actions relating to the disposition of their property on dissolution, liquidation, or other form of structural change, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 7, Accounting, Action For.
- Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks.
- Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations.
- Ch. 120, Class Actions.
- Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments.
- Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances.
- Ch. 307, Insolvency.
- Ch. 355, Lost and Unclaimed Property.
- Ch. 486, Receivers.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawCorporationsFormationDe Facto CorporationsChallenging ExistenceBusiness & Corporate LawCorporationsShareholdersDisregard of Corporate EntityAlter EgoGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureVenueCorporationsCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsAffirmative DefensesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.07

§ 52.07 Related Memoranda Chapters

For a discussion of how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a memorandum or a trial or appellate brief, and for a sample of a complete memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For memoranda addressing suspension or forfeiture and failure of a foreign corporation to qualify to do intrastate business in the context of pleas in abatement, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions .

For memoranda relating to motions to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction over a domestic or foreign corporate defendant, its officers, counsel, or shareholders, and memoranda relating to motions to stay or dismiss an action for inconvenient forum, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum .

Memoranda for writs of mandate in general situations may be found in Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

Related memoranda that may be useful in connection with proceedings for the dissolution of a corporation may be found in the following chapters in this publication:

- Ch. 12, Accounting.
- Ch. 30, Bankruptcy.
- Ch. 124, Intervention.
- Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 200, Receivers.
- Ch. 221, Summary Judgments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeService of ProcessMethodsForeign ServiceCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamus

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.08-52.19

[Reserved]

§§ 52.08[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.20

§ 52.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action Maintained by Foreign Corporation--Corporation Transacting Intrastate Business Without Having Obtained Certificate of Qualification [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], a(n)	)	NO. _____
_____	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
[name of state or foreign country]	)	SUMMARY JUDGMENT
Corporation, Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name],	)	Location: _____
Defendant.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS A FOREIGN CORPORATION WHICH IS TRANSACTING INTRASTATE BUSINESS AND HAS NOT OBTAINED FROM THE SECRETARY OF STATE A CERTIFICATE OF QUALIFICATION AS REQUIRED BY SECTION 2105 OF THE CORPORATIONS CODE.

A. Summary Judgment. A defendant may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that the action has no merit. The motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Foreign Corporation Defined. A foreign corporation means any corporation other than one formed under the laws of California (Corp. Code §§ 167, 171).

[Optional] C. Foreign Association. The term "foreign corporation" includes a business association organized as a trust under the laws of a foreign jurisdiction (Corp. Code §§ 170, 171).

D. Certificate of Qualification Is Required If Foreign Corporation Transacting Intrastate Business. A foreign corporation may not transact intrastate business without having first obtained from the Secretary of State a certificate of qualification as provided in Corporations Code Section 2105 (Corp. Code § 2105).

E. Transaction of Intrastate Business. A foreign corporation is considered to be transacting intrastate business if it enters into repeated and successive transactions of its business in California, other than interstate or foreign commerce (Corp. Code § 191(a); see Neogard Corp. v. Malott & Peterson-Grundy (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226-227, 164 Cal. Rptr. 813 (example of sufficient interstate activity)).

F. Nonqualified Foreign Corporation Barred From Maintaining Suit. A foreign corporation subject to the provisions of Corporations Code Sections 2100-2116, which transacts intrastate business without complying with Corporations Code Section 2105 by first obtaining a certificate of qualification from the Secretary of State, may not maintain any action or proceeding in any court of California, on any of the intrastate business so transacted, commenced prior to compliance with Corporations Code Section 2105 until it has complied with the provisions thereof and has paid to the Secretary of State a penalty of two hundred and fifty dollars ($250), in addition to the fees due for filing the statement and designation required by Corporations Code Section 2105, and has filed with the clerk of the court, in which the action is pending, receipts showing the payment of these fees and penalty and all franchise taxes, and other taxes on business or property in California which should have been paid for the period during which it transacted intrastate business (Corp. Code § 2203(c); see Neogard Corp. v. Malott & Peterson-Grundy (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 225-227, 164 Cal. Rptr. 813 (statute does not violate Commerce Clause).

[Optional] G. Action by Assignee of Nonqualified Foreign Corporation. An assignee of a foreign corporation is barred from maintaining an action in California when the corporation would be barredfor failure to comply with the requirements of transacting intrastate business in California (Thorner v. Selective Cam Transmission Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 89, 93, 4 Cal. Rptr. 409).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment by defendant in an action being maintained by a foreign corporation on the corporation's intrastate business when the corporation has not first obtained a certificate from the Secretary of State as required by Corp. Code § 2105. In a particular case counsel may also wish to include selected points and authorities set out in opposition to § 52.34 in order to distinguish his or her particular fact situation.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to support a demurrer to a complaint based on the plaintiff foreign corporation's want of capacity to sue when the procedural defect of the failure of the corporation to obtain a certificate of qualification appears on the face of the complaint [see H. D. Haley & Co. v. McVay (1924) 70 Cal. App. 438, 440, 233 P. 409] . It should be noted, however, that the failure to allege affirmatively the capacity of a corporation to sue is not a proper ground for general demurrer [Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865] . Failure to obtain a certificate to transact intrastate business may also be raised as a plea in abatement at a motion for separate trial of special defense. For a form raising the issue in that procedural context, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions . Note, however, that an evidentiary hearing may be necessary to determine whether the extent of intrastate business is sufficient to require the foreign corporation to obtain a certificate of qualification [see, e.g., Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 615, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 (motion to strike treated as motion for summary judgment)].

These points and authorities can also be modified for use in a trial or appellate brief, or in opposition to a writ of prohibition or mandate, or in a motion to strike.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 52.34 and 52.35 may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

Plaintiff in Neogard Corp. v. Malott & Peterson-Grundy (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 164 Cal. Rptr. 813 , had transacted business in California for nine years. Nevertheless, it had not obtained a certificate of qualification under Corp. Code § 2105 and, on this basis, the trial court dismissed its breach of contract action against a local firm.

The court of appeal upheld the dismissal, finding that plaintiff's activities enumerated below constituted intrastate business, when taken together, despite the fact that plaintiff maintained no payrolled office in California (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226) . Plaintiff established relations with and paid commissions to manufacturer's representatives residing in California. It sent sales representatives intrastate to induce construction contracts between California project designers and California waterproofing subcontractors. It assisted the waterproofing subcontractors in obtaining those contracts. It entered into contracts with subcontractors and utilized this fact to induce contracts between interstate parties. It supervised the physical in-state application of its waterproofing system. It signed contracts in-state to guarantee those projects and provided in-state supervision when defects appear. This, the court said, amounted to more than entry into California merely to contribute to or to conclude a unitary interstate transaction (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226) .

Plaintiff also contended that the cause of action related to purely interstate contracts involving defendant's obligation to pay for product received, and thus could not be dismissed under Corp. Code § 2203(c) or the commerce clause. The court of appeal disagreed, concluding that the fact that the contract under suit is part and parcel of a course of business they deemed "intrastate" for purposes of Corp. Code § 2105 renders that contract action one on intrastate business for purposes of Corp. Code § 2203(c) (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 227) .

[b] Nonqualified Foreign Corporation Barred From Maintaining Suit

The facts and procedural background of Neogard Corp. v. Malott & Peterson-Grundy (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 213,

164 Cal. Rptr. 813 are discussed in § 52.01[3][a]. Plaintiff also contended that the dismissal violated the commerce clause of the United States Constitution. The court discussed the fact that the commerce clause addressed interstate commerce as opposed to intrastate activities and discussed the United States Supreme court's analysis of a similar New Jersey statute (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 225-226) . The court concluded that because the qualification statute [Corp. Code § 2203] protects important state interests, does not discriminate against out-of-state corporations, imposes a minimal burden on the out-of-state corporation relative to the interests served, and was enforced in a manner ordinarily involving no onerous consequences, the dismissal should be affirmed (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226-227) . The court noted that while the commerce clause prevents a state from conditioning a foreign corporation's right to sue on a contract for the interstate sale of goods, there was more involved here. The heart of the controversy actually concerned who was to pay for intrastate repairs on projects already completed, and thus involved both the joint guarantee signed by plaintiff in California and the supervision of the actual construction. Those critical questions were entirely separate from any particular interstate sale and the power of the state was not limited (106 Cal. App. 3d 213, 227) .

[c] Action by Assignee of Nonqualified Foreign Corporation

In Thorner v. Selective Cam Transmission Co. (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 89, 4 Cal. Rptr. 409 , the court of appeal held that the defendant failed to meet its burden of proof on defendant's motion to dismiss for failure of the plaintiff, an assignee of a foreign corporation, to obtain a certificate of qualification as required by former Corp. Code § 6801 [now see Corp. Code § 2203(c)]. In its holding, the court also considered the plaintiff's argument that former Corp. Code § 6801 [now see Corp. Code § 2203(c)] does not bar an action by an assignee and held that it does. The court noted the generally accepted rule in other jurisdictions which barred an assignee of a foreign corporation from suing when the corporation would be barred for failure to comply with the requirements of transacting intrastate business. In following this rule, the court stated it was unwilling to place the plaintiff's narrow technical construction of former Corp. Code § 6801 when to do so would obviously frustrate the purpose of the statute (180 Cal. App. 2d 89, 93) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

Lilly & Co. v. Sav-On-Drugs (1961) 366 U.S. 276, 81 S. Ct. 1316, 6 L. Ed. 2d 288 was an appeal to the United States Supreme Court by an Indiana corporation which brought suit in New Jersey on a contract made in New Jersey. The New Jersey courts had held that the corporation must first obtain a certificate authorizing it to do business in that state before it may bring suit on the contract when it had maintained 18 employees in New Jersey to promote sales of its products to retailers who bought the products in intrastate commerce from wholesalers. The Supreme Court affirmed and held that under the terms of the New Jersey statute, the New Jersey courts could compel the Indiana corporation, under the United States Constitution, to comply with its statute since the corporation was doing business by virtue of the fact that its salesmen were in the business of "inducing" intrastate sales. The fact that the business was primarily a promotional and service business, which did not include a systematic solicitation of orders, went only to the nature of the intrastate business the corporation was carrying on, not to the question of whether it is carrying on an intrastate business (366 U.S. 276, 282-284 .

United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 involved a foreign corporation that entered into a contract with a California corporation to transact intrastate business, without first qualifying to transact intrastate business pursuant to Corp. Code § 2105. The California corporation breached the contract. The foreign corporation then qualified to transact intrastate business and brought an action for breach of contract. The trial court granted a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to comply with Corp. Code § 2203(c). The court of appeals held that a foreign corporation that has qualified to transact intrastate business after transacting, but prior to commencing an action on, intrastate business may maintain the action without complying with Corp. Code § 2203(c) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742) . The court also noted that a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business that has failed to qualify may nevertheless defend an action brought against it in state court. A foreign corporation transacting intrastate business that has failed to qualify may also commence an action in state court; it is the act of maintaining an action commenced prior to qualification that requires compliance with Corp. Code § 2203(c) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1739 ; see § 52.36).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.21

§ 52.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action Maintained by Foreign Corporation--Foreign Corporation Not Subject to California Registration Suspended Under Law of State of Incorporation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.20.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS A FOREIGN CORPORATION WHICH, THOUGH NOT TRANSACTING INTRASTATE BUSINESS IN CALIFORNIA, IS SUSPENDED UNDER THE APPLICABLE LAW OF THE STATE IN WHICH IT WAS INCORPORATED.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Law of State of Incorporation as Determining Continuing Corporate Status of Foreign Corporation. _____ [Even when a valid choice of law clause applies California law, if or If] a foreign corporation is not transacting sufficient California business to be subject to the registration requirements, the capacity of that foreign corporation to maintain suit in California is determined by the law of the state of its incorporation (CM Records Corp. v. MCA Records, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967, 969, 214 Cal. Rptr. 409).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment by defendant in an action by a foreign corporation that is not doing sufficient business in California to be subject to the registration requirement of Corp. Code § 2105 but whose capacity to maintain the suit has been suspended under the laws of the state in which it was incorporated.

Counsel should set forth the applicable foreign statutes and cases. Counsel should also insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Properly authenticated documentary evidence or declarations or affidavits and request for judicial notice of the foreign law should be included in support of the motion [see Evid. Code §§ 452(a), 453 (judicial notice)].

In the unlikely event that the lack of corporate capacity appears on the face of the complaint, these points and authorities, with appropriate modifications, may be used in support of a demurrer [see H.D. Haley & Co. v. McVay (1924) 70 Cal. App. 438, 440, 233 P. 409] . Failure to affirmatively allege corporate capacity to sue is not a proper ground for a general demurrer [Los Angeles Ry. Co. v. Davis (1905) 146 Cal. 179, 180-181, 79 P. 865] . With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Related Memoranda

For discussion and a form that may be adapted for use in a special trial of the issue of corporate capacity, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions in this publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Law of State of Incorporation as Determining Continuing Corporate Status of Foreign Corporation

CM Records Corp. v. MCA Records, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 214 Cal. Rptr. 409 was a breach of contract action arising out of a contract executed by the parties on April 3, 1979. Plaintiff was a Missouri corporation; defendant was a California corporation. The contract provided that it was to be "governed and construed under the laws and judicial decisions of the State of California." Plaintiff's corporate charter had been forfeited in Missouri on January 1, 1979, for failure to observe that state's registration requirements. Plaintiff commenced suit in California on April 29, 1980, and the Missouri secretary of state rescinded plaintiff's forfeiture on July 11, 1980. Defendant had raised the suspension of plaintiff's charter as an affirmative defense and moved for summary judgment on that basis. After defendant's motion for summary judgment was granted, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the choice of law provision in the contract and noted that both parties agreed that California law recognizes that the continuing legal existence of a corporation depends on the law of the state of its incorporation (168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 967) . Missouri law provides that no corporation shall prosecute any action enumerated in Mo. Rev. Stat. § 351.535 following a rescission of its forfeiture if the action was filed after the forfeiture of the corporation's rights but prior to the rescission of that forfeiture (Mo. Rev. Stat. § 351.540(2)). Section 351.535 includes an action for enforcement of a contract made after forfeiture of the certificate andbefore rescission of the forfeiture. The court concluded that as plaintiff had no capacity to enforce the contract in Missouri, it could not do so in California (168 Cal. App. 3d 965, 969) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.22

§ 52.22 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue--To County of Corporation's Principal Place of Business [Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	CHANGE OF VENUE TO PROPER COURT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
a Corporation, Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT MUST ORDER A[N] _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] COMMENCED AGAINST A CORPORATION TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL PLACE OF BUSINESS IF IT APPEARS THAT THE _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] WAS NOT COMMENCED IN A PROPER COURT.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. The court may, on motion, change the place of trial when the court designated in the complaint is not the proper court (Code Civ. Proc. § 397(a)).

B. Motion for Change of Venue. The court must order the _____ [action or proceeding] transferred to the proper court where it appears on a motion for an order transferring the same to the proper court that the _____ [action or proceeding] was not commenced in that court (Code Civ. Proc. § 396b).

C. Venue of Corporation--Generally. A corporation may be sued in the county where the contract is made or is to be performed, or where the obligation or liability arises, or the breach occurs; or in the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated (Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5; see Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 (location of corporation's principal place of business established for venue purposes)).

D. Proper County When General Venue Provisions Govern. Where the plaintiff fails to bring its action in any of the counties specified in former Section 16 of Article XII of the California Constitution (now Section 395.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure), and such action is not governed by any specific provision of the Corporations Code, the corporation then is entitled to a change of venue to the county of its principal place of business (Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 478, 241 P.2d 4 ; Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336).

[Optional] E. Foreign Corporations. The provisions of former Section 16 of Article XII of the California Constitution (now Section 395.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure) applies to foreign corporations as well as domestic corporations (Ellis v. National Cas. Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 77, 79, 221 P.2d 127).

[Optional] F. Two or More Corporate Defendants. Where more than one corporate defendant challenges venue in the same action, such defendants have an absolute right on request to have the trial moved to one or the other of the counties of their residence; that is, the counties of their principal places of business (Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 717-718, 52 Cal. Rptr. 592).

[Optional] G. Place of Making of Contract. A contract for venue purposes is held to have been made where the last act required for the completion of its execution was performed (Rawson v. J. C. Forkner Fig Gardens, Inc. (1928) 206 Cal. 4, 6, 272 P. 1057 ; Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 Cal. 314, 315, 74 P. 855).

[Optional] H. Anticipatory Breach of Contract. An anticipatory repudiation of a contract by letter is a breach at the time when, and the place where, the letter is dispatched (Karson Indus., Inc. v. Superior Court (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 7, 10, 77 Cal. Rptr. 714).

[Optional] I. Place of Performance of Contract. In a suit on the contract of a corporation, where there is no place of performance expressly stipulated, it ought to be held performable in the place where the circumstances, viewed in the light of pertinent code provisions, indicate that the parties expected or intended it to be performed (Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 466, 241 P.2d 4 ; Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 Cal. 314, 315, 74 P. 855).

[Optional] J. Place of Performance in Payment of Debt. By the terms of Sections 1488 and 1489 of the Civil Code, the place of performance in the payment of a debt, if there is no agreement or stipulation to the contrary, is the place where the creditor resides, or at his/her place of business, if he/she has one, or wherever else he/she may be found (Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 467, 241 P.2d 4).

[Optional] K. Where Tort Liability Arises. In tort the liability arises where the wrongful invasion of legal rights occurs (Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336).

[Optional] L. Allegation of "Doing Business." An allegation in plaintiff's complaint that a corporate defendant is "doing business" in the county in which the title of the action shows that it is brought is insufficient to controvert the positive averment of such defendant that its principal place of business is in another specified county (Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion made by a defendant corporation for a transfer of an action or proceeding commenced against it to the county of the corporation's principal place of business when the general venue provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 govern and the action was not commenced in the county where the contract was made or was to be performed, if the action was based on contract, or where the obligation or liability arose, or the breach occurred.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant corporation's petition for a writ of mandaterequiring transfer of the trial of the case to the proper court when the trial court has denied a motion to change the place of trial on the grounds that the court designated in the complaint is the proper court. They may also be used to oppose a petition for a writ of mandate requiring trial of the case in the designated court when the trial court has granted a corporate defendant's motion to change the place of trial on the grounds that the designated court was an improper court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 400].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for an allegation of the principal place of business of a corporate defendant, of a notice of motion for a change of place of trial, and a petition for writ of mandate by a party aggrieved by an order denying a motion for a change of venue, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Memoranda

For a related memorandum in support of a defendant's motion for change of venue to a county of his or her residence on the grounds that (1) local and transitory actions were joined, or (2) that transitory actions were joined, one of which entitled defendant to trial in the county of his or her residence, or (3) that the main relief sought is transitory, see Ch. 238, Venue .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Change of Venue

Code Civ. Proc. § 396b(a) provides that if an action or proceeding is commenced in a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter other than the court designated as the proper court for the trial thereof under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392 et seq. (place of trial of civil actions), the action may, notwithstanding, be tried in the court in which it was commenced, unless the defendant, at the time he or she answers, demurs, or moves to strike, or, at his or her option, without answering, demurring, or moving to strike, and within the time otherwise allowed to respond to the complaint, files with the clerk a notice of motion for an order transferring the action or proceeding to the proper court, together with proof of service, on the adverse party, of a copy of those papers. On the hearing of the motion the court must, if it appears that the action or proceeding was not commenced in the proper court, order it transferred to the proper court. In any case, if an answer is filed, the court may consider opposition to the motion, if any, and may retain the action in the county where commenced if it appears that the convenience of the witnesses or the ends of justice will thereby be promoted [Code Civ. Proc. § 396b(d)].

[b] Venue of Corporations

Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 is discussed in § 52.37[3][g].

[c] Proper County When General Venue Provisions Govern

Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 241 P.2d 4 , involved an action for breach of an employment contract brought in Humboldt County against a corporation, a lumber company with its principal place of business in San Mateo County. The contract provided for plaintiff's employment by defendant as superintendent of logging operations in Humboldt County. Defendant moved the trial court for a change of venue to San Mateo County on the grounds that the contract was made there, its performance was to be rendered there, the breach, if any, occurred there, and it had its principal place of business there. In addition, it contended that Code Civ. Proc. § 395 applied to corporations and required that San Mateo County be deemed the place of performance in the absence of a special contract in writing to the contrary. In opposition to the motion, plaintiff contended that the contract was performable in Humboldt County, the breach occurred there, and Code Civ. Proc. § 395 was inapplicable to corporate defendants. The trial court denied the motion, defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed. The most extensive part of the court's opinion dealt with the question of whether Code Civ. Proc. § 395 applies to corporations, and therefore limited the application of the provisions of former Cal. Const., Art. XII, § 16 (now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5), to actions against corporations. Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 provides in substance that all actions arising in contract must be tried in the county in which the defendant resides, or in which the contract was made, unless the defendant has contracted specially and in writing as to the county in which his or her obligation is to be performed, in which event that county is also a proper county for the trial of the action. If this provision did apply to defendant, then San Mateo County was the only proper county for the trial since the Court found that the contract was signed in that county and, therefore was made there. The Court concluded, however, that Code Civ. Proc. § 395 did not apply to corporations. Although part of its reasoning is based on the rules of construction is conflicts between constitutional and statutory provisions, the Court also based its conclusion on the fact that the intention of the constitutional convention in adopting former Cal. Cont., Art. XII, § 16, was to benefit the plaintiff, who otherwise would be obliged to travel to the corporation's principal place of business to commence his or her action by providing a venue for actions against corporations greatly enlarged over that for actions against other defendants. The Court noted that only where the plaintiff fails to bring his or her action in any of the counties specified by the Constitution, is the corporation thenentitled to a change of venue to the county of its principal place of business under the last clause of the constitutional provision [see Paragraph C of the foregoing form].

In Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 , petitioner sought a writ of mandate compelling respondent court to vacate and set aside its order denying petitioner's motion for change of venue from Los Angeles County to San Diego County, and to grant such change. The action, which was for false imprisonment of a minor plaintiff and allegedly took place on petitioner's premises in San Diego, was commenced in the county of plaintiffs' residence where it was alleged that petitioner was "doing business." In support of its motion, petitioner submitted a declaration of one of its officers alleging that it had always maintained its executive offices and principal place of business in San Diego County. The court of appeal issued the peremptory writ of mandate as prayed. The court held that the allegation in plaintiffs' complaint that petitioner was a corporation "doing business" in Los Angeles County was but the conclusion of the pleader and that such a bare allegation, unsupported by probative facts, was insufficient to controvert the positive averment of the corporate defendant that its principal place of business was in San Diego County. The court stated that it had long been held that the county in which the principal place of business of a corporation is located is the county of its residence. In addition, it stated that former Calif Const, Art XII, § 16 (now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5) specifically refers to the county where the principal place of business of such corporation is situated, and that for purposes of corporate venue, the county of the corporation's principal place of business is, thus, its "residence." This was the county to which defendant was entitled to a transfer unless the obligation or liability arose in Los Angeles County where the action was commenced.

[d] Foreign Corporations

In Ellis v. National Cas. Co. (1950) 99 Cal. App. 2d 77, 221 P.2d 127 , defendant, a Michigan corporation authorized and qualified to transact business in California, appealed from an order denying its motion for a change of venue in an action for breach of contract. The motion was made on the grounds that the contract was not made or entered into, to be performed, or breached in the county in which the action was commenced and that, therefore, petitioner was entitled to have the cause transferred to the county of its principal place of business. The complaint was based on an insurance contract and contained no allegation that the contract was made, to be performed, or breached in the county in which the action was commenced. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's order. After quoting the provisions of former Calif Const, Art XII, § 16 (now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5), the court stated that the rules contained in these provisions applicable to domestic corporations also applied to foreign corporations. In stating in addition that the plaintiff must frame his or her complaint to establish his or her right to retain the trial of the action in the county in which it is commenced, the court found that the failure to allege any grounds for holding the county in which the action was commenced to be the proper county required a reversal of the trial court.

[e] Two or More Corporate Defendants

Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 52 Cal. Rptr. 592 was a mandamus proceeding to compel the trial court to vacate an order granting a change of venue. In the action, which was for personal injuries, two defendant corporations named in the complaint moved for a change of venue from the county of San Francisco in which the action was commenced to the county of Ventura which the county in which only one of the defendants had its principal place of business. The motion was based on the fact that none of the named defendants had their principal places of business in San Francisco and that the alleged injury took place in Ventura County. The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ, holding that San Francisco was a proper county for trial. Although the principal question on appeal was whether the trial court could disregard the residence of a party who had been sued by a fictitious name, and whose true name was substituted after a motion for change of venue, but before the hearing thereon, which the court of appeal decided the trial court could not do, the court noted at the outset that a corporate defendant challenging venue may obtain an order changing venue only to the county of its principal place of business unless more than one corporate defendant challenges venue in the same action. In the latter event, the court stated that such defendants have an absolute right on request to have the trial moved to one or the other of the counties of their residence; that is, the counties of their principal places of business.

[f] Place of Making of Contract

In Rawson v. J. C. Forkner Fig Gardens, Inc. (1928) 206 Cal. 4, 272 P. 1057 , defendant corporation appealed from an order denying its motion for change of place of trial from Los Angeles County to Fresno County in an action for breach of contract. The motion was based on the fact that defendant's principal place of business was in Fresno, and that the contract was made, was to be performed, and, if breached, was breached in Fresno. The contract in question, although executed and signed by defendant's president in Los Angeles, was thereafter delivered to a branch in Fresno for the purpose of having the contract further executed, as required by the by-laws of defendant. These latter acts, completing the execution of the contract were performed in Fresno. The Supreme Court reversed the order, holding that the contract must be held to have been made wherethe last act required for the completion of its execution was performed which was in Fresno. Since every other condition set forth in former Calif Const, Art XII, § 16 (now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5) was compiled with insofar as this section related to the commencement of an action of this character against a corporation, the defendant was entitled to a change of place of trial to Fresno County.

In Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 Cal. 314, 74 P. 855 , the defendant, a California corporation having its principal place of business in San Francisco, appealed from the trial court's denial of a motion for a change of venue from Yolo County to San Francisco County on the grounds that the contract sued upon neither was made in Yolo nor was to be performed there. The plaintiff, a banking corporation doing business in Yolo, had advanced money to defendant at defendant's request in a communication over the telephone in return for which defendant promised to repay the sum advanced. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's order. In holding that the contract was not made in Yolo, the Court stated that a contract must be made at some place, and the place where it becomes complete is the place where it is made. Where a contract is made by exchange of letters or telegrams, the Court stated that it is made at the place where the letter is mailed, or telegram filed, containing the unconditional acceptance by one party of the offer of the other; while if the communication between parties on opposite sides of a county line is oral, the same principle requires that the contract be deemed to be made in the county where the offer of one is accepted by the other--which, in this case was outside of Yolo county. However, the Court did hold that the contract was to be performed in Yolo. It stated that in the absence of a contrary stipulation, a promise to repay money is a promise to pay at the place where it is lent. The Court also noted that, in general, in a suit on a contract of a corporation, where no place of performance is expressly stipulated, it ought to be held performable in the place where the circumstances, viewed in the light of pertinent code provisions, indicate that the parties expected or intended it to be performed.

[g] Anticipatory Breach of Contract

In Karson Indus., Inc. v. Superior Court (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 7, 77 Cal. Rptr. 714 , defendant corporation petitioned for a writ of mandate directing trial of action against it to be held in San Bernardino County rather than Contra Costa County following the trial court's denial of the defendant's motion for a change of venue. The defendant contended that the only proper county for the trial of the action which was for anticipatory breach of contract was the county of its principal place of business which was San Bernardino. The plaintiff contended that Contra Costa was a proper county for trial because a letter which was the basis of plaintiff's action from defendant's sales manager to plaintiff in Contra Costa, posted in San Bernardino, canceling certain contracts was not an effective repudiation of these contracts until the repudiation was acted upon; that is, until plaintiff elected to treat the contracts to be terminated. The court of appeal, however, issued a peremptory writ directing the trial court to set aside its order. It noted that plaintiff's contention was based on the erroneous idea that a repudiation amounted to an offer required to be acted upon before becoming effective, and held that the better reasoned cases support the rule that a repudiation by a letter is a breach at the time when and the place where the letter is dispatched.

[h] Place of Performance of Contract

The facts of Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 241 P.2d 4 are discussed in § 52.22[3][c]. In determining that a proper county for the trial of plaintiff's action was Humboldt County, the Court found (1) as a matter of law, that the contract was executed and delivered in San Mateo County, and, in legal effect, was made there, and held (2) that considering all the evidence in the light of the surrounding circumstances, it reasonably supported the conclusion of the trial court that payment was to be made in Humboldt, and that since performance was due in Humboldt, the breach as well occurred there. In reaching this holding, the Court reasoned that the contract did not provide where defendant was to make its payments, and that, therefore, the place where the obligation, the breach of which was pleaded as plaintiff's cause of action, was to be performed was the decisive factor insofar as venue was concerned. The Court then stated the rule of venue that in a suit on a corporation's contract, where no place of performance was expressly stipulated, it ought to be held performable in the place where the circumstances, viewed in the light of pertinent code provisions, indicated that the parties expected or intended it to be performed. The Court stated that this determination of the place of performance was one of fact to be made by the trial court which will not be disturbed by the appellate courts if there is any substantial evidence in the record to support it. In considering pertinent code provisions, the Court noted those provisions set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1488 and 1489 which state the rules as to the place of performance in the payment of a debt. Under Civ. Code §§ 1488 or 1489, as at common law, if there be no agreement or stipulation to the contrary, a debt is payable at the place where the creditor resides, or at his or her place of business, if he or she has one, or wherever else he or she may be found. Since a reading of the contract between plaintiff and defendant did not require a conclusion that the placing of checks in the mail in San Mateo was the performance contemplated by the contract, the receipt of the payments in Humboldt under Civ. Code §§ 1488 and 1489 was, thus, sufficient to support the trial court's finding that Humboldt County was a proper county for plaintiff's action.

Bank of Yolo v. Sperry Flour Co. (1903) 141 Cal. 314, 74 P. 855 is discussed in § 52.22[3][f].

[i] Place of Performance In Payment of Debt

This portion of the opinion in Hale v. Bohannon (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 458, 241 P.2d 4 is discussed in § 52.22[3][h].

[j] Where Tort Liability Arises

The facts of Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 are discussed in § 52.22[3][c]. In holding that the obligation or liability of defendant did not arise in Los Angeles County, the court stated that it was clear that the alleged tortious conduct, that is, minor plaintiff's false imprisonment, occurred in San Diego County and that petitioner's liability must, therefore, have arisen there. In support of this holding, the court stated the general rule that in tort the liability arises where the injury occurs and that in this context, the word "injury" means a wrongful injury of legal rights. Plaintiffs did not contend that the arrest and imprisonment did not occur in San Diego County, but argued that although the liability first arose in San Diego, the injury followed the minor plaintiff to his county of residence, Los Angeles. This argument was based on the fact that the minor plaintiff was caused to have an arrest record and that this continuing libel caused additional expense to plaintiff in Los Angeles. However, the court found that the gist of the cause of action pleaded was the unlawful violation of the person and liberty of the minor plaintiff, and that although the amount of damages might be affected by subsequent circumstances, it was clear that the alleged tortious conduct occurred in San Diego County.

[k] Allegation of "Doing Business"

This portion of the opinion in Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 is discussed in § 52.22[3][c].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.23

§ 52.23 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Removal of Director--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 304]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER AN ACTION COMMENCED AGAINST A CORPORATION [WITH NO PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA] FOR THE REMOVAL OF A DIRECTOR TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE ACTION WAS NOT COMMENCED IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Shareholder's Suit to Remove Director. The proper county for an action for the removal from office of a director who has committed fraudulent or dishonest acts or who has grossly abused his/her authority with reference to the corporation is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 177, 304).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of an action for the removal of a director under Corp. Code § 304 when the action was not commenced in the county of the corporation's principal executive office or in Sacramento County, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.24

§ 52.24 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Application for Order to Compel Holding of Annual Shareholder's Meeting--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 600(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER AN APPLICATION FOR A SUMMARY COURT ORDER TO COMPEL THE HOLDING OF THE ANNUAL MEETING OF SHAREHOLDERS OF A CORPORATION [WITH NO PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA] TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE APPLICATION WAS NOT MADE IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Proceedings to Compel Annual Meeting of Shareholders. The proper county for a hearing of a shareholder's application for a summary order by the superior court to compel the holding of an annual meeting of shareholders is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 177, 600(c)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of an application for a summary court order to compel the holding of the annual meeting of the corporation's shareholders when the application was not made either in the county of the corporations' principal executive office or, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177], in Sacramento County.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.25

§ 52.25 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Determination of Shares as Dissenting Shares and/or Value of Such Shares--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1304(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER AN ACTION COMMENCED AGAINST A CORPORATION [WITH NO PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA] FOR THE DETERMINATION OF _____ [CERTAIN SHARES AS DISSENTING SHARES or THE FAIR MARKET VALUE OF CERTAIN DISSENTING SHARES or both] TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE ACTION WAS NOT COMMENCED IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Action for Determination of Shares as Dissenting Shares. The proper county for an action for the determination of _____ [whether certain shares are dissenting shares or the fair market value of certain dissenting shares or both] being maintained by a _____ [shareholder demanding purchase of these shares under Section 1300 of the Corporations Code or an interested corporation] is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 170, 1304(a)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of an action under Corp. Code § 1304(a) for the determination of whether certain shares are dissenting shares and/or the fair market value of those shares when the action was not commenced either in the county of the corporation's principal executive office or, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177], in Sacramento County.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.26

§ 52.26 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Proceeding to Enforce Right of Inspection of Corporate Records and Reports--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1603(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER A PROCEEDING COMMENCED IN A SUPERIOR COURT TO ENFORCE A DIRECTOR'S OR SHAREHOLDER'S RIGHT OF INSPECTION OF CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE PROCEEDING WAS NOT COMMENCED IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Proceeding to Enforce Right of Inspection. The proper county for a proceeding to enforce a director's or shareholder's right to inspect the records, reports, and other properties of a corporation is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 177, 1603(a)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of a proceeding under Corp. Code § 1603(a) to enforce a director's or shareholder's right of inspection of corporate records, reports, and properties when the proceedings were not commenced either in the county of the corporation's principal executive office or, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177], in the County of Sacramento.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law raised.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.27

§ 52.27 Supporting Corporate Defendants' Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation--To County of Corporation's Principal Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1800(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER AN ACTION COMMENCED AGAINST A CORPORATION [WITH NO PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA] FOR ITS INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE ACTION WAS NOT COMMENCED IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Action for Involuntary Dissolution. The proper county for an action for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation as provided in Corporations Code Section 1800(a) is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 177, 1800(a)).

[Optional] D. Corporation's Right to Control Venue in Mixed Action. When transitory causes of action are joined with a cause of action for involuntary dissolution [and when individual defendants, if any, do not object], the corporation's motion for change of venue to the county in which its principal executive office is located must be granted (Capp Care, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 504, 508, 241 Cal. Rptr. 741).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of an action under Corp. Code § 1800(a) for the involuntary dissolution of the corporation when the action was not commenced either in the county of the corporation's principal executive office or, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177], in Sacramento County. Optional Paragraph D is for use when transitory causes of action have been joined with a cause of action for involuntary dissolution.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation's Right to Control Venue in Mixed Action

In Capp Care, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 504, 241 Cal. Rptr. 741 , one of two founding shareholders brought an action against the corporation and the other founding shareholder for involuntary dissolution and nine transitory causes of action. The action was filed in Los Angeles County, where the individual defendant resided and had an office. The corporation also had an office in Los Angeles County, but its principal office was in Orange County. The corporate and individual defendants both wanted venue in Orange County, and the corporate defendant moved for a change of venue. Respondent court denied the motion on the ground that Corp. Code § 1800 was not mandatory and that the general venue statute relating to corporations (Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5) controlled. The corporate defendant petitioned for writ of mandate to direct respondent court to grant defendant's motion for change of venue.

The court of appeal granted the writ. The court stated that when transitory causes of action are joined with a cause of action for in voluntary dissolution, the corporation's motion for change of venue to the county in which its principal executive office is located must be granted. When two or more inconsistent venue provisions apply to the same case, a defendant is entitled to a change of venue on any one cause of action (195 Cal. App. 3d 504, 508) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.28

§ 52.28 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Petition for Court to Take Jurisdiction of Voluntary Dissolution--To County of Corporation's Executive Office or County of Sacramento [Corp. Code §§ 177, 1904]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT SHOULD ORDER A PETITION FOR THE COURT TO TAKE JURISDICTION OVER A VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION [WITH NO PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE IN CALIFORNIA] TO THE COUNTY OF _____ [THE CORPORATION'S PRINCIPAL EXECUTIVE OFFICE or SACRAMENTO] WHEN IT APPEARS THAT THE PETITION WAS NOT BROUGHT IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Venue of Hearing of Petition for Jurisdiction over Voluntary Dissolution. The proper county for the bringing of a petition for the superior court to take jurisdiction over a voluntary winding-up proceeding is the county _____ [where the principal executive office of the corporation is located, or if principal executive office is located outside state or the corporation has no such office, of Sacramento] (Corp. Code §§ 177, 1904).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of a petition for the superior court to take jurisdiction over proceedings to voluntarily wind-up the corporation where the petition was not brought either in the county of the corporation's principal executive office, or, if the corporation has no principal executive office in California, or has no principal executive office [see Corp. Code § 177], in Sacramento County.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.29

§ 52.29 Supporting Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 396b, 397(a)]--In Action for Determination of Right or Interest in Real Property--To County Where Real Property Is Situated [Code Civ. Proc. § 392]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.22.]

THE COURT MUST ORDER AN ACTION FOR THE DETERMINATION OF A RIGHT OR INTEREST IN REAL PROPERTY BROUGHT AGAINST A CORPORATION TRANSFERRED TO THE COUNTY IN WHICH THE REAL PROPERTY IS SITUATED, OR SOME PART THEREOF, WHERE IT APPEARS THAT THE ACTION WAS NOT COMMENCED IN THAT COUNTY.

A. When Change of Venue Proper. [See § 52.22, Paragraph A.]

B. Motion for Change of Venue. [See § 52.22, Paragraph B.]

C. Determination That Action Is Local in Nature. If the complaint shows that the principal relief sought involves recovery of the possession of the title to real property, or any estate or right or interest therein, or the enforcement of a lien thereon or an injury thereto, the action is to be deemed local in character even though the plaintiff may, as an incident to his/her cause of action as to the real property, ask for relief which, if sought alone would be transitory in character (Fletcher v. Nordesta Homes, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 33, 35, 13 Cal. Rptr. 226).

D. Proper Court for "Local" Action. The proper court for an action for the determination of a right or interest in real property brought against a corporation is the superior court in the county where the real property, or some part thereof, is situated (Code Civ. Proc. § 392; Grocers' Fruit Growing Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 473-475, 89 P. 120).

E. Right to Change of Venue. The power of the court to change the place of trial under former Section 16 of Article XII of the California Constitution (now Section 395.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure) entitles a corporation which is the defendant in an action for the determination of a right or interest in real property to have the place of trial changed to the county in which the real property, or some part thereof, is situated whenever plaintiff has commenced his/her/its action in some other county (Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 473-475, 89 P. 120).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant corporation in support of a motion for the transfer of an action for the determination of a right or interest in real property when the action was not commenced in the county where the real property, or some part of the property, is situated.

If appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determination That Action Is Local in Nature

In Fletcher v. Nordesta Homes, Inc. (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 33, 13 Cal. Rptr. 226 , the appellants appealed from an order granting defendants' motion changing the place of trial of an action for damages for breach of a contract to purchase real property from Ventura County, where the action was commenced, to Los Angeles County. The motion was made on the grounds that the action was local in character and that, therefore, the county in which the real property was situated, Ventura, was the proper county for the action. Although the court did not agree, and affirmed the trial court's order, the court stated the applicable rule, set forth in Paragraph C of the above form, in determining whether an action is to be deemed local or transitory (192 Cal. App. 2d 33, 35) .

[b] Proper County for "Local" Action

Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a) provides that, subject to the power of the court to transfer actions and proceedings as provided in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 392-404.8, the superior court in the county where the real property, which is the subject of the action, or some part thereof, is situated, is the proper court for the trial of the following actions: (1) for the recovery of real property, or of an estate or interest therein, or for the determination in any form, of that right or interest, and for injuries to real property; and (2) for the foreclosure of all liens and mortgages on real property.

In Grocers' etc. Union v. Kern etc. Co. (1907) 150 Cal. 466, 89 P. 120 , defendant moved the trial court to change the place of trial from San Francisco County to Kern County on the grounds that, because the action was one for the specific performance of a contract to convey lands in Kern County, the court had no jurisdiction and under Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1) was required to transfer the action to Kern County. The trial court denied the motion and the Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that although the complaint prayed for an accounting of monies received by defendant while in possession of the subject property, the action, stripped to its essentials, was for the specific performance of a contract for the sale of land under an allegation that the purchase price had been paid. In response to the plaintiff's contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1) did not apply to corporations, the Court stated that no conceivable reason could be given why a natural person should have the right of trial of an action involving an interest in land in the county where the land was situated, and, yet, the same right should be denied to a corporation. Although it appeared that former Calif Const, Art XII, § 16 (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5) should by its terms and by the rules of construction except corporations from the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 392(a)(1), the Court stated that such an interpretation would be unconstitutional under the United States Constitution and by reason of the last clause of former Calif Const, Art XII, § 16, was unnecessary. The Court held that that last clause, giving the Court power to change the place of trial, as in other cases, should be read that any and all actions may be brought against corporations in the county of the principal place of business of the corporation, provided, however, that the Court may change the place of trial of such actions in accordance with the laws governing such places of trial. The Court concluded that by thus being construed, the right still remains in a plaintiff to commence his or her action in the county of the principal place of business, but the right remains as well in the corporation to have the place of trial changed under the exercise of the court's power in enforcing the legislative enactments in regard thereto. It followed, therefore, that Kern was the proper county for the trial of plaintiff's action (150 Cal. 466, 473-475) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.30

§ 52.30 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Plaintiff--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code--Defendant Foreign Corporation Is "Nominally Foreign" Corporation and Subject to the Provisions of California General Corporation Law [Corp. Code § 2115]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
_____ [name], [a Corporation],	)	SUMMARY JUDGMENT
Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name], a(n)	)	Location: _____
_____ [name of state or foreign	)	[Judge: _____]
country] Corporation, Defendant.	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED IN THIS ACTION TO ENFORCE SECTION(S) _____ OF THE CORPORATIONS CODE BECAUSE DEFENDANT FOREIGN CORPORATION IS A "NOMINALLY FOREIGN" CORPORATION AS A MATTER OF LAW IN THAT IT IS SUBJECT TO THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION 2115 OF THE CORPORATIONS CODE.

A. Summary Judgment. A plaintiff may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that there is no defense to the action. Such a motion will be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that plaintiff is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a), (c)).

B. "Nominally Foreign" Corporations. A foreign corporation is subject [to the provisions of] Sections 2115 and _____ [specify provisions or sections as set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(b)] of the Corporations Code to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction in which it is incorporated if (1) the average of the property factor, the payroll factor, and the sales factor (as defined in Sections 25129, 25132, and 25134 of the Revenue and Taxation Code) with respect to that corporation is more than 50 percent during its latest full income year, and (2) if more than one-half of its outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having addresses in California appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year or, if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year (Corp. Code §§ 2115(a), (b)).

[Optional] C. Foreign Parent Corporations Not Transacting Intrastate Business. A foreign parent corporation, although not itself transacting intrastate business, is subject to Section 2115 of the Corporations Code and the provisions of the California General Corporation Law contained therein if the average of the property factor, the payroll factor, and the sales factor of the parent and all of its subsidiaries in which it owns directly or indirectly more than 50 percent of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for the election of directors, computed in the manner described in Section 2115(a) of the Corporations Code, is more than 50 percent during its latest full income year, and if more than one-half of its outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having addresses in California appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year or, if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year (Corp. Code §§ 2115(a), (b)).

D. Commencement of Time Period Subjecting Foreign Corporations to California Law. A foreign corporation is subject to the provisions of Section 2115 of the Corporations Code and the provisions of the California General Corporation Law contained therein on the first day of the first income year of the corporation _____ [commencing on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the tests referred to in Section 2115(a) of the Corporations Code have been met or commencing on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that the tests referred to in Section 2115(a) of the Corporations Code have been met] (Corp. Code § 2115(d)).

[Optional] E. Cumulative Voting Required. The cumulative voting requirements of Section 708 of the Corporations Code that are made applicable pursuant to Section 2115(b) of the Corporations Code to nominally foreign corporations are constitutional and require cumulative voting for all shareholders (see Wilson v. Louisiana-Pacific Resources, Inc. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222-231, 231, 187 Cal. Rptr. 852).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action against a "nominally foreign" corporation to enforce a provision of the California General Corporation Law set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(b) to the exclusion of any provision of the law of the jurisdiction in which the corporation is incorporated. This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. Counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)].

[b] Related Memoranda

For general points and authorities supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Nominally Foreign" Corporations

Corp. Code § 2115(a) provides that those foreign corporations that may be subject to Corp. Code § 2115 and the provisions of the California General Corporation Law contained therein include foreign parent corporations even though they do not themselves transact intrastate business, but do not include foreign nonprofit corporations or foreign associations; that is, business associations organized as trusts under the laws of foreign jurisdictions [Corp. Code § 170].

Corp. Code § 2115(a) also provides that the tests of the property, payroll, and sales factors set forth in Paragraph B of the above form required to be met before a corporation will be subject to Corp. Code § 2115 and the provisions of the California General Corporation Law contained therein, are those used in computing the portion of the foreign corporation's income allocable to California in its franchise tax return, or with respect to corporations the allocation of whose income is governed by special formulas or which are not required to file separate or any tax returns, which would have been so used if they were governed by the three-factor formula. The determination of these factors with respect to any parent corporation is made on a consolidated basis, including in a unitary computation (after elimination of intercompany transactions) the property, payroll, and sales of the parent and all of its subsidiaries in which it owns directly or indirectly more than 50 percent of the outstanding shares entitled to vote for the election of directors, but deducting a percentage of such property, payroll, and sales of any subsidiary equal to the percentage minority ownership, if any, in that subsidiary. For the purpose of Corp. Code § 2115(a), any securities held to the knowledge of the issuer in the names of broker-dealers, nominees for broker-dealers (including clearing corporations) or banks, associations, or other entities holding securities in a nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner (collectively "nominee holders"), are not considered outstanding [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. However, if the foreign corporation requests all nominee holders to certify, with respect to all beneficial owners for whom securities are held, the number of shares held for those beneficial owners having addresses (as shown on the records of the nominee holder) in and outside California, then all shares so certified must be considered "outstanding" and held of record by persons having addresses either in or outside California, provided that the certification must be retained with the record of shareholders and made available for inspection and copying in the same manner as is provided in Corp. Code § 1600. A current list of beneficial owners of a foreign corporation's securities provided to the corporation by one or more nominee holders or their agent pursuant to the requirements of Rule 14b-1(b)(3) or 14b-2(b)(3) as adopted December 9, 1986, and promulgated under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, will constitute an acceptable certification with respect to beneficial owners [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. The requirements of Corp. Code § 1600(a) are set forth in § 52.94.

The following sections of the General Corporation Law apply to foreign corporations subject to Corp. Code § 2115 (to the exclusion of the law of the jurisdiction in which it is incorporated): Corp. Code §§ 100-195 (general provisions and definitions), to the extent applicable to the following provisions; Corp. Code § 301 (annual election of directors); Corp. Code § 303 (removal of directors without cause); Corp. Code § 304 (removal of directors by court proceedings); Corp. Code § 305(c) (filling of director vacancies where less than a majority in office elected by shareholders); Corp. Code § 309 (directors' standard of care); Corp. Code § 316 (excluding subdivisions (a)(3) and (f)(3) (liability of directors for unlawful distributions); Corp. Code § 317 (indemnification of directors, officers, and others); Corp. Code §§ 500-505

(limitations on corporate distributions in cash orproperty); Corp. Code § 506 (liability of shareholder who receives unlawful distribution); Corp. Code § 600(b), (c) (requirement for annual shareholders' meeting and remedy if same not timely held); Corp. Code § 708(a), (b), (c) (shareholders' right to cumulate votes at any election of directors); Corp. Code § 710 (supermajority vote requirements); Corp. Code § 1001(d) (limitations on sale of assets); Corp. Code § 1101 (provisions following subdivision (e) limitations on mergers); Corp. Code §§ 1200, 1201 (reorganizations); Corp. Code §§ 1300-1312 (dissenters' rights); Corp. Code §§ 1500, 1501 (records and reports); Corp. Code § 1508 (actions by Attorney General); Corp. Code §§ 1600-1605 (rights of inspection) [Corp. Code § 2115(b)].

Any foreign corporation that is subject to the requirements of Corp. Code § 2115(b), must advise any shareholder of record, any officer, director, employee, or other agent [see Corp. Code § 317 (definition)] and any creditor of the corporation in writing, within 30 days of receipt of written request for that information, whether or not it is subject to Corp. Code § 2115(b) at the time the request is received. If any party obtains a final determination by a court of competent jurisdiction that the corporation failed to provide to the party the required information or provided the party incorrect information, the court in its discretion has the power to include in its judgment recovery by the party from the corporation of all court costs and reasonable attorneys' fees incurred in that legal proceeding to the extent they relate to obtaining that final determination [Corp. Code § 2115(f)].

For a further discussion of the scope of the regulation of "nominally foreign" corporations and the property, payroll, and sales factors used in the apportionment and allocation formulas defined in Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 25129, 25132, 25134, see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 18, Foreign Corporations , and Ch. 22, Corporate Franchise and Income Taxes in California (Matthew Bender).

[b] Foreign Parent Corporations Not Transacting Intrastate Business

For a discussion of the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115(a) as they relate to foreign parent corporations, see § 52.30[3][a].

[c] Commencement of Time Period Subjecting Foreign Corporations to California Law

A foreign corporation is subject to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115 only on the first day of the first income year of the corporation commencing on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the tests referred to in Corp. Code § 2115(a) have been met, or commencing on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met [see Corp. Code § 2115(d)].

[d] Cumulative Voting Required

In Wilson v. Louisiana-Pacific Resources, Inc. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 187 Cal. Rptr. 852 , plaintiff brought an action seeking declaratory judgment that defendant met the tests of Corp. Code § 2115, and that he was therefore entitled to cumulative voting in accordance with Corp. Code § 708. Defendant contended that the requirement of cumulative voting violated the full faith and credit clause of the United States Constitution, the commerce clause of the United States Constitution, the property and vested right protections of the United States and California Constitutions, and the contract clauses of the United States and California Constitutions. The trial court held that there existed no constitutional obstacle to the application of the cumulative voting requirement to defendant, that cumulative voting was in effect a judicial addendum to defendant's articles of incorporation, and that all of defendant's shareholders were entitled to cumulative voting whether or not they were California residents. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court found that the California Legislature had mandated that California corporate law be applied when the criteria of Corp. Code § 2115 was met, as here, and that such a mandate was constitutional (138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 223-224) . The court also found that any effect on interstate commerce was incidental and minimal in relation to the purpose that Corp. Code § 2115 was designed to achieve, that there was no due process violation in the application of Corp. Code § 2115, that only minimal alteration was made to the charter agreement and no showing of hardship was made, and that the criteria exempting certain foreign corporations were neutral (138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 225-228) . Therefore, the court held the cumulative voting requirements of Corp. Code §§ 708 and 2115 to be constitutional and applicable to all shareholders (138 Cal. App. 3d 216, 231) .

Note that listed corporations may now eliminate cumulative voting in accordance with Corp. Code § 301.5 [see Corp. Code § 708(a) (acknowledging exception created by Corp. Code § 301.5)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.31

§ 52.31 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Corporation--Corporate Powers of Plaintiff or Defendant Suspended or Forfeited for Nonpayment of Franchise Tax [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301]

[1] FORM

	)
	)	NO. _____
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR COUNTY OF _____	)	SUMMARY JUDGMENT
_____ [name], [a Corporation],	)	Date: _____
Plaintiff,	)	Time: _____
vs.	)	Location: _____
_____ [name], [a Corporation],	)	Date Action Filed: _____
Defendant.	)	[Trial Date: _____]
_____

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR _____ [DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF] IS PROPER IF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] CORPORATION'S _____ [POWERS, RIGHTS, AND PRIVILEGES HAVE BEEN SUSPENDED or if corporation is foreign corporation RIGHT TO EXERCISE ITS POWERS, RIGHTS, AND PRIVILEGES HAVE BEEN FORFEITED] FOR FAILURE TO PAY ITS FRANCHISE TAXES, PENALTIES, OR INTEREST DUE AND PAYABLE ON OR BEFORE THE TIMES PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

A. Summary Judgment. A _____ [defendant or plaintiff] may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that _____ [the action has no merit or there is no defense to the action] (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(f)(1), (h)-(o)). The motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that _____ [defendant or plaintiff] is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Suspension of Powers of Domestic or Foreign Corporation. Except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, _____ [the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended or the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in California may be forfeited] if [the franchise taxes, penalties, or interest due and payable are not paid on or before the times prescribed in Section 23301 of the Revenue and Taxation Code and/or if the taxpayer fails to file a return] (Rev. & Tax. Code § _____ [23301 (failure to pay taxes) and/or 23301.5 (failure to file return)]).

C. Effective Date of Suspension or Forfeiture. The _____ [suspension or forfeiture] provided for in Section 23301 or Section 23301.5 of the Revenue and Taxation Code becomes effective on the transmission of the name of the delinquent taxpayer to the Secretary of State by the Franchise Tax Board (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c)).

[EITHER]

D. Inability to Prosecute Action. The right to institute or maintain an action is denied to corporations as part of the penalty the corporation must incur when its powers have been suspended or forfeited for failure to pay its franchise taxes (Ransome-Crummey Co. v. Superior Court (1922) 188 Cal. 393, 394-397, 205 P. 446 ; Graceland v. Peebler (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 545, 546, 123 P.2d 527).

[OR]

D. Inability to Defend Action. During the period that its corporate powers have been suspended or forfeited, a corporation has no right to defend in an action commenced against it, nor even to participate therein during the period of suspension (Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1512, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 ; Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 50, 317 P.2d 649).

[Optional] E. Certificate as Prima Facie Evidence. The certificate of the Secretary of State is prima facie evidence of the suspension or forfeiture of a corporation's powers (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c)).

[Optional] F. Waiver of Defense. The failure to raise the issue of a corporation's suspension or forfeiture for failure to pay its franchise taxes at the earliest opportunity is not a bar to the later determination of the issue by the court if the corporation indicates no intention to pay its delinquent taxes (Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389).

[Optional] G. Accrual of Substantive Defense. The accrual of a substantive defense during the period of the suspension or forfeiture of a corporation's powers is not prejudiced by the reinstatement of the suspended or forfeited corporation under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305a because, by the terms of this section, the reinstatement is without prejudice to any action, defense, or right which has accrued by reason of the original suspension or forfeiture; [thus, although a corporation's action may be timely filed, the accrual of the defense of the statute of limitations during the period of a corporation's suspension or forfeiture cannot be prejudiced by the revival of that corporation under Section 23305a] (ABA Recovery Services, Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 ; Welco Construction, Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70-74, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572).

[Optional] H. No Substantial Compliance Is Shown. Although the doctrine of substantial compliance applies to allow a suspended corporation to prosecute or defend its action even though the certificate of revivor has not been issued, substantial compliance is not established when the suspended corporation still owes taxes, penalties, or interest (Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515-1516, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619).

[Optional] I. Directors May Not Be Substituted in Place of Suspended Corporation. The directors of a suspended corporation may not be substituted as plaintiffs in order to prosecute an action in the corporation's stead if the substitution would affect the defendant's meritorious defense (Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1516-1517, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619).

[Optional] J. Real Estate Transactions. If a taxpayer's powers, rights, and privileges are forfeited or suspended pursuant to Section 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, without limiting other consequences of the forfeiture or suspension, the taxpayer is not entitled to sell, transfer, or exchange real property in California during the period of suspension (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(d)).

[Optional] K. Liability Insurer May Not Defend in Name of Suspended Corporation. When an insurance company seeks to provide a defense in pending litigation for a corporation that has been suspended for nonpayment of its taxes, the insurance company must intervene in the action to protect its own interests and those of its insured. The insurance company may not answer and litigate the lawsuit in the name of the suspended corporation without intervening in the case (Kaufman & Broad Cmtys., Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action which has been either brought by a corporation or defended by a corporation that has had its corporate powers, rights, and privileges suspended or forfeited for failure to pay its franchise taxes, penalties, or interest due and payable on or before the times prescribed in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 or for failure to file a return [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5]. The authority used in Optional Paragraph G is subject to the exception, discussed in § 52.32, that a corporation that entered into a contract during the period of forfeiture or suspension, or in the case of a foreign corporation that never qualified to do business in California, during the period specified in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(c), has the opportunity to cure the voidability of that contract pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1.

Another limitation on the use of this form is that Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, and 23775 apply to a foreign corporation only if the corporation is qualified to do business in California. A corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 (see § 52.20) to qualify to do business is not deemed to have qualified to do business for purposes of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 et seq. unless the corporation has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (set forth in § 52.41)]. However, if the foreign corporation is "transacting intrastate business" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 191 and is not exempted on interstate commerce or other grounds, it will still lack capacity to maintain or defend an action on that intrastate business as provided by Corp. Code § 2203, discussed in § 52.20 [see also § 52.34 (opposing existence of criteria requiring qualification)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of his or her case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to support any of the following:

- A motion to strike the answer made by a suspended or forfeited corporation [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 435-437; Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 50, 317 P.2d 649 (motion to strike answer made on last day of trial as proper even though objection that corporate powers were forfeited not raised in pleadings)].

- A motion for judgment on the pleadings when the motion is made by a defendant in an action brought by a suspended or forfeited corporation [see Graceland v. Peebler (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 545, 546, 123 P.2d 527 (motion granted)].

- A motion to dismiss made by a defendant in an action brought by a suspended or forfeited corporation [see Maryland Cas. Co. v. Superior Court (1928) 91 Cal. App. 356, 358 (assuming without deciding that motion was proper)].

- A motion to dismiss an appeal on the ground that appellant's powers were suspended or forfeited [see Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 245, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389 (taking appeal from adverse judgment as one of privileges which law denies to domestic corporation suspended under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for an affirmative defense of lack of legal capacity to sue, based on the suspension or forfeiture of a corporate plaintiff's powers for failure to comply with tax statutes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

The points and authorities in §§ 52.40 -52.42 may be used to oppose those in this form. The points and authorities in §§ 52.32 and 52.43 support and oppose, respectively, the other party's right to void a contract entered into with a corporation while that corporation's powers were suspended for failure to pay taxes or file returns.

For a memorandum in support of a separate trial of the issue of plaintiff's incapacity to sue based on its suspension of its corporate powers for nonpayment of taxes, see Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions .

For a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment on the basis of suspension of corporate powers for failure to file a required information statement pursuant to Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205, see § 52.33.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Powers of Domestic or Foreign Corporation

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 provides that, except for the purposes of filing an application for exempt status or amending the articles of incorporation as necessary either to perfect that application or to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a domestic taxpayer may be suspended, and the exercise of the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of a foreign taxpayer in this state may be forfeited if any of the following conditions occur: (1) if any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, which is due and payable either at the time the return is required to be filed, or on or before the 15th day of the ninth month following the close of the taxable year is not paid, on or before 6 o'clock p.m. on the last day of the 12th month after the close of the taxable year under the Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.) or the administrative provisions (Rev. & Tax. Code § 19001 et seq.); (2) if any tax, penalty, or interest, or any portion thereof, due and payable on notice and demand from the Franchise Tax Board, including that due and payable under the Corporation Tax Law (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23001 et seq.) or the administrative provisions (Rev. & Tax. Code § 18401 et seq.) is not paid on or before 6 o'clock p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the due date of the tax; or (3) if any liability, or any portion of liability, that is due and payable under Article 7 of Part 10.7 (Rev. & Tax. Code § 19131 et seq., Penalties and Additions to Tax) et seq. is not paid on or before 6 p.m. on the last day of the 11th month following the date on which the tax liability is due and payable.

Additional formalities for suspension or forfeiture are discussed in §§ 52.40 and 52.41.

[b] Effective Date of Suspension or Forfeiture

Additional technical requirements for forfeiture provide that they can only occur and become effective as expressly provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(a)]. In order for a corporation's powers, rights, and privileges to be suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23571 or forfeited pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, 23301.5, or 23775, the Franchise Tax Board must have mailed the corporation a notice of preliminary suspension that indicates that the corporation will be suspended by a date certain. The preliminary notice must be mailed to the corporation at least 60 days before the date certain [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 21020, 23302(b)].

[c] Inability to Prosecute Action

Ransome-Crummey Co. v. Superior Court (1922) 188 Cal. 393, 205 P. 446 was a petition for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to take jurisdiction of a motion for new trial made by a petitioner, a corporation, in an action commenced by it to foreclose a lien on certain property. At the hearing of the motion, counsel for defendant called the trial court's attention to the fact that petitioner's corporate powers had been suspended because of the nonpayment of its license and franchise taxes. Although following a postponement of the hearing, petitioner's corporate powerswere restored, on further hearing by the court, the court declined to pass on the merits of petitioner's purported motion and dismissed it. The Supreme Court denied the writ, holding that, during the time its powers were suspended, petitioner could not be given notice of entry of judgment, nor could it give notice of intention to move for a new trial, since these disabilities resulted from its suspension. In reaching this conclusion, the Court noted that in contrast to prior law, which would have required petitioner to cease to exist during the period of its suspension, under present law, petitioner was shorn of all rights save those expressly reserved by the statutes. The Court stated, in addition, that the right to institute suit or maintain an action is not included in this reservation, but is denied to corporations as a part of the penalty (188 Cal. 393, 394-397) .

In Graceland v. Peebler (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 545, 123 P.2d 527 , the sole question presented for appeal was whether the surviving directors of a corporation, whose charter was suspended for non-payment of its franchise tax, could maintain an action on behalf of its stockholders and creditors to quiet title to realty. The trial court, holding that the action could not be maintained, sustained a motion for judgment on the pleadings which was sustained by the court of appeal. In the pertinent part of the court's opinion, the court noted that the appellant directors had conceded that neither the corporation nor they, on its behalf, could maintain the action as the applicable statutes barred a corporation which failed to make timely payment of its franchise tax from exercising any corporate powers, rights, or privileges (50 Cal. App. 2d 545, 546) .

[d] Inability to Defend Action

Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 is discussed in § 52.31[3][g].

In Alhambra-Shumway Mines, Inc. v. Alhambra Gold Mine Corp. (1957) 155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 317 P.2d 649 , appellant, which had commenced an action against respondent corporation to have declared canceled a lease of mining property and equipment, during the course of the trial, moved to strike all pleadings and evidence of respondent and to enter the default of respondent on the ground that as a foreign corporation it had forfeited its right to transact business in California, including the right to defend appellant's action. The motion was denied by the trial court, and following the trial, the court entered judgment for the corporation. The court of appeal reversed and held that respondent corporation had no right to defend in the action, or even to participate therein during the time that its corporate rights were suspended. The court relied on the basic rule set forth in previous California decisions that on the issue of suspension of the corporation for failure to pay its franchise tax, the corporation may not prosecute or defend an action nor appeal from an adverse judgment in an action while its corporate rights are suspended. The court also noted, in reply to respondent's contention that the objection should have been in the pleadings, that in previous California cases, the issue was presented to the court after the commencement of proceedings by motion to dismiss just as it was in the case before it, and that this appeared to be an appropriate method by which to present the matter at any time it is brought to the attention of the court. With respect to this portion of the court's opinion, it should be noted that in Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 309 P.2d 809 , a motion to dismiss the appeal was made on the ground that the corporation in whose right the action had allegedly been brought had been suspended for failure to pay its franchise taxes. The motion was denied. One of the reasons given was that this issue had not been raised prior to the making of the motion, and a opportunity should have been given to pay the taxes and reinstate the corporation (155 Cal. App. 2d 46, 50) .

[e] Waiver of Defense

Gar-Lo, Inc. v. Prudential Sav. & L. Ass'n (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 116 Cal. Rptr. 389 , involved a motion to dismiss an appeal on the ground that the appellant was a corporation whose powers were suspended before the filing of its action against respondent by reason of its failure to pay its franchise taxes. A summary judgment had been entered against appellant on the grounds of its suspension. In opposition to the motion, appellant argued that its lack of capacity to sue could only have been raised by plea in abatement, and that respondent waived the defense by failing to raise it in the trial court at the earliest opportunity. The court granted the motion, following the basic rule that taking an appeal from an adverse judgment of the trial court is one of the privileges which the law denies to a domestic corporation suspended under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301. It noted that, while the suspension of corporate powers was a plea in abatement, appellant indicated no intention to pay its delinquent franchise taxes. The court stated that appellant could not acquire an irrevocable license to carry on litigation in defiance of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, since the main purpose of the statutory suspension was to collect a tax, and that in this respect, respondent was only an incidental beneficiary of that law. The court noted, in addition, that the suspension was raised in the trial court (41 Cal. App. 3d 242, 244) .

[f] Accrual of Substantive Defense

The court of appeal in ABA Recovery Services, Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 , affirmed a trial court judgment in favor of defendants after granting defendants' motion for summary judgment based on the bar of the statute of limitations. The applicable limitation period ran during the corporate plaintiff's suspension for failure to pay taxes. The corporate powers were revived after the action was filed. The court of appeal said that under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, proceduralacts in the prosecution or defense of a suit are retroactively validated by revival, but revival is without prejudice to any action, defense, or right that accrued by reason of suspension. Thus, a substantive defense, such as the statute of limitations, which accrues during suspension, is not affected by revival (198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725) .

In Welco Constr., Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 , plaintiff corporation appealed from a judgment for defendant granted on the trial court's finding that the plaintiff's causes of action for breach of contract and fraud were barred by the statute of limitations. Plaintiff filed its complaint two months after it had been suspended as a corporation for nonpayment of its franchise tax. On the trial date, nearly three years after the statute of limitations had run on the causes of action, the defendant challenged the plaintiff's standing to prosecute its action because of the suspension. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for a continuance. During the continuance, plaintiff obtained a certificate of revivor, whereupon defendant moved to amend its answer to plead the statute of limitations. The motion was granted and the court thereafter granted defendant judgment of nonsuit on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. It distinguished previous decisions, which had held that the revival of corporate powers by the payment of delinquent taxes validated otherwise invalid prior action, by finding that these holdings were limited to procedural acts which in the prosecution or defense of a lawsuit could be validated retroactively by the corporate revival. The court stated that these holdings, however, do not apply to substantive defenses which have accrued during the corporate suspension. The court concluded by finding that the statute of limitations was a substantive defense, that it had accrued by its running during the period of appellant's suspension, and that it could not be prejudiced by the revival of the suspended corporation (47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70-74) .

[g] No Substantial Compliance Is Shown

Plaintiff's underlying cause of action in Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 , accrued on September 16, 1982. Plaintiff was suspended on October 1, 1982. On October 15, 1982, plaintiff filed its tax return and paid its taxes, and on November 1, it filed a Domestic Stock Statement. On December 22, the Secretary of State told plaintiff that it would waive the penalty for failure to timely file the Domestic Stock Statement, that the Franchise Tax Board would be instructed to waive the penalty, and that the waiver would take approximately 90 days. Plaintiff still owed $90.85 for penalties and interest. Plaintiff filed its complaint on December 30, 1982. The statute of limitations expired on September 15, 1984. On March 31, 1987, defendant moved for summary judgment on the ground that the statute of limitations expired during plaintiff's suspension. The certificate of revivor was issued on April 22, 1987. Thereafter, defendant's motion was granted, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court reviewed the grounds for suspension under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 and the fact that a corporation whose powers are suspended has no capacity to prosecute or defend a civil action during its suspension (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1512) . Accordingly, when a suspended corporation commences an action during its suspension, the statute of limitations continues to run. A corporation may be revived by compliance with the requirements of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305, but if the limitation period expires before the corporation's revivor the corporation's action will be time-barred even if the complaint would otherwise have been timely. This result is imposed by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a, which provides that the issuance of the certificate of revivor is without prejudice to any action, defense, or right that accrued by reason of the original suspense or forfeiture. Plaintiff's powers were suspended before it filed the complaint, thus the filing of the complaint was ineffective to toll the statute of limitations. Nor were its powers revived until after the limitation period expired (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1513) .

Still, plaintiff argued that it had substantially complied with Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 and should be allowed to prosecute its action. The court of appeal noted that no court had previously considered whether a corporation's substantial compliance with Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 was sufficient to allow it to prosecute an action (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1514) . The court noted that the purpose of the suspension scheme was to provide incentive for corporations to timely pay their taxes and that the defense of suspension was a plea in abatement, and thus to be strictly construed against the party asserting it. The court of appeal concluded that a corporation that has been suspended under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 and/or Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.5 may prosecute or defend an action prior to official revivor provided there has been substantial compliance with the revival statute (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515) .

The test for substantial compliance is whether the acts alleged to constitute it satisfy the policy of the statute, which in this case is to pressure corporations into paying delinquent taxes (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515) . Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305 requires the suspended corporation to pay the tax and any interest and penalties for nonpayment of which the suspension or forfeiture occurred together with all other taxes, deficiencies, interest and penalties due (217 Cal. App.

3d 1509, 1515-1516) . The court of appeal concluded that it would be inconsistent with the statutory scheme to allow the corporation to claim substantial compliance when it had only paid the taxes, not the penalties and interest (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1516) .

[h] Directors May Not Be Substituted in Place of Suspended Corporation

The facts and procedural background of Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 are discussed in § 52.31[3][g]. Plaintiff had also requested that its directors be substituted as the plaintiffs in the action, citing as authority a case in which substitution had been allowed during trial. The trial court had denied the request, and the court of appeals agreed, saying that plaintiff ignored the fact that the other case held that substitution would be impermissible if it would affect a defendant's meritorious defense. That is exactly what substitution would accomplish in this situation. If plaintiff's directors were allowed to substitute as plaintiffs, defendant's statute of limitations defense would be defeated (217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1516-1517) .

[i] Liability Insurer May Not Defend in Name of Suspended Corporation

In Kaufman & Broad Cmtys., Inc. v. Performance Plastering, Inc. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 33 , the rights and privileges of the defendant corporation had been suspended under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 for nonpayment of taxes. The corporation's liability insurer hired a law firm to file an answer, which designated the responding party as "Performance Plastering, Inc., a suspended corporation, by and through its general liability insurance carrier, CalFarm Insurance Company." The insurance company did not move to intervene in the case. The law firm served a settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc § 998, the plaintiff subsequently dismissed the complaint, and the law firm filed a memorandum of costs and moved for attorney's fees. The plaintiff moved to strike the memorandum of costs and opposed the motion, arguing that the insurance company was not a party because it had not intervened in the action and that Performance Plastering, Inc., as a suspended corporation, was not entitled to recover fees or costs because of its suspension. The trial court agreed.

The court of appeal dismissed the law firm's appeal, holding that when an insurance company seeks to provide a defense in pending litigation for a corporation that has been suspended for nonpayment of its taxes, the insurance company must intervene in the action to protect its own interests and those of its insured. The insurance company may not answer and litigate the lawsuit in the name of the suspended corporation without intervening in the case (136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216) . In this case, because the insured was barred from exercising corporate powers, rights, and privileges and the insurance company was not a party, the insurance company's failure to intervene barred any application for fees and costs, even though the insurance company and insured were successful in persuading the plaintiff to dismiss its lawsuit (136 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Defense

Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 is discussed in § 52.42[4][a]. The court of appeal held that the trial court abused its discretion in denying the corporation's motion for continuance to pay its taxes and revive its corporate powers, granting the defendants' motion to dismiss the corporation's complaint, and permitting the defendants to proceed with a default prove-up when the defendants had been aware of the corporation's failure to pay taxes but had failed to raise the issue until trial. The appellate court specifically noted the corporation's intention to pay its delinquent taxes and the fact that it obtained a certificate of revivor two weeks after the defendants first raised the issue of overdue taxes (44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1605-1606) .

[b] Accrual of Substantive Defense

In Community Electric Service v. National Elec. Contr. (9th Cir. 1989) 869 F.2d 1235 , the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the dismissal of an antitrust action by corporation whose powers had been suspended by the Franchise Tax Board on July 1, 1983. The federal suit was filed on January 13, 1986, the statute of limitations on the antitrust claim expired on May 6, 1987, and the Franchise Tax Board reinstated plaintiff's powers on June 8, 1987. Relying on Welco Construction, Inc. v. Modulux, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 69, 70-74, 120 Cal. Rptr. 572 , and ABA Recovery Services, Inc. v. Konold (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 720, 724-725, 244 Cal. Rptr. 27 , the court of appeals said that a statute of limitations is a defense, not a plea in abatement, and the corporation's revivor does not validate the prior filing of the suit (869 F.2d 1235, 1240-1241 .

[c] Renewal of Judgment

In Timberline v. Jaisinghani (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368-1369, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 , the court of appeal held that during the period of suspension, a suspended corporation that failed to revive its powers by paying delinquent taxes cannot renew a judgment obtained while it was in good standing. The court noted that the plain language of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 expressly deprives the corporation of all corporate powers, rights, and privileges. Therefore, under the statutory language and the decisional authority interpreting those provisions, the corporation's action in requesting the court to renew the judgment was an unauthorized act by a suspended corporation that was attempting to exercise the rights, powers, and privileges of a going concern. Consequently, it was error for the trial court to deny defendant's motion to vacate the renewal of judgment (54 Cal. App. 4th 1361, 1368-1369) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.32

§ 52.32 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract [Civ. Code § 3300 or 3384]--By Defendant--Against Corporation That Was Suspended at Time Contract Was Formed [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.31.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S POWERS, RIGHTS AND PRIVILEGES WERE SUSPENDED WHEN THE CONTRACT WAS FORMED [AND DEFENDANT DID NOT LEARN OF THE SUSPENSION UNTIL LATER].

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.31, Paragraph A.]

B. Suspension of Powers of Domestic or Foreign Corporation. [See § 52.31, Paragraph B.]

[EITHER]

C. Contract Is Voidable. A contract entered into by a corporation while its powers, rights, and privileges are suspended or forfeited pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section _____ [23301 and/or 23301.5 and/or 23775] is, subject to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.5, voidable at the instance of any party to the contract other than the taxpayer (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(a)).

[OR, if corporation is foreign corporation that has not qualified to do business and DOES NOT HAVE a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board]

C. Contract of Unqualified Foreign Corporation Without Franchise Tax Account. A contract entered into in California during the applicable period specified in Sections 23304.1(c) of the Revenue and Taxation Code by a foreign taxpayer that neither is qualified to do business nor has a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board and that failed to file a return required by Sections 23101 et seq. or 23501 et seq. of the Revenue and Taxation Code, is, subject to Section 23304.5 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, voidable at the instance of any party to the contract other than the taxpayer (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b)).

[OR, if corporation is foreign corporation that has not qualified to do business and HAS a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board]

C. Contract of Unqualified Foreign Corporation With Franchise Tax Account. If a foreign taxpayer that has not qualified to do business under Section 2105 of the Corporations Code but that has a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board failed _____ [to file a return required by Sections 23101 et seq. or 23501 et seq. of the Revenue and Taxation Code and/or to pay any tax or other amount owing to the Franchise Tax Board under Section(s) _____ (23101 et seq. or 23501 et seq. or 23707 or 23772) of the Revenue and Taxation Code and/or to file any statement or return required under Section 23772 or 23774 of the Revenue and Taxation Code], within 60 days of receiving written demand therefor from the Franchise Tax Board, and made a contract in California during the period beginning at the end of the 60-day demand period and ending on the date the taxpayer qualifies to do business in California, or satisfies the liability to the Franchise Tax Board, [including through an assumption of liability, or a bond, deposit, or other security for taxpayer's liability under Section 23305.2 of the Revenue and Taxation Code], that contract is voidable at the instance of any party to the contract other than the taxpayer (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(d)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Applicable Period for Voidable Contract of Unqualified Foreign Corporation Without Franchise Tax Account. For purposes of Section 23304.1(b) of the Revenue and Taxation Code, the applicable period begins on January 1, 1991, or on the first day of the taxable year for which the taxpayer has failed to file a return or pay taxes, whichever is earlier, and ends on the later of the date the taxpayer qualified to do business in California or the date the taxpayer obtained a corporate account number from the Franchise Tax Board (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(c)).

[Optional] E. Avoidance Not Barred by Equitable Estoppel. The other party's right under Section 23304.1 of the Revenue and Taxation Code to avoid a contract entered into with a corporation while that corporation was suspended is not barred by equitable estoppel unless the other party knew of the corporation's disability at the time the contract was formed (Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 675, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 (decided under former Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304).

[Optional] F. Voidability Must Be Asserted in Court Proceeding. A party that has a right to declare a contract to be voidable pursuant to Section 23304.1 of the Revenue and Taxation Code may exercise that right [only] in a lawsuit brought by either party to the contract in a court of competent jurisdiction. [The rights of parties to the contract are not effected by Section 23304.1 of the Revenue and Taxation Code except to the extent expressly provided by a final judgment of the court.] If the court finds the contract to be voidable under Section 23304.1, the court must order the contract to be rescinded (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5).

[EITHER, if relief was sought before January 1, 1991]

[Optional] G. When Prior Law Is Determinative. Notwithstanding other transition provisions of Chapter 926 of Statutes of 1990, the Legislature intends that Chapter 926 not be construed in any manner that would affect the rights of any party to any action that has been commenced in a court of competent jurisdiction prior to January 1, 1991, or the rights of any such party in a subsequent action based on the same claims as those asserted in the prior action. All such rights are to be determined without application of any provisions of Chapter 926 and by the law in effect prior to January 1, 1991 (Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(c)).

[OR, when relief is sought on or after January 1, 1994]

[Optional] G. When Prior Law Is Determinative. Notwithstanding subdivision (a), the Legislature intends that Chapter 680 of the Statutes of 1993 not be construed in any manner that would affect the rights of any party to any action that has been commenced ina court of competent jurisdiction prior to the date of January 1, 1994, or the rights of that party in a subsequent action based on the same claims as those asserted in the prior action. All those rights shall be determined without the application of any of the provisions of Chapter 680 and shall be determined by the law in effect prior to January 1, 1994 (Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(c)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment by a defendant who has been sued for breach of contract or against whom a contract is sought to be enforced by a corporation that entered into the contract in question when it was suspended for nonpayment of taxes or failure to file a return [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23301.6, 23304.1(a)], or, in the case of a foreign corporation that was required but never did qualify to do business in California, a contract that it made in California during the applicable periods set forth in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(c) and (d) (third Alternative Paragraph C, Paragraph D).

These points and authorities should be combined with additional authorities from § 52.31 when appropriate. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the particular case and the points of law raised. In addition, it is necessary to attach declarations or documentary evidence in support of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)], most notably in this situation, a certificate or declaration from the appropriate custodian of records for the Franchise Tax Board or Secretary of State establishing the suspension.

[b] Limitations on Declaring Contract Voidable

Significant limitations on the right to have a contract declared voidable for a corporation's failure to comply with tax laws, specifically the corporation's right to an opportunity to comply and the requirement of restitution if voidability is established are discussed in § 52.43. These restrictions relate mainly to the fact that prior to January 1, 1994, former Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(e) required a corporation to seek relief from voidability at the same time it applied for a certificate of revivor. That is no longer the case, but the penalties set forth in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b) provide a financial incentive to do so [see § 52.43; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5]. Note also that Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23301.6, 23304.1(a) apply to a foreign corporation only if it is qualified to do business in California. A foreign corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 [see § 52.20] to qualify to do business is not deemed to have qualified to do business for purposes of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 et seq. unless it has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (set forth in § 52.41)]. However, if the foreign corporation is "transacting intrastate business" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 191 and is not exempted on interstate commerce or other grounds, it will still lack capacity to maintain or defend an action on that intrastate business as provided by Corp. Code § 2203, discussed in § 52.20 [see also § 52.34 (opposing existence of criteria requiring qualification)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Is Voidable

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1 was added by Stats. 1990, ch. 926.

[b] Avoidance Not Barred by Equitable Estoppel

In 1983, defendant in Damato v. Slevin (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 262 Cal. Rptr. 879 , agreed to purchase a cafe, and sublease for the premises on which the caf was located, from plaintiff's assignor. After taking possession of the premises and making a few payments, defendant defaulted in 1985, and plaintiff commenced the action for damages for breach of contract. Defendant moved for summary judgment, based on the fact that the seller's corporate privileges had been suspended on June 1, 1981. That fact was established by a declaration of a custodian of records of the Franchise Tax Board. In opposition to the motion, plaintiff submitted a certificate from the Secretary of State, acknowledging that the corporate seller was suspended on June 1, 1981, but also noting that its powers had been revived on August 11, 1987, after the motion for summary judgment was filed. The trial court granted the motion and entered judgment thereon. Plaintiff appealed, contending in part that defendant was equitably estopped to raise the issue of the corporate suspension.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal said the four elements necessary for estoppel are (1) the party to be estopped must be apprised of the facts; (2) the party to be estopped must intend that his or her conduct will be acted on or must act so that the party asserting the estoppel hada right to believe it was so intended; (3) the other party must be ignorant of the true state of facts, and (4) must rely on the conduct in such a way that it led his or her injury. To prevail on its claim of equitable estoppel, plaintiff had to show that defendant knew of the corporate assignor's suspension while plaintiff, who was the corporation's president, did not. Plaintiff's declaration provided absolutely no basis for concluding that defendant was aware of the corporation's disability. Thus, defendant's right to summary judgment was not barred by equitable estoppel (214 Cal. App. 3d 668, 675) .

[c] When Prior Law Is Determinative

Stats. 1993, ch. 680 is operative with respect to taxpayers that file applications for relief on or after January 1, 1994, without regard to income years [Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(a); see also § 52.43[3]].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.33

§ 52.33 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment Against Corporation--Corporate Powers Suspended for Failure to File Required Information Statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum in support of a motion for summary judgment, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR _____ [DEFENDANT(S) or PLAINTIFF(S)] IS PROPER BECAUSE _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] CORPORATION'S POWERS HAVE BEEN SUSPENDED FOR FAILURE TO FILE A REQUIRED INFORMATION STATEMENT.

A. Summary Judgment. A _____ [defendant or plaintiff] may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that _____ [the action has no merit or there is no defense to the action] (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Suspension of Corporate Powers for Failure to File Required Information Statement. A corporation suspended for failure to file a required information statement is disqualified from participating in litigation activities (Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205; Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 559-562, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action that either has been brought by a corporation, or defended by a corporation, that has had its corporate powers, rights, and privileges suspended for failure to file a required information statement [Corp. Code §§ 1502, 2205]. Although this issue normally would arise in the context of a motion for summary judgment, the form may be adapted to any other context in which the issue is raised.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a notice of motion for summary adjudication based on a corporation's lack of capacity to participate in litigation activities, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations : Capacity, § 160.63 (Matthew Bender). For an order granting summary adjudication on that basis, see § 160.64 of that chapter.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension of Corporate Powers for Failure to File Required Information Statement

Corp. Code § 1502 provides that every corporation must file an annual statement containing the names and addresses of its incumbent directors; the number of board vacancies, if any; the names and addresses of its officers; the street address of its principal executive office, or its mailing address if different; if the principal executive office is not in California, the street address of its principal business office in California; a statement of the corporation's general type of business; and its agent for service of process [Corp. Code § 1502(a), (b); see also Corp. Code § 1502.1 (additional information required for publicly traded corporations)]. Corp. Code § 2204 provides that if a corporation fails to file its required information statement under Corp. Code § 1502, the Secretary of State will give the corporation notice of the delinquency. Sixty days after notice of the delinquency, if the corporation has not filed the required statement, the Secretary of State must certify the name of the corporation to the Franchise Tax Board, and the Franchise Tax Board imposes a penalty upon the corporation [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19141]. If a corporation fails to file a statement under Corp. Code § 1502, fails to file a statement for 24 months, and has been assessed a penalty under Corp. Code § 2204 during that 24-month period, then the corporation is subject to suspension under Corp. Code § 2205. The Secretary of State must notify the corporation that its corporate powers, rights, and privileges will be suspended after an additional 60 days, if the corporation fails to file the required statement. If the corporation fails to comply within 60 days, the Secretary of State certifies to the Franchise Tax Board that the corporation is suspended, and mails a notice to the suspended corporation. Except for the purpose of amending the articles of incorporation to set forth a new name, the corporate powers, rights, and privileges of the corporation are suspended [Corp. Code § 2205(c); see Ballantine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, Ch. 13, Records, Reports, and Inspection Rights (Matthew Bender)].

In Palm Valley Homeowners Association, Inc. v. Design MTC (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 350 , the trial court imposed sanctions on a law firm for bad faith acts and discovery abuses in underlying construction defect litigation, on the grounds that the firm pursued litigation activities on behalf of its client even after the law firm knew that the client was a suspended corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 2205. In the underlying action, a group of homeowners had filed a construction defect lawsuit against the developer of their homes. The developer then cross-complained against subcontractors and suppliers. The law firm represented one of the subcontractors. When the firm leaned that its client had been suspended after failingto file a required information statement with the Secretary of State as provided in Corp. Code § 2205, the firm did not report the suspension to the court or to any other parties, but instead continued to represent the suspended corporation in the litigation, filing and responding to pleadings and motions. After the homeowners' investigator discovered that the firm's client was a suspended corporation, the homeowners moved for sanctions against both the corporation and the firm. The trial court granted the motion for sanctions and the firm appealed.

The court of appeal noted that the statutory suspension provisions of the Corporations Code have never been interpreted expressly to indicate that a corporation suspended for failure to file the required information statement is legally disabled from acting to the same extent as a corporation suspended under the Revenue and Taxation Code for nonpayment of taxes (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 558) . It stated, however, that upon a reading of the statutory provisions, it was clear that a corporation suspended for failure to file a required statement under Corp. Code § 1502, like a corporation suspended for failure to pay taxes under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, is disabled from participating in any litigation activities. Just as the state may wish to persuade its corporate citizens to pay their taxes, it also may wish to persuade them to comply with basic filing requirements which are fundamental to holding a corporation accountable for its actions. The statutory language of the relevant sections was more than sufficient to put any reasonable attorney on notice that a corporation suspended under the Corporations Code was disabled from participating in any litigation activities (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 560-561) . Further, the law firm could not in good faith have believed that there was a legitimate difference in the effect of the two suspensions. It did not rely on any purported distinction between a Corporations Code suspension and a Revenue and Taxation Code suspension in deciding to conceal its knowledge of the client's suspended status from court and opposing counsel (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 562-563) . Thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in imposing discovery sanctions against the firm (85 Cal. App. 4th 553, 563-564) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.34

§ 52.34 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit When It Is Not Considered to Be Transacting Intrastate Business

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], a(n)	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name of state or foreign	)	FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
country]	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]
Corporation, Plaintiff,	)	Date: _____
vs.	)	Time: _____
_____ [name],	)	Location: _____
Defendant.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A FOREIGN CORPORATION MAY MAINTAIN AN ACTION IN CALIFORNIA WITHOUT HAVING FIRST OBTAINED A CERTIFICATE OF QUALIFICATION WHEN DEFENDANT HAS FAILED TO SUSTAIN HIS/HER/ITS BURDEN OF PROOF THAT THE CORPORATION IS MAINTAINING AN ACTION ON INTRASTATE BUSINESS IN WHICH IT HAS ENTERED INTO REPEATED AND SUCCESSIVE TRANSACTIONS IN CALIFORNIA, OTHER THAN INTERSTATE OR FOREIGN COMMERCE.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. It is proper for a court to grant a motion for summary judgment only if the affidavits supporting the motion establish every element necessary to sustain a judgment in favor of the moving party and the opposing party has not presented any facts which give rise to a triable issue. In ruling on the motion, the moving party's affidavits are strictly construed, and doubts as to the propriety of granting the motion should be resolved in favor of the opposing party (Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Serv. Bureau, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 842, 851 n.6, 851-852, 94 Cal. Rptr. 785, 484 P.2d 953). The court may not properly grant summary judgment based on inferences reasonably deducible from the papers submitted, if such inferences are contradicted by other inferences which raise a triable issue of fact (Hepp v. Lockheed-California Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 717-718, 150 Cal. Rptr. 408).

B. Summary Judgment Not Proper When Triable Issue Remains as to Whether Foreign Corporation Transacted Intrastate Business. In an action brought by a foreign corporation, a motion for summary judgment on the ground that the corporation has not obtained a certificate of qualification, as required by Section 2105(a) of the Corporations Code, should not be granted when there is a triable issue of fact as to whether the corporation's activities in California amounted to the transaction of intrastate business within the meaning of Section 191 of the Corporations Code (Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 616-617, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169).

C. Transaction of Intrastate Business. A foreign corporation must have entered into repeated and successive transactions of its business in California before it will be considered to have transacted intrastate business for the purposes of requiring the corporation before transacting such business or maintaining an action arising out of that business to obtain first a certificate of qualification (Corp. Code §§ 191(a), 2105(a), 2203(c)).

D. Burden of Proof. The burden of proving that a foreign corporation which has not obtained a certificate of qualification is statutorily precluded from maintaining an action on intrastate business transacted in California, other than interstate or foreign commerce, is on the party pleading the bar of the statute (Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 794, 306 P.2d 1, 63 A.L.R.2d 1042).

[EITHER]

E. Single, Isolated Transactions. A foreign corporation must transact a substantial part of its business within California to justify a finding that the corporation was transacting intrastate business, and the transaction of an isolated business act is not carrying on or transacting business within the meaning of the statutory language (McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 279, 283, 284, 91 P.2d 613).

[OR]

E. Actions Not Arising Out of Corporation's Intrastate Business. A foreign corporation which has not complied with the statutory requirements for transacting intrastate business in California is precluded only from maintaining actions arising out of its intrastate business (Corp. Code § 2203(c)).

[OR]

E. Actions Arising Out of Interstate or Foreign Commerce. The term "transact intrastate business" does not mean entering into repeated and successive transactions of business involving interstate or foreign commerce. A corporation, therefore, may sue on such transactions without compliance with the statutory requirements for transacting intrastate business in California (Corp. Code § 191(a); Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 794, 306 P.2d 1, 63 A.L.R.2d 1042).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] F. Excluded Activities by Foreign Corporation. A foreign corporation is not considered to be transacting intrastate business solely by reason of carrying on in California the activity of _____ [maintaining or defending any action or suit or any administrative or arbitration proceeding, or effecting the settlement thereof or the settlement of claims or disputes or holding meetings of its board or shareholders or carrying on other activities concerning its internal affairs or maintaining bank accounts or maintaining offices or agencies for the transfer, exchange and registration of its securities or depositary with relation to its securities or effecting sales through independent contractors or soliciting or procuring orders, whether by mail or through employees or agents or otherwise, when such orders require acceptance without California before binding contract or creating evidences of debt of mortgages, liens, or security interest on real or personal property or conducting an isolated transaction completed within a period of 180 days and not in the course of a number of repeated transactions of like nature or specify any combination of the above] (Corp. Code § 191(c)).

[Optional] G. Excluded Activities by Foreign Lending Institution. Any _____ [foreign banking corporation or foreign corporation all of the capital stock of which is owned by one or more foreign banking corporations or foreign savings and loan association or foreign insurance company or foreign corporation or association authorized by its charter to invest in loans secured by real and personal property, whether organized under the laws of the United States or of any other state, district or territory or specify other foreign lending institution] is not considered to be transacting business in California solely by reason of engaging _____ [on its own behalf or as a trustee of a _____(pension plan or employment profit sharing plan or retirement plan or testamentary trust or inter vivos trust or specify other fiduciary capacity)] in the _____ [acquisition by purchase, by contract to purchase, by making of advance commitments to purchase or by assignment of loans, secured or unsecured, or any interest therein, when such activities are carried on from outside California by the lending institution or making by an officer or employee of physical inspections and appraisals of real or personal property securing or proposing to secure any loan, if the officer or employee making any physical inspection or appraisal is not a resident of and does not maintain a place of business for such purpose in California or ownership of any loans and the enforcement of any loans by trustee's sale, judicial process or deed in lieu of foreclosure or otherwise or modification, renewal or extension, transfer, or sale of loans or the acceptance of substitute or additional obligors thereon, if the activities are carried on from outside California by the lending institution or contractual arrangements with corporations, firms, or associations, qualified to do business in California, which are not subsidiaries or parents of the lending institution and which are not under common management with the lending institution, to make collections and to service loans in any manner whatsoever, including the payment of ground rents, taxes, assessments, insurance, and the like and the making, on behalf of the lending institution, of physical inspections and appraisals of real or personal property securing any loans or proposed to secure any loans, and the performance of any such engagement or acquisition of title to the real or personal property covered by any mortgage, deed of trust, or other security instrument by trustee's sale, judicial sale, foreclosure or deed in lieu of foreclosure, or for the purpose of transferring title to any federal agency or instrumentality as the insurer or guarantor of any loan, and the retention of title to any real or personal property so acquired pending the orderly sale or other disposition thereof or specify any combination of those activities] [and activities necessary or appropriate to carry out any of the foregoing activity(ies)] (Corp. Code § 191(d)).

[Optional] H. Transaction of Intrastate Business by Subsidiary. A foreign corporation is not considered to be transacting intrastate business merely because its subsidiary transacts intrastate business or merely because of its status as _____ [a shareholder of a domestic corporation or a shareholder of a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business or a limited partner of a domestic limited partnership or a limited partner of a foreign limited partnership transacting intrastate business or a member or manager of a domestic limited liability company or a member or manager of a foreign limited liability company transacting intrastate business or specify any combination of the above] (Corp. Code § 191(b)).

[Optional] I. Jurisdictional Requirements Distinguished From Intrastate Business Transaction Requirements. A foreigncorporation engaged in interstate commerce or "doing business" in California, as that term was construed under former Section 411 of the Code of Civil Procedure, may have sufficient contacts with California so as to make it amenable to service of process, but have insufficient contacts with California necessary to constitute the transaction of intrastate business. Thus, cases concerned with the minimum contacts necessary for California to obtain jurisdiction over a defendant foreign corporation are not authority for the requirements necessary to find a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business (Carl F. W. Borgward, G.M.B.H. v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 72, 75-77, 330 P.2d 789).

[Optional] J. Corporations Incorporated Under Act of Congress. A corporation incorporated under an act of Congress may transact business in California without complying with the state laws governing foreign corporations (see Corp. Code § 171; Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Gordon (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 193, 97 P.2d 845).

[Optional] K. Goods Transported in Interstate Commerce. The scope of interstate commerce, which the power to regulate is expressly committed to Congress and impliedly withheld from the several states by Article I, Section 8, Clause 3, of the United States Constitution, is not confined to transportation from one state to another, but comprehends all commercial intercourse between different states and all the component parts of that intercourse, such that when goods in one state are transported into another for purposes of sale, the commerce does not end with the transportation, but embraces as well the purchase, sale and exchange of the goods (Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant (1921) 257 U.S. 282, 290-291, 42 S. Ct. 106, 66 L. Ed. 239).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by counsel for a foreign corporation in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the moving party asserts that the corporation is barred from maintaining its suit because it was transacting intrastate business without having first obtained from the Secretary of State a certificate of qualification as required by Corp. Code § 2105(a).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including argument showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

It should be noted that optional Paragraphs F and G specify activities which, solely by reason of one or more of them being carried on in California, will not be considered the transaction of intrastate business. When the facts of a particular case come within the description of one or more of these activities, counsel should accordingly retitle the heading of the paragraph to fit the particular description. These specified activities are not intended by the Legislature to exclude other activities which also may not constitute transaction of intrastate business [see Corp. Code §§ 191(c) (foreign corporations), 191(d) (foreign lending institutions)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure

Plaintiffs in Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Serv. Bureau, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 842, 94 Cal. Rptr. 785, 484 P.2d 953 , filed an action against defendant for violations of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16720, 16726 (prohibited restraints on trade under Cartwright Act). The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and plaintiffs appealed from the judgment entered in favor of defendants. The Supreme Court concluded that the trial court had erroneously granted the summary judgment and reversed the judgment. In reviewing the trial court's action, the Court commented that summary judgment is a drastic procedure to be used with caution so that it does not become a substitute for the open trial method of determining facts and repeated its previous summary of the rules governing summary judgment procedure set out in Paragraph A of the foregoing form (4 Cal. 3d 842, 851-852) .

Hepp v. Lockheed-California Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 150 Cal. Rptr. 408 was an action for breach of contract and fraud. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal reviewed the rules for granting summary judgment. It relied on Code Civ. Proc. § 437c and 4 Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed.), Proceedings Without Trial, in stating that summary judgment may not be granted on the basis of inferenceswhich are contradicted by other inferences which raise a triable issue of fact (86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 717-718) .

[b] Summary Judgment Not Proper When Triable Issue Remains as to Whether Foreign Corporation Transacted Intrastate Business

In Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 , plaintiff, a California corporation, sued defendant, a foreign corporation, and defendant filed an answer and a cross complaint in the action. Plaintiff moved for an order striking both pleadings on the ground that defendant lacked capacity to defend the action, and to sue on its cross complaint because it was a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business in California and had failed to obtain a certificate of qualification pursuant to Corp. Code § 2105. The trial court granted the motion.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to set aside the order granting the motion, stating that plaintiff's motion to strike was not authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 435 and, therefore, must be treated and tested as if it were a motion for summary judgment (119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 615) . The court held that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether defendant's activities in California amounted to the transaction of "intrastate business" as defined by Corp. Code § 191 because defendant showed, in opposition to the motion, that its activities consisted of solicitation by salesmen who were independent contractors, that orders placed in California required acceptance outside the state before they became binding contracts, and that the office and staff in California were maintained for use by the salesmen (119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 616-617) .

[c] Burden of Proof

In Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 306 P.2d 1, 63 A.L.R.2d 1042 , a Mexican corporation brought an action for the balance due on the price of eight automobiles which it had alleged were sold to defendants. After a trial on the merits, the trial court found for plaintiff, and defendants appealed, contending, in part, that the transactions being sued upon were intrastate and plaintiff had not alleged or proved that it had qualified to transact business in California in compliance with former Corp. Code §§ 6400-6409 [now see Corp. Code § 2105]. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court rejected this contention. It noted that the burden of proving that plaintiff was statutorily precluded from maintaining the action was upon the party pleading the bar of the statute and that defendants, therefore, in order to prove that the statute applied, were required to show that the particular transaction involved was an intrastate sale. The Court held that on the evidence the trial court was clearly justified in concluding that defendants failed to meet this burden, since the transactions were arranged by telephone with plaintiff in Mexico and defendants in California, and that defendants paid the cost of transporting the cars from Mexico. The Court concluded that sales made in this manner were not intrastate transactions.

[d] Single, Isolated Transactions

In McMillan Process Co. v. Brown (1939) 33 Cal. App. 2d 279, 91 P.2d 613 , a Nevada corporation brought an action in California for the recovery of possession of certain machines or for the value thereof in the event possession could not be had. In his answer, defendant set forth, among several defenses, the defense that the plaintiff foreign corporation was not entitled to maintain the action because of its failure to comply with the laws of California respecting qualification of foreign corporations. After a trial on the merits, the trial court gave judgment for plaintiff and the court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the defense of nonqualification, the court noted that the evidence showed that plaintiff was involved in no more than two transactions in California. Relying on former Civ. Code § 405 [now Corp. Code § 191(a)], requiring a corporation to qualify when it has entered into repeated and successive transactions in California, the court stated the generally held view that a foreign corporation must transact a substantial part of its business within the state to justify a finding that the business transacted constitutes transaction of intrastate business and that a casual, sporadic, isolated business act is not carrying on or transacting intrastate business. It should be noted that, in part, this rule has been codified in Corp. Code § 191(c)(8), and set forth in Paragraph F of the foregoing form which states that, without excluding other activities, a foreign corporation is not considered to be transacting intrastate business solely by reason of conducting an isolated transaction completed within a period of 180 days which is not in the course of a number of repeated transactions of like nature.

[e] Actions Arising Out of Interstate or Foreign Commerce

Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 306 P.2d 1, 63 A.L.R.2d 1042 is discussed in § 52.34[3][c].

[f] Jurisdictional Requirements Distinguished From Intrastate Business Transaction Requirements

In Carl F. W. Borgward, G.M.B.H. v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 72, 330 P.2d 789 , German corporation sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to enter an order quashing service of summons in an action brought against the corporation by plaintiffs to enforce an agreement theyhad with the corporation's exclusive importer. The defendant corporation argued it was not "doing business" within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 411(2) (service of process on foreign corporations) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 410.10]. In part, the defendant argued that the applicable standard to be applied in construing Code Civ. Proc. § 411(2) was to be found in Corp. Code § 6203 [now see Corp. Code § 191(a)] defining the terms "transact intrastate business" to mean entering into repeated and successive transactions of business in California, other than interstate or foreign commerce, and in cases decided under this code section. In denying the writ, the Supreme Court held that this argument misconstrued the scope and purpose of the regulatory and penal provisions of the Corporations Code governing foreign corporations engaged in the transaction of intrastate business as against the provisions of the Civil Code governing service of process. The term "doing business" in California, necessary for the service of process on a foreign corporation, is equivalent to the minimum contacts with a state required by the due process clause so that a suit maintained against the corporation does not offend traditional notions of fair play and substantial justice. Thus, the term is synonymous with the power of the state to subject foreign corporations to local process. On the other hand, the Court stated that the minimum requirements necessary to find a corporation to be transacting intrastate business were not intended by the Legislature to be equivalent to the standards governing "doing business," since these requirements reflect the standard by which a foreign corporation will be considered sufficiently involved in intrastate business that it should be subject to certain of California's regulatory and penal provisions.

[g] Corporations Incorporated Under Act of Congress

Corp. Code § 171 provides in part that the term "foreign corporation" as used in Corp. Code § 2100 et seq. does not include a corporation or association charted under the law of the United States.

In Home Owners' Loan Corp. v. Gordon (1939) 36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 97 P.2d 845 , plaintiff, a corporation incorporated under an act of Congress, filed an action to foreclose a mortgage on real property. Defendants in their answer sought, among other defenses, to abate the action under the foreign corporation statutes of California because of the failure of plaintiff to qualify as a foreign corporation. After a trial on the merits, the trial court found for plaintiff and the court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the failure of plaintiff to qualify in California, the appellate court took judicial notice of the manner of plaintiff's incorporation and held that as a corporation created by federal statute it need not comply with the state laws governing foreign corporations. The court stated that the rule of unlimited state control over foreign corporations is subject to an exception for corporations engaged in the business of the general government which are permitted to transact such business in other states without obtaining a license or other permit (36 Cal. App. 2d 189, 193) . It should be noted that the facts of this case are now considered activities under Corp. Code § 191(d)(3), set forth in Paragraph G of this form, which do not constitute the transaction of intrastate business.

[h] Goods Transported in Interstate Commerce

Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant (1921) 257 U.S. 282, 42 S. Ct. 106, 66 L. Ed. 239 , involved an action to recover damages for the breach of a contract for the sale and delivery of a crop of wheat brought by a Tennessee corporation in a Kentucky state court. That court, in a judgment affirmed by the Kentucky court of appeals, held that the plaintiff corporation was barred from maintaining its suit since it had not complied with a Kentucky statute prescribing the conditions in which foreign corporations might do business in Kentucky. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that since the crop sold was for immediate shipment to the plaintiff's Tennessee mill, the goods were part of interstate commerce and Kentucky had no power to regulate their sale by virtue of U.S. Const., art. I, § 8, cl. 3 (commerce clause). The court noted that interstate commerce, which only Congress was permitted to regulate, was not confined to transportation of goods or commodities from one state to another, but comprehended all commercial intercourse between different states and all the component parts of that intercourse. Thus, the Court stated, when goods in one state are transported into another for purposes of sale, the commerce does not end with the transportation, but also embraces the sale, purchase, and exchange of the goods after they reach their destination.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Transaction of Intrastate Business

In United Systems of Arkansas, Inc. v. Stamison (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 , an out-of-state bidder on a DMV contract to provide certified mail forms and accompanying software and printers protested the award of the contract to another bidder. After its protest was denied, the bidder petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the DMV to award the contract to it, or to receive, consider, and act on its protest. The superior court denied the petition and the bidder appealed. The DMV and the successful bidder contended that the appeal should be dismissed. They asserted that the action was barred because the out-of-state bidder was not qualified to do business in California. The court of appeal held that simply submitting a bid in response to a request for quotation by the DMV was not "transacting intrastate business," and that the out-of-state bidder could maintain its suit challenging the award of the contract to another bidder without obtaining a certificate of qualification from the Secretary of State (63 Cal. App. 4th 1001, 1006-1007) .

[b] Goods Transported in Interstate Commerce

Cone-Mills Corp. v. Hurdle (N.D. Miss. 1974) 369 F. Supp. 426 , involved suits brought in a Mississippi federal district court order under that court's diversity jurisdiction by two foreign corporations which had purchased "forward contracts" (future contracts) of cotton from Mississippi growers and producers. At the time of the purchase the agent of these corporations contemplated shipment of the cotton to the corporations' mills outside Mississippi. The defendants moved to dismiss the action for failure of the corporations to comply with the Mississippi statute prescribing the conditions in which foreign corporations might transact business in Mississippi. The district court denied the motion on the ground that the exceptions set forth in this statute for business transacted in interstate commerce applied, and that in applying this exception, the court is obligated to adopt a construction of the Mississippi statute that will not force state law into a potential conflict with the federal Constitution, unless an opposite construction is plainly required by clear state court precedent. The court then applied the rule of Dahnke-Walker Milling Co. v. Bondurant (1921) 257 U.S. 282, 42 S. Ct. 106, 66 L. Ed. 239 , set forth in Paragraph K of this form, holding that although the cotton might have been diverted intrastate, in view of the recognized course of the cotton business and the original intent of the agent of the corporations, the particular transactions were of an interstate character.

Charlton Silk Co. v. Jones (1923) 190 Cal. 341, 212 P. 203 was an action to recover the wholesale purchase price of goods sold by a foreign corporation to defendant. The trial court found that the plaintiff shipped the goods to defendant in California after defendant placed an order with plaintiff's salesmen in California. Although the trial court evidently dismissed the action for failure of plaintiff to qualify under California law, the Supreme Court reversed based on the trial court's finding, holding that the business was done in interstate commerce. Therefore, the Court stated that the qualifying provisions of California law did not apply, since the right to collect the proceeds of interstate commerce was incidental thereto, and could not be prevented by state legislation (190 Cal. 341, 342) .

It should be noted that this California Supreme Court case and the appellate court case discussed below of Detsch & Co. v. Calbar, Inc. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 556, 39 Cal. Rptr. 626 , would appear, insofar as the facts of these cases are concerned, to be codified in Corp. Code § 191(c)(6), set forth in Paragraph F of this form since they involve the solicitation of orders by agents where such orders required acceptance outside California. They are discussed here, however, to show that the California courts have appeared not to adopt a standard in their construction of the interstate commerce exception to the foreign corporation qualification requirements under Corp. Code §§ 191(a), 2105(a), that would be in any potential conflict with the interstate commerce clause [U.S. Const., art. I, § 8, cl. 3] or the construction of that clause by the federal courts.

In Detsch & Co. v. Calbar, Inc. (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 556, 39 Cal. Rptr. 626 , the plaintiff appealed from an order quashing service of summons on defendant foreign corporation. The critical question, as framed by the appellate court, was whether the corporation's business on which suit was being brought involved intrastate business transacted in California within the meaning of former Corp. Code § 6203 [now see Corp. Code § 191(a)], or whether the corporation was engaged solely in interstate commerce. The court held that when a solicitation is made within California of orders for goods by a local distributor or agency acting on behalf of a foreign corporation, with those orders being subject to acceptance or rejection by a foreign corporation in another state, and when, on approval of the orders, the goods are purchased and shipped directly from that other state to the purchasers in California, the sales and shipment constitute interstate commerce and the prior solicitation is a part of that interstate transaction and is not intrastate commerce (228 Cal. App. 2d 556, 567) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.35

§ 52.35 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit When It Has Filed Designation of Agent for Service Under Old Law and Filed Amended Statement Designation [Corp. Code § 2102]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.34.]

A FOREIGN CORPORATION MAY MAINTAIN AN ACTION WITHOUT HAVING OBTAINED A CERTIFICATE OF QUALIFICATION WHEN IT HAS FILED A DESIGNATION OF AGENT FOR SERVICE OF PROCESS PURSUANT TO THE REQUIREMENTS IN FORCE AT TIME OF FILING AND HAS FILED AN AMENDED STATEMENT AND DESIGNATION PURSUANT TO SECTION 2107 OF THE CORPORATIONS CODE.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

B. Filing of Designation of Agent Under Previous Law. A foreign corporation that has filed a designation of an agent for the service of process, pursuant to the requirements of any law relating to the qualification of foreign corporations in force at the time of the filing, need not file the statement provided for in Corporations Code Section 2105, which otherwise must be filed in order to obtain acertificate of qualification, if the corporation has filed an amended statement and designation when required by Corporations Code Section 2107 (Corp. Code § 2102).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the moving party asserts that the corporation is barred from maintaining its suit by its failure to obtain from the Secretary of State a certificate of qualification as required by Corp. Code § 2105(a).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including argument showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that oppose the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] and certified copies of the amended statement and designation filed pursuant to Corp. Code § 2117 [see also Corp. Code § 2117.1 (additional information required for publicly traded foreign corporations)].

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Filing of Designation of Agent Under Previous Law

Corp. Code § 2107(d) provides that filing the statement required by Corp. Code § 2117, which shows a new agent for service of process, is a proper method pursuant to Corp. Code § 2107 of designating a new agent for service of process.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.36

§ 52.36 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Foreign Corporation Permitted to Maintain Suit Without Providing Proof of Payment of State Taxes When It Has Obtained Certificate of Qualification Before Commencing Suit [Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2203(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.34.]

A FOREIGN CORPORATION MAY MAINTAIN AN ACTION WITHOUT PROVIDING PROOF OF PAYMENT OF ITS STATE TAXES PURSUANT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2203(c) WHEN IT HAS OBTAINED A CERTIFICATE OF QUALIFICATION BEFORE COMMENCING SUIT, EVEN IF IT TRANSACTED INTRASTATE BUSINESS BEFORE QUALIFYING.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

B. Certificate of Qualification Obtained Before Action Commenced. A foreign corporation that has qualified to transact intrastate business after transacting, but prior to commencing an action on, intrastate business may maintain the action without complying with Corporations Code section 2203(c) (United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment when the moving party asserts that the corporation is barred from maintaining its suit by its failure to provide proof of payment of its state taxes as required by Corp. Code § 2203(c).

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including argument showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] and a certified copy of the corporation's certificate of qualification [see Corp. Code §§ 2105, 2106].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Certificate of Qualification Obtained Before Action Commenced

In United Medical Management Ltd. v. Gatto (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 , a foreign corporation entered into a contract with a California corporation to transact intrastate business, without first qualifying to transact intrastate business pursuant to Corp. Code § 2105. The California corporation breached the contract. The foreign corporation filed its first complaint for breach, which the trial court dismissed for failure to comply with Corp. Code § 2203(c). The foreign corporation then qualified to transact intrastate business, and thereafter brought a second action for breach of contract. The trial court again granted a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to comply with Corp. Code § 2203(c). The court of appeal reversed the judgment of dismissal, holding that a foreign corporation that has qualified to transact intrastate business after transacting, but prior to commencing an action on, intrastate business may maintain the action without complying with Corp. Code § 2203(c) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742) . The court examined the purpose of Corp. Code § 2203(c), which permits abatement of an action only if the foreign corporation failed to qualify before commencing the action. That section is literally and unambiguously inapplicable to actions commenced after compliance with Corp. Code § 2105 (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1740-1741) . In this case, the foreign corporation commenced its action following qualification and was not subject to abatement. It therefore was not required to comply with Corp. Code § 2203(c) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742) .

The court also noted that a foreign corporation transacting intrastate business that has failed to qualify may nevertheless defend an action brought against it in state court. A foreign corporation transacting intrastate business that has failed to qualify may also commence an action in state court. It is the act of maintaining an action commenced prior to qualification that requires compliance with Corp. Code § 2203(c) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1739) . However, a foreign corporation that qualifies to transact intrastate business after transacting, but before commencing an action on, intrastate business, may maintain the action without complying with Corp. Code § 2203(c) so long as the Franchise Tax Board has not suspended the corporation for failure to pay taxes before it commences the action (49 Cal. App. 4th 1732, 1742) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.37

§ 52.37 Opposing Corporate Defendant's Motion for Change of Venue--Insufficient Showing That Venue Was Improper

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	FOR CHANGE OF VENUE TO PROPER COURT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER TRANSFERRING THE ABOVE DESIGNATED _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] TO A PROPER COURT WHERE DEFENDANT HAS MADE AN INSUFFICIENT SHOWING THAT THE _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] WAS COMMENCED IN AN IMPROPER COURT.

A. Presumption That Venue Is Proper. In the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary, the presumption is that the county in which the title of the action shows that it is brought is, prima facie, the proper county for the commencement and trial of the action (Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 103, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; Smith v. Stanford Research Inst. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 750, 753, 28 Cal. Rptr. 481).

B. Burden of Proof on Motion to Change Venue, Generally. A motion for change of venue must satisfy two requirements: (1) it must be shown the action is proper in the county to which the movant seeks transfer; and (2) it must be shown the county in which the action was filed was improper under any applicable theory (Easton v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 243, 245-246, 90 Cal. Rptr. 642).

C. Corporation's Burden of Proof. A corporate defendant seeking a change of venue must show not only that its principal place of business is located in the county to which it seeks to have the action transferred, it must show also that the contract was not made, that it was not to be performed, that the obligation or liability did not arise, and that the breach did not occur in the county in which the venue is originally placed by the filing of plaintiff's complaint (Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 104, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 ; Smith v. Stanford Research Inst. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754, 28 Cal. Rptr. 481).

[Optional] D. Foreign Corporation's Burden of Proof. A foreign corporation may only invoke the venue provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 395.5 in the same manner as a domestic corporation if it establishes that it has qualified to do business in California under Corporations Code Section 2105. The failure to submit any proof of compliance with the provisions of Corporations Code Section 2105 renders the status of the foreign corporation as that of a foreign corporation only, and as such, the corporation may be sued in any county in the state (Easton v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 243, 246-247, 90 Cal. Rptr. 642 ; decided under former Cal. Const., Art. XII, § 16, and Corp. Code § 6403).

[Optional] E. When Corporation Is Permitted to Change Venue. A corporate defendant challenging venue may obtain an order changing venue only to the county of its principal place of business (Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 717, 52 Cal. Rptr. 592 ; Beutke v. American Sec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 354, 360-362, 282 P.2d 201 ; see Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 (location of corporation's principal place of business established for venue purposes)).

[Optional] F. Foreign Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State. A foreign corporation's designation of its principal office within the state in its statement filed with the Secretary of State (see Corp. Code § 2105) establishes the corporation's principal place of business for venue purposes as matter of law (Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609).

[Optional] G. Domestic Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State. A domestic corporation's designation of the location of its principal business office in its domestic stock corporation statement filed with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 1502] conclusively fixes the corporation's principal place of business for venue purposes as a matter of law (Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 675-676, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609).

[Optional] H. Continuing Effect of Tortious Conduct. Although in tort the liability arises where the wrongful invasion of legal rights occurs, when there is further conduct or an event or an occurrence of any kind that takes place in the county in which the tort action is commenced and that ensues in the natural and ordinary course of events from a corporate defendant's conduct in the county in which the tort liability originally arose, such as the continuing damage to a plaintiff caused by his or her arrest in a malicious prosecution action, the county in which the action is commenced is a proper county for the trial of the action (Ray Wong v. Earle C. Anthony, Inc. (1926) 199 Cal. 15, 17-20, 247 P. 894).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion made by a defendant corporation for a transfer of an action or proceeding commenced against it to the proper county for the commencement of such an action or proceeding under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 (venue for corporations generally) or Corp. Code §§ 304 (action for removal of director), 660(c) (application for order to compel holding of annual shareholder's meeting), 1304(a) (action for determination of shares as dissenting shares and/or market value), 1603(a) (proceeding to enforce right of inspection of corporate records and reports), 1800(a) (action for involuntary dissolution of corporation), or 1904 (petition for court to take jurisdiction of voluntary dissolution).

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to oppose a petition for a writ of mandate requiring transfer of thetrial of the case to the proper court when the trial court has denied a motion to change the place of trial on the grounds that the court designated in the complaint is the proper court. They may also be used to support a petition for a writ of mandate requiring trial in the court designated in the complaint when the trial court has granted a motion to change the place of trial on the grounds that the designated court was an improper court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 400].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for writ of mandate by a party aggrieved by an order granting a motion for change of venue to compel vacation of an order for change of venue on the grounds that one defendant is corporate and the action was properly brought in the county of its residence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 571, Venue (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum in opposition to a defendant's motion for change of venue to the county of the defendant's residence on the ground that the action was commenced in the county of the resident of the moving defendant's codefendant, see Ch. 238, Venue .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption That Venue Is Proper

In Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 , petitioner sought a writ of mandate compelling respondent court to vacate and set aside its order denying petitioner's motion for a change of venue from Los Angeles County to San Diego County, and to grant that change. The action which was for false imprisonment which allegedly took place on petitioner's premises in San Diego was commenced in the county of plaintiff's residence. In support of its motion, petitioner submitted a declaration of one of its officers alleging that it always maintained its executive offices and principal place of business in San Diego County. Although the court of appeal issued the peremptory writ of mandate as prayed, it noted at the outset of its opinion those rules which govern motions for a change of venue by corporations. The court stated that the language of former Cal. Const., art. XII, § 16 [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5] is designed to permit a wider choice of venue in suits against corporations than is permitted in suits against individuals by having its language couched in the disjunctive, thereby permitting a plaintiff to bring his or her action in any county which will satisfy any one of its provisions. Moreover, the court stated that in the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary, the presumption is that the county in which the title of the action shows that it is brought is, prima facie, the proper county for the commencement and trial of the action. This presumption can be overcome by a corporation only by showing (1) that its principal place of business is located in the county to which it seeks to have the action transferred, and (2) that the contract was not made, that it was not to be performed, that the obligation or liability did not arise, and that the breach did not occur in the county wherein the venue was originally placed by the filing of plaintiff's complaint (13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 103) .

In Smith v. Stanford Research Inst. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 750, 28 Cal. Rptr. 481 , the plaintiffs appealed from an order of the trial court granting corporate defendants' motion for a change of venue. The plaintiffs contended that defendants' affidavits filed in support of the motion were not sufficient to support the court's order as a matter of law. The court of appeal agreed and reversed the order. Plaintiff's causes of action were for negligence and for breach of express and implied warranties relating to the fitness of equipment installed in an airplane which subsequently crashed. After discussing those same provisions and rules set forth above in Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 , the court found that although the plaintiffs did not allege where the contracts underlying the breach of warranty counts were entered into or where they were to have been performed, or the place where defendants' obligation or liabilities to plaintiffs arose, or when defendants' breach occurred, nevertheless, venue was presumptively proper, and the burden rested on defendants to demonstrate to the court that venue was not proper. This they failed to do because none of their affidavits made any direct reference to the causes of action for claimed breach of warranty; none of them affirmatively alleged that the claimed warranties were not made or entered into in the county in which the action was commenced, or that defendants' obligation with respect to the warranties did not arise there. The only showing made in the affidavits was that defendant's principal places of business were in a county other than the one in which the action was commenced, and this was insufficient to warrant the trial court's granting of the motion for the change of venue (212 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754) .

[b] Burden of Proof on Motion to Change Venue, Generally

In Easton v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 243, 90 Cal. Rptr. 642 , the plaintiff petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate to vacate an order transferring venue of its action from San Diego to Los Angeles County, and to compel trial in San Diego. Since there was no basis for venue in Los Angeles, the court granted the writ. Plaintiff and others sued a Chicago based commodity brokerage firm and its office manager. When the motion for change of venue was made, the office manager wasno longer employed by the firm and the firm had closed its Los Angeles office and withdrawn from California. In that portion of the court's opinion dealing with the brokerage firm's grounds for a transfer of the action, the court noted that it is the long established rule that a motion for change of venue must satisfy the two requirements set forth in Paragraph B of the foregoing form. The court stated that, although a foreign corporation may invoke the constitutional venue provisions in the same manner as a domestic corporation, a foreign corporation must first establish that it has qualified to do business in California under former Corp. Code § 6403 [see now Corp. Code § 2105]. The court found that nothing showed the firm ever designated the location and address of its principal office in California or complied with any of the provisions of Corp. Code § 6403. The only relevant affidavit submitted alleged that the firm's principal office was in Chicago. None of the documents showed whether it had an office in Los Angeles when the action was commenced. Since the requirements of Corp. Code § 6403 were not satisfied, the court concluded that the firm's status was that of a foreign corporation only, and that as such, it could be sued in any county in California (12 Cal. App. 3d 243, 245-246) .

[c] Corporation's Burden of Proof

Sea World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 100, 91 Cal. Rptr. 336 , and Smith v. Stanford Research

Inst. (1963) 212 Cal. App. 2d 750, 28 Cal. Rptr. 481 are discussed in § 52.37[3][a].

[d] Foreign Corporation's Burden of Proof

Easton v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 243, 246-247, 90 Cal. Rptr. 642 is discussed in § 52.37[3][b].

[e] When Corporation Is Permitted to Change Venue

Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 is discussed in § 52.37[3][g].

Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 52 Cal. Rptr. 592 was a mandamus proceeding to compel the trial court to vacate an order granting a change of venue. In the action which was for personal injuries, two defendant corporations named in the complaint moved for a change of venue from San Francisco County in which the action was commenced to Ventura County which was the county in which only one of the defendants had its principal place of business. The motion was based on the fact that with respect to the named defendants, San Francisco was not a proper county for the trial of plaintiff's action. Although the principal question on appeal was whether the trial court could disregard the residence of a party who had been sued by a fictitious name, and whose true name, Libbey, Inc., was substituted after the motion for change of venue, but before the hearing thereon, which the court of appeal decided the trial court could not do, the court noted at the outset that a corporation's principal place of business is its residence for purposes of determining venue, and that, accordingly, a corporate defendant challenging venue may obtain an order changing venue only to the county of its principal place of business (243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 717) .

In Beutke v. American Sec. Co. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 354, 282 P.2d 201 , the plaintiffs appealed from an order granting defendants' motion for a change of venue from Shasta County to Alameda County. Among other contentions, the plaintiffs argued that since the principal place of business of defendants was the County of San Francisco and not Alameda County, the defendants had the right to have the action transferred only to San Francisco. The defendants responded by contending that once they show that Shasta was not a proper county, then they have the right to have the venue changed to any place where the plaintiff might have brought the action. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal agreed with plaintiffs and found that former Cal. Const., art. XII, § 16 [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5] was permissible only and not mandatory. The court, quoting an earlier Supreme Court decision, stated that the section denies the absolute right of the corporation to a change of venue to the county of its principal place of business, when sued in any one of the other counties named in the section. Thus, the court was of the opinion that if an action is not commenced in a proper county, a corporation may change the venue to the county of its residence, but that there was no authority for changing it to some other county in which a plaintiff could have brought the action (132 Cal. App. 2d 354, 360-362) .

[f] Foreign Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State

Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 is discussed in § 52.37[3][g].

[g] Domestic Corporation's Designation of Principal Place of Business in Statement Filed With Secretary of State

Rosas v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 609 was a mandamus proceeding to compel the trial court to vacate an order granting a change of venue. In a bad faith action against a domestic insurance company, brought in the county designated as the company's principal business office in its domestic stock corporation statement [see Corp. Code § 1502], the trial court transferred the matter to another county, which the company maintained had been its principal place ofbusiness for 11 years. Plaintiff contended that the company's designation of the location of its principal business on its statement filed with the Secretary of State, and on various filings with the Department of Insurance, fixed its location as a matter of law. In a petition for writ of mandate, the plaintiff challenged the granting of the company's motion to change venue. The court of appeal granted the petition, holding that for purposes of venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5, a domestic corporation's designation of the location of its principal place of office in its annual statement filed with the Secretary of State conclusively fixed the corporation's principal place of business (25 Cal. App. 3th 671, 672).

The court reexamined Gutierrez v. Superior Court (1966) 243 Cal. App. 2d 710, 728, 52 Cal. Rptr. 592 , discussed in § 52.37[3][e]. The court noted that former Corp. Code § 6403, the statute relied on in Gutierrez, was replaced by Corp. Code § 2105. This revision merely substituted "address of its principal executive office" for "location and address of its main office" and substituted "address of its principal office within this state, if any" for "location and address of its principal office within this State." Such a minor revision, the court concluded, did not undercut the analysis of the Gutierrez decision, holding that a foreign corporation's designation of its principal office in California in its statement filed with the Secretary of State established the corporation's principal place of business for venue purposes as a matter of law (25 Cal. App. 4th 671, 676) .

[h] Continuing Effect of Tortious Conduct

Ray Wong v. Earle C. Anthony, Inc. (1926) 199 Cal. 15, 247 P. 894 was an action for malicious prosecution. Plaintiff alleged that defendant caused a complaint to be filed in Sacramento charging him, a resident of San Joaquin County, with embezzlement; that a warrant of arrest was issued pursuant to which plaintiff was arrested in San Joaquin and placed in jail there; and that he was thereafter tried in Sacramento where he was acquitted. Defendant corporation moved for a change of venue from San Joaquin to Sacramento County on the ground that its principal place of business was in Sacramento and that the liability for the tort alleged did not arise in San Joaquin. In affirming the order denying the motion, the Supreme Court stated that the term "prosecution" is sufficiently comprehensive to include every step in an action for its commencement to its final determination. The disgraceful imputation caused by the arrest and the inconvenience and expense incident to defending the proceedings, were consequences which ensued in the ordinary and natural course of events, though those consequences were immediately brought about by intervening agents. As long as those agents were set in motion by the primary wrongdoer, or those acts that caused the damage were the necessary or legal and natural consequences of the wrongful act, both of which were true in this case, the defendant was liable for that damage. Therefore, the court concluded that the liability arose in San Joaquin. The court noted that the principal was the same as that applied in Tingley v. Times-Mirror Co. (1904) 144 Cal. 205, 77 P. 918 , a libel action based on a newspaper report brought in San Diego County where the paper was circulated. Although in Tingley, liability arose first in the county of the newspaper's publication, the alleged injury occurred had its most lasting effect in the county of the plaintiff's residence, San Diego. In the same manner, the Court reasoned that, in this case, the fact that defendant did not directly do anything in San Joaquin County was wholly immaterial since the arrest and imprisonment in the county were the natural consequences of the accusation, ensuing in the regular course of the proceeding which the defendant set in motion (199 Cal. 15, 17-20) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption That Venue Is Proper

Mission Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075 , arose out of an action commenced in San Francisco by a national beer importer against its California distributor. The plaintiff sought a declaration of its rights under a letter agreement that was entered into in Los Angeles, along with an injunction to prevent the defendant from interfering further with its current and prospective contractual relationships with other distributors. After a dispute had arisen between the parties and the plaintiff purported to terminate the agreement, the defendant's attorney sent a letter to subdistributors in the state explaining the defendant's intent to file suit against the plaintiff and claim to be the master distributor until determination of that action. After the plaintiff filed suit, the defendant moved to change venue to Los Angeles, its principal place of business. The trial court denied the motion, and the denial was upheld by the Supreme Court. The court stated that the suit was a transitory action governed by Code

Civ. Proc. § 395.5. In the absence of an affirmative showing to the contrary, the presumption is that the county in which the title of the action shows that it is brought is, prima facie, the proper county for the commencement and trial of the action (31 Cal. 3d 921, 928) . Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5 permits tort claims against a corporation to be tried in any county in which liability arises as well as in the county where the corporation's principal place of business is located. As San Francisco was presumptively the proper county for a trial of the action, the burden of proving otherwise rested with the defendant. To prevail on the motion, the defendant had to demonstrate not only that its principal place of business was not in San Francisco, a fact conceded by the plaintiff, but also that the alleged liability did not arise in San Francisco (31 Cal. 3d 921, 929) . The plaintiff had alleged that the letter was received by a particular distributor of its beer, and the defendant offered evidence that the distributor had distributed the beer in San Francisco. Taking theallegations and evidence together, the court held that it was established that the plaintiff may have suffered injury in San Francisco. As the defendant had not met its burden of showing that the injury did not occur there, venue was proper as laid (31 Cal. 3d 921, 930) .

[b] Corporation's Burden of Proof

In Mission Imports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 31 Cal. 3d 921, 184 Cal. Rptr. 296, 647 P.2d 1075 , the Supreme Court discussed a corporation's burden of proof on a motion for change of venue (31 Cal. 3d 921, 928-929) . For further discussion, see § 52.37[4][a].

In Anaheim Extrusion Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 216 Cal. Rptr. 815 , an action to recover payment for goods sold and delivered to a corporation, the trial court granted a defense motion to change venue from Orange County to Los Angeles County, and the plaintiff petitioned for a writ of mandate to vacate this order. The court of appeal issued the writ. The court stated the rule that, when a corporate defendant moves to change venue, it has the burden of negating the propriety of venue as laid on all possible grounds (170 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 1203) . The court concluded that the defendant had failed to meet this burden, in that it did not negate the fact that Orange County was the county in which the contract was to be performed, which is one of the grounds for venue under Code Civ. Proc. § 395.5. The court reasoned that although the goods were to be delivered in Los Angeles County, the alleged breach of performance was nonpayment rather than nondelivery. The contract was silent about the place for making payment, but the plaintiff had indicated that it had received payments in the past at its office in Orange County, and the defendant failed to present any evidence to the contrary (170 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 1203-1204) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.38

§ 52.38 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code Against Foreign Corporation--Nationally Traded or Wholly Owned Corporation Is Not Subject to California Law [Corp. Code § 2115(c)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name],	)	FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
a(n) _____ [name	)	Date: _____
of state or foreign country]	)	Time: _____
Corporation,	)	Location: _____
Defendant.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT FOREIGN CORPORATION IS NOT SUBJECT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2115(b) BECAUSE _____ [specify applicable reason, e.g., ALL OF ITS VOTING SHARES ARE OWNED BY A CORPORATION THAT IS NOT SUBJECT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2115], AND THUS THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT DEFENDANT IS A "NOMINALLY FOREIGN" CORPORATION SHOULD BE DENIED.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Securities Listed on Specified Exchange. Corporations Code Section 2115 does not apply to any corporation with outstanding securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange , the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market (Corp. Code § 2115(c)(1)).

[OR]

B. Subsidiary Corporation. Corporations Code § 2115 does not apply to any corporation if all of its voting shares (other than a director's qualifying shares) are owned directly or indirectly by a corporation or corporations that are not subject to Corporations Code § 2115 (Corp. Code § 2115(c)(2)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in an action to enforce a provision of the Corporations Code listed under Corp. Code § 2115(b) if the motion is based on the ground that the defendant foreign corporation is a "nominally foreign" corporation under Corp. Code § 2115(a). Counsel should use whichever Paragraph B is applicable. This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the memorandum, as well as a separate statement in response to the moving party's statement of undisputed material facts [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nationally Traded or Wholly Owned Corporation is Not Subject to California Law

Corp. § 2115(c) provides that the application of California law set forth in Corporations Code § 2115(b) does not apply to any corporation (1) with outstanding securities listed on the New York Stock Exchange, the NYSE Amex, the NASDAQ Global Market, or the NASDAQ Capital Market, or (2) if all of its voting shares (other than directors' qualifying shares) are owned directly or indirectly by a corporation or corporations not subject to Corp.Code § 2115.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.39

§ 52.39 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Enforce Provision of Corporations Code Against Foreign Corporation--Inapplicability of "Nominally Foreign" Status to Defendant Corporation [Corp. Code § 2115(a), (d), (e)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.38.]

DEFENDANT FOREIGN CORPORATION IS NOT SUBJECT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2115(b) BECAUSE THE TESTS REFERRED TO IN CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2115(a) ARE _____ [INAPPLICABLE or NOT MET], AND THUS THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT DEFENDANT IS A "NOMINALLY FOREIGN" CORPORATION SHOULD BE DENIED.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Corporation Not "Nominally Foreign" When Tests Not Met. A foreign corporation is not subject to Corporations Code § 2115 _____ [if the average of its property factor, payroll factor,and sales factor as defined in Revenue and Taxation Code § 25129, 25132, and 25134 is 50 percent or less or if one half or less of its outstanding voting securities are held of record by persons having addresses in California appearing on the books of the corporation on the record date for the latest meeting of shareholders held during its latest full income year or, if no meeting was held during that year, on the last day of the latest full income year] (Corp. Code § 2115(a)).

[OR]

B. Time Period in Which "Nominally Foreign" Status Applicable to Foreign Corporation. The provisions of Corporations Code § 2115(a), making a foreign corporation subject to Corporations Code § 2115 when the tests referred to in Corporations Code Section § 2115(a) have been met, becomes applicable only [on the first day of the first income year of the corporation _____ [commencing on or after the 135th day of the income year immediately following the latest income year with respect to which the tests referred to in Corporation Code § 2115(a) have been met or commencing on or after the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that the tests referred to in Corporation Code § 2115(a) have been met] (Corp. Code § 2115(a), (d)).

[OR]

B. Cessation of "Nominally Foreign" Corporation Status. Corporations Code § 2115(a), making a foreign corporation subject to Corporations Code § 2115 when the tests referred to in Corporations Code § 2115(a) have been met, ceases to be applicable _____ [at the end of the first income year of the corporation immediately following the latest income year with respect to which at least one test referred to in Corporation Code § 2115(a) is not met or at the end of the income year of the corporation during which a court of competent jurisdiction has not entered a _____ (contrary order before the end of the income year or final order declaring that one of the tests referred to in Corporation Code § 2115(a) is not met)] (Corp. Code § 2115(a), (e)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Nominee Holders. Securities held to the knowledge of the issuer in the names of broker-dealers, nominees for broker-dealers (including clearing corporations) or banks, associations, or other entities holding securities in a nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner (collectively "nominee holders"), are not considered outstanding. [However, if the foreign corporation requests all nominee holders to certify, with respect to all beneficial owners for whom securities are held, the number of shares held for those beneficial owners having addresses (as shown on the records of the nominee holder) in and outside California, then all shares so certified must be considered "outstanding" and held of record by persons having addresses either in or outside California as so certified, provided that the certification is retained with the record of shareholders and made available for inspection and copying in the same manner as is provided in Corporations Code § 1600. A current list of beneficial owners of a foreign corporation's securities provided to the corporation by one or more nominee holders or their agent pursuant to the requirements of Rule 14b-1(b)(3) or 14b-2(b)(3), as adopted on January 6, 1992, and promulgated under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, constitutes an acceptable certification with respect to beneficial owners] (Corp. Code § 2115(a)).

[Optional] D. "Voting Power." The term "voting power" means the power to vote for the election of directors at the time any determination of voting power is made and does not include the rights to vote on the happening of some condition or event that has not yet occurred (Corp. Code § 194.5).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in an action to enforce a provision of the Corporations Code enumerated in Corp. Code § 2115(b) when the motion is based on the ground that the defendant foreign corporation is a "nominally foreign" corporation under Corp. Code § 2115(a). This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition,counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion, as well as a separate statement in response to the moving party's statement of undisputed material facts [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Period in Which "Nominally Foreign" Status Applicable to Foreign Corporation

A foreign corporation is subject to the requirements of Corp. Code § 2115(b) commencing on the date specified in Corp. Code § 2115(d) and continuing until the date specified in Corp. Code § 2115(e) [Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. Corp. Code § 2115(d), as set forth in Paragraph B of this form, specifies when the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115(a) become applicable, and Corp. Code § 2115(a) defines when a foreign corporation is subject in general to the provisions of Corp. Code § 2115. A foreign corporation is required to comply with the provisions of the General Corporation Law specified in Corp. Code § 2115(b), therefore, only for the period when its status as a "nominally foreign" corporation commences under Corp. Code § 2115(d) and ceases under Corp. Code 2115(e), also set forth in Paragraph B of this form. Thus, although an action may be brought to enforce a provision of the Code during the period in which Corp. Code § 2115(a) applies to the corporation under Corp. Code § 2115(d), when the facts giving rise to the action occurred before this period commenced, it would appear that the corporation would not be required to comply with the particular provision.

[b] Nominee Holders

As set forth in Paragraph C, securities held by nominee holders are not considered outstanding unless the corporation requests all such holders to certify the number of shares held for beneficial owners. Broker-dealers, nominees for broker dealers (including clearing corporations) or banks, associations, or other entities holding securities in a nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner are collectively referred to as "nominee holders" [Corp. Code § 2115(a)].

[c] "Voting Power"

The term "voting securities" is not defined as such in the definitional sections of General Corporation Law [see Corp. Code §§ 1-195]. However, the term "voting power," set forth in Paragraph D of this form and contained in Corp. Code § 194.5, would appear to be applicable in determining whether one half of the voting securities of a foreign corporation are held of record by persons having addresses in California under Corp. Code § 2115(a).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.40

§ 52.40 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Forfeiture of Corporate Powers Not Effective Because Preliminary Notification or Transmission to Secretary of State Was Not Made [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
[a Corporation],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
[a Corporation],	)	Location: _____
Defendant.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE FRANCHISE TAX BOARD _____ [DID NOT GIVE _____ (name of corporation) PRELIMINARY NOTICE OF _____ (SUSPENSION or FORFEITURE) AS REQUIRED BY REVENUE AND TAXATION CODE SECTIONS 21020 AND 23302 and/or HAS NOT TRANSMITTED THE NAME OF THE CORPORATION TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE PURSUANT TO REVENUE AND TAXATION CODE SECTION 23302] AND, THEREFORE, THE FORFEITURE OF CORPORATE POWERS IS NOT EFFECTIVE.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Preliminary Notice Requirement. In order for a corporation's powers, rights, and privileges to be suspended or forfeited pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code § [§] _____ [23301 and/or 23301.5 and/or 23775], the Franchise Tax Board must have mailed the taxpayer a notice of preliminary suspension that indicates thatthe taxpayer will be suspended by a date certain. The preliminary notice must be mailed to the taxpayer at least 60 days before the date certain (Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 21020, 23302(b)).

[AND/OR]

B. Transmission to Secretary of State. If the Franchise Tax Board has not transmitted the name of the tax-delinquent foreign corporation to the Secretary of State, the forfeiture of the corporation's powers, rights, and privileges for failure to pay franchise taxes pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Sections 23301, 23301.5, or 23775 is not effective and the corporation thus does not lack legal capacity to maintain the action, because forfeiture is not automatic and notification to the Secretary of State is required under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23302 (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(a), (c); see Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 617-618, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment made by a defendant or plaintiff in an action being maintained by or against a corporation if the motion is made on the ground that the corporation's powers to maintain or defend the action have been forfeited pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301, but the Franchise Tax Board either has failed to give the preliminary notice required by Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 21020, 23302(b) or has not transmitted the name of the corporation to the Secretary of State pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c).

Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, and 23775 apply to a foreign corporation only if the corporation is qualified to do business in California. A corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 [see § 52.20] to qualify to do business is not deemed to have qualified to do business for purposes of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 et seq. unless the taxpayer has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6(set forth in § 52.41)]. However, if the foreign corporation is "transacting intrastate business" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 191 and is not exempted on interstate commerce or other grounds, it will still lack capacity to maintain or defend an action on that intrastate business as provided by Corp. Code § 2203, discussed in § 52.20 [see also § 52.34 (opposing existence of criteria requiring qualification)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Notice Requirement

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(b) was added by Stats. 1990, ch. 926, a transition provision of which specifies that the Legislature did not intend the act to be construed to affect the rights of any party to an action commenced prior to January 1, 1991 [see Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(c) (set forth in § 52.32)].

[b] Transmission to Secretary of State

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(c) provides that the Franchise Tax Board must transmit to the Secretary of State the names of taxpayers whose powers, rights, and privileges are being suspended or forfeited and that the suspension or forfeiture becomes effective on transmission.

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302(a) provides that forfeiture or suspension of a corporation's rights, powers, and privileges pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302, 23301.5, or 23775 only occurs or becomes effective as expressly provided in Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302.

The facts and procedural background of Mediterranean Exports, Inc. v. Superior Court (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 174 Cal. Rptr. 169 are discussed in § 52.34[3][b]. In that case, the court of appeal held that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether defendant's activities in California amounted to the transaction of "intrastate business" as defined by Corp. Code § 191. The court also held that a triable issue of fact existed regarding the corporation's legal capacity to maintain the action due to the forfeiture of corporate powers, rights, and privileges for failure to pay franchise taxes pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 because forfeiture is not automatic and is effective only when the Franchise Tax Board transmits the name of the tax-delinquent foreign corporation to the Secretary of State pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302 and there was evidence that the board had not done this (119 Cal. App. 3d 605, 617) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.41

§ 52.41 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Suspension and Forfeiture Provisions Do Not Apply Unless Foreign Corporation Has Qualified to Do Business in California [Corp. Code § 2105; Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE REVENUE AND TAXATION CODE SECTION[S] _____ [23301 and/or 23301.5 and/or 23775] DO NOT APPLY TO _____ [party, e.g., PLAINTIFF].

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

B. Suspension Provision Not Applicable to Unqualified Foreign Corporation. Revenue and Taxation Code Sections 23301, 23301.5, and 23775 apply to a foreign corporation only if the corporation is qualified to do business in California. A corporation that is required under Corporations Code Section 2105 to qualify to do business is not deemed to have qualified to do business for purposes of the suspension and revivor provisions of the Bank and Corporations Franchise Tax Law (Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23301) unless the taxpayer has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a foreign corporation that is required to, but has not, qualified to do business in California [see Corp. Code § 2105, set forth in § 52.20] in opposition to a motion for summary judgment that seeks to have the foreign corporation deemed suspended, or its powers deemed forfeited, pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, or 23775. The ground of opposition is that those sections to not apply to an unqualified foreign corporation [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6]. Note, however, that some contracts of the unqualified foreign corporation may still be voidable under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.1(b)-(d), discussed in § 52.32. Furthermore, if the foreign corporation is "transacting intrastate business" within the meaning of Corp. Code § 191 and is not exempted on interstate commerce or other grounds, the action may still be abated pursuant to Corp. Code § 2203, discussed in § 52.20 [see also § 52.34 (opposing existence of criteria requiring qualification)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the particular case and the points of law raised. In addition, it is necessary to attach declarations or documentary evidence in support of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)], most notably in this situation, a certificate or declaration from the appropriate custodian of records for the Secretary of State.

This memorandum may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suspension Provision Not Applicable to Unqualified Foreign Corporation

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 was added by Stats. 1990, ch. 926, the transition provisions of which are discussed in §§ 52.32 and 52.43.

For a case addressing the effect of registration and compliance by a foreign corporation before the applicability of the 1990 statutes, see Gardiner Solder v. Superior Alloy (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206 , discussed in § 52.43[4][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.42

§ 52.42 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action by or Against Foreign Corporation--Reinstatement of Corporate Powers Following Payment of Franchise Tax as Validating Prior Acts [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE _____ [SUSPENDED or FORFEITED] POWERS, RIGHTS, AND PRIVILEGES, OF A CORPORATION HAVE BEEN REINSTATED, THEREBY VALIDATING PRIOR ACTS TAKENBY THE CORPORATION AND PERMITTING IT TO PROCEED WITH THE ACTION.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

B. Plea in Abatement. A plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension or forfeiture of corporate powers for nonpayment of its taxes is a plea in abatement which is not favored in law, is strictly construed, and must be supported by facts warranting the abatement at the time of the plea (Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 370, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790).

C. Relief From Suspension or Forfeiture. Any taxpayer who has suffered the suspension or forfeiture provided for in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23301 or 23301.5 may be relieved therefrom on making application in writing to the Franchise Tax Board and on the filing of all tax returns required by the Franchise Tax Board and on payment of the tax, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts for nonpayment of which the suspension or forfeiture occurred, together with all other taxes, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts due under the Bank and Corporation Franchise Law, and on issuance by the Franchise Tax Board of a certificate of revivor (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305).

D. Effect of Issuance of Certificate. On the issuance of a certificate of revivor by the Franchise Tax Board, the taxpayer named therein becomes reinstated, although reinstatement is without prejudice to any action, defense, or right which has accrued by reason of the original suspension or forfeiture, [except that contracts which were voidable pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.1, but which have not been rescinded pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305, may have that voidability cured in accordance with Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.5] (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a).

E. Certificate Is Prima Facie Evidence. The certificate of revivor is prima facie evidence of the reinstatement of the taxpayer named therein (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a).

F. Satisfying Purpose for Suspension or Forfeiture. The purpose of Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23301 providing for the suspension or forfeiture of a corporation which has not paid its franchise taxes is to pressure the delinquent corporation to pay its taxes, and that purpose is satisfied by a rule which views a corporation's tax delinquencies, after correction, as mere irregularities (Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 371, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 ; Gardiner Solder v. SupAlloy Corp. Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 1542-1545, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206).

G. Effect of Revival of Corporate Powers. Regardless of whether a corporation, which has had its corporate powers suspended or forfeited for failure to pay its franchise taxes, takes court action during the period of its suspension or forfeiture prior to judgment or after judgment, the revival of corporate powers under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305a has the effect of validating the earlier acts and permitting the corporation to proceed with the prosecution or defense of the action or an appeal from an adverse judgment in an action (Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 373, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 ; Rochin v. Pat Johnson Manufacturing Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1236-1237, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719 ; Benton v. County of Napa (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491-1492, 277 Cal. Rptr. 541).

[Optional] H. Suspension or Forfeiture Does Not Affect Court's Jurisdiction. The suspended or forfeited status of corporate powers at the time of filing of an action by the corporation does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to proceed; nor does a suspension after the filing of an action, but before rendition of judgment, deprive the court of jurisdiction (Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 371, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790).

[Optional] I. Substantial Compliance. The doctrine of substantial compliance applies to allow a suspended corporation to prosecute or defend its action even though the certificate of revivor has not been issued, if the suspended corporation has paid all taxes, deficiencies, penalties, and interest as required by Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305 (see Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 1515-1516, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619).

[Optional] J. Bond, Deposit, or Other Security for Liability. Notwithstanding Revenue and Taxation Code, which Sections 23305 and 23305.1 require a corporation to pay any liability to the Franchise Tax Board as a condition to revivor or relief from voidability, the Franchise Tax Board must issue a certificate of _____ [revivor under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305 or relief from voidability under Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305.1], if the corporation provides the Franchise Tax Board with an assumption of liability, or a bond, deposit, or othersecurity for the taxpayer's liability, that is acceptable to the Franchise Tax Board (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment made by a defendant or plaintiff in an action being maintained by or against a corporation which has had its corporate powers suspended for failure to pay its franchise taxes on the grounds that the corporation is unable to prosecute or defend the action.

The suspension and forfeiture provisions [see Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, and 23775] apply to a foreign corporation that is required under Corp. Code § 2105 [see § 52.20] to qualify to do intrastate business in California only if the corporation has in fact qualified with the Secretary of State [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6 (set forth in § 52.41)]. However, such a corporation may still be vulnerable to a plea in abatement under Corp. Code § 2203, discussed in §§ 52.20 and 52.34.

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In addition, it is necessary to attach declarations or documentary evidence in support of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)], most notably in this situation, certified copies of the certificate of revivor or application for revivor or other certificate or declaration from the appropriate custodian of records for the Franchise Tax Board or Secretary of State establishing that the opposing party has applied for revivor, or a declaration that the opposing intends to apply for revivor and has the financial resources to pay the amounts required to do so.

This form may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Related Memoranda

If the opposing party also needs to apply for relief from voidability of contract, see § 52.43.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plea in Abatement

In Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 , cross defendants appealed from an order denying their motion to vacate and set aside a judgment which had already become final in favor of cross complainant, a California corporation. The ground of the motion was that before entry of the judgment and continuously to the time of the motion, the corporate powers of cross complainant had been suspended under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301. In support of their motion, cross defendants submitted a certificate from the Secretary of State showing cross complainant's suspension and the fact that it had not been reinstated. The suspension had not previously been brought to the court's attention. Following the trial court's denial of cross defendant's motion, the corporate powers of cross complainant were reinstated. On appeal, cross defendants contended that the suspension prior to rendition and entry of judgment rendered the judgment void and subject to collateral attack even though the corporation's lack of capacity does not appear from the face of the judgment roll. The Supreme Court affirmed the order appealed from and held that the trial court was correct in its view that the final judgment was immune from the collateral attack attempted. The Supreme Court noted that, although under previous California law where the corporate charter was forfeited for nonpayment of franchise taxes, collateral attack of a judgment rendered in favor of a forfeited corporation was permitted, under present Bank and Corporation Franchise Law, a plea of lack of capacity of a corporation to maintain an action by reason of a suspension of corporate powers for nonpayment of its taxes is a plea in abatement which is not favored in law and is to be strictly construed and which must be supported by facts warranting the abatement at the time of the plea. The Court concluded that in light of recent holdings under the present law, the suspended status of corporate powers at the time of filing of action by a corporation does not affect the jurisdiction of the court to proceed; therefore, it followed that such a suspension after the filing of action, but before rendition of judgment, likewise would not deprive the court of jurisdiction or render the judgment void and subject to collateral attack after it had become final.

[b] Effect of Issuance of Certificate

The provisions of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a relating to voidability of contracts were added by Stats. 1990, ch. 926, and are discussed in §§ 52.32 and 52.43.

[c] Satisfying Purpose for Suspension or Forfeiture

In Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 , respondent, a nonprofit corporationmoved to dismiss the appeal from an adverse judgment by appellant, a California corporation. The basis for the motion was that appellant's corporate powers had been suspended pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301. In opposition to the motion, appellant filed a declaration accompanied by a receipt from the Franchise Tax Board indicating that it had paid its delinquent taxes. Subsequently, the Secretary of State issued a certificate of revivor to appellant, showing that it had been reinstated. In denying the motion, the Supreme Court found that in a number of previous California decisions [see § 52.42[4][b]] the revival of corporate powers by the payment of delinquent taxes had been held to validate otherwise invalid prior action. The Court noted that in these cases it was held that the purpose of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 was to put pressure on a delinquent corporation to pay its taxes, and that that purpose was satisfied by a rule which viewed the corporation's tax delinquencies after correction as mere irregularities. Following a discussion of these cases, the Court stated that these authorities made clear that as to matters occurring prior to judgment, the revival of corporate powers had the effect of validating the earlier acts and permitting the corporation to proceed with the action, prosecution or defense of an action. The Court concluded that the same rule should ordinarily apply with respect to matters occurring subsequent to judgment.

In a case predating the applicability of the 1990 statutes, the court of appeal in Gardiner Solder v. SupAlloy Corp. Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206 , reversed a judgment for the defendant and ordered judgment entered in favor of a foreign corporation that had shipped goods to the defendant (which never paid for them) and commenced suit for restitution before it qualified to do business in California or registered with the Franchise Tax Board. After the suit was commenced, the plaintiff qualified to do business in California, registered with the Franchise Tax Board, and paid applicable taxes, interest, and penalties. The court of appeal based its reversal on equitable grounds, noting that the purpose of the suspension statute had been achieved in that the plaintiff did register and pay appropriate taxes and penalties, and finding that it would be inequitable to grant the defendant a windfall (232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 1542-1545) .

[d] Effect of Revival of Corporate Powers

Peacock Hill Ass'n v. Peacock Lagoon Constr. Co. (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 369, 105 Cal. Rptr. 29, 503 P.2d 285 is discussed in § 52.42[3][c].

In Rochin v. Pat Johnson Manufacturing Company (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1236-1237, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 719 , plaintiff brought an action for personal injury against defendant ladder manufacturer. Defendant's corporate powers, rights, and privileges had been suspended for failure to pay franchise taxes before the personal injury action had been brought against it, and before plaintiff's subsequent action to vacate the amended judgment entered in that action. The issue arose as to whether defendant corporation was entitled to defend plaintiff's appeal from the trial court's order sustaining defendant's demurrer in the action to vacate the amended judgment. In response, the corporation filed a certificate of revivor of its corporate status which became effective during the pendency of the appeal. The court of appeal concluded that the revival of defendant's corporate powers validated the procedural steps taken on behalf of the corporation while it was under suspension and permitted it to proceed with the appeal (67 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1236-1237) .

Benton v. County of Napa (1991) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 277 Cal. Rptr. 541 , involved issuance of a use permit to construct a winery. The permit was valid for one year and then expired. The permit was extended when the corporate applicant's powers were suspended. Petitioners sought to have the extension revoked, but the county declined, and the court of appeal affirmed the resulting discharge of alternative writ and denial of petition for mandate. The court said that the purpose of the suspension statute had been satisfied in that the applicant paid its taxes (226 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1490) , and that applying for and being granted an extension of an expired use permit was procedural, not substantive. Thus, the corporation's revivor served to validate the extension (226 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491-1492) .

[e] Suspension or Forfeiture Does Not Affect Court's Jurisdiction

Traub Co. v. Coffee Break Serv., Inc. (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 368, 371, 57 Cal. Rptr. 846, 425 P.2d 790 is discussed in § 52.42[3][a].

[f] Substantial Compliance

Sade Shoe Co. v. Oschin & Snyder (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1509, 266 Cal. Rptr. 619 is discussed in § 52.31[3][g].

[g] Bond, Deposit, or Other Security for Liability

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2 was added by Stats. 1990, ch. 926, the transition provisions of which are discussed in §§ 52.32 and 52.43.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plea in Abatement

In Color-Vue, Inc. v. Abrams (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 443 , an attorney sued a corporation in municipal court for unpaid legal fees. The corporation then sued the attorney in superior court for malpractice, and the cases were consolidated. When the corporation announcedthat it was ready for trial, the attorney moved to dismiss the corporation's action on the ground that it had been suspended for failure to pay franchise taxes. The corporation moved for a continuance to pay its taxes and revive its corporate powers, but the trial court denied the motion and granted the motion to dismiss. It then allowed the attorney to prove up his case as an uncontested matter. The corporation paid its franchise taxes and was in good standing at the time the court entered its judgment. The appellate court stated that a plea in abatement such as lack of capacity to sue, unlike an objection to standing to sue, must be raised at the earliest opportunity or it is waived. Therefore, it held that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying the corporation's motion for a continuance to pay its taxes and revive its powers when the issue of incapacity was raised for the first time at trial (44 Cal. App. 4th 1599, 1603-1606) .

[b] Effect of Revival of Corporate Powers

In Grell v. Lace Le Beau Corp. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 358 , plaintiffs/appellants appealed an order denying their motion to vacate judgment in their coordinated wrongful death and survival actions. They contended the trial court erroneously ruled the statute of limitations was not tolled during the period of time respondent's corporate status was suspended. Respondent contended the order denying the motion to vacate is not appealable, and that the statute of limitations was not tolled. The court of appeal affirmed. Respondent corporation's corporate status was suspended on April 1, 1992, pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23302, and revived on January 29, 1996. Appellants conceded that both actions were filed beyond the period permitted by the statute of limitations, and argued only that the statute of limitations was tolled during the period of respondent's corporate suspension. The trial court rejected the tolling argument and ruled that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Appellants moved to vacate the judgment on the ground that while respondent's corporate status was suspended, it wrongfully used the courts to assert the statute of limitations in contravention of Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301. The trial court denied the motion on the merits, ruling that the statute of limitations continues to run against a corporation suspended for nonpayment of taxes. The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that appellants had not cited, nor had the court independently uncovered, any statute or judicial decision tolling the statute of limitations while a corporation is suspended for failure to pay taxes. Neither respondent's suspended corporate status nor any conduct by respondent prevented appellants from filing their complaints timely and moving their actions forward. Appellants failed to demonstrate the existence of circumstances which effectively rendered timely commencement of their actions impossible or impracticable. Further, although respondent's demurrer to one of the plaintiffs' fourth amended complaint was improperly filed while it was suspended, the hearing and order sustaining the demurrer against the wrongful death plaintiffs occurred after respondent's corporate status was reinstated. Thereafter, respondent obtained summary judgment on statute of limitations grounds. Had respondent asserted its statute of limitations defense against the wrongful death plaintiffs as it did against the estate's action once its corporate status was reinstated, it would have prevailed. Consequently, its premature filing of the demurrer to the fourth amended complaint was harmless (73 Cal. App. 4th 1300, 1304-1307) .

In Diverco Constructors, Inc. v. Wilstein (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 6, 85 Cal. Rptr. 851 , plaintiff corporation was suspended during the pendency of a lawsuit. Just before expiration of the five-year period within which an action must be brought to trial under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360], plaintiff moved for a request for an early trial setting conferences. The cause was dismissed by the trial court when the defendant notified the court that plaintiff's corporate powers had been suspended at the time the motion was made, even though plaintiff was reinstated before the suspension was brought to the court's attention. In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal held that suspension of corporate powers is a defense which may be asserted so long as the corporate party is under disability; on revival of its corporate powers, the party may proceed with the prosecution or defense of the action. The court reasoned that since plaintiff's corporate powers had been revived two days before defendants made their motion, the motion was, therefore, groundless. The court noted that during its period of suspension, the activities of plaintiff, in undertaking discovery and appearing on and filing motions, were not nullity since its legal rights were merely suspended and were revived, like an unconscious person revived by artificial respiration.

In A.E. Cook Co. v. K S Racing Enterprises, Inc. (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 499, 79 Cal. Rptr. 123 , the trial court had denied a motion for summary judgment and a motion to dissolve an attachment made by a defendant on the grounds that under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 the plaintiff's corporate powers had been suspended for nonpayment of franchise taxes. Before the motions were heard, plaintiff revived its corporate powers by paying its delinquent taxes. The defendant appealed its motion to dissolve the writ of attachment. In affirming the trial court's refusal to dissolve the attachment, the court of appeal stated that on revivor of its corporate powers, a corporation may continue an action commenced during the period of suspension and not previously dismissed, even though the opposing party pleaded the suspension prior to the revivor. The court noted that a challenge based on the suspension of a corporation's powers is a disfavored plea in abatement, and that such a plea does not vest a right to dismissal which cannot be abrogated by a subsequent revivor of corporate powers. The court concluded that the same logic which sustained actions commenced prior to revivor of corporate powers sustains the validity of provisional remedies ancillary to such actions.

In Duncan v. Sunset Agricultural Minerals (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 489, 78 Cal. Rptr. 339 , the defendant corporation appealed from an adverse judgment in an action to quiet title. During the trial, plaintiffs introduced in evidence a certificate by the Secretary of State showing the suspension of defendant's corporate powers for nonpayment of its franchise taxes. Defendant informed the court that proceedings were then pending to obtain a reinstatement. The court reserved a ruling on the question. After the trial was completed, the court denied defendant's motion for leave to file an amended answer which was accompanied by an attached certificate of revivor and gave judgment for plaintiff on the basis of defendant's suspension. In reversing the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal held that the trial court had abused its discretion in refusing to grant defendant's motion since the case had been completely tried and should have been decided on its merits rather than on the basis of a technicality that resulted in forfeiture. In so holding, the court found it particularly significant that when the question was raised at trial, the court, being fully advised, reserved a ruling and proceeded to try the case thoroughly on the merits; thus, after the certificate of revivor was filed, no retrial was required, but simply a submission of the case on the evidence already presented.

In Schwartz v. Magyar House, Inc. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 182, 335 P.2d 487 , plaintiff moved for judgment at the outset of trial on the grounds that the defendants were barred by law from defending the lawsuit since its corporate powers had been suspended for nonpayment of its franchise taxes. The defendant moved for and was granted a continuance in order that it might obtain reinstatement. The defendant paid its taxes, was reinstated, was then granted leave to file amended answers, participated in the trial, and had judgment. The plaintiff appealed. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that nothing under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301 bars a court from recognizing a suspended corporation for the limited purpose of permitting it to inform the court of facts which would warrant the court in construing the action for a limited period. The court stated that such a motion does constitute a defense or actual participation on the merits of the action, and that to construe the section to be an absolute bar to participation in an action would defeat its purpose of enforcing payment of delinquent franchise taxes. The court noted, in addition, that the taking of a default judgment is not an accrued right under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305a (reinstatement of suspended or forfeited corporation as without prejudice to any right or defense which has accrued by reason of that suspension or forfeiture) since this section appeared to be limited to a situation such as contracts made by corporations which are voidable because entered into while the corporate powers were suspended or forfeited [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23005a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.43

§ 52.43 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract [Civ. Code § 3300 or 3384]--By Corporation That Was Suspended at Time Contract Was Formed--Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

THE MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED _____ [TO ALLOW _____ (party, e.g., PLAINTIFF) TO APPLY FOR RELIEF FROM VOIDABILITY or BECAUSE _____ (party, e.g., PLAINTIFF) HAS APPLIED FOR RELIEF FROM VOIDABILITY]

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 52.34, Paragraph A.]

B. Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability. A corporation may make application to the Franchise Tax Board for relief from the voidability provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.1. On filing of any returns required to be filed and paying any tax, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts owing to the Franchise Tax Board, the Franchise Tax Board will issue a certificate indicating that _____ [party, e.g., plaintiff] is granted relief from voidability (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a)-(c)).

C. Effect of Relief From Voidability. On satisfaction of all considerations specified in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305.1(a), including those to be considered through application of Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305.2, all contracts entered into during the period for which relief is granted that have not been rescinded by final court order pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.5 may be enforced, in the same manner and to the same extent, with regard to both the parties to the contract and any third parties, as if the contract had never been voidable (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(c)(1)(A)).

D. Certificate of Relief Is Prima Facie Evidence. The certificate of relief from voidability issued by the Franchise Tax Board is prima facie evidence of the relief from voidability for contracts entered into during the period of relief stated on the certificate [and the certificate may be recorded in the office of the county recorder of any county in California] (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(d)).

[Optional] E. Restitution Required. The court cannot order rescission of the contract unless _____ [party, e.g., plaintiff] receives full restitution of the benefits provided by _____ [party, e.g., plaintiff] under the contract (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23304.5).

[Optional] F. Bond, Deposit, or Other Security for Liability. [See § 52.42, Paragraph J.]

[EITHER]

[Optional] G. Certificate of Revivor Obtained in 1990. [Subject to the limitations set forth in Section 17 of Chapter 926 of the Statutes of 1990], A corporate taxpayer that received a certificate of revivor between January 1, 1990, and January 1, 1991, may apply for relief from voidability (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(e)).

[OR]

[Optional] G. Certificate of Revivor Obtained in 1991, 1992, or 1993. A taxpayer that was issued a certificate of revivor between January 1, 1991, and before January 1, 1994, and that entered into contracts for which voidability relief could have been granted had the application for relief been filed simultaneously with the application for revivor, may file for relief from voidability on or after January 1, 1994, although it will be subject to the penalties provided in subdivision (b)(2) (Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(b)).

[Optional] H. Contract Entered Into Before January 1, 1991. A contract entered into prior to January 1, 1991, by a corporation during the time that its powers, right, and privileges in California were suspended or forfeited is only voidable if the suspension or forfeiture was accomplished by the Franchise Tax Board through notice to the Secretary of State as provided in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23302 (Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(a) (thus abrogating, without expressly mentioning, the decision in White Dragon Productions, Inc. v. Performance Guarantees, Inc. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 163, 241 Cal. Rptr. 745 ; see also Rev. & Tax. Code § 23301.6).

[Optional] I. Contract Entered Into After January 1, 1991. A contract entered into after January 1, 1991, by a corporation whose powers, right, and privileges have not been suspended or forfeited by the Franchise Tax Board through notice to the Secretary of State is voidable only to the extent expressly provided in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23304.1(b) or (d) (Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(a)).

[Optional] J. Retroactive Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability. A corporation that entered into a contract during a time that its powers, right, and privileges were suspended or forfeited by the Franchise Tax Board in accordance with the procedures set forth in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23302, even if the contract was entered into before January 1, 1991, is entitled to apply for relief from voidability pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23305.1 in connection with an application for revivor [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(b)].

[Optional] K. Relief From Voidability for Corporation Fulfilling Specifications of Voluntary Disclosure Agreement. A corporation that entered into a contract when its powers, rights, and privileges were suspended or forfeited by the Franchise Tax Board, as provided in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 23302, may apply for relief from contract voidability if the corporation enters into a voluntary disclosure agreement with the Franchise Tax Board (see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19191 et seq.) and fulfills to the satisfaction of the Franchise Tax Board all of the specifications of the agreement, as provided in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19191(d)(2), and the Franchise Tax Board finds that none of the circumstances described in Revenue and Taxation Code Section 19194 has rendered the agreement null and void (Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a)(6)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment seeking to assert the voidability of a contract entered into by a corporation during a time when its powers, rights, and privileges were suspended or forfeited for nonpayment of taxes or failure to file a return [Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 23301, 23301.5, 23301.6, 23304.1; see § 52.32]. The ground for opposition is that the party seeking to enforce the contract is entitled to apply, or has applied, for relief from voidability according to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1 and any applicable transition provisions of Stats. 1990, ch. 926 or Stats. 1994, ch. 680 [see Optional Paragraphs G]. This form should be combined with additional authorities from § 52.42 when appropriate and generally oppose those in § 52.32. This form may be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. In addition, it is necessary to attach declarations or documentary evidence in support of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)], most notably in this situation, certified copies of the application for relief or other certificate or declaration from the appropriate custodian of records for the Franchise Tax Board or Secretary of State establishing that the opposing party has applied for relief from voidability and/or a declaration that the opposing party intends to apply for relief from voidability and has the financial resources to pay the amounts required to do so.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Apply for Relief From Voidability

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a) provides that to be relieved from voidability, the corporation must do all of the following:

- Provide Franchise Tax Board with an application, in a form and manner prescribed by the Franchise Tax Board, for relief from contract voidability.

- Include on the application the period for which relief is requested, which if simultaneous revivor is sought, must begin on the date that one of the corporation's income years begins and ends on the date the application is made.

- File any tax returns required to be filed with the Franchise Tax Board, including returns for the period for which relief is requested.

- Pay any tax, additions to tax, penalties, interest, and any other amounts owing to the Franchise Tax Board, including any liability attributable to the period for which relief is requested.

- Pay any penalty imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b) for the period for which relief is requested.

In the case of a corporation that applies for and enters into an approved voluntary disclosure agreement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19191], the corporation will be considered to have met the last three requirements listed above if the corporation fulfills to the satisfaction of the Franchise Tax Board all of the specifications of the voluntary disclosure agreement [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 19191(d)(2)] and if the Franchise Tax Board has not found that any of the circumstances described in Rev. & Tax. Code § 19194 has rendered the agreement null and void [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(a)(6)].

When the corporate taxpayer seeks relief from voidability and revivor simultaneously, the period for which relief is requested begins on the date one of the taxpayer's taxable years begins and ends on the date relief is granted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(1)(A)]. In this case, the penalty is equal to $100 per day for each day of the period for which relief from voidability is granted, but not to exceed the amount of tax for the period for which relief is requested [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(1)(B)].

If the corporate taxpayer seeks relief from voidability after having filed an application for revivor and the certificate of revivor has been issued, the period for which relief from voidability may be obtained begins on the date the taxpayer's powers, rights, and privileges were forfeited, and ends on the date relief is granted [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(A)]. In this case, the penalty is equal to $100 per day for each day of the period for which relief from voidability is granted, but not to exceed the total penalty equal to the amount of the tax that would be imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23151 and, except as noted below with respect to unrelated income of exempt organizations, that penalty must be equal to no less than the amount of the minimum tax provided under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23153 for the period for which relief is requested [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(B)]. For exempt organizations subject to the California tax on unrelated business income [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 23731 et seq.], the daily penalty may not exceed a total penalty equal to the amount of tax imposed on its unrelated business taxable income for the period for which relief is requested [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2)(C)]. Any penalty imposed under Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b) is, subject to Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.2, due and payable on demand by the Franchise Tax Board [Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(3)].

Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(c) provides in part that on being granted relief from voidability, the Franchise Tax Board must certify that relief in a form and manner prescribed by it. The certificate must be issued or mailed to the corporate taxpayer, as directed by the taxpayer, and must indicate the period for which relief is granted.

Note that simultaneous applications for revivor and relief from voidability were required from January 1, 1991 through December 31, 1993 [see former Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(e)], except for corporations that had received certificates of revivor during 1990 and sought relief from voidability of a contract entered into during the period of suspension or forfeiture [Stats. 1990, ch. 926, § 17(b)]. Beginning with applications for relief from voidability filed on or after January 1, 1994 [see Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(a)], the simultaneous application requirement was dropped, although as a practical matter, simultaneous applications are probably best, so as to avoid having to pay an "additional" penalty imposed by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23305.1(b)(2) (set out, above) when relief from voidability is not sought until after the certificate of revivor has already been issued.

In the case of corporate taxpayers that are issued certificates of revivor prior to January 1, 1994, the 1993 amendments apply only if the corporation both (1) received its certificate of revivor between January 1, 1991, and January 1, 1994, and (2) had contracts for which voidability reliefcould have been granted had that application for relief been filed simultaneously with the application for revivor [Stats. 1993, ch. 680, § 2(b)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Entered Into Before January 1, 1991

In a case predating the applicability of the 1990 statutes, the court of appeal in Gardiner Solder v. SupAlloy Corp. Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 284 Cal. Rptr. 206 , reversed a judgment for defendant and ordered judgment entered in favor of a foreign corporation that had shipped goods to defendant, which never paid for them, and commenced suit for restitution before it qualified to do business in California or registered with the Franchise Tax Board. After the suit was commenced, plaintiff qualified to do business in California, registered with the Franchise Tax Board, and paid applicable taxes, interest, and penalties. The court of appeal based its reversal on equitable grounds, noting that the purpose of the suspension statute had been achieved in that plaintiff did register and pay appropriate taxes and penalties, and finding it would be inequitable to grant defendant a windfall (232 Cal. App. 3d 1537, 1542-1545) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. CAPACITY AND VENUE

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.44-52.59

[Reserved]

§§ 52.44[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.60

§ 52.60 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Failure to Allege Facts Showing That Individual and Corporation Are Same Entity and That Recognition of Separate Entity Would Consummate Wrong

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	OF _____ [name] TO COMPLAINT
vs.	)	OF _____ [name]
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR LIABILITY ON A CORPORATION'S OBLIGATIONS IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT THE DEFENDANT AND THE CORPORATION WERE THE SAME ENTITY AND THAT RECOGNITION OF THE SEPARATE ENTITY OF CORPORATION WOULD CONSUMMATE A WRONG.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face of the complaint [or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice], theobjection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

B. Pleading Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine. To state a cause of action against a particular person for liability for the acts and obligations of a corporation, the complaint must show, first, not only that the corporation is influenced and governed by that person, but that there is a unity of interest and ownership so that the individuality, or separateness, of the person and the corporation has ceased; and, second, that the facts are such that an adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of the corporation would, under the particular circumstances, sanction a fraud or promote injustice (Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 487, 202 P. 673).

[Optional] C. Allegation of Control and Domination of Corporation. An allegation that an individual owns more than a majority of the capital stock of a corporation and that he controls, dominates, and manages the corporation and all of its shares does not allege an essential element of the alter ego doctrine, that the two entities are one and the same person (Dos Pueblos Ranch & Improvement Co. v. Ellis (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 617, 621, 67 P.2d 340).

[Optional] D. Pleading of Consummation of Wrong. In order that the acts and obligations of a corporation be legally recognized as those of a particular person, and vice versa, the complaint must allege that the organization of the corporation is in some manner fraudulent or prompted by dishonesty, that the corporation committed or intended to commit a fraud, or that injustice will be done if the corporate entity is not disregarded (Judelson v. American Metal Bearing Co. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 256, 263, 200 P.2d 836).

[Optional] E. Allegation That Corporation Is Alter Ego of Stockholder. An allegation that a corporation is the alter ego of the individual stockholders is insufficient to justify disregarding the corporate entity in the absence of allegations of facts from which it appears that justice cannot otherwise be accomplished (Norins Realty Co., Inc. v. Consol. A. & G. Co. (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 879, 883, 182 P.2d 593).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation on the grounds that the individual was alter ego of the corporation where the complaint fails to allege facts showing the presence of the two requirements necessary for the application of the alter ego doctrine--that is (1) that there is such a unity of ownership and interest that the individuality or separateness of the person and the corporation have ceased, and (2) that the facts are such that an adherence to the fiction of the separate existence would sanction a fraud or promote injustice.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a complaint against a corporation and its controlling shareholder on a corporate obligation alleging that the controlling shareholder was the alter ego of the corporation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine

In Minifie v. Rowley (1921) 187 Cal. 481, 202 P. 673 , the defendants demurred to plaintiff's complaint which was for the amount of a certain note executed by defendant Rowley Investment Company on the grounds, among others, that the individual defendant named in the complaint, Forrest Rowley, was not a party to the note, and that the facts alleged in the complaint were insufficient to disregard the corporate existence of Rowley Investment Company and compel recognition of the liability of Rowley on the note. The allegations of the complaint were, in effect: (1) that defendant Rowley was the owner of all the capital stock of Rowley Investment Company, except for a sufficient number of shares to qualify others to act as directors; (2) that he controlled the board of directors; (3) that he was the only person interested in the corporation; (4) that he had been indebted to plaintiffs for the sum sued upon; (5) that, for the purpose of renewing the note, he executed the note which was the subject of the action as a representative of Rowley Investment Company; (6) that at the time of the execution, Rowley was but the alter ego of Rowley Investment Company; and (7) that there were no dealings between plaintiffs and the corporation as distinct from the individual Rowley. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer and the plaintiffs appealed. Although theSupreme Court reversed, holding that the complaint stated a cause of action against Rowley, it stated the tests set forth in Paragraph B of the foregoing form with which the complaint must have complied if it was to be upheld on the theory of the identity of Rowley Investment Company with Rowley (187 Cal. 481, 487) .

[b] Allegation of Control and Domination of Corporation

In Dos Pueblos Ranch & Improvement Co. v. Ellis (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 617, 67 P.2d 340 , the trial court struck certain portions of defendant's answer on the motion of plaintiff, a corporation, in its action to terminate and cancel a certain lease executed in favor of defendant. Plaintiff, thereafter, was granted the motion for a judgment on the pleadings and the defendants appealed, contending that the acts complained of in plaintiff's complaint were performed by it in conjunction with, and with the active cooperation of Herbert Wylie, who was one and the same entity as plaintiff. The answer had alleged that Wylie was the owner of more than a majority of the issued shares of the capital stock of plaintiff and retained absolute control, domination, and management of all the shares of the corporation. The Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment. Noting that the only theory by which defendants' allegations in their answer could become material was that Wylie was the alter ego of the plaintiff corporation, the court stated that these allegations were completely inadequate to conclude that the two entities were one and the same person. The court said that the mere circumstances that all of the capital stock of a corporation was owned or controlled by one or more persons does not destroy its separate existence since, were it otherwise, few private corporations could preserve their distinct identities (8 Cal. 2d 617, 621) .

[c] Pleading of Consummation of Wrong

Judelson v. American Metal Bearing Co. (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 256, 200 P.2d 836 , involved an appeal by a Texas corporation from a judgment rendered against it for damages for services rendered by plaintiff's assignor as an attorney for appellant. The appellant contended on appeal that plaintiff had not made proof of its corporate existence and that the evidence showed no more than that plaintiff assignor's contract was with a particular individual doing business under the fictitious name of appellant corporation. Respondent argued in part that the doctrine of alter ego applied as between the individual and appellant in that the act of the individual should be considered the act of the corporation. In rejecting all of respondent's contentions, the court of appeal reversed the judgment. In response to respondents' alter ego argument, the court made the statement set forth in Paragraph D of this form and found that the doctrine could not be pleaded here since there was no pleading and the record was devoid of any evidence that appellant was, in effect, the double of Wyllis or that Wyllis used appellant to perpetrate a fraud on respondent (89 Cal. App. 2d 256, 263) .

[d] Allegation That Corporation Is Alter Ego of Stockholder

In Norins Realty Co., Inc. v. Consol. A. & G. Co. (1947) 80 Cal. App. 2d 879, 182 P.2d 593 , defendant corporation was granted a change of venue in plaintiff's action against it for breach of a contract to supply water to certain properties which plaintiff and defendant were developing. The plaintiff appealed, contending that five individual defendants named in its complaint were proper party defendants. Their liability on the corporation's contract was predicated on the facts, alleged in plaintiff's complaint, that they were the sole shareholders of the corporation, that the corporation had, for a number of years, been dormant and not actively engaged in business, that it was, at the time of the commencement of plaintiff's action, completely controlled, dominated, managed, and operated by the individual defendants, and that the corporation had been at all times the alter ego of the individual defendants. On plaintiff's appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order, holding that the allegations of the complaint were not sufficient to support a judgment against the individual defendants. Specifically, the allegation that the corporation was the alter ego of the individual stockholders was insufficient to justify disregarding the corporate entity in the absence of allegations of facts from which it would have appeared that justice could not otherwise be accomplished. In addition, the allegations of the control and management of the corporations alone, were insufficient to disregard the corporate entity (80 Cal. App. 2d 879, 883) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pleading Elements of Alter Ego Doctrine

In Disenos Artisticos E Indus. v. Costco Wholesale (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1996) 97 F.3d 377 , Lladro USA and DAISA, a wholly-owned corporation of Lladro and the copyright owner, alleged that Costco's sale of Lladro figurines was unauthorized and in violation of Copyright Act provisions prohibiting importation of copyrighted goods into the U.S. without the authority of the owner of the copyright. On motions for summary judgment, the district court granted summary judgment in favor of Lladro USA and DAISA on the theory that the Costco sales were not authorized. The court of appeals reversed, holding that the retailer's sales without the consent of the copyright owner's parent did not violate the Act because the copyright owner, DAISA, gave the retailer implied authority to import the figurines. The court noted that although DAISA was a subsidiary of Lladro, that did not mean that the parent owned the copyright. Lladro essentially sought to pierceits own corporate veil. The court stated that the alter ego doctrine should not be applied when the corporation itself raises the issue for its own benefit. A corporation is not entitled to establish and use its affiliates' separate legal existence for some purposes but have its own separate corporate existence disregarded for its own benefit against third parties. The corporate veil generally can be pierced only by an adversary of the corporation, not by the corporation itself for its own benefit (97 F.3d 377, 380) .

IBEW, Local 332 v. Hyland, Wilson Electrical Contractors, Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 881 F.2d 820 was a federal case in which the court refused to impose alter ego liability for an arbitration award on the controlling shareholder. The court said the federal standard for piercing the corporate veil considers three factors: the amount of respect given to the separate identity of the corporation by the shareholders; the degree of injustice that would result from recognition of the corporate entity; and whether there was any fraudulent intent of the incorporators (881 F.2d 820, 821) .

Bd. of Trustees v. Valley Cabinet & Mfg. Co. (9th Cir. 1989) 877 F.2d 769 was a federal case in which the court upheld a decision refusing to pierce the corporate veil and impose liability for pension fund contributions on the estate of the deceased controlling shareholder. The court said that in determining whether to disregard the corporate form, a federal court applies federal substantive law, but may look to state law for guidance. The federal standard considers three factors: the amount of respect given to the separate identity of the corporation by the shareholders; the degree of injustice that would result from recognition of the corporate entity; and whether there was any fraudulent intent of the incorporators (877 F.2d 769, 772) .

In Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 200 P. 641 , the plaintiff sued on a note that was assigned to it by a corporation of which plaintiff was the owner of all the outstanding shares of capital stock. Plaintiff controlled the corporation, dictating the management and affairs of the company. In effect, plaintiff had made use of the company for the purpose of conducting his business for his own personal convenience. In addition, plaintiff advanced to the corporation the sum with which it paid for the notes that plaintiff subsequently acquired. Defendant contended that the cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations, since the company's payment for the notes amounted to payment by plaintiff as a joint obligor on the note. The trial court agreed and found for defendant. On appeal by plaintiff, the Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that the facts did not warrant the application of the alter ego doctrine and, therefore, plaintiff was not a joint obligor on the note. The Court stated that there was no showing that plaintiff's relationship with his company was in any manner fraudulent or prompted by dishonesty, nor that the company, in purchasing the notes, committed or intended to commit any fraud whatsoever (187 Cal. 7, 10) . The personal advancement of the sums with which the corporation purchased the notes was considered by the Court to be consistent with honesty and fair dealing (187 Cal. 7, 10-11) . Finally, no showing had been made that plaintiff's transactions with his company in any way wronged or prejudiced defendant (187 Cal. 7, 10, 14) .

In Seretti v. Superior National Ins. Co. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 920 , the shareholders of a small, closely held corporation sought to pierce the veil of their own corporation and substitute themselves in the place of the corporation as the named insured under a workers compensation policy. In an action against the shareholders of the corporation which arose from injuries sustained by employees of the corporations, the shareholders brought a cross-complaint against the corporation's workers' compensation insurer for failing to defend the actions and for entering into a settlement with the employees which was adverse to the interests of the corporation. The superior court sustained the insurer's demurrer and the shareholders appealed. The court of appeal held that the shareholders lacked standing to assert a claim against the insurer for bad faith insurance practices. The court found that the shareholders' inability to maintain individual actions against their corporation's workers' compensation carrier did not constitute the type of "grave injustice" that justified ignoring a corporation's separate existence. The fact that individual shareholders would not be able to pursue bad faith insurance claims against the corporation's insurer did not allow the insurer to escape liability for improper conduct. The corporation itself, as named insured, could pursue its own rights, and the shareholders would profit indirectly. It stated that shareholders who elect to avail themselves of the benefits of the corporate structure cannot complaint about their inability to take personal advantage of a right belonging to corporation alone (71 Cal. App. 4th 920, 931) .

In Laird v. Capital Cities/ABC Inc. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 454 , plaintiff employee sued her former employer's corporation for wrongful termination and sex/age discrimination. The superior court granted summary judgment to the parent and the court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff claimed, among other things, that there was a triable issue of material fact as to the parent's liability on the theory that the subsidiary was the parent's alter ego. The court stated that to justify piercing the corporate veil on an alter ego theory in order to hold a parent corporation liable for the acts or omissions of its subsidiary, a plaintiff must show that there is such a unity of interest and ownership between the two corporations that their separate personalities no longer exist, and that an inequitable result would follow if the parent were not held liable. In other words, the plaintiff must show "specific manipulative conduct" by the parent toward the subsidiary which relegates the subsidiary to the status of merely an instrumentality, agency, conduit or adjunct of the parent. The court held that plaintiff had failed to make such a showing (68 Cal. App. 4th 727, 742) .

Brooklyn Navy Yard Cogeneration Partners v. Superior Court (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 419 was an action by defendants for a writ of mandamus/prohibition to challenge the order of the superior court disqualifying their law firm for conflict of interest. The issue, one of first impression in California, was whether a conflict of interest arises when an attorney represents a subsidiary corporation in one matter while undertaking a representation directly adverse to the subsidiary's parent in another unrelated matter. The trial court specifically concluded that a "unity of interests" between the parent and subsidiary corporations sufficed to make the parent a client of the law firm for conflict purposes (60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 252) . The appellate court granted the writ. It concluded that an attorney's duty of loyalty to a corporate client does not bar the attorney from representing an interest adverse to the client's parent. It held that only in those limited circumstances in which one corporation is the alter ego of the other should parent and subsidiary corporations be treated as the same entity for conflict purposes. If an entity is an attorney's client, its alter ego shares the client's expectation of loyalty from the attorney. A corporation, therefore, should be entitled to assert its status as the alter ego of a lawyer's existing client. The appellate court found that the trial court failed to determine whether the parent and its subsidiary were alter egos and applied the wrong legal standard in finding that the law firm had a conflict of interest in undertaking a representation adverse to the parent. It thus sent the matter back to the trial court to allow it to consider the motion in light of the proper standard (60 Cal. App. 4th 248, 258-259) .

Robbins v. Blecher (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 886, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815 was a malicious prosecution action in which plaintiffs and appellants appealed from a judgment of dismissal following the sustaining of demurrers in favor of defendants and respondents. Defendant had brought an alter ego action against plaintiff to enforce a judgment it had obtained against plaintiff's corporation. When the judgment against the corporation was reversed on appeal, defendant dismissed the alter ego action. The sole issue presented on appeal was whether the voluntary dismissal of the alter ego action constituted a favorable termination on the merits. The court reviewed the requirements for application of the alter ego doctrine, quoting extensively from Communist Party v. 522 Valencia, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618 (discussed below) (52 Cal. App. 4th 886, 892) . It held that when an action brought to enforce a judgment is voluntarily dismissed after reversal of the underlying judgment, the voluntary dismissal does not constitute a favorable termination on the merits (52 Cal. App. 4th 886, 894-895) .

In Communist Party v. 522 Valencia, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 618 , the Communist Party alleged that it was the beneficial owner of two public benefit corporations, and that the alter ego doctrine established a relationship between the Party and the defendant corporations, thereby allowing the Party to obtain the corporations' assets. The trial court imposed a constructive trust over the assets of the public benefit corporations, and the defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the Communist Party was not entitled to a constructive trust (35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 992-993) and could not use the alter ego doctrine to pierce the corporate veil of public benefit corporations it claimed to have set up for its own benefit (35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 995) . The court reviewed the requirements for applying the alter ego doctrine [see § 52.60[3][a]] (35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 993) and explained that the doctrine is used to prevent two parties with the same interest from inequitably using the corporate form to thwart a third party's rights; it is not designed to unite two separate entities with opposing interests for the benefit of one claiming to control the other (35 Cal. App. 4th 980, 995) .

[b] Allegation of Control and Domination of Corporation

In Firstmark Capital Corp. v. Hempel Financial Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 92 , a diversity action, the Ninth Circuit reversed a judgment imposing alter ego liability on the spouse of the managing employee, and remanded for findings regarding whether the spouse influenced or governed the corporation or was an actor in the course of conduct that was the abuse of the corporate privilege (859 F.2d 92, 95) . The court said that under California law, although a spouse's community property interest [see former Civ. Code § 5105, repealed and replaced by Fam. Code § 751, operative January 1, 1994] in shares held in the name of the officer-director spouse will satisfy the ownership requirement for imposition of alter ego liability (859 F.2d 92, 94) , mere passive acceptance of the benefits of disregarding the corporate entity is insufficient basis for imposition of alter ego liability (859 F.2d 92, 95) . Citing Wood v. Elling Corp. (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 353, 365 n.9, 142 Cal. Rptr. 696, 572 P.2d 755 , and American Home Ins. Co. v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 951, 966, 175 Cal. Rptr. 826 (discussed in § 52.68[3][b]), the court said that alter ego liability can only be imposed on one who has actively influenced or governed the corporation in the course of conduct that constitutes the abuse of the corporate privilege. Because the trial court had not made any findings regarding those issues, the court of appeals remanded (859 F.2d 92, 95) .

[c] Pleading of Consummation of Wrong

In Hollywood Cleaning & Pressing Co. v. Hollywood Laundry Serv., Inc. (1932) 217 Cal. 124, 17 P.2d 709 , the Supreme Court affirmed that portion of the trial court's judgment from which the plaintiff appealed in its action for breach of contract. The plaintiff and defendant had entered into a contract by which defendant agreed to solicit business for plaintiff's dry cleaning operation. The contract included a clause that required defendant to include in the agreement any laundry plant which it might acquireduring the continuation of the agreement. The plaintiff showed that defendant was wholly owned by Frank Meline who also owned all the stock in Frank Meline, Inc., a corporation, and that Meline, Inc., had acquired laundry plants during the period in which the agreement was in effect and had not turned over these laundries' dry cleaning business to plaintiff. Plaintiff contended before the Supreme Court that the profits lost by reason of the failure to turn over these plants should have been included as damages in its action against defendant. The Court disagreed and noted that plaintiff had failed to plead or prove that title was taken to the newly acquired laundries in the name of Meline, Inc., rather than in defendant's name, with the intent, or for the purpose of evading liability under the contract (217 Cal. 124, 128) . The Court said that the mere fact that one or two individuals or corporations own all of the stock of another corporation is not in itself sufficient to cause a court to disregard the corporate entity of the other corporation and to treat it as the alter ego of the individual or corporation that owns its stock. The Court added that it must be shown not only that there was such a unity of interest and ownership that the individuality of the corporation and the owner or owners of its stock had ceased, but that the observance of the fiction of the separate existence would sanction a fraud or promote injustice. That is, bad faith in one form or another must be shown before a court may disregard the fiction of separate corporate existence (217 Cal. 124, 129) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.61

§ 52.61 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual On Corporate Obligations--Failure to Allege That Individual Defendant Had Beneficial Ownership in Corporation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR LIABILITY ON A CORPORATION'S OBLIGATIONS WHERE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT DEFENDANT HAD A BENEFICIAL INTEREST IN THE CORPORATION.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Requirement of Beneficial Ownership. Unity of interest and ownership between an individual sought to be charged with liability for a corporation's debts and the corporation, so that the personalities of the corporation and the individual are no longer separate does not exist where the individual held none of the corporation's stock, had no interest as an owner in the corporate enterprise, or had no right to share in any of the profits which the corporation made (Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107).

C. Failure to Allege Beneficial Ownership. A complaint does not state a cause of action against an individual for liability for a corporation's obligations on the basis that the individual was the alter ego of the corporation where it does not allege that the individual had any beneficial interest in the stock of the corporation (Shea v. Leonis (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 666, 670, 96 P.2d 332).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation on the basis that the individual was the alter ego of the corporation when the complaint fails to allege facts showing that the individual had a beneficial ownership in the corporation.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Beneficial Ownership

In Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107 , plaintiffs as creditors of Yosemite Creek Company, a corporation, commenced an action against Yosemite, Kadota Creek Company, a second corporation, and most of the shareholders, officers, and directors of the two companies. Judgment was rendered against Yosemite, Kadota, and three individual defendants. The trial court found that Yosemite was indebted to plaintiffs, that Yosemite and Kadota were at all times completely controlled, dominated, managed, and operated by the three defendants, that the corporation was a mere fiction employed by the individual defendants to assist them in evading the payment of their obligations, and that each of the corporations was the alter ego of the individual defendants. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment with respect to two of the defendants and reversed with respect to a third. The Court found that the evidencewas insufficient to bring the third defendant within the requirement for disregarding a corporate entity, since there was insufficient evidence to show that there was such a unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer existed. The Court stated that it was undisputed that this defendant held none of the stock, that he had no interest as an owner in the business operations by either corporation, or that he had a right to share in any of the profits that they might make. He could only be regarded as the managing employee of the two corporations, and his control was that which would be exercised by a managing agent rather than that exercised by a shareholder or owner.

See also Firstmark Capital Corp. v. Hempel Financial Corp. (9th Cir. 1988) 859 F.2d 92, 94 , discussed in § 52.60[4][b].

[b] Failure to Allege Beneficial Ownership

In Shea v. Leonis (1939) 14 Cal. 2d 666, 96 P.2d 332 , the plaintiffs appealed from a judgment entered in favor of defendants on four of the five counts of plaintiffs' complaint for the recovery of rent after the trial court sustained defendants' general and special demurrers to the counts. The Supreme Court affirmed in part and reversed in part. Although the Court held that the several counts stated a cause of action against several of the defendants for their liability for certain corporate obligations as the alter ego of that corporation, the Court also held that the complaint stated no cause of action against one individual defendant since it did not aver that that defendant had any beneficial interest in the stock of the corporation. The Court stated that the failure to include this allegation meant that liability against this defendant on the theory of disregarding the corporate identity could not be made out.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.62

§ 52.62 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion to Amend Judgment to Include as Judgment Debtor Name of Individual Who Was Alter Ego of Corporate Judgment Debtor

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO vs.	)	AMEND JUDGMENT
	)	Date: _____
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

ON MOTION OF A PLAINTIFF, A COURT MAY, PURSUANT TO ITS IMPLIED POWERS, AMEND A JUDGMENT ENTERED AGAINST A CORPORATION TO INCLUDE AS A JUDGMENT DEBTOR AN INDIVIDUAL WHO WAS THE ALTER EGO OF THE CORPORATION AND WHO HAD CONTROL OF THE LITIGATION.

A. Power to Adopt Course of Proceeding Not Provided in Code. When jurisdiction is, by the constitution or this code, or by any other statute, conferred on a court or judicial officer, all the means necessary to carry it into effect are also given and in the exercise of this jurisdiction, if the course of proceeding be not specifically pointed out by this code or the statute, any suitable process or mode of proceeding may be adopted which may appear most comfortable to the spirit of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 187).

B. Judgment Amendment to Include Alter Ego Litigant. Pursuant to the implied powers to adopt a course of proceeding not provided in the Code of Civil Procedure under Section 187 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a court may, after entry of judgment against a corporate defendant and on the motion or application of a plaintiff, amend the judgment to add as an additional judgment debtor a person or entity that is the alter ego of the original judgment debtor and that controlled the initial litigation (Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1029-1031, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 ; Dow Jones Co. v. Avenel (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 148-151, 198 Cal. Rptr. 457 ; Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 (order to show cause); Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57-60, 47 P.2d 530 (motions to amend)).

C. Hearing of Extrinsic Evidence. Although no testimony may have been offered in the original action to indicate the relationship between a defendant corporation and an individual sought to be charged with the liability of the corporation on the basis that he/she was its alter ego and no finding may have been made in such action that the defendant corporation was such individual's alter ego, a court may, on the hearing of plaintiff's application to amend the judgment and designate such individual as a defendant, in the original action, admit extrinsic evidence to show both the relationship between the corporation and such individual and the fact that such individual was the corporation's alter ego (Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1029-1032, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 ; Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 426-427, 246 P.2d 1017).

D. Requirements for Holding Individual as Alter Ego of Corporation. The two basic requirements that must be satisfied before a corporate defendant's entity may be disregarded and an individual may be considered to be the corporate defendant's alter ego are: (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist; and (2) that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 300, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 ; Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1 ; NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441).

E. Factors Pertinent to Court's Determination. Possible factors which may be pertinent to the trial court's determination that the alter ego doctrine should apply include: (1) the commingling of funds and other assets, the failure to segregate funds of the separate entities, and the unauthorized diversion of corporate funds or assets to other than corporate uses; (2) the treatment by an individual of the assets of the corporation as his/her own; (3) the failure to issue or subscribe to stock and the failure to obtain authority to issue or subscribe to stock; (4) the representation by an individual that he/she is personally liable for the debts of the corporation; (5) the failure to maintain minutes or adequate corporate records and the confusion of the records of the separate entities; (6) the identical equitable ownership in the two entities; (7) the identification of the equitable owners thereof with the domination and control of the two entities; (8) the identification of the directors and officers of the two entities in the responsible supervision and management; (9) the failure to adequately capitalize the corporation; (10) the absence of corporate assets, and undercapitalization; (11) the use of a corporation as a mere shell, instrumentality, or conduit for a single venture or the business of an individual or another corporation; (12) the concealment and misrepresentation of the identity of the responsible ownership, management, and financial interest or concealment of personal business activities; (13) the disregard of legal formalities and the failure to maintain arm's length relationships among related entities; (14) the use of the corporate entity to procure labor, services, or merchandise for another person or entity; (15) the diversion of assets from a corporation by or to a stockholder or other person or entity to the detriment of creditors, or the manipulation of assets and liabilities between entities so as to concentrate the assets in one and the liabilities in another; (16) the contracting with another with intent to avoid performance by use of a corporation as a subterfuge for illegal transactions; and (17) the formation and use of a corporation to transfer to it the existing liability of another person or entity (Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394-395, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App.

2d 825, 838-840, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806).

[Optional] F. Evidence of Equitable Ownership. Evidence that an individual sought to be charged with the debts of a corporation on the basis of the alter ego doctrine was to receive shares to be issued by the corporation supports an inference that he/she was an equitable owner (Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473).

[Optional] G. Ownership of One Share. The fact that a particular individual held but one share of a corporation's stock is sufficient to permit holding him/her personally liable to creditors of that corporation on the basis of the alter ego doctrine, provided that the doctrine is otherwise applicable (Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 580, 335 P.2d 107 ; see Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 846-849, 129 P.2d 390).

[Optional] H. Alter Ego Doctrine Applicable to Tort Claim. The alter ego doctrine applies to tort claims held by creditors of a corporation as well as to claims based on contract (Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 580, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; see Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 304-306, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 (considering settlement with corporation)).

[Optional] I. Liability of Two or More Controllers or Dominators. The fact that two individuals controlled and dominated a corporation of which they are claimed to be alter egos does not preclude holding each of them personally liable for the obligations of the business, since it is settled that two or more shareholders of a corporation may be liable as principals or partners under the alter ego doctrine (Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581, 335 P.2d 107).

[Optional] J. Wholly Owned Subsidiaries. If a subsidiary corporation is used by its parent as a mere conduit for the transaction of its own business, the parent will be considered the alter ego of the subsidiary and liable for the debts of the subsidiary if recognition of the parent and subsidiary as separate entities would otherwise produce fraud or injustice (Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 300, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 ; see Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 426-427, 246 P.2d 1017).

[Optional] K. Manipulation of Corporate Affairs to One's Own Ends. The manipulation of the affairs of the corporation by an individual who is sought to be charged with liability for the corporation's debts on the basis of the alter ego doctrine and who manipulates the affairs of the corporation in order to foster his/her own purposes to the disadvantage of the corporation and its creditors is considered to be inequitable conduct for the purpose of disregarding the separate entity of a corporation (Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 582, 335 P.2d 107).

[Optional] L. Inadequate Capitalization and Active Corporate Participation in Corporate Affairs. The equitable owner of a corporation is personally liable for the debts of the corporation when he/she provides inadequate capitalization and actively participates in the conduct of corporate affairs (Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 579, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796-798, 306 P.2d 1).

[Optional] M. Concentration of Liabilities in Insolvent Corporation. Personal liability for a corporation's debts may be found based on the alter ego doctrine when the corporation is rendered insolvent due to the manipulation of assets and liabilities between the corporation and a second corporate entity so as to concentrate the assets in the second corporation and the liabilities in the first (Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 581-582, 335 P.2d 107 ; Rosen v. E. C. Losch Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377).

[Optional] N. Holding Oneself Out as Personally Liable. An equitable owner of a corporation is personally liable for the debts of the corporation as that corporation's alter ego when he/she holds himself/herself out as being personally liable for such debts (Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 847, 129 P.2d 390).

[Optional] O. Settlement With Corporation Does Not Bar Imposition of Alter Ego Liability on Parent. The policies underlying California's contribution statutes require that those statutes be interpreted to allow a plaintiff full recovery to the extent that others are responsible for his or her injuries. This policy would be violated if a corporation alleged to be the alter ego of its subsidiary were to be dismissed because the subsidiary had settled with the plaintiff, especially if the plaintiff had accepted a modest settlement because the subsidiary was undercapitalized. Thus, a plaintiff who has settled with a corporate defendant is not barred from proceeding against its alter ego (Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 304-306, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601).

[Optional] P. Confirmation of Arbitration Award. A judgment confirming an arbitration award may be amended to add an alter ego as an additional judgment debtor (Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conference Center Board (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a plaintiff's motion to amend a judgment rendered in his or her favor against a corporation to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual or other corporation that is the alter ego of the judgment debtor. Paragraphs A-C and Paragraph O address procedural requirements for adding the alter ego as additional judgment debtor, while Paragraphs D--N address specific factual elements that will have to be established. Paragraph D sets forth the broad general requirements, while Paragraph E contains an extensive list of considerations that may be relevant in a particular situation. In submitting the foregoing, counsel should select those factors set forth in Paragraph E of the foregoing form that are applicable to his or her case and change the heading of the paragraph appropriately.

Paragraphs K-N set forth more elaborately some of the more important factors courts have considered in determining whether the corporate existence should be disregarded in a particular case. Courts are careful, however, not to consider any one factor controlling or determinative in considering the application of the alter ego doctrine, since that consideration is always one of fact [see Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394-396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 ; see also § 52.64]. In fact, the undercapitalization of a corporation alone has been held to be insufficient standing to warrant the application of the doctrine [Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614] .

Counsel should include argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the particular case and the points of law stated. In addition, if counsel anticipates opposition based on any delay in seeking the amendment [see § 52.70], counsel may wish to support the motion with declarations explaining the discovery of the facts establishing alter ego liability and showing that plaintiff moved quickly to discover those facts and then to seek the amendment.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a notice of motion for an order amending a judgment to include as a judgment debtor, the name of the alter ego of that judgment debtor a declaration in support of the notice of motion, alleging facts discovered during a creditor's examination, and an order amending the judgment to include the name of defendant's alter ego as a judgment debtor, see Ch. 160, Corporations in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Amendment to Include Alter Ego Litigant

Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 , arose from a construction contract dispute and resulted in judgment against defendant corporate contractor. After entry of the original judgment, plaintiff discovered, on examination of the corporate defendant's president and majority shareholder, that defendant had no assets, no bank account, and had not had any income for several years. Basically, the corporation had been dissolved in 1980, its two principals dividing the assets and going their separate ways. The contractor's license had been reissued in another name, which was listed as a sole proprietorship of that individual (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1033-1034) . Plaintiff successfully moved to include defendant's president and major shareholder as a judgment debtor. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Citing Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 158, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 (discussed below), and Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 44-46, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 (discussed in § 52.70[3][a]), the court first noted that the trial court had inherent power under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 to impose alter ego liability on one who had control of the litigation (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1029) . Appellant, the individual defendant, did not contest the procedure of the postjudgment motion, but claimed that the evidence was insufficient and that the judge, who had also been the trial judge, was disqualified to hear the motion. The court of appeal noted that in ruling on the motion to amend the judgment, the trial court was not limited to evidence testified to at trial, but that it could admit extrinsic evidence, on proper notice to the other party (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1029) . The appellate court agreed that the individual defendant could be added as a judgment debtor because he sufficiently controlled the litigation (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1031) . Defendant's deposition testimony, his conduct at the trial, and his testimony at the order of examination were referred to in plaintiff's attorney's declaration in support of the motion to amend. Defendant's declaration referred to an instance during the trial when the corporation's attorney's refused to call as a witness a person defendant had wanted to testify. Defendant claimed that the incident proved that he did not control the litigation. The trial court noted that plaintiff's attorney's declaration coincided with its own recollection of the trial, and that the individual defendant testified, counseled with the corporation's attorney, and figured very prominently in the original trial (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1030-1031) .

The court also stated that the trial court's personal observations and their use in determining the motion were proper. Expressions of opinion by a judge disclosing a state of mind adverse to one party do not amountto prejudice and are not grounds for disqualification under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.1(a)(6) if based on actual observation of the witnesses and the evidence given during the trial (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1031-1032) . The remainder of the court's opinion is discussed in § 52.62[4][b].

In Dow Jones Co. v. Avenel (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 148-150, 198 Cal. Rptr. 457 , plaintiff filed suit on an account and later filed a motion for summary judgment. The trial court granted the motion and awarded damages to plaintiff. Plaintiff then filed a motion to amend the judgment to add, as judgment debtors, the alter egos of defendant who were not parties to the original action. The judgment was amended and the alter ego judgment debtors appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court found that, under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 and the general rule that a court may amend its judgment at any time so that the judgment will properly designate the real defendants, a trial court has the authority to amend a judgment in order to add additional judgment debtors. The court found that appellants were the real defendants and that the trial court correctly amended the summary judgment to reflect that fact (151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 148-149) . Although appellants' alter ego liability could not have been determined at the hearing on the motion for summary judgment, in this case the issue was determined at the hearing on the motion to amend the judgment and the later hearing did not taint the previous summary judgment proceeding (151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 149) . In addition, appellants had not been denied due process rights because, while technically they were not given the opportunity to convince the trial court that material issues of fact existed because they were not named parties, they were able to do so through the vehicle of defendant (151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150) . The court said that the significant distinction is not whether the matter was fully litigated or whether the persons sought to be added as judgment debtors participated in the trial, but whether that person had the opportunity to do so (151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150) . Here, the record was clear that appellants had controlled and participated in the corporation's defense in the action (151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150-151) .

In Schoenberg v. Romike Properties (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 59 Cal. Rptr. 359 , plaintiffs were awarded damages for fraud and negligence in the sale of plaintiff's property. Judgment was against the purchasers, a corporation engaged in a real estate brokerage business, and other named defendants. After entry of judgment and following plaintiffs' failure to satisfy this judgment, plaintiffs applied for an order to be issued directed to the shareholders of the corporation who were not defendants in the action to show cause why they should not be joined as defendants. The court granted the application and, after a hearing, they were ordered joined and subjected to the same judgment liability as the corporation on the basis that the corporation was the alter ego of the shareholders. The shareholders and other defendants appealed and the court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, the appellant shareholders contended, in part, that they could not be held liable under the judgment without either an opportunity to relitigate the issues or a showing that they had control of the litigation. In response to this contention, the court stated that appellants had misconceived the nature of the proceeding under the order to show cause in that the proceeding was not a method for obtaining a new trial or for attacking the judgment (251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 167-168) . The court commented that it was well settled that the authority of the court under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 [see Paragraph A of the foregoing form] will be exercised to impose liability under a judgment on the alter ego who has had control of the litigation (251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168) . This control was demonstrated by the fact of the shareholders' control of the corporation since no one, except the shareholders, had authority to employ attorneys and provide for the expense or was interested in the corporation's fate (251 Cal. App. 2d 154, 168) .

Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 47 P.2d 530 was an appeal by a corporation from an order of the trial court refusing to set aside its order, which added a second corporation to the judgment after the same had become final on appeal, and the judgment of the Supreme Court affirming the same had been made and entered. The Court ordered the second corporation added to the judgment on the basis that it was the alter ego of the defendant corporation already named in the judgment. The appellant corporation contended, in part, that the addition of its name to the judgment was in excess of the trial court's jurisdiction and was a denial of due process. The respondent contended in response that, by virtue of the inherent authority of a court to make its records speak the truth, the trial court had jurisdiction to amend the judgment, and that the amendment did not add a new defendant to the judgment, but merely set forth the correct name of the real defendant (8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 60) . In affirming the trial court's order, the court of appeal stated that a court may, at any time, amend its judgment so that the latter will properly designate the real defendants (8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57, 60) . The court found that appellant was fully aware of all the proceedings of the action, and of all the facts and circumstances surrounding the accident that gave rise to its corporate alter ego's liability. Its secretary had been served with a copy of the complaint and had verified the answer of the original corporate defendant. Appellant had, in addition, expended sums in the original corporate defendant's defense, and its attorneys were also the attorneys for the defendant. Finding also that the evidence supported holding appellant the alter ego of the original corporate defendant, the court concluded that the trial court had jurisdiction to add appellant to the judgment, and appellant was not, thereby, denied due process (8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57-60) .

[b] Hearing of Extrinsic Evidence

Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 is discussed in § 52.62[3][a].

Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 246 P.2d 1017 , involved an appeal by Southwestern Development Company, a corporation, from an order adding its name as a judgment debtor to a final judgment previously rendered against the initial defendant, L. C. Roney, Inc., a corporation. Following the judgment against the initial defendant, Roney, plaintiff obtained an order for examination of Roney as a judgment debtor. This examination revealed that all the outstanding shares of Roney had been owned by Southwestern, that the president and the secretary of both corporations were identical, that the members of the board were substantially identical, and that approximately one year before plaintiff commenced his action, Roney had transferred all its assets to Southwestern which, on the following day, filed a certificate that it was conducting business under the fictitious name of L. C. Roney, Inc. On the basis of this, plaintiff filed a petition for an order to show cause why Southwestern should not be added as a judgment debtor. At the hearing of the order to show cause, evidence was produced to show that Roney was a subsidiary of Southwestern, that Southwestern exercised full control over Roney, and that it used Roney as an instrumentality or business conduit to carry on its business operations by advancing large sums of money to Roney. On appeal, Southwestern contended, in part, that the trial court had acted in excess of its jurisdiction in adding its name to the judgment by arguing that: (1) no testimony was offered in the original trial to indicate the existence of any relationship between appellant and Roney; and (2) that no finding was made in the original proceeding that Roney was appellant's alter ego. In affirming the trial court's order, the court of appeal stated that the limitation contended for by appellant would better the court's ability to do justice between the parties and would award a premium to a litigant's capacity or conceal his or her real identity (112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 426-427 . The court stated in addition, that since the court had jurisdiction over the defendant, it had jurisdiction to make its judgment reflect the defendant's true name (112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427). It pointed out that, since a question had arisen as to the identity and character of the defendant on whom the judgment was binding, the court possessed the power to adopt a suitable procedure for the purpose of determining that question under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 [see Paragraph A of the foregoing form], and that under the authority of this section, the court could properly exercise its power by taking evidence, after proper notice, in order to determine the true name of defendant (112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427) .

[c] Requirements For Holding Individual as Alter Ego of Corporation

Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 , arose from a worker's injury. After plaintiff settled with the corporation that owned the equipment on which he was injured, he learned that that corporation was controlled by its parent corporation. Plaintiff then moved to amend the complaint to include the parent corporation as a defendant. The motion was denied, and defendant moved successfully for summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed; and the Supreme Court reversed. The Supreme Court said there is no litmus test to determine when the corporate veil will be pierced; rather, the result will depend on the circumstances of each particular case. There are, nevertheless, two general requirements, the Court said, citing Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 796, 306 P.2d 1 : (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist, and (2) that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (39 Cal. 3d 290, 300) . Only a difference in wording is used in stating the same concept when the entity sought to be held liable under the alter ego doctrine is another corporation instead of an individual (39 Cal. 3d 290, 300) . The portion of the opinion considering the effect of the settlement is discussed in § 52.62[3][n].

In Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 306 P.2d 1 , plaintiff had judgment for the balance due on the price of eight automobiles sold to three individual defendants. Prior to the transaction sued on, the defendants had formed a corporation in which each of them had a right to share in the profits and which was formed to carry on the business of purchasing automobiles. The corporation never issued stock, no capital had been contributed to the corporation, and no bank account was ever maintained by the corporation. Although the method of financing the purchase of the automobiles was complex, it was clear that the funds were supplied by one of the defendants. Prior to entering into the transactions it eventually sued on, plaintiff had been assured that the corporation it was dealing with would be backed up by one of the defendants. In appealing from the judgment entered, the defendants contended, in part, that the evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's finding that they had been doing business as individuals. The Supreme Court, however, affirmed. The Court noted that, although it is the general rule that the conditions under which a corporate entity may be disregarded will vary according to the circumstances of each case, two requirements which must be met for application of this doctrine are (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist, and (2) that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (47 Cal. 2d792, 796) . The Court summarized the factors that would indicate that the defendants were doing business as individuals. One was the failure to issue stock or to apply at any time for a permit. Although this was not conclusive evidence, it was an indication that defendants were doing business as individuals (47 Cal. 2d 792, 796) . Another factor was the lack of an attempt to provide adequate capitalization (47 Cal. 2d 792, 796-797) . In this regard the Court quoted from Ballantine and Sterling California Corporation Laws, which had commented that the attempt to do corporate business without providing any sufficient basis of financial responsibility to creditors, was an abuse of the separate entity (47 Cal. 2d 792, 797) . The text stated that where the capital was illusory or trifling compared with the business to be done and the risks of loss, the privilege of conducting business as a entity should be denied (47 Cal. 2d 792, 797) . In finding the capital insufficient in view of the volume of business conducted, the Court concluded that the two factors--the failure to issue stock and the inadequate capitalization--were ample support for the trial court's finding that defendants were doing business as individuals (47 Cal. 2d 792, 797-798) .

NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 is discussed in § 52.70[3][d].

[d] Factors Pertinent to Court's Determination

In Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , the plaintiffs appealed from that portion of the trial court's judgment denying recovery in their action against the individual defendants on the grounds of alter ego. Although the trial court affirmed the trial court's finding of no liability, the court listed those factors set forth in Paragraph E of the foregoing form which would be pertinent to the trial court's determination (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394-395) . These factors were first listed and supported by authority in the opinion in Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 . In Arnold, the court noted that the presence or absence of any of these factors, as well as the consideration of any other circumstances which would have warranted the trier of fact to disregard the corporate entity, were within the province of the trial court (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 395) . Thus, a finding by an appellate court that there was ample evidence to support the trial court's finding, as in this case, is all that is required to affirm a trial court's judgment of the presence or absence of the alter ego doctrine (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 395-397) .

Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806 was an action for breach of lease in which plaintiff-lessor sought to hold the corporate lessee and its individual principals liable on the theory that the individuals were alter egos of the corporate defendant. Judgment was for plaintiff against the corporate defendant, but in favor of the individual defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court set forth the various factors that could be considered in establishing alter ego liability (210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 838-840) . The presence or absence of those factors, as well as other circumstances that would warrant disregarding the corporate entity are within the province of the trial court (210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 840) . Here, the evidence did not establish any unity of interest (210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 840-841) .

[e] Evidence of Equitable Ownership

The facts in Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 , were that plaintiff's daughter had drowned in a pool which Seminole Hot Springs Corporation was operating as a public swimming pool. The plaintiffs then recovered a judgment from Seminole which remained unsatisfied and, thereafter, brought this action against defendant Cavaney to hold him personally liable for the Seminole judgment. Plaintiffs introduced evidence that Cavaney was the director, secretary, and treasurer of Seminole, that, five months after the drowning, he had applied, along with two other individuals, for permission to issue three shares of stock, of which one share was to be held by each individual, and that permission was refused and, thereafter, the application abandoned. In addition, evidence introduced showed that Seminole used Cavaney's office to keep records and to receive mail and that Seminole had no assets of any kind or character. The trial court found that Cavaney was personally liable for the judgment obtained against Seminole from which defendant, the executrix of Cavaney's estate, appealed. The Supreme Court reversed because of the failure of the plaintiffs to show that Cavaney, not being a party to the action against Seminole, had control of the litigation leading to judgment (56 Cal. 2d 576, 581-582) . However, the Court found that the alter ego doctrine otherwise would apply. The Court stated that, as a rule, the equitable owners of a corporation are personally liable when they treat the assets of the corporation as their own and add or withdraw capital from the corporation at will (56 Cal. 2d 576, 579) ; when they hold themselves out as being personally liable for the debts of the corporation [see the discussion under § 52.62[3][m]] (56 Cal. 2d 576, 579) ; or when, as was the case before the Court, they provide inadequate capitalization and actively participate in the conduct of the corporate affairs (56 Cal. 2d 576, 579) . The Court stated that the evidence was undisputed, that there was no attempt to provide adequate capitalization, and that whatever capitalization was provided was trifling compared with the business to be done and the risks of loss (56 Cal. 2d 576, 580) . The evidence was also undisputed that Cavaney actively participated in the conduct of the business, being the secretary, treasurer, and the only director of the corporation. The Court found that the evidence that Cavaney was to receive one-third of the shares to be issued, supported an inference that he was an equitable owner (56 Cal. 2d 576, 580) . The Court also found no merit in defendant's contention that the alter ego doctrine applied only to contractual debts andnot to tort claims (56 Cal. 2d 576, 580) that the plaintiff's cause of action abated when Cavaney died (56 Cal. 2d 576, 580-581) , or that the judgment in the action against the corporation barred plaintiffs from bringing the present action (56 Cal. 2d 576, 581) .

[f] Ownership of One Share

Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107 , involved an action commenced by plaintiffs as creditors of Yosemite Creek Company, a corporation, against Yosemite Kadota Creek Company, a second corporation, and most of the shareholders, officers, and directors of the two companies. Judgment was rendered against Yosemite, Kadota and three individual defendants, one of whom held but one share of Yosemite stock. During the relevant period of time with which this case was concerned, the directors of the corporations were identical and all of the stock of Kadota and practically all the shares of Yosemite were held by persons who were related by blood or marriage. During this period of time, each corporation held but one shareholders' meeting, held no regular directors meetings, and shared the same offices, bookkeeper, and attorneys. The three individual defendants made several loans to the corporation which had never been approved or authorized. The defendants, in addition, had other transactions with the corporations which were, in effect, transactions among themselves as individuals and as agents of the corporations. Finally, evidence showed that the two corporations were manipulated in such a way that the assets of Yosemite were intermingled with the assets of Kadota to suit the convenience of the defendants and to assist them in evading payment of their obligations. The trial court found that the two corporations were, in fact, one, and that there was no individuality or separateness insofar as the corporation and the defendants were concerned. On defendants' appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's finding and judgment, except as to one defendant who could not be held to hold any beneficial interest in Yosemite (51 Cal. 2d 574, 580) . The Court, citing Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 846-849, 129 P.2d 390 (discussed in § 52.62[3][m]), stated that the fact that one of the two remaining defendants had only one share of Yosemite stock was sufficient to permit holding her personally liable to creditors of the corporation, provided that the alter ego doctrine was otherwise applicable (51 Cal. 2d 574, 580) . In holding that doctrine was applicable, the Court found that there was no separateness between the individual defendants and the corporations. It stated that the evidence supported inferences that the two defendants transferred most of the assets of Yosemite to Kadota, that Yosemite's corporate procedures were not followed, and that personal transactions entered into by the defendants were disadvantageous to Yosemite and done without prior corporate approval. The fact that the two defendants controlled and dominated the corporations did not preclude holding each of them personally liable for the obligations of the business, since the law was settled that two or more shareholders of a corporation may be liable as principals or partners under the alter ego doctrine (51 Cal. 2d 574, 581) . Finally, the Court found that the evidence supported the conclusion that an inequitable result would follow if the acts complained of were treated as those of the corporation alone (51 Cal. 2d 574, 581) . The transference of the assets of Yosemite to Kadota, without regard to the interests of Yosemite or its creditors, and at a time when Yosemite was insolvent, and the manipulations, in general, of the affairs of Yosemite were designed to foster their own purposes and operated to the disadvantage of Yosemite and its creditors (51 Cal. 2d 574, 581-582) .

[g] Alter Ego Doctrine Aplicable to Tort Claim

Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 is discussed in § 52.62[3][e].

Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 is discussed in § 52.62[4][b].

[h] Liability of Two or More Controllers or Dominators

Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107 is discussed in § 52.62[3][f].

[i] Wholly Owned Subsidiaries

Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 is discussed in § 52.62[4][b].

The facts of Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 246 P.2d 1017 are discussed in § 52.62[3][b]. Finding that the procedure the trial court followed was sufficient to bind Southwestern to the judgment rendered against Roney, the court then determined that Southwestern was, in fact, the alter ego of Roney. The court found that there was a complete unity of ownership and interest in the facts of the interlocking directorships of the two corporations, of the complete identity of their officers, of the commingling of the two corporations' assets--since Southwestern had been vested with a blanket authority to advance large sums of money to Roney without security and, in fact, had made such loans in excess of the amount Roney had been authorized to borrow--of the sharing by both corporations of the same attorney, and following Roney's sale to Southwestern, of the carrying on by Roney of its business in precisely the same fashion as had been followed when it was a subsidiary of Southwestern. The collective weight of these facts clearly supported the trial court's finding that Roney was merely an instrumentality through which Southwestern was transacting its own operations as a business convenience, and that the control exercised by Southwestern over Roney would promote an injustice if the separate corporate identities were preserved.

[j] Manipulation of Corporate Affairs to One's Own Ends

Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107 is discussed in § 52.62[3][f].

[k] Inadequate Capitalization and Active Corporate Participation

Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 is discussed in § 52.62[3][e].

Automotriz Del Golfo De Cal. v. Resnick (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 792, 306 P.2d 1 , discussed in § 52.62[4][b], describes how to determine if capitalization is inadequate.

[l] Concentration of Liabilities in Insolvent Corporation

Riddle v. Leuschner (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 574, 335 P.2d 107 is discussed in § 52.62[3][f].

Rosen v. E. C. Losch Co. (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 44 Cal. Rptr. 377 , involved an appeal from a judgment which cross complainant, defendant in the original action, had obtained against cross defendants individually for its share of the profits under a joint venture agreement for the installation of gas and water systems servicing certain housing units. Appellants contended on appeal that contract was one solely between cross complainant and the Cabot Construction Company, and that the trial court wrongly invoked the alter ego doctrine in reaching its determination that appellants were joint venturers with cross complainant in the work to be performed under the agreement. Specifically, appellants contended that cross complainant knew it was doing business with another corporation, that appellants in good faith conducted a separate business enterprise through a corporation, and that they should not be called on to respond personally simply because it would appear that the corporation may be unable to do so. The court of appeal, however, disagreed, and affirmed the trial court's judgment. The facts indicated that appellants were the sole shareholders, officers, and directors of Cabot, that they held interest in corporations with which Cabot was doing business so that it could not be said that Cabot was dealing at arm's length with such companies, and that the corporation was undercapitalized (234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 332-334) . Although the court did not rest its decision exclusively on this ground, the court noted, in addition, that decisions citing Riddle v. Leuschner, above and Talbot v. Fresno-Pacific Corp. (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 425, 5 Cal. Rptr. 361 , likewise held that personal liability will attach when a corporation is rendered insolvent due to the manipulation of assets and liabilities between entities so as to concentrate the assets in one and the liabilities in another (234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334) . Appellants had accomplished this by having Cabot cancel a debt owed to one corporation under the joint venture agreement and, in effect, by transferring to the other corporations wholly owned by appellants, the funds of the canceled note. It should be noted, however, that the court concluded that, in the last analysis, the determination of the existence of the factors contributing to the invoking of the alter ego doctrine is one for the trial court whose conclusion will not be disturbed if supported by substantial evidence (234 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334) .

[m] Holding Oneself Out as Personally Liable

In Stark v. Coker (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 839, 129 P.2d 390 , defendants, husband and wife, and a corporation of which they were, in effect, the sole shareholders, appealed from a judgment against them on a note executed by them as president and secretary of the corporation, respectively. The note renewed a previous debt and was executed pursuant to an accord and satisfaction. The appellants' chief contention on appeal was that the evidence was insufficient to justify the trial court in disregarding the corporate entity of the defendant corporation and in holding the individual defendants personally liable on the note. The Supreme Court found, however, that there was sufficient evidence and affirmed the trial court's judgment. The pertinent facts were that, at the same time the note was executed, the corporation had no elected officers, no meetings of the board of directors or stockholders had been held, and there were no minute entries (20 Cal. 2d 839, 846) . There were 150 outstanding shares of stock: 139 were owned by the husband; one was owned by the wife; and 11 shares were held in escrow, the whereabouts of their owner being unknown. The absent shareholder did not participate in the corporation's business (20 Cal. 2d 839, 846-847) . The affairs of the corporation were conducted by the husband at his home (20 Cal. 2d 839, 847) . The corporation had no business and no assets. With respect to the execution of the note, there was testimony to the effect that, in the presence of the holder of the note, the husband claimed that he and his wife were the corporation (20 Cal. 2d 839, 847-848) . In addition, when plaintiff accepted the note, he might have been able to recover a substantial amount of the indebtedness if the payment of the note had not been extended by the accord and satisfaction (20 Cal. 2d 839, 848) . The Court concluded that these facts would justify the trial court in determining that the corporation was the alter ego of the individual defendants since it could be well inferred that the renewal note was accepted under the belief that the defendants were, in reality, the true parties obligated (20 Cal. 2d 839, 848-849) .

[n] Settlement With Corporation Does Not Bar Alter Ego Liability

The facts and procedural background of Mesler v. Bragg Management Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 290, 216 Cal. Rptr. 443, 702 P.2d 601 , and theCourt's statement of the general requirement for imposing alter ego liability are discussed in § 52.62[4][b]. In considering whether the settlement with the original defendant, the subsidiary corporation, barred imposition of alter ego liability on the parent corporation, the Court first considered the policies underlying California's contribution statutes (39 Cal. 3d 290, 304) . These policies require that the contribution statutes be interpreted to allow a plaintiff full recovery to the extent that others are responsible for his or her injuries. This policy would be violated if a corporation alleged to be the alter ego of its subsidiary were to be dismissed because the subsidiary had settled with the plaintiff, especially if the plaintiff had accepted a modest settlement because the subsidiary was undercapitalized (39 Cal. 3d 290, 304-305) . Thus, plaintiff was not barred from proceeding against the parent corporation because he has settled with the subsidiary (39 Cal. 3d 290, 306) .

[o] Confirmation of Arbitration Award

In Hall, Goodhue, Haisley & Barker, Inc. v. Marconi Conference Center Board (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 , the plaintiff firm appealed an order denying its motion to amend a judgment confirming an arbitration award to add a corporation alleged to be the alter ego of the defendant, a nonprofit organization, as an additional judgment debtor. The court stated that judgments confirming arbitration awards are subject to all of the provisions of law relating to a judgment in a civil action and may be enforced like any other civil judgment. In this case, the parties agreed that the arbitrator had no power to determine the rights and obligations of anyone not a party to the arbitration proceedings. Therefore, the arbitrator could not proceed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1284, which establishes the procedure for an arbitrator to correct an award. Because only the superior court has jurisdiction to amend the award to add an alter ego, the court held that the plaintiff firm was entitled to a hearing before the trial court on its motion to amend the judgment (41 Cal. App. 4th 1551, 1555) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Amendment to Include Alter Ego Litigant

In McClellan v. Northridge Park Townhome Owners Association, Inc. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 702 , a contractor entered into a contract with a condominium owners association to perform earthquake repair work. The association failed to pay for the work, and the contractor commenced an arbitration proceeding to collect the amount due. The association failed to appear at the arbitration hearing, the arbitrator awarded the contractor a default arbitration award, and the superior court entered judgment against the association. The board of directors of the condominium association, on advice of a bankruptcy attorney, filed a bankruptcy petition under Chapter 7 (although the case was later dismissed by the bankruptcy court). In addition, it formed a new corporation which immediately became the homeowners association for the complex. The contractor then filed a motion in superior court to amend the judgment to add the new corporation as a judgment debtor, on the grounds that it was merely a continuation of the first association and was created to hinder, delay, and defraud its predecessor's creditors. The trial court granted to motion to amend, finding that the new corporation was the successor corporation to the original association and that good cause existed to grant the motion to amend. The court of appeal affirmed. It first noted that a trial court has jurisdiction under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 to add additional judgment debtors. Whether the theory relied on is alter ego, piercing the corporate veil, or some other challenge to the fiction of the corporate entity, the doctrine of disregarding the corporate entity limits the exercise of the corporate privilege to prevent its abuse (89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 752-753) . In this case, the plaintiff invoked Code Civ. Proc. § 187 to include the new corporation as a judgment debtor on the ground that it was a successor corporation which was essentially the same entity as the original association. The court reviewed the principle that when a new corporation is a mere continuation of its predecessor, the separate entities may be disregarded and the new corporation held liable for the obligations of the old. Under the facts of this case, it determined that substantial evidence, including identical members, boards, and income, as well as the predecessor's failure to dissolve or wind up its affairs, supported the trial court's conclusion that the new corporation was a "mere continuation" of the old corporation. It thus held that the trial court properly named the new corporation as an additional judgment debtor due to its status as successor (89 Cal. App. 4th 746, 753-756) .

[b] Requirements for Holding Individual as Alter Ego of Corporation

The facts, procedural background, and portion of the opinion considering the sufficiency and propriety of the evidence at the hearing of the motion to amend in Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 are discussed in § 52.62[3][a]. The court of appeal said that in order to impose alter ego liability, (1) there must be sufficient unity of interest and ownership so that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist, and (2) if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1032) . Imposition of alter ego liability is essentially a question of fact, and the trial court's conclusion will not be disturbed on appeal if it is supported by substantial evidence (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1032-1033) . After reviewing the facts, the courtagreed there was substantial evidence to support the imposition of liability on the individual defendant (194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1033-1034) .

NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 (discussed in § 52.69[3][d]), and Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 46-47, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 (discussed in § 52.70[3][a]), also contain statements of the general requirements for imposition of alter ego liability.

In SEC v. Hickey (9th Cir. 2003) 322 F.3d 1123 , the SEC filed a complaint against an individual and several corporate entities controlled by that individual. The parties entered into a consent decree in which the individual agreed he would not assert that he did not violate federal securities laws if the SEC sought disgorgement in the future. The district court ultimately granted the SEC's motion for summary judgment on the disgorgement issue and the individual failed to disgorge any of his unlawful gains. At a contempt hearing, the parties argued over whether the assets of a brokerage owned by the individual's mother should be available to satisfy the disgorgement order. The district court issued an order holding the individual in contempt and freezing the brokerage's assets. On appeal, the brokerage argued that the district court abused its discretion because the brokerage was not the individual's alter ego. Citing Mesler v. Bragg Mgmt. CoMesler v. Bragg Mgmt. Co (1985) 216 Cal. Rptr. 443 , discussed above, the Ninth Circuit reiterated that ownership in a corporation is a prerequisite to alter ego liability under California law (322 F.3d 1123, 1128-1129) . However, the lack of an alter ego relationship did not mean that the district court abused its discretion. The existence of an alter ego relationship is necessary only when some type of piercing is sought. The court concluded that the district court's broad equitable powers, drawn from a tradition of allowing courts to reach third parties in order to effect orders in securities fraud enforcement actions, authorized the asset freeze (322 F.3d 1123, 1131) .

In Playboy Enterprises, Inc. v. Welles (9th Cir. 2002) 279 F.3d 796 , the publisher of Playboy magazine sued a former Playboy Playmate of the Year, her corporation, and her webmasters for trademark infringement, unfair competition and breach of contract, with respect to her use of the title "Playboy Playmate of the Year 1981" and other trademarked terms on her website. When defendant agreed to be a Playmate of the Year in 1981, her corporation signed a contract with Playboy containing a term that required prior written approval from Playboy before she made any non-Playboy use of her name with the designation "Playmate of the Year." The corporation was dissolved in 1984. Playboy argued that the corporation was the individual's alter ego and that the terms of the contract were thus enforceable against her. The district court rejected this argument and granted summary judgment against Playboy on its contract claims. The Ninth Circuit affirmed. Although it concluded that the plaintiff advanced sufficient evidence to establish unity of interest, the first prong of the alter ego test, it agreed with the district court that the plaintiff advanced insufficient evidence to defeat summary judgment on the second prong (citing Associated Vendors, Inc. v. Oakland Meat Co. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 825, 837, 26 Cal. Rptr. 806): plaintiff did not show that the facts were such that adherence to the fiction of the separate existence of the corporation, under these circumstances, would sanction a fraud or promote injustice (279 F.3d 796, 806-807) .

[c] Wholly Owned Subsidiaries

In United States v. Bestfoods (1998) 524 U.S. 51, 118 S. Ct. 1876, 141 L. Ed. 2d 43 , the United States brought an action for the costs of cleaning up industrial waste generated by a chemical plant. The United States District Court imposed operator liability on the parent corporations. On appeal, the Court of Appeals reversed in part. After a grant of certiorari, the issue before the Supreme Court was, under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA) [42 U.S.C. § 9601 et seq.], whether a parent corporation that actively participated in, and exercised control over, the operations of a subsidiary may, without more, be held liable as an operator of a polluting facility owned or operated by the subsidiary. The Court answered no, unless the corporate veil may be pierced. However, a corporate parent that actively participated in, and exercised control over, the operations of the facility itself may be held directly liable in its own right as an operator of the facility. The Supreme Court stated that it is a general principle of corporate law deeply ingrained in our economic and legal systems that a parent corporation (so-called because of control through ownership of another corporation's stock) is not liable for the acts of its subsidiaries. There is an equally fundamental principle of corporate law, applicable to the parent-subsidiary relationship as well as generally, that the corporate veil may be pierced and the shareholder held liable for the corporation's conduct when, inter alia, the corporate form would otherwise be misused to accomplish certain wrongful purposes, most notably fraud, on the shareholder's behalf. Nothing in CERCLA purports to rewrite this well-settled rule. Thus, the Court of Appeals was accordingly correct in holding that when (but only when) the corporate veil may be pierced, a parent corporation may be charged with derivative CERCLA liability for its subsidiary's acts (118 S. Ct. 1876, 1885-1886) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.63

§ 52.63 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Allegations in Plaintiff's Complaint Satisfy Liberal Requirements for Pleading Alter Ego Doctrine

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEMUR-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	RER TO COMPLAINT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION WHEN IT SATISFIES THE LIBERAL REQUIREMENTS FOR PLEADING THE ALTER EGO DOCTRINE AND ALLEGES IN ESSENCE THE UNITY OF INTEREST AND OWNERSHIP BETWEEN DEFENDANT AND THE CORPORATION AND THE PROMOTION OF INJUSTICE BY MAINTAINING THE FICTION OF A SEPARATE CORPORATE EXISTENCE.

A. Liberal Policy in Pleading Alter Ego Doctrine. Courts have followed a liberal policy of applying the alter ego doctrine when the equities and justice of the situation appear to call for it rather than restricting it to the technical niceties depending on pleading and procedure. (First Western Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 915, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657).

B. Essential Facts Required to Be Pleaded. A complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation sufficiently pleads the elements of the alter ego doctrine if it alleges, in essence, facts showing the existence of the two requirements of the alter ego doctrine; that is, the unity of interest and ownership and the promotion of an injustice by the maintenance of the fiction of a separate corporate existence (First Western Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 915, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657).

[Optional] C. Proof of Actual Fraud as Unnecessary. Although plaintiff, in order to invoke the alter ego doctrine, must show that recognition of the fiction of separate corporate existence would foster an injustice or further a fraud, it is not necessary that he/she prove actual fraud. It is sufficient for the invocation of the alter ego doctrine that the recognition of the two entities as separate result in an injustice (Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 514, 522, 203 P.2d 522).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation when the demurrer was made on the grounds that the complaint fails to allege facts showing the presence of the two requirements necessary for the application of the alter ego doctrine; that is, the unity of interest and ownership between the defendant and the corporation and the promotion of an injustice by maintaining the fiction of a separate corporate existence.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liberal Policy in Pleading Alter Ego Doctrine

In First Western Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657 , plaintiff appealed from an order of dismissal following the trial court's sustaining of defendants' general demurrer to plaintiff's complaint. The complaint's first count was for damages for nonpayment of a note executed by a corporation and its second count purported to state a cause of action based on the corporation's alleged indebtedness against individual defendants on an alter ego theory of liability. The allegations in the second count alleged in substance that theindividuals dominated the affairs of the corporation, that a unity of interest and ownership existed between the individuals and the corporation, that the corporation was a mere shell and naked framework for individual manipulations, that its income was diverted to the use of the individuals, that the corporation was, in effect, inadequately capitalized, that the corporation failed to issue stock and to abide by the formalities of corporate existence, that the corporation was and had been insolvent, and that adherence to the fiction of separate corporate existence would, under the circumstances, promote injustice. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order in part, but reversed it with respect to the cause of action stated against the individual defendants. The court commented that it appeared that the courts had followed a liberal policy of applying the alter ego doctrine when the equities and injustice of the situation appear to call for it rather than restricting it to the technical niceties depending upon pleading and procedure. The court stated that it was essential, principally, that a showing be made that both requirements, i.e., the unity of interest and ownership, and the promotion of injustice by the fiction of separate corporate existence, exist in a given situation. With respect to the allegations in the complaint, assuming that these facts could be proved, each of the several shareholders of the corporation, regardless of the size of their respective interests, could be held liable as principals or partners under the alter ego doctrine (267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 915) .

[b] Essential Facts Required to Be Pleaded

First Western Bank & Trust Co. v. Bookasta (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 910, 73 Cal. Rptr. 657 is discussed in § 52.63[3][a].

[c] Proof of Actual Fraud as Unnecessary

Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 514, 203 P.2d 522 was an action arising out of injuries to plaintiff's eye suffered when a bottle of ABC beer, a product of defendant, exploded. From a judgment on a verdict in favor of plaintiff, defendant appealed. The defendant contended, in part, that any cause of action for injuries resulting from defects in ABC beer bottles should have been brought against Aztec Brewing Company, a partnership, and not Aztec Brewing Company, a corporation. Apparently, plaintiff did not learn of the details of defendants financial structure until after the action was commenced. The evidence showed that prior to plaintiff's injury, the company had operated as a corporation, but thereafter, had transferred its structure to a partnership, continuing business as before. The corporation was not dissolved, but remained in existence to collect debts owed to it. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. In pertinent part, it held that the confusion which would be promoted and the injustice which would result if the two entities controlled by the same person and having an identical name were kept separate, which had the effect of frustrating plaintiff's claim, required affirmation of the trial court's determination that, as a matter of law, the corporate defendant was the alter ego of the partnership. The Court held, in addition, that it was not necessary that the plaintiff prove actual fraud since it was sufficient to show that recognition of the two entities would result in an injustice (33 Cal. 2d 514, 522) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Essential Facts Required to be Pleaded

The court of appeal in Las Palmas Associates v. Las Palmas Center Associates (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 301 , affirmed the application of the alter ego doctrine to impose liability for fraud on the parent corporation of the general partner of a development limited partnership. The court noted that only a difference in wording distinguishes the application of the alter ego doctrine against a corporation instead of an individual. The requirements for piercing the corporate veil are the same: (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporations (or of the corporation and the individual) no longer exist, and (2) that if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1249) . The fact that the parent had guaranteed $42 million of the subsidiary's loans strongly suggested that the subsidiary was undercapitalized for a company in the business of developing shopping centers (235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1250) . The parent argued that because the subsidiary's worth exceeded the judgment, it was not necessary to an equitable result to impose alter ego liability. The court disagreed, noting that the parent had been actively involved in the transaction from the beginning, the subsidiary's staff and operations had been substantially curtailed since the beginning of the transaction, and that it would be possible for the subsidiary to totally deplete its assets before plaintiff could realize on the judgment (235 Cal. App. 3d 1220, 1251) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.64

§ 52.64 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint Against Individual on Corporate Obligations--Allegation Charging Defendant With Liability Sufficient to Raise Alter Ego Doctrine on Defendant's Denial Thereof if Defendant Is Not Prejudiced Thereby

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.63.]

WHEN AN INDIVIDUAL DEFENDANT IS CHARGED WITH LIABILITY ON A CORPORATE OBLIGATION, HIS/HER DENIAL OFLIABILITY IS SUFFICIENT TO RAISE THE ALTER EGO DOCTRINE IF DEFENDANT IS NOT PREJUDICED THEREBY.

A. Denial of Liability by Individual Defendant is Sufficient to Place Alter Ego Liability at Issue. When an individual defendant is charged with liability, his/her denial of such liability is sufficient to authorize the reception of evidence to establish liability on the principal of alter ego, even if the complaint is devoid of such an allegation, if the defendant thereafter would not be prejudiced by the introduction of evidence supporting the application of the alter ego doctrine (Auer v. Frank (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 403-404, 38 Cal. Rptr. 684 ; Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 652, 655-656, 333 P.2d 802).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint against an individual for liability on the obligations of a corporation when the demurrer is made on the grounds that the complaint fails to join the corporation as a party defendant and otherwise fails to state a cause of action against the corporation.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

It should be noted that in Los Angeles Cemetery Ass'n v. Superior Court (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 492, 74 Cal. Rptr. 97 , the court stated that it was the law of California that the alter ego issue may be raised by a simple allegation that the defendant sought to be charged had made the contract involved. However, an examination of the case shows that plaintiff was able to submit evidence on the alter ego issue when it had not stated a cause of action against the corporation only when the appellate court had, in fact, made the additional finding that the defendant was not prejudiced by the introduction of such evidence [see § 52.64[3][a], [4][a]; see also Design Associates, Inc. v. Welch (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 165, 36 Cal. Rptr. 341 (alter ego issue not permitted to be raised when corporation not joined as defendant and no cause of action stated against it)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial of Liability by Individual Defendant is Sufficient to Place Alter Ego Liability at Issue

Auer v. Frank (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 38 Cal. Rptr. 684 was an appeal by plaintiff from a judgment in favor of an individual defendant who was sought to be held responsible for obligations incurred by the corporate defendant on a contract for the construction of dwelling houses. Plaintiff contended that the trial court failed to find on the material issue of alter ego, while the defendants urged on appeal that the pleadings in the case raised no issue of fact involving the alter ego doctrine and that, therefore, no findings were necessary. Although the court of appeal affirmed the trial court, holding that the trial court did make a finding on the alter ego issue, it also held that the application of the alter ego doctrine was an issue in the case. The court noted that although there appeared to be some authority to the effect that the alter ego doctrine must be pleaded in the complaint, there was also authority that when and individual defendant is charged with liability, his or her denial is sufficient to establish liability on the principle of alter ego (i.e., to support the introduction of evidence and a finding on that issue) even though the complaint was devoid of such an allegation. This was the situation presented by the circumstances of this case. Not only did the defendants deny liability, but they affirmatively asserted in their brief before the appellate court that the liability sought to be established was not that of defendants, as individuals, but that of the corporation.

There may be two limitations on the application of the rule stated by the court. One is that the court noted one authority relied on by the court to be an action on a common count, as was the case before the court, and that under the common count pleading the courts have permitted evidence of fraud, unjust enrichment, and secret profits. A second limitation is that the parties and the trial court proceeded throughout the trial on the theory that the alter ego issue was presented for adjudication. The court held that, regardless of plaintiff's pleadings, the doctrine of estoppel precluded either party from thereafter asserting that no such issue was in controversy (227 Cal. App. 2d 396, 403-404) .

Pan Pac. Sash & Door Co. v. Greendale Park, Inc. (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 652, 333 P.2d 802 , presented the same issue on appeal as that raised by defendants in Auer v. Frank, above. The defendants had appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiff. The cause of action pleaded by plaintiff against individual and corporate defendants was in the form of a common court for goods, wares, and merchandise sold and delivered to defendants. One individual defendant denied liability in his answer. At a pretrial hearing, plaintiff stated that it would contend that the owners of the stock in the two corporate defendants were the same or substantially the same,so that one corporation was the alter ego of the other. In response, counsel for defendant contended that the complaint did not set forth facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action based on the alter ego principal. At the trial following the opening statement of plaintiff, defendants' counsel stated that he would object to all evidence on the alter ego issues, and did thereafter object to all evidence tending to establish the application of the doctrine. The trial court overruled these objections and at the conclusion of trial found for plaintiff. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal noted that, although it was true that the complaint was devoid of any allegation on the alter ego doctrine, it was the established doctrine in California that when a defendant was charged with liability his or her denial thereof was sufficient to authorize the reception of evidence to establish liability under the principle of alter ego, or, at least under circumstances that were present before the court, the reception of that evidence did not constitute reversible error. The court found authority in Gordon v. Aztec Brewing Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 514, 203 P.2d 522 , in which, although the alter ego issue was not pleaded in plaintiff's complaint, the defendant's answer denied that it was engaged in the business alleged in plaintiff's complaint. This answer was held sufficient to cure any defects that the complaint may have contained. Likewise, here the defendants were appraised well in advance of the trial that the plaintiff intended to rely on the doctrine of alter ego; that, in fact, both corporations were parties to the action and were represented by the same counsel; and finally, that the officers and principal stockholders of both corporations who were in possession of all of the facts relative to the creation of both corporations and their relations and transactions with each other had testified in the trial. Under these circumstances it could not be said that the defendants were misled to their prejudice by any variance between the pleading and the proof (166 Cal. App. 2d 652, 655-656) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Denial of Liability by Individual Defendant is Sufficient to Place Alter Ego Liability at Issue

In Los Angeles Cemetery Ass'n v. Superior Court (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 492, 74 Cal. Rptr. 97 , petitioner filed suit against the seller of a certain piece of real estate and against Thriftimart, Inc., alleging that the seller and Thriftimart had made fraudulent representations to petitioner as to the seller's financial status. Subsequently, petitioner attempted to amend his complaint to state a count against Thriftimart on the basis that it was the alter ego of the seller. A demurrer to this cause of action was sustained with leave to amend. The time within which petitioner could amend his complaint had not expired when it served Thriftimart interrogatories seeking information on its alter ego theory. On the trial court's granting of Thriftimart's motion for a protective order against the interrogatories, the petitioner sought a writ to compel the answers. In granting the writ, the court of appeal noted that: (1) the order permitting petitioner to amend meant that the alter ego issue was still involved in the case; and (2) while it was the better practice to allege facts on which a plaintiff sought to hold a defendant on an alter ego theory, it was still the law of California that that issue may be raised by a simple allegation that the defendant sought to be charged had made the contract involved. The court held that, since petitioner could have sought discovery on the basis of such a conclusory but permissible allegation, it was an abuse of the trial court's discretion to deny it the opportunity to obtain information relevant to its theory when petitioner desired to utilize a form of pleading more informative to the real party in interest (268 Cal. App. 2d 492, 493-494) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.65

§ 52.65 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Insufficient Showing to Bind Individual to Judgment

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	TO AMEND JUDGMENT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION TO AMEND THE JUDGMENT TO INCLUDE AS A JUDGMENT DEBTOR AN INDIVIDUAL WHO IS ALLEGED TO BE THE ALTER EGO OF A CORPORATE DEFENDANT SHOULD BE DENIED WHEN PLAINTIFF MAKES AN INSUFFICIENT SHOWING OF THE PRESENCE OF THE ELEMENTS OF THE ALTER EGO DOCTRINE.

A. Required Showing. In order to cast aside the legal fiction of distinct corporate existence as distinguished from those who own its capital stock, it is not enough that the corporation is so organized and controlled and its affairs so managed as to make it merely an instrumentality, conduit, or adjunct of its stockholders, but it must further appear that they are the business conduits and alter ego of one another, and that to recognize their separate entities would aid the consummation of a wrong (Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 11 ; Katzir's Floor and Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.com (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143, 1149-1150) .

B. Question of Fact. The presence of any one of the factors that cases have considered pertinent to the court's determination does not require, as a matter of law, the invoking of the alter ego doctrine since the determination of whether the requirements which must be found to exist before the corporate existence will be disregarded is a question of fact and not one of law (Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394-396, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 , disapproved in part on other grounds in Reynolds Metal Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83).

[Optional] C. Inadequacy of Capitalization. Standing alone, the inadequacy of the capitalization of an enterprise is insufficient to invoke the doctrine of alter ego and render the shareholders of the corporation liable for the debts of the corporation (Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614).

[Optional] D. Mere Existence of Unsatisfied Creditor Is Insufficient Showing. It is not sufficient to show merely that a creditor will remain unsatisfied if the corporate veil is not pierced, since the purpose of the doctrine is not to protect every unsatisfied creditor, but rather to afford the creditor protection, when some conduct amounting to bad faith makes it inequitable for the equitable owner of a corporation to hide behind its corporate veil (Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 397, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of the corporation when the plaintiff has made an insufficient showing of the presence of the elements of the alter ego doctrine.

When appropriate, counsel should include argument in the forms showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Required Showing

In Erkenbrecher v. Grant (1921) 187 Cal. 7, 200 P. 641 , plaintiff sued on a note which was assigned to it by a corporation wholly owned by plaintiff. Plaintiff controlled the corporation by dictating the management and affairs of the company. In addition, plaintiff had advanced to the corporation the sums with which the corporation paid for the subject notes and which plaintiff had previously guaranteed. In effect, plaintiff had made use of the corporation for the purpose of conducting his business for his own personal convenience. Defendant contended that the cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations since the company's payment for the notes amounted to payment by plaintiff as a joint obligor on the notes (187 Cal. 7, 9) . The trial court agreed and found for defendant. On appeal by plaintiff, the Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that since the facts did not warrant the application of the alter ego doctrine, plaintiff was not a joint obligor on the note and, thus, was not barred by the statute of limitations. The Court made the statement set forth in Paragraph A of this form (187 Cal. 7, 11) and held that defendant had made no showing that plaintiff's relationship with his company was in any manner fraudulent or prompted by dishonesty, or that the company, in purchasing the notes, committed or intended to commit any fraud whatsoever. In this respect, the Court considered that the personal advancement of the sums with which the corporation purchased the notes and which thereafter were assigned to plaintiff was consistent with honesty and fair dealing (187 Cal. 7, 10-11) .

In Katzir's Floor and Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.com (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143 , a corporation wholly owned by the individual appellant sold a used machine to plaintiff, who ultimately brought a state court action that was removed to federal court on the basis of diversity. A default judgment against the corporation was entered. The corporation's assets were sold to another corporation owned by appellant's wife. Plaintiff moved to modify the federal court default judgment to reflect the true names of the debtors by adding the individual and his new corporation, which was using the first corporation's website. The district court granted the motion on the bases that the individual was the alter ego of the first corporation, and that the second corporation was the successor corporation of the first corporation. The court of appeal found that Code Civ. Proc. § 187, allowing amendment of a judgment to add judgment debtors, requires that the new party be the alter ego of the old party, and that--in order to satisfy due process requirements--the new party had controlled the litigation. On the first issue, the court held that the district court clearly erred in finding the individual to be the alter ego of the corporation solely by the fact of control. It noted that the alter ego doctrine is a limited doctrine that is only invoked when recognition of the corporate form would work an injustice to a third person. Certain critical facts are needed to establish that it would be inequitable to respect separate corporate identities. The district court made none of those critical findings before determining that the individual was an alter ego (394 F.3d 1143, 1149) . For this reason, the court reversed the district court's order adding the appellants to the judgment against the first corporation (394 F.3d 1143, 1152) .

[b] Question of Fact

In Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 (disapproved in part on other grounds in Reynolds Metal Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83), the plaintiffs appealed from that portion of the judgment denying recovery in their action for breach of a stock purchase and sale of assets agreement against individual defendants whose liability was predicated on the alter ego doctrine. In this agreement, the parties agreed that defendant's obligations could be assigned to a corporation yet to be formed. After execution of the agreement, the obligations were assigned and, thereafter, the corporation defaulted. The corporation had obtained permission to issue stock and capitalized itself in the sum of $50,000. The individual defendants made themselves directors and officers of the corporation, and, as agents of the corporation, executed a security agreement, guaranteeing payment of the obligations owed to plaintiffs, and a pledge agreement whereby the corporation pledged all of the shares acquired as security for the performance under the promissory note (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 389-392) . In affirming the trial court, the court of appeal held that there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's judgment. The court stated that the gist of the cases which have considered the alter ego doctrine is that the determination of the presence of requirements which must be found to exist before the corporate existence will be disregarded, is primarily one for the trial court and is not a question of law and that the conclusion of the trier of fact will not be disturbed if it is supported by substantial evidence. The court found that there was ample evidence to support the inferences drawn by the trial court that there was not such a unity of interest between the corporation and the individual defendants as to destroy the individuality of the corporation (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 389-392) . In this respect, the court noted the additional fact that the agreement reached by plaintiffs and defendants was part of a standard promoters' agreement, the intent and consequences of which were known and understood by all of the parties, who were all represented by legal counsel. In addition, the court noted, in response to the plaintiffs' contention that the corporation was undercapitalized, that, in order to justify such a finding, it is not sufficient to show merely that a creditor will remain unsatisfied if the corporate veil is not pierced, and thus set up such an unhappy circumstance as proof of an inequitable result, since, in almost every instance in which a plaintiffhas attempted to invoke the doctrine, the plaintiff is an unsatisfied creditor. The court stated that the purpose of the doctrine is not to protect every unsatisfied creditor, but rather, to afford him or her protection, when some conduct amounting to bad faith makes it inequitable for the equitable owner to hide behind the corporate veil (27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 397) .

[c] Inadequacy of Capitalization

Harris v. Curtis (1970) 8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 87 Cal. Rptr. 614 was an action against a corporation and the individual shareholders of that corporation for sums advanced to the corporation. The complaint alleged that the corporation was a mere shell and naked framework which the individual defendants used for the conduct of their personal affairs and that, in effect, it was the alter ego of the individual defendants. Judgment was entered against the corporation, but in favor of the individual defendants. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed (8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841) . The principal question on appeal was whether or not lack of capital contribution to the corporation was sufficient to make the individual shareholders liable. The court noted that although there was no question that the corporation in this case was underfinanced, it was common knowledge that many such corporations had been highly successful, that others had prospered, but without such success, and that still others had failed because of inadequate capitalization. The court stated, however, that this was part of the free enterprise system, and, that as a result, it would not declare that inadequate capitalization, per se, renders the shareholders, officers, and directors liable for the obligations of the corporation. Rather, undercapitalization was a factor to be considered along with all other facts present in the case in determining whether individuals were the alter ego of a corporation (8 Cal. App. 3d 837, 841-843) .

[d] Mere Existence of Unsatisfied Creditor Is Insufficient Showing

Arnold v. Browne (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 386, 103 Cal. Rptr. 775 is discussed in § 52.65[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.66

§ 52.66

Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Plaintiff Estopped to Deny Corporate Existence

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

A PLAINTIFF IS ESTOPPED TO DENY A CORPORATION'S EXISTENCE WHERE HE/SHE _____ [ACTED AS A CORPORATE OFFICER or WAS FAMILIAR WITH INDIVIDUAL SHAREHOLDER'S RELATIONSHIP TO CORPORATION] AND DEALT WITH THE CORPORATION'S BUSINESS AS BEING THAT OF THE CORPORATION.

[EITHER]

A. Estoppel of Plaintiff to Deny Corporate Existence. Where a plaintiff seeking to hold an individual liable for a corporation's debts on the grounds that that individual was the corporation's alter ego has in his/her relationship with the corporation acted as its officer and dealt with the business of the corporation as being that of the corporation and not that of the individual, he/she is estopped to deny that there was an effective corporate existence (Granoff v. Yackle (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 253, 256, 16 Cal. Rptr. 394).

[OR]

A. Knowledge of Shareholder's Relationship With Corporation. A plaintiff who had knowledge concerning a shareholder's relationship with a corporation, but who chose or consented to deal with the shareholder only as an officer of the corporation, cannot complain that that shareholder should be held personally liable for the debts of the corporation (Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 706, 102 P. 918).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation so as to include a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of the corporation where the plaintiff is estopped to deny the corporation's separate existence, having knowledge of the corporate framework and having dealt with the corporation's business as that of the corporation.

When appropriate, counsel should include argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense to a complaint against a corporation and its controlling shareholder on a corporate obligation alleging the plaintiff's knowledge of facts regarding the relationship between the shareholder as alter ego and the corporation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel of Plaintiff to Deny Corporate Existence

Granoff v. Yackle (1961) 196 Cal. App. 2d 253, 16 Cal. Rptr. 394 was an action for the recovery of certain sums of money representing accounts receivable, which defendants, as officers of a corporation, were to pay to plaintiff in repayment of a loan plaintiff made to the corporation. At a pretrial conference, the trial court issued an order in which, in pertinent part, the issue in dispute was stated to be whether there was, in fact, a corporation. Evidently, as part of his theory of recovery, plaintiff was alleging that the officers were personally liable for the loan. Evidence produced at trial showed that plaintiff was made secretary-treasurer of the corporation in order that he could more properly supervise the repayment of his loan. In his capacity as secretary-treasurer, plaintiff had filed the corporation's tax return and had also learned that one officer had taken money for a job which had been performed for a customer, but had not turned the money in. The trial court, after a trial on the merits, found for the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed. The trial court reversed on the ground that defendants were personally liable to plaintiff for monies they had converted to their personal use. However, the court found no merit in plaintiff's contention that the evidence was of such a nature to require that the corporate entity be disregarded and liability be placed on the individual defendants for that reason. The court noted that throughout most of his relationship with the corporation, the plaintiff acted as an officer of the corporation and that he dealt with the business as being that of the corporation and not that of the officers of the corporation as individuals. Accordingly, the court concluded that the trial court's refusal to disregard the corporate entity was justified inasmuch as there was substantial support in the evidence for a determination that the plaintiff was estopped to deny that there was an effective corporate existence.

[b] Knowledge of Shareholder's Relationship With Corporation

Lynch v. McDonald (1909) 155 Cal. 704, 102 P. 918 was an action by plaintiff for services rendered as an attorney to defendant corporation. The plaintiff appealed from that portion of the judgment which dismissed the complaint as to McDonald, an individual defendant who was president of the corporation and owned nearly all of its capital stock. Plaintiff contended on appeal that McDonald dominated the corporation, that it was his alter ego, and that, therefore, its acts were McDonald's. The Supreme Court, however, affirmed the judgment. The Court noted that, if the action were one by a stranger to the corporation, then there was evidence to support the application of the alter ego principle. However, plaintiff was not just the corporation's attorney, but one who, by years of association with McDonald and service for him and the company, was thoroughly familiar with all the facts concerning the president's relation with the corporation. Even though there was evidence that McDonald deceived plaintiff concerning the profits of the corporation, this did not affect the fact that plaintiff was aware of McDonald's relationship with the corporation. Therefore, the Court held that if plaintiff was content to act under a contract with McDonald which McDonald refused to sign except as an officer of the corporation, plaintiff could not now complain that McDonald, who was not a party signatory to the instrument, was not bound.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel of Plaintiff to Deny Corporate Existence

Wynn v. Treasure Co. (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 69, 303 P.2d 1067 was an appeal from a judgment in favor of plaintiff by defendant Treasure, a corporation, and defendant de Bretteville, the sole shareholder and president of Treasure. The trial court had found that de Bretteville was the alter ego of Treasure and that Treasure's duty to account to plaintiff for the royalties from an oil well drilling operation was also the duty of de Bretteville. Plaintiff had been employed by Treasure, was its officer and director, assisted in the promotion of operating capital for the corporation, obtained leases for it, participated in the negotiation for the contract for funds tocomplete the drilling of the oil, the royalties from which was the subject of plaintiff's suit, and regularly represented Treasure in its various corporate enterprises. In reversing the trial court with respect to the trial court's finding that de Bretteville was the alter ego of Treasure, the court stated that, on the facts, plaintiff was estopped to deny the corporate existence of Treasure. The court stated, quoting 13 Am Jur 207, § 203, that it is the general rule that one who deals with an apparent corporation as such and in such a manner as to recognize its corporate existence, de jure or de facto, is thereby estopped to deny the fact thus admitted. This rule may be applied in actions brought by either of the contracting parties against the other, and in actions by the person dealing with the corporation, wherein the existence of the corporation is assailed for the purpose of establishing individual partnership liability on the part of its members. The court found that, having been an officer and director of the corporation, having acted on its behalf as a corporation, having treated it as a separate and distinct entity at all times prior to this action, and, in addition, having previously sued it in another case in which plaintiff alleged the corporate existence of Treasure without any claim that it s the alter ego of any individual, plaintiff could not now deny Treasure's corporate existence and contend it was the alter ego of de Bretteville.

Bellerue v. Business Files, Inst., Inc. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 30 Cal. Rptr. 232 was an action commenced against BFI, a corporation, on certain promissory notes it had executed and delivered and against two individual defendants and CMC, a second corporation, on the theory that each of the latter was the alter ego of BFI in the transaction wherein the notes were given. The two individual defendants, Hilliard and Hedden, had formed CMC for the purpose of seeking prospects for profitable investments in various business activities. One of these activities led to the formation of BFI. Although Hilliard and Hedden had expended considerable sums in contributions to the operation of BFI, it had become clear after a period of time that more capital was needed. To accomplish this, Hilliard and Hedden brought in other investors, one of whom was plaintiff who invested in BFI in the same manner as Hilliard had contributed his capital to BFI; that is, by making loans to BFI in return for which he was issued shares of stock in BFI. Plaintiff was thereafter elected to the board of directors. At board meetings, plaintiff had become aware, or at least was put on notice, of BFI's large indebtedness to CMC. Eventually, BFI failed. Subsequently, plaintiff commenced an action to rescind his agreement and for damages for fraud. The trial court in that action had found for defendants on the basis that plaintiff was well aware of the financial structure of BFI. Plaintiff's appeal in that action was pending when he commenced this action. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff and defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed as to all defendants except BFI. The court stated in the pertinent portion of its opinion that, although conceivable, a stranger to a corporation might unsuccessfully prosecute an action against a corporation and its officers and directors seeking to rescind a loan agreement made with it on the theory that he or she had been defrauded, and, after that unsuccessful action, then brig suit on the notes themselves and seek to pierce the corporate veil, one such as plaintiff who had been found to have been a director of the corporation, and who actively engaged in its activities with full knowledge of its financial condition, should not be permitted to proceed in this fashion. In other words, one who unsuccessfully has sought to recover from his or her associates what he or she concedes to have been an investment in a joint venture, on the theory that they have taken unfair advantage of him or her, should not be heard thereafter to assert that he or she was no more tn an ordinary creditor and otherwise a stranger to the transaction (215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 398-399) .

77 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.67

§ 52.67 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Failure to Observe Corporate Formalities Pursuant to Shareholders' Agreement Is Not a Basis for Imposition of Alter Ego Doctrine [Corp. Code § 300(e)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

THE FAILURE TO OBSERVE CORPORATE FORMALITIES IN A CLOSE CORPORATION PURSUANT TO A SHAREHOLDER'S AGREEMENT UNDER CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 300(b) MAY NOT BE CONSIDERED AS A FACTOR IN ESTABLISHING THE PERSONAL LIABILITY OF A SHAREHOLDER FOR A CORPORATE OBLIGATION.

A. "Close Corporation" Defined. "Close corporation" means a corporation organized under the General Corporation Law, the articles of which contain, in addition to the provisions required by Corporations Code Section 202, a provision that all of the corporation's issued shares of all classes shall be held of record by not more than a specified number of persons, not exceeding 35, and a statement "This corporation is a close corporation" (Corp. Code § 158(a)).

B. Informalities in Conduct of Close Corporation's Affairs. The failure of a close corporation, pursuant to a shareholders' agreement authorized by Corporations Code Section 300(b), to observe corporate formalities relating to meetings of directors or shareholders in connection with the management of any phase of the corporation'saffairs, may not be considered a factor tending to establish that the shareholders have personal liability for corporate obligations (Corp. Code §§ 300(b), (e)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation so as to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of the corporation when the motion is based on the failure of the corporation to observe the corporate formalities relating to meetings of directors or shareholders.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Informalities in Conduct of Close Corporation's Affairs

Corp. Code § 300(b) , relating to a shareholder's agreement referred to in Corp. Code § 300(e), provides that, notwithstanding Corp. Code § 300(a) (management and exercise of corporate powers by board of directors) or any other provision of the General Corporation Law, but subject to Corp. Code § 300(c), below, no shareholder's agreement, which relates to any phase of the affairs of a close corporation, including, but not limited to management of its business, division of its profits, or distribution of its assets on liquidation, is invalid as between the parties thereto on the ground that it so relates to the conduct of the affairs of the corporation as to interfere with the discretion of the board or that it is an attempt either to treat the corporation as if it were a partnership or to arrange their relationships in a manner which would be appropriate only between partners.

A shareholder's agreement made pursuant to Corp. Code § 300(b) terminates when the corporation ceases to be a close corporation, except that, if the agreement so provides, it may continue to the extent it is enforceable apart from Corp. Code § 300(b) [Corp. Code § 300(b)].

Corp. Code § 300(c) provides that no agreement entered into pursuant to Corp. Code § 300(b) may alter or waive any of the provisions of Corp. Code §§ 158 (close corporations defined), 417, 418 (contents of share certificates), 500 and 501 (when corporate distributions may be made), 1111 (mergers of close corporations), 1201(e) (reorganizations of close corporations), 1500-1508 (records and reports), 1600-1605 (rights of inspection), 1800-1809 (involuntary dissolution), 2009, 2010, and 2011 (actions by corporations in process of winding up and by shareholders and creditors of corporation), and 2200-2260 (crimes and penalties. All other provisions of the General Corporation Law may be waived or altered as between the parties in a shareholders' agreement, except the required filing of any document with the Secretary of State [Corp. Code § 300(e)].

To the extent that, and as long, as the direction or powers of the board in its management of corporate affairs is controlled by a shareholders' agreement under Corp. Code § 300(b), such an agreement imposes on each shareholder who is a party thereto liability for managerial acts performed or omitted by that person pursuant thereto which is otherwise imposed by the General Corporation Law on directors, and the directors are relieved, to that extent, from liability.

The precise extent of the relaxation of the alter ego doctrine provided for in Corp. Code § 300(e), set forth in Paragraph B of the above form, is unclear. Although it has been stated that the language of Corp. Code § 300(e) should be interpreted to mean that in effect, it eliminates from those practices commonly found in cases to satisfy the alter ego doctrine the practice of the informality in the conduct of corporate affairs caused by the failure to hold meetings of the board of directors and shareholders [see Note, "Separate Statutory Treatment of the Close Corporation in California: Progress and Problems," 27 Hastings L.J. 433, 471 (1973)], it would appear that Corp. Code § 300(e) is limited in its application only to instances in which a shareholder conducted himself or herself in accordance with a shareholder's agreement under Corp. Code § 300(b). In such a situation, under Corp. Code § 300(e), the shareholder would not, by reason of that conduct, be held accountable for the debts incurred by the corporation.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.68

§ 52.68 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Greater Inequity Resulting From Imposition of Alter Ego Doctrine

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

THE ALTER EGO DOCTRINE MAY NOT BE INVOKED IF A GREATER INEQUITY AND INJUSTICE WOULD RESULT FROM ITS IMPOSITION.

A. Alter Ego Doctrine Inapplicable if Greater Inequity Results. The corporate veil may not be pierced under the alter ego doctrine if to do so would accomplish a greater inequity and injustice than would result if the separate entity of the corporation were maintained (Bellerue v. Business Files Institute, Inc. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 399, 30 Cal. Rptr. 232).

[Optional] B. Obligation Inflicted on Innocent Corporation or Minority Shareholders. The doctrine of disregarding the corporate entity may not be used to inflict an obligation on an innocent corporation or its minority shareholders since the purpose of the doctrine is to prevent fraud (American Home Ins. Co. v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 951, 966-967, 175 Cal. Rptr. 826 ; Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 242, 260-261, 54 Cal. Rptr. 786, 55 Cal. Rptr. 502).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation so as to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of the corporation if granting the motion would result in a greater inequity than would result from maintaining recognition of the separate corporate existence. The foregoing points and authorities amplify the second of the two general requirements for imposition of alter ego liability set forth in § 52.62, Paragraph D. The points and authorities in § 52.70 address another aspect of the equitable element, namely due diligence. Counsel may wish to combine the points and authorities in this form with those in § 52.62 setting forth the two general requirements or with those in § 52.70 relating to a lack of diligence.

Counsel should include argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should describe the inequitable ramifications likely to result by imposition of alter ego liability.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alter Ego Doctrine Inapplicable if Greater Inequity Results

Bellerue v. Business Files, Inst., Inc. (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 30 Cal. Rptr. 232 was an action commenced against BFI, a corporation, on certain promissory notes it had executed and delivered and against two individual defendants and CMC, a second corporation, on the theory that each of the latter was the alter ego of BFI in the transaction in which the notes were given. The two individual defendants, Hilliard and Hedden, had formed CMC for the purpose of seeking prospects for profitable investments in various business activities. One of these activities led to the formation of BFI. Although Hilliard and Hedden had expended considerable sums in contributions to the operation of BFI, it had become clear after a period of time that more capital was needed. To accomplish this, Hilliard and Hedden brought in other investors, one of whom was plaintiff who invested in BFI in the same manner as Hilliard had contributed his capital to BFI. Plaintiff made loans to BFI in return for which he was issued shares of stock in BFI. Plaintiff was thereafter elected to the board of directors. At board meetings, plaintiff was aware, or at least was put on notice, of BFI's large indebtedness to CMC. Eventually, BFI failed. Subsequently, plaintiff commenced an action to rescind his agreement and for damages for fraud. The trial court in that action found for defendants on the basis that plaintiff was well aware of the financial structure of BFI. In this action, however, plaintiff recovered judgment in the trial court and the defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed as to all defendants except BFI. The trial court apparently based its finding of the alter ego liability of defendants Hilliard and Hedden on the basis that BFI was undercapitalized. The court found that the trial court's finding was not supported by the evidence produced at the trial. Moreover, the court noted that, because plaintiff knew that defendant Hilliard had invested in the venture in the same fashion as plaintiff himself had done, it was difficult to see how the corporationwas any more the alter ego of one than of the other. Justice would not be served by requiring Hilliard to bear plaintiff's loss in addition to his own individual loss which was more than three times that of plaintiff's (215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 399) . The court stated, in this regard, that the corporate veil may at times be pierced to do equity and justice, but never to accomplish the reverse (215 Cal. App. 2d 383, 399) .

[b] Obligation Inflicted on Innocent Corporation or Minority Shareholders

In American Home Ins. Co. v. Travelers Indemnity Co. (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 951, 175 Cal. Rptr. 826 , plaintiff liability insurer sought reformation of a processing agreement executed between an automobile maintenance company and a Toyota distributor for whom the maintenance company provided services. Pursuant to the agreement, the distributor was named as an additional insured under an insurance contract between the maintenance company and defendant insurer. Plaintiff sought to modify the processing agreement to include its own assured, a sales division related to the distributor, as an additional insured under defendant's policy on grounds that the distributor, which was wholly owned by the sales division and which had identical officers and directors, was the alter ego of the sales division and had therefore entered into the processing agreement on the sales division's behalf.

The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint, and the court of appeal affirmed. The case was largely decided on the basis of the plaintiff's lack of standing to sue, but the court also discussed the alter ego doctrine's application to the facts. That doctrine, stated the court, is invoked to prevent fraud or inequity, and in the absence of such factors, may not be utilized to prejudice an innocent third party who has dealt with a corporation. The doctrine cannot be applied merely to eliminate the consequences of corporate operations. Defendant had not been a party to any inequitable conduct; it had merely provided insurance coverage pursuant to the agreement between the distributor and the maintenance company, and neither of those parties had manifested any intent to include the sales division as an additional insured under defendant's policy. Even if the facts of the relationship between the distributor and the sales division supported a finding of alter ego, equitable considerations prevented application of the doctrine to create an obligation on the part of the innocent insurer (122 Cal. App. 3d 951, 966-967) .

Meyer v. Glenmoor Homes, Inc. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 242, 54 Cal. Rptr. 786, 55 Cal. Rptr. 502 , involved an action against a corporation on a note signed under the corporate name by plaintiff's deceased husband, the president of the corporation. Shortly before the execution of the note, three associates, who were shareholders of defendant, and among whom was plaintiff's deceased husband, desired permanent financing for an apartment in order to pay off a loan used for the construction of the property and, thus, to hold the property as a long-term investment. In order to do this, the property had to be conveyed from a subsidiary of defendant to the three associates as partners. A second deed required to complete this transaction was signed by the associates' spouses. Plaintiff testified that she did not sign the deed until the corporation had given her the note sued on representing her interest in the corporation. The fact that this note was signed and delivered, however, was not discovered by the remaining officers, directors, and stockholders of defendant until after the death of plaintiff's husband. A judgment for plaintiff was rendered at the trial level, entered on a jury verdict, and the defendant appealed.

In reversing the trial court, the court of appeal held, in pertinent part, that the execution of the note was never authorized or ratified by the defendant and that the corporation had never received any consideration for the note. The plaintiff contended that the defendant bargained for the detriment that she suffered by arguing that, by obtaining plaintiff's signature, the three associates obtained the needed financing for the conveyance of the apartment, and that this was a consideration that would support the note from the defendant on the basis that it was the alter ego of the associates. However, the court found that the evidence affirmatively showed that the interests in the partnership and the corporation were different, and that, moreover, since the purpose of the doctrine of disregarding the corporate entity was to prevent fraud, it could not be used to inflict an obligation on an innocent corporation or its minority shareholders (246 Cal. App. 2d 242, 260-261) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.69

§ 52.69 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--Judgment Not Binding on Individual Who Was Not Party to and Had No Control of Action

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

A JUDGMENT ENTERED AGAINST A CORPORATION DOES NOT BIND AN INDIVIDUAL ALLEGED TO BE THE CORPORATION'S ALTER EGO IF THAT INDIVIDUAL IS NOT A PARTY TO THE ACTION AGAINST THE CORPORATION AND DID NOT HAVE CONTROL OF THE LITIGATION.

A. Requirements for Binding Individual to Judgment. An individual who is sought to be held personally liable on a judgment rendered against a corporation cannot be held so liable without an opportunity to relitigate the issues of the corporation's liability ifthat individual (1) is not a party to the action against the corporation and (2) did not participate in the control of the action and was unable to determine whether or not an appeal should be taken from the adverse judgment against the corporation (Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 581, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 ; Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 176, 331 P.2d 1 ; NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 778-781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 ; Katzir's Floor and Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.com (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143, 1149-1150) .

B. Due Process Requirement. Use of the amendment procedure to add individuals summarily as judgment debtors would constitute a denial of due process of law if the individuals were never given the opportunity to litigate any question beyond their relationship to the corporation (Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 176, 331 P.2d 1).

C. Degree of Control Required. Amendment of a judgment against a corporation to include the alter ego as an additional judgment debtor is only appropriate when the alter ego in fact had control of the litigation, was virtually represented in the lawsuit, and individually or through a representative had occasion to conduct the litigation with a diligence corresponding to the risk of personal liability involved. Control of the litigation sufficient to overcome due process objections clearly contemplates some active defense of the underlying claim (NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 778-779, 781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441).

D. Similarity of Interests Required. In determining whether the alter ego had sufficient control of the litigation, the court should consider whether the corporate defendant's interests and those of the alter ego were so similar that the trial strategy of the corporate defendant effectively represented the interests of the alter ego. If their interests were so different that the corporation did not conduct the litigation with a diligence corresponding to the risk of personal liability involved for alter ego, amendment of the judgment to include the alter ego as judgment debtor is not proper (NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780-781, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

There points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion to amend a judgment rendered against a corporation to include as a judgment debtor the name of an individual who was the alter ego of the corporation. The ground of opposition is that the individual sought to be added as judgment debtor was not a party to the underlying litigation and did not have control of it. Paragraph A sets forth the basic rule regarding control of the underlying litigation, and Paragraphs B through D address particular aspects of the determination.

Counsel may wish to combine the points and authorities in this form with those from §§ 52.65-52.68 or 52.70 that address any other deficiency in the showing made in support of the motion to amend.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts and the points of law raised. For instance, counsel should point out whether the underlying action was contested or whether judgment was by default.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirements for Binding Individual to Judgment

The facts, procedural background, and portion of the opinion in Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 , discussing circumstances that would have established alter ego liability if decedent had controlled the initial litigation are discussed in § 52.62[3][a]. Although the Court found that the evidence was sufficient to support the application of the alter ego doctrine, the Court held that plaintiffs had failed to show that Cavaney, who was not a party to the action against Seminole, had control of the litigation leading to the judgment. Plaintiff's had not alleged or presented any evidence on the issue of Seminole's negligence or on the amount of damages sustained by plaintiffs, relying solely on the judgment against Seminole (56 Cal. 2d. 576, 581) . The Court held that the judgment in that action was therefore not binding on Cavaney unless he controlled the litigation leading to the judgment in support of this holding, the Court, quoting from Restatement, Judgments § 84, comment e, stated that in order for a person in control of the litigation to be bound by a judgment, it is necessary that that person, against whom the rules of res judicata operate, participate in the control of the action, and if the judgment is adverse, be able to determine whether or not an appeal should betaken. In this regard, it is not sufficient that the person supply the funds for the defense, that such person appear as a witness or cooperate without having control (56 Cal. 2d 576, 581) .

Petitioner in Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 331 P.2d 1 , sought a writ of mandate to compel respondent to proceed with a hearing on its petition for an order to show cause why its judgment against a corporate defendant should not be amended to add as additional judgment debtors three individuals alleged to be alter egos of the corporation. Respondent indicated its intention to dismiss the petition without a hearing on the ground that it lacked jurisdiction. The Supreme Court agreed (51 Cal. 2d 172, 176) .

Default judgment was entered against the corporation in 1953. The corporation filed bankruptcy shortly thereafter, and petitioner received about 20 percent of its judgment from the bankruptcy estate. In the course of the bankruptcy proceeding petitioner first learned of the alter ego relationships. In 1957, it brought the petition for amendment, relying on Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 60, 47 P.2d 530 (discussed in § 52.62[3][a]), and Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 429, 246 P.2d 1017 (discussed in § 52.62[3][b]). The Court distinguished those to cases, noting that in Mirabito the relationship of the two corporations had been explored at the original trial and that in both cases the defense had been conducted by attorneys who represented both corporations (51 Cal. 2d 172, 175) . Here, the individuals sought to be added as judgment debtors did not participate in the defense of the basic action against the corporation (51 Cal. 2d 172, 176) . To extend the use of the amendment procedure to add the individuals summarily as judgment debtors in this situation would constitute a denial of due process of law because those individuals would never have an opportunity to litigate any question beyond their relationship to the corporation. This difficulty could not be overcome by holding that the individuals should have intervened in the initial action, because they were under no duty to do so (51 Cal. 2d 172, 176) .

NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 is discussed in § 52.69[3][d].

The facts, procedural background, and portion of the opinion in Katzir's Floor and Home Design, Inc. v. M-MLS.com (9th Cir. 2004) 394 F.3d 1143 discussing alter ego are discussed in § 52.65[3][a]. With respect to protection of the individual appellant's interests in the underlying action, the court cited NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772 , discussed in § 52.69[3][d], to the effect that Code Civ. Proc. § 187 is an equitable procedure that binds new individual defendants if it can be demonstrated that in their capacity as alter ego of the corporation they in fact had control of the previous litigation and thus were virtually represented in the lawsuit. The purpose of the requirement is to protect the party's due process rights. Here, the district court failed to address this requirement as it applied to the individual appellant. He was not named individually, knew that the corporation was on the verge of dissolution, and had no personal duty to defend the underlying lawsuit. The Ninth Circuit held that the district court clearly erred in adding him to the judgment against the first corporation (394 F.3d 1143, 1150) .

[b] Due Process Requirement

Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 331 P.2d 1 is discussed in § 52.69[3][a].

Note that NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 (discussed in § 52.69[3][d]), contains the statement that control of the litigation sufficient to overcome due process objections clearly contemplates some active defense of the underlying claim (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781) .

[c] Degree of Control Required

NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 is discussed in § 52.69[3][d].

[d] Similarity of Interests Required

NEC Electronics Inc. v. Hurt (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 256 Cal. Rptr. 441 , involved a successful plaintiff's motion after trial to amend its judgment against a corporation to include defendant, the corporation's sole shareholder and chief executive officer, as an additional judgment debtor. When the suit was filed, the corporation answered by filing a general denial. Defendant corporation was on the verge of bankruptcy and turned its efforts to negotiating with plaintiff and other creditors to avoid bankruptcy or to agree on a plan for a Chapter 11 reorganization. The individual defendant was represented as willing to invest $1.5 million of personal funds to the proposed plan. Two days before the case was to go to trial, plaintiff wrote counsel for the corporate defendant that it was rejecting the proposed plan, that it intended to prosecute its action to conclusion and to analyze carefully its rights against the individual defendant and other entities, and that it was willing to settle its claim for $80,000 or approximately half of its claim. The day before the trial, corporate counsel informed plaintiff that the corporate defendant would not appear at trial. The individual defendant did not appear either, and judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff and against the corporate defendant. The corporate defendant filed bankruptcy less than two months later. In the course of the bankruptcy proceeding, plaintiff deposed the individual defendant and the corporate defendant's chief financial officer. Six months later, plaintiff moved to amend the judgment. The motion was granted. The individualdefendant appealed on the grounds that he was not the alter ego of the corporation, that he did not control the litigation, and that plaintiff knew of his relationship with the corporate defendant when it commenced the underlying action and was therefore estopped to add the individual defendant at so late a stage of the proceeding

The court of appeal reversed. The court first set forth the two requirements for imposition of alter ego liability: (1) there must be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist; and (2) it must be demonstrated that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777) . Here, the court said, there was ample evidence to support both the unity of interest and equitable findings necessary to establish that the individual defendant was the alter ego of the corporate defendant (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777) . Defendant had taken approximately $2.8 million in undocumented loans and advances from the corporation and had paid personal expenses, such as 30 monthly mortgage payments, with corporate funds. Defendant had also paid corporate expenses and debts with personal funds and advanced $375,000 for the reorganization plan (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 777-778) .

On the issue of control of the litigation, citing Ballentine & Sterling, California Corporation Laws, § 299.04 (Matthew Bender), and Rest. 2d, Judgments, § 59, the court said the procedure of amending the judgment to include the alter ego as an additional judgment debtor is only appropriate when the individual defendant in fact had control of the litigation, was virtually represented in the lawsuit, and individually or through a representative had occasion to conduct the litigation with a diligence corresponding to the risk of personal liability involved (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 778-779) . The court then reviewed and compared the evidence of control involved in Motores De Mexicali v. Superior Court (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 172, 176, 331 P.2d 1 (discussed in § 52.69[3][a]); Dow Jones Co. v. Avenel (1984) 151 Cal. App. 3d 144, 150, 198 Cal. Rptr. 457 (discussed in § 52.62[3][a]); Jack Farenbaugh & Son v. Belmont Construction, Inc. (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1023, 1031, 240 Cal. Rptr. 78 (discussed in § 52.62[3][a]); and Mirabito v. San Francisco Dairy Co. (1935) 8 Cal. App. 2d 54, 60, 47 P.2d 530 (discussed in § 52.62[3][a]) (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 779-780) . The court pointed out that in Dow Jones, Farenbaugh, and Mirabito the underlying actions were contested and therefore the alter ego's interests were effectively represented by the defense presented by the corporation (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780) . Citing Minton v. Cavaney (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 576, 581, 15 Cal. Rptr. 641, 364 P.2d 473 (discussed in § 52.69[3][a]), the court pointed out that control of the litigation sufficient to overcome due process objections clearly contemplates some active defense of the underlying claim (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781) . In contrast, in Motores, the judgment was obtained by default, and the court stressed the fact that the alter ego's interests were not represented in the underlying action (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780) . The Motores court also emphasized that adding the alter egos as additional judgment debtors would violate late due process. This court of appeal said that Motores controlled here. The corporate defendant did not appear at trial and did not make any attempt to defend the lawsuit. As a consequence, the alter ego's interests were not represented (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780) .

In addition, in this case the corporate defendant's interests and those of the alter ego were not the same. The corporate defendant had a defense, but did not pursue it because it planned to file bankruptcy. This is in contrast to the usual situation in which the interests of the corporate defendant and the alter ego are so similar that the trial strategy of the corporate defendant effectively represents the interests of the alter ego. Plaintiff's argument that the alter ego had an opportunity to defend ignores the reality that the alter ego was not named as a defendant, had no risk of personal liability, and therefore was not required to intervene (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 780) . Because their interests were so different, the court said it could not conclude that the alter ego had occasion to conduct the litigation with a diligence corresponding to the risk of personal liability involved or that he was virtually represented in the lawsuit (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781) . Nor was there sufficient evidence that the alter ego controlled the litigation. The individual defendant's efforts to avoid bankruptcy and his knowledge of the underlying action did not constitute control of the defense (208 Cal. App. 3d 772, 781) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirements for Binding Individual to Judgment

Plaintiff in Silverman v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 152, 249 Cal. Rptr. 724 , brought a second action, entitled "Complaint for Money Due on Judgment and Alter Ego," against the shareholder of the corporation that was the only defendant in the first action. The shareholder, a Nevada resident, was served while in California to attend a mandatory settlement conference in a difference action, and sought a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to grant his motion to quash service of that summons. The court of appeal affirmed the validity of service. In discussing why the superior court could deny the motion to quash service after having denied the motion to amend the judgment in the first action to include the shareholder as judgment debtor, the court of appeal noted that the postjudgment motion required a factual determination not required for resolution of the validity of service, namely a finding that plaintiff show that the shareholder controlled the underlying litigation (203 Cal. App. 3d 145, 152) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.70

§ 52.70 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Grounds That Individual Was Alter Ego of Corporate Defendant--No Showing of Due Diligence in Seeking Amendment

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

IT IS AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION TO AMEND A JUDGMENT AGAINST A CORPORATION TO INCLUDE AN ALTER EGO AS AN ADDITIONAL JUDGMENT DEBTOR WHEN THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT THE PLAINTIFF ACTED WITH DUE DILIGENCE TO SEEK THE AMENDMENT AFTER FIRST LEARNING OF THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE CORPORATION AND THE ALTER EGO.

Due Diligence Required. A decision to permit amendment of a judgment under Code of Civil Procedure Section 187 rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, but the alter ego doctrine is an equitable one, and equitable relief will not ordinarily be granted to one who has failed to act diligently in accordance with known facts. Thus, allowance of the amendment without any explanation for a delay in moving for the amendment is an abuse of discretion (Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47-49, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to amend a judgment against a corporation to include an alter ego as an additional judgment debtor when there is no showing that the judgment creditor acted with due diligence to seek the amendment after learning the facts of the relationship between the corporation and the alter ego. The case relied on in the form may also be authority for the contention that plaintiff is required to show attempts to satisfy the judgment against the corporation [see Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48-49, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377] .

Counsel may wish to combine the points and authorities in this form with those from § 52.66 that address specific facts of lack of diligence. Counsel may also wish to combine the points and authorities in the foregoing form with those from §§ 52.65 and 52.67-52.69 that raise some other deficiency in the showing made in support of the motion to amend.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should point out when plaintiff first knew of the relationship and that no attempts to seek the amendment were made for some time.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Due Diligence Required

Alexander v. Abbey of the Chimes (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 163 Cal. Rptr. 377 , involved a successful plaintiff's motion after trial to amend two judgments against a corporation to include the corporation's sole shareholder as an additional judgment debtor. The obligations on which the original judgments were based were incurred before the alleged alter ego became a shareholder of the corporate defendant. In 1969, during the pendency of the underlying actions, the alleged alter ego sold all of the corporate assets to another corporation, which agreed to assume all liabilities of the corporate defendant. The agreement made specific reference to the pending litigation and required the buyer to pay any judgments entered. The judgments were entered in February, 1971. There was no evidence of any attempt by plaintiff to satisfy the judgments against the corporate defendant or the buyer. However, in December, 1977, plaintiff moved to amend the judgments to include the former sole shareholder as an additional judgment debtor. The motion was granted. The alleged alter ego appealed, contending that he had insufficient control of the initial litigation and that plaintiff had failed to establish grounds for disregarding the corporate entity.

The court of appeal reversed. Although he was not the trial attorney, the alleged alter ego had discussed the underlying litigation with plaintiff's attorney in his capacity as attorney for the corporate defendant, and had been kept fully informed by defendant's trial counsel. Thus, the court of appeal concluded that the alleged alter ego had sufficient opportunity to control the underlying litigation (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 46) . Generally speaking, the court said, there are two requirements for disregarding the corporate entity: (1) that there be such unity of interest and ownership that the separate personalities of the corporation and the individual no longer exist and (2) that, if the acts are treated as those of the corporation alone, an inequitable result will follow (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 46-47) . The court of appeal concluded that there was sufficient evidence to establish both the unity of interest and the fact that an inequitable result would follow if the corporate entity were not disregarded (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47) . However, the court of appeal held that plaintiff's failure to act with due diligence required reversal of the amendment (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47-49) . The court pointed out that a decision to permit amendment of a judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 187 rests in the sound discretion of the trial court, and in this case, that discretion was abused (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 47) . To justify the addition of new defendants, the plaintiff must have acted withdue diligence. In this case, there was no explanation for the almost seven-year delay in filing the motion. There was no suggestion that plaintiff ever made any attempt to satisfy the judgment; nor was there any suggestion that plaintiffs were unaware of the alter ego's connection with the corporation at the time the complaints were filed or the matters tried (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48) . The application of the alter ego doctrine is equitable, and equitable relief ordinarily will not be granted to one who has failed to act diligently in accordance with known facts. The court contrasted this situation with the one in Thomson v. L. C. Roney & Co. (1952) 112 Cal. App. 2d 420, 246 P.2d 1017 (discussed in § 52.62[3][b]), in which the plaintiff did not discover the alter ego relationship until two years after the litigation (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48) . In the absence of any explanation for the delay in moving for the amendment, the trial abused its discretion in granting the amendment (104 Cal. App. 3d 39, 48-49) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.71-52.79

[Reserved]

§§ 52.71[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.80

§ 52.80 Opposing Motion to Amend Judgment on Ground That Corporation Was Alter Ego of Shareholder-Defendant--Outside Reverse Piercing of Corporate Veil Is Not Recognized in California

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.65.]

IT IS AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION TO AMEND A JUDGMENT AGAINST A SHAREHOLDER OF A CORPORATION TO INCLUDE THE CORPORATION AS AN ADDITIONAL JUDGMENT DEBTOR, WHEN THE PLAINTIFF IS A THIRD-PARTY JUDGMENT CREDITOR AND THE MOTION IS BASED ON THE DOCTRINE OF OUTSIDE REVERSE PIERCING OF THE CORPORATE VEIL.

Outside Reverse Piercing Not Recognized. In California, a third-party judgment creditor of a shareholder may not pierce the corporate veil to reach corporate assets in order to satisfy the shareholder's liability. The theory of outside reverse piercing (or third-party piercing) of the corporate veil, by which the corporate veil is pierced to permit a third-party judgment creditor to reach corporate assets to satisfy claims against a shareholder, is not recognized in California (Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Kaswa Corp. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1513, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to amend a judgment against a shareholder of a corporation, so as to include the corporation as an additional judgment debtor, when the plaintiff is a third-party judgment creditor--that is, the plaintiff has a judgment against a shareholder on a claim unrelated to the corporation--and the motion is based on the doctrine of outside reverse piercing of the corporate veil.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should point out that the plaintiff is a third-party judgment creditor whose judgment is based on a claim that is unrelated to the corporation.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outside Reverse Piercing Not Recognized

In Postal Instant Press, Inc. v. Kaswa Corp. (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 77 Cal. Rptr. 3d 96 , the plaintiff obtained a judgment enforcing an arbitration award against an individual who had been the plaintiff's franchisee and had lost an arbitrated dispute under the franchise agreement. The defendant had formed a corporation and used it to operate the business, but legally the corporation was a bystander, since the franchise agreement had not been amended to add the corporation as a franchisee. The corporation was thinly capitalized but had an apparent asset in the form of a contract claim based on a purported sale of the franchise assets by the corporation. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for amendment of the judgment to add the corporation as a judgment debtor, finding that the corporation was the defendant's alter ego at the time of entry of the judgment (although at the time the motion was granted, the defendant no longer controlled the corporation, which had been acquired in a merger).

The corporation appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. The alter ego doctrine traditionally is applied to pierce the corporate veil so that a shareholder may be held liable for the debts or conduct of the corporation. Some courts recognize that the corporate veil may be pierced in reverse so that a corporation may be held liable for the debts or conduct of a shareholder. The typical case involves a corporate insider, or someone claiming through such a person, attempting to pierce the corporate veil from within so that the corporate entity and the individual will be considered one and the same. This is sometimes called "inside reverse piercing." A variant of the reverse piercing theory, sometimes called "outside reverse piercing" (or third-party piercing), occurs when a third party, an outsider to the corporation, seeks to reach corporate assets to satisfy claims against an individual shareholder. The California Supreme Court has not spoken on the issue of outside reverse piercing of the corporate veil; therefore, whether to accept or reject the doctrine was an issue of first impression in California (162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1518) . After considering the positions taken in cases from other jurisdictions, the court of appeal concluded, "We agree with the sound reasoning and analysis of the cases rejecting outside reverse piercing of the corporate veil. ... As those cases explain, outside reverse piercing is a radical and problematic change in standard alter ego law" (162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1519, 1521) . "The true issue that outside reverse piercing seeks to address is not the misuse of the corporate form to shield the shareholder from personal liability. Rather, the issue addressed by outside reverse piercing is the shareholder's transfer of personal assets to the corporation to shield the assets from collection by a creditor of the shareholder. In other words, outside reverse piercing seeks to protect the judgment creditor from the shareholder's fraudulent transfer of assets to the corporation. But, as explained in ... [some of the cases], conversion and fraudulent conveyance already afford judgment creditors protection in that situation. Outside reverse piercing, accomplished by the expedient means of a postjudgment motion, is an unacceptable shortcut to pursue those remedies" (162 Cal. App. 4th 1510, 1523) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. DISREGARDING THE CORPORATE ENTITY

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.81-52.89

[Reserved]

§§ 52.81[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.90

§ 52.90 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] Enforcing Legal Right--By Shareholder--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
vs.	)	FOR WRIT OF MANDATE
_____ [name(s) of corporation(s) or person(s)],	)	Date: _____
Respondent(s).	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

SINCE THERE IS NO ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW, A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD BE ISSUED TO ENFORCE A SHAREHOLDER'S LEGAL RIGHTS.

A. Legal Remedy Inadequate. A writ of mandate must be issued in all cases where there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1086).

B. Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce A Legal Right. A petition for writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to be sought by a shareholder seeking to enforce a statutory right against a corporation (Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 625-628, 67 P. 1050).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a shareholder to exercise his or her legal rights. This form may be used if there is no specific form [see §§ 52.91 -52.94] which may be used to support a shareholder's legal right against the corporation of which he or she is a shareholder. Argument should be included which included which indicates the legal rights which the shareholder is seeking to enforce and the facts which necessitate resort to the courts to enforce the shareholder's rights.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

For a form for a petition for a writ of mandate to enforce a shareholder's right to inspect corporate records, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.70 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce a Legal Right

In Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 67 P. 1050 , a shareholder in a corporation, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant, the secretary of the corporation, to permit him to inspect the books, records, and journals of the corporation as was his right as a shareholder under the statute then enacted. The Supreme Court granted the shareholder's petition, stating that mandamus is the appropriate remedy of a stockholder in a situation where his exercise of a statutory right had been refused. The Court reasoned that as a stockholder, the petitioner was interested in all the affairs and the management of the corporation since he was, in one sense, part owner of the assets. An action at law for damages would not be a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Such an action could be delayed until judgment obtained in the action could not be enforced. The Court stated that the very information sought by the stockholder and withheld from him by the corporation might be the basis of an action for damages.

It should be noted that in the foregoing situation, the applicable laws did not require a shareholder to show a reasonable purpose in his or her petition; the present Corporations Code section with respect to the inspection rights of a shareholder does require such a showing [see Corp. Code § 1601].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.91

§ 52.91 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Open Its Books, Records, and Minutes for Inspection--By Shareholder [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.90.]

A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD BE ISSUED TO ORDER A CORPORATION TO OPEN ITS BOOKS, RECORDS, AND MINUTES FOR INSPECTION BY A SHAREHOLDER EXERCISING HIS/HER LEGAL RIGHT FOR A REASONABLE PURPOSE.

A. Shareholder's Inspection Rights. The accounting books, records, and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, board, and committees of the board of any domestic corporation, and of any foreign corporation keeping any such records in this state, or having its principal executive office in this state, must be open to inspection upon the written demand on the corporation by any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate. The inspection should take place at any reasonable time during usual business hours and it should be for a purpose reasonably related to the holder's interest as a shareholder or as the holder of a voting trust certificate (Corp. Code § 1601(a)).

B. Action to Enforce Right of Inspection. On the refusal of a lawful demand for inspection, the superior court of the proper county may enforce the right of inspection with just and proper conditions or may, for good cause shown, appoint one or more competent inspectors or accountants to audit the books and records kept in California and investigate the property, funds, and affairs of any domestic corporation or any foreign corporation keeping records in California and of any subsidiary corporation thereof, domestic or foreign, keeping records in California and to report thereon in such manner as the court may direct (Corp. Code § 1603(a)).

C. Mandamus as Enforcing Legal Right. A petition for a writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to be sought by a shareholder seeking to enforce a statutory right against a corporation (Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 625-628, 67 P. 1050).

[Optional] D. Inspection of Corporate Subsidiaries. The right of inspection created in Corporations Code Section

1601(a) extends to the records of each subsidiary of a corporation subject to that section (Corp. Code § 1601(a)).

[Optional] E. Inspection in Person or by Agent. The inspection by a shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate may be made in person or by an agent or attorney (Corp. Code § 1601(b)).

[Optional] F. Right to Copy and Make Extracts. The right of inspection includes the right to copy and make extracts (Corp. Code § 1601(b)).

[Optional] G. Nominally Foreign Corporations Is Subject to Shareholder's Inspection Rights. Shareholder's inspection rights may be asserted against any nominally foreign corporation which meets the requirements set forth in Corporations Code Section 2115(a) or upon the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that such tests have been met (Corp. Code §§ 2115(b), (d)).

[Optional] H. Establishment of Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose. A shareholder's demand to inspect corporate books and records in order to determine the reasons for the disparity in value between the published annual report of the corporation and the market price of the outstanding shares is a purpose reasonably related to the shareholder's interest (Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496-497, 54 P.2d 535 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] I. Effect of Majority Shareholders on Policy Is Reasonable Purpose. An inspection of corporate books and records in order to determine whether the outstanding stock is held by a few majority shareholders who dictate accounting policies is a reasonable purpose for a shareholder inspection (Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496-497, 54 P.2d 535 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] J. Directors Unfriendly to Minority Shareholders Is Reasonable Purpose. An inspection of corporate books, records, and minutes in order to determine if the relations of the directors are against the interests of the minority shareholders is a reasonable purpose for a shareholder inspection (Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496-497, 54 P.2d 535 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] K. Ascertaining Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose. An inspection of corporate books, records, and minutes in order to determine the present value of a stockholder's shares is a reasonable purpose for a shareholder inspection (Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 496-497, 54 P.2d 535 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] L. Investigation To Determine Validity of Shareholder Records Is Reasonable Purpose. Shareholder's allegation that inspection of corporate records is for purpose of ascertaining whether the stockholders of record are the real stockholders and whether the corporation is paying dividends to bona fide stockholders are purposes reasonably related to interests as a shareholder (Gilmore v. Emsco Derrick & Equip. Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 64, 65-67, 70 P.2d 251 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] M. Beneficial Interest Is Unnecessary for Registered Shareholder. One may be a bona fide shareholder without owning any beneficial interest in the shares and, thus, be entitled to exercise the shareholder's rights of inspection (Webster v. Bartlett Estate Co. (1917) 35 Cal. App. 283, 284-287, 169 P. 702).

[Optional] N. Inspection of Books of Successor Corporation. In certain situations where there may be a breach of the trust relationship between shareholders and officers of a corporation which is a successor to one in which the shareholders held an interest, the right to inspect the books, records, and minutes derived from the first corporation may extend to similar documents of the second corporation (Austin v. Turrentine (1930) 30 Cal. App. 2d 750, 763-765, 87 P.2d 72 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a shareholder to exercise his or her statutory rights to inspect the books, records, and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders and the board and committees of the corporation.

It should be noted that Corp. Code § 1603(a), set forth in Paragraph B of the form, does not specify whether the suit to enforce the right of inspection is a civil action or a special proceeding of a civil nature, such as a mandate proceeding. Under the predecessor section to Corp. Code § 1603(a), Civ. Code § 355, the right was enforced by a writ of mandate. Since Corp. Code § 1603(a) does not evidence any legislative intent to change the remedy used to enforce the right, it would appear that the writ of mandate remains the appropriate remedy for doing so.

Counsel should insert a statement of the particular facts indicating when and how the corporation or its officers have denied the shareholder access to the documents, thus necessitating a resort to the courts for a writ of mandate, and the reasonable purpose for which the shareholder is seeking an inspection.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For a form for a petition for a writ of mandate to enforce a shareholder's right to inspect corporate records, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.70 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus as Enforcing Legal Right

In Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 67 P. 1050 , a shareholder in a corporation, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant the secretary of the corporation, to permit him to inspect the books, records, and journals of the corporation as was his right as a shareholder under the statute then enacted. The Supreme Court granted the shareholder's petition, stating that mandamus is the appropriate remedy of a stockholder in a situation where his exercise of a statutory right had been refused. The Court reasoned that, as a stockholder, the petitioner was interested in all the affairs and the management of the corporation since he was, in one sense, part owner of the assets. An action at law for damages would not be a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Such an action could be delayed until judgment obtained in the action could not be enforced. The Court stated that the very information sought by the stockholder and withheld from him by the corporation might be the basis of an action for damages.

In the above situation, the applicable laws did not require a shareholder to show a reasonable purpose in his or her petition; the present Corporations Code section requires such a showing [see Corp. Code § 1601].

[b] Shareholder's Inspection Rights

In Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 54 P.2d 535 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601] a shareholder petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit him to examine the records of a corporation. He alleged four reasons as to why he wished to see the books: (1) to determine the reasons for the disparity in value between the published annual report of the corporation and the market value or price of the outstanding stock; (2) to determine whether the outstanding stock was held by a few majority shareholders who dictated the accounting policies; (3) to determine whether the relation of the directors was against the interests of the minority shareholders; and (4) to ascertain the present value of the stock owned by the petitioner. The corporation demurred and raised four points that it claimed the petitioner had failed to allege: (1) that his rights as a shareholder were likely to be seriously prejudiced; (2) that the application did not have the marks of a fishing expedition; (3) that a bona fide dispute existed between the parties; and (4) that the purposes set forth were "reasonably related to his interests as a shareholder," as set forth in former Corp. Code § 355 [see now Corp. Code § 1601(a)]. The court of appeal stated that the four points raised by the corporation were not meritorious. It pointed out that the statute [former Civ. Code § 355] did not require the shareholder to meet any of the requirements that the corporation sought to impose in its first three points, and any statement that the purposes of the inspection were "reasonable" would be a conclusion of law and unnecessary since any of the four purposes given would have been reasonable for an inspection.

[c] Establishment of Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose

A discussion of this point is made in a discussion of Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 54 P.2d 535 , under § 52.91[3][b].

[d] Effect of Majority Shareholders on Policy Is Reasonable Purpose

A discussion of this point is made in a discussion of Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 54 P.2d 535 , under § 52.91[3][b].

[e] Directors Unfriendly to Minority Shareholders Is Reasonable Purpose

A discussion of this point is made in a discussion of Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 54 P.2d 535 , under § 52.91[3][b].

[f] Ascertaining Value of Stock Is Reasonable Purpose

A discussion of this point is made in a discussion of Private Investors v. Homestake Mining Co. (1936) 11 Cal. App. 2d 488, 54 P.2d 535 , under § 52.91[3][b].

[g] Investigation to Determine Validity of Shareholder Records Is Reasonable Purpose

In Gilmore v. Emsco Derrick & Equip. Co. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 64, 70 P.2d 251 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601], the plaintiff-shareholder petitioned for an order directing the defendant officers of the defendant corporation to permit her to inspect and make extracts of the records of the corporation. The corporation's secretary had furnished her with the names of the seven directors of the company and their respective shareholdings, but refused to permit her to see the corporate records. The corporation alleged that the petitioner was not requesting an inspection for a purpose reasonably related to her interests as a shareholder, but for the purpose of procuring the names of the shareholders and other information concerning the corporation with the design of harassing and causing serious detriment to the corporation. At the trial, the petitioner testified that the directors of the defendant corporation were also directors of an eastern corporation against which there were federal indictments and which had problems regarding shareholders of record not being bona fide. She alleged that she wanted to inspect the corporate records in order to ascertain whether the stockholders of record were the real stockholders and whether the defendant corporation was paying dividends to bona fide holders. She also testified that she had not been asked to obtain the information for anyone else nor had she ever investigated the corporation or its directors, and that her purchase of stock had been solely for investment purposes. The corporation's officer testified that he had refused to permit the petitioner to make the extracts because the petitioner was an investigator connected with a private detective agency and he had wanted to protect the privacy of the stockholders since he suspected ulterior motives. The lower court denied the petition. The court of appeal reversed the decisions stating that the shareholder had testified to a motive reasonably related to her interests as a shareholder. The mere suspicion as to her motives aroused in the mind of the officer, because of her connections with a detective agency, were insufficient grounds for denying the petition absent adequate facts establishing an ulterior motive.

[h] Beneficial Interest Is Unnecessary for Registered Shareholder

In Webster v. Bartlett Estate Co. (1917) 35 Cal. App. 283, 169 P. 702 , the petitioner's petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation in which she owned one share to permit her to inspect the books was denied by the trial court. The defendants had urged that the petitioner was not a bona fide shareholder, alleging that she had paid no consideration for the share, that she had received it solely for the purpose of qualifying as a director of the corporation, and that she had received the share from another shareholder to whom she had agreed to return the share in the event that she ceased to be a director of the corporation. The court of appeal reversed the decision of the trial court, stating that one may be a bona fide shareholder without owning any beneficial interest in the shares. Since the petitioner actually held the share of stock, and it was registered in her name on the corporate books, she had made herself vulnerable to the liabilities and obligations imposed on the registered owners of stock. Therefore, she should also be able to exercise concurrently the rights of ownership.

[i] Inspection of Books of Successor Corporation

In Austin v. Turrentine (1930) 30 Cal. App. 2d 750, 87 P.2d 72 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601], in connection with discovery proceedings, the plaintiff petitioned the court of appeal to issue a writ of mandate compelling the lower court to exercise its jurisdiction by issuing an order permitting the petitioner to inspect the books and records of the defendant corporation pursuant to a subpoena duces tecum. Petitioner alleged that he had contributed funds to a corporation formed to hold and develop oil leases. The corporation was incorporated in Nevada and petitioner had stock issued to him which had been held by one of the defendants for him. Subsequently, the defendants were alleged to have formed a new corporation in California bearing the same name as the Nevada corporation for the purpose of taking over the assets, responsibilities, and liabilities of the Nevada corporation. An application was made to the Corporations Commissioner for a permit to issue stock to all those who had held stock in the first corporation. Petitioner alleged that, in making the application, the defendants did not mention the interest of petitioner in the corporation, that he had never received stock in the new corporation, and had never received any monies or other profits from the oil leases which were profitable. The court of appeal issued the order, holding that under the allegations of the pleadings, a trust relationship had been created between petitioner and the officers of the corporation, and a breach of that trust relationship had occurred; therefore, the petitioner had a right to have produced for inspection the books, papers, records, and journals which might be material and pertinent. The court added that if a right existed as to the examination of the books of the first corporation formed in the instant case, then that same right, under the circumstances of the particular case, extended to the second corporation.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Shareholder's Inspection Rights

In Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 44 P.2d 629 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601], a shareholder's petition for a writ of mandate asked the lower court to compel a corporation in which he owned shares to permit him to examine its corporate records. He alleged as his purpose his belief that the corporate funds had been misused by the corporation's president so as to have a detrimental financial effect on the corporation. The corporation filed an answer alleging that the shareholder's true purpose for inspecting the records was to procure the names of other shareholders with a view to making a profit at the expense of the corporation. It alleged that the board of directors had announced a plan to repurchase certain outstanding shares and that the petitioner sought the names of the shareholders in order to purchase their options and then resell them to the corporation at an excessive price. The petitioner demurred to the answer and the lower court sustained his demurrer without leave to amend and issued the writ of mandate. The corporation appealed. The court of appeal stated that while the shareholder's alleged purpose was a reasonable purpose for inspection, the answer of the corporation had raised the issue of the true purpose of the shareholder's request. The order sustaining the demurrer and granting the writ was overturned and the case remained for a hearing or other proceeding to resolve the conflict in the allegations.

Schnabel v. Superior Court (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 704, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 200, 854 P.2d 1117 , involved the efforts of a 30-percent shareholder/employee of a closely held corporation to quash a subpoena duces tecum issued by his wife in their dissolution proceeding. The shares were community property. The Supreme Court upheld the subpoena in so far as it compelled the corporation to produce business records and corporate tax returns and quarterly payroll tax information regarding the husband, but reversed as to any payroll tax information identifying other persons (5 Cal. 4th 704, 723) . The Court held that whatever right the husband had to inspect records of the corporation, the wife also had, either indirectly, through her husband, or directly by means of third-party discovery. The wife's purpose in seeking the corporate records--to ascertain the value of the shares and the community's and husband's financial status--was related to her interest as a shareholder and therefore was proper under Corp. Code § 1601(a) (5 Cal. 4th 704, 715) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.92

§ 52.92 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of Corporate Property--By Shareholder

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.90.]

A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD BE ISSUED TO ORDER THE CORPORATION TO PERMIT INSPECTION OF THE CORPORATE PROPERTY BY A SHAREHOLDER EXERCISING HIS/HER LEGAL RIGHT FOR A REASONABLE PURPOSE.

A. Legal Remedy Inadequate. [See § 52.90, Paragraph A.]

B. Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right. A petition for a writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to be sought by a shareholder seeking to enforce a statutory right against a corporation (Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 625-628, 67 P. 1050).

C. Shareholder's Inspection Rights. The accounting books, records, and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders' board, and committees of the board of any domestic corporation, and of any foreign corporation keeping any such records in this state or having its principal executive office in this state, must be open to inspection upon the written demand on the corporation by any shareholder or holder of a voting trust certificate. The inspection should take place at any reasonable time during usual business hours and it should be for a purpose reasonably related to the holder's interest as a shareholder or as the holder of a voting trust certificate (Corp. Code § 1601(a)).

D. Right to Inspect Corporate Property. A stockholder who is entitled to inspect the records and books of a corporation is also entitled to an inspection of the corporate property to verify thestatements contained in the books (Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Mining Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 501-503, 129 P. 781).

[Optional] E. Nominally Foreign Corporations as Subject to Shareholder's Inspection Rights. Shareholder's inspection rights may be asserted against any nominally foreign corporation which meets the requirements set forth in Section 2115(a) of the Corporations Code or upon the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met (Corp. Code §§ 2115(b), (d)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a shareholder to exercise his or her legal right to inspect the corporate property.

Counsel should insert a statement of the particular facts indicating when and how the corporation or its officers have denied the shareholder the right to inspect the corporation's property, thus necessitating a resort to the courts for a writ of mandate, and the reasonable purpose for which the shareholder is seeking the inspection.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right

In Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 67 P. 1050 , a shareholder in a corporation, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant, the secretary of the corporation, to permit him to inspect the books, records, and journals of the corporation as was his right as a shareholder under the statute then enacted. The Supreme Court granted the shareholder's petition, stating that mandamus is the appropriate remedy of a stockholder in a situation where his exercise of a statutory right had been refused. The Court reasoned that, as a stockholder, the petitioner was interested in all the affairs and the management of the corporation since he was, in one sense, part owner of the assets. An action at law for damages would not be a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Such an action could be delayed until judgment obtained in the action could not be enforced. The Court stated that the very information sought by the stockholder and withheld from him by the corporation might be the basis of an action for damages.

It should be noted that, in the above situation, the applicable laws did not require a shareholder to show a reasonable purpose in his or her petition; the present Corporations Code section requires such a showing [see Corp. Code § 1601].

[b] Right to Inspect Corporate Property

In Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Mining Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 129 P. 781 , the plaintiff, a shareholder in a corporation of which the defendants were officers, petitioned the court for a writ of mandate ordering the board of directors to permit him to inspect the corporate property. The Supreme Court held that a shareholder had the right to inspect corporate property. It held that since a shareholder had the right to inspect the books of a corporation, he also had the right to inspect the property in order to ascertain that the condition and value of the property had not been concealed or misrepresented and that the property was well managed. The right to inspect the property gave a shareholder an opportunity to verify the statements on the books.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nominally Foreign Corporations as Subject to Shareholder's Inspection Rights

In Hobbs v. Tom Reed Gold Mining Co. (1913) 164 Cal. 497, 129 P. 781 (discussed in § 52.92[3][b]), a shareholder petitioned for a writ to mandate to order a corporation to permit him to inspect corporate property which was located out-of-state. The corporation had been incorporated in the state of Arizona but the principal place of business of the corporation was in California, all the directors and officers of the corporation resided and worked in California, and part of the corporation's business was conducted in the state. The Supreme Court granted the writ, reasoning that while it did not have jurisdiction over the corporate property and its management personnel since they were located out-of-state, it did have jurisdiction over the officers and directors of the corporation, and the corporation was, for many purposes, a resident of the state. Reasoning that any order permitting a shareholder inspection would emanate from this state rather than Arizona, the Court ordered the corporate officers to issue an order to the property managers permitting the shareholder to inspect the property.

This case should be used with caution since the case occurred before passage of the Corporations Code. Nevertheless, from the facts of the case, it appears that the foreign corporation may have met the tests set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(a) and, thus, would have been subject to the jurisdiction of the courts of this state.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.93

§ 52.93 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of Corporate Books, Records, Documents, and Properties--By Director [Corp. Code § 1602]

[1] FORM

A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD BE ISSUED TO ORDER A CORPORATION TO PERMIT AN INSPECTION OF ITS BOOKS, RECORDS, DOCUMENTS, AND PROPERTIES BY A DIRECTOR OF THE CORPORATION.

[Caption. See § 52.90.]

A. Legal Remedy Inadequate. [See § 52.90, Paragraph A.]

B. Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce A Legal Right. A petition for a writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to be sought by a shareholder seeking to enforce a statutory right against a corporation (Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 625-628, 67 P. 1050).

C. Director's Rights of Inspection. Every director has the absolute right at any reasonable time to inspect and copy all books, records, and documents of every kind and to inspect the physical properties of the corporation of which that person is a director (Corp. Code § 1602).

D. Restrictions on Director's Rights of Inspection. An imposition of restrictions on a director's absolute right of inspection should only be made in an egregious case (Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 915-916, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813).

[Optional] E. Rights of Inspection Extend to Corporate Subsidiaries. The rights of a director to inspect corporate books, records, and documents and the physical properties of the corporation also extend to a corporation's subsidiary corporations, whether domestic or foreign (Corp. Code § 1602).

[Optional] F. Right to Make Copies. The rights of inspection granted a director in Corp. Code § 1602 also include the right to copy and make extracts (Corp. Code § 1602).

[Optional] G. Right Extended to Foreign Corporations. The rights of inspection given a director by Corp. Code § 1602 also apply to the director of any foreign corporation having its principal executive office in this state or customarily holding meetings of its board in this state (Corp. Code § 1602).

[Optional] H. Nominally Foreign Corporations. Directors' inspection rights may be asserted against any nominally foreign corporation which meets the requirements set forth in Corp. Code § 2115(a) or upon the entry of a final order by a court of competent jurisdiction declaring that those tests have been met (Corp. Code §§ 2115(b),(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a director to exercise his or her statutory rights to inspect the books, records, and other documents, and the physical properties of a corporation.

Corp. Code §§ 1602 and 2115 both refer to the applicability of inspection-rights provisions. These two sections operate concurrently, however, as each establishes a separate and distinct test for determining whether a foreign corporation must comply with Corp. Code § 1602 [Havlicek v. Coast-to-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1853-1854, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696] .

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case; for example, when or how the director is being frustrated in his or her attempts to exercise a director's statutory rights, therefore necessitating a petition for a writ of mandate.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

For an allegation by a director to enforce the right to inspect corporate records, see California Forms of Pleading & Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports, § 165.76 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate Remedy to Enforce A Legal Right

In Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 67 P. 1050 , a shareholder in a corporation, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant, the secretary of the corporation, to permit him to inspect the books, records, and journals of the corporation as was his right as a shareholder under the statute then enacted. The Supreme Court granted the shareholder's petition, stating that mandamus is the appropriate remedy of a stockholder in a situation where his exercise of a statutory right had been refused. The Court reasoned that, as a stockholder, the petitioner was interested in all the affairs and the management of the corporation since he was, in one sense, part owner of the assets. An action at law for damages would not be a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Such an action could be delayed until judgment obtained in the action could not be enforced. The Court stated that the very information sought by the stockholder and withheld from him by the corporation might be the basis of an action for damages.

In the above situation, the applicable laws did not require a shareholder to show a reasonable purpose in his or her petition; the present Corporations Code section requires such a showing [see Corp. Code § 1601].

[b] Restrictions on Director's Rights of Inspection

In Saline v. Superior Court (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 122 Cal. Rptr. 2d 813 , a director who was denied access to corporate documents brought an action to enforce his inspection rights. The trial court issued an order requiring the corporation to allow inspection, but imposing a restriction that prohibited the director from disclosing or discussing the corporate documents with anyone other than his counsel or the board members. The director sought a writ of mandate challenging the condition. The court of appeal reviewed the language of Corp. Code § 1602 providing for inspection rights, and also the holding in Havlicek v. Coast-to-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1855-1856, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696 , discussed in § 52.93[4][b], that a court could place "just and proper" restrictions on access to corporate records. The court of appeal agreed with the Havlicek court that in an egregious case, restrictions may be appropriate. To establish the propriety of restrictions, however, the corporation must demonstrate by evidentiary showing that a protective order is necessary to prevent a tort against the corporation. In this case, however, the corporation did not produce evidence that the director intended to use the documents for anything but a proxy fight with the corporation's management. Without evidence that the director intended to use the documents sought to commit a tort against the corporation, the trial court improperly limited the director's access to corporate documents. While the court of appeal agreed with the principle set forth in Havlicek, it stated that it should only be applied in extreme circumstances where a preponderance of the evidence establishes a director's clear intent to use the documents to commit an egregious tort--one that cannot be easily remedied by subsequent monetary damages--against the corporation (100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 914-915) . The court of appeal therefore directed the superior court to vacate its order limiting the director's access to corporate records and his speech regarding those records, and to enter a new and different order directing the corporation to provide him complete access to the records in accordance with Corp. Code § 1602 (100 Cal. App. 4th 909, 916) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Director's Rights of Inspection

In NFL Properties Inc. v. Superior Court (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 893 , the Oakland Raiders football club sued the NFL, National Football League Properties, Inc. (NFLP), and others, alleging that NFL management's wrongful control of the NFL entities resulted in a breach of fiduciary duty and adverse treatment of the Raiders. During litigation, a discovery dispute arose over the Raiders' right to inspect the corporate documents of NFLP, which were protected by the attorney-client privilege. The superior court ordered NFLP to produce its privileged documents to the Raiders on the grounds that the club had a director's right of inspection. NFLP objected to the order and filed a petition for writ of mandate, arguing that the Raiders club was a shareholder that does not have a right to inspect corporate documents which are protected by the attorney-client privilege. The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its discovery order compelling production of attorney-client privileged documents by NFLP. The court stated that the discovery dispute between NFLP and the Raiders could not be resolved by looking to a director's right to inspect corporate records, as no NFLP director was a party to this dispute. Although Corp. Code § 1602 grants a director an absolute right of inspection, the Raiders' representative on NFLP's board of directors was not asserting his own right as a director of NFLP to inspect corporate documents, but was acting as a representative of the Raiders its capacity as a shareholder of NFLP. He could not act as a director to request privileged corporate documents which he intended to pass on to a shareholder for use in litigation against the corporation, as that act would be inconsistent with his fiduciary duty to the corporation (65 Cal. App. 4th 100, 109-110) .

[b] Restrictions on Director's Rights of Inspection

In Tritek Telecom, Inc. v. Superior Court (2009) 169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 455 , an individual who was both a director and a substantial shareholder sued the corporation on a shareholder's claim for damages. Subsequently he filed a separate action to enforce his inspection rights as a director, with the intention of getting access to documents that had been generated in defense of his action against the corporation. The trial court issued the writ of mandate sought by the director-shareholder. The court of appeal directed the trial court to vacate its judgment and recall its writ, stating, "[Petitioner] filed this action to enforce his inspection rights as a director after he filed the shareholder action against [the corporation] ... in his individual capacity as a shareholder to vindicate his personal rights. Accordingly, [Petitioner] is not a disinterested director and the presumption of good faith does not apply. Additionally, enforcing [Petitioner]'s 'absolute' inspection rights in this case is problematic because it gives him access to documents he could not obtain via discovery in the shareholder action. [P] Although [Petitioner] is still a ... director, his filing of the shareholder action makes him [the corporation]'s adversary. [Petitioner] cannot take off his 'shareholder's hat' and swap it for his 'director's hat' and claim an absolute right to access all corporate documents. In this situation, a court may properly limit a director's inspection rights because the director's loyalties are divided and documents obtained by a director in his or her capacity as a director could be used to advance the director's personal interest in obtaining damages against the corporation. [P] Accordingly, we conclude that a corporate director does not have the right to access documents that are covered by the attorney-client privilege and were generated in defense of a suit for damages that the director filed against the corporation" (169 Cal. App. 4th 1385, 1391-1392) (citation omitted).

[c] Right Extended to Foreign Corporations

In Havlicek v. Coast-to-Coast Analytical Services, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 696 , directors of a Delaware corporation sought to inspect the corporation's books and records. The appellate court rejected the corporation's argument that because Corp. Code §§ 1602 and 2115 both refer to the applicability of inspection rights provisions, the corporation need not comply with Corp. Code § 1602 because it did not meet the test of § 2115 for the application of California law to a foreign corporation. The court held that each section establishes a separate and distinct test for determining whether a foreign corporation must comply with Corp. Code § 1602, and that the corporation met one such test and therefore must comply (39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1853-1854) . The court also rejected the corporation's argument that Corp. Code § 1602 violates the Commerce Clause or Full Faith and Credit Clause (39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1854-1855) . It concluded that the trial court could impose limitations on the directors' inspection rights under Corp. Code §§ 1602 and 2115 (39 Cal. App. 4th 1844, 1855-1856) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.94

§ 52.94 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--To Order Corporation to Permit Inspection of the Record of Shareholders--By Major Stockholder [Corp. Code § 1600(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.90.]

A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD BE ISSUED TO ORDER THE CORPORATION TO PERMIT INSPECTION OF THE RECORDS OF SHAREHOLDERS BY A SHAREHOLDER EXERCISING HIS/HER STATUTORY RIGHT UNDER CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 1600(a).

A. Legal Remedy Inadequate. [See § 52.90, Paragraph A.]

B. Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right. A petition for a writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to be sought by a shareholder seeking to enforce a statutory right against a corporation (Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 625-628, 67 P. 1050).

C. Inspection of Record of Shareholders. A shareholder or shareholders holding at least five percent of the aggregate of the outstanding voting shares of a corporation or who hold at least one percent of such voting shares and have filed Schedule 14A with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission, have absolute rights, on or before five business days after a written demand is received by the corporation or on the date specified in the demand, to: (1) inspect and copy the record of shareholders' names and addresses during usual business hours; or (2) obtain from the transfer agent for the corporation upon demand and upon the tender of its usual charge for such a list, a list of the shareholders' names and addresses who are entitled to vote for the election of directors and their shareholdings, as of the most recent record date for which the list has been compiled, or as of a date specified by the shareholder subsequent to the date of demand (Corp. Code § 1600(a)).

[Optional] D. Corporation as Responsible for Agent. A corporation has the responsibility of seeing that its transfer agent complies with Corporations Code Section 1600(a) (Corp. Code § 1600(a)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a shareholder to exercise his or her statutory right to examine the record of shareholders.

When appropriate, counsel should insert a statement of the particular facts indicating when and how the corporation or its officers have denied the shareholder the right to inspect the records.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

For forms for petitions for writs of mandate to enforce shareholder rights, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandamus Is Appropriate for Enforcing Legal Right

In Johnson v. Langdon (1902) 135 Cal. 624, 67 P. 1050 , a shareholder in a corporation, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the defendant, the secretary of the corporation, to permit him to inspect the books, records, and journals of the corporation as was his right as a shareholder under the statute then enacted. The Supreme Court granted the shareholder's petition, stating that mandamus is the appropriate remedy of a stockholder in a situation where his exercise of a statutory right had been refused (135 Cal. 624, 626) . The Court reasoned that, as a stockholder, the petitioner was interested in all the affairs and the management of the corporation since he was, in one sense, part owner of the assets. An action at law for damages would not be a plain, speedy, or adequate remedy. Such an action could be delayed until judgment obtained in the action could not be enforced. The Court stated that the very information sought by the stockholder and withheld from him by the corporation might be the basis of an action for damages (135 Cal. 624, 625-626) .

It should be noted that in this situation, the applicable laws did not require a shareholder to show a reasonable purpose in his or her petition; the present Corporations Code section does require such a showing [see Corp. Code § 1601].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inspection of Record of Shareholders

In Valtz v. Penta Investment Corp. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 803, 188 Cal. Rptr. 922 , a shareholder who owned more than five percent of the outstanding stock sought to obtain a list of the shareholders. The corporation had its sole executive office in California, although it was incorporated in Delaware, and it refused to permit the inspection on the ground that under Delaware law inspection was required only for a proper, investment-related use. The shareholder petitioned for a writ of mandate, which the corporation opposed on the ground that the application of Corp. Code §

1600 to a foreign corporation was unconstitutional in that it violated the full faith and credit clause of the federal Constitution.

The court of appeal held that Corp. Code § 1600 was applicable to a foreign corporation with its principal executive office in California (139 Cal. App. 3d 803, 810) . In deciding to apply California law to the corporation, the court relied on the limited nature of any interest of Delaware in the inspection of shareholder lists (an incident of stock ownership rather than an internal affair of the corporation) and on what the court perceived as California's considerable interest in preserving the rights of California shareholders to inspect shareholder lists (139 Cal. App. 3d 803, 807-808) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.95

§ 52.95 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Petitioner Is Not Registered Shareholder [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING PETITION FOR
vs.	)	WRIT OF MANDATE
_____ [name(s) of corporation(s) or person(s)],	)	Date: _____
Respondent(s).	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD NOT BE ISSUED SINCE PETITIONER IS NOT A REGISTERED SHAREHOLDER AND HAS NO LEGAL RIGHT TO SEE THE CORPORATE BOOKS, RECORDS, AND MINUTES.

A. Definition of Shareholder. A shareholder is a holder of record of shares (Corp. Code § 185).

B. Inspection Rights Available Only to Shareholders of Record. When a petition for a writ of mandate fails to allege that a petitioner is a shareholder of record, the petition does not allege a proper basis for issuing a writ of mandate since the Corporations Code provides that records of a corporation are open to inspection by a shareholder and a shareholder is defined as a holder of record of shares or a shareholder of record (Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 (decided under former Corp. Code § 3003, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] C. Inspection Rights Unassignable. Inspection rights are unassignable and a new shareholder must enforce his or her request for an inspection only in his or her own right and not by virtue of the rights claimed of the shareholder who assigned the share (Farrington v. Fairfield (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 237, 238-239, 16 Cal. Rptr. 119 (decided under former Corp. Code § 3003, see now Corp. Code § 1601).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate to compel a corporation to permit a shareholder to inspect its records. The memorandum alleges that the petitioner has no basis for his or her petition since the law permits only shareholders of record or holders of record to inspect the records, and the petitioner has failed to allege that he or she is a shareholder.

Counsel should insert any facts, which would further tend to disprove petitioner's claim to the statutory right.

If appropriate to the particular facts of a case, counsel may wish to include authority from § 52.182 regarding a shareholder's lack of standing after constructive surrender of his or her shares. Although the authority arose from an action for involuntary dissolution, it seems applicable to any situation in which shareholder status is required for standing.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For general forms for opposing a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports (Matthew Bender). For forms for opposing a writ of mandate to enforce a shareholder's right to inspect corporate records, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inspections Rights Available Only to Shareholders of Record

In Hagan v. Fairfield (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 7 Cal. Rptr. 248 [decided under former Corp. Code § 3003, see Corp. Code § 1601], petitioner sought a writ of mandate to compel the respondents to "recognize" an assignment of a share of stock to him by another shareholder; to record the assignment on the books of the corporation; to issue a new certificate showing the share in his name, and to permit him to examine the books and records. The petitioner's writ was denied by the lower court and he appealed solely on the denial of his petition to examine the corporate books and records. The court of appeal affirmed the order denying the petition, stating that the right of inspection was conferred only on a shareholder of record. Since the petitioner's petition did not allege that he was a shareholder of record, the petition did not allege a proper basis for issuing a writ of mandate (183 Cal. App. 2d 703, 706) .

[b] Inspection Rights Unassignable

In Farrington v. Fairfield (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 237, 16 Cal. Rptr. 119 [decided under former Corp. Code § 3003, see now Corp. Code § 1601], the petitioner appealed from an order denying his motion that he be substituted as petitioner in the place of another party in a mandamus proceeding. The other party, a registered shareholder of a corporation, had issued on his behalf a peremptory writ of mandate ordering a managing agent of the corporation to permit the shareholder to inspect the records and books of the corporation. Subsequently, the shareholder had assigned to the petitioner all his title and interest in the mandamus proceedings and his share in the corporation. The petitioner had then tried to have a court enforce the rights of the first shareholder for himself and was denied. The court of appeal affirmed the denial. It stated that the purpose of a writ was to enforce a clear legal right. Here, while the original shareholder had a right to inspect the corporate books, the assignment had changed the fact situation. The new shareholder could enforce his request only in his own right and not by virtue of the rights of another party (194 Cal. App. 2d 237, 238-239) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.96

§ 52.96 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Petitioner Does Not Have a Reasonable Purpose for Inspection [Corp. Code § 1601]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.95.]

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE SHOULD NOT BE ISSUED SINCE PETITIONER'S PURPOSE IN DEMANDING A RIGHT OF INSPECTION IS NOT REASONABLY RELATED TO HIS/HER INTERESTS AS A SHAREHOLDER.

A. Inspection for Reasonably Related Purpose. Corp. Code § 1601 gives a shareholder of a corporation the right to inspect the accounting books, records and minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, board, and committees for a purpose reasonably related to his or her interests (Corp. Code § 1601(a)).

B. Right of Inspection Limited. The provisions of the Corporations Code giving a shareholder the right of inspection does not confer the right to examine corporate records whenever the shareholder desires to do so, but limits the right to cases where the examination is for a purpose reasonably related to his or her interests as a shareholder (see Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 438-441, 44 P.2d 629 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

[Optional] C. Shareholders' Rights of Inspection Limited. While shareholders have some right to corporate information not available to the general public, shareholder status does not in and of itself entitle an individual to unfettered access to corporate confidences and secrets (Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 621-624, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253).

[Optional] D. Necessity of a Hearing as to Purpose. A conflict in the allegations as to the true purpose for a shareholder's demand to inspect corporate records necessitates a hearing on the facts (Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 438-441, 44 P.2d 629 (decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose a petition for a writ of mandate. It alleges that the shareholder should not have the writ issued since the statute specifically states that an inspection of corporate documents and records may be made only for a purpose reasonably related to the petitioner's interest as a shareholder, and the shareholder does not have such a reasonable interest.

Counsel should insert a statement of facts that would indicate the improper or unreasonable motive of the shareholder.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For general forms for opposing a petition for a writ of mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender). For forms for opposing a petition for a writ of mandate by a shareholder seeking to inspect corporate books, records, and minutes, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 165, Corporations: Corporate Records and Reports (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right of Inspection Limited

In Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 44 P.2d 629 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601], a shareholder's petition for a writ of mandate asked the lower court to compel a corporation in which he owned shares to permit him to examine its corporate records. He alleged as his purpose his belief that the corporate funds had been misused by the corporation's president to the financial detriment of the corporation. The corporation filed an answer alleging that the shareholder's true purpose for inspecting the records was to procure the names of other shareholders with a view to making a profit at the expense of the corporation. It alleged that the board of directors had announced a plan to repurchase certain outstanding shares and that the petitioner sought the names of the shareholders in order to purchase their options and then resell them to the corporation at an excessive price. The petitioner demurred to the answer and the lower court sustained his demurrer without leave to amend and issued the writ of mandate. The corporation appealed. The court of appeal stated that while the shareholder's alleged purpose was a reasonable purpose for inspection, the answer of the corporation had raised the issue of the true purpose of the shareholder's request. The order sustaining the demurrer and granting the writ was overturned and the case remanded for a hearing of other proceeding to resolve the conflict in the allegations (6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 438-441) .

[b] Shareholders' Rights of Inspection Limited

In Goldstein v. Lees (1975) 46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 120 Cal. Rptr. 253 [decided under former Corp. Code § 3003, see now Corp. Code § 1601], an attorney filed an amended complaint claiming money for services rendered to minority shareholders in a proxy fight with the majority shareholders of a corporation. The plaintiff-attorney also had been the corporate counsel to the corporation before leading the proxy fight for the minority shareholders. The plaintiff was denied any recovery by the court of appeals, which deemed that plaintiff had breached the attorney-client relationship between himself and the corporation in violation of the ethical rules by undertaking the fight for the minority shareholders. The court stated that, while shareholders have some right to corporate information not available to the general public, shareholder status does not in and of itself entitle an individual to unfettered access to corporate confidences and secrets. It noted that former Corp. Code § 3003 [see now Corp. Code § 1601] confined the shareholders' rights to the share register, the books of account, and the minutes of proceedings of the shareholders, the board of directors, and the executive committees. Thus, by statute, shareholders have less right to acquire information than do directors. The minority shareholders did not have a right to hear certain confidential information that the attorney might have revealed to them in the course of the proxy fight (46 Cal. App. 3d 614, 621-624) .

This case should be used with caution since, while the dicta of the court states that there are limits to a shareholder's right to have access to corporate secrets, the decision of the case was made on other grounds.

[c] Necessity of a Hearing as to Purpose

For discussion of Capron v. Pacific S.W. Discount Corp. (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 436, 44 P.2d 629 [decided under former Civ. Code § 355, see now Corp. Code § 1601], see § 52.96[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. CORPORATE RECORDS AND REPORTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.97-52.109

[Reserved]

§§ 52.97[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.110

§ 52.110 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Liability Created by Statute Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 359]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. The objection that an action is barred by a statute of limitations must be deemed to be included in the ground of demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

C. Statute of Limitations. The provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Sections 312 through 363 governing in general the time of commencement of civil actions do not affect actions against directors or stockholders of a corporation, to recover a penalty or forfeiture imposed, or to enforce a liability created by law; but such actions must be brought within three years after the discovery by the aggrieved party of the facts on which the penalty of forfeiture attached, or the liability was created (Code Civ. Proc. § 359).

D. When Action Must Be Brought. Actions against directors or shareholders of a corporation to enforce a liability created by law must be brought within three years of the time at which the liability was created. When the action is one to enforce a liability created by law rather than to recover a penalty or forfeiture, the time of discovery of the facts is not the time from which the statute begins to run, but rather the time at which the liability was created (Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 522, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981).

E. Creation of Liability. The liability is created by the consummation of the contract, art, or omission by which the liability is incurred, whatever the character of the liability. It may be absolute or contingent; it may be unconditional or limited; it may be presently enforceable by action, or there may be time given for its performance (Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 524-525, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981).

[Optional] F. Obtaining Judgment Against Corporation. A judgment obtained against the corporation does not create a new liability or extend the time prescribed by the statute for bringing suit against the shareholders or directors (Chambers v. Farnham (1920) 182 Cal. 191, 193-194, 187 P. 732).

[Optional] G. Illegal Distribution of Assets by Directors. The liability of directors to creditors under former Section 826 of the Corporations Code (now Corp. Code § 316(a)(2)) is a new liability, independent of the underlying debt or claim. It arises not when the creditor obtains judgment or when judgment becomes final, but when the directors distribute the assets of the corporation without making provision for payment of the creditor's claim and without having disclosed the existence of the claim as required. The act of distributing the assets, accompanied by the omission to disclose the claim, creates a contingent liability (Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 525, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 (decided under former Corp. Code § 826).

[Optional] H. Director's Negligence or Breach of Fiduciary Duty to Corporation. Actions against directors for negligence or breach of their fiduciary duty to the corporation involve liability created by law, specifically Section _____ [309 or, for nonprofit mutual benefit corporation, 7231] of the Corporations Code, and are subject to the three-year limitation set out in Section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953-954, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; but see Briano v. Rubio (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1175, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 (holding that Smith misapplied phrase "liability created by law" by concluding that if there was statutory basis for action, it automatically constituted "liability created by law," regardless of whether statute merely codified existing common law)).

[Optional] I. When Directors Liable for Failure to Cause Corporation to File Lawsuit. Directors' liability for failure to cause the corporation to commence timely litigation against a third party arises when the statute of limitations on the corporation's cause of action against the third party expires (Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953-954, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint (or, with slight modification of wording, a cross complaint), when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face thereof, or from a matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the action is barred by a statute of limitation.

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's motion for judgment on the pleading [see Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 261-265, 54 P.2d 13] , or a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; Graham v. Bank of Cal. (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 438, 439-444, 17

Cal. Rptr. 279] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of demurrer to a complaint based on the bar of a statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleadings and Practice, Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities in support of a demurrer on the ground that the complaint is barred by a statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense of bar of a statute of limitations was not, apparently, at issue either in the trial court or on appeal; but the Supreme Court noted that the bar of the statute of limitations is not specified in the Code of Civil Procedure as a ground of demurrer, and that objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

[b] When Action Must Be Brought

Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 was an action by a judgment creditor of a defunct corporation against the former directors to collect the debt represented by the judgment pursuant to former Corp. Code §§ 824 and 826 [now see Corp. Code § 316]. In the trial court, the judge ruled against the defendant directors' motion for summary judgment, finding that the directors knew of a pending suit against the corporation by the plaintiff creditor, that they did not determine that all known debts and liabilities had been paid or adequately provided for as required by statute, that no part of the judgment debt had been paid by the corporation or any of the defendants, and that plaintiff did not delay an unreasonable time in bringing the action. Judgment was for plaintiff and defendants appealed. On appeal, defendants raised the issue of the barring of the action by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 359. The Supreme Court held that, since this was not an action to recover a penalty or forfeiture, the time of discovery was not important in determining whether the statute had run. The inquiry was as to when the liability was created and whether this action had been brought within three years thereafter, excluding any period of time in which the statute of limitations was tolled. The Court held that the limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 359 commences when the liability is created and not when the cause of action accrues. That liability may be absolute or contingent; unconditional or limited; whatever its character, it is created by the consummation of the contract, act, or omission by which the liability is incurred. The Court found that in the case of distribution of corporate assets by the directors, the liability arose not when a judgment for the creditor came final, but when the directors distributed the assets of the corporation without making provisions for the payment of the creditor's claim and without disclosing the existence of the claim. However, the Court also held that the time before the appeal making plaintiff a judgment creditor was excluded from the period of limitation provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 359 because the statute was tolled during the time in which the appeal from the judgment making plaintiff a judgment creditor was pending. Plaintiff's action was, therefore, not barred by the statute.

It should be noted that the statute under which Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 was decided, former Corp. Code § 826, required plaintiff to be a judgment creditor of the corporation as a prerequisite to bringing an action against the directors of the corporation. Liability of the directors is now governed by

Corp. Code § 316. This section provides that suit may be brought in the name of the corporation to enforce liability against any or all directors liable by the judgment creditor whose claims arose prior to the corporate action, whether or not the creditor has reduced the claims to judgment [Corp. Code § 316(c)(2)]. The expiration of the limitation period set by Code Civ. Proc. § 359 for actions against directors for illegal distributions, assuming that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 will continue to be the applicable statute of limitations, will not then be tolled by the appeal of an action to establish the plaintiff as a judgment creditor, since being a judgment creditor will no longer be a prerequisite to bringing an action. Thus, it would appear that an action would have to be brought within three years from the illegal distribution without waiting for plaintiff to become a judgment creditor.

[c] Creation of Liability

Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 is discussed in § 52.110[3][b].

[d] Obtaining Judgment Against Corporation

Chambers v. Farnham (1920) 182 Cal. 191, 187 P. 732 was an action by the creditors of a corporation against the shareholders to enforce shareholder liability pursuant to former Calif Const, Art XII, § 3, for the debts of the corporation. The action was based on the liability of the corporation for damages for breach of a lease. The trial court found that the action was barred by the statute of limitations because it was not brought within three years of the execution of the lease. It is unclear how defendant raised the issue of the statute of limitations, but it appears to have done so by answer to the complaint. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal held that the action was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 359, because the action was not brought within three years of the execution of the lease, at which point the liability was created. The court rejected the contentions that the liability was created at the time of breach of the lease or at the time the judgment was obtained by the creditors against the corporation before proceeding with the action against the shareholders.

[e] Illegal Distribution of Assets by Directors

Hoover v. Galbraith (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 519, 102 Cal. Rptr. 733, 498 P.2d 981 is discussed in § 52.110[3][b].

[f] Director's Negligence or Breach of Fiduciary Duty to Corporation

Corp. Code § 309 is set forth in § 52.140[3][b].

Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 was a proceeding for writ of mandate arising out of an action by a homeowners' association, a nonprofit corporation, against its directors for negligence and breach of fiduciary duty. Plaintiff claimed the directors were negligent in failing to inquire and reasonably to investigate the cause of distress and damage to the common areas and failing to have the association file an action against the developer until more than ten years after notices of completion were filed for all the buildings in the complex. The last notice of completion was filed on April 4, 1974. The association did file an action against the developer on January 21, 1986, but the primary causes of action were barred by the 10-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15. The action against the directors was filed on April 27, 1987. One director moved for summary adjudication on the grounds that the action was conclusively barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 359 because it was not filed by April 4, 1987. After the trial court denied that motion, the director sought a writ of mandate requiring the trial court to vacate its order.

The court of appeal granted the writ and ordered the trial court to enter a new order granting the motion. The court of appeal said that "liability created by law" is liability that exists by virtue of an express statute but does not extend to actions arising under the common law. By its plain language, the three-year limitation of Code Civ. Proc. § 359 applies when there is a statutory basis for actions against directors, shareholders, or members of a corporation. The court said that when the Legislature enacted Corp. Code § 309 in 1975, they codified the standard of care for directors. Corp. Code § 309(c) precludes liability if the standard is met. The court set forth portions of the legislative committee comments to the effect that the purpose of the statute is to relieve a person from any liability by reason of being or having been a director of a corporation if that person has exercised his or her duties in the manner contemplated by Corp. Code § 309. By codifying the standard of care and precluding further liability, Corp. Code § 309 conveys the legislature's intent that any action by a beneficiary of the fiduciary relationship must necessarily flow from the statute (217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953) . The court noted that Corp. Code § 7231 makes the same standard applicable to nonprofit mutual benefit corporations (217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 953 n.3). The fiduciary duty is distinguished from the common law duty to third persons and is governed by the statute, not common law. Even though Corp. Code § 309 was not mentioned in the complaint, the action is based on the statutory standard, and thus is governed by the three-year limitation (2217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 954) .

Briano v. Rubio (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 was a derivative action by minority shareholders against the directors andmajority shareholders for violation of the articles of incorporation, negligence, and breach of fiduciary duty. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff, finding negligence, violation of the articles, and breach of the directors' fiduciary duty to the corporation and minority shareholders. Rubio, a director and one of the majority shareholders, appealed on the ground that the cause of action for breach of fiduciary duty was time-barred under Code Civ. Proc. § 359. The plaintiffs had filed the complaint in 1991. Rubio claimed that Corp. Code § 309, which set forth the standard for determining the personal liability of a director for breach of fiduciary duty, was the "liability created by law." He argued that the liability was created in 1978 or 1980, when the share purchase and board meeting at issue occurred, and thus the action was time-barred because the suit was filed more than three years later (46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1173) .

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was inapplicable (46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1169) . It concluded that Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 , discussed above, misapplied the phrase "liability created by law" by concluding that if there was a statutory basis for an action, it automatically constituted a "liability created by law," regardless of whether the statute merely codified existing common law. The court further concluded that the cases on which the Smith court relied did not support its conclusion (46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1175) . The court determined that Corp. Code § 309 did not create a new form of liability against directors of corporations but merely codified and refined existing law. Under Coombes v. Getz (1933) 217 Cal. 320, 18 P.2d 939 , therefore, Corp. Code § 309 does not constitute a "liability created by law," and consequently the limitation period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was inapplicable (46 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1179-1180) .

[g] When Directors Liable for Failure to Cause Corporation to File Lawsuit

Smith v. Superior Court (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 950, 266 Cal. Rptr. 253 is discussed in § 52.110[3][f].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Action Must Be Brought

Coombes v. Getz (1933) 217 Cal. 320, 18 P.2d 939 was an action by the creditor of a corporation to recover from the directors of the corporation the amount of a debt for goods sold to the corporation and was based on former Calif. Const., Art. XII, § 3 (now repealed), which made directors liable to the creditors of the corporation for all money embezzled or misappropriated by directors during their term of office. Defendant demurred on the ground that the complaint was barred by the statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 359. The trial court sustained the demurrer of defendant to plaintiff's amended complaint, plaintiff refused to amend, and the trial court gave judgment against plaintiff, from which plaintiff appealed. Since the complaint was not filed until five years after the last of the acts of the directors complained of, and Code Civ. Proc. § 359 provides a limitation period of three years after the liability was created, the Supreme Court held that the action was barred. The Court also held that, when the cause of action is to enforce a liability created by law rather than a penalty or forfeiture, Code Civ. Proc. § 359 commences to run when the liability was created, not when the facts were discovered. Plaintiff also argued that former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) [ now see Code Civ. Proc. § 388(d)], rather than Code Civ. Proc. § 359, was the applicable statute of limitations, because the action was based on facts constituting fraud. The Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 applies only to liability created by law, and "created by law" has the restricted meaning in this statute of created by express statute or Constitutional provision. Nevertheless, the Court found that the liability in this case was imposed only by former Calif. Const., Art. XII, § 3, making directors liable for funds misappropriated by other directors, rather than on the common-law liability of directors for fraud, and that, therefore, Code Civ. Proc. § 359, rather than former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 388(d)], applied to the action.

Pourroy v. Gardner (1932) 122 Cal. App. 521, 10 P.2d 815 was an action by the shareholders against the directors of a defunct corporation, based on illegal payments of dividends out of funds from which such dividends should not have been paid according to former Civ. Code § 309 [see former Corp. Code § 824, now Corp. Code § 316], which specifically provided for liability of the directors to creditors. After defendants demurred on several grounds, including the bar of the statute of limitations, the action was dismissed and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal, in affirming the dismissal, held that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was the applicable statute of limitations, and that when the action is one to enforce a liability created by law rather than to recover a penalty or forfeiture, the action must be brought within three years from the time when the liability was created. In deciding that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was applicable, the court held that the liability under former Civ. Code § 309 was purely statutory, and that the action was therefore not subject to any other statute of limitations applicable to common-law actions. The court also held that, where Code Civ. Proc. § 359 is the applicable statute, the discovery of the wrong is the starting point of the period of limitation only in actions to recover a penalty or forfeiture, not to enforce a liability created by law.

Richardson v. Craig (1938) 11 Cal. 2d 131, 77 P.2d 1077 was an action by the Superintendent of Banks to enforce an assessment against shareholders of an insolvent bank pursuant to the provisions of the Bank Stockholders' Liability Act. Defendants demurred on the ground that the actionwas barred by the statute of limitations and the trial court sustained the demurrer. The trial court overruled the demurrer. On appeal, defendants raised the issue of the applicable statute of limitations and the issue of when the statute began to run. The court of appeal found that the liability of the shareholders was established by the Bank Stockholders' Liability Act, which did not contain a specific statute of limitations. The court therefore found that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was the applicable statute of limitations. In deciding when the statute began to run, the court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 differs from other statutes of limitations because the period begins to run when the liability was created, rather than when the cause of action accrued. Thus, the court found that the liability was created when the assessment was levied on the shareholders.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.111

§ 52.111 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraud Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. The objection that an action is barred by a statute of limitations must be deemed to be included in the ground of demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

C. Applicable Statute of Limitations. The three-year period of limitation prescribed by Section 338(d) of the Code of Civil Procedure for actions based on fraud or mistake applies to actions against directors based on fraud (Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 866, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392).

D. Statute of Limitations. An action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake must be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action. The cause of action in such a case is not deemed to have accrued until the discovery, by the aggrieved party, of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake (Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)).

[Optional] E. Statute Not Tolled. The principle that the statute of limitations for actions based on fraud is tolled for the period in which the directors responsible for the fraud are in control of the corporation does not apply where there has been an actual discovery of the fraud (Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 866-867, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint (or, with slight modification of wording, a cross complaint), when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint, or from a matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the action is barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d).

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings [see Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 261-265, 54 P.2d 13] , or a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; Graham v. Bank of Cal. (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 438, 439-444, 17 Cal. Rptr. 279] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a demurrer to a complaint based on the bar of the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities in support of a demurrer on the ground that the complaint is barred by a statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense of bar of a statute of limitations was not, apparently, at issue either in the trial court or on appeal; but the Supreme Court said that the bar of the statute of limitations is not specified in the code as a ground of demurrer, and that objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (153 Cal. 234, 245) .

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 was an action in two counts: a shareholders' derivative action against defendant directors of the corporation, a foundation that owned 59 percent of the shares of the corporation; and various business enterprises owned by one of the directors. The alleged liability was based on a real estate transaction in which the corporation exchanged some of its land. Plaintiffs sought to recover the difference between the alleged fair market value of the land conveyed and the value received by the corporation in exchange for that land. They also sought to recover the alleged loss to the corporation resulting from the exchange, rather than the retention for leasing, of some of the corporation's land and to recover alleged profits made by an officer of the corporation in the development of a portion of the property received by the officer and by the business enterprises in which the officer was interested. Plaintiffs alleged losses to the corporation due to the directors' approval of the transaction in which one director, through these business enterprises, had received the land transferred by the corporation at less than the value which could have been obtained through competitive bidding and without full disclosure of his interest. The defendant foundation and all of the director defendants other than the director interested in the other businesses demurred to the complaint on the grounds that it failed to state a cause of action and that it was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The other defendant director and the business enterprises filed a demurrer on these same grounds among others. The plaintiffs filed a proposed amended complaint, but the trial court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend, the demurrer of the foundation and related defendants on both grounds asserted, and the demurrer of the other director and the associated businesses enterprises on the ground of failure to state a cause of action. Plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reached the issue of whether the complaint would be barred by the statute of limitations because it found that the plaintiff could amend the complaint to state a cause of action and should be allowed to do so if not barred by the statute of limitations. In deciding which statute should be applied, the court found that the nature of the liability of each defendant depended on the degree of participation charged. As to those directors who actively participated in the selection of buyers for the property and concealed the interests of the interested director, their liability was in fraud or constructive fraud. As to those directors who merely passively approved of the action, their liability was found to be in negligence rather than fraud. These defendants did not know of the fraud and did not act in concert with the active directors to conceal it, and the court found that from other documents in the case there was no evidence on which plaintiffs could amend their complaint to show active participation and thus charge these directors with fraud. The liability of the passive directors was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) which applies to an action on an obligation or liability not founded on an instrument of writing. An action predicated on the neglect or acquiescence of directors and majority shareholders was barred at the expiration of the two-year period prescribed by this statute, and the court, therefore, held that the demurrer to the complaint against these directors was properly sustained on that ground. On the other hand, the three-year statute of limitations of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)) which governs an action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake applied to the cause of action against the directors who actively participated in the transaction under attack. The conduct alleged was a breach of the fiduciary duty owed by the directors to the corporation, so that the fraud statute applied. Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (penalties, forfeitures, liabilities crated by law) did not apply, since it is applicable only to liability created by express statute or the Constitution. Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (actions not otherwise provided for) did not apply, although it had been applied as a statute of limitations for breach of the written provisions of an express trust or to an action to recover the assets of a corporation which have been illegally transferred. Although it had been generally held that an action for fraud committed against a corporation is tolled for the period that those responsible remain in control of the corporation, the court held that the tolling does not apply to actions for negligence against corporate directors. The court of appeal therefore sustained the demurrer of the defendant directors charged with negligence without leave to amend due to the bar of the statute of limitations, but reversed the trial court's judgment as to the active directors and found that the plaintiff should have leave to file its amended complaint (237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 866) .

[c] Statute Not Tolled

Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 is discussed in § 52.111[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.112

§ 52.112 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. The objection that an action is barred by a statute of limitations must be deemed to be included in the ground of demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

C. Applicable Statute of Limitations. An action based on the neglect or acquiescence of the directors is barred at the expiration of the two-year period of limitation provided by Code of Civil Procedure Section 339(1), which runs at the expiration of two years following the transaction questioned (Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 865, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392).

D. Statute of Limitations. An action on a contract, obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument of writing must be commenced within two years (Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities is for use in supporting a demurrer to a complaint for damages for negligent breach of duty against directors of a corporation. The demurrer is based on the ground that the action is barred by the statute of limitations, Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1).

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings [see Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 261-265, 54 P.2d 13] , or a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; Graham v. Bank of Cal. (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 438, 439-444, 17 Cal. Rptr. 279] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a demurrer to a complaint based on the bar of the statute of limitations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities in support of a demurrer on the ground that the complaint is barred by a statute of limitations, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense of bar of a statute of limitations was not, apparently, at issue either in the trial court or on appeal, but the Supreme Court said that the bar of the statute of limitations is not specified in the code as a ground of demurrer, and that objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (153 Cal. 234, 245) .

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 was an action in two counts, a shareholders' derivative action against defendant directors of the corporation, a foundation which owned 59 percent of the shares of the corporation, and various business enterprises owned by one of the directors. The alleged liability was based on a real estate transaction in which the corporation exchanged some of its land. Plaintiffs sought to recover the difference between the alleged fair market value of the land conveyed and the value received by the corporation in exchange for that land. They also sought to recover the alleged loss to the corporation resulting from the exchange rather than the retention for leasing, of some of the corporation's land and to recover alleged profits made by an officer of the corporation in the development of a portion of the property received by the officer and by the business enterprises in which the officer was interested. Plaintiffs alleged losses to the corporation due to the directors' approval of the transaction in which one director, through these business enterprises, had received the land transferred by the corporation at less than the value which could have been obtained through competitive bidding and without full disclosure of his interest. The defendant foundation and all of the director defendants other than the director interested in the other businesses demurred to the complaint on the grounds that it failed to state a cause of an action and that it was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The other defendant director and the business enterprises filed a demurrer on these same grounds among others. The plaintiffs filed a proposed amended complaint, but the trial court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend, the demurrer of the foundation and related defendants on both grounds asserted, and the demurrer of the other director and the associated businesses enterprises on the ground of failure to state a cause of action. Plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reached the issue of whether the complaint would be barred by the statute of limitations because it found that the plaintiff could amend the complaint to state a cause of action and should be allowed to do so if not barred by the statute of limitations. In deciding which statute should be applied, the court found that the nature of the liability of each defendant depended on the degree of participation charged. As to those directors who actively participated in the selection of buyers for the property and concealed the interests of the interested director, their liability was in fraud or constructive fraud. As to those directors who merely passively approved of the action, their liability was found to be in negligence rather than fraud. These defendants did not know of the fraud and did not act in concert with the active directors to conceal it, and the court found that from other documents in the case there was no evidence on which plaintiffs could amend their complaint to show active participation and, thus, charge these directors with fraud. The liability of the passive directors was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) which applies to an action on an obligation or liability not founded on an instrument of writing. An action predicated on the neglect or acquiescence of directors and majority shareholders was barred at the expiration of the two-year period prescribed by this statute, and the court, therefore, held that the demurrer to the complaint against these directors was properly sustained on that ground. On the other hand, the three-year statute of limitations of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)) which governs an action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake applied to the cause of action against the directors who actively participated in the transaction under attack. The conduct alleged was a breach of the fiduciary duty owed by the directors to the corporation, so that the fraud statute applied. Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (penalties, forfeitures liabilities created by law) did not apply, since it is applicable only to liability created by express statute or the Constitution. Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (actions not otherwise provided for) did not apply, although it had been applied as a statute of limitations for breach of the written provisions of an express trust or to an action to recover the assets of a corporation which have been illegally transferred. Although it had been generally held that an action for fraud committed against a corporation is tolled for the period that those responsible remain in control of the corporation, the court held that the tolling does not apply to actions for negligence against corporate directors. The court of appeal therefore sustained the demurrer of the defendant directors charged with negligence without leave to amend due to the bar of the statute of limitations, but reversed the trial court's judgment as to the active directors and found that the plaintiff should have leave to file its amended complaint (237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 865) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicable Statute of Limitations

Southern Counties Thrift Co. v. Rairdon (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 118 P.2d 828 was an action by a loan company against its directors for the amount of loans unlawfully made. One defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The trial court sustained the demurrer. On appeal the plaintiff argued that the obligation or liability of the directors was a liability created by statute so that the cause of action was within the limitation period provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 359. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. The court found that the liability of the directors was not based on an instrument in writing [within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 337] and was not a liability created by statute [within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 359]. Plaintiff argued that if the loans had been made in good faith, then only the restrictions of statute made them illegal, and that the liability, therefore, was one createdby statute. The court found that although corporations are creatures of law and their functions are regulated largely by statute, that does not make their claims or liabilities or their acts those created by statute. The court stated that when the acts are expressly prohibited by statute but the liability for the violation of the statute is not imposed on corporate officers by statute, the doing of the act does not make the directors liable under the statute. Rather, the liability of the directors rests on the common-law rule of the duty of an agent to the principal. Since the statute in this case did not place on the directors the duty to make good the loans or losses resulting from them, that obligation rested on the duty imposed by common law. The period of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 359, thus, did not apply, because the liability was not one imposed by law within the meaning of that statute as interpreted to mean liability imposed by express statute. The applicable statute of limitations was therefore Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) (which governs actions based on a contract, obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument in writing) (47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 772) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.112A

§ 52.112A Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty--Against Directors of Corporation--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT ALLEGES NO FACTS ON WHICH, UNDER CALIFORNIA LAW, DEFENDANT, AS A DIRECTOR OF _____ [name of corporation], COULD BE LIABLE TO PLAINTIFF, AS A CREDITOR OF THE CORPORATION, SOLELY BECAUSE OF THE CORPORATION'S INSOLVENCY.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Directors Owe No Fiduciary Duty to Creditor of Insolvent Corporation. In California, the directors of an insolvent corporation owe no fiduciary duty of due care or loyalty to the corporation's creditors solely because the corporation is insolvent. The scope of any noncontractual duty owed by corporate directors to the insolvent corporation's creditors is limited, in California, to the avoidance of acts that divert, dissipate, or unduly risk corporate assets which might otherwise be used to pay creditors' claims, including acts that involve self dealing or the preferential treatment of creditors (Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1041, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875).

[Optional] C. No Fiduciary Duty When Corporation Operates in "Zone of Insolvency." There is no fiduciary duty prescribed under California law that is owed to creditors by directors of a corporation solely by virtue of its operating in any so-called "zone of insolvency" without being actually insolvent (Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1041, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use in supporting a demurrer to a complaint for damages for breach of fiduciary duty against directors of a corporation. The demurrer is based on the ground that no cause of action is stated by a complaint alleging, in material part, that the plaintiff is a creditor of the corporation and that the defendant, as a director, owed a fiduciary duty to the plaintiff once the corporation became insolvent or, optionally, while the corporation was operating in a so-called "zone of insolvency" without being actually insolvent.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings [see Wrightson v. Dougherty (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 257, 261-265, 54 P.2d 13], or a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; Graham v. Bank of Cal. (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 438, 439-444, 17 Cal. Rptr. 279].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Directors Owe No Fiduciary Duty to Creditor of Insolvent Corporation

In Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875 , the plaintiff, a creditor of a corporation, attempted to allege a violation of the directors' fiduciary duty, complaining that when the corporation was on the verge of becoming insolvent, the directors effected an assignment for the benefit of creditors rather than investigating, exploring, or pursuing a bankruptcy reorganization through which, the plaintiff theorized, the value of the corporation's accumulated net operating losses could have been maximized for the benefit of the plaintiff and the other creditors. The directors demurred on the ground of failure to state a cause of action, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend, relying on case law to the effect that the only duty owed by directors to an insolvent corporation's creditors is the duty to avoid acts that divert, dissipate, or unduly risk corporate assets which might otherwise be used to pay creditors' claims. In all of the versions of the plaintiff's complaint (the original version, two earlier amended versions, and the last, the third amended version), there were no allegations indicating that the defendants had done any such acts.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court observed that some California cases are in accord with a so-called trust-fund doctrine, to the effect that all of the assets of a corporation, immediately on its becoming insolvent, become a trust fund for the benefit of all of its creditors, in order to satisfy their claims (178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1040). However, this does not mean that the directors of an insolvent corporation are in the position of a trustee with respect to the corporation's creditors. The court held that in California, the directors of an insolvent corporation owe no fiduciary duty of due care or loyalty the corporation's creditors solely because the corporation is insolvent. The scope of any noncontractual duty owed by corporate directors to the insolvent corporation's creditors is limited, in California, to the avoidance of acts that divert, dissipate, or unduly risk corporate assets which might otherwise be used to pay creditors' claims [cf. Civ. Code § 1708 (every person is bound, without contract, to abstain from "injuring the person or property of another, or infringing upon any of his or her rights")]; and this would include acts that involve self dealing or the preferential treatment of creditors (178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1041) .

[b] No Fiduciary Duty When Corporation Operates in "Zone of Insolvency"

The facts and principal holding of Berg & Berg Enters. v. Boyle (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 875 , are discussed in § 52.112A[3][a]. The plaintiff had attempted to allege, as an additional basis for the directors' liability, that the directors owed a duty to creditors during a period when the corporation was operating in a so-called "zone of insolvency," a period when the corporation was not actually insolvent but was almost certainly going to become insolvent. The court of appeal rejected that notion, holding that there is no fiduciary duty prescribed under California law that is owed to creditors by directors of a corporation solely by virtue of its operating in any so-called "zone of insolvency" (or in the "vicinity of insolvency," as some courts have described it) without being actually insolvent (178 Cal. App. 4th 1020, 1041) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.113

§ 52.113 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--For Removal of Directors of Corporation for Cause [Corp. Code § 304]--Failure of Complaint to Allege Facts Rather Than Conclusions

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.60.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT THE ALLEGATIONS OF FRAUDULENT ACTS OF THE DIRECTORS ARE IN GENERAL AND CONCLUSIONARY TERMS WITHOUT SPECIFIC FACTS ADEQUATE TO SHOW THE BASIS FOR THE GENERAL CHARGES.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Specific Facts Adequate to Show Fraud Are Required. Allegations of fraudulent acts sufficient to justify removal of directors from office pursuant to Corporations Code Section 304 cannot be in the form of general charges of fraud and bad faith on the part of the directors. Such general allegations are insufficient in the absence of allegations of specific facts adequate to show the basis for the general charges (Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 257, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for removal of a corporate director for cause pursuant to Corp. Code § 304 [former Corp. Code § 811] when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that the plaintiff has not alleged specific facts constituting fraudulent or dishonest acts on the part of the directors.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum supporting a demurrer to a complaint for fraud on the ground that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that the complaint states the elements of fraud only as legal conclusions, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit , and Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Facts Adequate to Show Fraud Are Required

Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 was an action for declaratory relief, appointment of a receiver, removal of directors of a corporation, and an injunction. The action was brought by the shareholders and members against an incorporated club and the directors and former directors of the corporation. The trial court sustained the demurrer of the former directors to the complaint without leave to amend. It also sustained the demurrer of the present directors but with leave to amend. Plaintiffs failed to amend the complaint as allowed within the proper time and also purported to appeal from the granting of the demurrer of the former directors without leave to amend. On appeal, the court affirmed the trial court's judgment. In determining whether the final unamended complaint stated a cause of action against any of the defendants, the court of appeal stated that it is a well-established rule that in a case of removal of directors for fraud, general charges of fraud, conspiracy and bad faith on the part of corporate directors are insufficient in the absence of allegations of specific facts adequate to show the basis for the general charges. The court, therefore, held that the trial court was correct in sustaining the demurrer of the presently acting director defendants because plaintiffs failed, among other things, to plead any acts or conduct on the part of defendants which could be said to constitute fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of authority or discretion with reference to the corporation, in that the charges were stated as general conclusions (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255-257) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.114

§ 52.114 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Petition for Appointment of Provisional Director of Corporation When Board Is Deadlocked [Corp. Code § 308]--Estoppel and Unclean Hands Not Defenses

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
Petitioner,	)	TO ANSWER TO PETITIONER
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Respondent.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE ANSWER TO THE PETITION DOES NOT STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A DEFENSE IN THAT _____ [IT ALLEGES THE UNCLEAN HANDS OF PETITIONER or IT ALLEGES THAT PETITIONER IS ESTOPPED TO SEEK THE REQUESTED RELIEF].

A. Demurrer to Answer. A party against whom an answer has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, to the answer on the ground that the answer does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.20).

B. Estoppel and Unclean Hands Are Not Defenses. In actions to appoint a provisional director of a corporation which is deadlocked, brought pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 308, the doctrines of unclean hands and estoppel are inapplicable as defenses. The question before the court is whether there is a deadlock and not why the deadlock may exist (In re Jamison Steel Corp. (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 27, 39, 322 P.2d 246).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to an answer to a petition to appoint a provisional director of a corporation if the shareholders are deadlocked so they cannot elect the directors to be elected at an annual shareholders' meeting [see Corp. Code § 308]. When the answer to such a petition alleges unclean hands and estoppel, the demurrer is on the ground that unclean hands and estoppel as to the petitioners are not defenses to such a proceeding.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for appointment of a provisional director of a corporation with an even number of directors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management, § 167.160 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel and Unclean Hands Are Not Defenses

In re Jamison Steel Corp. (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 27, 322 P.2d 246 was a proceeding for the appointment of a provisional director of a corporation with four directors on the board who were unable to break the deadlock created by tie votes on important corporate issues. There was evidence before the trial court which supported the conclusion that the corporation's business could not be conducted to advantage and that its business and property were in danger of being impaired by the situation. The trial court found for petitioners and ordered the appointment of a provisional director. On appeal by respondents from this judgment, the court of appeal found that the granting of the remedy was proper under the circumstances and that the doctrines of unclean hands and estoppel were inapplicable to petitioners, since these doctrines have no applicability under former Corp. Code § 819 [now see Corp. Code § 308]. The court of appeal found that estoppel and unclean hands are irrelevant because the only question before the court in such a case is whether there is a deadlock, not why one exists (158 Cal. App. 2d 27, 39) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.115

§ 52.115 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--Director Lacks Authority to Institute Action in Name of Corporation Against Codirector and Equal Shareholder

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.31.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT DIRECTOR IS PROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF, A CODIRECTOR AND EQUAL SHAREHOLDER, HAS NO AUTHORITY TO BRING AN ACTION AGAINST THE DEFENDANT IN THE NAME OF THE CORPORATION.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.31, Paragraph A.]

B. No Authority for Director to Bring Action Against Codirector Who Is Equal Shareholder. A corporate director has no presumptive or implied authority to institute litigation in the name of the corporation against a codirector and equal shareholder (Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899-900, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that plaintiff has no authority to institute litigation in the name of the corporation against the defendant because the defendant is a codirector who is an equal shareholder in the corporation. The form may also be used in support of a demurrer, when all the relevant facts appear on the face of the complaint or are subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Authority for Director to Bring Action Against Codirector Who Is Equal Shareholder

Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891 , involved a dispute between the two sole directors of a corporation, each of whom owned 50 percent of the corporation's shares. Plaintiff director, the corporation's president, brought suit on the corporation's behalf against defendant director, the corporation's chief executive officer. Plaintiff's complaint set forth numerous causes of action based on various wrongs allegedly committed by defendant director against the corporation. The trial court granted summary judgment on these causes of action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that there is no presumptive or implied authority in a corporate president to institute litigation in the name of the corporation against a codirector and equal shareholder. Pressing the corporation into litigation as a plaintiff is inappropriate, noted the court, when the other shareholder director could claim equal authority to bring suit in the corporate name. The court pointed out that the inappropriateness of such action was particularly evident in the instant case, because defendant was not only an equal director and shareholder, but also was a chief executive officer of the company. The court remarked that the proper vehicle for such a suit, when the gravamen of the complaint is injury to the corporation, is a shareholder's derivative action (13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899-900) . In upholding the summary judgment, the court declined to express a view on the president's power to institute or defend litigation in an emergency or involving an outsider or when the bylaws may grant the power to do so (13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 899 n.2).

99 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.116

§ 52.116 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--In Action to Remove Defendant From Office for Acts Committed as Director [Corp. Code § 314]--Defendant Reelected After Acts Complained Of

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.31.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT DIRECTOR IS PROPER WHEN PLAINTIFF SEEKS TO REMOVE DEFENDANT FROM OFFICE FOR ACTS COMMITTED DURING THE TERM OF OFFICE AND DEFENDANT HAS BEEN REELECTED SUBSEQUENT TO THESE ACTS.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.31, Paragraph A.]

B. Subsequently Reelected Director Not Removable. As a general rule, a director will not be removed for acts committed during the term of office if the director is subsequently reelected (Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 256, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law since defendant has been reelected as a director of the corporation subsequent to the time of the acts alleged in the complaint as the basis for removal from office.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

With appropriate modification, the foregoing points and authorities may be used to support a demurrer to a complaint for removal of a director where the director has been reelected subsequent to the acts complained of.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Subsequently Reelected Director Not Removable

Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 was an action for declaratory relief, appointment of a receiver, removal of directors of a corporation, and an injunction. The action was brought by the shareholders and members against an incorporated club and the directors and former directors of the corporation. The trial court sustained the demurrer of the former directors to the complaint without leave to amend. It also sustained the demurrer of the present directors but with leave to amend. Plaintiffs failed to amend the complaint as allowed within the proper time and also appealed from the granting of the demurrer without leave to amend. The court of appeal considered whether the final unamended complaint stated a cause of action against any of the defendants. In sustaining the demurrers of those directors who had been reelected, the court of appeal stated, among other reasons for sustaining the demurrers, that as a general rule a director will not be removed for acts committed during his term of office if the director is subsequently reelected. The court also found that the complaint failed to state a cause of action in that it alleged only general conclusions and failed to state causes of action for other types of relief requested.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Subsequently Reelected Director Not Removable

Remillard Brick Co. v. Remillard-Dandini (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 405, 241 P.2d 66 was an action by a minority shareholder to void contracts between directors and a corporation, to oust directors, and to recover fees and profits. The trial court found that the directors should be removed if they did not repay the amounts to the corporation which they had obtained through fraud. In affirming that part of the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal found that there was no abuse of the trial court's discretion in allowing the directors to return to their posts after paying the required amounts, where the acts complained of occurred prior to their reelection by the shareholders of the corporation as directors. The court of appeal noted that it is a general rule that a director will not be removed for acts committed during the term of office if the director is subsequently reelected.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.117

§ 52.117 Supporting Motion for Indemnification of Director, Officer, or Other Agent of Corporation--For Expenses in Defending Suit Without Success on Merits [Corp. Code § 317(b), (c)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	INDEMNIFICATION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT IN THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION IS ENTITLED TO BE INDEMNIFIED FOR THE EXPENSES INCURRED IN CONNECTION WITH DEFENDING AGAINST THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION IN THAT DEFENDANT IS AN "AGENT" OF THE CORPORATION, THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION IS A "PROCEEDING," ALL EXPENSES INCURRED ARE "EXPENSES," AND DEFENDANT MEETS THE APPLICABLE STANDARD FOR INDEMNIFICATION UNDER SECTION 317 OF THE CORPORATIONS CODE.

[EITHER]

A. Corporate Agent. An "agent" means any person who is or was a director, officer, employee, or other agent of the corporation (Corp. Code § 317(a)).

[OR]

A. Corporate Agent. An "agent" means any person who is or was serving at the request of the corporation as a director, officer, employee, or agent of another foreign or domestic corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, or other enterprise (Corp. Code § 317(a)).

[OR]

A. Corporate Agent. An "agent" means any person who was a director, officer, employee, or agent of a foreign or domestic corporation which was a predecessor corporation of the corporation or of another enterprise at the request of such predecessor corporation (Corp. Code § 317(a)).

B. Proceeding for Purposes of Indemnification. "Proceeding" means any threatened, pending, or completed action or proceeding, whether civil, criminal, administrative, or investigative (Corp. Code § 317(a)).

C. Expenses for Purposes of Indemnification. The term "expenses" for the purposes of indemnification includes, without limitation, attorney's fees and any expenses of establishing a right to indemnification under Section 317(d) or Section 317(e)(4) of the Corporations Code (Corp. Code § 317(a)).

D. Indemnification of Defendant Without Success on the Merits. Except as provided for defendants successful on the merits, indemnification may be made by the corporation if authorized in the specific case, on a determination that indemnification of the agent is proper in the circumstances because the agent has met the applicable standard of conduct set forth in Sections 317(b) or (c) of the Corporations Code (Corp. Code § 317(e)). This determination may be made by a majority vote of a quorum consisting of directors who are not parties to the proceeding (Corp. Code § 317(e)(1)).

[EITHER]

[OR]

, if a quorum consisting of directors who are not parties to the proceeding is not obtainable, by independent legal counsel in a written opinion (Corp. Code § 317(e)(2)).

[OR]

by approval of the shareholders [as defined in Section 153 of the Corporations Code], with the share owned by the person to be indemnified not being entitled to vote on the matter (Corp. Code § 317(e)(3)).

[OR]

by the court in which the proceeding is or was pending on application made by the corporation, agent, attorney, or other person rendering services in connection with the defense, whether or not the application by the agent, attorney, or other person is opposed by the corporation (Corp. Code § 317(e)(4)).

[CONTINUE]

[EITHER]

E. Indemnification of Defendant Without Success on the Merits in a Derivative Action. A corporation has the power to indemnify any person who was or is a party, or is threatened to be made a party, to any threatened, pending, or completed action by or in the right of the corporation to procure a judgment in its favor by reason of the fact that such person is or was an agent of the corporation, against expenses actually and reasonably incurred by the person in connection with the defense or settlement of such action if the person acted in good faith, in a manner such person believed to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders (Corp. Code § 317(c)).

[OR]

E. Indemnification of Defendant Without Success on the Merits in a Nonderivative Action. A corporation has the power to indemnify any person who was or is a party, or is threatened to be made a party, to any proceeding (other than an action by or in the right of the corporation) by reason of the fact that such person is or was an agent of the corporation, against expenses, judgments, fines, settlements, and other amounts actually and reasonably incurred in connection with such proceeding if such person acted in good faith in a manner such person reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the corporation, and, in the case of a criminal proceeding, had no reasonable cause to believe the conduct of such person was unlawful (Corp. Code § 317(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] F. Outcome of Proceeding Does Not Create a Presumption. The termination of any proceeding by judgment, order, settlement, conviction, or upon a plea of nolo contendere or its equivalent shall not, of itself, create a presumption that the person did not act in good faith and in a manner which the person reasonably believed to be in the best interests of the corporation or create a presumption that the person had reasonable cause to believe that his/her conduct was unlawful (Corp. Code § 317(b)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for indemnification of a director, officer, or employee of a corporation for expenses incurred in defense of a suit. This procedure should only be needed to the extent that a defendant has not been successful on the merits in defending against the suit, because the General Corporation Law provides for mandatory indemnification by the corporation of corporate agents who have been successful in defense of a derivative or non-derivative suit, to the extent successful on the merits [see Corp. Code § 317(d)].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Expenses Incurred in Criminal Proceeding

Although cases decided under former Corp. Code § 830 dealing with indemnification held that indemnification for expenses incurred in defending a criminal proceeding may be sought only in a plenary civil proceeding for that purpose against the corporation, especially when the criminal proceedings have been concluded [see P.S. & S., Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 354, 360, 94 Cal. Rptr. 738] , present Corp. Code § 317 specifically provides that the determination that indemnification is proper, if such a determination is required for indemnification, is to be made by the court in which the proceeding is or was pending on application made by the corporation, agent, attorney, or other person rendering services in connection with the defense [see Corp. Code §§ 317(e)(4), 317(c)(1)]. It seems, therefore, that application must be made to the court in which the original proceeding is or was pending and that a separate civil action would be improper.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For notices of motion for indemnification and declaration in support of motion for indemnification of expenses incurred in defense of suit by a director, officer, or employee of a corporation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 167, Corporations: Directors and Management (Matthew Bender).

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Corporate Agent

In Channel Lumber Company, Inc. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482 , the court of appeal reversed an order of the trial court awarding attorney's fees and expenses to a corporation's retained counsel pursuant to Corp. Code § 317(d). It stated that Corp. Code § 317 is intended not only to afford reasonable protection to corporate agents, but also to impose safeguards to protect shareholders by restricting indemnity to situations in which liability is sought to be imposed upon an individual by reason of the fact that the person was an agent of a corporation. The court concluded that an outside attorney retained by a corporation to represent it at trial, who is then sued by the corporation for alleged legal malpractice while representing the corporation, is not a party to the malpractice suit "by reason of the fact [the attorney] is or was an agent of the corporation," within the meaning and purposes of Corp. Code § 317 (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1232) .

[b] Expenses for Purposes of Indemnification

In Wilshire-Doheny Associates, Ltd. v. Stanley Shapiro (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 478 , appellants claimed the trial court erred in finding that they were not entitled to be indemnified for attorney's fees and costs incurred in successfully defending a cross-complaint against them under contractual indemnity provisions and Corp. Code § 317. The court of appeal held that the trial court erred in determining as a matter of law that Corp. Code § 317 did not apply, because the question of its application was a factual one. A trial on the allegations of the complaint was necessary to determine whether appellants' alleged acts were taken on behalf of the corporation, or whether they were acting to further their own personal interests (83 Cal. App. 4th 1380, 1390) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.118

§ 52.118 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraud Against Directors of Corporation--Proper Statute of Limitations Is Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) Rather Than Code Civ. Proc. § 359

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.63.]

THE COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION AND IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE THE APPLICABLE STATUTE IS CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURESECTION 338(d) RATHER THAN CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 359.

A. Applicability of Code of Civil Procedure Section 359. Code of Civil Procedure Section 359 applies only to liabilities of directors created by law. The phrase "created by law" has been consistently interpreted to mean only those liabilities which exist by virtue of an express statute and not those arising under the common law (People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 380, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691).

B. When Liabilities Are Created by Common Law. The fact that corporations are creatures of law and their functions are regulated largely by statute does not make their claims or liability or their acts those created only by statute, within the meaning of "created by law" in Code of Civil Procedure Section 359. The liability of directors is not imposed on them by statute within the meaning of that code section merely because a statute makes the doing of an act a violation of the statute. Rather, absent excess provision for liability, directors' liability rests on the common law rule which renders every agent liable who violates the authority to the damage of the principal (Southern Counties Thrift Co. v. Rairdon (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 771-772, 118 P.2d 828).

C. Statute of Limitations for Fraud Actions Against Directors. A complaint charging fraud of directors of a corporation is governed by the statute of limitations provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 338(d), setting the period of limitation for actions based on fraud, not by Code of Civil Procedure Section 359, governing actions against corporate directors or shareholders created by law (Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 439, 443, 324 P.2d 55).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for damages against the directors of a corporation for a fraudulent breach of their fiduciary duty to the corporation, when the action sought to be brought by plaintiff would be barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 359 but not by Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) as the statute of limitations. The memorandum shows that Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) is the applicable statute of limitations.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability of Section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure

People v. Clauson (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 41 Cal. Rptr. 691 was an action in which a corporation had not paid its tax liability under the Sales and Use Tax Law. It was alleged that the corporation and the individuals owning the stock were one and the same and that the individuals used the corporation for the purpose of avoiding debts incurred by them. Respondents demurred on the ground that their personal liability was barred by former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 343 and 359) and Rev. & Tax. Code § 6711. The trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action but did not decide which statute was applicable. In reversing, the court of appeal found, among other things, that Code Civ. Proc. § 359 was inapplicable because decisions have interpreted it as limited to those liabilities created by law, meaning those liabilities which exist by virtue of an express statute and not those arising under common law. Since the liability sought to be imposed in this case did not arise by reason of any statutory obligation on respondents as shareholders qua shareholders but would attach only by reason of a judicially created equitable doctrine, the doctrine of corporate alter ego, the statute of limitations was not that provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (231 Cal. App. 2d 374, 380) .

[b] When Liabilities Are Created by Common Law

Southern Counties Thrift Co. v. Rairdon (1941) 47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 118 P.2d 828 was an action by a loan company against its directors for the amount of loans unlawfully made. One defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground that the action was barred by the statute of limitations provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The trial court sustained the demurrer. On appeal the plaintiff argued that the obligation or liability of the directors was a liability created by statute so that the cause of action was within the limitation period provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 359. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. The court found that the liability of the directors was not based on an instrument in writing [within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 337] and was not a liability created by statute [within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 359]. Plaintiff arguedthat if the loans had been made in good faith then only the restrictions of statute made them illegal and that the liability was therefore one created by statute. The court found that although corporations are creatures of law and their functions are regulated largely by statute, that does not make their claims or liabilities or their acts those created only by statute. The court stated that where the acts are expressly prohibited by statute but the liability for the violation of the statute is not imposed on corporate officers by statute, the doing of the act does not make the directors liable under the statute. Rather, the liability of the directors rests on the common-law rule of the duty of an agent to the principal. Since the statute in this case did not place on the directors the duty to make good the loans or losses resulting from them, that obligation rested on the duty imposed by common law. The period of limitation set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 359 thus did not apply, because the liability was not imposed by law within the meaning of that statute as interpreted to mean liability imposed by express statute. The applicable statute of limitations was, therefore, Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), governing actions based on a contract, obligation, or liability not founded on an instrument in writing (47 Cal. App. 2d 770, 771-772) .

[c] Statute of Limitations for Fraud Actions Against Directors

Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 439, 324 P.2d 55 was an action by a minority shareholder against the directors of a corporation for fraudulent misrepresentations which coerced her into selling her shares for less than their worth. After defendant's demurrer was rejected as untimely, the trial court sustained defendant's objection to the introduction of evidence, holding that the complaint failed to state a cause of action and denying plaintiff leave to amend. The court of appeal found that the complaint could be amended to state a cause of action and reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal. Defendant had contended on appeal that the complaint was barred by the applicable statute of limitations, either Code Civ. Proc. § 359 or former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)). However, the court of appeal held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)) was the applicable statute for an action against directors for fraud, rather than Code Civ. Proc. § 359, and that the action was not barred by the statute of limitations (159 Cal. App. 2d 439, 443) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicability of Section 359 of the Code of Civil Procedure

Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 was an action in two counts: a shareholders' derivative action against defendant directors of the corporation, a foundation which owned 59 percent of the shares of the corporation; and various business enterprises owned by one of the directors. The alleged liability was based on a real estate transaction in which the corporation exchanged some of its land. Plaintiffs sought to recover the difference between the alleged fair market value of the land conveyed and the value received by the corporation in exchange for that land. They also sought to recover the alleged loss to the corporation resulting from the exchange rather than the retention for leasing, of some of the corporation's land and to recover alleged profits made by an officer of the corporation in the development of a portion of the property received by the officer and by the business enterprises in which the officer was interested. Plaintiffs alleged losses to the corporation due to the directors' approval of the transaction in which one director, through these business enterprises, had received the land transferred by the corporation at less than the value which could have been obtained through competitive bidding and without full disclosure of his interest. The defendant foundation and all of the director defendants other than the director interested in the other businesses demurred to the complaint on the grounds that it failed to state a cause of action and that it was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The other defendant director and the business enterprises filed a demurrer on these same grounds among others. The plaintiffs filed a proposed amended complaint, but the trial court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend, the demurrer of the foundation and related defendants on both grounds asserted, and the demurrer of the other director and the associate businesses enterprises on the ground of failure to state a cause of action. Plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reached the issue of whether the complaint would be barred by the statute of limitations because it found that the plaintiff could amend the complaint to state a cause of action and should be allowed to do so if not barred by the statute of limitations. In deciding which statute should be applied, the court found that the nature of the liability of each defendant depended on the degree of participation charged. As to those directors who actively participated in the selection of buyers for the property and concealed the interests of the interested director, their liability was in fraud or constructive fraud. As to those directors who merely passively approved of the action, their liability was found to be in negligence rather than fraud. These defendants did not know of the fraud and did not act in concert with the active directors to conceal it, and the court found that from other documents in the case there was no evidence on which plaintiffs could amend their complaint to show active participation and thus charge these directors with fraud. The liability of the passive directors was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1), which applies to an action on an obligation or liability not founded on an instrument of writing. An action predicated on the neglect or acquiescence of directors and majorityshareholders was barred at the expiration of the two-year period prescribed by this statute, and the court therefore held that the demurrer to the complaint against these directors was properly sustained on that ground. On the other hand, the three-year statute of limitations of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)) which governs an action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake applied to the cause of action against the directors who actively participated in the transaction under attack. The conduct alleged was a breach of the fiduciary duty owed by the directors to the corporation, so that the fraud statute applied. Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (penalties, forfeitures, and liabilities created by law) did not apply, since it is applicable only to liability created by express statute or the Constitution. Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (actions not otherwise provided for) did not apply, although it had been applied as a statute of limitations for breach of the written provisions of an express trust or to an action to recover the assets of a corporation which have been illegally transferred. Although it had been generally held that an action for fraud committed against a corporation is tolled for the period that those responsible remain in control of the corporation, the court held that the tolling does not apply to actions for negligence against corporate directors. The court appeal, therefore, sustained the demurrer of the defendant directors charged with negligence without leave to amend due to the bar of the statute of limitations, but reversed the trial court's judgment as to the active directors and found that the plaintiff should have leave to file its amended complaint (237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 869) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.119

§ 52.119 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Damages for Fraudulent Breach of Fiduciary Duty Against Directors--Action Barred by Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)]--Statute Was Tolled

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.63.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FOR FRAUDULENT BREACH OF THE DIRECTORS' DUTY IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS SINCE SECTION 338(d) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE IS THE APPLICABLE STATUTE AND THE PERIOD PROVIDED DOES NOT RUN WHEN THE DIRECTORS HAVE REMAINED IN CONTROL OF THE CORPORATION AND THE FRAUD HAS NOT BEEN ACTUALLY DISCOVERED.

A. Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Against Directors in Control. As a corollary of the general principle that an action for relief on the grounds of fraud or mistake may be brought within three years of the discovery of the facts constituting the fraud or mistake, it is generally held that an action for fraud committed against a corporation is tolled for the period that those responsible for the fraud remain in control of the corporation and the fraud has not been actually discovered (Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 866-867, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint for fraudulent breach of fiduciary duty against the directors of a corporation, when the demurrer asserts that the complaint on its face shows that the statute of limitations has run against the plaintiff.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For an allegation excusing the failure of the plaintiff to learn of the facts constituting fraud so as to come within the late discovery provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d), see Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Against Directors in Control

Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 was an action in two counts: a shareholders' derivative action against defendant directors of the corporation, a foundation which owned 59 percent of the shares of the corporation; and various business enterprises owned by one of the directors. The alleged liability was based on a real estate transaction in which the corporation exchanged some of its land. Plaintiffs sought to recover the difference between the alleged fair market value of the land conveyed and the value received by the corporation in exchangefor that land. They also sought to recover the alleged loss to the corporation resulting from the exchange rather than the retention for leasing, of some of the corporation's land and to recover alleged profits made by an officer of the corporation in the development of a portion of the property received by the officer and by the business enterprises in which the officer was interested. Plaintiffs alleged losses to the corporation due to the directors' approval of the transaction in which one director through these business enterprises had received the land transferred by the corporation at less than the value which could have been obtained through competitive bidding and without full disclosure of his interest. The defendant foundation and all of the director defendants other than the director interested in the other businesses demurred to the complaint on the grounds that it failed to state a cause of action and that it was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1). The other defendant director and the business enterprises filed a demurrer on these same grounds among others. The plaintiffs filed a proposed amended complaint, but the trial court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend, the demurrer of the foundation and related defendants on both grounds asserted, and the demurrer of the other director and the associated businesses enterprises on the ground of failure to state a cause of action. Plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reached the issue of whether the complaint would be barred by the statute of limitations because it found that the plaintiff could amend the complaint to state a cause of action and should be allowed to do so if not barred by the statute of limitations. In deciding which statute should be applied, the court found that the nature of the liability of each defendant depended on the degree of participation charged. As to those directors who actively participated in the selection of buyers for the property and concealed the interests of the interested director, their liability was in fraud or constructive fraud. As to those directors who merely passively approved of the action, their liability was found to be in negligence rather than fraud. These defendants did not know of the fraud and did not act in concert with the active directors to conceal it, and the court found that from other documents in the case there was no evidence on which plaintiffs could amend their complaint to show active participation and thus charge these directors with fraud. The liability of the passive directors was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 339(1) which applies to an action on an obligation or liability not founded on an instrument of writing. An action predicated on the neglect or acquiescence of directors and majority shareholders was barred at the expiration of the two-year period prescribed by this statute, and the court, therefore, held that the demurrer to the complaint against these directors was properly sustained on that ground. On the other hand, the three-year statute of limitations of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)) which governs an action for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake applied to the cause of action against the directors who actively participated in the transaction under attack. The conduct alleged was a breach of the fiduciary duty owed by the directors to the corporation, so that the fraud statute applied. Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (penalties, forfeitures, and liabilities created by law) did not apply, since it is applicable only to liability created by express statute or the Constitution. Code Civ. Proc. § 343 (actions not otherwise provided for) did not apply, although it had been applied as a statute of limitations for breach of the written provisions of an express trust or to an action to recover the assets of a corporation which have been illegally transferred. Although it had been generally held that an action for fraud committed against a corporation is tolled for the period that those responsible remain in control of the corporation, the court held that the tolling does not apply to actions for negligence against corporate directors. The court of appeal, therefore, sustained the demurrer of the defendant directors charged with negligence without leave to amend due to the bar of the statute of limitations, but reversed the trial court's judgment as to the active directors and found that the plaintiff should have leave to file its amended complaint (237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 866-867) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Does Not Run Against Directors in Control

San Leandro Canning Co., Inc. v. Perillo (1931) 211 Cal. 482, 295 P. 1026 was a suit by a corporation against its former directors to require the directors to repay money to the corporation which had been illegally withdrawn from its treasury through the action of the defendants while they were directors. The defendants demurred to the plaintiff's amended complaint on the grounds that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action and that the plaintiff's cause of action as alleged was barred by the statute of limitations provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(1), (4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a), (d)) or Code Civ. Proc. § 359 (211 Cal. 482, 487) . The trial court sustained the demurrer on each of these grounds and entered judgment for defendant after plaintiff declined to further amend the complaint. Plaintiff appealed from this judgment, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment, expressly holding that the action was not barred on the date of its commencement by any statute of limitations because the complaint alleged that, during all of the times mentioned in the complaint, the defendants were in full control of the plaintiff corporation as directors. On the return of the case to the trial court, defendants answered the complaint and again raised the defense of the statutes of limitations. The trial court found that some of the amounts claimed by plaintiff were barred by the statutes of limitations. Plaintiff appealed. In reversing the trial court, the Supreme Court found that since the directors had in fact remained in control of the corporationuntil a time within three years of the commencement of the case, the trial court could not properly find that any of the amounts claimed were barred by the statutes of limitations, since the statutes of limitations does not commence to run against unlawful acts and expenditures of directors of the corporation while they are in full control of its affairs and of the expenditure of its funds. The Court did not, however, consider which of the three proposed statutes of limitations should apply, former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(1) or (4) (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 338(a) or (d)) or Civ. Code § 359 (211 Cal. 482, 487-490) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.120

§ 52.120 Opposing Motion for Indemnification of Director, Officer, or Other Agent of Corporation--For Expenses in Defending Suit Without Success on Merits--Derivative Suit [Corp. Code § 317(c)]--Indemnification Forbidden by Statute [Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)-(3)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	FOR INDEMNIFICATION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT IN THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION IS NOT ENTITLED TO BE INDEMNIFIED BY THE CORPORATION FOR _____ [AMOUNTS PAID or EXPENSES INCURRED] IN _____ [where appropriate, SETTLING or allege other means of disposing of] THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION, BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION WAS AN ACTION IN THE RIGHT OF THE CORPORATION AND WAS SETTLED WITHOUT COURT APPROVAL, SO THAT INDEMNIFICATION IS THEREFORE PROHIBITED BY CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 317(c)(2) AND (3)].

[EITHER]

A. Indemnification Not Allowed Without Special Court Determination. No indemnification may be made, with regard to an action by or in the right of the corporation to procure a judgment in its favor by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation, in respect of any claim, issue, or matter as to which the person shall have been adjudged to be liable to thecorporation in the performance of that person's duty to the corporation, unless and only to the extent that the court in which the action was brought determines on application that, in view of all the circumstances of the case, that person is fairly and reasonably entitled to indemnity for the expenses which the court shall determine (Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)).

[OR]

A. Indemnification for Amounts Paid in Settling Not Allowed. No indemnification may be made, with regard to an action by or in the right of the corporation to procure a judgment in its favor, by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation, of amounts paid in settling or otherwise disposing of a threatened or pending action, without court approval (Corp. Code § 317(c)(2)).

[OR]

A. Indemnification for Expenses in Defending Case Settled Without Court Approval Not Allowed. No indemnification may be made, with regard to an action by or in the right of the corporation to procure a judgment in its favor, by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation, of expenses incurred in defending a threatened or pending action which is settled or otherwise disposed of without court approval (Corp. Code § 317(c)(3)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion by a corporate director, officer, employee, or other agent, who has been made a defendant in a derivative action brought in behalf of the employing corporation, when the agent seeks indemnification of expenses incurred in defending or settling the action or threatened action but has not been successful on the merits of the action. It should be noted that to the extent that the corporate agent has been successful on the merits in any proceeding or on any claim issue, or matter in the proceeding, the agent is entitled to indemnification for all expenses actually and reasonably incurred without the necessity of applying to the court for relief [see Corp. Code § 317(d)].

On the other hand, when the corporate agent is not successful on the merits of a proceeding or threatened proceeding brought by or in the right of the corporation, that is, in a derivative action, in order to be indemnified, the corporate agent, in addition to meeting the usual standard of conduct required of an applicant for indemnification in a nonderivative action [see Corp. Code § 317(b)], must not fall within one of the special areas in which indemnification is prohibited in derivative actions [see Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)-(3)].

[b] Judgment Against Agent

No indemnification is to be made in derivative actions in respect of any claim, issue, or matter as to which the agent has been adjudged to be liable to the corporation in the performance of the agent's duty to the corporation and its shareholders, unless and only to the extent that the court in which the action was brought determines on application that, in view of all the circumstances of the case, the agent is fairly and reasonably entitled to indemnity for the expenses, and then only to the extent that the court determines [Corp. Code § 317(c)(1)]. This prohibition covers the situation in which the action has proceeded to judgment against the corporate agent, and requires that the agent make special application to the court for indemnification rather than being indemnified by vote of the shareholders, directors, or by legal opinion of independent legal counsel as allowed in the case of nonderivative actions [see Corp. Code § 317(e)(1)-(3)]. It also requires that the agent meet the test of being fairly and reasonably entitled to indemnification in addition to the standard of good faith conduct required for indemnification in any case [see Corp. Code § 317(b),(c)].

[c] Settlement of Action

With regard to settling or otherwise disposing of threatened or pending derivative actions, there are prohibitions on indemnification. When the action is settled or disposed of without court approval, no indemnification may be made of expenses incurred or of amounts paid in settling or otherwise disposing of a pending action [Corp. Code § 317(c)(2), (3)]. A 1987 amendment to Corp. Code § 317 deleted a prohibition against indemnification of an agent for any amounts expended in settling or otherwise disposing of an action with court approval [former Corp. Code § 317(c)(2), see now Corp. Code § 317(c)(2), (3), as amended by Stats. 1987, ch. 1203].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.121

§ 52.121 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees and Expenses--Outside Attorney Retained to Represent Corporation Is Not Corporate Agent Entitled Under Corp. Code § 317(d) to Recover Attorney's Fees and Costs in Subsequent Malpractice Action

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.120.]

DEFENDANT IN THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION IS NOT ENTITLED TO RECOVER COSTS AND ATTORNEY'S FEES FROM PLAINTIFF PURSUANT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 317(d) BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS NOT AN AGENT OF PLAINTIFF CORPORATION WITHIN THE MEANING OF THAT SECTION FOR PURPOSES OF THIS ACTION.

Outside Attorney Sued for Malpractice Is Not Corporate Agent for Purposes of Corporations Code Section 317. An outside attorney retained by a corporation to represent it at trial, who is then sued by the corporation for alleged legal malpractice while representing the corporation, is not an agent of the corporation within the meaning and purposes of Corporations Code Section 317 with respect to the malpractice action, and therefore is not entitled to indemnification for costs and attorney's fees under that section [Corp. Code § 317(a), (c), (d); Channel Lumber Company, Inc. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1232, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482] .
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees when those fees are being sought under Corp. Code § 317(d) by a law firm that previously had been employed as outside trial counsel by a corporation, subsequently was sued by the corporation for legal malpractice based on the law firm's handling of the underlying case, and successfully defended the malpractice action brought by its former corporate client. The points and authorities assert that in this situation, the law firm is not entitled to indemnification from the corporation for costs and attorneys fees because it is not an agent of the corporation for purposes of Corp. Code § 317. In appropriate circumstances, these points and authorities may also be used in a trial or appellate brief in which the entitlement of an outside counsel to attorney's fees under Corp. Code § 317(d) is at issue.

This memorandum may be modified for use in other situations in which a party wishes to argue that Corp. Code § 317 is inapplicable by virtue of the fact that the relationship between the corporation and the party seeking recovery of costs and expenses does not come within the definition of an "agent" of the corporation as that term is used in Corp. Code § 317(a).

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Outside Attorney Sued for Malpractice Is Not Corporate Agent for Purposes of Corporations Code Section 317

Corp. Code § 317(c) provides that (with specified exceptions) a corporation has the power to indemnify any person who was or is a party or is threatened to be made a party to any threatened, pending, or completed action by or in the right of the corporation to procure a judgment in its favor by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation, against expenses actually and reasonably incurred by that person in connection with the defense or settlement of the action if the person acted in good faith, in a manner the person believed to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders. Corp. Code § 317(d) provides that to the extent that an agent of a corporation has been successful on the merits in defense of any such proceeding, or in defense of any claim, issue, or matter therein, the agent must be indemnified against expenses actually and reasonably incurred by the agent in that connection. Corp. Code § 317(a) provides that for these purposes, "agent" means any person who is or was a director, officer, employee or other agent of the corporation, or is or was serving at the request of the corporation as a director, officer, employee or agent of another foreign or domestic corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust or other enterprise, or was a director, officer, employee or agent of a foreign or domestic corporationwhich was a predecessor corporation of the corporation or of another enterprise at the request of the predecessor corporation.

Channel Lumber Company, Inc. v. Porter Simon (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 482 was a legal malpractice action by a corporation against a law firm that had previously been hired as outside trial counsel to represent the corporation in ligation involving shopping mall leases. After the corporation lost in the underlying action, it sued the law firm for professional negligence in handling the litigation. The trial court in the malpractice action granted the defendant law firm summary judgment on the merits, and awarded the law firm attorney's fees of $83,860, relying on Corp Code § 317(d). The corporation appealed, arguing Corp Code § 317 was inapplicable to the defendant law firm.

The court of appeal, by a 2-1 margin, agreed with the corporation and reversed the award of attorney's fees. The court stated that Corp Code § 317(c) establishes corporate authority to indemnify an agent who is made or threatened to be made a party to an action by or in the right of the corporation, while Corp Code § 317(d) makes indemnification obligatory when the agent successfully defends such a proceeding on the merits. Read together, these subdivisions limit the right to seek reimbursement to a person who (1) is an agent of the corporation, and (2) is made or threatened to be made a party to an action or proceeding by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation. Since Corp Code § 317(a), which defines "agent" for purposes of that section, does not expressly define what is meant by "other agent of the corporation" for purposes of the statute, general principles of agency law may be used in resolving questions under Corp Code § 317 (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1226-1227) . Examining these principles, the court concluded that the relationship of an outside trial attorney and a corporate client does not readily satisfy all of the usual criteria of agency. When a corporation retains a trial attorney to defend it in litigation, it hires the attorney to perform services in a court of justice, rather than to act for, and in its place, in dealings with third persons. A corporation is not free to appoint any person to represent it in court; it may hire only a licensed attorney. A corporation does not hire an attorney by authorizing him or her to do acts which the corporation might do, since the corporation is legally prohibited from doing what it hires the attorney to do--representing the corporation in court. In determining whether an agency relationship exists, the primary right of control is particularly persuasive, and other factors in determining the nature of the relationship include whether the "principal" and "agent" are engaged in distinct occupations; the skill required to perform the agent's work; whether the principal or agent supplies the workplace and tools; the length of time for completion; whether the work is part of the principal's regular business; and whether the parties intended to create an agent/principal relationship. The court concluded that an analysis of these factors demonstrated that an outside trial attorney is an independent contractor, rather than an agent, of his or her corporate client (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1228-1229) .

The court also noted that Corp. Code § 317 is an indemnity fee statute, not an attorney's fee statute. It does not authorize an award of attorney fees whenever an agent is successful in litigation with a corporate principal, but rather limits indemnification to actions in which a person is involved by reason of the fact that the person is or was an agent of the corporation. It was enacted to encourage capable individuals to act for and in the place of the corporation by affording them indemnification for the expenses of defending against lawsuits to which they are made parties because they are agents of the corporation. But it is also intended to impose safeguards to protect shareholders by restricting indemnity to situations in which liability is sought to be imposed upon an individual by reason of the fact the person was an agent of a corporation, i.e., based upon acts or omissions in which, under general principles of agency law, the person was charged with acting for and in the place of the corporation. The court concluded that neither of these purposes is advanced by applying the section to an outside attorney retained by a corporation to represent it at trial, who then is sued by the corporation on the ground that the attorney committed legal malpractice while representing the corporation (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1230-1232) . The court therefore concluded that an outside attorney retained by a corporation to represent it at trial, who then is sued by the corporation for alleged legal malpractice while representing the corporation, is not a party to the malpractice suit "by reason of the fact [the attorney] is or was an agent of the corporation," within the meaning and purposes of Corp. Code § 317 (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1232) .

A dissenting judge argued that the plain language of the statute, including use of the term "other agent" in Corp. Code § 317(a), requires indemnification to outside attorneys under the circumstances that were present in this case (78 Cal. App. 4th 1222, 1237) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. ACTIONS INVOLVING CORPORATE DIRECTORS, OFFICERS, AND AGENTS

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.122-52.139

[Reserved]

§§ 52.122[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.140

§ 52.140 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure Specifically to Allege Facts Rebutting Applicability of Business Judgment Rule [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
Plaintiff(s), vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
a Corporation, and _____	)	Location: _____
[name(s)],	)	[Judge: _____]
Defendant(s).	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]
	)

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE ANY SPECIFIC FACTS SHOWING THAT THE BUSINESS JUDGMENT OF THE [_____ (specify board committee, if any, e.g., LITIGATION) COMMITTEE OF THE] BOARD OF DIRECTORS WAS NOT EXERCISED IN GOOD FAITH.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Business Judgment Rule Under Common Law. A director is not liable for a mistake in business judgment that is made in good faith and in what he or she believes to be the best interests of the corporation, if no conflict of interest exists (Biren v. Equality Emergency Medical Group, Inc. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 136-138, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 ; Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty etc. Corp. (1929) 96 Cal. App. 549, 557, 274 P. 597 ; FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1999) 184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046) .

C. Business Judgment Rule Codified Under Corporations Code Section 309. Corporations Code Section 309 codifies the business judgment rule and insulates a person from liability based on any alleged failure to discharge his or her obligations as a director when he or she has performed the duties of a director in accordance with subdivisions (a) and (b) of that section (Corp. Code § 309; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] D. Assumption Underlying Business Judgment Rule. The business judgment rule is premised on the notion that the directors are better able than the courts to judge whether or not a particular act or transaction is helpful to the conduct of corporate affairs or expedient for the attainment of corporate purposes (Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

E. Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule. The business judgment rule reflects a judicial policy of deference to the business judgment of corporate directors in the exercise of their broad discretion in making corporate decisions, which prevents either a court or minority shareholders from substituting their judgment for that of the directors when the directors have acted in good faith and used their best business judgment on behalf of the corporation (Marsili v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 324, 124 Cal. Rptr. 313 ; Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 178, 240 P.2d 421 ; see also Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 (stating rule, but holding it inapplicable to specific situation involved), disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

F. Specific Allegations of Fraud or Bad Faith Required. In a derivative action, general charges of fraud, conspiracy, and bad faith on the part of the corporate directors are insufficient in the absence of allegations of specific facts adequate to show the basis for the general charges. The complaint must plead specific acts or conduct on the part of the directors that could be said to constitute fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of their authority or discretion with respect to the corporation (Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 257, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 ; see Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 776, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815).

[Optional] G. Acts Clearly Opposed to Corporation's Interest. To warrant interference by a court in favor of minority stockholders, a case must be made out which plainly shows that an action is so far opposed to the true interests of the corporation itself as to lead to the clear inference that no one so acting could have been influenced by any honest desire to secure such interest, but that he or she must have acted with an intent to serve some outside purpose, regardless of the consequences to the company (Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty & Bldg. Corp. (1929) 96 Cal. App. 549, 557, 274 P. 597).

[Optional] H. Decisions Regarding Litigation. The decision whether or not to commence litigation to redress an alleged wrong committed against a corporation is within the scope of the discretionary powers of a board of directors. Thus, if the board acts in good faith in refusing to commence litigation, reasonably believing its decision is good business judgment and in the best interests of the corporation, the board's refusal to commence an action is not subject to attack in a shareholder derivative action (Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 177-178, 240 P.2d 421).

[Optional] I. Decisions Regarding Executive Compensation. The form and amount of executive compensation are fundamentally corporate business decisions;thus, Corp. Code § 309 governs a court's review of the conduct of directors, other than the director whose compensation is at issue, in approving a compensation package (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] J. Presumption Favors Board. Every presumption is in favor of the good faith of the board of directors. Interference with their discretion is not warranted in doubtful cases (Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 ; Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 257, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491).

[Optional] K. Reliance on Board Committee. The provisions of Corporations Code Section 309(a) and (b), which state the basic standard for a corporate director's performance of his or her duties and give him or her the right to rely on information prepared by specified persons, enlarge the right of reliance that existed under former law. By the provision permitting reliance on a committee of the board, the drafters of Corporations Code Section 309 intended to permit reliance on the work product of a board committee resulting from a more detailed investigation undertaken by that committee and that forms the basis for action taken by the board (Corp. Code § 309(b)(3); Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] L. Litigation Committee. The business judgment rule permits a corporation to appoint a special litigation committee to decide whether the maintenance of a shareholders' derivative suit is in the corporation's best interests. If the committee makes a good faith determination that the derivative action should be dismissed, the corporation may demur, move for judgment on the pleadings, make a motion in the trial court to dismiss the suit, or seek summary judgment (see Corp. Code § 309(b)(3); Lewis v. Anderson (9th Cir. 1979) 615 F.2d 778, 783 (federal court applying California law); Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 ; Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040-1041, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action to support a demurrer that asserts that a complaint fails to state a cause of action because plaintiff has failed to allege facts specifically demonstrating an injury to the corporation or other circumstances that defeat the ordinary application of the business judgment rule (Paragraphs F--H, K, L) [see Corp. Code § 309]. Optional paragraphs may be used if applicable to the particular situation. Counsel may also wish to include other authorities from § 52.147 or 52.163 that address particular aspects of the business judgment rule as applied to particular fact situations.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings or a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities addressing the limitation period that governs an action against a director for negligence or breach of his or her fiduciary duty to the corporation, see § 52.110.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Judgment Rule Under Common Law

In Biren v. Equality Emergency Medical Group, Inc. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 136-138, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 325 , five emergency room physicians created a business in which each physician was a corporate officer, director, and 20 percent shareholder. They entered into an agreement governing management, which required the prior written consent of shareholders holding a majority of shares for entering contracts for billing services. Plaintiff, the CFO with responsibility for billing services, discovered significant problems with the patient and insurance billing contractor. She terminated the contractor and orally authorized another contractor to process the billing, without obtaining prior shareholder approval. Plaintiff stated that she acted alone because the other directors were either on vacation or otherwise unavailable, and it was her fiduciary responsibility in a crisis situation to maintain the financial stability of the business and make a quick and emergency decision. After the new billing company began experiencing problems, the corporation dismissed it, and a majority of the directors and shareholders voted to remove plaintiff as officer and director and to redeem her shares. A dispute then arose concerning share valuation (102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 132-136) .

Plaintiff brought an action for breach of fiduciary duty and breach of contract, and the corporation cross-complained. The trial court found that plaintiff materially breached the agreement by not obtaining prior shareholder approval with respect to the billing companies, but also decided that she did not breach her fiduciary duty to the corporation. The parties appealed. The court of appeal held that the trial court properly decided that plaintiff's acts and omissions were protected by the business judgment rule. The trial court's finding that plaintiff "reasonably relied" on information that she believed to be correct was tantamount to a finding that she acted in good faith. Her breach of the agreement resulted from her mistaken belief that as a director and officer she had the authority to act on behalf of the corporation. The court noted that this was a small corporation run informally by busy emergency physicians. Plaintiff was given a great deal of responsibility and the corporation did not prove that she intentionally usurped her authority. No evidence of conflict of interest, fraud, or self-dealing existed (102 Cal. App. 4th 125, 136-138) .

Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , involved several shareholder derivative actions arising from the merger of Natomas Company into Diamond Shamrock Corporation. Shareholders of both corporations challenged "golden parachute" agreements and other benefits provided to five "inside directors" of Natomas. The complaint against all Natomas directors alleged breach of fiduciary duty, waste, mismanagement, negligence, and conversion. Summary judgments were granted in favor of defendants, on the basis of the business judgment rule.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that (1) the business judgment rule did not apply to "inside directors" and (2) triable questions of fact were presented concerning whether the outside directors' adoption of the golden parachutes constituted a proper exercise of their business judgment (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1257) .

When the merger negotiations began, Natomas's board consisted of the five "inside directors," that is, directors who were also officers of the company and its principal operating subsidiary, and 12 "outside directors" who were generally officers of unrelated businesses. When the first hostile takeover offer was made, two of the five inside directors, the chairman and chief executive officer (CEO) and a vice-president, already had "golden parachute" employment contracts that required they be paid salaries for three years after any merger. After the initial offer, the two chairmen met and proposed that the offer be withdrawn but that a merger and reorganization occur. Then, Natomas's chairman and CEO suggested that all employee agreements be reviewed and that 17 key executives receive some sort of "golden parachute." He instructed outside counsel, a merger specialist, to prepare the key executives' agreements for review by the compensation committee of the board.

The compensation committee consisted of five outside directors, one of whom, the committee's chairman, was absent when the committee met with inside and outside counsel and a Natomas vice-president to consider the golden parachute agreements. Outside counsel informed the members of the committee that the proposed agreements were favored by Diamond, which was concerned that key management remain in place. The proposed golden parachute agreements for the chairman and CEO and for the vice-president who already had one provided that they could terminate their employment with the new entity for good reason within six months following the merger and for any reason thereafter. After termination, each would receive a lump-sum payment equal to five times his annual compensation, but the lump sum would be reduced proportionately for the length of time he remained an employee following the six-month period. The proposed agreement regarding another vice-president was similar, except that he was entitled to a lump-sum payment equal to his total compensation multiplied by the greater of the number of years remaining in the term of his employment contract, then 7 years, or the number one. The proposed agreement regarding the other inside director/vice-president was similar, except that the lump-sum payment was three times his annual compensation. The reorganization plan provided that the principal operating subsidiary would be spun off into another corporation. The committee proposed to offer the president and CEO of the principal operating subsidiary a contract as head of the company being spun off. Because that officer was singularly knowledgeable about Natomas's Indonesian operations, the compensation committee decided to offer him in addition a four-year consulting agreement at $250,000 per year. During the term of the proposed consulting agreement, the consultant could engage in any other business or employment activity on a full-time basis in any field.

After meeting for about two hours, the compensation committee approved the foregoing proposed agreements and recommended their adoption by the full board. The board met the same day. The director who had chaired the compensation committee told the board that Diamond considered the agreements essential to the merger and recommended their approval. The inside directors then left the meeting, and outside counsel told the remaining directors that in mergers it was common to adopt arrangements to ensure continuity of management and provide economic protection for those key employees who might be affected and that Diamond had agreed that arrangements should be made to serve those objectives. The outside directors approved the golden parachutes and the proposed merger and reorganization agreements.

The final form of the golden parachutes was next considered at a meeting of the compensation committee approximately one month later. At that meeting, after the committee's chairman stated that the appropriateness of the agreements was a primary concern of Diamond, and that if Diamond acquiesced it was unlikely that the compensation committee would find it appropriate to dissent, cost information was circulated, but not discussed. The compensation committee approved the agreements. Immediately after the conclusion of the committee meeting, the full board met. The chairman of the compensation committee recommended approval of the golden parachutes and advised the full board that Diamond had approved them. Without further discussion, the board, with the five inside directors present but abstaining, approved the agreements.

The golden parachute agreements were disclosed in the proxy solicitations regarding the merger, which was approved by shareholders in August 1983. Four of the five officers covered by golden parachutes resigned for cause effective December 31, 1983, citing differing management philosophies that made it impossible to work with the officers appointed by Diamond. They received approximately $10 million pursuant to the agreements. The consultant was paid $1 million over the four-year term of the consultancy agreement, although he devoted less than a full day to consulting duties.

After defining golden parachutes (discussed in § 52.163[3][e]), the court of appeal began by discussing the business judgment rule. The court said that the common law business judgment rule refers to a judicial policy of deference to the business judgment of corporate directors in the exercise of their broad discretion in making corporatedecisions (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263) . The business judgment rule is premised on the notion that the directors are better able than the courts to judge whether or not a particular act or transaction is helpful to the conduct of corporate affairs or expedient for the attainment of corporate purposes. The business judgment rule establishes a presumption that a director is not liable for a mistake in business judgment that is made in good faith and in what he or she believes to be the best interests of the corporation, if no conflict of interest exists (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263) . However, the court continued, the business judgment rule does not immunize a director from liability in the case of his or her abdication of corporate responsibilities. When the courts say that they will not interfere in matters of business judgment, it is presumed that business judgment, which is to say reasonable diligence, has in fact been exercised (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263) . A director cannot close his or her eyes to what is going on in the conduct of the business of the corporation and have it said that he or she is exercising business judgment (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1263-1264) .

Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty etc. Corp. (1929) 96 Cal. App. 549, 274 P. 597 is discussed in § 52.140[3][f].

In FDIC v. Castetter (9th Cir. [Cal.] 1999) 184 F.3d 1040 , the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) seized an insolvent bank, was appointed receiver, and instituted a lawsuit against the directors. The FDIC contended that the directors were negligent in the performance of their directorial duties and should be personally liable for the losses in the bank's portfolio. The suit proceeded to trial, in which the jury reached a verdict for the FDIC. The district court granted the directors' motion for judgment as a matter of law, and in the alternative, for a new trial. The appellate court reversed the district court's grant of judgment as a matter of law, but affirmed the district court's grant of a new trial. On remand, the district court granted the directors' motion for summary judgment, and the FDIC timely appealed. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit had to decide whether, under the California business judgment rule, directors of a federally-insured national bank may be held individually liable for losses sustained by the bank under a theory of simple negligence. The court concluded that under the circumstances of the case, the California business judgment rule insulated the directors from liability, and affirmed the district court. The FDIC had claimed that the directors were not entitled to the protection of the business judgment rule because they negligently failed to investigate and inform themselves of the bank's financial condition. However, quoting Gaillard v. Natomas Co., discussed above, the court noted that California allows non-officer directors to rely upon company employees and advisors without a duty of further inquiry absent special circumstances. The directors established they acted in good faith and made a prima facie showing of a reasonable investigation. Because they did so without rebuttal, and relied on the type of information identified in Corp. Code § 309(b), they were entitled to immunity from claims of ordinary negligence (184 F.3d 1040, 1044-1046) .

[b] Business Judgment Rule Codified Under Corporations Code Section 309

A person who performs the duties of a director in accordance with Corp. Code § 309(a) and (b) has no liability based on any alleged failure to discharge his or her obligations as a director [Corp. Code § 309(c)]. In addition, the liability of a director for monetary damages may be eliminated or limited in a corporation's article to the extent provided in Corp. Code § 204(a)(10) [Corp. Code § 309(c)].

In performing the duties of a director, a director is entitled to rely on information, opinions, reports, or statements, including financial statements and other financial data, in each case prepared or presented by any of the following [Corp. Code § 309(b)]:

> (1) One or more officers or employees of the corporation whom the director believes to be reliable and competent in the matters presented;

(2) Counsel, independent accountants, or other persons with regard to matters that the director believes to be within that person's professional or expert competence;

(3) A committee of the board on which the director does not serve, with regard to matters within its designated authority, which committee the director believes to merit confidence, so long as, in any such case, the director acts in good faith, after reasonable inquiry when the need for inquiry is indicated by the circumstances and without knowledge that would cause such reliance to be unwarranted.

A director must perform the duties of a director, including duties as a member of any committee of the board on which the director may serve, in good faith, in a manner that the director believes to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders, and with such care, including reasonable inquiry as an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances [Corp. Code § 309(a)].

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. After discussing the common-law business judgment rule, the court of appeal said that Corp. Code § 309, enacted by Stats. 1976, ch. 682, and effective January 1, 1977, codifies California's business judgment rule (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264) . Corp. Code § 309 incorporates the concept of a director's immunity from liability for an honest mistake of business judgment with the concept of a director's obligation of reasonable diligence in the performance of his or her duties (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264) .

[c] Assumption Underlying Business Judgment Rule

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 is discussed in § 52.163[3][b].

Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 is discussed in § 52.140[3][a].

[d] Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule

Marsili v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 124 Cal. Rptr. 313 is discussed in § 52.147[3][b].

In Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 240 P.2d 421 , the plaintiffs fileda derivative action against all of the directors of an aircraft company and certain other individuals. The defendants filed a demurrer to the first amended complaint which was sustained without leave to amend. The plaintiffs appealed from the ensuing judgment dismissing the action. In their complaint, the plaintiffs had alleged that several directors of the aircraft company were also organizers, officers, and directors of another company which had conducted business with the aircraft company for many years and had profited at the expense of the aircraft company through methods which were a violation of the directors' fiduciary duties owed to the aircraft company. Plaintiffs further alleged that the whole board of directors had knowledge of the wrongs done to the company by a minority of the directors. It was also alleged that a demand had been made on the board of directors to take action against those directors alleged to have fraudulently breached their fiduciary duty, but the plaintiff's demand had been rejected. The plaintiffs had named the entire board in its complaint for its failure to pursue redress on behalf of the corporation. The court of appeal affirmed the decision of the trial court, holding that a refusal to sue on a fraud claim is not a ratification of fraud if the refusal is made in good faith and in the board's best business judgment (109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 177) . The court reasoned that even though there might have been a recovery for the corporation after litigation, it was within the discretionary powers of the directors to weigh the advantages of a probable recovery against the cost in money, time, and disruption to the business which a probably formidable lawsuit would entail and decide that the disruption was unwarranted (109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 177-178) . The court stated that when the board has made a good-faith business judgment, astockholder may not usurp the discretionary powers of the managers of the corporation by commencing a derivative action (109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 178) .

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 is discussed in § 52.163[3][b].

Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , is discussed in § 52.140[3][a].

[e] Specific Allegations of Fraud or Bad Faith Required

In Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 , the plaintiffs, who filed a derivative action against 16 individual defendants and a defendant corporation, appealed from a judgment entered in favor of 13 of the defendants after their general demurrer to a fifth amended and supplemental complaint had been sustained without leave to amend. The court of appeals affirmed the judgment, holding that plaintiffs had failed to state a cause of action. The court stated that in a derivative action, general charges of fraud, conspiracy, and bad faith on the part of the corporate directors are insufficient to maintain a cause of action in the absence of allegations of specific facts adequate to show the basis for the general charges (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255) . Because the complaint also sought removal of the directors, the court discussed former Corp. Code § 811 (see now Corp. Code § 811), which provides for the removal of a director in the case of fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of authority or discretion with respect to the corporation (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 257) . This complaint failed to plead any acts or conduct on the part of the director defendants that could be said to constitute fraudulent or dishonest acts or gross abuse of authority or discretion with respect to the corporation (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 257) . Here, plaintiffs had failed to allege specific facts because, of the 13 defendants, one was never a director, eight were directors for some unspecified period of time prior to the filing of the original complaint, and none of the 13 were directors at the time of the filing of the fifth amended complaint (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 259) . Furthermore, the situation alleged did not spell out fraud or dishonesty. The fact that the corporation was operating at a loss instead of at a profit, that some obligations were not reflected on the books, and that the stock record did not show all of the outstanding shares, was insufficient to sustain a cause of action. Moreover, the complaint failed to show who the directors were during the period in which the alleged bookkeeping errors were made (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 259) . Another allegation failed because its statement that there was a "great probability" that there were other, unregistered shares of stock outstanding, which were concealed by the directors, seemed without substance when the basis for the allegations was the "legends" of the available corporate records (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 259-260) . The court further pointed out that the right to have stock registered belonged to the holders of the shares, and there had been no allegation that the shares were issued unlawfully or without authority (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 260) .

Eldridge v. Tymshare, Inc. (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 230 Cal. Rptr. 815 was not a derivative action but an action by shareholders who sold their stock at a loss before announcement of a merger that would have yielded them a higher price per share. The complaint against the directors alleged that they had breached their fiduciary duties by not disclosing sooner that the merger negotiations were in progress and by negligently rejecting certain offers or improperly rejecting offers because of personal motivations to retain control. The court of appeal reversed the judgment with respect to the cause of action based on wrongful rejection of tender offers, to allow amendment of that cause of action. The court of appeal stated that the business judgment rule establishes a presumption that directors' decisions are based on sound business judgment and that this presumption is rebuttable only by a factual showing of fraud, bad faith, or gross overreaching (186 Cal. App. 3d 767, 776) .

[f] Acts Clearly Opposed to Corporation's Interest

In Fornaseri v. Cosmosart Realty etc. Corp (1929) 96 Cal. App. 549, 274 P. 597 , plaintiffs appealed from a judgment rendered against them for failure to amend their pleading after a demurrer to their second amended complaint had been sustained. The plaintiffs had complained that the directors of the defendant corporation violated their fiduciary duty by employing two other individual defendants to market the only asset of the corporation, a lease on lots, on terms which were detrimental to the corporation.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment of the trial court, held that plaintiffs had failed to state a cause of action. The court stated the governing rule to be that in the absence of fraud, breach of trust, or ultra vires transactions, the conduct of directors in managing the affairs of the corporation cannot be attacked if the acts in question are discretionary and are performed in good faith with the reasonable belief that they are in the best interests of the corporation (96 Cal. App. 549, 557) . Here, it was doubtful that the directors had violated their discretion in adopting the safest and surest plan for marketing the property when it was unlikely that the debt-ridden corporation could have afforded the time and cash outlay necessary for any other method of sale (96 Cal. App. 549, 557) . The court further held that an agreement which stated that the profits from the sale of the leases would first go to the payment of the corporation's debts, secondly to the payment of fees incurred in connection with the sale of the property, and the balance to be divided in three parts, one of which would go to the corporation was not an abuse of discretion under the circumstances (96 Cal. App. 549, 557) . It held that for the court to interfere on behalf of minority shareholders, a case must be made out which showsthat the directors' action was so far opposed to the true interest of the corporation as to lead to the clear inference that no one thus acting could have been influenced by any honest desire to protect the interests of the corporation (96 Cal. App. 549, 558) .

[g] Decisions Regarding Litigation

Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 240 P.2d 421 is discussed in § 52.140[3][d].

[h] Decisions Regarding Executive Compensation

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. That portion of the opinion addressing the application of the business judgment rule to executive compensation agreements is discussed in § 52.163[3][g].

[i] Presumption Favors Board

For a discussion of the facts in Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 , see the discussion under § 52.140[3][e]. In discussing the sufficiency of the allegations, the court of appeal noted that the conduct of directors in the management of corporate affairs is not subject to attack by minority shareholders when the acts in question are discretionary and are performed in good faith by the directors, who reasonably believe them to be in the best interests of the corporation. Every presumption is in favor of the good faith of the directors. Interference with their discretion is not warranted in doubtful cases. The challenged action of corporate management must appear affirmatively to be in disregard of duty and not merely an error in judgment, that is, a nonperformance of a manifest official obligation amounting to a breach of trust (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255) .

In Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491 , the first amended complaint alleged that in many instances in which the defendant bank had been appointed as executor, administrator, trustee, or personal representative of estates, or other matters probated or litigated in Los Angeles County, the bank, in its fiduciary capacity, appointed as its attorney in particular matters the same attorney who represented to the bank that he was the person who suggested or nominated the bank as the fiduciary. The complaint further alleged that the attorney usually had previous or current dealings or contracts of employment with the deceased, the creditors or heirs of the deceased, and other interested parties. The prior or current interest of the attorney, it was alleged, was inconsistent with the attorney's fiduciary duty of representing the interest of all parties in the proceeding at hand, and that such inconsistent interest could and did result in damages to the other parties in interest. The defendant bank demurred and its demurrer was sustained without leave to amend. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order sustaining the demurrer, stating that the question of choice of counsel is a matter of the internal management of the corporation and that in the absence of fraud, illegal or ultra vires acts, a court will not interfere, because there is a presumption in favor of the director's good faith (192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 257) . Here, the complaint contained no facts which indicated that the defendant bank had, in its choice of counsel, violated its articles of incorporation, transgressed general law, or violated public law, or violated public policy. The court held that the authority of the directors in the conduct of the business of the corporation must be regarded as absolute when they act within the law. The court cannot substitute its judgment for that of the directors (192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 256-257) .

[j] Reliance on Board Committee

Corp. Code § 309(a)* and *(b) are set forth in § 52.140[3][b].

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. That portion of the opinion addressing the right of other directors to rely on the recommendation of a committee of the board is discussed in § 52.163[3][d].

[k] Litigation Committee

Corp. Code § 309(a)* and *(b) is set forth under § 52.140[3][b].

Lewis v. Anderson (9th Cir. 1979) 615 F.2d 778 was a derivative action by two minority shareholders of Walt Disney Productions (hereinafter "Disney") against certain directors of the company, claiming that a stock option plan for key executives and the manner in which it was approved violated federal securities law. After the action was commenced, the board appointed a special litigation committee to determine whether the derivative action should be maintained. The special litigation committee consisted of two outside directors appointed to the board after the challenged transactions and one director who was named as a defendant but who did not benefit from the challenged transactions. The committee, which met nine times and retained independent counsel, determined that the action was not in Disney's best interests. Through its counsel, the committee moved for partial summary judgment on the issue of the committee's authority to dismiss the action. The trial court ruled that if the committee had exercised its business judgment in determining that the action was not in the company's best interests, they had the authority to dismiss it, but reversed the factual question whether the committee actually madea good-faith decision. The only issue on appeal was whether a special litigation committee has authority to dismiss a derivative action.

The Court of Appeals affirmed the grant of partial summary judgment. The court first said that because Disney was a California corporation, California law applied to determine the issue (615 F.2d 778, 781) . However, the California Supreme Court had never addressed the issue, so the court relied on Marsili v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 324, 124 Cal. Rptr. 313 , and Findley v. Garrett (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 166, 174, 240 P.2d 421 . The court noted that the committee was composed of disinterested directors and considered cases from other jurisdictions. The court concluded that although the business judgment rule would not bar a derivative action when a special litigation committee of disinterested directors dismissed the action in bad faith, the good-faith exercise of business judgment by a special litigation committee of disinterested directors is immune from attack by shareholders or the courts (615 F.2d 778, 781-783) .

In Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 , trustees of a charitable foundation brought a shareholders' derivative lawsuit alleging that the officers and directors of a publicly traded corporation, of which the foundation was a major shareholder, wasted corporate assets and breached their fiduciary duties. The board of directors of the corporation appointed a special litigation committee consisting of two directors who had joined the board after the alleged wrongdoing had occurred. This committee determined that the corporation should not pursue the claims. The superior court granted a defense motion for summary judgment based on the special litigation committee defense that a disinterested committee of the board of directors had determined in good faith not to pursue the claims. The plaintiffs appealed (108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 180-182) .

The appellate court affirmed, first holding that judicial review of acts of a special litigation committee is governed by the business judgment rule. The court then found that when asserted in connection with a motion for summary judgment, the material issues of fact relevant to the special litigation committee defense are independence and good faith in conducting the investigation. Neither the merits of the derivative claim nor the substance of the committee's decision to reject the claim is subject to judicial review at that stage (108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179) .

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 is discussed in § 52.163[3][b].

Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 was a derivative action by members of several related homeowners associations challenging contributions made from homeowner-paid assessments to a political action committee to support a local ballot measure. After the action was filed, each homeowners association formed a special litigation committee. These committees all concluded that the prosecution of the action was not in the best interests of the associations. Plaintiffs filed motions for summary judgment and filed a motion for a preliminary injunction. Defendants filed a motion to bifurcate and try first their affirmative defense that the action could not be maintained derivatively because disinterested special litigation committees had determined that it was not in the best interest of the associations. The superior court denied the motions for summary judgment, but granted the motion to bifurcate and try first defendants' special litigation committee defense. Plaintiffs petitioned for writ of mandate challenging the bifurcation and appealed the trial court's denial of a preliminary injunction (80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1155-1157) .

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying plaintiffs' motion for a preliminary injunction and denied plaintiffs' petition for a writ of mandate. The court first held that the special litigation committee defense is legally valid in California, citing Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 (80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1160-1161) . It next found that the defense can apply to a homeowners association. The court went on to hold that the defense is not limited to being asserted by pretrial motion. It must be allowed whenever a committee of disinterested directors acting in good faith has determined that the derivative action is not in the best interests of the corporation--if possible on motion, but if necessary, in full trial. The court finally held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in bifurcating the trial on the litigation committee defense (80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule

The court of appeal, in Barnes v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 365, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 87 , affirmed a judgment sustaining a demurrer to causes of action for violation of plaintiffs' free speech rights, unfair and misleading business practices, breach of fiduciary duty, and declaratory relief. Plaintiff, a policyholder of a mutual insurance company, commenced a class action to enjoin the insurer from using profits/premium revenues to influence political activity. While the court of appeal acknowledged that a policyholder of a mutual insurance company has the same rights against the insured as a shareholder has with respect to an ordinary corporation, use of revenues was a management decision and within the sound discretion of the insurer's directors and officers (16 Cal. App. 4th 365, 375-380) .

See also Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491 , discussed in § 52.140[3][i].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.141

§ 52.141 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Suit Improperly Filed in an Individual Capacity

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION SINCE PLAINTIFF'S SUIT IS FILED IN AN INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY, WHEREAS HIS/HER CAUSE OF ACTION IN NOT INDIVIDUAL; THEREFORE, THE COMPLAINT IS IMPROPERLY FILED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Stockholder's Individual Suit Distinguished From a Derivative Suit. The stockholder's individual suit, as opposed to a derivative suit, is a suit to enforce a right against the corporation which the stockholder possesses as an individual (Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; Pareto v. FDIC (9th Cir. 1998) 139 F.3d 696).

C. Injury to Corporation Maintained in Representative Capacity Only. When the causes of action which a plaintiff has attempted to plead are derivative in nature in that the facts alleged indicate that the injury is to the corporation and to the whole body of its shareholders, plaintiff may not maintain the suit in any capacity other than in a representative capacity for and on behalf of the corporation (Schuster v. Gardner (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 309, 312-315, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 ; Paclink Communications International, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964-966, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 ; Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-128, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action in support of a demurrer which asserts that the gravamen of plaintiff's complaint states a cause of action on behalf of the corporation and the whole body of shareholders, and therefore plaintiff may not maintain the suit in an individual capacity but must maintain it in a derivative capacity.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stockholder's Individual Suit Distinguished from a Derivative Suit

In Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 , plaintiff appealed from a judgment of dismissal entered after the trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer without leave to amend. The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that plaintiff's complaint stated an individual cause of action against the majority shareholders for alleged financial manipulations which diminished the value and marketability of plaintiff's shares. In making its decision, the Court reiterated that the distinction between a shareholder's individual suit, as opposed to a derivative suit, is that the individual suit is to enforce a right against the corporation which the stockholder possesses as an individual. In a derivative action the recovery benefits the corporation alone; the stockholders derive no benefits except the indirect benefit realized from the gain to the corporation (1 Cal. 3d 93, 107) .

The rule set forth in this case, and the distinction between derivative and non-derivative claims is discussed further in detail in Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 (holding that plaintiff's action was not derivative), and Denevi v. LGCC (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276 (holding that a plaintiff who had previously brought a successful derivative action against LLC was also entitled to bring an action in his individual capacity), discussed in § 52.141[4].

In Pareto v. FDIC (1998) 139 F.3d 696 , a group of former stockholders of a bank brought suit in state court against certain of the bank's former directors, alleging violations of the duties of care and loyalty under Corp. Code § 309 and seeking punitive damages under Civ. Code § 3294. The state trial court denied the directors' demurrer and the state court of appeal denied their petition for a writ of mandate. Plaintiffs then served the FDIC as a defendant. Once served, the FDIC removed the action to the United States District Court and moved to dismiss for lack of standing and failure to state a claim. The directors also moved to dismiss. The district court granted the motion and dismissed the complaint without leave to amend (139 F.3d 696, 698) .

The Ninth Circuit found that plaintiffs' claims were for injury to the corporation itself, which ultimately reduced the value of the stock. Citing Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 , discussed above, the court held that action was derivative because the gravamen of the complaint was injury to the corporation or to the body of its stock or property, without any severance or distribution among individual holders. Plaintiffs' allegations that the directors breached their duties of care and loyalty by failing to safeguard the bank's assets and equity, mismanaging its operations, improperly placing it into voluntary receivership, and failing to exercise due diligence during merger attempts described a direct injury to the bank, not the individual stockholders. Plaintiffs did not allege injury to a right they possessed as individuals, separate and distinct from the injury to the value of the bank's stock and property due to its closure. The Ninth Circuit therefore held that the claim was derivative and affirmed the district court's dismissal (139 F.3d 696, 699-700) .

[b] Injury to Corporation Maintained in Representative Capacity Only

In Schuster v. Gardner (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , a shareholder brought a class action on behalf of all current and former stockholders of a Delaware corporation for the alleged breach of fiduciary duty, and the aiding and abetting the breach of fiduciary duties, by defendant officers and directors. Defendants removed the action to federal court on the grounds of preemption by the Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998 (SLUSA) [15 U.S.C. § 78bb(f)]. Plaintiff amended the complaint to avoid SLUSA, and the federal court then granted his motion to remand the matter to state court. The first amended complaint stated that defendants breached or abetted breaches of fiduciary duties of good faith and loyalty, including the duty of disclosure owed to shareholders. It also alleged defendants sold large amounts of stock while deceiving shareholders into holding their shares. Defendants demurred to the complaint on the grounds that the claims were derivative, and thus plaintiff lacked standing to pursue them. Defendants asserted that the claims were common to all shareholders and the property of the corporation's bankruptcy estate, and that notably absent was the corporation, the nominal defendant in a derivative action. The court sustained the demurrers with leave to amend. Plaintiff filed a second amended complaint, the defendants again demurred on the ground that the claims were derivative, and the court sustained the demurrers without leave to amend, entering a judgment of dismissal (127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 309-311) .

The court of appeal discussed the distinction between a direct action by a shareholder for injury to his or her interest as a shareholder, and a derivative action filed on behalf of the corporation for injury to the corporation for which it failed or refused to sue. Plaintiff objected to application of Delaware law to resolve the issue of whether the complaint was derivative or direct, and contended that under California law, it was a direct action. The court concluded that the action was derivative under both Delaware and California law, and accordingly affirmed the judgment (127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 312). Under California law, a shareholder cannot bring a direct action for damages against management on the theory that their alleged wrongdoing decreased the value of his or her stock. The corporation itself must bring such an action, or a derivative suit may be brought on the corporation's behalf. Here, the gravamen of the second amended complaint was harm to the corporation (127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 312). The court likewise found that under Delaware law, this was a derivative suit. The corporation suffered the alleged harm, and it rather than the individual stockholders should receive the benefit of any recovery. The court held that plaintiff lacked standing to pursue the action under both California and Delaware law, and affirmed the judgment (127 Cal. App. 4th 305, 318).

In Paclink Communications International, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 , members of an LLC brought a direct action against successor companies to the LLC, alleging fraudulent transfer of the company's assets. Defendants filed a demurrer, asserting that plaintiffs lacked standing to bring the claims because the real party in interest was the LLC. Plaintiffs opposed the demurrer, claiming the action was not derivative because defendants had acted with the intent to defraud plaintiffs and thus they were attempting to recover for their personal injury. The trial court concluded that the action was a personal, not derivative, action, and thus overruled the defendants' demurrer.

The court of appeal first stated that the principles of derivative lawsuits applicable to corporations likewise apply to an LLC. The court then reviewed the principles regarding derivative suits as set forth in Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson, discussed in § 52.141[3][a]. The court found that the essence of plaintiffs' claim was that the company's assets were fraudulently transferred without any compensation being paid to the LLC. This constituted an injury to the company itself. Because members of the LLC hold no direct ownership in the company's assets, the members cannot be directly injured when the company is improperly deprived of those assets (90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964-965) . The court noted that plaintiffs attempted to avoid this conclusion by claiming that they were suing as creditors of the company rather than as members of the LLC. The court noted that in determining whether an individual action as opposed to a derivative action lies, a court looks at the gravamen of the wrong alleged in the pleadings. Here, the wrong alleged was a fraudulent transfer of the company's assets which injured the LLC, with an incidental injury to plaintiffs in the form of diminution of the value of their ownership interest. Clearly, plaintiffs were not suing based on a claim that as members of the LLC they were entitled to a distribution which was not made, but for financial injury caused byfraudulent transfer of the company's assets. The court issued issuance of a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to set aside its order overruling the demurrer, and to enter a new and different order sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend on the basis that plaintiffs had no standing to sue other than by a derivative action (90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 965-966) .

In Nelson v. Anderson (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753 , one of two shareholders in a corporation formed to market skin care products through infomercials brought an action against the other, a well-known actress, for breach of her fiduciary duties as the majority shareholder. A jury awarded plaintiff damages and the trial court entered judgment for plaintiff. Appellant contended that plaintiff had no standing to bring the action as an individual, but should have brought a derivative action on behalf of the corporation. The court of appeal agreed and reversed the judgment. It held that it is the gravamen of the wrong alleged in the pleadings, not simply the resulting injury, that determines whether an individual action lies. While in some cases the same facts regarding injury to the corporation may underlie a personal cause of action, such as intentional infliction of emotional distress, breach of contract, fraud, or defamation, plaintiff did not allege or prove the elements of any such cause of action. All of the acts alleged to have caused plaintiff's injury amounted to alleged misfeasance or negligence in managing the corporation's business, causing the business to be a total failure. Thus, any obligations violated were duties owed directly and immediately to the corporation. Because the gravamen of the complaint was injury to the whole body of its stockholders, it was for the corporation to institute and maintain a remedial action. A derivative action would have been appropriate if its responsible officials had refused or failed to act (72 Cal. App. 4th 111, 124-126) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stockholder's Individual Suit Distinguished from a Derivative Suit

In Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187 , the court acknowledged Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592 , discussed in § 52.141[3][a], as an authoritative starting point for analysis of whether a claim is derivative or non-derivative. However, the court went on to note that while claims for corporate mismanagement generally have been held derivative in nature, claims that minority shareholders were deprived of their proportionate share of profits or the value of corporate assets generally have been held to be non-derivative. Thus, the court held that the minority shareholder plaintiff's claim that majority stockholders paid themselves excessive compensation, thereby depriving him of his proportionate share of corporate profits, came "within the scope of allowable individual actions" (121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1258) .

Denevi v. LGCC (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1221-1223, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276 involved a complaint brought by a shareholder in his individual capacity following his successful prosecution of a derivative suit arising out of interrelated claims. The court cited Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. for the settled principle that "a single course of action by a majority shareholder may give rise to derivative claims, individual claims, or both," and therefore that "one who has suffered injury both as an owner of a corporate entity and in an individual capacity is entitled to pursue remedies in both capacities." There was "no doubt" that the plaintiff alleged both derivative and individual claims when he sued for fraud that caused him to transfer rights to purchase real estate to a newly formed limited liability company, and also for harm subsequently occurring to that company when the majority interests failed to exercise those purchase rights.

In Vega v. Jones, Day Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 296-297 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 , plaintiff, a former shareholder in an acquired corporation, sued the attorneys for the acquiring corporation for fraud based on a material non-disclosure after he discovered that the shares in the acquiring corporation he had received as consideration were worthless. The defendant contended that the gravamen of the complaint was for diminution of the acquiring corporation's stock, and that the claim was therefore a derivative claim. Citing Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592 , discussed in § 52.141[3][a], the court held that the action was individual, not derivative, because plaintiff's allegation was that the defendant had deceived him into exchanging his valuable stock in the acquired corporation for worthless stock in the acquiring corporation, and that plaintiff therefore sought recovery for injury to himself (121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 296-297) .

[b] Injury to Corporation Maintained in Representative Capacity Only

In Avikian v. WTC Financial Corp. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , a group of shareholders filed suit against officers and directors of a corporation, claiming that they had negligently mismanaged it or looted its assets, culminating in its involuntary liquidation. The corporation previously had been placed into liquidation by the California Insurance Commissioner. The order imposing the liquidation included provisions specifying that the Insurance Commissioner held title to all corporate assets, including all rights of action, and enjoined all other persons from prosecuting any action against the corporation without consent of the court. The defendants moved to dismiss the complaints based on the pendency of the liquidation proceeding and the fact that assertion of the derivative claims violated the terms of the restraining order in that proceeding. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss and granted defendants' motion for fees pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 (98 Cal. App. 4th 1108,1112-1114). The shareholders appealed and the court of appeal affirmed. The court initially stated that the real problem in the case was that appellants' claims were all derivative in nature. Citing Paclink Communications International Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 958, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 , discussed in § 52.141[3], the court reviewed the nature of shareholders' derivative and individual suits. It then found that appellants' core claim was that defendants' mismanaged the corporation and entered into self-serving deals to sell its assets to third parties. The assertions of improper selling and purchasing of assets amounted to a claim of injury to the corporation itself. The court stated that appellants' own damages--the loss in value of their investments in the corporation--were merely incidental to the alleged harm inflicted upon the corporation and all of its shareholders. Because appellants were purporting to assert claims belonging to the corporate entity, the trial court properly dismissed their complaints (98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1115-1117) .

In Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 432, 324 P.2d 51 , the plaintiff appealed from a judgment of dismissal entered after the defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings was granted. The plaintiff had alleged that the officers and directors of the corporation wrongfully appropriated and paid to themselves the earnings and profits of the corporation. It was further alleged that all these acts by the officers and directors were done maliciously with the intent of injuring plaintiff, and asked that all earnings and profits wrongfully appropriated be returned, and the sum of $60,000 be paid to plaintiff as her share of the dividends withheld from her as a shareholder. The court of appeal held that since the complaint alleged the misappropriation of corporate funds the action should be brought as a derivative suit. Since the gravamen of the complaint was injury to the whole corporation and the body of its shareholders, the causes of action were derivative in nature and could not be maintained in an individual capacity. For this same reason, plaintiff could not maintain the action without fulfilling the requirement of Corp. Code § 834(a) [see now Corp. Code § 800(b)] of being a registered shareholder at the time the transactions complained of occurred and of having made a formal demand on the board of directors for action.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.142

§ 52.142 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege Plaintiff Is Registered or Beneficial Shareholder or Holder of a Voting Trust Certificate [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT PLAINTIFF FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT HE/SHE IS A REGISTERED OR BENEFICIAL SHAREHOLDER OR HOLDER OF VOTING TRUST CERTIFICATES IN THE CORPORATION AT THE TIME THE TRANSACTION(S) COMPLAINED OF OCCURRED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Registered Shareholder or Holder of Voting Trust Certificates Condition. No derivative action may be maintained unless plaintiff alleges in the complaint that plaintiff was a shareholder, of record or beneficially, or the holder of voting trust certificates at the time of the transaction or any part thereof complained of occurred (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action to support a demurrer to a complaint which asserts that plaintiffs complaint for a derivative action fails to state a cause of action since the plaintiff has failed to comply with the statutory requirement that he or she was a registered shareholder or beneficial shareholder or holder of voting trust certificates at the time the transactions complained of occurred.

If appropriate to the facts of a particular case, counsel may wish to include authority from Paragraph F of § 52.182 regarding a shareholder's lack of standing after constructive transfer or surrender of his or her shares. Although the authority cited in § 52.182 arose from an action seeking involuntary dissolution, it appears to be applicable to any situation in which shareholder status is required for standing.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Objection by Demurrer

In Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1005, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 , the court stated that although the nominal defendant corporation, being actually interested as a reluctant plaintiff, generally may not defend a derivative action which is filed on its behalf, the corporation may assert defenses contesting the plaintiff's right or decision to bring suit. For example, the corporation may file a demurrer on the ground that the plaintiff has not alleged facts showing standing to sue derivatively. For additional discussion of this decision, see § 52.158[4][a].

[b] Registered Shareholder or Holder of Voting Trust Certificates Condition

In Daly v. Yessne (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 52, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 420 , the plaintiff in a derivative action was not a shareholder but did hold an option(under an incentive stock option plan for employees) to buy shares of the corporation's stock, at the time the events alleged in the complaint occurred. The court of appeal held that although equitable ownership may sometimes confer standing on a plaintiff to sue derivatively, a holder of an option to buy stock is not an equitable shareholder of the corporation for purposes of Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) and does not have standing to sue derivatively on a cause of action arising before the option is converted into actual ownership of stock.

In Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491 , the court of appeal affirmed a decision of the trial court sustaining the defendant's demurrer to the complaint for a derivative action without leave to amend. One of the grounds on which the demurrer was sustained was plaintiff's failure to allege that he was a registered shareholder at the time the transactions complained of occurred or during any part of the period during which they occurred. Plaintiff had only alleged that he was an owner of shares in the corporation. The court held that no suit could be maintained unless the statutory prerequisites of Corp. Code § 834 [now Corp. Code § 800(b)] requiring that the plaintiff in a derivative action be a registered shareholder at the time the transactions complained of occurred had been met.

In Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 432, 324 P.2d 51 , the plaintiff appealed from a judgment rendered after the defendant's objection to the introduction of any evidence was sustained and plaintiff's motion for leave to amend her complaint was denied. Plaintiff alleged that she had purchased her shares from two former shareholders of the corporation. She alleged that the officers and directors had conspired to wrong plaintiff's assignors by voting themselves excessive salaries, bonuses, royalties, and commissions, and that defendants had used the funds of the corporation for their own benefit. It was further alleged that the officers and directors had withheld correct information about the profits and gains of the corporation from the shareholders. It was alleged that all these acts were done maliciously with the intent of injuring plaintiff. The prayer asked that all sums, profits, and earnings wrongfully appropriated and concealed be returned to the corporation, that the directors and officers be restrained from taking excessive bonuses and salaries, for an accounting, and for the sum of $60,000 to be paid to plaintiff as her share of the monies withheld from her as a shareholder. The trial court ordered the dismissal on the grounds that plaintiff's complaint failed to state a cause of action. The appellate court affirmed, holding that plaintiff had couched the complaint in an individual capacity, whereas her allegations that officers and directors misused earnings and profits affected all shareholders and the corporation, and, thus, the causes of actions were derivative in nature. Plaintiff could not maintain the causes of action pleaded in any other capacity but as a representative of the corporation. For this reason, plaintiff's suit failed in that she did not allege that she was a registered shareholder of the corporation as required by former Corp. Code § 834(a) [see now Corp. Code § 800(b)], nor did she contend on appeal that she could amend her complaint to allege compliance with the statute.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.143

§ 52.143 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Has Informed Board of Directors or Corporation of Lawsuit [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT PLAINTIFF HAS INFORMED THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OR CORPORATION OF THE LAWSUIT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Inform Board of Directors or Corporation. A derivative action may not be maintained by a plaintiff who fails to allege in the complaint that he/she has informed the corporation or the board of directors in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action alleged against each defendant or delivered to the board or corporation a true copy of the complaint which the plaintiff proposes to file (Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to support a general demurrer to a complaint for a derivative action if the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to allege that the plaintiff informed the board of directors or corporation in writing of the ultimate facts of each cause of action alleged against each defendant or delivered to the board or corporation a true copy of the complaint which plaintiff proposed to file [Corp. Code§ 800(b)]. Counsel should note that the statutory requirement that the plaintiff inform the board of the proposed action [Corp. Code § 800(b)] is one of two steps which must be undertaken by a plaintiff before a derivative action may be maintained. The other step, as set forth in Corp. Code § 800(b), is that the plaintiff has made efforts to secure action by the board of directors [see § 52.144].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Inform Board of Directors or Corporation

In Bader v. Anderson (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 775, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 821, the plaintiff shareholder, appealing from a judgment of dismissal after the trial court sustained a demurrer without leave to amend, argued that the demand requirement does not apply in instances in which the underlying wrong concerns alleged misrepresentations or omissions in a proxy statement. The court of appeal rejected that argument. The court concluded, "Such an exception would unnecessarily divest directors of the customary power they hold in the initiation and management of litigation in any instance where the alleged wrong to the corporation resulted from the issuance of a proxy statement. Just as the demand requirement would be substantially diluted if prior board approval of the challenged action standing alone established futility, creating a proxy statement exemption would permit a large group of derivative cases to proceed without either prior submission of the matter to the corporate board or a showing of demand futility. We do not view the circumstance--i.e., the fact that the underlying dispute concerns the issuance of an allegedly misleading proxy statement--to constitute an extraordinary condition constituting an excuse for a demand. In light of the significant policy considerations for the demand requirement, there is in our opinion no basis for the creation of such a hair trigger demand excusal when the underlying suit involves the distribution of a proxy statement" (179 Cal. App. 4th 775, 796) (citations and internal quotation marks omitted).

In Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order sustaining a demurrer to a shareholder's derivative action. One of the grounds on which the demurrer was sustained was plaintiff's failure to fulfill the requirements set forth in Corp. Code § 834 [now see Corp. Code § 800(b)] for maintaining a derivative action. Plaintiff had alleged that he had made a demand upon the defendant to cease and desist from certain activities; however, he had failed to allege with particularity his efforts to secure action from the board, or that he had either informed the corporation or the board in writing of each of the ultimate facts of each cause of action against each defendant director, or that he had delivered to the corporation or its board a copy of the complaint, or the reasons for his failure to undertake any of these actions. The failure to allege that these steps required by the statute had been taken was fatal to the complaint.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.144

§ 52.144 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege With Particularity Efforts to Secure Action by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]--By Director

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE WITH PARTICULARITY THAT PLAINTIFF MADE EFFORTS TO SECURE ACTION BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Make Demand. A derivative action may not be maintained by a plaintiff who fails to allege with particularity his/her efforts to secure from the board such action as the plaintiff desires (Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to support a general demurrer to a complaint for a derivative action when the demurrer asserts that a complaint fails to allege with particularity that a demand was made on the board of directors to take the action the plaintiff desired [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]. The requirement that plaintiff make efforts to secure action by the board is one of two statutory requirements which must be met before a derivative action may be maintained by a plaintiff [see Corp. Code § 800(b); see also § 52.142].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Make Demand

In Fairchild v. Bank of America (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 252, 13 Cal. Rptr. 491 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order sustaining a demurrer to a shareholder's derivative action. One of the grounds on which the demurrer was sustained was plaintiff's failure to fulfill the demand requirements as set forth in Corp. Code § 834 [now Corp. Code § 800(b)]. While plaintiff had alleged that a demand had been made upon the defendant corporation to cease and desist the activities complained of, plaintiff had failed to allege with particularity his efforts to secure from the board of directors the action he desired.

In Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 , the plaintiffs, who had filed a derivative action against a corporation and 16 individual defendants, appealed from a judgment in favor of three defendants which had been entered when a demurrer had been sustained with leave to amend their fifth amended complaint and the plaintiffs had failed to file the amendment. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment holding that the plaintiffs had failed to show compliance with former Corp. Code § 834(a) [now Corp. Code § 800(b)]. The complaint alleged that the three defendant directors knew that demands had been made upon them and their predecessors to ascertain the true financial condition of the corporation; however, the complaint failed to allege that the plaintiffs' demands were made in writing as required by the statute, the dates or contents of those demands, or upon whom the demands had been made. Further, there was no allegation that the demands had been made directly to the three directors or to the board of directors.

In Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 432, 324 P.2d 51 , the plaintiff appealed from a judgment rendered after the defendant's objection to the introduction of any evidence was sustained and plaintiff's motion for leave to amend her complaint was denied. Plaintiff alleged that she had purchased her shares from two former shareholders of the corporation. She alleged that the officers and directors had conspired to wrong plaintiff's assignors by voting themselves excessive salaries, bonuses, royalties, and commissions, and that defendants had used the funds of the corporation for their own benefit. It was further alleged that the officers and directors had withheld correct information about the profits and gains of the corporation from the shareholders. It was alleged that all these acts were done maliciously with the intent of injuring plaintiff. The prayer asked that all sums, profits, and earnings wrongfully appropriated and concealed be returned to the corporation, that the directors and officers be restrained from taking excessive bonuses and salaries, for an accounting, and for the sum of $60,000 to be paid to plaintiff as her share of the monies withheld from her as a shareholder. The trial court ordered the dismissal on the grounds that plaintiff's complaint failed to state a cause of action. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff had filed the complaint in an individual capacity, whereas her allegations that officers and directors misused earnings and profits affected all shareholders and the corporation and, thus, the causes of actions were derivative in nature. Plaintiff could not maintain the causes of action pleaded in any other capacity but as a representative of the corporation. For this reason, plaintiff's suit failed since she had failed to meet the requirements of Corp. Code § 834(a) [now see Corp. Code § 800(b)] failing to allege that she had made a written demand upon the board of directors to take action or delivered a copy of the complaint to the corporation or the board of directors.

111 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.145

§ 52.145 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Failure to Allege With Particularity Facts to Establish Futility of Demanding Action by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE WITH PARTICULARITY FACTS THAT WOULD ESTABLISH WHY IT WAS FUTILE TO DEMAND ACTION BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Allege Reasons for Futility. Broad conclusionary allegations that directors participated in, conspired in, aided, abetted, or benefitted from the activities alleged to have harmed the corporation are insufficient to establish that it would have been futile for plaintiff to demand action by the board of directors prior to filing a derivative action. The complaint must allege facts that show directors had knowledge of, participated in, or benefitted from the wrongdoing, or were otherwise disabled from exercising independent business judgment; it must allege facts specific to each director from which the court can conclude that that particular director could or could not be expected to fairly evaluate the claims of the shareholder plaintiff (Corp. Code § 800(b)(2); Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1621-1622, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint in a derivative action when plaintiff did not make or allege any prefiling demand on the board of directors to take action on the issue that gave rise to the derivative action. The points and authorities in thisform challenge the sufficiency of allegations designed to establish why prefiling demand would have been futile [see Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The conclusionary and insufficient allegations should be quoted or referred to.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Reasons for Futility

Corp. Code § 800(b)(2) provides in part that a derivative action cannot be maintained unless the complaint alleges with particularity plaintiff's efforts to secure from the board the action plaintiff desires, or the reasons for not making such an effort.

Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 was a stockholders' derivative action against three classes of defendants arising out of unlawful activities of employees of a subsidiary. These activities came to light as part of a criminal investigations of fraud and corruption in the procurement of military defense contracts. The injuries alleged to the corporation were criminal and civil penalties, settlement payments and legal fees, as well as the loss of future business as a consequence of the company's being disqualified from bidding on government contracts. The three classes of defendants were (1) directors of the parent corporation; (2) officers of the parent corporation; and (3) individual employees of and consultants to the subsidiary. The officer and director defendants (hereinafter collectively referred to as "the director defendants") demurred on the ground that plaintiff had not met the prefiling demand requirements of Corp. Code § 800(b)(2) and that the complaint failed to allege a cause of action against them.

Plaintiff's counsel wrote to the board of directors of the parent company and stated that certain senior executives seemed to be implicated in the procurement scandal revealed by the government investigation and demanded that the company sue the directors for breach of fiduciary duty for failing to hold the implicated executives accountable for the company's plight. The defendant responded by asking plaintiff to provide whatever information he had that "causes you to believe that particular senior executives or directors have engaged in wrongdoing." Two months later, and without further communications from either party, plaintiff filed the derivative action. The first demurrer was sustained with leave to amend. Plaintiff posted $50,000 bond as provided by Corp. Code § 800(e). When the prefiling demand allegations were challenged a second time, plaintiff argued that the bond posted under subdivision (e) satisfied the requirements of (b), (c), and (d). The trial court rejected that argument, and again sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. At the hearing on the third demurrer, the trial court held that the "group" allegations against directors, were insufficient to establish the futility of any demand in that they failed to specify the acts engaged in by each director (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1617-1618) . Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal affirmed.

With respect to the allegations regarding the futility of prefiling demand, the court first determined that it need not apply Delaware law, because the result would be the same under either (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1620-1621) .

The complaint alleged that virtually all of the subsidiary's 1988 revenues of $75 million were derived from the defense industry; that three of the subsidiary's executives paid $160,000 to two consultants to obtain inside information from a civilian employee of the navy to aid the subsidiary in its procurement of contracts. Specifically, the subsidiary received a $24 million Army contract that it would not have received but for the illegal bribes. All of those officers were named defendants. Two of them were convicted of federal criminal charges. The allegations against the parent company officers and directors were that they caused the company to maintain an inadequate system of internal financial and accounting controls such that the corporation's assets have not been reasonably safeguarded against misuse. Their conduct allowed (1) both the parent and the subsidiary to use funds to pay improper bribes or gratuities in violation of law; and (2) the subsidiary's employees to falsely certify that no consultants were hired during the procurement process. The complaint alleged that all of the directors were "interested" in and direct beneficiaries of, the underlying wrongdoing because they received compensation and awards based on the company's consolidated earnings, which were inflated by reason of the illegal defense procurement activities (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1615-1616) .

The court characterized plaintiff's argument as basically that the officers and directors are responsible for the wrongdoing of the employees of the subsidiary, and personally benefitted from those acts. Plaintiff relied on cases holding that no demand is necessary when conspiracy, fraud, or criminal conduct of defendants is charged. While the court of appeal agreed that was a sound principle, it did not apply in this case because the director defendants were not charged with any criminal conduct. As to the director defendants, the broad conclusionary allegations that each "participated in, conspired in, or aided and abetted the criminal and fraudulent activities at issue" were insufficient. The complaint did not contain a single fact that would indicate that the directors had any knowledge of, much less participated in, any criminal or fraudulent activities, nor that they benefitted directly from the wrongdoing or were otherwise disabled form exercising independent business judgment. The allegations were too conclusionary to establish the futility of a prefiling demand (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1621-1622) .

In order to evaluate a demand futility claim, the court must be apprised of facts specific to each director from which it can conclude that particular director could or could not be expected to fairly evaluate the claims of the shareholder plaintiff (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1622) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Reasons for Futility

In Oakland Raiders v. National Football League (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 255 , a professional football team sued the National Football League and others, alleging mismanagement and abuse of power by the NFL. The defendants made several successful motions for summary adjudication. Because the orders disposed of all causes of action against certain defendants, the trial court entered judgment as to those defendants. The club appealed and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. Regarding the derivative causes of action, the club alleged that making a demand on the derivative entities to sue individuals would have been futile because the entities were dominated by those individuals and thus lacked independent business judgment. The trial court found against the club because it determined that defendants had presented sufficient evidence to show that demand would not have been futile, and the club had failed to produce evidence that demand would have been futile. The test for proving demand futility is whether the facts show a reasonable doubt that (1) the directors are disinterested and independent, and (2) the challenged transaction was otherwise the product of a valid exercise of business judgment (93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 579-580) .

With respect to demand futility, the club contended that the demand futility rule is a mere pleading requirement that drops out of the case once a derivative suit survives a demurrer. The court found, however, that the issue is not foreclosed simply because the complaint is sufficient. It therefore rejected the club's contention that the trial court erred by considering demand futility as an element of the derivative claims that is subject to proof (93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 584-586) . The court stated that the test for proving demand futility is whether the facts show a reasonable doubt that (1) the directors are disinterested and independent, and (2) the challenged transaction was otherwise the product of a valid exercise of business judgment (93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 587) . It found that demand futility cannot be shown by evidence of a structural bias in lieu of facts, specific to each director, from which the trier of fact could conclude that a particular director could or could not be expected to fairly evaluate the claims of the shareholder plaintiff (citing Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1622, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 , discussed in § 52.145[3][a]). It also held that a board's failure to appoint a special litigation committee to investigate the claims made in a derivative suit cannot raise an inference of demand futility because there is no necessity to appoint a special litigation committee if the board itself is disinterested (93 Cal. App. 4th 572, 590) .

112 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.146

§ 52.146 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Posting Bond [Corp. Code § 800(e)] Is Not Substitute for Prefiling Demand or Sufficient Allegation of Futility of Demand [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.140.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT POSTING BOND IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR PREFILING DEMAND OR FOR SUFFICIENTLY ALLEGING THAT SUCH DEMAND WOULD HAVE BEEN FUTILE.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 52.60, Paragraph A.]

B. Posting Bond No Substitute for Demand. The statement in Subdivision (e) of Section 800 of the Corporations Code that a plaintiff who has posted a $50,000 bond "has complied with the requirements of this section," means that such a plaintiff has complied with the voluntary posting provisions in subdivisions (c) and (d). Posting bond voluntarily is no substitute for meeting the standing requirement of subdivision (b)(1) or the prefiling demand requirement of subdivision (b)(2) of that section (Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1618-1620, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint in a derivative action when plaintiff did not allege any prefiling demand on the board of directors or the futility of such a demand, but claims instead that voluntarily posting the $50,000 bond is a proper substitute [see Corp. Code § 800(e)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Posting Bond No Substitute for Demand

The facts and procedural background of Shields v. Singleton (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 are discussed in § 52.145[3][a]. Plaintiff also argued that by posting $50,000 pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(e), which plaintiff did before the filing of the second amended complaint, was sufficient alternative compliance with the demand requirement of Corp. Code § 800(b)(2). The court of appealed disagreed and affirmed the judgment based on the sustaining of the demurrer to the second amended complaint (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1618) . The court of appeal said there were three requirements imposed by Corp. Code § 800 (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1618-1619) :

- Plaintiff must be a shareholder [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)];

- Plaintiff must have notified the board of directors of the proposed defendant corporation concerning the "ultimate facts of each cause of action" and the action plaintiff wants the board to take to remedy the alleged wrongdoing. Alternatively, plaintiff may demonstrate that any demand on the board would have been futile [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]; and

- Plaintiff must demonstrate that there is a reasonable probability that the action will benefit the corporation or its shareholders. If plaintiff cannot demonstrate this reasonable probability, he or she must post bond not to exceed $50,000 [Corp. Code § 800(c)].

Corp. Code § 800(e) provides in part that either before or after a motion is made pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c), plaintiff may post bond, in the aggregate amount of $50,000, to secure the reasonable expenses of the parties entitled to make the motion. If plaintiff furnishes the bond, plaintiff "has complied with this section, and with any order for bond theretofore made thereunder, and any such motion then pending shall be dismissed and no further or additional bond shall be required."

As originally, the quoted language was part of Corp. Code § 834 and provided that in the event plaintiff voluntarily posted a $25,000 bond, plaintiff "shall be deemed to have fully complied with the requirements of this subdivision ..."

The provision was the subject of a Legislative study in 1974 and 1975, part of a joint effort by the Legislature and the State Bar to revise the Corporations Code. Originally, the only change suggested was to increase the amount of the bond to $50,000. However, later, as the draft went through the State Bar review process, other changes were added, and discussed at length in the select committee's report. When it left the Assembly, the draft retained the term "section." The first draft circulated by the State Bar had substituted the word "subdivision," but the change was not discussed in the accompanying report. The court of appeal thus concluded that the change did not reflect a Legislative intent to change the purpose or effect of the voluntary bond: to provide security for defendants' reasonable expenses in defending the suit when there is no reasonable probability that the suit will benefit the corporation or its shareholders (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1619, 1620) . The statement in Corp. Code § 800(e) that "the plaintiff has complied with the requirements of this section" means the voluntary posting section: Corp. Code § 800(c) and (d). The court of appeal said that plaintiff's reading of this language to include satisfaction of the standing and demand requirements of Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) and (b)(2) was untenable, as the voluntary posting of bond does nothing to effect the purposes of those subdivisions. Indeed, plaintiff's interpretation would eliminate the standing and demand requirements, both of which have always been essential elements of a derivative suit. The requirement that plaintiff be a shareholder is at the very heart of this type of action. The court states that there is not the slightest indication in all of the legislative history of Corp. Code § 800 that the Legislature had any such intention when it revised Subdivision (e) in connection with the 1975 overhaul of the Corporations Law (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1620) . The court summarized that in its view, the quoted sentence of Corp. Code § 800(e) clearly refers to the bonding provisions of Corp. Code § 800(c) and (d) and not to the whole of the shareholder derivative statute. This interpretation avoids the absurd consequences of the literal abstract reading (15 Cal. App. 4th 1611, 1620) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.147

§ 52.147 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--Good-Faith Business Judgment by Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff(s), vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
_____ [name(s)],	)	SUMMARY JUDGMENT
Defendant(s),	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Corporation.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT(S) IS PROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO SHOW THAT BUSINESS JUDGMENT OF THE [_____ (specify board committee, if any, e.g., LITIGATION) COMMITTEE OF THE] BOARD OF DIRECTORS WAS NOT EXERCISED IN GOOD FAITH.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.31, Paragraph A.]

B. Business Judgment Rule Under Common Law. [See § 52.140, Paragraph B.]

C. Business Judgment Rule Codified Under Section 309 of the Corporations Code. [See § 52.140, Paragraph C.]

D. Immunity Granted by Business Judgment Rule. [See § 52.140, Paragraph E.]

[Optional] E. Procedural Alternatives Available to Corporation. If the board of directors of a corporation [or a committee of the board] makes a good-faith determination that the derivative action should be dismissed, the corporation may demur, move for judgment on the pleadings, make a motion in the trial court to dismiss the suit, or seek summary judgment (Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 ; Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040-1041, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 1161-1163, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128).

[Optional] F. Adoption of Means Not Limited by Law. With respect to the means which the corporation may adopt to further its objects and promote its businesses, its managers are not limited in law to the use of such means as are usual or necessary to the objects contemplated by their organization; instead, if not restricted by law, the managers may choose any means that are convenient and adapted to the end, though they be neither the usual means, nor absolutely necessary for the purpose intended (Marsili v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 324, 124 Cal. Rptr. 313).

[Optional] G. Hindsight Not Relevant. A court's assessment of a director's alleged oversight or mistake in judgment must be based on the facts and factors existing at the time of action or nonaction. Hindsight is irrelevant. Thus, for instance, whether a consultant actually rendered services worth the consideration paid by the corporation is irrelevant under the business judgment rule (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 1271, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in a derivative action based on the ground that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law because, in the absence of fraud, breach of trust, or ultra vires transactions, neither a court nor minority shareholder may interfere with the good faith business judgments of the board of directors. Counsel may wish to include other authorities from § 52.147 or 52.163 that address particular aspects of the business judgment rule as applied to particular fact situations.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in support of a demurrer to a complaint based on the plaintiff's failure to allege bad faith, fraud, breach of trust, or ultra vires actions.

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities addressing the limitation period that governs an action against a director for negligence or breach of his or her fiduciary duty to the corporation, see § 52.110.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Procedural Alternatives Available to Corporation

Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 is discussed in § 52.140[3][k].

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 is discussed in § 52.163[3][b].

Finley v. Superior Court (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 1152, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 128 is discussed in § 52.140[3][k].

[b] Adoption of Means Not Limited by Law

In Marsili v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 124 Cal. Rptr. 313 , the plaintiff shareholders filed a derivative action challenging the propriety of a $10,000 contribution made by the corporation to a group opposing a proposition appearing on the election ballot of the City and County of San Francisco. The defendants moved for summary judgment, which was granted by the trial court. The single issue on appeal was whether a California corporation has the power and right to make political contributions. The plaintiffs did not contend that the contribution had been made in bad faith, but contended that (1) the contribution was ultra vires since neither the corporation's articles of incorporation nor the laws of the state permit the corporation to make political contributions; (2) the contribution was illegal because the directors may not give away shareholders' money in violation of the rights of shareholders; and (3) there is a common-law rule against corporate political contributions.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court, stating that there was no restriction appearing in the articles of the corporation which would prevent the board from acting on initiative and referendum proposals or in any other legislative or political matter in which the corporation has a legitimate concern (51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 323) . It held that if the board of directors reasonably concludes that the adoption of a ballot proposition would have a direct, adverse effect on the business of the corporation, the board of directors, exercising its business judgment on behalf of the corporation, had both statutory and charter authority to oppose the measure. The law is clear, the court said, that those to whom the management of a corporation has been entrusted are primarily responsible for judging whether a particular act or transaction is one that is helpful to the conduct of corporate affairs or expedient for the attainment of corporate purposes. Neither the court nor the minority shareholders can substitute their judgment for that of the corporation when the board has acted in good faith and used its best business judgment in behalf of the corporation. Corporate managers are not limited in law to the use of usual or necessary means in deciding how to further the corporate objects and promote its business. Unless restricted by law, they may choose any means that are convenient and adapted to the desired end, even those that are neither usual or absolutely necessary. Here, there was no allegation that the individual defendants acted in bad faith, unreasonably, or for an improper purpose. Thus, the board's judgment could not be interfered with (51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 324) . The court further added that public policy had not prohibited corporate contributions but instead had adopted a scheme of regulation which simply required the reporting of such contributions. Thus, citizens and corporations were permitted by the Legislature to make expenditures in support of, or in opposition to, any ballot proposition that affected their interests (51 Cal. App. 3d 313, 327) .

[c] Hindsight Not Relevant

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. The court of appeal held that the business judgment rule applied to immunize the outside directors from any liability for approving the consulting agreement, and affirmed the summary judgment in favor of the outside directors with respect to claims based on the consulting agreement (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1271, 1274) . The record disclosed that the compensation committee had itself raised the issue of the need for the consulting agreement and perceived that the agreement would serve a valid and necessary purpose for the company. The court said that whether the consultant actually rendered $250,000 worth of services per year is irrelevant under the business judgment rule and under Corp. Code § 309, and held that as a matter of law, the members of the compensation committee were not liable for their recommendation to approve the consulting agreement (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1271) .

See also that portion of the court's opinion discussed in § 52.163[3][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.148

§ 52.148 Supporting Motion for Judgment on the Pleadings--Shareholder's Derivative Action Against Corporation's Outside Counsel Cannot Proceed in Absence of Corporation's Waiver of Attorney-Client Privilege

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum in support of a motion for summary judgment, or in a trial or appellate brief if appropriate.]

JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT ATTORNEY(S) ON THE PLEADINGS IS PROPER BECAUSE A DERIVATIVE LAWSUIT FOR MALPRACTICE AGAINST CORPORATE OUTSIDE COUNSEL CANNOT PROCEED IN THE ABSENCE OF A WAIVER OF THE ATTORNEY-CLIENT PRIVILEGE BY THE CORPORATE CLIENT, AND DEFENDANT'S CLIENT IN THIS CASE HAS NOT GIVEN SUCH A WAIVER.

A. Judgment on the Pleadings. A defendant may move for judgment on the pleadings if it is contended that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against that defendant (Code Civ. Proc. § 438).

B. Derivative Lawsuit for Malpractice Against Corporate Outside Counsel Raises Unique Attorney-Client Issues. A derivative action against a corporation's outside counsel cannot proceed in the absence of a waiver by the corporate client, because the third party attorney is effectively foreclosed from mounting any meaningful defense to the shareholder derivative action (McDermott, Will & Emery v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 383-385, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants in a shareholder's derivative action against the corporation's outside counsel. The ground asserted is that in the absence of a waiver of the attorney-client privilege by the corporate client, the attorney is effectively foreclosed from mounting any meaningful defense to the action. The language can be adapted for other procedural contexts in which this contention might also arise.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. Specifically, counsel should insert argument showing that (1) the corporate client has not waived the attorney-client privilege, and (2) under the facts presented, defendant attorney(s) inability to disclose privileged material effectively forecloses defendant(s) from mounting any meaningful defense to the action. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 438].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Derivative Lawsuit for Malpractice Against Corporate Outside Counsel Raises Unique Attorney-Client Issues

In McDermott, Will & Emery v. Superior Court (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 622 , five shareholders of a nonprofit company brought an equitable derivative action against the corporation's outside counsel, alleging that the defendant committed malpractice with respect to an underlying business transaction. The outside counsel filed a motion for judgment on the pleadings, arguing among other things that the action was contrary to public policy because it required counsel to defend a malpractice action without an ability to disclose privileged information in connection with such a defense. The trial court denied the motion.

The court of appeal ordered issuance of a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings and to enter a new motion granting defendant's motion. The appellate court stated that although shareholders, upon meeting certain prerequisites, may proceed in a derivative action against a third party to recover for harm done to the corporation, a derivative lawsuit for malpractice against corporate outside counsel raises unique attorney-client privilege issues. The corporation, rather than the shareholders, is the holder of the attorney-client privilege. Because the shareholders are not the holder of the privilege, they do not effect a waiver of that privilege merely by filing their action on the corporation's behalf. As a result, in the absence of a waiver by the corporate client, the third party is effectively foreclosed from mounting any meaningful defense to the shareholder derivative action. The court stated that it could not conceive how an attorney could mount a defense in such an action alleging a breach of duty to the corporate client when, by the very nature of the an action, the attorney is foreclosed in the absence of any waiver by the corporation from disclosing the very communications that are alleged to constitute a breach of that duty. Accordingly, the court held that such a derivative action against the corporation's outside counsel cannot proceed (83 Cal. App. 4th 378, 380-381, 385) .

115 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.149

§ 52.149 Supporting Motion for Security [Corp. Code §§ 800(c)-(f)]--In a Derivative Action [Corp. Code §§ 800(a), (b)]--By Defendant

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff(s),	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR vs.	)	SECURITY
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Corporation, and	)	Time: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Location: _____
Defendant(s).	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

IT IS PROPER FOR PLAINTIFF(S) TO BE REQUIRED TO FURNISH SECURITY, BECAUSE THERE IS NO REASONABLE POSSIBILITY THAT THE LAWSUIT WILL BENEFIT THE CORPORATION OR ITS SHAREHOLDERS.

[EITHER]

A. No Benefit to Corporation. The trial court must order the plaintiff[s] to furnish a security when there is no reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the cause of action alleged in the complaint against the defendant will benefit the corporation or its shareholders (Corp. Code § 800(c)(1)).

[OR]

A. No Participation in Transaction. The trial court must require plaintiff[s] to furnish a security if a defendant, other than the corporation, did not participate in the transaction complained of in any capacity (Corp. Code § 800(c)(2)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to support a motion for a security made by a defendant or defendants in a derivative action [Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)]. The motion requests that the court order the plaintiff to furnish a bond to cover the reasonable expenses including attorney's fees of the corporation and the moving party [see Corp. Code § 800(d)]. The motion is made on the ground either that there is not reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the cause of action alleged in the complaint will benefit that corporation or shareholders [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(1)] or that the moving party did not participate in the transaction complained of in any capacity [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(2)]. The latter ground may not be used by the defendant corporation [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(2)].

Counsel should provide factual support explaining the grounds upon which the motion is made. The factual explanation may be made either by affidavits accompanying the memorandum or by witnesses presenting oral testimony at a hearing on the motion [see Corp. Code § 800(d)].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for making a motion for security in a derivative action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Aggregate Amount of Security Limited

A California appellate court has held that the aggregate amount of security that a plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties [Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 , discussed in § 52.167)].

[3] Additional Authorities

[a] No Benefit to Corporation

In Marble v. Latchford Glass Co. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 171, 22 Cal. Rptr. 789 , the plaintiffs appealed from an order by the trial court requiringthem to file a security pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 [now see Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)] in a derivative action filed by them. The plaintiffs argued that the trial judge had abused his discretion in determining that there was no reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the derivative action would benefit the corporation. Upon reviewing the defendants affidavits and exhibits, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order. The court noted that the defendants' evidence prima facie indicated that the corporation had the right to issue the preferred stock which was the subject of the suit. The court stated that it was the role of the trial court to weigh conflicting evidence and decide which evidence would be believed. Therefore, the trial court's decision was binding on the court. However, the court also went on to consider the merits of two of four defenses raised by defendants which the defendants argued would also negate the possible success of the derivative action. First, the court noted that the plaintiffs' suit was premature since it appeared that the stock issuance was still only under discussion. Second, the court noted that the issuance of preferred stock as a dividend is a managerial decision to be made by the board of directors and the court should not substitute its judgment for that of the board of directors if the business judgment was made in good faith (205 Cal. App. 2d 171).

In Suburban Water Sys. v. Superior Court (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 956, 71 Cal. Rptr. 45 , petitioners, who were defendants in a derivative action filed in the trial court, sought a writ of mandate to compel the court to exercise its jurisdiction and consider a motion for security made by the petitioners pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 [now see Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)]. The trial court refused to consider the motion because of its belief that Corp. Code § 834 was not intended to be applicable to a derivative shareholder's action in which plaintiff is the holder of more than five percent of the shares of the corporation. The court of appeal issued the writ, stating that the trial court was erroneous in its belief that former Corp. Code § 834 excluded plaintiffs holding 5 percent of the shares. The court held that the value or percentage of plaintiffs' holding in the corporation have no bearing on whether a motion for a security should be required or not. The trial court should consider the motion by the moving parties to determine whether the moving parties have established that there is no probability that the prosecution of the case will benefit the corporation or its security holders, as required by the statute, and no other factor can be considered or added (264 Cal. App. 2d 956).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.150

§ 52.150 Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Plaintiff(s) in Shareholders' Derivative Suit

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)
Plaintiff(s),	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
a Corporation, and	)	Time: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Location: _____
Defendant(s).	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

SUCCESSFUL PLAINTIFF(S) IN A DERIVATIVE ACTION _____ [IS or ARE] ENTITLED TO REIMBURSEMENT FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES AND COSTS FROM THE CORPORATION WHEN THERE IS _____ [A COMMON FUND or SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT] TO THE CORPORATION AS A RESULT OF THE LAWSUIT.

[EITHER]

A. Substantial Benefit Rule. Under the "substantial benefit" rule, a variant of the common fund doctrine as applied more recently in other jurisdictions, the successful plaintiff in a stockholder's derivative action may be awarded attorney's fees against the corporation if the latter received "substantial benefits" from the litigation, although the benefits were not "pecuniary" and the action had not produced a fund from which they might be paid (Fletcher v. A. J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 320, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146).

[OR]

A. Beneficiaries Must Share Litigation Expenses. It is a well-established doctrine of equity jurisprudence that where a common fund exists to which a number of persons are entitled, and in their interest successful litigation is maintained for its preservation and protection, an allowance of counsel fees may properly be made from such fund. By this means, all of the beneficiaries of the fund pay their share of the expense necessary to make it available to them (see Fletcher v. A. J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 320, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted to support a motion for an order for the payment of the attorney's fees and costs of plaintiffs successful in a derivative action by the defendant corporation. It appears that the motion may be made after the conclusion of a derivative action in a court proceeding or after a compromise and settlement of an action prior to trial [see Fletcher v. A. J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146] .

When appropriate, counsel should insert a statement of the benefits to the corporation which have been derived from the shareholders' derivative action which would merit payment of the plaintiffs' attorney's fees and costs.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Substantial Benefit Rule

In Fletcher v. A. J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146 , the plaintiffs applied for an order requiring the defendant corporation to pay the attorney's fees and costs incurred in connection with a shareholders' derivative action. The suit was settled before the trial and resulted in a reorganization of the board of directors and the management, the ouster of one director-officer, the modification of the contract of another officer, and the submission of numerous disputed matters to arbitration. Although no monetary benefit had been received by the corporation, there was the possibility that the arbitration would result in monetary awards being made to the corporation. The trial court issued the order giving the plaintiffs attorney's fees and costs as requested. The defendant corporation appealed from the order, arguing that since there had been no "pecuniary" benefit to the corporation, and, therefore, no "common fund" from which attorney's fees had traditionally been paid to the successful shareholders of a derivative action, the corporation should not be required to pay the fees and costs of the plaintiff shareholders. The court of appeal affirmed the order of the trial court, holding that under the "substantial benefit" rule, a variant of the "common fund" rule, the successful plaintiff in a (stockholder's) derivative action may be awarded attorney's fees against the corporation if the latter received "substantial benefits" from the litigation, although the benefits were not "pecuniary" and the action had not produced a fund from which they might be paid. The court stated that the stockholder's derivative suit was an effective means of policing corporate management that should not be inhibited by a doctrine that limits the compensation of successful attorneys to only those cases which produce monetary recoveries; the realization of substantial, if nonpecuniary, benefits to the corporation should be the criterion. In this situation, the substantial benefits to the corporation were the savings of enormous litigation costs by the use of arbitration rather than a lawsuit to settle the suit and the immediate changes in the corporate management (266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 320) .

[b] Beneficiaries Must Share Litigation Expenses

For a discussion of the facts in Fletcher v. A. J. Industries, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 313, 72 Cal. Rptr. 146 , see § 52.150[3][a]. In its discussion of the substantial benefit rule, the court stated that the common fund rule, that when there is a pecuniary benefit rule to the corporation in the form of a common fund, all the beneficiaries of the fund must share the litigation expenses, applied to derivative actions. The substantial benefit rule was a more sophisticated version of the common fund rule.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.150A

§ 52.150A Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Successful Defendants in Derivative Action--Security Posted by Plaintiff [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.150.]

WHEN THE PLAINTIFF HAS POSTED SECURITY FOR ATTORNEY'S FEES IN A SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION, AND THE DEFENDANT IS THE PREVAILING PARTY, THE DEFENDANT MAY RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES, TO THE EXTENT OF THAT SECURITY.

A. Defendant Has Recourse to Security. When the plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative action has posted security for attorney's fees pursuant to Corporations Code Section 800, a defendant who is the prevailing party may recover attorney's fees, in the discretion of the court, to the extent of that security (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.440(a), 996.460(a),(b); West Hills Farms, Inc. v. RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458).

[Optional] B. Absence of Benefit to Corporation Need Not Be Shown. When the plaintiff voluntarily posted security pursuant to Corporations Code Section 800(e), the defendant may seek to enforce the security as the prevailing party at the conclusion of the case without having to meet retrospectively the normal statutory requirement of Corp. Code § 800(c)(1), which provides that to force the posting of security, a defendant must show that the derivative suit has no reasonable possibility of benefitting the corporation or shareholders (Donner Management Co. v. Schaffer (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1305-1306, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 534).
Dated: _____

_____ [firm name, if any]
_____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
_____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a successful defendant in a derivative action to support a motion for attorney's fees when the plaintiff, either pursuant to a court order or voluntarily, has posted security for attorney's fees pursuant to Corp. Code § 800. The form may be adapted for use in another procedural setting, such as a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form noting the relationship between the fact of the case and the substantive law.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Has Recourse to Security

Code Civ. Proc. § 996.440(a) provides that if a bond is given in an action or proceeding, the liability on the bond may be enforced on motion made in the court without the necessity of an independent action. Code Civ. Proc. § 996.460(a) provides that a judgment of liability on a bond will be in favor of the beneficiary and against the principal and sureties and will obligate each of them jointly and severally. Code Civ. Proc. § 996.460(b) provides that the judgment will be in an amount determined by the court.

West Hills Farms, Inc. v. RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458 , is discussed in § 52.168[3][a].

[b] Absence of Benefit to Corporation Need Not Be Shown

In Donner Management Co. v. Schaffer (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1305-1306, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 534 , a shareholder's derivative action, the plaintiff had voluntarily posted security pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(e), after the defendant had moved for the posting of security; therefore, no hearing on the motion was held, and the defendant was not called on to show that there was no reasonable possibility that the derivative action would benefit the corporation [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(1)]. Subsequently a board-appointed litigation committee concluded that maintaining the action would not be in the corporation's interest, and so the plaintiff dismissed the action without prejudice. The defendant then moved for attorney's fees and costs based on the security posted by the plaintiff. The court ruled that the defendant was the prevailing party and was entitled to attorney's fees. On appeal, the plaintiff contended that attorney's fees could not be awarded under Corp. Code § 800 without a determination that there was no reasonable possibility that the derivative action would benefit the corporation.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that since security was voluntarily posted, the defendant could seek to enforce the security as the prevailing party at the conclusion of the case without having to meet retrospectively the normal statutory requirement [see Corp. Code § 800(c)(1)] that, to force the posting of security, a defendant must show that the derivative suit has no reasonable possibility of benefitting the corporation or shareholders (142 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1305-1306) . The court also determined that the defendant was the prevailing party after the plaintiff dismissed the action without prejudice, in view of the board-appointed litigation committee's conclusion that maintaining suit was not in the corporation's interest. As a practical matter, that decision by the litigation committee brought an end to the action (142 Cal. App. 4th 1296, 1310-1311) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Has Recourse to Security

In Alcott v. M.E.V. Corp. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 797, 238 Cal. Rptr. 520 , a shareholder's derivative action, all defendants prevailed in pretrial proceedings. Thereafter the defendants filed cost bills containing demands for attorney's fees. The trial court awarded the defendants their attorney's fees, and the plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed because no security was ever sought or posted pursuant to Corp. Code § 800. The court observed that unless the plaintiff has posted security, there is no statutory basis for an award of attorney's fees to a successful defendant in a derivative action. The court further observed that, under Corp. Code § 800 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 996.440 and 996.460, if security had been posted, then the defendant would have had recourse to the security in such amount as the court determined on the termination of the action (193 Cal. App. 3d 797, 799-800) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.151

§ 52.151 Supporting Motion for Attorney's Fees--By Successful Defendants in Derivative Action [Civ. Code § 1717]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.150.]

SUCCESSFUL DEFENDANTS IN A DERIVATIVE ACTION BASED ON CAUSES OF ACTION FOR BREACH OF CONTRACTMAY RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES UNDER SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE IF THE CONTRACTS SO PROVIDE.

A. Attorney's Fees Provided by Contract. When the gravamen of a derivative action is breach of contract, and the contract contains an attorney's fee provision, Civil Code Section 1717 governs the rights of parties to attorney's fees, and the bond provided for in Corporations Code Section 800 need not be applied (Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 103-108, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758).

[Optional] B. Nonsignatories May Be Liable for Attorney's Fees. In a derivative action for breach of contract, when the contract contains an attorney's fee provision, even the nonsignatory plaintiffs can be liable for the payment of attorney's fees to signing defendants if they would have been entitled to attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine had they prevailed (Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 109-111, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a successful defendant in a derivative action to support a motion for attorney's fees when the action alleged breach of contracts that have attorney's fee provision. The authority is especially useful when defendant's motions for security [see § 52.149] were denied, and there is no bond to ensure payment of attorney's fees.

Counsel should insert argument in this form noting the relationship between the fact of the case and the substantive law.

The foregoing form may also be adapted for use in another procedural setting, such as a trial or appellate brief.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provided by Contract

Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758 was a derivative action by minority shareholders against the majority. The majority ran a county club under a lease and a management agreement and had acquired their interests under a purchase and sale agreement. All three agreements contained attorney's fees provisions. Two of the minority plaintiffs had signed the purchase agreement as sellers. The minority contended that majority had breached those agreements and sought in the derivative action to obtain an accounting, back rent, and control of the premises and day-to-day operations, among other things. The majority cross complained. In a bifurcated trial there was an accounting, but the final judgment was for defendants on the complaint and for plaintiffs on the cross complaint. Defendants had twice moved for an order requiring plaintiffs to post security [see Corp. Code § 800], but it was denied on both occasions. The final judgment awarded defendants attorney's fees from plaintiffs pursuant to the purchase contract and Civ. Code § 1717. Defendants (as cross complainants) were not awarded attorney's fees. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed and awarded defendants their costs and attorney's fees on appeal. Plaintiffs contended that defendants only right to attorney's fees was under Corp. Code § 800 on the ground that Corp. Code § 800 was the exclusive remedy. The court said that Corp. Code § 800 was not exclusive or mandatory. The decision to require a bond under Corp. Code § 800 is discretionary, and if, as here, no bond is required, then there is no fund out of which a successful defendant can be awarded attorney's fees. Thus, Civ. Code § 1717 fills an important gap and provides that attorney's fees must be awarded to a successful defendant in a derivative action when an alleged breach of a contract with an attorney's fees provision is the basis of the action (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 102) .

The court also discussed the relationship between Corp. Code §§ 317 and 800. Corp. Code § 317(c) and (d) require a corporation to indemnify a defendant for costs in defending a shareholder derivative suit in his or her capacity as an agent of the corporation. Normally, however, the defense costs are actually paid out of the bond required under Corp. Code § 800. Plaintiffs contended that when no security was required, defendants' only recourse to recover defense costs was Corp. Code § 317(d) and (g) (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 102-103) . Although Corp. Code § 317(d) is mandatory in that it requires the corporation to pay defendants' attorney's fees, the court stated that Corp. Code § 317(d) inures to the benefit of defendants, and there is no logic or authority for requiring successful defendants to seek their indemnity from the corporation or for holding that Corp. Code § 317(d) and (g) provide their exclusive remedy (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 104) . Here, defendants constituted 53 percent of the shareholders. To force them to seek indemnity from the corporation, which everyone agreed was already insolvent, would force them to pay 53 percent of their own attorney's fees. That would not be in accord with the equities of the case and would bemanifestly unfair (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 104-105) . Thus, when the gravamen of a derivative action is breach of contract, Civ. Code § 1717 governs the rights of parties to attorney's fees, and the bond provided for in Corp. Code § 800 need not be applied. Corp. Code § 800 does not prescribe the exclusive statutory ground for granting attorney's fees when the shareholder derivative suit is premised on caus of action for breach of contract, which contracts contain attorney's fees provisions, and requests for security under Corp. Code § 800 have been denied (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 107-108) .

Plaintiffs also argued that the court erred in finding that defendant prevailed in the litigation because that finding was contrary to the standards set forth in Corp. Code § 317. The court stated that the standards of Corp. Code § 317 did not apply and were not relevant because the fees were awarded under Civ. Code § 1717 (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 108) .

[b] Nonsignatories May Be Liable for Attorney's Fees

The facts and procedural background of Brusso v. Running Springs Country Club, Inc. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 278 Cal. Rptr. 758 are discussed in § 52.151[3][a]. Although several of the plaintiffs had signed the three contracts, most had not, and they objected to being held liable for attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717. The court said that although the nonsignatory plaintiffs did not claim a right to attorney's fees under the contract, they would have had a right to attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine had they prevailed (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 110) . That is, had defendants lost, they would have been liable to plaintiffs for damages and fees under the contract, thereby creating a benefit to the corporation in the form of a common fund from which plaintiffs could have received their fees. Therefore, under the theory of Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 128-129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83 , it was proper to award attorney's fees to the signatory defendants from the nonsignatory plaintiffs under the mutuality theory of Civ. Code § 1717, on the grounds that had plaintiffs prevailed, they would have been entitled to attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine (228 Cal. App. 3d 92, 111) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provided by Contract

In Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 , plaintiff subcontractor sued defendant general contractor for contract and tort claims. After recovering damages at trial, plaintiff sought its costs, including attorney fees. The parties' contract included a unilateral attorney fees provision permitting defendant to recover its attorney fees if it sued to enforce the contract or to recover damages for its breach, but not authorizing plaintiff to recover its fees. The court construed Civ. Code § 1717(a), holding that the section rendered the attorney fees provision mutual, giving the prevailing party the right to attorney fees on any claims based on contract (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1108-1109) . The court further held that a plaintiff who rejects a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer that is greater than its ultimate recovery may nonetheless recover preoffer costs to which it otherwise would be entitled, including preoffer attorney fees when those fees are an authorized category of recoverable costs under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032, 1033.5 (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1111-1112) . Also, a defendant who is not the prevailing party but whose Code Civ. Proc. § 998 settlement offer was greater than plaintiff's recovery is entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to those costs incurred after the settlement offer to which a prevailing party would be entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112-1114) .

[b] Nonsignatories May Be Liable for Attorney's Fees

The California Supreme Court in Hsu v. Abbara (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 863, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824, 891 P.2d 804 , reversed and remanded a judgment denying attorney's fees incurred by defendant sellers an action seeking specific performance of a purported real estate sales contract. The trial court ruled that no contract had been formed, but without explanation denied defendant any recovery of attorney's fees (9 Cal. 4th 863, 869) . The court of appeal construed the trial court's finding as an implied finding that there was no prevailing party on the complaint for purposes of Civ. Code § 1717 because no contract of sale was ever formed (9 Cal. 4th 863, 870) . Sellers appealed denial of fees and buyers cross-appealed. In construing Civ. Code § 1717, the Supreme Court affirmed the mutuality of remedy theory (9 Cal. 4th 863, 870-871) . Relying on Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979), 25 Cal. 3d 124, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83 (discussed in § 52.151[3][b]), the court held that the statute would fall short of its goal of mutuality of remedy if its benefits were denied to parties who defeat contract actions by proving that they were not parties to the original contract or that it was never formed. To achieve its goal, the court concluded that the statute must generally apply in favor of the prevailing party on a contract claim whenever that party would have been liable under the contract for attorney's fees had the other party prevailed (9 Cal. 4th 863, 870-871) . As a matter of law, defendants, who had defeated the only contract claim in the action, were the parties prevailing on the contract, and therefore were entitled to recover reasonable fees incurred in the defense of the action. Under the facts presented the trial court had no discretion to deny the award of attorney's fees (9 Cal. 4th 863, 877) .

In Sears v. Baccaglio (1998) 60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 , plaintiff guarantor brought an action for breach of contract, declaratory relief, and bad faith denial of existence of contract against defendantassignee, who filed a cross-complaint. The trial court found the guarantor liable on the guaranty but, finding that the assignee already had received more than the amount of his damages from various sources, entered judgment in favor of the guarantor and denied the assignee any recovery on his cross-complaint. Pursuant to the guaranty's fee provision, the court then awarded the assignee his attorney fees after finding that he prevailed on the contract issue (60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1141-1142) . The guarantor appealed. The court of appeal extensively reviewed the legislative history of Civ. Code § 1717 (60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1142-1150) . Citing Hsu v. Abbara (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 863, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824, 891 P.2d 804 (discussed above), it held that a party can fail to recover a net monetary judgment and still prevail for purposes of collecting fees in an action founded on contract. It concluded that the party recovering "greater relief in the action on the contract" under Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) does not necessarily mean the party receiving the greater monetary judgment. If one party has received earlier payments, settlements, insurance proceeds, or other recovery, the court has the discretion to determine whether the party required to pay a nominal net judgment is nevertheless the prevailing party entitled to attorney's fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 (60 Cal. App. 4th 1136, 1154-1155) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.152

§ 52.152 Supporting Motion to Permit Plaintiff in a Derivative Action to Waive Requirement of Being Shareholder, Registered or Beneficial, or Holder of Voting Trust Certificates at Time of Wrongdoing to the Corporation [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)], Plaintiff(s),	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO PERMIT PLAINTIFF IN DERIVATIVE ACTION TO WAIVE REQUIREMENT OF BEING REGISTERED SHAREHOLDER AT THE TIME OF WRONGDOING TO THE CORPORATION
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)
and	)
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF HAS MET ALL THE STATUTORY PREREQUISITES NECESSARY FOR A SHAREHOLDER WHO WAS NOT A HOLDER OF RECORD AT THE TIME OF THE TRANSACTION COMPLAINED OF TO MAINTAIN A DERIVATIVE ACTION ON BEHALF OF THE CORPORATION.

Prerequisites for Waiving Registered Shareholder Requirement. A derivative action may be maintained by a shareholder who was not a holder, of record or beneficially, or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time the transaction complained of occurred or during any part thereof in the discretion of the court after a preliminary showing to, and determination by the court, by a motion and after hearing, that: (1) there is a strong prima facie case in favor of the claim asserted on behalf of the corporation (Corp. Code§ 800(b)(1)(i)); (2) no other action has been, or is likely to be instituted (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)(ii)); (3) the plaintiff acquired the shares before there was disclosure to the public or to the plaintiff of the wrongdoing of which plaintiff complains (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)(iii)); (4) unless the action can be maintained, the defendant may retain a gain derived from defendant's willful breach of a fiduciary duty (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)(iv)); and (5) the requested relief will not result in unjust enrichment of the corporation or any shareholder of the corporation (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)(v)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion made under Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) by a shareholder who wishes to maintain a derivative action on behalf of the corporation, even though he or she was not a shareholder, of record or beneficially, or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time the wrongdoing or transaction complained of occurred. Corp. Code § 800(b)(1) was enacted as part of the General Corporation Law. It is within the discretion of the trial court, after weighing the evidence presented in light of the five provisions set forth in Corp. Code § 800(b)(1), to decide if the requirement that a shareholder be a holder of record or beneficially, or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time of the wrongdoing should be waived [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)].

It is unclear from the statute at what point in the prosecution of the derivative action the motion should be brought. As a practical matter, it would appear that the motion should be part of the pretrial proceedings since the failure to allege that a plaintiff was a registered shareholder or holder of voting trust certificates at the time the transaction complained of occurred would be fatal to the suit unless the requirement has been waived [see Campbell v. Clark (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 432, 324 P.2d 51] . A motion based on the foregoing provision might accompany a motion opposing a demurrer to the complaint made by the defendant who asserts that the shareholder has failed to fulfill the statutory prerequisites of being a shareholder, registered or beneficial, or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time the wrongdoing occurred.

Counsel should provide argument showing the relationship between the facts of the case and each of the five grounds, all of which must be met in order for the registered shareholder requirement to be waived. The factual explanation may be made either by affidavits accompanying the memorandum, or by witnesses presenting oral testimony at a hearing on the motion, or both [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.153

§ 52.153 Supporting Motion for Order Approving Compromise Settlement Between Plaintiff Shareholder and Defendant in Shareholder's Derivative Suit and for Judgment Entered Thereon

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)], Plaintiff(s),	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR vs.	)	ORDER APPROVING COMPROMISE SETTLE-
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	MENT AND FOR JUDGMENT ENTERED THERE-and	)	ON
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A COURT SHOULD GRANT A MOTION FOR AN ORDER APPROVING A COMPROMISE SETTLEMENT BETWEEN [A] PLAINTIFF SHAREHOLDER(S) AND DEFENDANT(S) IN A SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE SUIT AND FOR THE ENTRY OF JUDGMENT ON THAT SETTLEMENT IF THE SETTLEMENT FULLY PROTECTS THE RIGHTS OF THE CORPORATION ON WHOSE BEHALF THE DERIVATIVE SUIT WAS BROUGHT.

Compromise Settlement as Permitted if Corporation's Rights Fully Protected. A settlement of all the claims made against [a] defendant(s) in a shareholder's derivative suit may be effected by the plaintiff(s) and defendant(s) in the suit if the court approves the settlement and finds that the rights of the corporation on whose behalf the derivative was brought are fully protected in the settlement (Whitten v. Dabney (1915) 171 Cal. 621, 630-632, 154 P. 312).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for an order approving a compromise settlement between a plaintiff shareholder and defendant in a shareholder's derivative suit and for a judgment entered on that settlement.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compromise Settlement as Permitted if Corporation's Rights Fully Protected

In Whitten v. Dabney (1915) 171 Cal. 621, 154 P. 312 , plaintiffs as stockholders of a corporation sued three defendants alleging their fraudulent impositions on the corporation which resulted in great loss to the corporation. A general demurrer was interposed to plaintiffs' complaint as well as a demurrer raising the bar of the statute of limitations. Both demurrers were sustained. Following the entry of judgment against plaintiffs, plaintiffs and two of the defendants entered into an agreement by which plaintiffs purported to reach a complete settlement and adjustment of all their claims against the defendants. When plaintiffs appealed the judgment entered against them, the two defendants moved to dismiss the appeal as to them based on the compromise settlement. In reversing the judgment entered against plaintiffs, the Supreme Court denied the motion to dismiss the appeal. The Court found that both plaintiffs and defendants had completely misconstrued the nature of the litigation and the rights of the plaintiffs under it. The Court stressed that the plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative suit has no personal wrong for which he or she is entitled to seek redress; rather, the plaintiff is permitted to sue simply in order to set in motion the judicial machinery of the court. The Court explained that the plaintiff in the litigation is in every legal sense the precise equivalent of a guardian ad litem who stands as the representative of some person incompetent to sue or be sued directly. Not only should a plaintiff in such a fiduciary capacity be willing to take no act that did not first receive the sanction of the court but, moreover, the plaintiff may not take any act without that sanction. Therefore, because the motion to dismiss was based on the compromise agreement, it could not be granted since that agreement was cognizable by the trial court alone and could not be given the slightesteffect, until, after scrutiny and examination, the trial court determined that the corporation's rights were fully protected (171 Cal. 621, 630-632) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.154

§ 52.154 Supporting Motion for Order Modifying Amount of Bond Plaintiff Must Post in Shareholder's Derivative Suit [Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	MODIFY AMOUNT OF BOND
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	Date: _____
and	)	Time: _____
_____ [name(s)] Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE AMOUNT OF THE BOND A PLAINTIFF MUST POST IN A SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE SUIT MAY BE INCREASED IF THE COURT DETERMINES THAT THE BOND IS OR HAS FROM ANY CAUSE BECOME INSUFFICIENT BECAUSE THE SURETIES ARE INSUFFICIENT OR BECAUSE THE AMOUNT OF THE BOND IS INSUFFICIENT.

A. Determination of Trial Court That Bond Insufficient. The amount of the bond which a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative suit, pursuant to Corporations Code Section 800, must furnish for reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, incurred by a defendant or defendants and the corporation in the action, may be increased if the court determines that the bond given is or has from any cause become insufficient because the sureties are insufficient or because the amount of the bond is insufficient (Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010(a)).

B. Sufficient Bond Must be Given Within Time Ordered by Court. If a sufficient bond is not given within the time required by the court order, all rights obtained by giving the original bond immediately cease, and the court must so order on ex parte motion (Code Civ. Proc. § 996.010(d)).

[Optional] C. Expenses to Be Incurred on Appeal. Defendants' rights in a shareholder's derivative suit to security when the court has determined that there is no reasonable possibility that the prosecution of the cause of action alleged in plaintiff's complaint will benefit the corporation or its shareholders is a right to full indemnification for the probable reasonable expenses incurred by the corporation and the moving party in the defense of the action, and includes expenses which will be incurred on appeal. The party entitled to security may move the trial court for modification of the amount of security to include the probable reasonable expenses to be incurred on appeal either before or after the plaintiff has taken an appeal from the judgment (Kaiser v. Easton (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 307, 311 P.2d 108).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for an order modifying the amount of the bond a plaintiff must furnish in a shareholder's derivative action when the bond is or has from any cause become insufficient.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The notice of motion must specify precisely the grounds for the motion, and if it is contended that the amount of the bond is insufficient, the reason for the insufficiency must be stated, and an estimate of the amount that would be sufficient must be included [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.930(a)].

[b] Limitation on Aggregate Amount of Security

The aggregate amount of security that a plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties [Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 , discussed in § 52.167].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expenses to Be Incurred on Appeal

In Kaiser v. Easton (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 307, 311 P.2d 108 , plaintiff sued a corporation in which plaintiff was a shareholder and the corporation's officers and directors for general and punitive damages, an accounting of corporate funds, removal from office of the defendants, the appointment of a receiver, and other equitable relief. Defendants answered and, after a trial, findings and judgment were entered in their favor. Before the trial, plaintiff had been required to furnish security to all defendants in the action in the amount of $2,500. After the trial and after plaintiff had given notice of appeal, defendants gave notice of a motion for an order increasing the amount of security to be furnished by plaintiff in the sum of $2,250, which the court ordered. Plaintiff appealed from this order and from the judgment entered against him. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal considered plaintiff's contention that the trial court had been without jurisdiction to order the posting of additional security after plaintiff had taken an appeal from the judgment. The court held that the trial court did have jurisdiction to make the order. The court observed that the purpose of the remedy afforded by former Corp. Code § 834 (see now Corp. Code § 800) was to provide full indemnity for expenses of the defense, incurred throughout the litigation, and no distinction could thus be made between the expenses incident to the trial and those incurred in defending the judgment on appeal. Because a trial court does not lose jurisdiction over collateral matters in which the rights of the parties require action, if they do not affect the judgment, and a trial court has authority to modify the amount of security furnished by a plaintiff before the plaintiff has noticed his or her appeal, the fact that no application had been made by defendants before the notice of appeal did not divest the court of jurisdiction to entertain an application after judgment had been entered and an appeal taken (151 Cal. App. 2d 307, 314) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.155

§ 52.155 Supporting Motion for Order and Judgment Dismissing Shareholder's Derivative Suit for Failure to Post Security [Corp. Code § 800(d)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
vs.	)	ORDER AND JUDGMENT DISMISSING SHARE-
_____ [name],	)	HOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION
a Corporation, and	)	Date: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Time: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION MUST BE DISMISSED AS TO THOSE DEFENDANT(S) FOR WHOM THE PLAINTIFF MUST FURNISH SECURITY WHEN REQUIRED BY THE COURT IF THE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT FURNISHED THAT SECURITY WITHIN THE TIME FIXED BY THE COURT.

A. Dismissal for Failure to Furnish Security. When the court, on the motion of defendant(s) as provided in Corporations Code Section 800(d), has made a determination that security must be furnished by the plaintiff as to one or more defendants in plaintiff's shareholder's derivative action, the action must be dismissed as to that defendant or defendants if the security required by the court has not been furnished within the time fixed by the court (Corp. Code § 800(d)).

[Optional] B. Dismissal of Action for Failure to Furnish Security for Corporate Defendant. Regardless of the propriety of an order of the trial court requiring deposit of security for the individual defendants in a shareholder's derivative action, a judgment of dismissal must be entered if the plaintiff fails to furnish the security for the corporate defendant when required since the corporation is an indispensable party, and the court has no jurisdiction to adjudicate the corporation's rights in its absence as a party (Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28, 265 P.2d 1).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a defendant's motion for an order and judgment dismissing a plaintiff's shareholder's derivative action as to the moving defendant when the plaintiff has failed to furnish the security for the defendant within the time fixed by the court under Corp. Code § 800(c).

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a notice of motion for order and judgment dismissing a shareholder's derivative action for failure to post security and an order and judgment thereon, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum opposing a defendant's motion for order dismissing a derivative suit for failure to post security when the plaintiff already has provided an aggregate of $50,000 as to all moving parties, see § 52.167.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action for Failure to Furnish Security for Corporation

In Beyerbach v. Juno Oil Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 11, 265 P.2d 1 , plaintiff shareholder instituted a stockholder's deriative suit to compel two individual defendants to transfer a certain oil lease to defendant company andto account for and pay to the company sums received under the lease as rents and royalties. Defendants moved, under former Corp. Code § 834 (see now Corp. Code § 800(c)), for an order requiring plaintiff to furnish security for reasonable expenses which might be incurred by defendant in connection with the action. Plaintiff failed to deposit security as ordered by the trial court and, on defendants' motions to dismiss the action on the ground that plaintiff had failed to deposit the security, the trial court dismissed the action. Plaintiff appealed, arguing in part that the law governing the posting of security in a shareholder's derivative action was unconstitutional and that, if the law were constitutional, the trial court had abused its discretion by ordering an excessive amount of security for the individual defendants in an improper form. In holding that the law was constitutional, and that the trial court had not abused its discretion with respect to the amount of security it had required plaintiff to post, the court further held, that, regardless of the propriety of the trial court's order requiring deposit of security for the individual defendants, the judgment of dismissal was the only proper judgment in plaintiff's action. The court observed that because plaintiff had failed and refused to furnish the security for the corporation as ordered, the trial court had no jurisdiction to proceed with the action. The court explained that the corporation is an indispensable party to a representative action brought on its behalf; its rights, not those of the nominal plaintiff, are to be litigated, and the court had no jurisdiction to adjudicate its rights in its absence as a party. Thus, when plaintiff had refused to deposit the security required for the corporation, the action could not continue against the corporation, or in its absence against any other party, and the trial court had no alternative but to dismiss as to all defendants (42 Cal. 2d 11, 27-28) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Failure to Furnish Security

In Ensher v. Ensher, Alexander & Barsoom (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 407, 9 Cal. Rptr. 732 , three of plaintiff's four causes of action were in the nature of a shareholder's derivative suit in which plaintiff sought to recover damages from the individual defendant directors on behalf of the defendant corporation. Defendants moved the trial court for an order requiring plaintiff to post security, which order the trial court granted. When plaintiff failed to post the security as required by the trial court's order, defendants moved for a motion to dismiss the three causes of action with prejudice. Plaintiff then filed a voluntary dismissal of these causes of action with the clerk of the court. However, defendants' motion to dismiss was subsequently heard and the court dismissed the causes of action in question with prejudice. Thereafter, it also denied plaintiff's subsequent motion to set aside the judgment of dismissal. Plaintiff appealed and the court of appeal reversed. Plaintiff contended that her voluntary dismissal rendered the trial court without power to dismiss plaintiff's causes of action. However, the court held that, because a stockholder who brings a derivative suit is a trustee for the corporation's cause of action, plaintiff could not dismiss the action without the consent of the trial court. However, the court did find that the trial court's subsequent dismissal of plaintiff's causes of action with prejudice was error since a determination as to the furnishing of security is not a determination of the merits of any issue of the action. Therefore, the dismissal of the causes of action did not operate as a bar to another action on the same causes of action (187 Cal. App. 2d 407).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

2-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.155A

§ 52.155A Supporting Motion for Order and Judgment Dismissing Shareholder's Derivative Suit--Plaintiff Is No Longer Shareholder [Corp. Code § 800(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff, vs. _____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER AND JUDGMENT DISMISSING SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION
a Corporation, and	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendants.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION MUST BE DISMISSED IF THE PLAINTIFF IS NO LONGER A SHAREHOLDER OF THE CORPORATION.

A. Dismissal Is Required When Plaintiff Is No Longer Shareholder. California law generally requires a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative action to maintain continuous stock ownership throughout the pendency of the litigation. A derivative-action plaintiff who ceases to be a shareholder, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, ordinarily loses standing to continue the litigation. In that event, dismissal is required (Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1115, 1119, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a defendant's motion for an order and judgment dismissing a shareholder's derivative action on the ground that the plaintiff is no longer a shareholder of the corporation.

Counsel should include argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated; in other words, that the plaintiff failed to maintain continuous stock ownership during the pendency of the litigation.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a notice of motion for dismissal of a derivative action, together with a form for a judgment of dismissal, based on the plaintiff's loss of shareholder status, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 168, Corporations: Derivative Actions, §§ 168.74, 168.75 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal Is Required When Plaintiff Is No Longer Shareholder

Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , was a shareholder's derivative action for the benefit of JNI Corporation. On the corporation's motion, the trial court dismissed the action with prejudice, based on the court's finding that the action was not in the corporation's best interest. While the plaintiff's appeal was pending, JNI Corporation was merged with another corporation, which thus became the sole shareholder of JNI Corporation. The plaintiff was required to sell his JNI shares to the surviving corporation. Thereafter the defendants moved to dismiss the appeal on the ground that the plaintiff had no standing to pursue the litigation after selling his JNI stock in the merger. The court of appeal granted that motion.

The Supreme Court affirmed. Although Corp. Code § 800(b) does not explicitly deal with the question, the court elected to follow the majority rule and, applying the basic principles that govern corporation law and shareholder litigation, held that subsection (b) is properly construed as containing a continuous-ownership requirement. That is, California law generally requires a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative action to maintain continuous stock ownership throughout the pendency of the litigation. Consequently, when the shareholder relationship is terminated, whether voluntarily or involuntarily, the derivative-action plaintiff loses standing (42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1115, 1119) . The court concluded: "Under this rule, a derivative plaintiff who ceases to be a stockholder by reason of a merger ordinarily loses standing to continue the litigation. Although equitable considerations may warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement if the merger itself is used to wrongfully deprive the plaintiff of standing, or if the merger is merely a reorganization that does not affect the plaintiff's ownership interest, we need not address such matters definitively in this case, where no such circumstances appear. [P] Because dismissal of... [the] appeal is required ... [California] law, we end the analysis here" (42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119) .

124 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.156

§ 52.156 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff-Shareholder Has Satisfied the Requirements to File Derivative Action on Behalf of Corporation [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name(s)],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff(s), vs. _____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING DEMURRER TO COMPLAINT
a Corporation, and	)	Date: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Time: _____
Defendant(s),	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF-SHAREHOLDER HAS SATISFIED THE REQUIREMENTS TO BRING A DERIVATIVE ACTION ON BEHALF OF THE CORPORATION WHEN THE CORPORATION AND ITS BOARD OF DIRECTORS REFUSE TO TAKE ACTION.

A. Shareholder's Right to Maintain Derivative Action. A registered shareholder may institute or maintain an action on behalf of any domestic or foreign corporation after efforts to secure such action from the board of directors has failed (Corp. Code § 800).

B. Necessary Elements for Derivative Action. Two elements must exist to provide a basis for a representative suit on behalf of a corporation: (1) the gravamen of the complaint, which is injury to the corporation or to the whole body of its stockholders (as distinguished from alleged wrongs affecting only certain of the individual stockholders), such as the dissipation or threatened dissipation of its assets; and (2) the derivative aspect of the cause of action which arises from the fact that the responsible officials fail or refuse to act. Both elements are essential (Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280).

[Optional] C. Derivative Action as Equitable Remedy. Although a corporation holds all the title, legal and equitable, to the corporate property and is theoretically the only proper party to sue for wrongful dealing with that property, the courts of equity recognize the truth that the stockholders are ultimately the only beneficiaries, and that the final object of suits by the corporation is to maintain the interests of the stockholders. Whenever a cause of action exists primarily on behalf of the corporation against the directors, officers, and others, for wrongful dealing with corporate property, so that the remedy should regularly be obtained through a suit by and in the name of the corporation, and the corporation either actually or virtually refuses to institute or prosecute such a suit, then in order to prevent a failure of justice, courts have allowed an action to be brought by a stockholder or stockholders, either individually or suing on behalf of themselves and all others similarly situated, against the wrong-doing directors, officers, and other persons (Weingand v. Atlantic Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 806, 818, 83 Cal. Rptr. 650, 464 P.2d 106).

[Optional] D. Directors Required to be Diligent. Directors are not merely bound to be honest; they must also be diligent and careful in performing the duties they have undertaken. They cannot excuse imprudence on the ground of their ignorance or inexperience, or the honesty of their intentions; and, if they commit an error of judgment through mere recklessness, or want of ordinary prudence and skill, the corporation may hold them responsible for the consequences (Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 852, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392).

[Optional] E. Plaintiff's Right to Amend Complaint to Include Particulars. A plaintiff who had pleaded the general set of facts upon which his cause of action is based should be given an opportunity to amend his complaint and should not be deprived of his right to maintain his action on the ground that his pleadings were defective for lack of particulars (Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 900, 314 P.2d 204).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a memorandum opposing a demurrer to a complaint in a derivative action, when the demurrer is based on the ground that plaintiff has not shown an injury to the corporation, or on the ground that the board of directors has made a good faith business judgment with which the court may not interfere [see Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 (lack of injury; good faith judgment)]. The memorandum in opposition asserts that when a board of directors refuses to pursue an action to redress an injury suffered by the corporation, a shareholder may institute a derivative action on behalf of the corporation [Corp. Code § 800].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship of the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Elements for Derivative Action

In Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 , the plaintiff's appealed from a judgment entered in favor of 13 defendants after their generaldemurrer to a fifth amended and supplemental complaint had been sustained without leave to amend and from an order dismissing the action as to the defendant corporation and three other defendants after the demurrer of the four had been sustained with leave to amend and plaintiffs failed to amend within the time allowed. The court of appeal affirmed the decisions of the trial court, holding, among other grounds, that plaintiffs' complaint failed to state specific allegations of wrongdoing on the part of the directors, and, therefore, no injury to the corporation was shown. In its discussion, the court stated that the two elements which must exist for a derivative action are: (1) an injury to the corporation or to the whole body of its shareholders; and (2) the derivative aspect of the cause of action which arises from the board of directors failure or refusal to act.

[b] Derivative Action as Equitable Remedy

In Weingand v. Atlantic Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 806, 83 Cal. Rptr. 650, 464 P.2d 106 , the defendants appealed from an order granting the plaintiffs in a derivative action a preliminary injunction to prevent foreclosure of a ranch by defendants who held a deed of trust on the property. The defendants argued that the plaintiffs lacked standing to sue since they were not registered shareholders of the corporation. The Supreme Court held that plaintiffs, who were pledgees of stock in the corporation, could maintain the derivative action on behalf of the corporation. Plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant savings and loan association, along with other defendants, had contributed to the financial deterioration of the corporation owning the ranch by milking the corporation in order to salvage the savings and loan association's operations in other areas. The Court held that since the shareholders are the ultimate beneficiaries of the corporation and the financial object of the corporation is to maintain the interests of the corporation, when the corporation actually or virtually refuses to take action, the courts permit the shareholders to sue on behalf of the corporation. In the instant situation, plaintiffs, as pledgees of stock had the same interest as an owner of stock in being heard in a court of equity concerning the protection and preservation of the assets and property of the corporation since the loss of corporate assets resulted in a depreciation of the value of the stock and, in the case of the pledgee, endangered his or her security interest.

[c] Directors Required to Be Diligent

In Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal, which was entered after demurrer by several defendants to the amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend. The demurring defendants were directors of a real estate corporation who were accused of having wasted corporate assets and, in some instances, making secret profits for themselves by selling a large land holding at less than fair market value to a preferred seller even though allegedly there were other buyers available who would have purchased the land at a higher price. The directors demurred in part on the grounds that the sale had been a business judgment of the board within the boundaries of its discretion. In reversing, the court of appeal held that directors are scrutinized severely. They are not bound merely to be honest; they also had to be diligent and careful in performing their duties. If they committed an error of judgment through mere recklessness or want of ordinary prudence and skill, the corporation could hold them responsible for the consequences. The court held that plaintiffs' allegations that directors disregarded the bids of several possible purchasers without giving them serious consideration in order to favor another purchaser, and that several directors were negligent in not discovering the fraudulent maneuverings of three directors who sought to make a secret profit for themselves, constituted a cause of action. The dismissal was affirmed, however, on the grounds that the statute of limitations applicable to negligent breach of fiduciary duty had run as to those directors accused of negligence.

[d] Plaintiff's Right to Amend Complaint to Include Particulars

In Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 314 P.2d 204 , the plaintiff appealed from a judgment in favor of the defendant after his offer to file a second amended complaint was denied. In his amended complaint plaintiff alleged that he and the defendant were the two directors and only shareholders of a small corporation, that the defendant had been acting as president of the corporation and had full control of the corporation, its finances, its accounts, and had controlled the corporation to the exclusion of plaintiff. Plaintiff alleged numerous instances of mismanagement by the defendant. The trial court had sustained the defendant's demurrer on the grounds that plaintiff had failed to allege that a demand had been made on the corporation as required by the statute [former Corp. Code § 834, now Corp. Code § 800(b)]. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's decision, one of the grounds being that the proposed second amended complaint showed facts indicating that an effort to make a demand had been made. The court maintained that, where the general set of facts indicated an injury, the plaintiff should be permitted to amend a complaint which was only defective for lack of particulars.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Right to Amend Complaint to Include Particulars

For a discussion of the facts in Burt v. Irvine Co. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 828, 47 Cal. Rptr. 392 , see § 52.156[3][d]. The trial court had also sustained the demurrer to the plaintiff's complaint without leave to amend because of the failure of the complaint to plead specific language descriptive of the acts of fraud and conspiracy. In its reversal, the court of appeal stated that, since the complaint disclosed a justiciable cause of action, the lower court had not been justified in sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend but should have permitted the plaintiff to amend the complaint to show specific facts.

125 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.157

§ 52.157 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff Suing as Representative of Shareholder's Estate [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF HAS THE POWER TO BRING A DERIVATIVE ACTION IN HIS/HER CAPACITY AS THE REPRESENTATIVE OF A DECEASED SHAREHOLDER'S ESTATE.

A. Powers of Representative of Estate. A cause of action for or against a person is not lost by reason of that person's death, but survives subject to the applicable limitations period and may be commenced by the decedent's personal representative[, or if none, by the decedent's successor in interest] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 377.20(a), 377.30).

B. Representative of Estate as Bringing Derivative Action. If the stockholder dies, the legal representative of his or her estate obtains the authority and powers of the stockholder during the time of the administration and may sue in his or her stead on causes of action, including a corporate derivative action, which the deceased may have had at the time of death (Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 17, 108 P.2d 906).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action in opposition to a demurrer which asserts that the plaintiff has no right to maintain a derivative action since he or she was not a registered shareholder at the time the alleged wrongdoing occurred. The memorandum states that the plaintiff, as a personal representative of the estate of a deceased shareholder, is entitled to bring any causes of actions which the shareholder might have been able to bring at the time of his or her death, and in this capacity the personal representative exercises the deceased's right to bring a derivative action.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Powers of Representative of Estate

Former Prob. Code § 573 was repealed and replaced effective January 1, 1993, by Code Civ. Proc. § 377.10 et seq. , which applies to the commencement of an action or proceeding the decedent was entitled to commence, and to the continuation of an action or proceeding by the decedent, regardless of whether the decedent died before, on, or after January 1, 1993 [Code Civ. Proc. § 377.35].

[b] Representative of Estate as Bringing Derivative Action

In Klopstock v. Superior Court (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 13, 108 P.2d 906 , the defendants in a derivative action petitioned for a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to dismiss an action after a general reversal of the judgment rendered in the previous trial by the court of appeal [see Samter v. Klopstock Realty Co. (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 532, 88 P.2d 250 , discussed in § 52.157[4][a]]. The trial court permitted the substitution of the administratrix of a deceased shareholder's estate after the court of appeal had ruled that the action had been brought by a party who was not the proper party to sue and reversed the judgment in the first trial. The Supreme Court affirmed the substitution of the administratrix, holding that if a stockholder dies, the legal representative obtains the authority and power of the stockholder and could bring a derivative action if the right existed at the time of the deceased's death. The Court stated that the defendants were not prejudiced by the substitution since the nature of the action remained unchanged.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representative of Estate as Bringing Derivative Action

In Samter v. Klopstock Realty Co. (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 532, 88 P.2d 250 , the court of appeal reversed the judgment obtained after trial in a derivative action which had been brought by the executor of the estate of the heir of a deceased shareholder while the estate was still in probate. The court ruled that the heir of a deceased could not bring a derivative action while the estate of the deceased was in probate, and the stock undistributed. The correct party to bring the suit was the executor or administrator of the estate of the deceased shareholder.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.158

§ 52.158 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff as Beneficial Owner of Shares in Corporation [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF HAS COMPLIED WITH THE STATUTORY PREREQUISITES OF CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 800(b)(1) SINCE PLAINTIFF WAS AND IS THE BENEFICIAL OWNER OF STOCK IN THE CORPORATION AT THE TIME THE TRANSACTION(S) COMPLAINED OF OCCURRED.

Beneficial Ownership of Shares. A derivative action may be maintained by a plaintiff who alleges in the complaint that he or she was the beneficial owner of shares in the corporation at the time of the transaction complained of or any part thereof (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1); see Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 342, 309 P.2d 809 ; Pearce v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1062-1064, 197 Cal. Rptr. 238).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action to oppose a demurrer which asserts that a complaint fails to state a cause of action since the plaintiff had failed to allege that he or she was a shareholder of record or the holder of voting trust certificates at the time the transaction complained of occurred.

Counsel should include argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficial Ownership of Shares

In Reed v. Norman (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 338, 309 P.2d 809 , the trial court granted the defendant's motion to dismiss the appeal of plaintiff's derivative suit on the grounds that, since plaintiff no longer owned stock in the corporation, he had no right to recover for the corporation. Plaintiff's stock had been sold at an execution sale to a third party. Plaintiff, however, submitted an uncontradicted affidavit stating that the purchaser at the execution sale had bought the stock on plaintiff's behalf, and that plaintiff was the beneficial owner of any rights and interest in the stock. The court of appeal reversed the trial court, stating that since plaintiff had not lost his title to the stock the motion to dismiss could not be sustained on that ground (48 Cal. 2d 338, 342) .

In Pearce v. Superior Court (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 197 Cal. Rptr. 238 , the beneficiary of a trust, the corpus of which was composed of stock registered in the name of the testamentary trustees, filed a derivative action on behalf of the corporation whose stock was the major asset of the trust. Defendants demurred to the complaint and the trial court sustained the demurrers of all defendants without leave to amend on the ground that the beneficiary did not have standing to bring the derivative action. Plaintiff appealed and the court of appeal reversed. The court found that plaintiff had sufficient standing as a beneficial owner of shares (149 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1060) . The court agreed with plaintiff's contention that the statutory language of Corp. Code § 800(b), "shareholder, of record or beneficially," was a shorter way of saying "holder of a beneficial interest in such shares" (149 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1062-1064) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Beneficial Ownership of Shares

In Patrick v. Alacer Corp. (2008) 167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 84 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 , the plaintiff in a derivative action was the widow of the corporation's founder. She held no shares directly or through a nominee, but she did have a community property interest in an undetermined number of shares that were held in a trust created by her husband, and her complaint alleged the necessary facts to rely on that interest in meeting the standing requirement to allege the beneficial ownership of shares. The trial court sustained a demurrer that asserted her failure to meet that requirement. The court of appeal reversed and directed the trial court to overrule the demurrer. The court stated that "[f]or purposes of the demurrer, assuming as we must the truth of the allegations, plaintiff's alleged community property interest in Alacer potentially renders her a beneficial shareholder ... . While the Trust may be the only record shareholder, plaintiff's alleged community property interest in Alacer, if true, essentially makes her an unregistered Alacer shareholder. Plaintiff's community property interest in Alacer satisfies the 'liberal' standing requirement of beneficial ownership" (167 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1011-1012) .

127 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.159

§ 52.159 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff Suing in a Derivative Action as Shareholder by Operation of Law [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

Plaintiff by Operation of Law. A derivative action may be brought by a plaintiff who acquired his/her shares by operation of law from a shareholder who would have had the right to bring such action (Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a derivative action in opposition to a demurrer to the complaint which states that plaintiff fails to state a cause of action since he or she fails to allege that he or she was a shareholder, registered or beneficial, or holder of a voting trust certificate at the time the wrongdoing complained of occurred [see Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]. The memorandum asserts that the plaintiff is a shareholder who meets these requirements by operation of law [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

128 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.160

§ 52.160 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff as Pledgee of Stock of Corporation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF HAS THE POWER TO BRING A DERIVATIVE ACTION IN HIS/HER CAPACITY AS PLEDGEE OF THE STOCK OF THE CORPORATION.

A. Pledgee of Stock as Plaintiff. A pledgee of corporation stock has such an interest in the stock to entitle him or her to be heard in a court of equity concerning the preservation and protection of the assets and property of the corporation, his or her rights in this respect being essentially the same as those of an owner of stock for the loss of corporate assets, since the loss of corporate assets results in a depreciation of the value of the stock and a consequent impairment of his or her security (Weingand v. Atlantic Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 806, 818, 83 Cal. Rptr. 650, 464 P.2d 106).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for a derivative action which states that the plaintiff lacks standing to sue since he or she was not a registered or beneficial shareholder or a holder of voting trust certificates at the time the wrongdoing complained of occurred [Corp. Code § 800(b)(1)]. The memorandum asserts that a pledgee of the stock of a corporation has standing to sue.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pledgee of Stock as Plaintiff

In Weingand v. Atlantic Sav. & L. Ass'n (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 806, 83 Cal. Rptr. 650, 464 P.2d 106, 83 Cal. Rptr. 650 , the defendants appealed from an order granting the plaintiffs in a derivative action a preliminary injunction to prevent foreclosure of a ranch by defendants who held a deed of trust on the property. The defendants argued that the plaintiffs lacked standing to sue since they were not registered shareholders of the corporation. The Supreme Court held that plaintiffs, who were pledgees of stock in the corporation, could maintain the derivative action on behalf of the corporation. Plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant savings and loan association, along with other defendants, had contributed to the financial deterioration of the corporation owning the ranch by milking the corporation in order to salvage the savings and loan association's operation in other areas. The Court held that since the shareholders are the ultimate beneficiaries of the corporation and the financial object of the corporation is to maintain the interests of the corporation, when the corporation is to maintain the interests of the corporation and the corporation actually or virtually refuses to take action, the courts permit the shareholders to sue on behalf of the corporation. In the instant situation, plaintiffs, as pledgees of the stock had the same interest as an owner of stock in being heard in a court of equity concerning the protection and preservation of the assets and property of the corporation, since the loss of corporate assets resulted in a depreciation of the value of the stock and, in the case of the pledgee, endangered his or her security interest (1 Cal. 3d 806, 818) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.161

§ 52.161 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Demand for Action by Board of Directors Would Be Futile [Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF NEED NOT ALLEGE THAT A DEMAND FOR ACTION WAS MADE ON THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS WHERE THE FACTS DEMONSTRATE THAT SUCH A DEMAND WOULD HAVE BEEN FUTILE.

A. Demand for Action Not Required When It Would Have Been Futile. While it is the general rule that in a derivative action the plaintiff must plead a demand upon, and refusal by, the directors to act, it is equally well settled that such demand and refusal need not be alleged if the facts pleaded demonstrate that such a demand would have been futile (Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 898, 314 P.2d 204).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose a demurrer which argues that a complaint for a derivative action fails to state a cause of action because no demand was made upon a corporation or its board of directors to take the action sought in the derivative suit [see Corp. Code § 800(b)(2)]. The opposition is on the grounds that the facts alleged in the complaint demonstrate that a demand would have been futile.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand for Action Not Required When It Would Have Been Futile

In Reed v. Norman (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 892, 314 P.2d 204 , the plaintiff appealed from a judgment in favor of the defendant after his offer to file a second amended complaint was denied. In his amended complaint plaintiff alleged that he and the defendant were the two directors and only shareholders of a small corporation, that the defendant had been acting as president of the corporation and had full control of the corporation, its finances, its accounts, and had controlled the corporation to the exclusion of plaintiff. The plaintiff then alleged numerous instances in which the defendant had excluded the plaintiff from the management of corporate affairs and from access to corporate books and accounts, instances of misappropriation of funds by the defendant for the personal use of himself and his family, and other misdeeds of the defendant against the corporation, all to the detriment of the corporation. The trial court had ordered judgment for the defendant on the grounds that appellant's complaint did not state a cause of action since there was no allegation of a demand upon the board of directors to take action or their refusal to do so. The court of appeal reversed the trial court, stating that, while it is the general rule that in a derivative action a demand must be pleaded, where the facts show such a demand would have been futile, a demand need not have been made. The court stated that it was clear from the facts that the defendant was bent on depriving the plaintiff of his corporate rights, and had the sole voice in the affairs of the corporation, and that, therefore, the facts demonstrated that a demand would have been useless.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.161A

§ 52.161A Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Equitable Considerations Warrant Exception to Continuous Ownership Requirement

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF MAY MAINTAIN A DERIVATIVE ACTION IN SPITE OF BEING NO LONGER A SHAREHOLDER, WHEN EQUITABLE CONSIDERATIONS WARRANT AN EXCEPTION TO THE CONTINUOUS OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENT.

A. Equitable Considerations May Warrant Exception to Continuous-Ownership Requirement. Although California law generally requires a plaintiff in a shareholder's derivative suit to maintain continuous stock ownership throughout the pendency of the litigation, equitable considerations may warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement (Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

B. Equitable Considerations Might Apply If Plaintiff Was Wrongfully Deprived of Standing. The language of the holding in Grosset v. Wenaas, above, indicates that the court was careful to leave open the possibility that equitable considerations might apply if the plaintiff was wrongfully deprived of standing (Haro v. Ibarra (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 823, 836, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose a demurrer which argues that a complaint for a derivative action fails to state a cause of action because the complaint shows that the plaintiff is no longer a shareholder of the corporation. The ground of opposition is that, under case law, equitable considerations may warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Equitable Considerations May Warrant Exception to Continuous Ownership Requirement

Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , is discussed in § 52.155A[3][a].

[b] Equitable Considerations Might Apply If Plaintiff Was Wrongfully Deprived of Standing

In Haro v. Ibarra (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 823, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 340 , the plaintiffs were former shareholders of a medical corporation. The defendants were officers and shareholders of the corporation, who allegedly schemed to squeeze out the plaintiffs. The defendants and the corporation imposed a substantial assessment on the plaintiffs' shares and subsequently declared those shares to be forfeited after the plaintiffs refused to pay the assessment. The plaintiffs sued, seeking a declaratory judgment that the stock forfeiture was improper and, in the alternative, damages for conversion; and they also alleged derivative causes of action for harm to the corporation resulting from the defendants' improper self-dealing. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer to the derivative causes of action on the ground that the plaintiffs lacked standing because they were no longer shareholders. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, citing the statement in Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 [see § 52.161A[3][a]], that "equitable considerations may warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement if the ... [act depriving the plaintiff of shareholder status] is used to wrongfully deprive the plaintiff of standing" (42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119) . However, the court in Grosset declined to address the question because no such circumstances were present. In analyzing that case, the court of appeal observed, "The language of the Grosset court's holding indicates that the court was careful to leave open the possibility that equitable considerations might apply if the plaintiff was deprived wrongfully of standing." Therefore, the court concluded, "In light of Grosset's express reservation of the question of whether an equitable exception may apply, and in light of the policy of deciding cases on their merits, we reverse. Appellants have alleged equitable considerations that warrant an exception to the continuous ownership requirement, such as the allegations in the ... [complaint] that other shareholders were not required to pay the assessment and yet did not have their shares forfeited" (180 Cal. App. 4th 823, 837) (internal quotation marks and citation omitted).

131 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.162

§ 52.162 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Plaintiff's Cause of Action Is in Individual Capacity

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.156.]

PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO MAINTAIN A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INJURIES SUFFERED IN HIS/HER INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY.

A. Individual Suit to Enforce Shareholder's Individual Right. The stockholder's individual suit is a suit to enforce a right which the stockholder possesses as an individual. The individual wrong, necessary to support a suit by a shareholder, need not be unique to the plaintiff. The same injury may affect a substantial number of shareholders (Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1254, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187).

[Optional] B. Minority Shareholder May Maintain an Individual Action Against Majority Shareholders for Diminution in Value of Stock. When the minority shareholder of a close corporation, instead of alleging that the actions of the majority shareholderin breaching its fiduciary duty towards the minority shareholders had diminished the value of the stock so as to reflect an injury to the corporation, alleges that the breach has diminished the value of the stock held by the minority, the gravamen of the action is injury to the individual stockholders, and the action is, therefore, properly brought as an individual or class action rather than a derivative suit (Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 107, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 ; Smith v. Tele-Communication, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 184 Cal. Rptr. 571).

[Optional] C. Minority Shareholder May Maintain Individual Action for Deprivation of Proportional Share of Corporate Profits or Value of Corporate Assets. A minority shareholder is entitled to sue in an individual capacity when the actions of the majority shareholders have deprived the minority shareholder of his or her proportional share of corporate profits or the value of corporate assets (Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1254, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187).

[Optional] D. Person Injured Both As Individual and As Owner. A stockholder who has suffered injury both as an owner of a corporate entity and in an individual capacity is entitled to pursue remedies in either or both capacities (Denevi v. LGCC (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1221-1222, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint brought by a plaintiff in his or her individual capacity against a corporation and its directors or officers when the demurrer states that the plaintiff's suit is derivative in nature and thus may not be brought by the plaintiff in an individual capacity. The memorandum asserts that when the plaintiff has suffered his or her injuries in an individual capacity, he or she has a right to maintain the suit in an individual capacity.

Optional Paragraph D may be used if the stockholder was injured in both ownership and individual capacities and has elected to pursue the action in an individual capacity, either alone or in addition to derivative claims.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Individual Suit to Enforce Shareholder's Individual Right

In Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 , plaintiff appealed from the trial court's judgment of dismissal after a decision sustaining certain of the defendants' general and special demurrers to her complaint. The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment, stating that the plaintiff, as a minority shareholder, had an individual cause of action against the majority shareholders of a savings and loan association for breach of the fiduciary duties owed to the minority shareholders (1 Cal. 3d 93, 115, 121) . Plaintiff alleged that through use of a holding corporation, and various other manipulations, the majority stockholders created large profits for themselves in a favorable stock market; however, their manipulations had the effect of diminishing the value and marketability of the shares of the minority shareholders who had not been invited to participate in the financial scheme and who had suffered damages as a consequence of the actions of the majority. The Supreme Court held that the distinction between a shareholder's individual suit, as opposed to a derivative suit, is that the individual suit is to enforce a right against the corporation that the shareholder possesses as an individual (1 Cal. 3d 93, 107) . The individual wrong, necessary to support a suit by a shareholder need not be unique to the plaintiff. The same injury may affect a substantial number of shareholders. If the injury is not incidental to an injury to the corporation, an individual cause of action exists. Because, in the instant case, the plaintiff did not allege an injury to the corporation, only to herself as a minority shareholder, the Court held that she had an individual cause of action (1 Cal. 3d 93, 107) .

[b] Minority Shareholder May Maintain an Individual Action Against Majority Shareholders for Diminution in Value of Stock

For a discussion of Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 , see § 52.162[3][a].

In Smith v. Tele-Communication, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 184 Cal. Rptr. 571 , plaintiff, a sole minority shareholder in a subsidiary corporation, brought suit against the majority shareholders of the subsidiary corporation and parent corporation for breach of fiduciary duty,accounting, and fraud arising out of an allocation to the parent corporation of savings resulting from filing of a consolidated tax return by the parent and subsidiary corporations. Plaintiff contended that the failure to allocate to the subsidiary its proportionate share of tax savings reduced his distributive share in the sale of the subsidiary. The trial court sustained general and special demurrers without leave to amend and entered judgment of dismissal (134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 342-343) . Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's dismissal, holding that plaintiff could assert the stated causes of action in an individual capacity rather than in a derivative capacity, because the redress being sought was for injuries to plaintiff as the sole minority shareholder rather than for an injury to the subsidiary (134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 342-343) .

[c] Minority Shareholder May Maintain Individual Action for Deprivation of Proportional Share of Corporate Profits or Value of Corporate Assets

In Jara v. Suprema Meats, Inc*. (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 187* plaintiff alleged he had been deprived of his proportionate share of corporate profits because the majority shareholders had paid themselves excessive compensation for their work as officers of the company. Defendant majority shareholders asserted that this claim could be brought only in a derivative capacity, and the trial court dismissed the claim. Based on a thorough review of Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (discussed in § 52.162[3][a]) and both pre- and post-Jones decisions, the appellate court noted a distinction between claims for damage to the corporation as a whole, or the value of its shares as a whole, and claims in which the minority shareholder suffered loss of value to his or her own shares (as distinct from all of the corporation's shares), or loss of his or her share of corporate profits or assets. Citing Smith v. Tele-Communication, Inc. (1982) 134 Cal. App. 3d 338, 184 Cal. Rptr. 571 (discussed above), Crain v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 509, 123 Cal. Rptr. 419 , De Martini v. Scavenger's Protec. Assn. (1935) 3 Cal. App. 2d 691, 40 P.2d 317 and Low v. Wheeler (1962) 207 Cal. App. 2d 477, 24 Cal. Rptr. 538 , the court held that the minority shareholder plaintiff's claim, while presenting "a closer case than Jones," came "within the scope of allowable individual actions" (121 Cal. App. 4th 1238, 1252-1258) .

[d] Person Injured Both As Individual and As Owner

Denevi v. LGCC (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1221-1223, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 276 involved a complaint brought by a shareholder in his individual capacity following his successful prosecution of a derivative suit arising out of interrelated claims. The court cited Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 , discussed in § 52.162[3][a], for the settled principle that "a single course of action by a majority shareholder may give rise to derivative claims, individual claims, or both," and therefore that "one who has suffered injury both as an owner of a corporate entity and in an individual capacity is entitled to pursue remedies in both capacities." There was "no doubt" that the plaintiff alleged both derivative and individual claims when he sued for fraud that caused him to transfer rights to purchase real estate to a newly formed limited liability company, and also for harm subsequently occurring to that company when the majority interests failed to exercise those purchase rights.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.163

§ 52.163 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Application of Business Judgment Rule [Corp. Code § 309]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

REGULAR RULES REGARDING DENIAL OF SUMMARY JUDGMENT APPLY TO DERIVATIVE ACTIONS TO REQUIRE DENIAL OF THE MOTION WHEN TRIABLE ISSUES OF FACT ARE PRESENTED REGARDING THE APPLICATION OF THE BUSINESS JUDGMENT RULE.

A. Denial of Motion for Summary Judgment. A motion for summary judgment must be denied if the papers in support of and in opposition to the motion show that there is a triable issue as to any material fact (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Business Judgment Rule Under Common Law. [See § 52.140, Paragraph B.]

C. Business Judgment Rule Codified Under Corporations Code Section 309. [See § 52.140, Paragraph C.]

D. Prerequisites for Application of Business Judgment Rule. In order to be immunized by application of the business judgment rule, a director must perform the duties of a director, including duties as a member of any committee of the board on which the director may serve, in good faith, in a manner that the director believes to be in the best interests of the corporation and its shareholders, and with such care, including reasonable inquiry as an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances (Corp. Code § 309(a), (c); Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1267-1269, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

E. Regular Rules Governing Summary Judgment Apply. Judicial review of the independence, good faith, and investigative techniques of [a special litigation committee of] the board of directors is governed by traditional summary judgment standards. The business judgment rule was not designed to insulate the actions of the board of directors [or a committee of the board] committed in bad faith, and thus, the board [or committee of the board] should not receive the benefit of the presumption when a court seeks to judge the board's [or committee's] independence and good faith. The function of the trial court in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is merely to determine whether such issues of fact exist, and not to decide the merits of the issues themselves (Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 179, 189-190, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 ; Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1041, 1043, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1268, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] F. "Similar Circumstances" Within Meaning of Corporations Code Section 309(a). "Under similar circumstances" in Corporations Code Section 309(a) requires that a court consider the nature and extent of a director's alleged oversight or mistake in judgment in the context of such factors as the size, complexity, and location of the activities involved. It also limits the critical assessment of a director's performance to the time of action or nonaction, and thereby avoids harsher judgments that may be made with benefit of hindsight (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] G. Right to Rely on Committee's Recommendation. Under Corporations Code Section 309(a) and (b), a director's right to rely on a recommendation or work product of a committee of the board is conditioned on the duty of reasonable inquiry that requires a director who intends to rely on the recommendation of the committee, in appropriate circumstances, to make such reasonable inquiry as an ordinarily prudent person would make under similar circumstances (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264-1265, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] H. "Golden Parachute" Defined. Golden parachutes are special termination agreements that shelter executives from the effects of a corporate takeover (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1256, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] I. Purpose of "Golden Parachutes." The recognized functions of golden parachutes are (1) to foster executive objectivity toward merger and tender offers and (2) to allow corporations that are likely takeover targets to attract top executives. Those functions are best accomplished if the golden parachute is negotiated before the corporation becomes a takeover target (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1266, 1266-1267, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] J. Application of Business Judgment Rule to Approval of "Golden Parachutes." For purposes of evaluating golden parachutes alleged to have been made in breach of fiduciary duty, Corporations Code Section 309 is applicable only to "outside directors," not to "inside directors" who were officers of the corporation and beneficiaries of the golden parachutes and who thus abstained from voting on their approval by other directors (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265-1266, 1268-1269, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] K. Business Judgment Rule Is Not Applicable to Conduct of "Inside Director" in Obtaining Agreement From Which He or She Benefits. Corporations Code Section 309 is not applicable to examine the conduct of a director, who is also an officer of the corporation, in obtaining approval from the disinterested directors of an agreement from which he or she benefits personally, such as one providing for his or her compensation (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265-1266, 1268-1269, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] L. Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Committee Members Exercised Their Best

Business Judgment. Triable issues of fact are presented regarding whether the _____ [specify, e.g., compensation] committee members acted in a manner that they believed to be in the best interests of the corporation and exercised reasonable care, including sufficient inquiry as was warranted by the circumstances, in approving [for recommendation to the full board] a transaction costing the corporation _____ [specify, e.g., $11 million] after having met for only _____ [specify, e.g., two hours] when they _____ [specify, e.g., (1) relied entirely on the recommendation of outside counsel without asking outside counsel or analyzing for themselves how the transaction achieved the stated corporate purposes, (2) should have been aware that this type of transaction was controversial and that the consideration the corporation was to pay under the agreements would be presumptively excessive under newly enacted tax law, and (3) were aware, or should have been aware, that the agreements were initiated at the request of the chairman and chief executive officer, who would personally benefit from it] (Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1044, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269-1271, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).

[Optional] M. Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Members Exercised Their Best Business Judgment in Relying on Recommendation of Board Committee. While in most cases directors should be allowed to rely on the recommendations of a board committee on a matter delegated to that committee, a triable issue of fact exists regarding whether the directors' general knowledge of the questionable nature of _____ [specify, e.g., golden parachutes within the context of takeovers] would render unwarranted their total reliance on the committee's recommendation (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1272, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion forsummary judgment in a shareholder derivation action when triable issues of fact are presented concerning application of the business judgment rule. Triable issues regarding the application of the business judgment rule usually relate to the directors' independence, good faith, or their depth of inquiry regarding a particular transaction [see Corp. Code § 309]. A number of optional paragraphs are included for use if applicable in the particular situation. Counsel may also wish to include other authorities from § 52.140 or 52.147 that address additional aspects of the business judgment rule as applied to particular fact situations.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prerequisites for Application of Business Judgment Rule

Corp. Code § 309 is set forth in § 52.140[3][b].

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. The court of appeal said that the application of Corp. Code § 309 to the judicial review of a director's actions raises various issues of fact, such as whether the director acted as an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would under similar circumstances, and in the best interests of the corporation, and whether he or she made a reasonable inquiry as indicated by the circumstances (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1267). Those questions ordinarily should be left to the trier of fact. However, on a motion for summary judgment, if the evidence establishes that there is no controverted material fact, the question becomes one of law (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1268). The function of the trial court in ruling on a motion for summary judgment is merely to determine whether such issues of fact exist, and not to decide the merits of the issues themselves (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1268).

See also that portion of the court's opinion discussed in § 52.163[3][g] relating to the court's analysis of the liability of the outside directors.

[b] Regular Rules Governing Summary Judgment Apply

Desaigoudar v. Meyercord (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 408 is discussed in § 52.140[3][k]. In that case, the court stated that the summary procedures utilized in California protect legitimate shareholder suits while permitting exclusion of meritless claims. When the special litigation committee defense reaches the trial court on summary judgment, traditional summary judgment rules apply (citing Will v. Engebretson & Co., discussed below) (108 Cal. App. 4th 173, 189-190) .

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 was a derivative action brought by the corporation's 20-percent shareholder to contest the salary and compensation package of the company's president, who owned the remaining 80 percent of the stock. When the action was commenced, the board of directors consisted of only three people: plaintiff, the president, and the president's brother-in-law. Two months later, two additional directors were appointed. Then, the brother-in-law and the two new directors were appointed as a compensation committee of the board. The compensation committee was charged with reviewing the history of the president's compensation, establishing an appropriate compensation package for the president, evaluating the allegations of the derivative action, and determining whether continuation of the derivative action was in the best interests of the corporation. They engaged the services of an outside accounting firm. The corporation answered, denying the allegations of the complaint and cross complained against the plaintiff for breach of fiduciary duty, negligence, and abuse of process, alleging that the sole purpose of the derivative action was to force the president to buy plaintiff's shares at an inflated price. After reviewing the two-page report of the accounting firm, the compensation committee determined that the continuation of the derivative action was not in the company's best interests and recommended to the board that plaintiff be asked to voluntarily abandon the lawsuit. Plaintiff refused, and the corporation moved for summary judgment, contending that the compensation committee was a disinterested committee and that its good-faith decision to dismiss the derivative action was immune from judicial scrutiny under the business judgment rule. Plaintiff contended that triable issues of fact existed regarding the formation and independence of the committee and the good faith of the committee's decisions. The trial court's interim ruling held that the substantive aspects of the committee's decision were beyond judicial scrutiny because of the business judgment rule but agreed that the matter of the committee's good faith had to be determined. The trial court held several "good-faith hearings," after discovery. It considered those hearings a "hybrid dismissal" motion and made findings of fact that the compensation committee acted with "disinterested independence" and that its decision was made in good faith. On the basis of those findings, the trial court dismissed the derivative action, severed it from the cross complaint, and entered judgment against plaintiff on the complaint. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court first discussed the business judgment rule, saying that the rule is premised on the notion that those to whom the management of the corporation has been entrusted, and not the courts, are best able to judge whether a particular action or transaction is one that is helpful to the conduct of the corporate affairs or expedient for the attainment of corporate purposes. The rule establishes a presumption that directors' decisions are based on sound business judgment. In short, neither a court nor minority shareholders can substitute their business judgment for that of a corporation when its board of directors has acted in good faith and with a view to the best interests of the corporation and all its shareholders (213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 1040).

The business judgment rule permits a corporation to appoint a special litigation committee to decide whether the maintenance of a shareholders' derivative suit is in the corporation's best interests (213 Cal. App. 3d. 1040). The committee may decide that the suit should be dismissed, and if it does, the corporation may make a motion in the trial court to dismiss the suit. The corporation may demur, move for judgmenton the pleadings, or seek summary judgment (213 Cal. App. 3d 1040-1041) . However, judicial review of the independence, good faith, and investigative techniques of a special litigation committee is governed by traditional summary judgment standards (213 Cal. App. 3d 1041). The business judgment rule was not designed to insulate the actions of the committee performed in bad faith, and thus the committee should not receive the benefit of the presumption when the court seeks to judge the committee's independence and good faith (213 Cal. App. 3d 1043). Here, plaintiff's evidence tended to show that the disinterested directors were not interested in determining the merits of the derivative action but simply followed the advice of corporate counsel, who, according to plaintiff, was working on behalf of the president, and that the committee never reviewed the complaint of the corporation's financial records and never made any investigation of the matter at all (213 Cal. App. 3d 1044).

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. See also discussion of that opinion under § 52.163[3][a].

[c] "Similar Circumstances" Within Meaning of Corporations Code Section 309(a)

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. While discussing the codification of the business judgment rule in California in Corp. Code § 309 (discussed in § 52.140[3][b]), the court of appeal cited legislative committee comments for the proposition that the term "under similar circumstances" as used in Corp. Code § 309(a) requires a court to consider the nature and extent of a director's alleged oversight or mistake in judgment in the context of such factors as the size, complexity, and location of the activities involved. It also limits the critical assessment of a director's performance to the time of the action or nonaction, and thereby avoids harsher judgments that may be made with benefit of hindsight (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265) .

[d] Right to Rely on Committee's Recommendation

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. Citing legislative committee comments, the court said that the provisions of a director's right to rely in Corp. Code § 309(a) and (b) enlarged the right of reliance that existed under former Corp. Code § 829. By the provision permitting reliance on a committee of the board, the drafters of Corp. Code § 309 intended to permit reliance on the work product of a board committee resulting from a more detailed investigation undertaken by that committee and forming the basis for action taken by the board (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264) . However, the duty of reasonable inquiry in Corp. Code § 309(b) constitutes a condition to the right of reliance, so that directors may not close their eyes to what is going on about them in corporate business and must in appropriate circumstances make such reasonable inquiry as an ordinarily prudent person would make under similar circumstance (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1264-1265) .

[e] "Golden Parachute" Defined

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. The court of appeal first defined golden parachutes as special termination agreements that shelter executives from the effects of a corporate takeover, saying that the emergence of golden parachutes has been attributed to the dramatic increase in the size of corporate takeovers and the volume of hostile takeovers (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1256) . Typically, golden parachutes provide senior executives who are dismissed or who resign as a result of a takeover with either continued compensation for a specified period following the executive's departure or with a lump-sum payment. The legality and desirability of this form of executive compensation, which some view as a form of corporate looting, have been the subject of increasing controversy faced by the courts and addressed by legal commentators (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1256) .

[f] Purpose of "Golden Parachutes"

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a] [see also § 52.163[3][e]]. The court of appeal noted that valid corporate functions were served by golden parachutes, but also said there existed the potential for executive self-dealing. Corporate takeovers often threaten the financial and professional security of the managers of target companies. The theoretical purpose of golden parachutes is to shelter senior executives from those threats (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1266) . The two principal recognized functions of golden parachutes are (1) to foster executive objectivity toward merger and tender offers and (2) to allow corporations that are likely takeover targets to attract top executives. With respect to the first function the court noted that a threatened takeover gives rise to the potential for conflict between executives' personal interests and the interests of the shareholders. Golden parachutes align more closely with the interests of management than with those of the shareholders by insuring executives against those possible pecuniary and nonpecuniary losses that may result from a change of control. Most commentators agree, the court continued, that in view of the functions of golden parachutes, they should be negotiated as part of an overall compensation package, and that parachutes enacted in the midst of takeover negotiations should be discouraged (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1266) . A parachute that is conferred following a tender offer will likely have little value in creating executive objectivity because the executives generally already will have taken an initial position on the takeover before the golden parachutes are adopted and may not be able to take a credible different stance at a later time (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1266-1267) . Further, during a takeover battle, the target corporation h no need for the parachute's executive recruiting functions. For these reasons,parachutes that are adopted in response to actual takeover overtures have been viewed as last-minute appropriations of corporate assets or, alternatively, as attempts to discourage potential acquirers (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1267) .

In addition to the timing of the implementation of golden parachutes, their amounts have been challenged as excessive to any possible benefit conferred on the corporation, the court said, noting that I.R.C. §§ 280G, 4999 provide that parachutes that are greater than or equal to three times an executive's annual compensation are presumed excessive for tax purposes, resulting in the corporation's losing its deduction for the parachutes payments as well as in the imposition of a 20 percent excise tax on the beneficiaries of the payments (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1267) .

[g] Application of Business Judgment Rule to Approval of "Golden Parachutes"

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. After discussing the codification of the business judgment rule in California in Corp. Code § 309 (discussed in § 52.140[3][b]), the court of appeal turned its consideration to application of the business judgment rule to the golden parachutes and consulting agreement at issue. The court said that because the form and amount of executive compensation are fundamentally corporate business decisions, and because golden parachutes often serve a valid corporate function (see discussion in § 52.163[3][f]), Corp. Code § 309 governs a court's review of the conduct of outside directors in approving the golden parachutes and consulting agreement (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265) .

However, the court concluded that as a matter of law, the review of the conduct of the inside directors is not governed by Corp. Code § 309. They did not vote on the approval of the golden parachute agreements or the consulting agreement. In securing payment of those benefits to themselves, they were not "performing the duties of a director" as specified in Corp. Code § 309, but were acting as officer-employees of the corporation (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 1268) . Thus, the business judgment rule as codified in Corp. Code § 309 and the judicial deference afforded under it do not apply to determine the liability of the inside directors in seeking approval of the agreements or accepting benefits under them. It was error for the trial court to apply the business judgment rule in granting summary judgment in favor of the inside directors, and therefore the summary judgment was reversed with respect to the five inside directors (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1265, 1268) .

Turning its consideration to the liability of the "outside" directors for approving the golden parachutes and consulting agreement, the court first noted that the record before it did not disclose that the outside directors had any personal interest in the benefits conferred by those agreements and did not show any conflict of interest or evidence of bad faith or their part in approving the benefits (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269) . Thus, the court had only to determine whether the record disclosed controverted issues of fact regarding whether the outside directors (1) acted in a manner they believed to be in the best interests of Natomas; (2) exercised such care, including reasonable inquiry, as an ordinarily prudent person in a like position would use under similar circumstances [see Corp. Code § 309(a)]; and (3) in relying on various sources made reasonable inquiry if the need for inquiry was indicated by the circumstances [see Corp. Code § 309(b)]. The court separated its further analysis to consider the golden parachutes separately from the consulting agreement and to consider the liability of the outside directors on the compensation committee separately from that of the outside directors who were not on the compensation committee (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269) .

The court's consideration of the liability of the outside directors for approving and recommending the golden parachutes is further discussed in § 52.163[3][i] and [j]. The court's consideration of any liability based on approval or recommendation of the consulting agreement is discussed in § 52.147[3][c].

[h] Business Judgment Rule Is Not Applicable to Conduct of "Inside Director" in Obtaining Agreement From Which He or She Benefits

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. For discussion of that portion of the court's opinion addressing application of the business judgment rule to inside directors, see discussion under § 52.163[3][g].

[i] Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Committee Members Exercised Their Best Business Judgment

Will v. Engebretson & Co. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 1033, 261 Cal. Rptr. 868 is discussed in § 52.163[3][b].

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. The court's initial discussion of the application of the business judgment rule to the golden parachutes and consulting agreement is set forth under § 52.163[3][g]. With respect to the golden parachutes, the court noted that the compensation committee approved agreements for 17 key executives after a two-hour meeting, and that the agreements for the five inside directors cost the corporation $11 million. The director who chaired the committee indicated that the committee relied entirely on outside counsel's recommendation in approving the agreements. Although outside counsel represented that the agreements were necessary to insure continuity of management, the members of the committee did not ask outside counsel or analyze for themselves how the agreements would accomplish that purpose (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269) . The court also said the agreements at issue did not serve the recognized functions of golden parachutes [see § 52.163[3][f]]. The objectivity function was not served, because the parachutes were negotiated after the tender offer had already been made (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269) . Because the golden parachutes were for existing executives, they did not serve the executive recruitment function either (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1270) . Further, the court said, the fact that the parachute agreements required their beneficiaries to stay for only six months, together with the fact that these agreements also included very broad "good reason" provisions allowing the beneficiaries to depart before expiration of the six-month period, would support an inference that the golden parachute agreements did not serve to insure continuity of management. This presented a triable issue fact (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1270) . The court aid that although I.R.C. §§ 280G, 4999 were not effective until after these parachute agreements were adopted, the compensation committee arguably should have been aware of the pendency of legislation affecting matters within their purview and that the lump-sum payments provided by the agreements would be excessive under the new tax laws (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1271) . Finally, the members of the compensation committee should have been aware that the agreements were proposed by the chairman and CEO and that outside counsel was acting in accordance with the chairman and CEO's instructions in drafting the proposed agreements. Evidence of the close connection between the CEO and outside counsel in formulating the terms of the agreements would support the inference of self-dealing, which should have been investigated further by the committee. The trier of fact could reasonably conclude that the foregoing facts warranted further inquiry and review by the compensation committee to determine whether the golden parachutes were in the company's best interests (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1271) . Thus, as a matter of law, summary judgment based on the application of the business judgment rule was not proper regarding the outside directors on the compensation committee with respect to their consideration and recommendation of the golden parachutes (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1269, 1271) .

[j] Questions of Fact Presented Regarding Whether Board Members Exercised Their Best Business Judgment in Relying on Recommendation of Board Committee

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. The court's initial discussion of the application of the business judgment rule to the golden parachutes and consulting agreement is set forth under § 52.163[3][g]. With respect to the liability of the outside directors who were not on the compensation committee for approving the golden parachutes, the court noted that under Corp. Code § 309(b)(3), those directors were entitled to rely on the recommendations of the compensation committee that they believed "to merit confidence" and would not be required to initiate their own investigation (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1271) . The court noted that articles in two business magazines had addressed the highly controversial nature of golden parachutes in general shortly before the time the directors considered the agreements at issue here and said that the board members had or should have had some knowledge of this controversy. The court concluded that while in most cases directors should be allowed to rely on the recommendations of a board committee on matter delegated to that committee, in this case, a triable issue of fact existed regarding whether the directors' general knowledge of the questionable nature of golden parachutes within the context of takeovers would cause total reliance on the committee's recommendation to be unwarranted (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1272) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Regular Rules Governing Summary Judgment Apply

In Everest Investors 8 v. McNeil Partners (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 31 , a real estate limited partnership merged into a new entity, becoming a wholly owned subsidiary of the new entity. The interests of the limited partners were liquidated or cashed out. The general partner, however, retained an equity interest in the post-merger entity, which then sold the assets of the limited partnership to third parties for more than the assets were valued for purposes of the cash-out and merger. The limited partners brought an action against the general partner for breach of fiduciary duty, unfair competition, and constructive fraud, claiming that the merger transaction harmed the limited partners by undervaluing their partnership interests or by depriving them of the future earnings and growth generated by the assets of the limited partnership. The defendant moved for summary judgment on two grounds, one of which was that plaintiffs' claims were barred by application of the business judgment rule. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants. The court of appeal reversed. As to the application of the business judgment rule, the court of appeal states that the rule does not shield actions taken without reasonable inquiry, with improper motives, or as a result of a conflict of interest. It agreed with plaintiffs that triable issues of fact as to the existence of defendant's improper motives and a conflict of interest precluded summary judgment based on the business judgment rule. Furthermore, triable issues of fact existed regarding whether the merger transaction was preceded by a good faith and reasonable investigation into whether the merger transaction was in the best interests of the limited partners (114 Cal. App. 4th 411, 429-432) .

133 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.164

§ 52.164 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Compliance With Corp. Code § 310 Does Not Bar Derivative Action Regarding Same Transaction

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT MAY BE DENIED BECAUSE COMPLIANCE WITH CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 310 IS NOT SUFFICIENT TO BAR A DERIVATIVE ACTION BASED ON THE TRANSACTION.

A. Denial of Motion for Summary Judgment. [See § 52.163, Paragraph A.]

B. Compliance With Corp. Code § 310 Does Not Bar Derivative Action. The fact that a transaction between a director and a corporation was approved in a manner that satisfied the requirements of Corporations Code Section 310 relates only to the voidness or voidability of the transaction. It does not render the contract immune from attack on other grounds, such as corporate waste. Nor does compliance with the requirements of Corporations Code Section 310 render the directors who approved it immune from liability for breach of fiduciary duty as a result of their approval of the contract (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in a share holder derivation action when the corporation or its directors contend that a particular transaction between the corporation and a director cannot be the basis of the derivative action because it was approved in one of the ways specified by Corp. Code § 310.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compliance With Corp. Code § 310 Does Not Bar Derivative Action

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. Although the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the defendants by applying the business judgment rule, the issues of shareholder approval under Corp. Code § 310(a)(1) and corporate ratification were raised in the trial court and considered by the court of appeal (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1272) . The court of appeal noted that Corp. Code § 310(a) provides in part, with regard to a contract between a corporation and one of its directors, that the contract is not void or voidable on the ground that the director was a party to the contract or was present at the meeting of the board that authorized, approved, or ratified the contract if either of the following occurs:

- The material facts of the transaction are fully disclosed to the shareholders and then the contract is approved by them; or

- The material facts of the transaction are fully disclosed to the board, which then ratifies the contract by a vote that is sufficient without counting the vote of the interested director, and the contract is just and reasonable as to the corporation at the time it is authorized, approved, or ratified (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1272-1273) .

If the contract is not approved in one of these methods, then the person asserting the validity of the contract has the burden of proving that the contract was just and reasonable as to the corporation at the time it is authorized, approved, or ratified [Corp. Code § 310(a)(3)] (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273) . Defendants contended that the material facts of the golden parachutes and consulting agreement were disclosed to the shareholders in the proxy statements used to solicit approval of the merger, and that the agreements were thus immunized under Corp. Code § 310(a)(1). The court of appeal disagreed and said that the requirements of Corp. Code § 310(a) address the voidness or voidability of a contract but do not render the contract immune from attack on other grounds, such as corporate waste. Nor does compliance with the requirements of Corp. Code § 310(a) render the directors who approved it immune from liability for breach of fiduciary duty as a result of their approval of the contract (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compliance With Corp. Code § 3310 Does not Bar Derivative Action

In Walczak v. EPL Prolong, Inc. (9th Cir. 2000) 198 F.3d 725 , a minority shareholder brought a class action derivative action alleging RICO violations, fraudulent conveyance, and breach of fiduciary duty. The shareholder sought to prevent consummation of the sale of the company's assets and liabilities pursuant to an agreement of sale with a subsidiary, and its dissolution. The district court granted a preliminary injunction, concluding that with regard to the fraudulent conveyance and breach of fiduciary duty claims, the shareholder had demonstrated a threat of irreparable harm and likelihood of success on the merits (198 F.3d 725, 728) .

The court of appeals held that the district court properly issued the preliminary injunction based on the breach of fiduciary duty claim, which was governed by Corp. Code § 310. Appellants did not challenge the legal standard applied, but argued that the factual findings on which the court based its decision were clearly erroneous. The court of appeals found that the district court did not abuse its discretion in issuing the preliminary injunction because its factual findings on which it based its decision--that the agreement to license the company's patent was inherently unfair and that the appellants engaged in a pattern of improperly dispersing and transferring corporate assets--were not clearly erroneous (198 F.3d 725, 732-733) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.165

§ 52.165 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--Doctrine of Corporate Ratification Not Applicable to Bar Derivative Action Regarding Ratified Transaction

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.40.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE DOCTRINE OF CORPORATE RATIFICATION DOES NOT APPLY TO BAR A DERIVATIVE ACTION BASED ON THE TRANSACTION.

A. Denial of Motion for Summary Judgment. [See § 52.163, Paragraph A.]

B. Corporate Ratification Does Not Bar Derivative Action. The doctrine ofcorporate ratification does not apply to a shareholder derivative action in which the shareholders, not the corporation directly, claim a wrong perpetrated on the corporation by its directors. The corporation is only a nominal party to the derivative action, and thus the doctrine of corporate ratification is no bar to the action (Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1274, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in a shareholder derivative action when the corporation or its directors contend that a particular transaction cannot be the basis of the derivative action because it was ratified by the corporation.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporate Ratification Does Not Bar Derivative Action

The facts and procedural background of Gaillard v. Natomas Co. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 256 Cal. Rptr. 702 , disapproved on other grounds, Grosset v. Wenaas (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 1100, 1119 n.16, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 129, 175 P.3d 1184 , are discussed in § 52.140[3][a]. Although the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the defendants on the basis of the business judgment rule, for guidance to the trial court on remand, the court of appeal also considered defendants' contention that Diamond's ratification of the new employment agreements after the merger amounted to a corporate ratification that estopped the corporation from denying the validity or enforceability of the agreements after it had accepted performance and made payments under them (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1273-1274) . The court said that the doctrine of corporate ratification did not apply to this shareholder derivative action in which the shareholders, not the corporation directly, claim a wrong perpetrated on the corporation by its directors. As with any other shareholder derivative action, the corporation is only a nominal party. Thus, the derivative action was not barred by the doctrine of corporate ratification (208 Cal. App. 3d 1250, 1274) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.166

§ 52.166 Opposing Motion for Security Requested Pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)--Action Not a Derivative Suit--By Plaintiff

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF_____

_____ [name(s)],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff(s), vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING MOTION FOR SE-
_____ [name],	)	CURITY
a Corporation, and	)	Date: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Time: _____
Defendant(s)	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

NO SECURITY IS REQUIRED OF A PLAINTIFF WHO FILES IN AN INDIVIDUAL CAPACITY.

A. Motion for Security Applicable to Derivative Actions. A motion for a security made pursuant to Corporations Code Section 800(c)-(f) may only be made in connection with a derivative action (Corp. Code § 800(c)).

B. Provision Requiring Security Improperly Applied. When a cause of action is properly before it to which the provision requiring a security (Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)) does not apply, a court acts in excess of its jurisdiction if it dismisses an action for failure to comply with the statutory provisions for a security (Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 502-503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to oppose a motion for a security requested pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f) when the plaintiff is not suing in a derivative capacity, but in some other capacity [see Corp. Code § 800(c)].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Provision Requiring Security Improperly Applied

In Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896 , the plaintiffs sought a writ of prohibition to order a trial court to desist from entering judgment in the involuntary dissolution proceedings of a corporation and to desist from its order requiring petitioners to post security pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 [now Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)]. The plaintiffs had filed a complaint in intervention in a dissolution proceeding for a corporation. The plaintiffs alleged that they were shareholders in the corporation and that defendants, by refusing to recognize them as shareholders, had prevented them from participating in the affairs of the corporation. The complaint requested an order compelling defendants in intervention to register the shares of the plaintiffs on the register and to issue certificates. The trial court had conditioned pursuit of the suit on the posting of a security for the suit. The Supreme Court issued the writ of prohibition, holding that the trial court had exceeded its jurisdiction in requiring the plaintiffs to post a bond. The Court held that the requirements of Corp. Code § 834 applied to derivative actions. The rights asserted by the plaintiffs were personal rights, and they could not be required to post a bond under the circumstances, even though they alleged facts which would also give rise to a corporate cause of action (53 Cal. 2d 498, 502-504) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.167

§ 52.167 Opposing Motion for Security Requested Pursuant to Corp. Code § 800--Aggregate Amount of Security Is Limited to $50,000

[1] FORM

[The following points and authorities may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT OF SECURITY THAT PLAINTIFF[S] MAY BE REQUIRED TO FURNISH PURSUANT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 800 IS $50,000 AS TO ALL MOVING PARTIES.

Aggregate Amount of Security Is Limited. The aggregate amount of security that a plaintiff may be required to provide pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 is limited to $50,000 as to all moving parties (Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for security requested pursuant to Corp. Code § 800 when the plaintiff already has provided an aggregate of $50,000 as to all moving parties.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Aggregate Amount of Security Is Limited

In Hale v. Southern California IPA Medical Group (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 773 , the plaintiff filed a shareholders derivative action against a corporation and five individual directors. The defendants each filed motions under Corp. Code § 800(c), (d) to require plaintiff to post security, arguing that the court could require plaintiff to post a bond of up to $50,000 for each of the moving defendants. The trial court agreed and ordered plaintiff to post six bonds, for a total of $250,000. After plaintiff failed to post the bonds as ordered, the trial court entered a judgment of dismissal. Plaintiff appealed, claiming that the $50,000 statutory limit on security was the aggregate for all the moving parties (86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 922) . The court of appeal reversed. It found that although Corp. Code § 800(d) is ambiguous with respect to the maximum amount of bond that may be ordered, the language of Corp. Code § 800(e) states that once the plaintiff has posted a $50,000 bond, the plaintiff has satisfied the requirements of that section and no additional bond may be required (86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 923-924) . The court examined the legislative history of the section, determining that an amendment to the section was not intended to effect any substantive change to the $50,000 aggregate limit. The court concluded that in ruling on a motion pursuant to Corp. Code § 800(d), the trial court's discretion is limited to requiring plaintiff to furnish security in the aggregate amount of $50,000 as to all moving parties. Therefore, the trial court erred in requiring plaintiff to furnish $250,000 in security (86 Cal. App. 4th 919, 927-928) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.168

§ 52.168 Opposing Motion for Attorney's Fees by Successful Defendant in Derivative Action--Recovery Is Limited to Security Posted by Plaintiff [Corp. Code § 800]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)]	)	MEMORANDUM OPPOSING MOTION FOR AT-Plaintiff(s),	)	TORNEY'S FEES
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____[name],	)	Time: _____
a Corporation, and	)	Location: _____
_____[name(s)],	)	[Judge: _____]
Defendant(s).	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

WHEN THE DEFENDANT IS THE PREVAILING PARTY IN A SHAREHOLDER'S DERIVATIVE ACTION AND MOVES FOR AN AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 800, THE DEFENDANT MAY NOT RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES _____ [IN EXCESS OF THE SECURITY or WHEN NO SECURITY WAS] POSTED BY THE PLAINTIFF.

Attorney's Fees Limited by Posted Security. Corporations Code Section 800 merely allows a prevailing defendant in a derivative action to recover attorney's fees and costs by recourse to the bond, if any, that was posted pursuant to that statute, until the full amount of the bond has been exhausted. If a prevailing defendant desires to recover attorney's fees or costs independently of the bond, or beyond the amount of the bond, the defendant must look to legal or statutory authority other than Corporations Code Section 800 (West Hills Farms, Inc. v. RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458).

Dated: _____.

_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used by the plaintiff in a derivative action to oppose a motion for attorney's fees when the plaintiff, either pursuant to a court order or voluntarily, posted security for attorney's fees pursuant to Corp. Code § 800, or when the plaintiff did not post security. The form may be adapted for use in another procedural setting, such as a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form noting the relationship between the facts of the case and the substantive law.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Limited by Posted Security

In West Hills Farms, Inc. v. RCO Ag Credit, Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458 , the defendant corporation was sued by two of its shareholders. The trial court granted the defendant's motion under Corp. Code § 800 to require the plaintiffs to furnish a bond in the amount of $50,000 as security for defendant's anticipated litigation expenses to defend the action. The plaintiffs furnished the required bond. The defendant ultimately prevailed in the action and, following entry of judgment, moved for an award of all of its attorney's fees and costs incurred, totaling over $350,000. The trial court's order limited the award of attorney's fees and costs to $50,000, the amount of the bond. The defendant appealed from that order, contending that under Corp. Code § 800, it was entitled to recover all of its attorney's fees and costs, regardless of the amount of the bond.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order. The court concluded that Corp. Code § 800 "is a bond or security statute. And contrary to defendant's contentions, the statute does not provide for recovery of attorney fees and costs independent of the bond. Thus, section 800 merely allows the prevailing defendant in the derivative action to recover its attorney fees and costs by recourse to the bond, if one is posted, until the full amount of the bond has been exhausted" (170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719) (original emphasis; citation omitted). Moreover, the court noted, "If a prevailing defendant desires to recover attorney fees or costs independent of the bond, or beyond the amount of the bond, it would have to look to legal or statutory authority other than section 800" (170 Cal. App. 4th 710, 719 n.11).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
E. SHAREHOLDER DERIVATIVE ACTIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities §§ 52.169-52.179

[Reserved]

§§ 52.169[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.180

§ 52.180 Supporting Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Winding Up of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Corporation Dissolved at Election of Shareholders [Corp. Code § 1900(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
	)	FOR JUDICIAL SUPERVISION OF VOLUNTARY
	)	WINDING UP OF CORPORATION
In the matter of _____	)	[Corp. Code § 1904]
[name] a Corporation, In the Process of Voluntary	)	Date: _____
Winding Up and Dissolution.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

JUDICIAL SUPERVISION OF THE DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION IN THE PROCESS OF VOLUNTARY WINDING UP IS AUTHORIZED ON PETITION OF _____ [THE CORPORATION or A SHAREHOLDER OR SHAREHOLDERS WHO HOLD SHARES REPRESENTING FIVE PERCENT OR MORE OF THE TOTAL NUMBER OF ANY CLASS OF ITS OUTSTANDING SHARES or ANY SHAREHOLDER OR SHAREHOLDERS OF A CLOSE CORPORATION or THREE OR MORE CREDITORS OF THE CORPORATION]

IF IT APPEARS NECESSARY FOR THE PROTECTION OF ANY PARTIES IN INTEREST.

A. Jurisdiction of Court. If a corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up, the superior court of the proper county, upon petition of _____ [the corporation or a shareholder or shareholders who hold shares representing five percent or more of the total number of any class of outstanding shares or any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation or three or more creditors] and upon such notice to the corporation and to other persons interested in the corporation as shareholders and creditors as the court may order, may take jurisdiction over such voluntary winding-up proceeding if that appears necessary for the protection of any parties in interest (Corp. Code § 1904).

B. Commencement of Voluntary Dissolution Proceedings. Voluntary proceedings for winding up the corporation commence _____ [upon the adoption of the resolution of shareholders electing to wind up and dissolve or upon the filing with the corporation of a written consent of shareholders to winding up and dissolution] (Corp. Code § 1903(a)).

C. Corporation in Process of Winding Up. A corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up if a valid election to wind up has been made (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1).

D. Validity of Election An election by [a] shareholder[s] with the requisite voting power to voluntarily wind up a corporation is valid if made in accordance with statutory provisions and in good faith (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376-377, 317 P.2d 1).

E. Statutory Provisions. Any corporation may elect voluntarily to wind up and dissolve by the vote of shareholders holding shares representing 50 percent or more of the voting power (Corp. Code § 1900(a)).

[Optional] F. "Vote" As Including Written Consent. As used in the Corporations Code, "vote" includes authorization by written consent (Corp. Code § 194).

G. "Voting Power." "Voting power" means the power to vote for the election of directors at the time the determination of voting power is made. It does not include conditional voting power. If individual members of the board are elected by separate classes of shares, voting power is determined on the basis of the percentage of the total number of authorized directors which the shares in question have the power to elect (Corp. Code § 194.5).

H. Determination of Good Faith. Shareholders electing to dissolve are acting in good faith where they act to protect their investment, alternative methods of doing so are foreclosed, no advantage is secured over other shareholders, and no rights of third partieswill be adversely affected (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 378, 317 P.2d 1).

[Optional] I. Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation. If all the assets, books, and records of a foreign corporation are within California, and no assets, records, or officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction where it was organized, the California courts may undertake to dissolve the corporation and distribute its assets (In re Mercantile Guar. Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 426, 430-433, 48 Cal. Rptr. 589).

[Optional] J. "Parties in Interest." A party in interest is a person with some definite legal right which is threatened, or whose welfare could be directly and adversely affected by the action, proceeding, or transaction under consideration (see Western Pac. Cal. R.R. Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 284 U.S. 47, 51-52, 52 S. Ct. 56, 76 L. Ed. 160).

[Optional] K. Judicial Supervision Necessary If Board Is Deadlocked. Judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding is necessary if the shareholders are divided into factions and the board of directors is deadlocked so that business cannot be conducted with advantage to the stockholders (see In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782).

[Optional] L. Judicial Supervision Necessary If Board Is Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan. Judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding is necessary if the board of directors cannot agree on a plan of dissolution or liquidation (see In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782).

[Optional] M. Judicial Supervision Necessary If Dissension Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution. Judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding is necessary if there is evidence that internal dissension within the corporation would cause substantial delay in completing the dissolution proceedings (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 380-381, 317 P.2d 1).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision where the decision to dissolve was made at the election of shareholders by vote or written consent. Caution is recommended with respect to the use of Paragraph I, Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation. As discussed more fully in § 52.180[3][e], it is not certain whether, under current law [see Corp. Code § 2115(a),(b)], California courts have jurisdiction to supervise the dissolution of a foreign corporation, even if all of its assets, books, and records are located in this state. While there is no requirement that a memorandum accompany the petition, it may be advisable for counsel to submit one.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a certificate of election to wind up and dissolve a corporation, and for a form for a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation in Process of Winding Up

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 was a proceeding for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a close corporation. The trial court granted the petition for judicial supervision, and the Supreme Court affirmed the order. The owner of 50 percent of the voting stock in the corporation executed and filed with the corporation his consent to voluntary dissolution. The Supreme Court stated that, in granting his petition for judicial supervision of the winding up and dissolution, the superior court necessarily determined that the election to dissolve by written consent was valid. The Supreme Court further stated that a valid election to dissolve puts the corporation in the position of being in the process of voluntary winding up.

[b] Validity of Election

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 was a proceeding on a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a close corporation pursuant to former Corp. Code § 4607 [now see Corp. Code § 1904]. The trial court granted the petition for judicial supervision and the Supreme Court affirmed the order. The voting stock in the corporation was divided equally between Rouda, who actively managed the business, and two brothers, the Crockers, who contributed the initial capital and agreed to procure bank credit. The incorporation agreement provided for unanimity for all acts of the boards of directors and voting shareholders. Because of serious disagreements between Rouda and the Crockers, Rouda wished to withdraw from the corporation. However, the Crockers would not buy Rouda's stock or sell him theirs. They would not consent to a sale of the business unless Rouda paid them $100,000 to be released from what they claimed was his contractual obligation to serve the corporation indefinitely. The Crockers, as directors, refused to increase Rouda's salary as his responsibilities grew. He received $1,456 per month for devoting full time to the business, while the Crockers received $500 per month solely for attending four directors' meetings a year. They also refused to increase dividends on the stock. Because of restrictions placed on the tranfer of stock, Rouda could not sell his stock to persons outside the corporation for a price fairly representing his investment. Against this factual background, Rouda, as owner of 50 percent of the voting stock in the corporation, executed and filed with the corporation his consent to voluntary dissolution. He then executed for the corporation, and filed with the Secretary of State, a certificate of election to wind up and dissolve. On appeal from an order granting Rouda's petition for judicial supervision of the process of voluntary dissolution, a primary issue was the validity of his election to wind up and dissolve the corporation. The Supreme Court stated that the validity of an election by shareholders for voluntary dissolution of a corporation was dependent on statutory compliance and good faith of the voting shareholders. Because both elements were present in Rouda's election to dissolve, the election was valid (49 Cal. 2d 370, 376-377) .

[c] "Vote" as Including Written Consent

Corp. Code § 194 was repealed and reenacted in 1993 to end confusion regarding use of written consents to approve actions requiring approval of outstanding shares under Corp. Code § 152. The Legislative declaration provides that it is and has been the intent of Corp. Code § 194 to permit the use of written consents in connection with approvals by the outstanding shares, as well as the other sections of the General Corporation Law where the term "vote" is used. This reenactment is intended to be declarative of the Legislature's original intent in enacting Section 194 [Stats. 1993, Ch. 128, § 1]. Use of written consents remains subject to Corp. Code § 307(b) (written consent by Board as required to be filed with minutes of meeting) and Corp. Code 603(d) (written consents used to elect directors must include consent of all shares entitled to vote for election of director, except election of director to fill vacancy not created by removal) [Corp. Code § 194].

[d] Determination of Good Faith

The factual background of In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 is discussed in § 52.180[3][b]. In that case, the Supreme Court stated that the statutory power of holders of 50 percent or more of voting stock to dissolve a corporation is subject to the equitable limitation of good faith. Implicitly, if bad faith is shown, there is no right to dissolve. Good faith is shown when shareholders act to dissolve a corporation to protect their investment if all other alternatives to dissolution are foreclosed, the effects of dissolution would affect all shareholders equally, and no rights of third parties are affected. Good faith is absent if the majority shareholders attempt to dissolve a corporation to defraud other shareholders, freeze out minority shareholders, or sell the assets of the dissolved corporation at an inadequate price. Under the facts of the Security Finance case, it was found that the shareholder seeking dissolution was acting in good faith, since he had tried all possible ways to get a fair return on his investment, but was thwarted by his fellow stockholders and directors in the close corporation. The court expressly declined to rule whether the burden of pleading and proving good faith was on the shareholders voting to dissolve or whether the burden of proving lack of good faith was on the shareholders opposing dissolution (49 Cal. 2d 370, 380-381) .

The Security Finance case was decided under pre-1977 law. The imposition of a duty of fairness and good faith in dissolving a corporation was due, at least in part, to the fact that under pre-1977 law, there was no requirement of shareholder approval for the cash sale of assets to a majority-controlled buyer in the course of winding up a corporation [see In re Mayellen Apts., Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 298, 307, 285 P.2d 943] . In other cases, pre-1977 law required only majority approval of a sale, even of all or substantially all assets, for a noncash consideration [see former Corp. Code § 4801]. Under present law, approval of at least 90 percent of the voting power of the disposing corporation is required if the buyer of corporate assets is in control of or under common control with disposing corporation, unless the consideration for the sale is nonredeemable common shares or nonredeemable equity securities of the acquiring party or its parent [Corp. Code §§ 1001(d), 2001]. However, it does not appear that the reasons for the imposition of an equitable requirement of good faith on majority shareholders in initiating dissolution are any less compelling under current law. Breach of fiduciary duty owed by majority shareholders to minority shareholders [see Jones v. H.F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 109, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464] can be accomplished during a dissolution by other means than a sale of corporate assets for less than their fair value. For example, in Thrasher v. Thrasher (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 23, 103 Cal. Rptr. 618 , bad faith on the part of a majority shareholder was shown by the timing of enforced collection of demand notes against a close corporation, the practical effect of which was destruction of the corporation.

The inclusion of authority on the good faith of the consenting shareholders in this memorandum was based on the assumption that the requirement of good faith in initiating dissolution still exists under current law and that the burden of proof is on the petitioner.

[e] Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation

In re Mercantile Guar. Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 426, 48 Cal. Rptr. 589 was an action by the State of California to intervene in the voluntary dissolution proceeding of a foreign corporation doing business in California. Mercantile was a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in San Francisco. It had 4000 outstanding shares of preferred stock, all of which was entitled to vote, and 4000 outstanding shares of common stock. A majority of the preferred stock was owned by an inactive Delaware corporation (Western) of which only three percent of the shareholders could be located. Mercantile petitioned the superior court for an order appointing a trustee to vote the shares in Mercantile held by Western so that Mercantile could dissolve. Its plan of liquidation proposed that Mercantile assets, unclaimed by Mercantile or Western shareholders after a reasonable time, be used to pay the arrearages of cumulative dividends to Mercantile preferred shareholders who tendered their shares in a timely manner. Any surplus would be distributed pro rata to Mercantile's common stockholders. The state moved to intervene on the ground that the assets of Mercantile, to which Western was entitled on dissolution, should be turned over to the state in accordance with the California Unclaimed Property Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1500-1582]. The court granted Mercantile's motion for summary judgment on the state's complaint in intervention and the state appealed. Two questions were presented on appeal: (1) Do the California courts have jurisdiction to wind up the affairs of a foreign corporation as to its property within California? (2) Did the state have an interest in the proceeding so as to make its intervention proper? The court of appeal answered both questions in the affirmative. As to the first issue, the court concluded that where all the assets, books, and records of a corporation are within California and no assets, records, and officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction where it was organized, the California courts may undertake to dissolve the corporation and distribute its assets. The question then is not whether jurisdiction exists, but whether assumption of jurisdiction is justified by considerations of public policy, efficiency, expedience, and justice to all interested parties. On the second issue, the court concluded that the state was an interested party and entitled to intervene, in light of the fact that a portion of Mercantile's assets on dissolution would go to Western, and on the (at that point hypothetical) dissolution of Western, and a continued failure to locate Western's stockholders, their share of Western's assets would eventually escheat to the Ste of California if their last known addresses were in California. Therefore, the state had a right to intervene in Mercantile's dissolution proceeding to protect its future escheat rights in unclaimed Western assets (238 Cal. App. 2d 426, 430-433) .

Caution is recommended with respect to the use of the Mercantile Guaranty case as authority for the assumption of jurisdiction by the California courts over the dissolution of a foreign corporation under current law. Corp. Code § 2115(b) lists the chapters and sections of the General Corporation Law which apply to foreign corporations having the requisite connections with this state [see now Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. The provisions of Corp. Code §§ 1800-2011 relating to the dissolution of corporations are not mentioned in Corp. Code § 2115(b). It is, therefore, open to question whether the Mercantile Guaranty case remains good authority for the assumption of jurisdiction by a California court over the dissolution of a foreign corporation, even if all of its assets, books, and records are located within California, and no assets, records, or officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction in which it was organized.

[f] Parties in Interest

The meaning of the term "parties in interest" as used in current law [Corp. Code § 1904] has not been judicially defined. Western Pac. Cal. R.R. Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 284 U.S. 47, 52 S. Ct. 56, 76 L. Ed. 160 was an action for injunction by one railroad company to prevent another railroad company from constructing an extension of its line until permission was obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission, as required by federal law. The trial court granted an injunction. The court of appeal for the Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that the petitioner for the injunction was not a "party in interest" within the meaning of Section 1, paragraph 20, of the Interstate Commerce Act [former 49 U.S.C. § 1, P 20]. The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal, holding that the railroad seeking the injunction qualified as a party in interest. To meet that definition, the court said, it was not necessary that the petitioner possess some clear, legal right for which it might ask protection under the rules commonly accepted by courts of equity. It was sufficient that the bill disclosed that the unauthorized and, therefore, unlawful action of the defendant railroad in constructing a competing rail line might directly and adversely affect the complainant's welfare (284 U.S. 47, 51-52) .

[g] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Deadlocked

In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782 was a proceeding for court supervision over the voluntary dissolution of a close corporation. After assuming jurisdiction over the dissolution proceeding, the court ordered the appointment of a provisional director to break a deadlock on the corporation's board of directors and also issuedan order restraining corporate personnel from selling or otherwise disposing of the corporate assets. The corporation had only two stockholders, each of whom owned 50 percent of the stock. There were only two directors. Both the shareholders and the directors were divided into two factions with the result that the board was deadlocked and business could not be conducted with advantage to the stockholders. Meetings of the board of directors had ceased, and money received from sales of corporate assets was held by the director making the sale to the exclusion of the other director. One of the two shareholders had allegedly made sales of corporate assets without notifying the other shareholder or the board of directors. No plan of dissolution could be agreed upon because of the dissension between the parties. This was considered an appropriate case for the assumption of judicial supervision over the voluntary dissolution of the corporation.

[h] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan

In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782 is discussed in § 52.180[3][g].

[i] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Dissension Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution

The factual background of In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 is discussed in § 52.180[3][b]. In that case, stockholders appealing the order granting a petition for judicial supervision of voluntary dissolution of a close corporation alleged that no showing was made which would justify judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution, even if the petitioner had a right to dissolve the corporation. The Supreme Court stated that the history of disputes between the parties indicated that it was unlikely that they would agree on a course of action during dissolution that would be in their common interest. It pointed in particular to evidence of threats by the dissenting shareholder-directors to delay dissolution for 10 to 15 years unless the petitioner for dissolution paid them $100,000. Thus, the trial court could reasonably conclude that it was in the best interests of all the parties to have court supervision of the winding up of the corporation.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Determination of Good Faith

Jones v. H. F. Ahmanson & Co. (1969) 1 Cal. 3d 93, 81 Cal. Rptr. 592, 460 P.2d 464 was a class action for breach of fiduciary responsibility by a minority stockholder on behalf of herself and others against present and former owners of stock in a savings and loan association and against a holding company to which the majority of stockholders in the association had transferred their shares. It is discussed here because it is a landmark case on the duty of good faith owed by majority to minority shareholders. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint for failure to state a cause of action. The plaintiff appealed. Because the shares in the savings and loan association were not readily marketable, a majority of shareholders in the association transferred their shares to a holding company, receiving for each association share 250 shares in the holding company. The holding company shares were readily marketable and the value of the blocks of holding company shares derived from the exchange of association stock increased dramatically. The majority of association shareholders did not allow the minority shareholders to participate in the exchange. A subsequent offer to buy their shares was made at a price far below the value which the derived blocks of shares had attained. The plaintiff contended that the majority shareholders had thus breached the fiduciary duty owed by majority to minority shareholders, that they had used corporate control for their own advantage by creating the holding company, making a public market for its shares, rendering the association's shares completely unmarketable, and then refusing to purchase the plaintiff's association stock at a fair price, or exchange the stock on the same basis afforded the majority. The defendants contended on appeal that the majority shareholders owed no fiduciary obligation to other shareholders absent reliance on inside information, misuse of corporate assets, or fraud. The Supreme Court disagreed, and reversed the judgment of the trial court, holding that a cause of action had been stated for breach of fiduciary responsibility. The Court ruled that majority shareholders may not use their power to control corporate activities to benefit themselves alone or in a manner detrimental to the minority. In this regard, by way of illustration, the Court stated that the statutory power of the majority to dissolve a corporation is subject to equitable limitations in favor of the minority. This means that the majority has the right to dissolve the corporation to protect it investment only if no alternative means are available and no advantage is secured over other shareholders.

Crain v. Electronic Memories & Magnetics Corp. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 509, 123 Cal. Rptr. 419 was an action by minority shareholders in a computer corporation (DSC) against the majority shareholder (EMM), the board of directors and the purchaser of DSC's assets. The complaint alleged breach of fiduciary duty by EMM, breach of a financing agreement between EMM and DSC, tortious interference with contract, and fraud. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants on the ground that the only possible causes of action were derivative and could not be prosecuted by the plaintiffs in their individual capacities. The court of appeal reversed, holding that individual causes of action werestated. The plaintiff minority shareholders had incorporated DSC to develop, manufacture, and market a data-processing system. Being in need of capital, DSC entered into a financing agreement with EMM whereby EMM would lend DSC money in exchange for promissory notes. The notes could be exchanged at EMM's option for both outstanding and authorized but unissued stock in DSC. EMM also received the right to appoint two of DSC's five directors. DSC was apparently doing well, but EMM had cash flow problems. Accordingly, EMM exchanged its promissory notes for 80 percent of DSC's outstanding shares and then negotiated and consummated a sale of DSC's assets over the objections of the minority shareholders. The only asset of DSC after the transaction was an unsecured promissory note for $981,200 resulting from a loan to EMM of the proceeds of the DSC sale. In the subsequent lawsuit, the minority shareholders alleged that EMM, as majority shareholder, had disposed of DSC's assets so that EMM received the largest possible financial benefit without regard to the consequences to minority shareholders. Because of the sale of DSC's assets, the minority shareholders were deprived of their ownership interests in an ongoing and potentially profitable business without any compensation. Further, they were locked into a shell corporation which possessed no real assets and engaged in no business activity, thus assuring that the minority shares would be forever valueless and unsaleable. The court of appeal characterized this as an "effective dissolution" of DSC and held that in order to do what it did without breach of fiduciary duty, EMM would be required to demonstrate that there was no alternative to dissolution available, and that in dissolving the corporation, the majority stockholder secured no benefit over the other stockholders. This showing would be required to be made at a trial, rather than in a judgment on the pleadings.

It should be noted that although the court in the Crain case characterized the majority's actions as an "effective dissolution," this does not mean that, when such transactions take place, it is appropriate to petition the court for judicial supervision pursuant to Corp. Code § 1904. Courts have jurisdiction to supervise the dissolution of a corporation pursuant to Corp. Code § 1904 only when the corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up after there has been a valid election to do so pursuant to statute [In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1 ; see Corp. Code § 1900(a),(b)].

Thrasher v. Thrasher (1972) 27 Cal. App. 3d 23, 103 Cal. Rptr. 618, 56 A.L.R.3d 204 was a derivative action by a wife against her husband on behalf of a close corporation (Elk) in which both were shareholders. The complaint alleged that the husband had breached his fiduciary duty to the corporation by enforcing collection of demand notes owing to him from the corporation for the purpose of destroying the corporation after his wife filed an action for divorce. The trial court entered judgment for the wife on behalf of the corporation for recovery of the monies paid by the corporation to her husband. The court of appeal affirmed. The husband had advanced more than $240,000 to Elk and had taken demand notes bearing interest at six percent. He then proceeded to collect $145,000 of the debt in less than a year. This left the corporation with a cash deficit of $102,000 and liabilities of $98,900. The husband then filed a notice of election to wind up and dissolve the corporation. In spite of the technical propriety of the loan and repayment transactions, the court found that the husband breached his fiduciary duty to the corporation, and that the timing, manner, and results of his compelled repayment of the loans to the corporation was impelled by a motive to destroy the corporation with the secondary motive of depriving his wife of her interest therein. This course of action was inconsistent with the duty of a corporate director and majority shareholder to demonstrate, in his or her transactions with the corporation, inherent fairness from the viewpoint of the corporation and those interested in it. The court stated that holders of half the voting shares of a corporation may elect to wind up and dissolve the corporation, but that right is not absolute. It cannot be exercised to defraud other shareholders or for other improper purposes. Majority shareholders, as fiduciaries, are restricted in the use of their powers. Any use to which they put the corporation must benefit all shareholders proportionately, and must not conflict with the proper conduct of the corporation's business.

[b] Parties in Interest

Associated Boat Indus. v. Marshall (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 21, 230 P.2d 379 , provides additional guidelines for identification of "parties in interest," as used in Corp. Code § 1904, a term not yet judicially defined. It was an action for declaratory relief by a nonprofit corporation whose membership consisted of builders and distributors of, and dealers in boats, ships, and yachts. The action sought to have certain regulations, adopted by the Yacht and Ship Broker Commissioner and applicable to the membership of the association, declared invalid. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that the corporation was not an "interested person" within the meaning of the statute conferring standing to challenge regulations. The question on appeal was whether an incorporated trade association whose members were subject to certain regulations had standing as an "interested person" to challenge the regulations. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court that it did not. Relying on the long-established interpretation of the phrase "interested person" as one with a direct, and not merely consequential interest in litigation, and on the interpretations of Code Civ. Proc. § 387 as to who may intervene in a civil action, the court concluded that to have standing as an interested person, a person must be in such a position that he will either gain or lose by the direct legal operation and effect of the judgment.

Shareholders and creditors who are required to be given notice of a petition for judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding [Corp. Code § 1904] certainly have the status of parties in interest whose welfare must be considered by the court in determining whether the assumption of jurisdiction over the corporate dissolution is necessary. It remains for further judicial interpretation to define the exact meaning of the phrase "parties in interest" in the context of the current General Corporation Law and to further define the parameters of necessity to prompt the court to assume jurisdiction over a voluntary dissolution proceeding.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.181

§ 52.181 Supporting Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Winding Up of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Corporation Dissolved at Election of Board of Directors [Corp. Code § 1900(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.180.]

JUDICIAL SUPERVISION OF THE DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION IN THE PROCESS OF VOLUNTARY WINDING UP IS AUTHORIZED ON PETITION OF _____ [THE CORPORATION OR A SHAREHOLDER OR SHAREHOLDERS WHO HOLD SHARES REPRESENTING FIVE PERCENT OR MORE OF THE TOTAL NUMBER OF ANY CLASS OF ITS OUTSTANDING SHARES OR ANY SHAREHOLDER OR SHAREHOLDERS OF A CLOSE CORPORATION or THREE OR MORE CREDITORS OF THE CORPORATION] IF IT APPEARS NECESSARY FOR THE PROTECTION OF ANY PARTIES IN INTEREST.

A. Jurisdiction of Court. If a corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up, the superior court of the proper county, upon petition of _____ [the corporation or a shareholder or shareholders who hold shares representing five percent or more of the total number of any class of outstanding shares or any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation or three or more creditors] and upon such notice to the corporation and to other persons interested in the corporation as shareholders and creditors as the court may order, may take jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up proceeding if that appears necessary for the protection of any parties in interest (Corp. Code § 1904).

B. Corporation in Process of Winding Up. A corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up if a valid election to wind up has been made (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1).

C. Commencement of Voluntary Dissolution Proceedings. Voluntary proceedings for winding up the corporation commence upon the adoption of the resolution of the directors of the corporation electing to wind up and dissolve (Corp. Code § 1903(a)).

D. Election to Dissolve by Directors. A corporation which has _____ [been adjudicated a bankrupt or disposed of all its assets and has not conducted any business for a period of five years immediately preceding the adoption of the resolution electing to dissolve the corporation or issued no shares] may elect by approval of its board of directors to wind up and dissolve (Corp. Code § 1900(b)).

E. "Approval by the Board." "Approved by (or approval of) the board" means approved or ratified by the vote of the board of directors or by the vote of a committee authorized to exercise the powers of the board, except as to matters not within the competence of the committee under Corp. Code § 311 (Corp. Code § 151).

[Optional] F. Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation. Where all the assets, books, and records of a foreign corporation are within California, and no assets, records, or officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction where it was organized, the California courts may undertake to dissolve the corporation and distribute its assets (In re Mercantile Guar. Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 426, 430-433, 48 Cal. Rptr. 589).

[Optional] G. "Parties in Interest." A party in interest is a person with some definite legal right which is threatened, or whose welfare could be directly and adversely affected by the action, proceeding, or transaction under consideration (see Western Pac. Cal. R.R. Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 284 U.S. 47, 51-52, 52 S. Ct. 56, 76 L. Ed. 160).

[Optional] H. Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan. Judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding is necessary where the board of directors cannot agree on a plan of dissolution or liquidation (see In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 565, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782).

[Optional] I. Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Dissension Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution. Judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding is necessary where there is evidence that internal dissension within the corporation would cause substantial delay in completing the dissolution proceedings(In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 380-381, 317 P.2d 1).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision when the decision to dissolve was made at the election of the board of directors. Caution is recommended with respect to the use of Paragraph F, Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation. As discussed more fully in § 52.181[3][b], it is not certain whether, under current law [see Corp. Code § 2115(a),(b)]. California courts have jurisdiction to supervise the dissolution of a foreign corporation, even if all of its assets, books, and records are located in California. While there is no requirement that a memorandum accompany the petition, it may be advisable for counsel to submit one.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a certificate of election to wind up and dissolve a corporation, and for a form for a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution

and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Corporation in Process of Winding Up

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 was a proceeding for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a closely held corporation. The trial court granted the petition for judicial supervision, and the Supreme Court affirmed the order. The owner of 50 percent of the voting stock in the corporation executed and filed with the corporation his consent to voluntary dissolution. The Supreme Court stated that, in granting his petition for judicial supervision of the winding up and dissolution, the superior court necessarily determined that the election to dissolve by written consent was valid. The Supreme Court further stated that a valid election to dissolve puts the corporation in the position of being in the process of voluntary winding up.

Although the Security Finance case dealt with the election to dissolve by a shareholder, it seems clear that election to dissolve by directors, where permitted [see Corp. Code § 1900(b)], also has the effect of putting the corporation "in the process of voluntary winding up."

[b] Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Foreign Corporation

In re Mercantile Guar. Co. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 426, 48 Cal. Rptr. 589 was an action by the State of California to intervene in the voluntary dissolution proceeding of a foreign corporation doing business in California. Mercantile was a Delaware corporation with its principal place of business in San Francisco. It had 4000 outstanding shares of preferred stock, all of which was entitled to vote, and 4000 outstanding shares of common stock. A majority of the preferred stock was owned by an inactive Delaware corporation (Western) of which only three percent of the shareholders could be located. Mercantile petitioned the superior court for an order appointing a trustee to vote the shares in Mercantile held by Western so that Mercantile could dissolve. Its plan of liquidation proposed that Mercantile assets unclaimed by Mercantile or Western shareholders after a reasonable time be used to pay the arrearages of cumulative dividends to Mercantile preferred shareholders who tendered their shares in a timely manner. Any surplus would be distributed pro rata to Mercantile's common stockholders. The state moved to intervene on the ground that the assets of Mercantile to which Western was entitled on dissolution, should be turned over to the state in accordance with the California Unclaimed Property Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1500-1582]. The court granted Mercantile's motion for summary judgment on the state's complaint in intervention and the state appealed. Two questions were presented on appeal: (1) Do the California courts have jurisdiction to wind up the affairs of a foreign corporation as to its property within California? (2) Did the state have an interest in the proceeding so as to make its intervention proper? The court of appeal answered both questions in the affirmative. As to the first issue, the court concluded that where all the assets, books, and records of a corporation are within California and no assets, records, and officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction where it was organized, the California courts may undertake to dissolve the corporation and distribute its assets. The question then is not whether jurisdiction exists, but whether assumption of jurisdiction is justified by considerations of public policy, efficiency, expedience, and justice to all interested parties. On the second issue, the court concluded that the state was an interested party and entitled to intervene, in light of the fact that a portion of Mercantile's assetson dissolution would go to Western, and on the (at that point hypothetical) dissolution of Western, and a continued failure to locate Western's stockholders, their share of Western's assets would eventually escheat to the State of California if their last known addresses were in California. Therefore, the state had a right to intervene in Mercantile's dissolution proceeding to protect its future escheat rights in unclaimed Western assets.

Caution is recommended with respect to the use of the Mercantile Guaranty case as authority for the assumption of jurisdiction by the California courts over the dissolution of a foreign corporation under current law. Corp. Code § 2115(b) lists the chapters and sections of the General Corporation Law which apply to foreign corporations having the requisite connections with this state [see Corp. Code § 2115(a)]. The provisions of Corp. Code §§ 1800-2011 relating to the dissolution of corporations are not mentioned in Corp. Code § 2115(b). It is, therefore, open to question whether the Mercantile Guaranty case remains good authority for the assumption of jurisdiction by a California court over the dissolution of a foreign corporation, even if all of its assets, books, and records are located within California, and no assets, records, or officers of the corporation are in the jurisdiction in which it was organized.

[c] Parties in Interest

The meaning of the term "parties in interest" as used in current law [Corp. Code § 1904] has not been judicially defined. Western Pac. Cal. R.R. Co. v. Southern Pac. Co. (1931) 284 U.S. 47, 52 S. Ct. 56, 76 L. Ed. 160 , was an action for injunction by one railroad company to prevent another railroad company from constructing an extension of its line until permission was obtained from the Interstate Commerce Commission, as required by federal law. The trial court granted an injunction. The court of appeal for the Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that the petitioner for the injunction was not a "party in interest" within the meaning of the Transportation Act. The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal, holding that the railroad seeking the injunction qualified as a party in interest. To meet that definition, the court said, it was not necessary that the petitioner possess some clear, legal right for which it might ask protection under the rules commonly accepted by courts of equity. It was sufficient that the bill disclosed that the unauthorized and, therefore, unlawful action of the defendant railroad in constructing a competing rail line might directly and adversely affect the complainant's welfare.

[d] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Board Unable to Agree on Dissolution Plan

In re O'Brien Mach., Inc. (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 563, 36 Cal. Rptr. 782 was a proceeding for court supervision over the voluntary dissolution of a close corporation. After assuming jurisdiction over the dissolution proceeding, the court ordered the appointment of a provisional director to break a deadlock on the corporation's board of directors and also issued an order restraining corporate personnel from selling or otherwise disposing of the corporate assets. The corporation had only two stockholders, each of whom owned 50 percent of the stock. There were only two directors. Both the shareholders and the directors were divided into two factions with the result that the board was deadlocked and business could not be conducted with advantage to the stockholders. Meetings of the board of directors had ceased, and money received from sales of corporate assets was held by the director making the sale to the exclusion of the other director. One of the two stockholders had allegedly made sales of corporate assets without notifying the other stockholder or the board of directors. No plan of dissolution could be agreed upon because of the dissension between the parties. This was considered an appropriate case for the assumption of judicial supervision over the voluntary dissolution of the corporation.

[e] Judicial Supervision Necessary Where Discussion Causes Substantial Delay in Dissolution

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 is discussed in §§ 52.180[3][a] and 52.181[3][a]. In that case, stockholders appealing the order of the trial court granting a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a corporation alleged that no showing was made which justified judicial supervision. The Supreme Court affirmed the order of the trial court. It stated that the history of disputes between the parties indicated that it was unlikely that they would agree on a course of action during dissolution that would be in their common interest. The court pointed in particular to evidence of threats by dissenting shareholder-directors to delay dissolution for 10 to 15 years unless the petitioner for dissolution paid them $100,000. Thus, the trial court could reasonably conclude that it was in the best interests of all the parties to have court supervision of the winding up of the corporation.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Parties in Interest

Associated Boat Indus. v. Marshall (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 21, 230 P.2d 379 , provides additional guidelines for identification of "parties in interest," as used in Corp. Code § 1904, a term not yet judicially defined. It was an action for declaratory relief by a nonprofit corporation whose membership consisted of builders and distributors of, and dealers in boats, ships, and yachts. The action sought to have certain regulations, adopted by the Yacht and Ship Broker Commissioner and applicable to the membership of the association, declared invalid. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that the corporation was not an "interested person" within the meaning of the statute conferring standing to challenge regulations. The question on appeal was whether an incorporated trade association whose members were subject to certain regulations had standing as an "interested person" to challenge the regulations. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court that it did not. Relying on the long-established interpretation of the phrase "interested person" as one with a direct, and not merely consequential interest in litigation, and on the interpretations of Code Civ. Proc. § 387 as to who may intervene in a civil action, the court concluded that to have standing as an interested person, a person must be in such a position that he will either gain or lose by the direct legal operation and effect of the judgment.

Shareholders and creditors who are required to be given notice of a petition for judicial supervision of a voluntary dissolution proceeding [Corp. Code § 1904] certainly have the status of parties in interest whose welfare must be considered by the court in determining whether the assumption of jurisdiction over the corporate dissolution is necessary. It remains for further judicial interpretation to define the exact meaning of the phrase "parties in interest" in the context of the current General Corporation Law and to further define the parameters of necessity to prompt the court to assume jurisdiction over a voluntary dissolution proceeding.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.182

§ 52.182 Supporting Motion to Dismiss Complaint Seeking Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1800]--No Jurisdiction of Subject Matter If Filed by Unauthorized Person

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff, vs.	)	DISMISS COMPLAINT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
a Corporation,	)	Time: _____
Defendant	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS NOT A PERSON AUTHORIZED BY CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 1800 TO FILE AN ACTION FOR INVOLUNTARY WINDING UP AND DISSOLUTION OF THE CORPORATION.

A. Special Appearance. A defendant in an action may make a special appearance by way of a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction (Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 484-485, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1).

B. Plaintiffs Authorized by Statute. The only persons authorized by statute to file an action for involuntary winding up and dissolution of a corporation that is subject to the provisions of the General Corporation Law are: (1) one-half or more of the directors in office; (2) a shareholder or shareholders holding shares representing not less than one-third of the total number of outstanding shares, or of the outstanding common shares, or of the equity of the corporation, exclusive in each case of shares owned by persons who have participated in the wrongful acts specified in Corporations Code Section 1800(b)(4); (3) any shareholder or shareholders of a close corporation; (4) any shareholder seeking to dissolve the corporation because the period for which it was formed has terminated without being extended; and (5) any other person expressly authorized to do so in the articles (Corp. Code § 1800(a)).

[Optional] C. Wrongful Acts Excluding Shares of Owner From Computation. In determining whether a shareholder holds shares representing one-third of the total outstanding shares, or of the outstanding common shares, or of the equity of a corporation so as to give him or her standing to bring an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation, the shares owned by persons who have participated in the wrongful acts specified in Corporations Code Section 1800(b)(4) are excluded from the total number of outstanding shares before the computation of percentage of ownership is made. The wrongful acts in question are persistent and pervasive fraud, mismanagement, or abuse of authority; persistent unfairness toward any shareholders; or waste or misapplication of corporation property (Corp. Code §§ 1800(a)(2), 1800(b)(4).

D. Strict Construction of Statute Authorizing Action. Statutes permitting persons other than the state to institute an action for involuntary dissolution are in derogation of the common law and must be strictly construed. Only persons enumerated in the statute can bring an action for involuntary dissolution (Cardoza v. Millington (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 26, 34, 297 P.2d 778).

E. Court Without Jurisdiction. The courts are without jurisdiction to wind up the affairs of a corporation on the suit of an unauthorized person (Wiseman v. Sierra Highland Mining Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 690, 697, 111 P.2d 646).

[Optional] F. Constructive Transfer or Surrender of Shares. An instruction [to the corporation's attorney] that one wishes to be removed from the corporate records as a shareholder immediately amounts to a constructive surrender or abandonment of one's shares [and thus deprives one of standing to maintain an action for involuntary dissolution]. Neither endorsement of the stock certificate nor an actual delivery of the stock is necessary to accomplish the reacquisition of the shares by the corporation (Simon v. Steelman (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1006-1007, 274 Cal. Rptr. 218).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion to dismiss a complaint seeking involuntary dissolution of a corporation if the court lacks subject matter jurisdiction because the action was brought by a person other than those set forth in the statute [Corp. Code § 1800(a)] as authorized to do so. In legal effect, a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is equivalent to a demurrer to the complaint [Egan v. McCray (1934) 220 Cal. 546, 547, 31 P.2d 1041] . The advantage of the motion to dismiss is that it may be used when lack of subject matter jurisdiction is not apparent on the face of the complaint.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used in support of a demurrer to the complaint on the ground of no jurisdiction of the subject matter of the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(a)], if lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter appears on the face of the complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)], or a demurrer on the ground of failure to state a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a complaint for involuntary dissolution of a corporation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up, § 170.53.

For a notice of motion to dismiss proceedings for lack of jurisdiction of the subject matter, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction, § 324.100.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Appearance

Goodwine v. Superior Court (1965) 63 Cal. 2d 481, 47 Cal. Rptr. 201, 407 P.2d 1 was a proceeding for a writ of mandate to compel the superior court to vacate an order dismissing a separate maintenance action and to compel the court to take jurisdiction of the action. The separate maintenance action was commenced in a California court by Mrs. Goodwineagainst Mr. Goodwine who was domiciled in Mexico. Quasi-in-rem jurisdiction was obtained over Mr. Goodwine by the levy of a writ of attachment on property owned by him in California, by service by publication, and by personal service on Mr. Goodwine in Mexico. Mr. Goodwine made an appearance and moved to quash the writ of attachment, the service of summons and complaint, and to dismiss the action on the ground that the California court lacked jurisdiction. His theory was that, as in the case of divorce, subject matter jurisdiction of a separate maintenance action required domicile of at least one party in the forum state. Since, he alleged, neither he nor Mrs. Goodwine was a California domiciliary, the California court lacked subject matter jurisdiction of the action. The trial court granted Goodwine's motion, and dismissed the action. Mrs. Goodwine then filed a petition for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order dismissing the action. She claimed that by moving to dismiss the action, her husband had made a personal appearance, giving the trial court personal jurisdiction over him. The Supreme Court stated that a separate maintenance action, being essentially an action for a money judgment, can be brought where neither party is domiciled, if personal jurisdiction or quasi-in-rem jurisdiction over the defendant is obtained. However, a defendant should be allowed to make a special appearance to challenge subject matter jurisdiction, even if his or her challenge is found to be invalid, without making a general appearance, and, thus, giving the court personal jurisdiction over him or her. The Supreme Cot granted the writ of mandate and remanded to the trial court for consideration of the application of forum non conveniens, with the alternative of proceeding on the basis of quasi-in-rem jurisdiction (63 Cal. 2d 481, 484-485) .

[b] Strict Construction of Statute Authorizing Action

Cardoza v. Millington (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 26, 297 P.2d 778 was an action to reform a preincorporation agreement and to dissolve a corporation. The corporation was a close corporation, and its stock was owned by Cardoza and Millington. Cardoza, Millington, and Payne were directors. The business of the corporation was a sport shop, which had previously been run by Cardoza and Millington as a partnership. During the period of the partnership, both partners had an equal say in running the business. When the partners decided to incorporate, wording of a "preincorporation agreement," which governed the issuance of stock, gave Millington slightly more stock than Cardoza. Millington and Payne, over Cardoza's objections, voted to install Millington as general manager of the sport shop and Cardoza was, thereafter, treated as an employee rather than a co-owner. He brought an action to reform the wording of the preincorporation agreement on the alternative grounds of fraud and mistake. He also sought to dissolve the corporation. The trial court gave judgment for Cardoza on both the reformation count and the dissolution count. The court of appeal affirmed as to reformation of the agreement, but reversed the judgment as to dissolution of the corporation. The court stated that prior to the enactment of former Civ. Code § 404 [the predecessor to former Corp. Code § 4650 and current Corp. Code § 1800(a)], only the state and not individual stockholders could maintain an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation. When the right to institute involuntary dissolution proceedings was created in shareholders by former Civ. Code § 404, it was in derogation of the common law, and that section and its successors must be strictly construed. Under the statute in effect at that time, former Corp. Code § 4650, Cardoza was eligible to bring an action for involuntary dissolution only if he had been a record holder of his shares for at least six months. Since he had only owned his shares for five months when the action was commenced, he was ineligible to seek involuntary dissolution, and that count of his complaint was required to be dismissed (34).

It should be noted that under current law [Corp. Code § 1800(a)], the six-month ownership requirement has been abrogated. Further, any shareholder of a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158] can bring an action for involuntary dissolution without regard to percentage of shares owned or duration of ownership.

[c] Court Without Jurisdiction

Wiseman v. Sierra Highland Mining Co. (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 690, 111 P.2d 646 was an action brought by persons claiming to be minority stockholders in certain corporations, to quiet title to mining claims, declare a trust, obtain an accounting, injunctive relief and the appointment of a receiver, and to wind up corporate affairs. The plaintiffs had advanced money for small amounts of stock in a California corporation, the principal assets of which were certain mining claims, not fully paid for. To facilitate the financing and operation of the mining claims, the corporation leased the claims to one of its directors who in turn assigned the lease to a Nevada corporation in exchange for shares of its stock. The Nevada corporation also acquired shares of the California corporation, paying for them with shares of its stock. None of the plaintiffs owned stock in the Nevada corporation. The plaintiffs were apparently disgruntled because the California corporation failed to show a profit and had its corporate franchise suspended for tax delinquency. After examining the transactions between the California and Nevada corporations and the actions of the directors, the court concluded that no fraud had been perpetrated, that the directors of both corporations had been free to act independently, and had not been dominated by the director to whom the mining claims had been leased, and that all the dealings in question had been for the benefit of the corporations and the mining enterprise. In denying the plaintiffs the relief they sought, the court pointed out that the general rule is that courts have no jurisdiction to wind up the affairs of a corporation on the suit of a private person. The plaintiffs, who owned no stock in the Nevada corporation, andapparently did not come within the statutory categories of those entitled to dissolve the California corporation, were impliedly in the posture of private persons vis-a-vis both corporations (17 Cal. 2d 690, 697) .

[d] Constructive Transfer or Surrender of Shares

In Simon v. Steelman (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 274 Cal. Rptr. 218 , plaintiff and defendant had formed a corporation in 1979, each owning 50 percent of the shares. In April, 1986, plaintiff was named in a paternity suit. The corporation's attorney testified to a telephone conversation with plaintiff in which plaintiff indicated he did not want to appear on the records of the corporation as a shareholder and that he wanted to transfer his shares to defendant, and asked the attorney to backdate the documents a couple of months. The attorney prepared a new stock certificate (certificate No. 3) naming defendant as sole shareholder. The attorney drew a line across plaintiff's original stock certificate and wrote "canceled" on it. The transfer papers were forwarded to plaintiff for both plaintiff's and defendant's signatures. Plaintiff received certificate No. 3 but neither signed it nor showed it to defendant. In June, 1986, the attorney wrote to plaintiff inquiring about the certificate, but received no reply. In December, 1986, plaintiff testified in the child support phase of the paternity suit that he did not own any interest in the corporation, was no longer an owner or partner, but was vice president. Defendant testified that plaintiff said it would be better for defendant to have the stock rather than the plaintiff in the paternity action. In June, 1987, defendant terminated plaintiff's employment with the corporation and had a set of corporate minutes prepared declaring himself the sole shareholder. Plaintiff brought an action for involuntary dissolution. The trial court concluded that plaintiff had canceled his shares and did not have standing under Corp. Code § 1800(a) to maintain the action, and entered judgment accordingly. Plaintiff appealed.

In a three-to-two decision, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment on the ground that plaintiff did not have standing to maintain an action for involuntary dissolution because plaintiff had constructively transferred his shares, creating, in the dissent's view, the doctrine of transfer by perjury (224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1005-1006, 1008) . Plaintiff argued that the fact that he did not sign the corporate documents indicated he was only considering divesting himself of his interest and did not actually do so. The court said substantial evidence supported the trial court's conclusion that plaintiff no longer wished to be a shareholder and intended for that change to be effective immediately (224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1005-1006) .

Plaintiff also argued that under former Com. Code § 8309 (which provided that endorsement of a certificated security is not effective until the certificate is delivered; now see Corp. Code § 8304), the transfer could not be complete until the certificate had been endorsed and delivered to defendant. The court disagreed, agreeing with the trial court that plaintiff had abandoned his interest in the stock at the time of the phone conversation with the corporation's attorney. An actual delivery of the stock to defendant was not necessary because plaintiff did not transfer the stock to defendant but surrendered it to the corporation. Corp. Code § 510(a) provides that when a corporation purchases, redeems, acquires by way of conversion to another class or series, or otherwise acquires its own shares, those shares are restored to the status of authorized by unissued shares, unless the articles prohibit reissuance thereof (224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1006) . The court said the phrase "otherwise acquires its own shares" recognizes a corporation's reacquisition of its outstanding shares through surrender by a stockholder. Plaintiff's instruction to the corporation's attorney constructively surrendered the stock (224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1006-1007) .

The court also said that Civ. Code § 3529 (maxim that that which ought to have been done is to be regarded as done in favor of him or her to whom, and against him or her from whom, performance is due) provided another reason to affirm the trial court's judgment. Plaintiff surrendered his stock, as confirmed by his testimony in the paternity action. Equity thus provides that that which should have been done to accomplish that end is deemed to have been done. Plaintiff surrendered his stock so that it would not be considered by the court in determining his child support obligation and cannot be heard to complain (224 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1007) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiffs Authorized by Statute

In Kline Hawkes California v. Superior Court (2004) 117 Cal. App. 4th 183, 11 Cal. Rptr. 3d 581 , preferred shareholders filed an action against a corporation for involuntary dissolution and liquidation. They claimed that their status as owners of preferred stock gave them standing under Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)(iii) to file the petition. The trial court found that they did not have standing and sustained the corporation's demurrer without leave to amend.

The court of appeal issued an alternative writ to address the question of whether plaintiffs alleged facts sufficient to satisfy the statutory standing requirement. It concluded that, although they failed to correctly describe the equity of the corporation for purposes of Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)(iii), they might be able to do so, and remanded with directions to sustain the demurrer with leave to amend. The court reviewed the history of Corp. Code § 1800 and its predecessor, former Corp. Code § 4650. Reviewing the nature of the corporation's equity and of preferred stock with a liquidation preference, it noted that although the trial court had correctly concluded that equity equals net assets, plaintiffs' percentage ownership of thecorporation's net assets could not be shown by the amount that they had paid for their shares because one paying more for the "same share" was not entitled to a greater ownership interest than one who had paid less for the same share. The court of appeal held that the trial court's ruling did not take the facts of plaintiffs' liquidation preference into account. Those shares had a liquidation price of $100 per share and were preferred over common shares in the distribution of the corporation's assets. It concluded that a proper interpretation of Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)(iii) gave plaintiffs the right to file a petition for dissolution if their preferred shares represented 331/3 percent of the corporation's equity (117 Cal. App. 4th 183, 196) .

Buss v. J. O. Martin Co. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 50 Cal. Rptr. 206 was a proceeding for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation. The two original plaintiffs owned more than one-third of the outstanding shares, but the majority of those shares were preferred shares without voting rights. A judgment of dismissal was entered after a demurrer to the first amended complaint was sustained without leave to amend. The plaintiffs appealed the judgment of dismissal. Pending appeal, the corporation redeemed all of its outstanding preferred shares, including those owned by one of the plaintiffs, which had been counted to make up the requisite one-third percent stock ownership for prosecuting the involuntary dissolution action. The defendants moved to dismiss the appeal. Two questions were presented: (1) In order to file a complaint for involuntary dissolution under former Corp. Code § 4650 [now see Corp. Code § 1800(a)] on the basis of ownership of one-third of the outstanding shares, was it necessary that the plaintiffs' shares be voting shares? (2) Was the appeal moot following the retirement of the preferred shares which had gone toward making up the jurisdictional number of shares? The court of appeal answered both questions in the negative. It stated that a fair and reasonable construction of former Corp. Code § 4650 gave the holder or holders of one-third of the outstanding stock, with or without voting rights, the right to bring an action for involuntary dissolution (241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 130) . On the second question, the court pointed out that the plaintiffs had sufficient stock to file the complaint and invoke the jurisdiction of the superior court to order a dissolution. Jurisdiction having attached, it was not defeated by subsequent events that might have prevented jurisdiction had they occurred prior to the commencement of the action. Although former Corp. Code § 4650 required that the plaintiffs be holders of one-third of the outstanding shares to file the complaint, there was no statutory requirement that they remain holders of one-third of the shares throughout the maintenance of the suit. Finding the sustaining of the general demurrer to the complaint to have been error, the court refused to dismiss the appeal, except as to the plaintiff who had withdrawn from the action, and remanded to the trial court with directions to overrule the general demurrer (241 Cal. App. 2d 123, 136-137) .

It should be noted that under current law, if a corporation qualifies as a close corporation [see Corp. Code § 158], any shareholder may bring an action for involuntary dissolution without regard to the number of shares he or she owns [Corp. Code § 1800(a)(2)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.183

§ 52.183 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--Involuntary Dissolution Not Reasonably Necessary to Protect Shareholder Rights or Interests [Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum in support of a motion for summary judgment, or in a trial or appellate brief if appropriate.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR _____ [DEFENDANT(S) or PLAINTIFF(S)] IS PROPER BECAUSE _____ [PLAINTIFF(S) or DEFENDANT(S)] FAILED TO RAISE A TRIABLE ISSUE OF MATERIAL FACT REGARDING THEIR CLAIM THAT INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION IS APPROPRIATE UNDER CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 1800(b)(5) AS REASONABLY NECESSARY FOR THE PROTECTION OF THEIR RIGHTS OR INTERESTS.

A. Summary Judgment. Any party may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that _____ [the action has no merit or there is no defense to the action] (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Liquidation Must be Reasonably Necessary to Protect Shareholder Rights or Interests. Involuntary dissolution under Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5) is appropriate only when liquidation is reasonably necessary for the protection of the rights or interests of the complaining shareholder(s) (Stuparich v. Harbor Furniture Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action brought for involuntary dissolution of a corporation with 35 or fewer shareholders pursuant to Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5). The ground for the motion is that involuntary dissolution isinappropriate because the opposing party has not raised a triable issue of material fact as to whether involuntary dissolution is reasonably necessary for the protection of the rights or interests of the complaining shareholders. This memorandum may be modified as necessary for use in any other context in which this issue may arise.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 438].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liquidation Must be Reasonably Necessary to Protect Shareholder Rights or Interests.

In Stuparich v. Harbor Furniture Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313 , two sisters who were minority shareholders of a closely held family corporation filed a verified complaint against the corporation and other family member shareholders, seeking involuntary dissolution pursuant to Corp. Code § 1800(b)(5). The corporation moved for summary judgment, arguing that dissolution is a drastic remedy which was inappropriate because the only factual basis for the action was plaintiffs' desire to cease involvement with the corporation. Plaintiffs opposed the motion, arguing that dissolution was necessary because the relationship between the shareholder siblings had deteriorated to the point of violence and made it impossible for them to work together as a family or corporate entity. Further, plaintiffs claimed that their brother (who owned the majority of voting shares) and his wife and son drew salaries from the money-losing furniture manufacturing operations of the corporation, and for that reason had a vested interest in continuing its operation despite plaintiffs' wishes. The trial court granted the motion for summary judgment, finding that plaintiffs' rights were not in need of protection because plaintiffs had consistently received the dividends owned them as shareholders.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court did not err in finding that the drastic remedy of liquidation was not reasonably necessary for the protection of plaintiff shareholders. It first stated that the distribution of voting shares in the corporation was consistent with California law and did not in itself present a "reasonable" necessity for dissolution. It also stated that plaintiffs' other arguments regarding their treatment as "second class" shareholders were related. As holders of a minority of the voting shares, they were not entitled to substitute their business judgment for their brother's. They did continue to receive benefits from the corporation in the form of dividends until they instituted the litigation. Although the family animosity was unfortunate, the situation was not unique to this close corporation, and due to the extreme family hostility plaintiffs had removed themselves from participation in board meetings. There is nothing in the statutory language, and plaintiffs cited no authority, that requires either the board of directors or the majority shareholders to buy the shares of the minority to avoid dissolution (Stuparich v. Harbor Furniture Manufacturing, Inc. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 1268, 1277-1279, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 313).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.184

§ 52.184 Supporting Motion by Shareholder or Creditor to Intervene [Code Civ. Proc. § 387; Corp. Code § 1800(c)]--In Action for Involuntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1800(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff,	)	INTERVENE IN ACTION FOR INVOLUNTARY
vs.	)	DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATION
_____ [name], a Corporation,	)	Date: _____
Defendant, _____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Intervener.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A _____ [SHAREHOLDER or CREDITOR] HAS AN UNQUALIFIED RIGHT TO INTERVENE IN AN ACTION FOR INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION AT ANY TIME BEFORE THE HEARING ON WINDING UP AND DISSOLUTION.

A. Statutory Authority At any time prior to the trial of an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation any _____ [shareholder or creditor] may intervene therein (Corp. Code § 1800(c)).

B. Right to Intervene Unqualified. The provision of the Corporations Code permitting _____ [shareholders or creditors] to intervene in an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation gives any _____ [shareholder or creditor] the unqualified right to intervene (Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 503, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896).

C. Intervention Takes Place When Order Is Made. An intervention takes place when the order is made permitting the intervenor to become a party (Ah Goon v. Superior Court (1882) 61 Cal. 555, 556) .

D. Intervention Before Hearing Is Timely. Intervention by a _____ [shareholder or creditor] in an involuntary dissolution proceeding before the hearing is held is timely (Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5-6, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764).

[Optional] E. Right of Shareholder Not of Record to Intervene. A shareholder whose shares are not of record because the corporate directors refuse to register them may intervene in an action to dissolve the corporation (Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4-5, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764).

[Optional] F. Intervention After Default But Before Hearing Is Timely. A _____ [shareholder or creditor] may intervene in a proceeding for involuntary dissolution of a corporation even after the corporation has defaulted to the complaint. At that point, it is still necessary that a hearing be held to determine whether or not the corporation should be wound up and dissolved. Intervention by a _____ [shareholder or creditor] before that hearing is timely (Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5-6, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764).

[Optional] G. Security for Costs Not Required. A _____ [shareholder or creditor] cannot be required to post security for costs as a condition for intervening in proceedings for involuntary dissolution of a corporation (Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 502-504, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896).

[Optional] H. Ex Parte Motion Permissible. A motion for leave to intervene in a pending action may be made ex parte (Marc Bellaire, Inc. v. Fleischman (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595, 8 Cal. Rptr. 650).

[Optional] I. Right to Bring Separate Does Not Preclude Intervention. The fact that the intervenor may protect his/her interest by bringing a separate action does not defeat his/her right to intervene (Elms v. Elms (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 681, 685, 52 P.2d 223).

[Optional] J. Timely Intervention Does Not Depend on Service of Complaint. An intervention takes place when the order is made permitting the intervenor to become a party, not when the complaint in intervention is served (Ah Goon v. Superior Court (1882 61 Cal. 555, 556) .
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion by a shareholder or creditor for leave to intervene in an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation. Caution is recommended with respect to the use of Paragraph E, Right of Shareholder Not of Record to Intervene. As discussed more fully in § 52.184[3][d], the current definition of "shareholder" [Corp. Code § 185] may preclude intervention pursuant to Corp. Code § 1800(c) by one who is not a holder of record of shares.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel must have on file a complaint in intervention or file the complaint in intervention with the notice of motion for leave to intervene.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a notice of motion for order granting leave to intervene in pending action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 395, Parties (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Intervene Unqualified

Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896 was a proceeding for a writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from entering judgment in involuntary dissolution proceedings and to prevent the court from enforcing its order requiring the petitioners to post security. The involuntary dissolution proceedings were commenced by four of five directors of Benedict Heights, Inc., a California corporation. The corporation defaulted. Over a year after entry of the default, alleged shareholders in the corporation learned of the proceedings and sought and were granted leave to intervene. In their complaint in intervention, plaintiffs sought the following relief; an order compelling the defendants to register their shares on the corporation's books and issue new certificates evidencing the shares; an order setting aside the default of Benedict Heights, Inc., and permitting the plaintiffs to answer in its behalf; an injunction restraining further expenditure of corporate assets pending trial; and an order requiring the posting of bond pendente lite in the amount of the corporation's assets. On motion by the defendants, the trial court ordered the plaintiffs in intervention to post $3,500 as security for costs. They refused to do so and commenced the proceeding for a writ of prohibition. The Supreme Court granted the writ. The Court stated that the statutory requirement of posting costs applied only to shareholders' derivative suits. Former Corp. Code § 4653 [see now Corp. Code § 1800(c)] gave shareholders and creditors an unqualified right to intervene in dissolution proceedings unburdened by any statutory requirement of posting security for costs. The special protection of the security for costs statute in a shareholders' derivative suit is not needed in a dissolution proceeding. In such a proceeding, the court has broad supervisory powers and can make such protective orders as justice and equity require. However, in requiring the plaintiffs to pot security, the trial court exceeded its jurisdiction (53 Cal. 2d 498, 502-504) .

[b] Intervention Takes Place When Order Is Made

Ah Goon v. Superior Court (1882) 61 Cal. 555 was a proceeding for a writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from proceeding further with an intervention in a civil action. The motion to intervene was made and the order permitting intervention was entered before the trial began. However, before the complaint in intervention could be served, the plaintiff and defendant proceeded to trial. It was contended that failure to serve the complaint in intervention before trial voided the intervention. The Supreme Court disagreed, and refused to grant the writ. It stated that an intervention takes place when the order is made permitting the intervenor to become a party. This can take place at any time before trial. A trial before service of the complaint in intervention may be irregular, but it does not have a jurisdictional effect, and does not void the intervention (61 Cal. 555, 556) .

[c] Intervention Before Hearing Is Timely

Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764 was a proceeding for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation. Certain shareholders were granted leave to intervene and judgment was entered in their favor. The directors of the corporation who had initiated the involuntary dissolution proceedings appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. Prior to the intervention, the corporation had defaulted to the complaint seeking involuntary dissolution. On appeal, the appellants contended that corporate default to a complaint seeking involuntary dissolution was equivalent to a trial, and that because the intervenors had moved to intervene after the default, the order permitting intervention was a nullity and the complaint in intervention was void. The court of appeal rejected this contention. It stated that in spite of corporate default, a hearing is still necessary to determinewhether the corporation should be wound up and dissolved. The issues inherent in a proceeding for involuntary dissolution cannot be adjudicated merely on the entry of the default of the corporation. Any shareholder intervention before that mandatory hearing is timely in spite of the previous corporate default. At most, the corporate default in the Rosner case could be construed as admitting that a ground for the winding up and dissolution of the corporation existed (219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5-6) .

[d] Right of Shareholder Not of Record to Intervene

Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764 was a proceeding for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation. Certain persons, allegedly the owners of shares, although not shareholders of record, sought and were granted leave to intervene. In their complaint in intervention they alleged that the directors of the corporation, who had initiated the involuntary dissolution proceeding, had refused to recognize them as shareholders and thus prevented them from participating in corporate affairs. The intervenors sought determination of the ownership of the disputed shares and the record transfer of the shares to them. The trial court entered a judgment determining that the intervenors were the owners of the shares, and ordering the transfer of the shares and the reissuance of stock certificates in accordance with its determination of ownership. The court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, the directors of the corporation contended that the intervenors were not entitled to intervene because they were not shareholders of record. The court of appeal disagreed, holding that ownership of shares, whether or not of record, gives a person sufficient interest in the subject matter to intervene in an action for involuntary dissolution of a corporation. It stated that the intervenors' claims were appropriately raised in the involuntary dissolution proceedings to ensure recognition of their rights during the pending distribution of the corporate assets (219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4-5) .

Caution is recommended with respect to the use of the Rosner case as authority for the right of a shareholder not of record to intervene in a proceeding for involuntary dissolution of a corporation. The Rosner case was decided under pre-1977 law. Current law continues to permit intervention in involuntary dissolution proceedings by "any shareholder or creditor" [Corp. Code § 1800(c); see former Corp. Code § 4653]. However, under current law, the definition of "shareholder" is limited to a holder of record of shares [Corp. Code § 185]. It is not clear, therefore, that a nonrecord shareholder in the position of the Rosner intervenors would be permitted under current law to intervene in a proceeding for involuntary dissolution. It might be possible for such a person to invoke the general intervention provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 387, which provides that at any time before trial, any person who has an interest in the matter in litigation, or in the success of either of the parties, or an interest against both, may intervene in an action or proceeding. For points and authorities in support of an application to intervene pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 387, see Ch. 124, Intervention . However, counsel should bear in mind that Code Civ. Proc. § 387 may not apply to a dissolution proceeding because of the general rule of statutory construction that when general and particular statutory provisions are inconsistent, the particular provision prevails over the general [Code Civ. Proc. § 1859].

[e] Intervention After Default But Before Hearing Is Timely

Rosner v. Benedict Heights, Inc. (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 1, 32 Cal. Rptr. 764 is discussed in § 52.184[3][c].

[f] Security for Costs Not Required

Hagan v. Superior Court (1960) 53 Cal. 2d 498, 2 Cal. Rptr. 288, 348 P.2d 896 is discussed in § 52.184[3][a].

[g] Ex Parte Motion Permissible

Marc Bellaire, Inc. v. Fleischman (1960) 185 Cal. App. 2d 591, 8 Cal. Rptr. 650 was an action for declaratory relief by Marc Bellaire, Inc., seeking judicial construction of a written contract of employment between the corporation and one Fleischman, and of an alleged oral modification of the contract. Previous to the institution of the declaratory relief action, the Division of Labor Law Enforcement, as assignee of certain employees of Fleischman in another venture, had obtained a judgment against Fleischman. In order to satisfy the judgment in favor of the Division, Fleischman assigned to it all unpaid wages due him from Marc Bellaire, Inc., under the contract. The corporation had notice that Fleischman had assigned his right to wages to the Division. Then the corporation commenced the declaratory relief action against Fleischman. It alleged that the written contract of employment between it and Fleischman had been orally modified with the effect that no wages were owing to Fleischman for the period of his work for the corporation. The Division made an ex parte request to intervene in the action, which was granted. It then filed an answer in intervention and a cross complaint against the corporation. Fleischman then defaulted. At trial, the court found that there had been no oral modification of the employment contract and that Fleischman had performed all his duties under the contract. It ordered that the intervenor (the Division, as assignee of Fleischman's wage claims) recover from the corporation the amount of unpaid wages plus interest. The corporation appealed on several grounds. The court of appeal upheld the judgment, holding that the application for leave to intervene was properly made ex parte, and that under the circumstances, Fleischman's default did not preclude theDivision from obtaining the relief it sought as intervenor on the side of defendant Fleischman (185 Cal. App. 2d 591, 595) .

[h] Right to Bring Separate Action Does Not Preclude Intervention

Elms v. Elms (1935) 4 Cal. 2d 681, 52 P.2d 223, 102 ALR 811 was a divorce action in which the adult children of the parties filed a complaint in intervention. They alleged that they had an interest in certain real property standing in the names of their parents because of contributions toward the purchase price and the satisfaction of liens on the property. The wife alleged the property to be community property. A demurrer to the complaint in intervention was sustained and the children (intervenors) appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. It held that if neither party to a divorce action brings in a third party claimant to property of the spouses, that claimant should be permitted to intervene. Furthermore, the Court stated that the fact the intervenors had the option of bringing a separate action to protect their interests did not defeat their right to intervene in the divorce action (4 Cal. 2d 681, 685) .

[i] Timely Intervention Does Not Depend on Service of Complaint

Ah Goon v. Superior Court (1882) 61 Cal. 555 is discussed in § 52.184[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.185

§ 52.185 Supporting Petition for Determination of Identity of Directors or for Appointment of Directors to Wind up Affairs of Corporation [Corp. Code § 2003]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
In the Matter of	)	FOR _____ [DETERMINATION
_____,	)	OF IDENTITY OF DIRECTORS or APPOINT-
a Corporation,	)	MENT OF DIRECTORS TO WIND UP AFFAIRS]
In the Process of Winding	)	OF CORPORATION
Up and Dissolution	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

WHEN A CORPORATION IS IN THE PROCESS OF DISSOLUTION AND _____ [THE IDENTITY OF THE DIRECTORS IS IN DOUBT or THE RIGHT OF THE DIRECTORS TO HOLD OFFICE IS IN DOUBT or THE DIRECTORS ARE DEAD or THE DIRECTORS ARE UNABLE TO ACT or THE DIRECTORS FAIL OR REFUSE TO ACT or THE WHEREABOUTS OF THE DIRECTORS CANNOT BE ASCERTAINED], THE SUPERIOR COURT HAS JURISDICTION TO [DETERMINE THE IDENTITY OF THE DIRECTORS or APPOINT DIRECTORS TO WIND UP THE AFFAIRS] OF THE CORPORATION.

A. Statutory Authority. When a corporation is in the process of dissolution and _____ [the identity of the directors is in doubt or the right of the directors to hold office is in doubt or the directors are dead or the directors are unable to act or the directors fail or refuse to act or the whereabouts of the directors cannot be ascertained] any interested person may petition the superior court of the proper county to _____ [determine the identity of the directors or appoint directors to wind up the affairs of the corporation], after hearing upon notice to those persons as the court may direct (Corp. Code § 2003).

[Optional] B. "Interested Person." An "interested person" is one who has a direct and not merely consequential interest in the proceeding. An interested person is one who has a real interest in the ultimate adjudication of the matter being considered (see Associated Boat Indus. v. Marshall (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 21, 22, 230 P.2d 379).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a petition for determination of the identity of directors during a dissolution proceeding, or for the appointment of directors to wind up the affairs of the corporation, in case they are missing, or unable to act. While there is no requirement that a memorandum accompany the petition, it may be advisable for counsel to submit one.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for appointment of directors to wind up corporation, an order fixing the time and notice of the hearing of petition, and an order appointing directors to wind up the affairs of a corporation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interested Person

Associated Boat Indus. v. Marshall (1951) 104 Cal. App. 2d 21, 230 P.2d 379 was an action for declaratory relief by a nonprofit corporation whose membership consisted of builders and distributors of, and dealers in, boats, ships, and yachts. The action sought to have certain regulations, adopted by the Yacht and Ship Broker Commissioner and applicable to the membership of the association, declared invalid. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint on the ground that the corporation was not an "interested person" within the meaning of the statute conferring standing to challenge regulations. The court of appeal affirmed. The question on appeal was whether an incorporated trade association whose members were subject to certain regulations had standing as an "interested person" to challenge the regulations. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court that it did not. Relying on the long-established interpretation of the phrase "interested person" as one with a direct, and not merely consequential interest in litigation, the court concluded that to have standing as an interested person, a person must be in such a position that he will either gain or lose by the direct legal operation and effect of the judgment.

It appears clear that the definition of "interested person" as one with a direct, and not merely consequential interest in the litigation transcends the fact situation of the Associated Boat Indus. case. The phrase "interested person" has been similarly construed in widely varying statutory contexts [see In re Eugene W. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 623, 630, 105 Cal. Rptr. 736 (same interpretation given to words used in statute permitting "any interested person" to petition court for judgment declaring minor free from parental control)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.186

§ 52.186 Supporting Motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1003] to Approve Intermediate Accounts of Directors [Corp. Code § 1806(d)] and to Determine Claims Against Corporation [Corp. Code § 1806(b)] and Rights of Shareholders to Assets [Corp. Code § 1806(c)]

[1] FORM

[EITHER]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff,	)	APPROVE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTS OF DIR-
vs.	)	ECTORS AND TO DETERMINE CLAIMS
_____ [name],	)	AGAINST CORPORATION AND RIGHTS OF
a Corporation, Defendant.	)	SHAREHOLDERS TO ASSETS
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[OR]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
In the Matter of	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
_____ _____,	)	APPROVE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTS OF DIR-
a Corporation,	)	ECTORS AND TO DETERMINE CLAIMS
In the Process of	)	AGAINST CORPORATION AND RIGHTS OF Winding Up and	)	SHAREHOLDERS TO ASSETS
Dissolution	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[CONTINUE]

_____ [DURING THE COURSE OF AN INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION PROCEEDINGS or IF A COURT HAS ASSUMED JURISDICTION OVER THE VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION] THE COURT IS AUTHORIZED TO APPROVE THE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTS OF DIRECTORS, TO DETERMINE CLAIMS AGAINST THE CORPORATION, AND TO DETERMINE THE RIGHTS OF SHAREHOLDERS TO THE ASSETS.

A. Statutory Authority. _____ [When an involuntary proceeding for winding up has been commenced or When the court has assumed jurisdiction over a voluntary winding up proceeding], the jurisdiction of the court includes the determination or compromise of all claims of every nature against the corporation or any of its property, and the determination of the amount of money or assets required to be retained to pay or provide for the payment of claims; the determination of the rights of shareholders and of all classes of shareholders in and to the assets of the corporation; and the presentation and filing of intermediate accounts of the directors and hearing thereon, and the allowance, disallowance, or settlement thereof (Corp. Code § 1806(b)-(d)).

[Optional] B. Application of Authority. The provisions of Chapter 18 of the Corporations Code (Corporations Code Sections 1800-1809) governing the powers of the court during an action forinvoluntary dissolution of a corporation, except Corporations Code Sections 1800-1801, apply in court supervised proceedings for voluntary dissolution (Corp. Code § 1904).

C. Right of Shareholders to Assets. After determining that all the known debts and liabilities of a corporation in the process of winding up have been paid or adequately provided for, the board must distribute all the remaining corporate assets among the shareholders according to their respective rights and preferences. If the winding up is by court proceeding or subject to court supervision, the distribution shall not be made until after the expiration of any period for the presentation of claims which has been prescribed by order of the court (Corp. Code § 2004).

D. Speedy Distribution Required. Distribution of corporate assets to shareholders must be made as soon as reasonably consistent with the beneficial liquidation of the corporate assets (Corp. Code § 2006).

E. Mode of Distribution to Shareholders. Distribution may be made either in money, or in property, or securities and either in installments from time to time or as a whole, if this can be done fairly, ratably, and in conformity with the provisions of the articles and the rights of the shareholders, and must be made as soon as reasonably consistent with the beneficial liquidation of the corporate assets (Corp. Code § 2006).

[Optional] F. Jurisdiction of Court to Determine Creditors' Rights. The court supervising the winding up of a corporation has the power to determine whether or not a valid debt exists and whether or not it has been properly substantiated. The court also has jurisdiction to determine who are the secured creditors and who among the corporation's creditors are entitled to claim priority (In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in supporting a motion for approval of the intermediate accounts of directors, determination of claims against the corporation, and the rights of shareholders to corporate assets in a proceeding for involuntary dissolution of a corporation, or in a proceeding for voluntary dissolution under court supervision. It should be noted that in one case, approval of the accounts of directors and determination of claims against the corporation and the rights of shareholders to corporate assets was sought by means of a "petition," rather than a motion [In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 432, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783] . However, it would appear that a motion is the more appropriate procedure for making application to the court for such approval and determination in light of the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure to the effect that an application for an order made in a pending action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1004] is made by motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 1003].

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this from showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction of Court to Determine Creditors' Rights

In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 was a proceeding for voluntary dissolution of a corporation under court supervision. One of the corporation's major creditors filed objections to the preliminary accounting submitted by the board of directors and to the claims of an alleged secured creditor. The county in which corporate property was located filed unsecured property tax claims and contended that it was a priority creditor. Both creditors and the county appealed from the trial court's determination of the validity and priority of claims. The trial court found, and the court of appeal affirmed, that failure of the alleged secured creditor to comply with the inventory financing laws then in effect deprived it of its claimed priority status. The court of appeal stated that the jurisdiction of the trial court was not limited to determination of whether or not a valid and substantiated debt existed against the corporation, but also included the power to decide the relationship and priorityof a given claim as to other claims submitted. The court of appeal also ruled that a secured creditor is entitled to assert an alleged fraudulent conveyance of general assets of the corporation inasmuch as a secured creditor is entitled to prove the whole debt owed and to look to the general assets of the corporation to realize a deficiency over the value of the security. As to the claimed tax liens alleged to give the county the status of a priority creditor, the court of appeal held that if the court fails to stay the perfecting of a tax lien after the commencement of proceedings for winding up and dissolution of a corporation, the lien becomes effective and the claim for taxes which is supported by lien has priority over unsecured creditors of the corporation. Finally, the court of appeal held that it was within the sound discretion of the trial court to deny attorney's fees to the creditor who successfully challenged another creditor's claim to priory. Attorney's fees are sometimes allowable where the parties prosecuting an action recover, protect, preserve, or increase a fund for the benefit of themselves and others. However, it was not an abuse of discretion to deny such fees to a creditor which was the primary beneficiary of a successful challenge to the claim of another creditor to priority.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rights of Shareholders to Assets

In re San Joaquin Light & Power Corp. (1942) 52 Cal. App. 2d 814, 127 P.2d 29 was a proceeding on a petition under former Civ. Code § 403 [now see Corp. Code § 1904] for judicial supervision of the winding up and dissolution of a public utilities corporation (San Joaquin). The majority shareholder in San Joaquin was Pacific Gas and Electric Company (Pacific). As majority shareholder, Pacific elected to dissolve San Joaquin. Pursuant to the plan of liquidation, Pacific, the majority common stockholder, would receive the assets of San Joaquin which consisted of plants, equipment and properties, while the minority common stockholders would receive cash. San Joaquin petitioned the court for judicial supervision of the corporate dissolution, primarily for the purpose of arriving at an adjudication of the fair market value of the stock held by minority stockholders who objected to the dissolution plan. The trial court sustained demurrers to the petition and dismissed the proceeding. The court of appeal reversed. The basis of the trial court's action was that a distribution plan whereby the majority stockholder gets the corporate assets and minority stockholders are required to accept cash as their distributive share was unlawful and, therefore, the trial court felt that the petition did not state a cause of action for which relief could be granted. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court's holding that a distribution of corporate assets to the majority stockholder, while compelling minority stockholders to take the cash value of their proportionate share of the assets, is not possible absent statutory authorization. However, the mere fact that the plan of liquidation was unlawful did not mean that the trial court had no jurisdiction to supervise the voluntary dissolution. It merely meant that another liquidation plan which was fairer to minority shareholders would have to be devised.

It should be noted that the holding of the San Joaquin case does not mean that on dissolution the corporate assets cannot be sold and a distribution made to corporate shareholders in the form of cash. This is perfectly permissible, if done in compliance with statutory provisions [see Corp. Code §§ 2001(g), 2006]. The San Joaquin case merely stands for the proposition that minority shareholders cannot be forced to accept cash while majority shareholders receive the corporate assets as their distributive share on dissolution [see also Zimmerman v. Tide Water Associated Oil Co. (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 585, 143 P.2d 409] .

In re Los Angeles County Pioneer Soc'y (1953) 40 Cal. 2d 852, 257 P.2d 1 was a proceeding on a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a corporation. The corporation was an organization of early Los Angeles County pioneers and existed for social purposes, preservation of historical data and artifacts from early California, and commemoration of early California settlers. A former member had bequeathed substantial assets to the corporation. A majority of the members of the corporation wished to dissolve it and distribute its assets to the members. A petition for judicial supervision was filed and granted. The attorney general intervened, alleging that the corporation was a charitable corporation holding its assets in trust. He sought the appointment of a new trustee on the ground that Pioneer had abandoned its trust. The trial court determined that Pioneer held its property for charitable purposes and that Pioneer had repudiated its trust, and ordered the appointment of a new trustee to carry out the purposes of the trust. Pioneer and an individual member of Pioneer appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. It found substantial evidence to support the finding of the trial court that Pioneer was a charitable corporation holding its assets in trust. This being the case, the general rule applied that a charitable corporation cannot dissolve and distribute its assets among its members. Furthermore, a revocation of the election to dissolve did not limit the power of the attorney general to seek the appointment of a successor trustee on the ground that Pioneer had repudiated its trust. As a further ruling, the court held that where a charitable corporation fails through dissolution or other disqualification, the proper procedure is the appointment of a successor trustee to carry out the terms of the trust rather than a distribution of the assets to the donor or his heirs.

The court also distinguished cases involving nonprofit corporations existing for the private benefit of their members. In those cases, where the assets are not held for charitable purposes, the assets are properly distributable among the members on dissolution.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.187

§ 52.187 Supporting Motion for Order Staying Dissolution Proceedings and Appointing Appraisers to Ascertain Value of Stock [Corp. Code §§ 2000(a)-(c)]

[1] FORM

[EITHER]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name], Plaintiff, vs. _____ [name], a Corporation, and _____ [name(s), of shareholder(s)], Defendants.	))))))))))	NO. _____ MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER STAYING INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION PROCEEDINGS AND APPOINTING APPRAISERS TO ASCERTAIN VALUE OF STOCK Date: _____ Time: _____ Location: _____ [Judge: _____] Date Action Filed: _____ [Trial Date: _____]

_____

[OR]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____	)
	)	NO. _____
In the Matter of	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF APPLICA-
_____ [name],	)	TION TO STAY VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION
a Corporation,	)	PROCEEDINGS AND APPOINTING APPRAISERS
In the Process of	)	TO ASCERTAIN VALUE OF STOCK
Voluntary Winding Up	)	Date: _____
and Dissolution	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[CONTINUE]

IN ANY PROCEEDING FOR _____ [INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION or VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION OF A CORPORATION INITIATED BY THE VOTE OF SHAREHOLDERS REPRESENTING ONLY 50 PERCENT OF THE VOTING POWER], ON MOTION OF _____ [THE CORPORATION or SHAREHOLDERS REPRESENTING 50 PERCENT OR MORE OF THE VOTING POWER] ("PURCHASING PARTIES"), THE SUPERIOR COURT MUST STAY THE PROCEEDING FOR THE PURPOSE OF ASCERTAINING AND FIXING THE VALUE OF THE SHARES OWNED BY THE _____ [PLAINTIFFS or SHAREHOLDERS INITIATING THE PROCEEDING] ("MOVING PARTIES") WHEN THE PURCHASING PARTIES ELECT TO PURCHASE THE SHARES OWNED BY THE MOVING PARTIES, ARE UNABLE TO AGREE WITH THE MOVING PARTIES ON THE FAIR VALUE OF THOSE SHARES, AND GIVE BOND WITH SUFFICIENT SECURITY TO PAY THE EXPENSES (INCLUDING ATTORNEY'S FEES) OF THE MOVING PARTIES IF THOSE EXPENSES ARE RECOVERABLE UNDER CORPORATIONS CODE SECTION 2000(c).

A. Statutory Authority for Purchase. Subject to any contrary provision in the articles, _____ [in any suit for involuntary dissolution or in any proceeding for voluntary dissolution initiated by the vote of shareholders representing only 50 percent of the voting power], _____ [the corporation or holders of 50 percentor more of the voting power of the corporation] (the "purchasing parties") may avoid the dissolution of the corporation and the appointment of any receiver by purchasing for cash the shares owned by _____ [the plaintiffs or the shareholders so initiating the proceeding] (the "moving parties") at their fair value (Corp. Code § 2000(a)).

[Optional] B. Election to Purchase by Corporation. The election of the corporation to purchase may be made by the approval of the outstanding shares, excluding shares held by the moving parties (Corp. Code § 2000(a)).

[Optional] C. "Approval of the Outstanding Shares." "Approval of the outstanding shares" means approval by the affirmative vote of a majority of the outstanding shares entitled to vote. The required approval must include the affirmative vote of a majority of the outstanding shares of each class of series entitled, by any provision of the articles or of the General Corporation Law to vote as a class or series on the subject matter being voted upon, and must also include the affirmative vote of a greater proportion (including all) of the outstanding shares of any class or series if a greater proportion is required by the articles or the General Corporation Law (Corp. Code § 152).

D. Stay of Proceeding. The court, on application of the purchasing parties in the pending action, must stay the winding up and dissolution proceeding and proceed to ascertain and fix the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties if the purchasing parties: (1) elect to purchase the shares owned by the moving parties; (2) are unable to agree with the moving parties upon the fair value of the shares; and (3) give bond with sufficient security to pay the expense (including attorney's fees) of the moving parties if those expenses are recoverable under Corporations Code Section 2000(c) (Corp. Code § 2000(b)).

E. Stay of Proceedings Mandatory. The requirement that the dissolution proceedings be stayed is mandatory when the purchasing parties elect to purchase the moving parties' shares at their fair value, are unable to agree with the moving parties upon the fair value of the shares, and give bond with sufficient security to pay the expenses, including attorney's fees, of the moving parties (see Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 462, 464, 148 P.2d 884).

F. Appointment of Appraisers. The court must appoint three disinterested appraisers to appraise the fair value of the shares owned by the moving parties and must make an order referring the matter to the appraisers so appointed for the purpose of ascertaining that value. The order must prescribe the time and manner of producing evidence, if evidence is required (Corp. Code § 2000(c)).

G. Determination of Fair Value. The fair value must be determined on the basis of the liquidation value but taking into account the possibility, if any, of sale of the entire business as a going concern in a liquidation (Corp. Code § 2000(a); Trahan v. Trahan (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 76-78, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 ; Mart v. Severson (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 535-536, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717).

[Optional] H. Court May Choose Between Discordant Appraisals. When a trial court becomes convinced that one of two highly discordant appraisal reports accurately reflects the value of the shares in question, it may confirm that report without investigating the matter again (Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 491, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170).

[Optional] I. Purchase by Majority Shareholders Does Not Justify Devaluation of Minority Shares in Closely Held Corporation. The rule justifying devaluation of minority shares in a closely held corporation for their lack of control has little validity when the shares are to be purchased by someone who is already in control of the corporation; in that situation, the shares are not worth less to the purchaser be cause they are noncontrolling (Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 486, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170).

[Optional] J. Majority's Personal Control Over Sales Does Not Justify Reduction in Value of Minority Shares. The goodwill of a business conducted by a corporation is the property of the corporation alone, and a majority shareholder's personal control over a large portion of the corporation's sales should not reduce the value of shares of the minority shareholders (see Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 488, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170).

[Optional] K. Fair Value of Shares Includes Value and Effect of Pending Derivative Action. A determination of the fair value of the shares of the corporation must include an assessment of the value, if any, of a pending derivative action and the effect of the action on the fair value of the shares (Cotton v. Expo Power Sys., Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1374, 1380-1381, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112).

[Optional] L. Deduction of Damages for Breach. In fixing the value of the shares, the amount of any damages resulting if the initiation of the dissolution is a breach by _____ [any moving party or the moving parties] of an agreement with the purchasing _____ [party or parties] may be deducted from the amount payable to the moving _____ [party or parties] unless the ground for dissolution is _____ [persistent and pervasive fraud, mismanagement, or abuse of authority or persistent unfairness towardany shareholders or the misapplication or waste of corporate property by its directors or officers] as specified in Corporations Code Section 1800(b)(4) (Corp. Code § 2000(a)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for stay of involuntary dissolution proceedings, either when the purchasing party is the corporation, or when the shareholder or shareholders seeking to stay the proceedings have been named as defendants in the proceedings, or in support of an application for stay of court-supervised dissolution proceedings, and for appointment of appraisers to ascertain the value of stock belonging to the parties initiating the dissolution. Although there is no requirement that a memorandum accompany an application for stay of court-supervised voluntary dissolution proceedings, it may be advisable for counsel to submit one.

Counsel should insert argument in the from showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a notice of motion to stay proceedings and ascertain value of plaintiffs' shares in a dissolution proceeding, a declaration to accompany the motion, and an order staying proceedings see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 160, Corporations (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority for Purchase

Avoidance of dissolution by appraisal and sale of stock was not available in a voluntary dissolution proceeding under pre-1977 law [see former Corp. Code § 4658 (buy-out procedure as available only in proceeding for involuntary dissolution of corporation)].

[b] Election to Purchase by Corporation

Under pre-1977 law, the corporation did not have a statutory right to avoid dissolution by purchasing the shares of the party initiating dissolution proceedings [see former Corp. Code § 4658].

[c] Stay of Proceedings Mandatory

Merlino v. Fresno Macaroni Mfg. Co. (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 462, 148 P.2d 884 was a proceeding for involuntary dissolution of a corporation under former Corp. Code § 4650 [now see Corp. Code § 1800 (a)] because of deadlock and dissension. On the motion of the plaintiffs, the court ordered the appointment of a receiver, and the individual defendants in the proceeding, owners of 50 percent of the corporate stock, appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The appellants contended that they desired to purchase the plaintiffs' shares and avoid dissolution of the corporation. They argued that the statutory provisions for a stay of proceedings and appraisal of the plaintiffs' stock were mandatory and that, therefore, the trial court erred in appointing a receiver. The court of appeal agreed that the defendants had a clear right under former Corp. Code § 4658 [now see Corp. Code § 2000(a)] to avoid the appointment of a receiver and dissolution of the corporation by purchasing the shares owned by the plaintiffs at their fair value. However, the court of appeal affirmed the order appointing the receiver. The defendants had not made the showing required under former Corp. Code § 4658 [now see Corp. Code § 2000(b)] that they were unable to agree with the plaintiffs on the fair value of the shares. Although the trial court might have continued the matter and permitted such a showing, it was under no obligation to do so, and was neither authorized nor required to stay the appointment of the receiver based on the insufficient showing made by the would-be purchasers. However, the court of appeal noted, the appointment of the receiver did not deprive the defendants of the statutory buy-out option, provided they proceeded to make the required showing before the trial court (64 Cal. App. 2d 462).

[d] Determination of Fair Value

In Trahan v. Trahan (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 814 , two brothers ("appellants") owning 50 percent of the shares of a closely held corporation in the business of providing general contracting and maintenance services sought to dissolve the corporation. As of that date, May 30, 2000, the corporation had a backlog of outstanding construction contracts. Two other brothers ("respondents") exercised their statutory right under Corp. Code § 2000 to prevent dissolution by electing to purchase the appellants' shares at their fair market value. After the parties failed to agree on the fair value of appellants' shares, respondents petitioned the court to stay dissolution and fix the value. The court ordered that the appraisalbe made by a single appraiser consistent with the parties' agreement. The appraiser determined that the corporation could not be sold as a going concern. She determined the fair value of the corporation on the basis of its liquidation value on the liquidation date, finding that the corporation had a negative value and thus appellants' shares had a negative fair value. In response to questions from the court, the appraiser stated that although the contract backlogs amounted to an estimated gross profit of $924,767, there was no market value for partially completed contracts and that for public works, assignability was generally not allowed. The court also had asked for the liquidation value of May 30, 2000, which necessarily implied that the contracts in progress would not be completed. Appellants refused to transfer their shares and the trial court ordered respondents to file a motion to confirm the award. Appellants opposed confirmation, arguing that the appraisal erroneously omitted valuation of the corporation's primary assets, the construction and maintenance contracts outstanding as of the valuation date. The trial court confirmed the appraiser's award (99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 67-70) .

The court of appeal concluded that substantial evidence supported the court's confirmation of the appraiser's determination of the fair value of the corporate shares as of the value upon piecemeal sale of the assets as of May 30, 2000. The court noted that appellants never argued that there was any possibility of sale of the business as a going concern. Thus, the court rejected their first contention that the appraiser should have determined the fair value using methods set forth in a revenue ruling normally used for federal estate tax purposes, as done in a case which valued a corporation as a going concern (99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 71-72) . The court next dismissed appellants' argument that the appraisal was flawed because the valuation of their shares was less then they would have received upon actual dissolution. When there is no possible sale of the corporation as a going concern in liquidation, the liquidation value necessarily anticipates the piecemeal valuation as of the valuation date, without consideration of any winding up period (99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 72-74) . The court noted that appellants could have challenged the appraiser's failure to value the corporation as a going concern in liquidation. Moreover, pursuant to Corp. Code § 2000(f), appellants could have requested the court to set the valuation date to allow for a hypothetical winding up period, during which the unperformed contracts would be completed and the profits realized. However, they failed to do so (99 Cal. App. 4th 62, 76-78) .

Mart v. Severson (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 115 Cal. Rptr. 2d 717 was a voluntary dissolution proceeding conducted pursuant to Corp. Code § 2000. After one of the 50 percent shareholders delivered to the other a written consent of shareholders to the election to wind up and dissolve, the other shareholder exercised his right to have the corporation purchase the first shareholder's shares at their "fair value" to avoid dissolution. Three appraisers worked together to determine the fair value of the shares, which they defined pursuant to Corp. Code § 2000(a). Because they expressly stated that they believed the company would be sold as a going concern, they employed two alternative valuation methods rather than a cost approach valuation method, which would focus exclusively on assets and liabilities. Their final report concluded that the fair value was $5,600,000. The superior court instructed the appraisers to file a supplemental letter explaining whether they calculated the liquidation value or the sale value of the corporation as a going concern. They unanimously repeated that the corporation would be sold as a going concern in liquidation. They also explained that they assumed hypothetical covenants not to complete would be executed. The superior court then expressed the view that the corporation could be valued as a going concern business only if the first shareholder executed a valid covenant not to compete. The superior court remanded the appraisers' first report and instructed them to calculate the piecemeal liquidation value of the corporation, which they found to be $1,480,000. The court concluded that the liquidation value was to be used rather than the higher figure, and found that it was too late for the submission of a noncompetition agreement. The superior court filed a decree and judgment winding up and dissolving the corporation, stating that the piecemeal liquidation value was final and conclusive, and that the appraisers' higher value was premised on the execution of an effective covenant not to compete which had not been submitted (95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 527-529) .

The court of appeal held that the trial court erred in finding that fair value was the piecemeal liquidation value of $1.48 million, when the appraisers unanimously had concluded that the corporation could have been sold as an ongoing concern for $5.6 million. The superior court had rejected the higher appraisal value, finding that determination was premised on the execution of an effective covenant not to complete, and that no such covenant had been or could be executed. However, the appraisers had correctly applied Corp. Code § 2000 by assuming that a hypothetical willing seller would execute a covenant not to complete with the corporation after the sale (95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 530) . The superior court had misinterpreted Corp. Code § 2000, which merely contains a procedure for establishing a fair value price for the moving party's stock. It does not govern or even address covenants not to compete, nor does it authorize the trial court to dictate any of the terms of sale other than price (95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 532) . Therefore, the court of appeal held that the superior court's conclusion that the fair value of the corporation was $1.48 million was not supported by substantial evidence and was based on an erroneous application of Corp. Code § 2000. It reversed that ruling and instructed the superior court to confirm the fair value determination set forth in the appraisers' original report (95 Cal. App. 4th 521, 536) .

[e] Court May Choose Between Discordant Appraisals

In Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170 , plaintiffs filed a complaint for the involuntary dissolution of defendant corporation. The majority shareholder filed a complaint in intervention and then noticed a motion to stay the proceedings and to have the court ascertain the value of the minority shares. The motion was granted. Three commissioners were appointed, but they could not reach a consensus as to the value of plaintiffs' shares. Two reports were filed, and the court affirmed the majority commissioner's report and denied plaintiffs' request for a valuation de novo by the court. Plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal reversed, remanding the cause to the trial court.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended, inter alia, that the majority commissioners erred in devaluing plaintiffs' shares because of their noncontrolling status; that the majority commissioners improperly considered the intervener's personal responsibility for a large bulk of the corporation's sales; and that the trial court erred by not hearing the matter de novo. The court found plaintiffs' first two contentions to have substantial merit and therefore returned the cause to the trial court for further consideration not inconsistent with their views (91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 485) . In its discussion, the court stated that it found absolutely no merit in plaintiffs' contention that a trial court faced with highly conflicting appraisal reports is obligated to make a de novo determination of value. The court held that when a trial court becomes convinced that one of two highly discordant appraisal reports accurately reflects the value of the shares in question, it may confirm that report without investigating the matter again (91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 491) .

[f] Purchase by Majority Shareholders Does Not Justify Devaluation of Minority Shares in Closely Held Corporation

The facts and procedural background of Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170 are discussed in § 52.187[3][e]. In reversing the trial court's judgment and remanding for further proceedings, the court of appeal noted that lack of control inherent in plaintiffs' minority shares would substantially decrease their value if they were placed on the open market. However, the court held that the rule justifying the devaluation of minority shares in closely held corporation for their lack of control has little validity when the shares are to be purchased by someone who is already in control of the corporation because, in such a situation, it could hardly be said that the shares are worth less to the purchaser because they are noncontrolling (91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 486) . The court found that former Corp. Code § 4651 (now Corp. Code § 1800) suggested that a minority shareholder who brings an action for the involuntary dissolution of a corporation should not receive less than he or she would have received had the dissolution been allowed to proceed by virtue of the controlling shareholder's invocation of the buy-out remedy (91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 487) .

[g] Majority's Personal Control Over Sales Does Not Justify Reduction in Value of Minority Shares

The facts and procedural background of Brown v. Allied Corrugated Box Co. (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 154 Cal. Rptr. 170 are discussed in § 52.187[3][e]. In Brown, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment confirming the report of the majority commissioners and ordering transfer of plaintiffs' shares to the intervener and remanded the cause for further proceedings consistent with the views expressed by the court of appeal. In its discussion, the court found that plaintiffs were correct in asserting that the intervener's personal control over a large portion of defendant corporation's sales was improperly considered by the majority commissioners, because by doing so the commissioners attributed the corporation's goodwill directly to the intervener in his individual capacity. The court stated that it has been established that the goodwill of a business conducted by a corporation is the property of the corporation alone (91 Cal. App. 3d 477, 488) .

[h] Fair Value of Shares Includes Value and Effect of Pending Derivative Action

In Cotton v. Expo Power Sys., Inc. (2009) 170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 112 , a minority shareholder sought dissolution of the corporation and other relief. The majority shareholders invoked their statutory right to buy the minority shareholder's interest. The trial court obtained an appraisal of the fair value of the shares. The appraisers did not attempt to value the minority shareholder's derivative claims and did not take those claims into account in determining the fair value of his shares, because they believed that the sale of his shares could be conditioned on the corporation's assignment of its derivative claims to the minority shareholder. The trial court confirmed the appraisal and postponed the date of the buyout until after the resolution of the related derivative action.

The court of appeal reversed, citing three errors. First, conditioning the sale of the minority shareholder's shares on the corporation's assignment of its derivative claims to the minority shareholder would have been unworkable because once the minority shareholder's shares were taken from him, he could no longer meet the standing requirement of Corp. Code § 800(b), which requires that the plaintiff in a derivative action must be a shareholder continuously throughout the pendency of the action (170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1382) . Second, postponing the buyout of the minority shares until resolution of the derivative action contravened the purpose of Corp. Code § 2000, which contemplates a summary procedure. The trial court is required either to obtain a complete appraisal of the fair value of the shares from the appraisers, without delay, or to conduct a hearing forthwith to resolve the matter (170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1381-1382) . Third, it was error, therefore, for the court to confirm the appraisal when the appraisers did not attempt to value the minority shareholder's derivative claims and did not take those claims into account in determining the fair value of his shares (170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1380-1381). The court stated, "We conclude that a determination of the fair value of the shares of a corporation under section 2000 [of the Corporations Code] includes an assessment of the value, if any, of pending derivative actions and their effect on the fair value of the shares" (170 Cal. App. 4th 1371, 1374) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Authority for Purchase

Alvak Enterprises v. Phillips (1959) 167 Cal. App. 2d 69, 334 P.2d 148, 338 P.2d 582 , originally was an action by a corporation to enjoin two of its directors from interfering with the operation of a hotel owned by the corporation. The defendants, the Phillipses, as directors, cross complained seeking dissolution of the corporation, naming the corporation and its president, Spivak, as cross defendants. Spivak, as alleged owner of 50 percent of the shares in the corporation, sought by motion to avoid the dissolution of the corporation by purchasing the other 50 percent of the stock, allegedly owned by the Phillipses. At the time of the motion, no stock had actually been issued, but before the court ruled on the motion, stock had been issued, 50 percent to Spivak, and 50 percent to Mr. Phillips. This fact was presented to the court by affidavit. The court eventually granted the motion for a stay of the proceedings and appraisal of the value of the Phillipses' stock. The Phillipses appealed, contending that the statutory buy-out procedures under former Corp. Code §§ 4658-4659 [now see Corp. Code § 2000] could only be invoked if the stock were actually issued at the time the motion for stay and appraisal were made. They also alleged certain irregularities in the affidavit describing the belated stock issuance to the court. The court of appeal affirmed the order of the trial court ordering a stay and appraisal. The court found no prejudicial error associated with the affidavits in question. It stated that the sections of the Corporations Code providing for a stay of proceedings to dissolve a corporation, and the purchase of the shares held by those seeking its dissolution, are mandatory and that when the prescribed conditions are met, the court must recognize the right clearly given and must stay the proceeding and proceed to ascertain and fix the value of the shares. Finding no error in the trial court's actions that resulted in a miscarriage of justice, the court of appeal refused to reverse the trial court (167 Cal. App. 2d 69).

Note that under pre-1977 law, the definition of "holder of shares" included a subscriber to shares in cases in which no certificates of stock were outstanding [former Corp. Code § 103]. Thus, although former Corp. Code § 4658 purported to grant statutory buy-out rights only to holders of 50 percent or more of the "outstanding shares" of the corporation, the court of appeal, a few years after the Alvak decision, was persuaded to grant statutory buy-out rights to the subscriber to 50 percent of the unissued stock of a corporation [see Brodsky v. Seaboard Realty Co. (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 504, 514-516, 24 Cal. Rptr. 61] . Under current law [Corp. Code § 2000(a)], the persons given statutory buy-out rights are described as holders of 50 percent or more of the "voting power" [Corp. Code § 2000(a)]. Given the statutory definition of voting power [see Corp. Code § 194.5], it seems clear that under current law only holders of the requisite number of issued and outstanding shares with voting rights are entitled to invoke statutory buy-out rights.

[b] Stay of Proceedings Mandatory

Cubalevic v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 557, 49 Cal. Rptr. 698 was a proceeding on a petition for writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from proceeding to determine the fair value of stock under the statutory buy-out provisions relating to involuntary dissolution of a corporation [former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659; now see Corp. Code § 2000]. The court of appeal granted the writ of prohibition. The plaintiff in the dissolution action was a minority stockholder in the corporation. He filed a complaint with several causes of action seeking varied relief, including an injunction, an accounting, and damages. One cause of action sought involuntary dissolution of the corporation. The majority stockholders elected to buy plaintiff's stock and moved for a stay of the proceeding for involuntary dissolution, and for an appraisal. However, before argument or ruling on the motion, the plaintiff filed a written dismissal with prejudice of his cause of action seeking involuntary dissolution. Nevertheless, the trial court stated its intention of proceeding with the appraisal of the plaintiff's shares. In granting the writ of prohibition, the court of appeal acknowledged that dismissal of a cause of action with prejudice does not have the effect of dismissing a counterclaim or cross complaint filed in an action. However, this rule applies only to an independent cause of action stated by the defendant in his counterclaim or cross complaint. One stockholder does not have an independent right to compel another stockholder to sell his or her shares. There being no such independent right, it followed that the cause of action to compel such a sale could not survive dismissal of the action for involuntary dissolution in which the remedy of purchase was given. The statutory buy-out provisions [former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659; now see Corp. Code § 2000] are ancillary to and dependent on the existence of the action to compel involuntary dissolution. On the dismissal of that action, there was nothing left against which the ancillary remedy could be asserted. Therefore, the trial court exceeded its jurisdiction in continuing with the appraisal of the plaintiff's shares after dismissal of the cause of action for involuntary dissolution (240 Cal. App. 2d 557).

[c] Determination of Fair Value

Ronald's v. 4-C's Electronic Packaging, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 290, 214 Cal. Rptr. 225 was an involuntary dissolution proceeding by minority shareholders of a closely held corporation. The majority shareholder had sought to buy out plaintiffs, and three appraisers were appointed to value the minority shares. Two of the appraisers used the price-earnings method; the third appraiser used the asset method. A special master confirmed the valuation arrived at by consideration of only the price-earnings method and after applying a discount factor reflecting defendant's controlling interest. The court of appeal reversed. In reversing the court reviewed cases and scholarly articles on the various valuation methods for minority interests in closely held corporations that are not publicly traded. The court reiterated the rule of law that consideration of only the price-earnings method in valuing a minority interest in a closely held corporation under Corp. Code § 2000(a) is error. Although the price-earnings method is a proper method, its use as the only method is improper. Minority interests are not to be devalued to reflect the fact that they are minority or noncontrolling interests (168 Cal. App. 3d 290, 297-301) .

Venables v. Credential Ins. Agency, Inc. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 724, 295 P.2d 547 was an action by a director and minority stockholder of a corporation seeking an involuntary dissolution pursuant to former Corp. Code §§ 4650, 4651 [now see Corp. Code § 1800(a),(b)]. His complaint was based on dissension, deadlock, and wrongful acts by majority stockholders. He was a former corporate employee who had resigned a year before bringing the action. The majority stockholders sought a stay of the proceeding and an appraisal of the plaintiff's stock pursuant to former Corp. Code §§ 4658, 4659 [now see Corp. Code § 2000]. The court ordered that the shares be appraised at their going concern value, rather than at their liquidation value. The appointed commissioners (called "appraisers" under current law [Corp. Code § 2000(c)]) valued the plaintiff's stock at $22.56 per share. They relied on the facts that the plaintiff was not bound by a covenant not to compete with his former employer (the corporation), and that dividends were rarely paid on the stock. The plaintiff moved to have the court strike the award and make its own valuation. The court did so, valuing the stock at $62.50 per share. The court's award was based in part on the price paid by members of the majority for other shares a few years before. The majority stockholders appealed, contending that the trial court had no authority to disregard the valuation made by the commissioners. The court of appeal affirmed the award of the trial court. It noted that the award of the Commissioners was not final and conclusive until confirmed by the trial court. Further, the ultimate authority to ascertain and fix the values of the shares is vested in the trial court rather than the commissioners. It went on to say that the determination by the trial court of the value of the shares was largely a factual function and that the trial court's award was amply supported by the record (140 Cal. App. 2d 724).

The duty of the trial court to examine matters de novo and fix the proper value of the shares when convinced that the award of the appraisers is erroneous, which the Venables court found inherent in former Corp. Code § 4659, probably continues under current Corp. Code § 2000(b).

[d] Purchase by Majority Shareholders Does Not Justify Devaluation of Minority Shares in Closely Held Corporation

In Ronald's v. 4-C's Electronic Packaging, Inc. (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 290, 214 Cal. Rptr. 225 , discussed in § 52.187[4][c], the court based its holding in part on the legal ground that minority interests are not to be discounted merely to reflect that they are minority or noncontrolling interests.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.188

§ 52.188 Supporting Petition for Order Declaring Corporation Duly Wound Up and Dissolved [Corp. Code § 1907]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
	)	FOR ORDER DECLARING CORPORATION
In the Matter of _____ [name],	)	DULY WOUND UP AND DISSOLVED
a Corporation,	)	Date: _____
In the Process of Voluntary Winding Up and Dissolu-	)	Time: _____
tion.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

AFTER ALL TAXES, PENALTIES, KNOWN DEBTS, AND OTHER LIABILITIES HAVE BEEN PAID, SECURED, OR OTHERWISE ADEQUATELY PROVIDED FOR, AND ALL KNOWN ASSETS HAVE BEEN DISTRIBUTED TO SHAREHOLDERS, OR WHOLLY APPLIED ON ACCOUNT OF THE CORPORATION'S DEBTS AND LIABILITIES, THE SUPERIOR COURT, ON PETITION BY THE CORPORATION, MAY DECLARE THE CORPORATION DULY WOUND UP AND DISSOLVED.

A. Statutory Authority. The board of directors of a corporation which has been dissolved, in lieu of filing a certificate of dissolution, may petition the superior court of the proper county for an order declaring the corporation wound up and dissolved. Such a petition must be filed in the name of the corporation [Corp. Code § 1907(a)].

B. Duties of Court on Filing of Petition. Upon the filing of the petition, the court must make an order requiring all persons interested to show cause why an order should not be made declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved and must direct that the order be served by notice to all creditors, claimants, and shareholders in the same manner as the notice given under Corporations Code Section 1807(b) (Corp. Code § 1907(b)).

C. Order. After the period of time for contesting the petition has expired, and if the court determines that the corporation's affairs are in condition for it to be dissolved, the court may make an order declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved. The order must declare: (1) that the corporation has been duly wound up, that a final franchise tax return, as described by Rev. & Tax. Code § 23332, has been filed with the Franchise Tax Board, and that its known debts and liabilities have been paid or adequately provided for, or that those taxes, penalties, debts, and liabilities have been paid as far as its assets permitted, as the case may be. If there are known debts or liabilities for payment of which adequate provision has been made, the order must state what provision has been made, setting forth the name and address of the corporation, person, or governmental agency that has assumed or guaranteed the payment, or the name and address of the depositary with which deposit has been made or such other information as may be necessary to enable the creditor or other person to whom payment is to be made to appear and claim payment of the debt or liability; (2) that all known assets have been distributed to the persons entitled to them or that it acquired no known assets, as the case may be; (3) that the accounts of directors or such other persons have been settled and that they are discharged from their duties and liabilities to creditors and shareholders; and (4) that the corporation is dissolved (Corp. Code §§ 1808(a), 1907(d)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a petition for an order declaring a corporation duly wound up and dissolved in cases in which the winding up has taken place without court supervision, and the directors seek a court order declaring the corporation duly wound up and dissolved in lieu of filing the certificate of dissolution specified in Corp. Code § 1905 [see Corp. Code § 1907]. The advantage of the court order procedure is the finality of a court order with respect to claims against the corporation [see Corp. Code § 1907(c)]. While there is no requirement that a memorandum accompany the petition, it may be advisable for counsel to submit one. If there will be a hearing on the order to show cause, as a law and motion matter, the first page must specify, immediately below the number of the case, (1) if ascertainable, the date, time, and location of any scheduled hearing and the name of the hearing judge, (2) the nature or title of any attached document other than an exhibit, (3) the date of filing the action, and (4) the trial date, if set [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1110(b); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a) (construing law and motion)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for a petition and order to declare a corporation wound up and dissolved, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

148 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.189

§ 52.189 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant--In Action by Creditor Against Dissolved Corporation--Failure to Present Claim in Timely Manner Bars Claim

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.31.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER WHEN A PLAINTIFF SUING A DISSOLVED CORPORATION HAS FAILED TO PRESENT CLAIMS AND PROOFS WITHIN THE TIME DIRECTED BY THE COURT IN _____ [AN INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION PROCEEDING or A COURT-SUPERVISED VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION PROCEEDING] AFTER HAVING RECEIVED NOTICE OF SUCH DISSOLUTION PROCEEDING.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 52.31, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Present Claim Bars Claim. All creditors and claimants may be barred from participation in any distribution of the general assets of a corporation in _____ [an involuntary dissolution proceeding or a court-supervised voluntary dissolution proceeding] if they fail to make and present claims and proofs within such time as the court may direct, which must not be less than four nor more than six months after the first publication of notice to creditors, unless it appears by affidavit that there are no claims, in which case the time limit may be three months (Corp. Code § 1807(a)).

[Optional] C. Application of Involuntary Dissolution Provision to Court-Supervised Voluntary Dissolutions. If a court assumes jurisdiction over the voluntary dissolution of a corporation, the provisions of Corporations Code Section 1807, relating to the presentation and proof of creditors' claims apply to that proceeding (Corp. Code § 1904).

D. Form of Notice to Creditors. Notice to creditors shall be published not less than once a week for three consecutive weeks in _____ [a newspaper of general circulation published in the county in which the proceeding is pending or if there is no newspaper of general circulation published in the county where the proceeding is pending the newspaper designated by the court] directing creditors and claimants to make and present claims and proofs to the person at the place, and within the time specified in the notice. A copy of the notice shall be mailed to each person shown as a creditor or claimant on the books of the corporation, at such person's last known address (Corp. Code § 1807).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment when the motion asserts that defendant-dissolved corporation is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law since plaintiff claimant against defendant-dissolved corporation failed to present claims and proofs of claims during dissolution proceeding within the time limits specified by the court in the notice mailed to creditors and claimants.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for a notice of motion for summary judgment, and a declaration supporting a motion for summary judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.190

§ 52.190 Opposing Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--No Valid Election to Dissolve

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION
In the Matter of	)	FOR JUDICIAL SUPERVISION OF VOLUNTARY
_____ [name],	)	WINDING UP OF CORPORATION
a Corporation,	)	Date: _____
In the Process of Voluntary Winding Up and Dissolu-	)	Time: _____
tion.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURTS HAVE NO JURISDICTION TO SUPERVISE THE VOLUNTARY WINDING UP OF A CORPORATION WHERE THE CORPORATION HAS NOT MADE A VALID ELECTION TO DISSOLVE.

A. Statutory Authority. If a corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up, the superior court may take jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up proceeding (Corp. Code § 1904).

B. Limits on Jurisdiction. If a corporation is not in the process of voluntary winding up, the court has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary winding up (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1).

C. Requirement of Statutory Compliance. A corporation cannot be dissolved except in the manner and under the conditions prescribed in the Corporations Code (Keeler v. Schulte (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 803, 306 P.2d 430).

D. Requirement of Election to Dissolve. A corporation is not in the process of voluntary winding up if no valid election to wind up and dissolve has been made pursuant to statute (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1).

E. Valid Election Not Accomplished. There has been no valid election to wind up and dissolve pursuant to statute if there has been no _____ [vote of shareholders holding shares representing 50 percent or more of the voting power or, in the case of a corporation as to which an order for relief has been entered under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Code, or a corporation which has disposed of all its assets and has not conducted any business for a period of five years immediately preceding the adoption of the resolution electing to dissolve the corporation, or a corporation which has issued no shares approval by the board of directors to wind up and dissolve] (Corp. Code § 1900(a),(b)).

[Optional] F. "Shareholder." "Shareholder" means one who is a holder of record of shares (Corp. Code § 185).

[Optional] G. "Shares." "Shares" means the units into which the proprietary interests in a corporation are divided in the articles (Corp. Code § 184).

[Optional] H. "Voting Power." "Voting power" means the power to vote for the election of directors at the time the determination of voting power is made. It does not include conditional voting power. Where individual members of the board are elected by separate classes of shares, voting power is determined based on the percentage of the total number of authorized directors which the shares in question have the power to elect (Corp. Code § 194.5).

[Optional] I. Court Without Jurisdiction In Futuro. If there has been no valid election to dissolve a corporation pursuant to Corporations Code Section 1900, the court is without jurisdiction to declare terms and conditions of dissolution, or to direct and control dissolution which may take place at some future time (Escondido Mut. Water Co. v. George A. Hillebrecht, Inc. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 410, 415-416, 50 Cal. Rptr. 495).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision on the ground that there has been no valid election by shareholders or by the board of directors to wind up and dissolve. It appears that, after a petition for judicial supervision is filed, the customary procedure followed in giving notice to the corporation, shareholders, and creditors is the issuance by the superior court of an order to show cause setting forth the time and place of hearing of the petition for court supervision [see In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 375, 317 P.2d 1 (court refers to order to show cause procedure without discussion)]. The order to show cause may serve both as a form of notice and also as a citation giving the court personal jurisdiction over the parties served [see Sturm v. Sturm (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 25, 28, 291 P.2d 527] . It would appear that any party so served who opposes the granting of the petition may do so by way of answer, demurrer, or "motion in opposition." This memorandum is designed to accompany such a motion in opposition.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for a petition for winding up under court supervision and an order to show cause see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limits on Jurisdiction

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 was a proceeding on a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a corporation. The trial court issued orders granting the petition and assuming jurisdiction over the proceeding. Shareholders opposing the dissolution appealed, alleging that the trial court had no jurisdiction to undertake supervision of the proceedings. Although the Supreme Court affirmed the orders of the trial court, it stated that the superior court had jurisdiction by virtue of former Corp. Code § 4607 [now see Corp. Code § 1904] only if the corporation was "in the process of voluntary winding up" and that a corporation was in the process of voluntary winding up only if a valid election to wind up had been made pursuant to former Corp. Code § 4600 [now see Corp. Code §§ 1900(a), (b)].

[b] Requirement of Statutory Compliance

Keeler v. Schulte (1957) 47 Cal. 2d 801, 306 P.2d 430 was a representative suit brought by a stockholder on behalf of the San Diego Lodge Number 1, American Section of the Theosophical Society, a California corporation, in which the plaintiff sought to set aside a deed of the lodge property and enjoin the attempted dissolution of the lodge. The action was tried and judgment was entered for defendants. Plaintiff moved for a new trial on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence and it was granted. In his amended complaint, the plaintiff alleged the same general facts and sought additional declaratory relief by way of an accounting and the appointment of a receiver to take charge of the property of the lodge pending disposition of the action. The defendants demurred to the amended complaint on the ground that it failed to state a cause of action because of the plaintiff's failure to join the lodge as a party. The plaintiff refused to join the lodge, apparently on the ground that the lodge had been dissolved as a corporation according to theosophical law. The trial court then granted a motion to dismiss the complaint for failure to state a cause of action because of failure to join the lodge as a party with the result that no judgment could be entered declaring its rights or setting aside the deed. A judgment of dismissal was entered and the plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. It held that a California corporation can only be dissolved in the manner and under the conditions prescribed in the Corporations Code [former Corp. Code §§ 4600-4692; now see Corp. Code §§ 1800-2011] and that the withdrawal of a corporation's charter under ecclesiastical rules of law and order would not work a corporate dissolution in disregard of state law.

[c] Requirement of Election to Dissolve

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 is discussed in § 52.190[3][a].

[d] Court Without Jurisdiction In Futuro

Escondido Mut. Water Co. v. George A. Hillebrecht, Inc. (1966) 241 Cal. App. 2d 410, 50 Cal. Rptr. 495 was an action for declaratory relief by a mutual water company seeking, in part, a judicial declaration of an amendment to its articles of incorporation governing the distribution of corporate assets on dissolution. At the time the action for declaratory relief was brought, the amendment had not been approved by the requisite percentage of corporate shareholders. the trial court entered a judgment declaring the proposed amendment valid if and when it received the required shareholder approval. The court of appeal reversed. It stated that a court cannot direct or control dissolution of a corporation in futuro. A court has jurisdiction over the voluntary winding up and dissolution of acorporation only if the corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up. A corporation is in the process of voluntary winding up only if a valid election to wind up has been made. In effect, the court of appeal held that a court cannot enter judgments having res judicata effect governing the distribution of corporate assets on dissolution before the corporation is in the process of dissolution.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.191

§ 52.191 Opposing Petition for Judicial Supervision of Voluntary Dissolution of Corporation [Corp. Code § 1904]--Election to Dissolve Revoked

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 52.190.]

THE COURTS HAVE NO JURISDICTION TO SUPERVISE THE VOLUNTARY WINDING UP OF A CORPORATION WHERE THE ELECTION TO DISSOLVE THE CORPORATION HAS BEEN REVOKED.

A. Statutory Authority. [See § 52.190, Paragraph A.]

B. Limits of Jurisdiction. If a corporation is not in the process of voluntary winding up, the court has no jurisdiction to entertain a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary winding up (In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 376, 317 P.2d 1).

C. Revocation Terminates Dissolution Process. A corporation is not in the process of voluntary winding up if the election to wind up and dissolve has been revoked (see Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co., Inc. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 350, 279 P.2d 104).

D. Requirements for Revocations. A voluntary election to wind up and dissolve a corporation may be revoked prior to distribution of any assets by _____ [the vote of shareholders holding shares representing a majority of the voting power or by approval by the board if the election to dissolve was by the board pursuant to Corporations Code Section 1900(b)] (Corp. Code § 1902(a)).

[Optional] E. Failure to File with Secretary of State as Not Affecting Validity of Revocation. Failure to file a certificate of revocation of election to dissolve with the Secretary of State as required by statute does not affect the validity of the revocation of the election to dissolve (Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co., Inc. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 351, 279 P.2d 104).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision on the ground that the election to dissolve by shareholders or by the board of directors has been revoked. It would appear that after a petition for judicial supervision is filed, the customary procedure followed in giving notice to the corporation, shareholders, and creditors is the issuance by the superior court of an order to show cause setting forth the time and place of hearing of the petition for court supervision [see In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 375, 317 P.2d 1 (court refers to order to show cause procedure without discussion)]. The order to show cause may serve both as a form of notice and also a citation giving the court personal jurisdiction over the parties served [see Sturm v. Sturm (1955) 138 Cal. App. 2d 25, 28, 291 P.2d 527] . It would appear that any party so served who opposes the granting of the petition may do so by way of answer, demurrer, or "motion in opposition." These points and authorities are designed to accompany such a motion in opposition.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law raised.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for petition for voluntary winding up under court supervision, an order to show cause, and an affirmative defense that the election to wind up was revoked, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 170, Corporations: Dissolution and Winding Up (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limits on Jurisdiction

In re Security Fin. Co. (1957) 49 Cal. 2d 370, 317 P.2d 1 was a proceeding on a petition for judicial supervision of the voluntary dissolution of a corporation. The trial court issued orders granting the petition and assuming jurisdiction over the proceeding. Shareholders opposing the dissolution appealed, alleging that the trial court had no jurisdiction to undertake supervision of the proceedings. Although the Supreme Court affirmed the orders of the trial court, it stated that the superior court had jurisdiction by virtue of former Corp. Code § 4607 [now see Corp. Code § 1904] only if the corporation was "in the process of voluntary winding up."

[b] Revocation Terminates Dissolution Process

Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co., Inc. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 279 P.2d 104 was an action to quiet title to a promissory note and shares of stock. The defendants moved for a change of venue. The superior court denied the motion. The court of appeal reversed. The action had been brought in Madera County. Prior to commencement of the action, the corporate shareholders adopted a resolution ordering the dissolution of the corporation. A few days later, a majority of the shareholders gave their written consent to a revocation of the election to dissolve. No certificate of election to dissolve was filed as required by former Corp. Code § 4606 [now see Corp. Code § 1906(b)]. Subsequently, the articles of incorporation were amended to state that the corporation's principal place of business was in San Mateo, rather than Madera County. After the action was commenced, the defendants moved for a change of venue from Madera to San Mateo County. The plaintiff contended that the election to rescind the dissolution of the corporation was invalid. He also argued that the change of principal place of business was a "mere paper transaction" for the purpose of avoiding jurisdiction in Madera County. The court of appeal disagreed. It stated that there can be no question that, under the terms of former Corp. Code § 4606 [now see Corp. Code § 1902(a)], a majority of the voting power may rescind a resolution of dissolution.

The failure of the corporation to file the certificate of revocation of election to dissolve with the Secretary of State as required by former Corp. Code § 4606 [now see Corp. Code § 1902(b)], did not affect the validity of the revocation of the election to dissolve. The filing provision was enacted for the convenience of the Secretary of State and the public and for the protection of the directors and trustees. Strict compliance with that requirement is not necessary for the valid revocation of an election to dissolve. This is particularly true when there is no showing of injury resulting from failure to comply with the filing requirements. The court of appeal also held that the change of principal place of business of the corporation was properly accomplished. That fact, together with the fact that all other necessary defendants were residents of San Mateo County made that county the proper venue for trial.

[c] Failure to File with Secretary of State as Not Affecting Validity of Revocation.

Herschfelt v. Knowles-Raymond Granite Co., Inc. (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 347, 279 P.2d 104 is discussed in § 52.191[3][b].

151 of 152 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
CHAPTER 52 CORPORATIONS
PART II. FORMS
F. DISSOLUTION OF CORPORATIONS

5-52 California Points & Authorities § 52.192

§ 52.192 Opposing Motion to Approve Intermediate Accounts of Directors [Corp. Code § 1806(d)] and to Determine Claims Against Corporation [Corp. Code § 1806(b)] and Rights of Shareholders to Assets [Corp. Code § 1806(c)]--Objection by Creditor to Claim of Competing Creditor

[1] FORM

[EITHER]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO APPROVE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTS OF
_____ [name],	)	DIRECTORS, AND TO DETERMINE CLAIMS
a Corporation,	)	AGAINST CORPORATION AND RIGHTS OF Defendant.	)	SHAREHOLDERS TO ASSETS
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[OR]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
	)	TO APPROVE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNTS OF
In the Matter of	)	DIRECTORS, AND TO DETERMINE CLAIMS
_____ [name],	)	AGAINST CORPORATION AND RIGHTS OF a Corporation in the Process of Voluntary Winding	)	SHAREHOLDERS TO ASSETS
Up and Dissolution	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[CONTINUE]

WHEN A CORPORATION IS IN THE PROCESS OF _____ [INVOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION or VOLUNTARY DISSOLUTION UNDER COURT SUPERVISION], A CREDITOR WHO OBJECTS TO THE CLAIMS OF ANOTHER CREDITOR TO THE CORPORATE ASSETS ON THE GROUND OF _____ [FAILURE TO PRESENT CLAIM WITHIN THE TIME SPECIFIED BY THE COURT or FAILURE OF A SECURED CREDITOR CLAIMING DEFICIENCY FROM GENERAL ASSETS TO PROVE ENTIRE DEBT WITHIN TIME SPECIFIED BY THE COURT or FAILURE BY A COUNTY CLAIMING PRIORITY STATUS FOR PROPERTY TAX CLAIMS TO PERFECT TAX LIENS TO SUPPORT CLAIM OF PRIORITY or state other grounds barring the other creditor's claim] MAY PRESENT THAT OBJECTION TO THE COURT.

A. Standing of Creditor to Object to Another Creditor's Claim. When a corporation is in the process of dissolution under court supervision, a creditor who objects to the claim of another creditor to the corporate assets may present those objections to the court (In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 434-435, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783).

[Optional] B. Failure to File Claims Bars Claims. All creditors and claimants may be barred from participation in any distribution of the general assets of a corporation in the process of dissolutionif they fail to make and present claims and proofs within such time as the court may direct (Corp. Code § 1807(a)).

[Optional] C. Failure of Secured Creditor to Prove Whole Debt Bars Claim for Deficiency. A secured creditor who fails to present a claim against the corporation for the whole debt owing him/her/it within the time limits set by the court in a dissolution proceeding is barred from any right to claim against the general assets for any deficiency in the amount realized on his security (Corp. Code § 1807(c)).

[Optional] D. Failure to Perfect Personal Property Tax Lien Bars Priority Claim. The claim of a county for unpaid personal property taxes which was not made a lien pursuant to the provisions of Revenue and Taxation Code Sections 2191.3 and 2191.4 prior to the institution of dissolution proceedings, and which is not made a lien during dissolution proceedings through _____ [failure of the county to file a certificate with the county recorder pursuant to Revenue and Taxation Code Section 2191.3 or stay of the perfection of the lien by the court in the dissolution proceeding] has no priority over the claims of unsecured creditors of the corporation which is being dissolved (see In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 442-444, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion in opposition by a creditor claiming against the general assets of a corporation in the process of involuntary dissolution or voluntary dissolution under court supervision. Use of such a motion would be appropriate when: (1) the corporate directors have moved for approval of intermediate accounts of directors, and determination of claims against the corporation and the rights of shareholders to assets; and (2) a general creditor or claimant who failed to present and prove his claim within the time limits set by the court is seeking to participate in the distribution of the corporation's general assets [Paragraph B]; or (3) the corporation is seeking to distribute some of its general assets to a creditor or claimant who failed to present and prove his claims within the time limits set by the court [Paragraph B]; or (4) a secured creditor who failed to prove the whole debt owed by the corporation within the time limits set by the court is seeking to recover from the corporation's general assets the deficiency in the amount realized on his security [Paragraph C]; or (5) a county claims priority for unpaid personal property taxes on corporate assets, but has not perfected a tax lien pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code §§ 2191.3-2191.4 [Paragraph D]. Of course, the circumstances under which one creditor might object to the claims of other creditors to corporate assets are numerous. The above circumstances in which a motion in opposition would be appropriate are intended to be illustrative, rather than definitive.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standing of Creditor to Object to Another Creditor's Claim

In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 was a proceeding for voluntary dissolution of a corporation under court supervision. The corporation sought court approval of a preliminary accounting and of the board of directors' action in approving the claims of creditors. One of the firm's major creditors (CIT) filed objections to the preliminary accounting, challenging the claim of another major creditor (A-C) to priority. A hearing was held and the trial court issued an order determining the validity and priority of claims against the corporation. The court of appeal modified the order in part and affirmed it in part. In reaching its determination regarding claims against the corporation, the trial court ruled in accordance with CIT's argument that A-C's failure to comply with inventory financing laws deprived it of its alleged priority status. On appeal, A-C contended in part that the trial court exceeded its jurisdiction by entertaining and accepting the objections of CIT to A-C's claim. The court of appeal disagreed. The court stated that former Corp. Code § 4608 [now see Corp. Code § 1807] conferred on the court authority to require the presentation and proof of all claims and demands against the corporation and that former Corp. Code § 4607 [now see Corp. Code § 1904] gave the court authority to make orders as to any and all matters concerning the winding up of the affairs of the corporation. The court of appeal stated that the trial court would be unable to perform these functions if it could not determine the validity of a claim and its relationship or priority as to other claims. Therefore, the trial court had jurisdiction to entertain the objections of one creditor to the claims made by another.

[b] Failure to Perfect Personal Property Tax Lien Bars Priority Claim

In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 is discussed in § 52.192[3][a]. In that case, the corporation which was in the process of dissolution owed several years arrearages of personal property taxes to Humboldt County where the corporate business premises were located. The county had not acquired liens on the corporate assets for all of the back taxes at the time the dissolution proceeding commenced. However, it acquired such liens by filing certificates with the county recorder pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 2191.3 during the pendency of the dissolution proceeding. The trial court's order accorded the county priority status as to only a small portion of the total taxes due. The county appealed. The court of appeal modified the order of the trial court so as to give the county priority for its entire claim for back taxes. The court stated that no statute prohibits the attachment of a tax lien by the filing of a certificate pursuant to Rev. & Tax. Code § 2191.3 after dissolution proceedings have commenced. Although it was probably within the power of the trial court to stay the perfection of the liens pursuant to former Corp. Code § 4616 [now see Corp. Code § 1806(h)], the court failed to do so. Therefore, the liens were perfected and the claim of the county had priority over the unsecured creditors.

The court of appeal therefore found it unnecessary to rule on the county's claim that taxes are not ordinary debts and are therefore inherently entitled to priority. However, it did state that unpaid taxes which are not a lien when dissolution proceedings commence are generally not a priority, and, further, that personal property tax claims do not have priority as "costs of administration" of a dissolution. Therefore, it would appear that the Trinity Tractor case is authority for the proposition that if personal property tax liens are not perfected before or during dissolution proceedings, then the underlying tax claims have only the priority of any other unsecured claim against the corporation.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 5 Chapters 50-59 CONTRACTS---to---CORPORATIONS
Chapters 53through 59 RESERVED

5-53 California Points & Authorities Chapters 53through 59

RESERVED

Chapters 53RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS

6-60 California Points & Authorities 60.syn

§ 60.syn Synopsis to Chapter 60: COSTS

§ 60.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 60.02 Governing Law

§ 60.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 60.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points And Authorities Chapters

§§ 60.05-60.09 [Reserved]

§ 60.10 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Strike

§ 60.11 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Judgment Does Not Carry Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Does Not Carry Costs

§ 60.12 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--No Judgment in Favor of Party Filing Memorandum of Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Memo Must Be Stricken If No Judgment Has Been Entered

[b] Defendant Who Was Voluntarily Dismissed Must Secure Entry of Order or Judgment of Dismissal In Order to Qualify as Prevailing Party

[c] Party Whose Recovery Was Completely Offset by Settlement Is Not "Prevailing Party."

§ 60.13 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Untimely Filed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs Memorandum Filed Late

§ 60.14 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Not Verified

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Memorandum of Costs Not Verified

§ 60.15 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs

§ 60.16 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Prevailing Party Not Entitled to Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Due to Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment

[b] Postoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Excluded From Judgment

§ 60.17 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Was Unilaterally Withdrawn Before Expiration of Statutory Period for Acceptance or Rejection

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Withdrawal of § 998 Offer Before Expiration of Period for Acceptance or Rejection

[b] Withdrawn Offer Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Revives Last Rejected Offer

§§ 60.18-60.39 [Reserved]

§ 60.40 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Tax Costs

[b] Right to Costs Are Statutory

[c] Strict Construction of Costs Statutes

§ 60.41 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Reduce Amount as Excessive

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amounts Claimed Are Required to Be Reasonable

[b] Motion to Reduce Amount of Item

§ 60.42 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike or Reduce Amount Claimed for Fee of Expert Witness

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Fee of Expert Witness Who Was Not Ordered by Court

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 60.43 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Daily Transcripts Not Ordered by Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Non-Court-Ordered Transcript Not Allowable

[b] Daily Transcripts

§ 60.44 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Allowable as Costs Except When Expressly Authorized by Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Item Claimed Not Allowable as Costs

§ 60.45 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Items of Cost Must Have Been Reasonably Necessary

[b] Necessity of Costs Is Question of Fact

[c] Burden When Item Appears Improper on Its Face

[d] Burden When Objecting to Item Proper on Its Face

§ 60.46 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Unnecessary Deposition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Cost of Unnecessary Deposition

[b] Deponent's Testimony Relevant But Not Necessary

§ 60.47 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Unnecessary Surety Bond Premium

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Premium on Unnecessary Surety Bond

§ 60.48 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Interest Paid on Amount Borrowed to Post Cash Deposit in Lieu of Surety Bond

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest on Cash Deposited in Lieu of Surety Bond

§ 60.49 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Prior Trial That Resulted in Mistrial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Prior Trial

§ 60.50 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Cost of Exhibits Prepared by Party Introducing Them

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhibits Prepared for Trial

§ 60.51 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Attorney's Fee Not Authorized by Contract or Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule Regarding Attorney's Fees

[b] Attorney's Fees Are Not Generally Recoverable as Costs

[c] Striking Claim for Attorney's Fees

§ 60.52 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Local Travel Expenses Not Incurred to Attend Depositions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Local Travel Expenses Not Needed for Deposition Attendance Are Not Allowable Costs

§ 60.53 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Deposition-Related Attorney Meal Expenses

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deposition-Related Attorney Meals Are Not Allowable Costs

§ 60.54 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Exhibits Not Used at Trial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhibits Not Used at Trial Are Not Allowable Costs

[b] Exhibits Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation

§ 60.55 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Fax Charges

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fax Charges Are Not Allowable Costs

§ 60.56 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Computer Legal Research Charges

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Computer Legal Research Charges Are Not Allowable Costs

§§ 60.57-60.69 [Reserved]

§ 60.70 Opposing Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--Motion Untimely

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Motion to Tax

[b] Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs as Waiver of Objections

§§ 60.71-60.79 [Reserved]

§ 60.80 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Costs Allowed to Prevailing Party as Matter of Right

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party's Right to Costs

[b] "Prevailing Party" Defined

[c] "Complaint," "Defendant," and "Plaintiff" Defined

[d] Costs Not Available Only if Expressly Disallowed by Statute

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Prevailing Party" Defined

[b] Costs Not Available Only If Expressly Disallowed by Statute

§ 60.81 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Express Award of Costs Not Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Express Award of Costs Not Required

§ 60.82 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention

§ 60.83 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff From Recovering Preoffer Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Who Reject More Favorable Settlement Offer Remains Entitled to Preoffer Costs

§ 60.84 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff's Costs When Judgment Plus Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Fees Exceed Defendant's Settlement Offer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Added to Judgment When Determining Whether Judgment Is More Favorable Than Defendant's Settlement Offer

§ 60.84A Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Plaintiff Recovered More Than Amount Offered by Defendant for Purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 by Taking Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of Time § 998 Offer Was Outstanding, But Not Considering Settlements Not Yet Reached

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Recovery for the Purposes of Determining Whether the Cost-Shifting Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Apply Takes Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of the Time of Defendant's Offer, But Not Other Settlements Not Yet Reached

§ 60.85 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant Is Entitled to Postoffer Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, Including Postoffer Attorney's Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Defendant Is Treated as Prevailing Party for Purposes of Postoffer Costs

[b] Judgment More Favorable Than Offer Is Prima Facie Evidence of Reasonableness

[c] Defendant's Postoffer Costs Include Postoffer Attorney's Fees

§ 60.86 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Not Effective to Shift Costs to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§§ 60.87-60.89 [Reserved]

§ 60.90 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--All Claimed Items Are Expressly Authorized by Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party's Right to Costs

[b] Allowable Costs

[i] Filing Fees

[ii] Motion Fees

[iii] Jury Fees

[iv] Juror Food and Lodging

[v] Deposition Costs

[vi] Service of Process Costs

[vii] Attachment Costs

[viii] Premiums on Bonds

[ix] Witness Fees

[x] Expert Witness Fees

[xi] Transcripts

[xii] Attorney's Fees

[xiii] Reporter Fees

[xiv] Models and Blowups of Exhibits

[xv] Photocopies of Exhibits

[xvi] Items Required by Statute

§§ 60.91-60.99 [Reserved]

§ 60.100 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Verified Memorandum Is Prima Facie Evidence of Necessity

[b] Discretion of Court to Allow Items as Costs

[c] Reason for Court's Discretion

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Items as Costs

§ 60.101 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Referee Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Referee Fees

§ 60.102 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Prior Trials

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Prior Trials

§ 60.103 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Special Master Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Master Fees

§ 60.104 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Arbitrator's Award

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Award

§ 60.105 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation

§§ 60.106-60.119 [Reserved]

§ 60.120 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to File Cost Bill

[b] Time Requirement Not Jurisdictional

[c] Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

[d] Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to Failure to File Cost Bill

[e] Broad Discretion of Court in Absence of Prejudice to Adverse Party

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Time Requirement Not Jurisdictional

[b] Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to Failure to File Cost Bill

[c] Broad Discretion of Court in Absence of Prejudice to Adverse Party

§ 60.121 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

§ 60.122 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Timely Deposit in Mail

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Timely Deposit in Mail

§ 60.123 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Press of Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Press of Business

§ 60.124 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment

§§ 60.125-60.139 [Reserved]

§ 60.140 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to File Notice of Motion to Tax Costs

[b] Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

[c] Relief From Failure to Timely File Motion to Tax Costs

[d] Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relief From Failure to Timely File Motion to Tax Costs

§§ 60.141-60.149 [Reserved]

§ 60.150 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof

[b] Showing Required

§ 60.151 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Press of Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Press of Business

§ 60.152 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Denial for Prejudice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial for Prejudice

§§ 60.153-60.159 [Reserved]

§ 60.160 Supporting Motion to Amend Memorandum of Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Amendment

[b] Amending Cost Bill

§§ 60.161-60.299 [Reserved]

§ 60.300 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Equitable Exceptions

[c] Common Fund Theory

[d] Rationale for Common Fund Exception

[e] Amount of Fees

§ 60.301 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award in Class Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award in Class Action

§ 60.302 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

§ 60.303 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association

§ 60.304 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award Directly to Attorney

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Directly to Attorney

§§ 60.305-60.319 [Reserved]

§ 60.320 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Rationale for Common Fund Exception

§ 60.321 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Identifiable Fund Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Identifiable Fund Required

§ 60.322 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Litigation Success Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Success Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Litigation Success Required

§ 60.323 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Interests Adverse to Fund

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interests Adverse to Fund

§ 60.324 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Primary Beneficiary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Primary Beneficiary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Primary Beneficiary

§ 60.325 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel

§ 60.326 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor

§§ 60.327-60.339 [Reserved]

§ 60.340 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Equitable Exceptions

[c] Substantial Benefit Theory

[d] Requirements for Application of Doctrine

[e] Amount of Fees

[f] Award Directly to Attorney

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Substantial Benefit Theory

§ 60.341 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Benefit to Defendant Not Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Benefit to Defendant Not Required

§ 60.342 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Action Saving Public Funds

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Saving Public Funds

§ 60.343 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Environmental Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Environmental Litigation

§§ 60.344-60.359 [Reserved]

§ 60.360 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Substantial Benefit Exception

[c] Actual and Concrete Benefits Necessary

[d] Litigation Success Required

[e] No Award Where Interest Adverse

§ 60.361 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit

§ 60.362 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Theory--In Catalyst Case, Plaintiff Must Have Made Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter Short of Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Must Have Made Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter

§§ 60.363-60.369 [Reserved]

§ 60.370 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

[c] Private Attorney General Theory

[d] Federal Law as Guide to Interpretation

[e] Significant Benefit

[f] Necessity and Financial Burden

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Theory

[b] Significant Benefit

[c] Necessity and Financial Burden

§ 60.371 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Enforcement of Existing Right

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Existing Rights

§ 60.372 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Suits Between Private Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suits Between Private Parties

§ 60.373 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees Sought Against Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees Sought Against Court

§ 60.374 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Good-Faith Exception

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Good-Faith Exception

§ 60.375 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

§ 60.376 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party

§ 60.377 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought

§ 60.378 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Private Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Is Private Party

§ 60.379 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution

§ 60.380 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

§ 60.381 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Public Entity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Is Public Entity

§ 60.382 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Entitlement to Amount Requested

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees to Establish Fee Claim

[b] Fee Is Based on Application of Multiplier to Lodestar Figure

[c] Factors on Which Multiplier Is Based

[d] Trial Court's Discretion in Applying Multiplier

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trial Court's Discretion in Applying Multiplier

§ 60.383 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 60.384 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

§ 60.385 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims

§ 60.386 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action

§ 60.387 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Reduction in Amount for Pursuit of Unsuccessful Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Reduction in Amount for Pursuit of Unsuccessful Claims

§ 60.388 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees

§ 60.389 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Need Not Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§§ 60.390-60.399 [Reserved]

§ 60.400 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

[b] Factors Necessary for Right to Fees

[c] Causal Connection Between Lawsuit and Relief Required

[d] Under Catalyst Theory, Plaintiff Must Show Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter Short of Litigation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Factors Necessary for Right to Fees

[b] Causal Connection Between Lawsuit and Relief Required

§ 60.401 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Apportionment of Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Apportionment of Fees

§ 60.402 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions

§ 60.403 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

§ 60.404 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

[b] Measure of Personal Stake

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

§ 60.405 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--First Amendment Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Amendment Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal

§ 60.406 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party

§ 60.406A Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory-Attorney General Cannot Recover Fees When Acting on Behalf of State

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney General Cannot Recover Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 When Acting on Behalf of State

§ 60.407 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful

§ 60.408 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fees Sought Was Not Opposing Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Opposing Party Within Meaning of Statute

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Opposing Party Within Meaning of Statute

§ 60.409 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fee Award Sought Is Not Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Intended to Be Imposed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Are Intended to Be Imposed Under Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5

§ 60.410 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Fee Award When Party Recovers Judgment That Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees Must Not Have Recovered Judgment That Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

§§ 60.411-60.439 [Reserved]

§ 60.440 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract

[b] Party Obtaining Unqualified Favorable Decision Has Right to Attorney's Fees as a Matter of Law

[c] Party Prevailing on Contract Is Determined by Court

[d] Party Prevailing on Contract Generally Is Party Who Recovered Greater Relief

[e] Employer of In-House Counsel May Recover Fees as Prevailing Party

[f] Attorney Represented by Other Members of Law Firm May Recover Attorney Fees

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract

[b] Party Prevailing on Contract Determined by Court

§ 60.441 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract

§ 60.442 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--No Waiver of Fees Allowed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Waiver of Fees Allowed

§ 60.443 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

§ 60.444 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 60.445 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360

§ 60.446 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

[b] Losing Party Not Signatory to Contract

§ 60.447 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees Recoverable Although Contract Unenforceable

§ 60.448 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Rescinded or Canceled

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission or Cancellation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission or Cancellation

§ 60.449 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Enforcement of Rescission of Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Performance of Rescission Agreement

§ 60.450 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal After Determination on the Merits

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees After Determination Made on the Merits

§ 60.451 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal of Noncontractual Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Voluntary Dismissal Does Not Preclude Recovery of Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending Noncontractual Claims

§ 60.452 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Court Has Discretion to Declare Prevailing Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Has Discretion to Declare Prevailing Party

§ 60.453 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Pro Se Attorney Entitled to Reimbursement for Attorney's Fees Incurred for Assistance by Other Counsel

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§ 60.454 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Determination of Arbitration Under Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

§§ 60.455-60.459 [Reserved]

§ 60.460 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Not Entitled to Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717

§ 60.461 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Prevailing Parties Not Necessarily Determined by Final Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Parties Not Necessarily Determined by Final Judgment

§ 60.462 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Final Disposition Required Before Party Can Prevail

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Final Disposition Required Before Party Can Prevail

§ 60.463 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--No Prevailing Party After Dismissal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Prevailing Party After Dismissal

§ 60.464 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--No Recovery of Attorney's Fees When Contract Void Because It Violates Public Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Recovery of Attorney's Fees When Contract Void Because It Violates Public Policy

§ 60.465 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Failure to File Timely, Noticed Motion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to File Motion for Attorney's Fees

[b] Timely Motion for Attorney's Fees Required

[c] Disregard of Procedural Deficiency Inconsistent With Legislative Intent

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Timely Motion for Attorney's Fees Required

§ 60.466 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Discretion of Trial Court Not to Declare a Prevailing Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Trial Court Not to Declare Prevailing Party

[b] Court May Consider Evidence at Trial

§ 60.467 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney or Party Acting in Propria Persona Is Not Entitled to Award of Fees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney or Other Party Acting in Propria Persona Is Not Entitled to an Award of Attorney's Fees

§ 60.468 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney's Fees Provision in Indemnification Clause Cannot Be Basis for Fee Award Under Civ. Code § 1717

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Indemnification Clause Cannot Be Basis for Attorney's Fees Award Under Civ. Code § 1717

§ 60.469 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney's Fee Provision Not Enforceable Against Nonsignatory

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§ 60.470 Opposing Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civil Code § 1717--Condition Precedent to Recovery of Fees Not Performed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§§ 60.471-60.479 [Reserved]

§ 60.480 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract

[b] When Attorney's Fees Are Fixed

[c] Discretion of Trial Court in Determining Reasonable Attorney's Fees

[d] Discretion of Trial Court to Fix Fees Is Not Limited by Local Court Rule

[e] Discretion of Trial Court to Fix Fees Is Not Limited by Amount of Damages Awarded

§ 60.481 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--When Fees Need Not Be Apportioned Between Contract Cause of Action and Other Causes of Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Fees Need Not Be Apportioned Between Contract Cause of Action and Other Causes of Action

§ 60.481A Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Fees Need Not Be Allocated When Representing Multiple Parties If Liability of Parties Is So Factually Interrelated That Allocation Would Be Impossible

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees Need Not Be Allocated Between Multiple Parties When Allocation Is Impossible

§ 60.482 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Lodestar Method of Computing Attorney's Fees Applies

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lodestar Method of Computing Attorney's Fees Applies

§ 60.483 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Reimbursement of Attorney's Out-of-Pocket Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reimbursement of Attorney's Out-of-Pocket Costs

§ 60.484 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Interest on Attorney's Fees Is Available

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest on Attorney's Fees Is Available

§ 60.485 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Deduction of Award of Fees From Damages Awarded in Favor of Party Not Prevailing on Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deduction of Award of Fees From Damages Awarded in Favor of Party Not Prevailing on Contract

§ 60.486 Supporting Motion to Fix Amount of Fees Recoverable in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Interaction Between Fees Recoverable Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 and Civ. Code § 1717

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court May Fix and Award Attorney's Fees Incurred After More Favorable Settlement Offer Was Made

§§ 60.487-60.549 [Reserved]

§ 60.550 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Due to Excessive Amount Requested--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Trial Court

[b] Fundamental Determination in Setting Fee

[c] Other Factors

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Trial Court

§ 60.551 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Due to Excessive Amount Requested--Amount Requested for Attorney's Fees Must Be Supported by Evidence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award of Attorney's Fees Must Be Supported by Evidence

§ 60.552 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Based on Attorney's Fees as Loss in Indemnity Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award of Attorney's Fees Not Available If Based on a Loss Subject to an Indemnity Agreement

§§ 60.553-60.599 [Reserved]

§ 60.600 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Security

[b] Order for Security

[c] "Security" Defined

§ 60.601 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Vexatious Litigant Who Has Filed Five Suits in Propria Persona

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vexatious Litigant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(1)

§ 60.602 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Vexatious Litigant Who Repeatedly Relitigates in Propria Persona

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vexatious Litigant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(2)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Vexatious Litigant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(2)

§ 60.603 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Vexatious Litigant Who Repeatedly Files Unmeritorious Moving Papers, Discovery, or Other Tactics in Propria Persona

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vexatious Litigant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(3)

§ 60.604 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Vexatious Litigant Who Was Previously Declared to Be a Vexatious Litigant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vexatious Litigant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 391(b)(4)

§ 60.605 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Application of Vexatious Litigant Statutes When Plaintiff Is Currently Represented by Counsel

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Vexatious Litigant Statutes When Plaintiff Is Currently Represented by Counsel

§ 60.606 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Judicial Notice of Prior Proceedings

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judicial Notice of Prior Proceedings

§§ 60.607-60.619 [Reserved]

§ 60.620 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or Foreign Corporation--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or Foreign Corporation and Defendant Will Likely Prevail in Action

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 1030 Is Constitutional as Applied to Nonresident Individuals and Foreign Corporations

§ 60.621 Supporting Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or Foreign Corporation--Uncontroverted Declaration of Nonresidency as Sufficient Evidence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Uncontroverted Declaration of Nonresidency as Sufficient Evidence

§§ 60.622-60.629 [Reserved]

§ 60.630 Opposing Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden on Motion

[b] Showing Required

§ 60.631 Opposing Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Conclusory Affidavit Insufficient

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Conclusory Affidavit Insufficient

§ 60.632 Opposing Motion for Security for Costs Alleging Plaintiff Is Vexatious Litigant--Previous Litigation Not Finally Determined

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Previous Litigation Not Finally Determined

§§ 60.633-60.639 [Reserved]

§ 60.640 Opposing Motion for Security for Costs When Plaintiff Is Indigent--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden on Motion

[b] Relief for Indigent Plaintiffs

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relief for Indigent Plaintiffs

§ 60.641 Opposing Motion for Security for Costs When Cross-Complainant Is Non-Resident Individual or Foreign Corporation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden on Motion

[b] Non-Resident Individual or Foreign Corporation Cross-Complainants

§§ 60.642-60.649 [Reserved]

§ 60.650 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Post Security When Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or

Foreign Corporation--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action or Proceeding Should Be Dismissed for Failure to Post Security

§ 60.651 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Post Security When Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or Foreign Corporation--Code Civ. Proc. § 1030 Is Constitutional as Applied to Nonresident Individuals and Foreign Corporations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Code Civ. Proc. § 1030 Is Constitutional as Applied to Nonresident Individuals and Foreign Corporations

§ 60.652 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Post Security When Plaintiff Is Nonresident Individual or Foreign Corporation--Court May Shorten Time for Compliance With Order for Security on Showing of Good Cause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court May Shorten Time for Compliance With Order for Security on Showing of Good Cause

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.01

§ 60.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda relating to the recovery of costs in a civil action, or the imposition of security for costs.

Part II, Subpart A, relating to the recovery of costs generally, includes the following types of forms:

- Supporting motions to strike a memorandum of costs (§ 60.10 et seq.).
- Supporting motions to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items (§ 60.40 et seq.).
- Opposing motions to strike a memorandum of costs or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items (§ 60.80 et seq.).
- Supporting and opposing motions for relief from failure to file a timely memorandum of costs or motion relating to costs, based on mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (§ 60.120 et seq.).
- Supporting and opposing motions to amend a memorandum of costs (§ 60.160 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart B, relating to the recovery of attorney's fees as an item of costs when expressly permitted by statute, law, or contract, includes the following types of forms:

- Supporting and opposing an award of attorney's fees under the common fund exception (§ 60.300 et seq.).
- Supporting and opposing an award of attorney's fees under the substantial benefit exception (§ 60.340 et seq.)
- Supporting and opposing an award of attorney's fees under the private attorney general exception (§ 60.370 et seq.).

- Supporting and opposing an award of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, as the prevailing party in an action on a contract providing for the recovery of attorney's fees (§ 60.440 et seq.).

- Opposing any of these types of awards of attorney's fees on the ground that the fees are excessive (§ 60.550 et seq.).

Part II, Subpart C, relates to the imposition of security for costs when a plaintiff is a vexatious litigant or a nonresident individual or alien corporation, and includes the following types of forms:

- Supporting and opposing motions for the imposition of security for costs and motions to dismiss for failure to post security for costs (§ 60.600 et seq.).

For memoranda that may be submitted when a party is seeking to recover reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, as a sanction, see Ch. 207, Sanctions . For memoranda relating to the recovery of attorney's fees from a client under an agreement for such fees, as distinguished from their recovery from an opposing party as an item of costs, see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to StrikeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFeesCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.02

§ 60.02 Governing Law

Prejudgment costs in civil actions and proceedings are governed generally by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1021-1038 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1700 et seq.

In addition, there are many other statutes relating to the grant or denial of costs in specific actions or proceedings or under specific circumstances [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 998 (failure to obtain more favorable judgment or award after rejection of pretrial or pre-arbitration settlement offer), 1141.21 (award of costs and fees on failure to secure more favorable judgment on trial de novo after arbitration award), and 1268.710, 1268.720 (costs in eminent domain proceedings); Prob. Code § 1002 (costs in probate proceedings)].

Memoranda of costs and motions to tax costs are governed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700. Extensions of time within which to serve and file a memorandum of costs or motion to tax costs are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1054 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(3) [see Cardinal Health 301, Inc. v. Tyco Electronics Corp. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 116, 155, 87 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 (party need not expressly request extension); Davis Lumber Co. v. Hubbell (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 148, 151, 290 P.2d 33].

Motions to amend proceedings (which would include a memorandum of costs) and relief from proceedings taken by mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (which would include a failure to timely file a memorandum of costs or a notice of motion to strike or tax costs) are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(1), (b), respectively.

Costs on appeal are governed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278.

Costs of enforcing judgments are governed generally by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.040-685.110.

Attorney's fees recoverable from an opposing party are generally governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10), (c)(5). Motions under the private attorney general theory for attorney's fees in actions resulting in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest are provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The award of attorney's fees to a prevailing party in an action based on a contract is governed by Civ. Code § 1717. The award of attorney's fees to a prevailing party in a contract action based on a book account, as defined by Code Civ.

Proc. § 337a, and entered into on or after January 1, 1987, is governed by Civ. Code § 1717.5. Courts have the power to award reasonable expenses and attorney's fees in contempt proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 1218].

A number of other statutes require attorneys to pay reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, of the opposing party as a sanction for frivolous actions, delaying tactics, or other misconduct in litigation [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 128.5, 128.7]. For memoranda that may be submitted when a party is seeking to recover reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, as a sanction, see Ch. 207, Sanctions .

The procedure for obtaining an award of attorney's fees authorized by statute, as therefore allowable as an item of costs of suit, is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032-1034 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700. The time for filing a notice of motion for an award of attorney's fees as costs under Civ. Code § 1717 is governed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702.

NOTE:

Decisions Under Prior Law Persuasive Rather Than Controlling. Extensive amendments in statutes and adoption of rules affecting costs were made effective January 1, 1987 [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1021-1038; former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 26(d), 135, 870-870.4 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.278(c), 8.764, 3.1700 et seq.)]. In many instances these changes continued or codified existing law. Decisions construing prior law thus are sometimes cited as persuasive, rather than controlling, authority to the extent that they are consistent with current provisions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentExcusable Neglect & MistakesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesAttorney Expenses & FeesStatutory AwardsCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesCostsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsCosts & Attorney Fees

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.03

§ 60.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting memoranda (other than those in a summary judgment proceeding) must not exceed 15 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, tables of contents or authorities, or the proof of service are not included in the page limitation. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of courts or authorities, or the proof of service [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with others to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.04

§ 60.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background discussion, research guides, procedural checklists, and practice forms of motions and other papers relating to the recovery of costs and attorney's fees in the trial court and to obtaining security for costs and attorney's fees, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

Other related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice include the following:

- Ch. 53, Appeal: Remittitur and Costs on Appeal (recovery of costs on appeal).
- Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics (recovery of attorney's fees from client as distinguished form recovery from opposing party as item of costs).
- Ch. 510, Sanctions (recovery of reasonable expenses including attorney's fees under statutes providing for the imposition of sanctions).

[2] Related Points And Authorities Chapters

- For recovery of reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, as a sanction, see Ch. 207, Sanctions .
- For recovery of attorney's fees in a shareholder's derivative action, see Ch. 52, Corporations .
- For recovery of attorney's fees from a client under a fee agreement (as distinguished from recovery from an opposing party as an item of costs), see Ch. 25, Attorney's Fees .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureClass ActionsClass CounselFeesCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentAdditurs & RemittitursRemittitursCivil ProcedureRemediesCosts & Attorney FeesGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSanctionsMisconduct & Unethical BehaviorGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureAppealsCosts & Attorney FeesLegal EthicsClient RelationsAttorney FeesFee Agreements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.05-60.09

[Reserved]

§§ 60.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.10

§ 60.10 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	STRIKE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS HEREIN FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN ON THIS TIMELY MOTION TO STRIKE.

Motion to Strike. A motion to strike a memorandum of costs may be served and filed 15 days after the memorandum was served, or, if the memorandum was served by mail, within the extended time authorized by Section 1013 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate; see, e.g., § 60.11 et seq.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground its filing was not authorized by law. It should be combined with any of the forms set forth in §§ 60.11 -60.29 that are applicable to the particular case.

A moving party who is also dissatisfied with particular items of costs should combine the motion to strike the entire cost bill with a motion either to strike specific items of cost or to reduce the amounts claimed for specific items or both to strike specific items and reduce the amount of costs claimed for other items [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), (2)]. Then, if the motion to strike the entire cost bill is denied, the moving party will have preserved his or her objections to the particular items by having filed them within the prescribed time. Memoranda in support of motions to strike particular cost items or to tax costs by reducing particular items are set out in § 60.40 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

It is advisable for counsel also to submit cognizable evidence in support of factual statements, by request for judicial notice (e.g., when a court must order the event for which costs are claimed and no order was issued) [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], or otherwise by affidavits or declarations. Although some cases hold that affidavits or declarations are not required, counsel must make some type of factual showing supporting the motion to strike the entire memorandum of costs [see Senior v. Anderson (1900) 130 Cal. 290, 300, 62 P. 563 ; Melnyk v. Robledo (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 624, 134 Cal. Rptr. 602] . Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits "upon a motion"), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms of notices of motion to strike a cost bill or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, with forms of supporting declarations and orders granting the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For additional memoranda to combine with this form, see § 60.11 et seq. and § 60.40 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda in § 60.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the memoranda set out in this general form (as well as the memoranda designed to be combined with this form, set out in § 60.11 et seq.).

If the notice of motion to strike or tax costs supported by this form is not filed within the time prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), the memoranda set out in § 60.70 may be used to oppose the motion. When the ground of objection to the memorandum of costs is that it was not timely filed, counsel may be met by a countermotion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) [see §§ 60.120 -60.139]. In this event, counsel may use the memorandum set out in §§ 60.150 -60.159 to oppose the countermotion.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Strike

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), provides that a motion to strike a memorandum of costs may be served and filed 15 days after the memorandum was served, or, if the memorandum was served by mail, within the extended time authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1013.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.11

§ 60.11 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Judgment Does Not Carry Costs

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Judgment Does Not Carry Costs

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS HEREIN FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THE JUDGMENT ENTERED DOES NOT CARRY COSTS.

Judgment Does Not Carry Costs. A memorandum of costs filed against a party on a judgment which does not carry costs is to be stricken on motion as a matter of course (Kaufman v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 761, 769, 56 P.2d 504 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(d); now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033); Estate of McCormack (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 492, 499-500, 82 Cal. Rptr. 651).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that the judgment entered does not carry costs. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.12 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Does Not Carry Costs

In Kaufman v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 761, 56 P.2d 504 , plaintiff sued a realty company and its president for damages for fraud, and sued the surety on the real estate broker's statutory bond. Judgment was rendered against the surety. The judgment was for $2,000 and expressly provided that it should be without costs under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033), which at that time provided that plaintiff may not recover costs when the judgment is one which could be rendered by a municipal or inferior court. The surety appealed from both the judgment and an order denying its motion to strike plaintiff 's memorandum of costs. The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment against the surety but reversed the order denying the motion to strike the memorandum of costs. Citing Gould v. Moss (1910) 158 Cal. 548, 549, 111 P. 925 , the Court held that when a court "may" award costs and the judgment which does not carry costs has become final, a defendant cannot be held for costs, and a memorandum of costs filed against such a defendant will be ordered stricken on motion (5 Cal. 2d, 761, 769) .

Estate of McCormack (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 492, 82 Cal. Rptr. 651 , involved an appeal from an order instructing a trustee to distribute or deliver the corpus of a trust to respondent. One of the grounds of the appeal was that the probate court's order that appellant pay respondent's costs was erroneous because the probate court did not include costs in its Memorandum of Decision or Order Instructing Trustee. The court of appeal stated that costs in a probate proceeding are not awarded to the prevailing party as a matter of right but are within the discretion of the court and must be provided for in the judgment or order [see Prob. Code § 1002]. Citing Kaufman v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 761, 769, 56 P.2d 504 (discussed above), and Gould v. Moss (1910) 158 Cal. 548, 549, 111 P. 925 , the court said that if a judgment (which does not carry costs automatically) does not contain a provision for costs, it is futile to file a memorandum of costs (2 Cal. App. 3d 492, 499) . Quoting Kaufman, the court added that when a judgment which does not carry costs has become final, whether correct or not, a defendant cannot be held for costs. A memorandum of costs filed against such defendant will be ordered stricken on motion, and even though no proper motion to strike is made, it must be disregarded. Because the court's order instructing the trustee did not provide for costs, and the court's order denying the motion to strike the memorandum of costs and ordering appellant to pay costs was rendered after the notice of appeal was filed, the order was in excess of the probate court's jurisdiction and was void (2 Cal. App. 3d 492, 500) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.12

§ 60.12 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--No Judgment in Favor of Party Filing Memorandum of Costs

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--No Judgment in Favor of Party Filing Memorandum of Costs

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS HEREIN FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE NO JUDGMENT HAS BEEN ENTERED CARRYING COSTS.

A. Memo Must Be Stricken If No Judgment Has Been Entered. A memorandum of costs and disbursements should be stricken when no judgment has ever been entered in favor of the party who filed the memorandum (Gonzalez v. Derrington (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 130, 134, 14 Cal. Rptr. 1, 363 P.2d 1 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)).

B. Defendant Who Was Voluntarily Dismissed Must Secure Entry of Order or Judgment of Dismissal In Order to Qualify as Prevailing Party. To be a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), which provides that a "prevailing party" includes "defendant in whose favor a dismissal is entered," a defendant who has been voluntarily dismissed from the plaintiff's complaint must secure entry of the order or judgment of dismissal (Boonyarit v. Payless Shoesource, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1192-1193, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 241 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)).

C. Party Whose Recovery Was Completely Offset by Settlement Is Not "Prevailing Party." A plaintiff who obtains a verdict against a defendant that is offset to zero by settlements with other defendants is not a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) (Goodman v. Lozano (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1327, 1334-1335, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 219, 223 P.3d 77).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that no judgment was entered carrying costs. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms set out in § 60.11 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c] for reference to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Memo Must Be Stricken If No Judgment Has Been Entered

In Gonzalez v. Derrington (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 130, 14 Cal. Rptr. 1, 363 P.2d 1 , the Supreme Court affirmed judgments for defendant oil company notwithstanding the verdict in consolidated actions for damages for personal injuries and wrongful death arising from an explosion and fire. Two of the plaintiffs appealed from the trial court's order granting the motions of three of the defendants to strike the memorandum of costs filed by plaintiffs. The trial court had set aside the verdict in favor of the plaintiffs as to one defendant and had granted motions for new trials brought by two other defendants. Because no judgment was ever entered in favor of the plaintiffs who appealed, the court of appeal held that the trial court properly granted the motion to strike plaintiffs' memorandum of costs (56 Cal. 2d 130, 134) .

[b] Defendant Who Was Voluntarily Dismissed Must Secure Entry of Order or Judgment of Dismissal In Order to Qualify as Prevailing Party

In Boonyarit v. Payless Shoesource, Inc. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 241 , plaintiff filed a slip and fall case against the owner of the shopping center parking lot where the accident occurred, and 16 tenants whose businesses used the lot. Plaintiff subsequently filed an amended complaint that deleted six of the tenants, and thereafter attempted to file a request for voluntary dismissal without prejudice as to those defendants under Code Civ. Proc. § 581. Plaintiff used the applicable Judicial Council form, but neglected to indicate on the form that she was dismissing the complaint as to these defendants. Therefore, the superior court clerk rejected the request for dismissal and no dismissal was entered in the clerk's registry. Having been served with the request for dismissal, and without waiting for notice of entry of dismissal, one of the six "dismissed" defendants filed and served a memorandum of costs as a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032. Plaintiff moved to quash the costs memorandum, or, in the alternative, to tax costs, arguing that although she had attempted to have the defendant in question dismissed without prejudice, the court had rejected the form, no dismissal was entered, and there was no judgment under which the defendant was a prevailing party entitled to costs. The defendant contended that filing of the first amended complaint deleting it as a defendant constituted a dismissal without prejudice, and that as a dismissed defendant it was a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 and therefore was entitled to recover costs. The superior court ruled that the defendant was a prevailing party, and the plaintiff appealed (145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1191) .

The appellate court agreed with plaintiff that the defendant was not a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 and therefore was not entitled to recover costs. Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), the term "prevailing party" includes "a defendant in whose favor a dismissal is entered" (court's emphasis). Under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d), a dismissal is entered when it is entered in the clerk's register. In this case, no order of judgment of dismissal was ever entered; plaintiff's formal request for voluntary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 581 was rejected by the superior court clerk because it was not properly completed. Thus, the dismissal was never entered by the clerk, and was not effective. The court also noted that although the filing of an amended complaint omitting a specific defendant operates in substance as a dismissal, the statutory right to costs cannot be invoked until the dismissal has been perfected through entry of an order or judgment of dismissal. Since defendant never obtained an order of dismissal, it did not qualify as a prevailing party, and the superior court erred in awarding costs (145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1191-1193) .

The court suggested that when the defendant did not receive notice of entry of dismissal, it should have contacted the court to determine whether voluntary dismissal had been entered. Upon learning that dismissal had not been entered, and wishing to perfect its dismissal based on being omitted from the first amended complaint, the defendant could have submitted a proposed judgment of dismissal with its memorandum of costs (145 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 1193, 1194) .

[c] Party Whose Recovery Was Completely Offset by Settlement Is Not "Prevailing Party."

In Goodman v. Lozano (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 1327, 1334-1335, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 219, 223 P.3d 77 , the plaintiffs bought a newly constructed home from the defendants. After the plaintiffs sued the defendants for construction defects, the plaintiffs settled with all the defendants except the Lozanos for $230,000. After a bench trial, the trial court found in the plaintiffs' favor and awarded them $146,000. Because the settlement amount was greater than the award to the plaintiffs, the trial judge determined that the Lozanos were the prevailing parties because they paid nothing under the judgment. The judge awarded the Lozanos attorney's fees and costs. The plaintiffs appealed from both the net zero judgment and the order finding the Lozanos to be the prevailing parties. The court of appeal affirmed.

The California Supreme Court looked at the language and history of Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), which defines "prevailing party," and Code Civ. Proc. § 877, which provides that a good faith settlement reduces a plaintiff's claims against nonsettling defendants by the amount of consideration paid for the settlement. The Court concluded that a plaintiff who obtains a verdict against a defendant that is offset to zero by settlements with other defendants does not have a "net monetary recovery" and is not a prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) [47 Cal. 4th 1327, 1334-1335] .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.13

§ 60.13 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Untimely Filed

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Untimely Filed

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THE COST BILL WAS FILED TOO LATE.

Costs Memorandum Filed Late. A prevailing party who claims costs is required to serve and file a memorandum of costs (1) within 15 days after (a) the date of mailing of the notice of entry of judgment or dismissal by the court clerk under Section 664.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure or (b) the date of service of written notice of entry of judgment or dismissal, or (2) within 180 days after entry of judgment, whichever is first (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)). Time provisions relating to filing of memorandum of costs, while not jurisdictional, are mandatory, and apply whether or not the judgment or order is appealable (Sanabria v. Embrey (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 425-426, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837). The failure to file a cost bill within the prescribed time can be attacked by a motion to strike (Davis Lumber Co. v. Hubbell (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 148, 151, 290 P.2d 33 (involving cost bill not filed within time limits prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033), and the cost bill should be stricken if it is filed after that time (Coast Electric Service, Inc. v. Jensen (1931) 111 Cal. App. 124, 126, 295 P. 346).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that it was filed too late. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.11 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c] for reference to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs Memorandum Filed Late

In Sanabria v. Embrey (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 , the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed his action without prejudice against the defendants. The plaintiff served the dismissal on the defendants on December 1, 1999. At that time, there was still outstanding a complaint in intervention and a cross-complaint that did not involve the defendants, which was resolved and judgment entered on March 16, 2000 and notice of entry of judgment served on May 3, 2000. The defendants filed a memorandum of costs on May 19, 2000. The trial court held that the memorandum was timely filed and awarded the defendants costs and attorney fees. The court of appeal held first that the fact that the complaint-in-intervention and cross complaint were still pending did not make the voluntary dismissal ineffective, citing Code Civ. Proc. 581(c), allowing a plaintiff to dismiss the complaint before trial regardless of the pendency of other pleadings (92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 425) . The court then held that the memorandum of costs was untimely because it was not filed with 15 days of service of notice of entry of dismissal as required by former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 870(a) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)] (92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 425-426) .

Davis Lumber Co. v. Hubbell (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 148, 290 P.2d 33 , involved consolidated appeals from orders, made after judgment, striking cost bills. Quoting S. F. etc. Sch. Dist. v. Bd. of Nat. Missions (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 243, 276 P.2d 829 , the court said that the method prescribed by law for attacking an untimely filed cost bill is a motion to tax (or strike) made within the period prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)) (137 Cal. App. 2d 148, 151) . However, the court reversed the order striking the cost bill on the ground that the cost bill had in fact been timely filed within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)) (137 Cal. App. 2d 148, 152-153) .

In Coast Electric Service, Inc. v. Jensen (1931) 111 Cal. App. 124, 295 P. 346 , plaintiff did not serve its memorandum of costs within the time allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)). Three days after the time for service had expired the court made an order on ex parte application purporting to grant plaintiff an additional 15 days in which to serve its memorandum, which plaintiff did. Defendant filed a motion to strike the memorandum, and the motion was granted when plaintiff failed to appear at the hearing. Then, on plaintiff 's motion, the memorandum was restored to the file and defendant renewed his motion to strike, which the trial court denied. Defendant appealed from the order denying his motion to strike plaintiff 's memorandum of costs. On concluding that the motion to strike the memorandum should have been granted and reversing the order (111 Cal. App. 124, 127) , the court of appeal stated that failure to file and serve a memorandum of costs within the time required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 extinguishes the remedy of recovering costs and operates as a forfeiture of the right to recover costs (111 Cal. App. 124, 126) . Citing Dow v. Ross (1891) 90 Cal. 562, 563, 27 P. 409 , the court stated that when the memorandum is served or filed beyond the statutory time, it will be stricken from the files on motion. Because the trial court's order under Code Civ. Proc. § 1054 extending time for service of the memorandum of costs was made three days after the existing statutory time for serving the memorandum had expired, the order was void (111 Cal. App. 124, 126) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.14

§ 60.14 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Not Verified

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Memorandum of Costs Not Verified

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THE COST BILL WAS NOT VERIFIED.

Memorandum of Costs Not Verified. The memorandum of costs is required to be verified by a statement of the party, attorney, or agent that to the best of his or her knowledge the items of cost are correct and were necessarily incurred (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that it was not verified. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.11 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c] for reference to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Memorandum of Costs Not Verified

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), provides that the memorandum of costs is required to be verified by a statement of the party, attorney, or agent that to the best of his or her knowledge the items of cost are correct and were necessarily incurred.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.15

§ 60.15 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS FILED BY _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE COSTS WERE NOT AWARDED BY THE ARBITRATOR.

Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs. A bill of costs should be stricken when the prevailing party files a memorandum of costs after entry of judgment on a judicial arbitration award when costs were not awarded by the arbitrator (Wagy v. Brown (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-9, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that the judicial arbitration award did not award costs. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.11 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c] for reference to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Award Does Not Include Costs

In Wagy v. Brown (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48 , neither party requested a trial de novo after judicial arbitration. After entry of judgment on the arbitration award, the prevailing party (the plaintiff) filed a memorandum of costs in the trial court. The defendant moved to strike the memorandum, contending costs could be awarded only in the judicial arbitration proceeding. The court denied costs, and the plaintiff appealed.

The Third District Court of Appeal affirmed. The arbitrator has authority to award costs. In this case, the arbitrator's award did not award costs to the prevailing party, and that award, in effect, denied costs to each party by ordering each side to bear its own costs. Therefore, the only way for the prevailing party to obtain costs is to reject the entire award by requesting a trial de novo (24 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-9) .

Unlike Wagy, however, the Sixth District Court of Appeal has allowed a prevailing party to claim costs in the trial court after judgment when the arbitrator fails to include costs in the award, even though, ideally, the arbitrator should make that determination [see Guevara v. Brand (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 995, 997-998, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 , discussed as an authority to § 60.104]. Wagy does not cite Guevara, even though decided afterwards.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.16

§ 60.16 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Prevailing Party Not Entitled to Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Due to Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Prevailing Party Not Entitled to Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Due to Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS FILED BY PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S SETTLEMENT OFFER WAS MORE FAVORABLE THAN THE JUDGMENT FOR PLAINTIFF.

A. Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment. If an offer made by a defendant not less than 10 days prior to commencement of trial is not accepted and the plaintiff fails to obtain a more favorable judgment, the plaintiff cannot recover preoffer costs and must pay the defendant's costs from the time of the offer (Code Civ. Proc. § 998(b), (c)(1); Linthicum v. Butterfield (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 259, 270-273, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 538).

B. Postoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Excluded From Judgment. The plaintiff's postoffer costs may not be added to the judgment obtained by plaintiff for the purpose of determining whether that judgment is more favorable than defendant's settlement offer (Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2)(A)). The postoffer costs to be excluded for this purpose include postoffer attorney's fees (see Heritage Engineering Const., Inc. v. City of Industry (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440-1442, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted by a defendant in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that the plaintiff did not obtain a judgment more favorable than the defendant's pretrial settlement offer. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.11 et seq. See also § 60.10[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in the form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.12[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 60.83 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Offer More Favorable Than Judgment

Code Civ. Proc. § 998 provides that if an offer made by a defendant not less than 10 days prior to commencement of trial is not accepted and the plaintiff fails to obtain a more favorable judgment, the plaintiff cannot recover costs and must pay the defendant's costs from the time of the offer.

Linthicum v. Butterfield (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 259, 270-273, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 538 , involved adjacent landowners disputing an easement over property. The defendants made a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer that required the plaintiff to grant them a right-of-way easement for ingress and egress and for utility purposes. In exchange, the defendants agreed they would (1) recognize a U.S. Forest Service line as an agreed boundary line between the parties' properties; (2) not seek an easement by necessity over other property owned by the plaintiff; and (3) not oppose the plaintiff's effort to split his lot. Further, the offer provided that the parties would bear their own costs with a mutual release of all current claims and a mutual dismissal with prejudice of the parties' lawsuits against one another. The plaintiff rejected this offer and the case went to trial. After trial, the court granted the defendants continued use of the easement and did not award any damages. The trial court denied the plaintiff's motion to tax costs and awarded the defendants their expert witness fees.

On appeal, the court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 998 provides a sanction against a rejecting offeree unless the offeree obtains a judgment more favorable than the offer. Therefore, the issue was whether the plaintiff as the rejecting offeree obtained a judgment more favorable than the offer. Examining the facts, the court held that the judgment was not more favorable to the plaintiff than the defendants' Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer. The offer required the plaintiff to grant the defendants an easement for ingress and egress. The plaintiff lost on that point. The offer demanded an easement for utility lines. The trial court did grant the plaintiff the right to move the utility lines, but at his own expense. In addition, the plaintiff lost on the defendants' offer that the parties bear their own costs [175 Cal. App. 4th 259, 270-271].

The plaintiff also argued that the offer's demand for a mutual release of all current claims between the parties made the offer unenforceable as a matter of law. The court disagreed, holding that a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer is not effective to shift costs when it includes a release only of claims not at issue in the action [175 Cal. App. 4th 259, 271-272].

[b] Postoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Excluded From Judgment

Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2)(A) provides that, "[i]n determining whether the plaintiff obtains a more favorable judgment, the court or arbitrator shall exclude the postoffer costs."

In Heritage Engineering Const., Inc. v. City of Industry (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 , the defendant made a pretrial settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 of $65,000. The plaintiff rejected the offer and, after trial, was awarded $48,000 by the jury. Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 998, the trial court denied all costs to the plaintiff as the prevailing party, even though the plaintiff was entitled to more than $100,000 in contractual attorney fees that were incurred before the settlement offer.

The court of appeal reversed. It concluded that contractual attorney fees incurred before a settlement offer is made are to be included in the amount a plaintiff recovers for the purpose of determining whether the plaintiff obtained a "more favorable judgment" (65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440-1442) .

In reaching this conclusion, the court examined the prior history of Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2)(A). The court first noted that, before 1994, there was no statutory guidance on the meaning of what constituted a "more favorable judgment" under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. Case law, however, had developed a rule that, when determining whether a judgment was more favorable, courts were to include in the judgment the plaintiff's preoffer costs, at least when the settlement offer was intended to cover both damages and costs incurred up to time of the offer (65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440) . In 1989, the court of appeal in Encinitas Plaza Real v. Knight (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 996, 257 Cal. Rptr. 646 recognized this case law rule, but held that the rule did not apply to attorney's fees recoverable on the basis of a contract provision; such fees were not costs but special damages. Thus, in considering whether the plaintiff's judgment exceeded the defendant's offer, the Encinitas court added to that judgment all of the plaintiff's attorney's fees, rather than only those fees incurred before the defendant's offer [see Encinitas Plaza Real v. Knight (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 996, 1000-1003, 257 Cal. Rptr. 646] (65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440) .

Soon afterwards, in 1990, Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 was amended to provide, contrary to the holding in Encinitas, that attorney's fees recoverable by contract, like those recoverable by statute, are an element of costs rather than special damages [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(10), (c)(5)]. The court in Heritage noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 998 was also amended, in 1994 and 1997, to supersede expressly the holding in Encinitas [see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2)(B) (Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2)(A) is intended "to supersede the holding in Encinitas Plaza Real v. Knight, 209 Cal. App. 3d 996 , that attorney's fees awarded to the prevailing party are not costs for purposes of this section but part of the judgment")]. As explained by the court in Heritage, these amendments adding the language in Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2) were designed not only to abrogate Encinitas on the issue of attorney's fees as damages, but were intended also to return the "more favorable judgment" determination to its pre-Encinitas formulation: when a defendant's settlement offer includes costs, it is to be compared with the plaintiff's judgment plus pre-offer costs, including pre-offer attorney's fees otherwise recoverable as costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 (65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440-1442) . By extension, of course, the post-offer costs that must be excluded from the judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(2) include any post-offer attorney's fees that might otherwise be recoverable as costs.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.17

§ 60.17 Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Was Unilaterally Withdrawn Before Expiration of Statutory Period for Acceptance or Rejection

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Was Unilaterally Withdrawn Before Expiration of Statutory Period for Acceptance or Rejection

[For caption, see § 60.10, with which this form should be combined.]

THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS FILED BY _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] WITHDREW HIS/HER/ITS OFFER UNDER CODE CIV. PROC. § 998 BEFORE THE EXPIRATION OF THE STATUTORY PERIOD FOR ACCEPTANCE OR REJECTION OF THAT OFFER BY _____ [opposing party, i.e., DEFENDANT or PLAINTIFF].

A. Unilateral Withdrawal of Settlement Offer Made Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Makes Offer a Nullity for Cost-Shifting Purposes. A settlement offer made under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that is unilaterally revoked by the offeror before the expiration of the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 998 for acceptance or rejection of the offer forfeits its status as an offer under the remaining provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998, including the cost shifting provisions of that section (Marcey v. Romero (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1215-1217, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402).

B. Withdrawn Offer Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Revives Last Rejected Offer. If an offer made under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is withdrawn by a party before its statutory expiration (i.e., by start of trial or 30 days after the offer is made), the withdrawing party's right to cost shifting under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is determined by the last rejected Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer [One Star, Inc. v. STAAR Surgical Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1095, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195] .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted by a plaintiff or defendant in support of a motion to strike [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)] the entire cost bill on the ground that the opposing party unilaterally withdrew a settlement offer made under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 before the statutory period for acceptance or rejection of the offer had expired. It should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.10, and any other applicable forms in § 60.11 et seq. In addition, the offer must remain open for the statutorily designated period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 998(b)(2) ("prior to trial or ... within 30 days after it is made, whichever occurs first") [Marina Glencoe, L.P. v. Neue Sentimental Film AG (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 874, 880, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 800] . See also § 60.10[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in the form with the facts of the case, including facts regarding when and under what circumstances the offer was made and withdrawn. See also § 60.12[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in § 60.83 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Withdrawal of § 998 Offer Before Expiration of Period for Acceptance or Rejection

In Marcey v. Romero (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 402 , plaintiff filed a personal injury action against defendant. Plaintiff then made a series of offers to compromise her claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to defendant, with each offer becoming progressively lower. Approximately one month before the trial call, plaintiff made her final offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, but plaintiff's counsel orally informed defendant's counsel the offer was premised on plaintiff being able to avoid the costs associated with deposing defendant's experts and paying plaintiff's experts to prepare for and appear at trial. Before the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 998 for lapse of an offer had expired, defendant's counsel attempted orally to accept the offer, but plaintiff's counsel rejected the attempted oral acceptance, orally withdrew the offer, and immediately faxed a written "Notice of Withdrawal" to defendant's counsel. At trial, plaintiff recovered a judgment against defendant. Plaintiff's cost bill included expert witness fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 998(d). Defendant moved to tax these costs, asserting plaintiff's withdrawal of the Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer before it expiration of the statutory period made that offer a nullity. The trial court granted defendant's motion and denied plaintiff's request for expert witness fees (148 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1213-1214) . The court of appeal affirmed and held that when plaintiff revoked the Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer before the expiration of the statutory period, the offer lost its status as an offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, including the cost-shifting provisions of that section (148 Cal. App. 4th 1211, 1214-1217) .

[b] Withdrawn Offer Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Revives Last Rejected Offer

In One Star, Inc. v. STAAR Surgical Co. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1095, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 195 , the plaintiff was a regional representative of medical supplies, including those manufactured by the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant for breach of contract and common counts alleging that the defendant improperly withheld commissions. The defendant filed a cross-complaint for breach of contract. The defendant made a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to settle the complaint for $65,000. The plaintiff did not respond, and the offer lapsed after 30 days. The defendant made a second offer to settle the complaint for $65,000, including interest from a certain date. While that offer was pending, the defendant made a third offer allowing judgment to be taken against it for $65,000 plus interest on the cross-complaint. The plaintiff did not accept the second or third offers. The defendant withdrew the second offer. At trial, the court awarded the plaintiff $41,400 on the common counts, and held that neither party had proved its breach of contract claims.

The defendant filed a motion for post-settlement offer costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998. The plaintiff opposed the motion, arguing that the defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offers were irrelevant because the first offer was extinguished by the withdrawn second offer. The plaintiff also filed a motion for fees, arguing that it was the prevailing party. The court granted the plaintiff's motion for fees and costs and denied the defendant's. The defendant appealed, arguing that its first Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer exceeded the plaintiff's recovery at trial.

The court of appeal held that if a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer is withdrawn by a party before its statutory expiration (i.e., by start of trial or 30 days after the offer is made), the withdrawing party's right to cost shifting under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is determined by the last rejected Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer [179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1093-1094] . Therefore, the court held that the defendant's withdrawal of its second offer to compromise revived its first offer for purposes of cost shifting under Code Civ. Proc. § 998.

The court based its ruling on two factors. First, it held that its ruling would uphold the policy of encouraging settlement; if a party knows that it will not be penalized for withdrawing a settlement offer, it will be more likely to make an offer in the first instance [179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1094] . Next, it held that this bright-line rule would best serve the policy of encouraging settlement and avoiding gamesmanship [179 Cal. App. 4th 1082, 1094-1095] .

15 of 186 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
1. Motion to Strike Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.18-60.39

[Reserved]

§§ 60.18[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.40

§ 60.40 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff, vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO _____ [name],	)	TAX COSTS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION TO TAX COSTS BY _____ [STRIKING or REDUCING THE AMOUNT CLAIMED FOR] ITEM(S) _____ [number(s)] SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE _____ [specify ground(s)].

A. Motion to Tax Costs. A motion to tax costs in a memorandum of costs may be served and filed 15 days after the memorandum was served, or, if the memorandum was served by mail, within the extended time authorized by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1013 (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)).

B. Right to Costs Are Statutory. The right to recover costs is entirely statutory, with the measure of the statute as the measure of the right (Moss v. Underwriters' Report, Inc. (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 266, 274, 83 P.2d 503 ; Posey v. State of California (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 836, 852, 225 Cal. Rptr. 830).

C. Strict Construction of Costs Statutes. The statutes permitting costs are strictly construed (Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 289, 40 Cal. Rptr. 203).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used as a general form for submission in support of a motion to tax costs by striking, or reducing the amounts claimed for, specific items in the memorandum of costs filed by the prevailing party in the action. This form should be combined with other memoranda establishing the precise ground of the motion, as set out in § 60.41 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

It is advisable for counsel to also submit cognizable evidence in supports of factual statements, by request for judicial notice (e.g., when a court must order the event for which costs are claimed and no order was issued) [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq., or otherwise by affidavits or declarations. Although some cases hold that affidavits or declarations are not required, counsel must make some type of factual showing supporting a motion to strike [see Senior v. Anderson (1900) 130 Cal. 290, 300, 62 P. 563 ; Melnyk v. Robledo (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 624, 134 Cal. Rptr. 602] . Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits "upon a motion"), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms for notices of motion to strike a cost bill or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, with forms for supporting declarations and orders granting the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda designed to be combined with this general form, as appropriate, are set out in § 60.41 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the memoranda set out in § 60.70 et seq. may be used in opposition to this memorandum. If the notice of motion to strike or tax costs supported by this form is not filed within the time prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), the memoranda set out in § 60.70 may be used to oppose the motion.

When the ground of objection to the memorandum of costs is that it was not timely filed, counsel may be met by a countermotion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) [see § 60.120 et seq.]. In this event, counsel may use the memoranda set out in § 60.150 et seq. to oppose the countermotion.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Tax Costs

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), provides that a motion to tax costs in a memorandum of costs may be served and filed 15 days after the memorandum was served, or, if the memorandum was served by mail, within the extended time authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1013.

[b] Right to Costs Are Statutory

Moss v. Underwriters' Report, Inc. (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 266, 83 P.2d 503 , involved an action to recover the balance due on a book account for services rendered to defendant over a period of years. Defendant appealed from an order denying its motion to tax various items of costs. Defendant had sought to have various items stricken from the cost bill. In modifying the order, the Supreme Court said that the right to recover costs is entirely statutory, and the measure of the statute is the measure of the right (12 Cal. 2d 266, 274) . Since Moss was decided, the Legislature has added statutes governing recovery of the costs of items held improper in that case. However, Moss has frequently been cited for the proposition that the right to costs is entirely statutory.

Posey v. State of California (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 836, 225 Cal. Rptr. 830 , was a personal injury action against the State involving government tort liability. The State's demurrer was sustained without leave to amend and plaintiff 's motion to tax costs was granted. In affirming, the court of appeal said that the right to an award of costs is governed wholly by statute (180 Cal. App. 3d 836, 852) .

[c] Strict Construction of Costs Statutes

Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 40 Cal. Rptr. 203 , was an action for damages for breach of fiduciary duty and for an injunction restraining unfair competition. On appeal from a judgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal reversed the judgment as to one cost item (expenses incurred in borrowing money to deposit cash bond in lieu of surety bond on issuance of preliminary injunction) and otherwise affirmed. The court pointed out that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1035 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250) allows as costs only premiums on necessary surety bonds and not the expenses incurred in borrowing money to deposit a cash bond in lieu of a surety bond. In disallowing this item, the court rejected the argument that because former Code Civ. Proc. § 1054a (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.710) permits a cash deposit in lieu of a surety bond, interest is allowable. Courts have strictly construed the statutes permitting costs, and only those items specifically enumerated are recoverable (229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 289) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.41

§ 60.41 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Reduce Amount as Excessive

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Reduce Amount as Excessive

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE AMOUNT CLAIMED FOR _____ [specify, e.g., ATTORNEY'S FEES] IS UNREASONABLE.

A. Amounts Claimed Are Required to Be Reasonable. Any award of costs is subject to the requirement that allowable costs be reasonable in amount (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(3)).

B. Motion to Reduce Amount of Item. A party objecting that a charge in a cost bill is unreasonable should make a motion to reduce the amount of the item (see Costello v. Roer (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 174, 180, 175 P.2d 65 (dictum)).

[Set forth in subsequent paragraphs any memoranda that support a reduction of the amount claimed for a specific item. For example, if the item claimed as costs is attorney's fees, see the forms set out in § 60.650 et seq.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in the general form in support of a motion to tax cost, § 60.40, when certain items claims as costs are demonstrably excessive or unreasonable [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10), (c)(3), (5)]. When the item or one of the items claimed to be excessive is a claim for an award of attorney's fees, counsel should use the additional memoranda set out § 60.650 et seq.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Related Memoranda

The memoranda set out in § 60.650 et seq. may be used when the item or item claimed to be excessive is a claim for an award of attorney's fees. Other related memoranda include § 60.42 (excessive witness fees), and, less directly related, those set out in § 60.43 et seq.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 60.370 -60.399 and §§ 60.480 -60.499 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amounts Claimed Are Required to Be Reasonable

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(3) provides that any award of costs is subject to the requirement that allowable costs be reasonable in amount.

[b] Motion to Reduce Amount of Item

In Costello v. Roer (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 174, 175 P.2d 65 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for plaintiffs in an action for rescission of a contract. Defendant also appealed from an order denying a motion to tax costs by striking an item from plaintiff 's cost bill, claimed as a commissioner's fee for taking depositions. In the motion to tax, defendant had not claimed that the amount was unreasonable. On appeal, defendant appeared to concede that the item was proper, but claimed that the amount was not reasonable. In affirming the order, the court of appeal stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a (renumbered by Stats. 1982, ch 1354, as Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.7, which was repealed by Stats. 1986, ch. 377; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(3)) provided that a party is allowed the reasonable costs of taking and transcribing a deposition. The court stated that if defendant's objection was that the charge was unreasonable, he should have made a motion to reduce the amount, with a proper showing in that regard. In any case, the court assumed that in ruling on the motion the trial court gave consideration to both the propriety of the item and the amount charged (77 Cal. App. 2d 174, 180) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.42

§ 60.42 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike or Reduce Amount Claimed for Fee of Expert Witness

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike or Reduce Amount Claimed for Fee of Expert Witness

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [Name], [ONE OF] THE EXPERT WITNESS(ES), WAS NOT ORDERED BY THE COURT AND HIS/HER FEE [TO THE EXTENT IT EXCEEDS THE AMOUNT ALLOWED ORDINARY WITNESSES] IS THEREFORE NOT ALLOWABLE AS COSTS.

Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Fee of Expert Witness Who Was Not Ordered by Court. Although entitled as a matter of right to recover costs (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b)), which includes ordinary witness fees pursuant to Government Code Section 68093 (daily court attendance fees and mileage) and fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7), (8)), a prevailing party is not entitled to recover as costs the fee of an expert witness not ordered by the court, except when otherwise expressly authorized by law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1); Davis v. KGO-T.V., Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 436, 439, 441-442, 446-447, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452, 950 P.2d 567 ; Gorman v. Tassajara Development Corporation (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 44, 73-74, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 152 ; see McGarity v. Department of Transportation (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 677, 686, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 344).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing the amount claimed for fees of an expert witness not appointed by the court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1)].

For an exception to the rule set forth in this form with respect to nonallowance of expert witness fees, see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c) and (d), which comes into operation when a pretrial offer to settle is not accepted and the party failing to accept it fails to obtain a more favorable judgment [see Lafayette v. County of Los Angeles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 547, 556-557, 208 Cal. Rptr. 668] .

For memoranda involving other items not allowed as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5) and Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2)-(4), except when expressly authorized by law, see §§ 60.43 and 60.44.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Fee of Expert Witness Who Was Not Ordered by Court

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) provides that except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party is entitled as a matter of right to recover costs. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a) lists the items allowable as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032. These items include ordinary witness fees pursuant to Gov. Code § 68093 (daily court attendance fees and mileage) and fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7), (8)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b) lists items not allowable as costs except when expressly authorized by law. Such items include fees of experts not ordered by the court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1)].

In Davis v. KGO-T.V., Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 436, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 452, 950 P.2d 567 , plaintiff brought an action for wrongful termination under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA; Gov. Code § 12900 et seq.). Plaintiff was awarded damages, and the trial court further awarded costs and fees under Gov. Code. Code § 12965, which allows the court in an FEHA action to award the prevailing party reasonable attorney fees and costs in its discretion. The award of costs included approximately $45,000 for the fees of several experts not ordered by the court. On appeal by defendant, the court of appeal reversed and remanded on this issue, holding that the expert fees were not a recoverable item of costs. The Supreme Court granted review on this point.

An unanimous Supreme Court affirmed the court of appeal decision. The Court emphasized that no costs may be recovered by any party in the absence of statutory authority (17 Cal. 4th 436, 439) . The court noted that, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1), the general rule is that the fees of experts are not recoverable as costs unless the expert testimony is ordered by the court, except when otherwise authorized by law (17 Cal. 4th 436, 441) .

Plaintiff in this case argued that Gov. Code. Code § 12965 granted sufficient statutory authority to the trial court in this FEHA action to award expert fees, because of court's "discretion" to make an award under that section is not limited by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5. The Supreme Court disagreed. Decisional law in effect both before after the enactment of Gov. Code. Code § 12965 did not allow expert fees to be awarded as costs unless the expert testimony had been ordered by the court, and the subsequent enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 simply codified that prior law (17 Cal. 4th 436, 439-442) .

The Court also noted that expert fees were recoverable contrary to the general rule in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 in only two situations, neither of which applied to recovery of costs in a FEHA action under Gov. Code. Code § 12965. One situation is when another statute explicitly provides for the recovery of expert fees not ordered by the court, citing, together with other examples, Bus. & Prof. Code § 8768.5 (proceeding by surveyor or engineer to compel filing of record of survey) (17 Cal. 4th 436, 442) . The second situation is exemplified by Health & Safety Code § 51205(f), which allows an award of costs and fees in the trial court's discretion, "[n]otwithstanding any other provision of law." In the latter situation, any other provision of law, including Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, is made subordinate by the qualifying language (17 Cal. 4th 436, 445) .

The Court concluded that because Gov. Code. Code § 12965 did not define "costs" or otherwise expressly allow the recovery of expert fees not ordered by the court, Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1) applied to supplement that statute, and precluded an award of fees of experts as an item of costs in a FEHA action (17 Cal. 4th 436, 446-447) . The Court qualified its decision by noting that it did not reach the question of whether fees of experts are recoverable under a private attorney general theory (under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5), or under a contract provision providing for the recovery costs and fees (17 Cal. 4th 436, 446-447 n.5).

In Gorman v. Tassajara Development Corporation (2009) 178 Cal. App. 4th 44, 73-74, 100 Cal. Rptr. 3d 152 , plaintiff homeowners sued the defendant contractor for defective construction. The parties settled, agreeing that the plaintiffs were the prevailing parties for purposes of recovering attorney's fees and costs. The plaintiffs filed a motion for costs, including "expert fees" for compensation they paid the defense experts for their time while being deposed. The defendant argued that these fees were unrecoverable pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a). The court of appeal agreed, holding that the fees of experts not ordered by the court are not an allowable item of costs and, more specifically, that expert deposition fees are not recoverable under the costs statute [178 Cal. App. 4th 44, 73-74].

In McGarity v. Department of Transportation (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 677, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 344 , the prevailing defendant appealed from the trial court's order granting plaintiff 's motion to tax costs as to expert witness fees paid by defendant in order to depose plaintiff 's designated experts. Defendant argued that since the costs of taking depositions are recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), and since a party deposing an opposing party's expert must pay the expert's witness fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210 et seq., the expert's fees are recoverable costs. Defendant also argued that the Legislature's 1988 amendment of Gov. Code § 68092.5 expressed a legislative intent to allow recovery of expert deposition fees as costs; the statute, which provides for the compensation of expert witnesses for their appearances at depositions, was amended in 1988 to delete language providing that "such fees shall not be allowable costs."

The court of appeal affirmed the order taxing costs (8 Cal. App. 4th 677, 687) . It held that the defendant's recovery of expert witness fees was precluded by the plain language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1). The court noted that no legislative history or other authority supported defendant's position concerning the amendment of Gov. Code § 68092.5; the court speculated that the wording may have been deleted as unnecessary, in light of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1), which expressly provides that fees of experts not ordered by the court are not allowable as costs (8 Cal. App. 4th 677, 686) .

[4] Additional Authorities

Hsu v. Semiconductor Systems, Inc. (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1330, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 82 involved the transfer by employee shareholders of a closely held corporation of ownership of the shares of a former employee to themselves just before a merger that significantly increased the value of the corporate shares. After the jury awarded the former employee compensatory damages, the court awarded the former employee costs, including an award for expert witness fees and general photocopying expenses. The court of appeal reversed. Although the parties had an agreement under which the prevailing party was entitled to "all fees, costs and expenses," recovery of costs provided by contract must be specially pleaded and proven at trial, and not awarded posttrial as was done here. The court also held that the disputed costs could not be awarded to plaintiff as an element of attorney fees under the rationale that the expenses were disbursed by the attorneys in the course of litigation. Finally, the court held that the trial court erred in awarding costs for expedited preparation of deposition transcripts because expedited deposition costs were not allowed by statute (126 Cal. App. 4th 1330, 1340-1342) .

Steiny and Co. v. California Elec. Supply Co. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 285, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 920 involved litigation among an owner, general contractor, subcontract, supplier and manufacturer based on the fact that a recently installed electric switchboard exploded. In the course of the litigation, the trial court awarded the subcontractor expert fees as an item of costs. The court of appeal reversed the award, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1) specifies that witness fees of experts not ordered by the court are not recoverable as costs except when expressly authorized by law, and the subcontractor cited no provision of law supporting the award. The court found further that the contract did not expressly mention expert witness fees, and, even if it did, would not supply the express authorization by law required by § 1033.5(b)(1) (79 Cal. App. 4th 285, 293-294) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.43

§ 60.43 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Daily Transcripts Not Ordered by Court

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Daily Transcripts Not Ordered by Court

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

FEES OF TRANSCRIPTS OF COURT PROCEEDINGS ORDERED BY THE PARTIES ARE PAID BY THE PARTY ORDERING THEM AND, EXCEPT WHEN EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED BY LAW, COSTS OF TRANSCRIPTS NOT ORDERED BY THE COURT ARE NOT ALLOWABLE AS COSTS.

A. Costs of Non-Court-Ordered Transcript Not Allowable. Transcripts of court proceedings not ordered by the court are not allowable as costs, except when expressly authorized by law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5)).

B. Daily Transcripts. The fees for daily transcripts ordered by the parties are paid by the party ordering them (see Gov. Code § 69953; Sunny Slope Water Co. v. City of Pasadena (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 87, 99-100, 33 P.2d 672 ; Moore v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 739-740, 85 Cal. Rptr. 281).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking the amount claimed by the prevailing party for the fee paid for a daily transcript ordered by that party and not by the court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5); Gov. Code § 69953].

Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(9) and Gov. Code § 69953, costs of transcripts ordered by the court that are paid by the party to whom costs are awarded are allowable costs. For an exception to this rule, see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c) and (d), which comes into operation when a pretrial offer to settle is not accepted and the party failing to accept it fails to obtain a more favorable judgment [see Lafayette v. County of Los Angeles (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 547, 557, 208 Cal. Rptr. 668] .

For memoranda involving other items not allowed as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1) and Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2)-(4), except when expressly authorized by law, see §§ 60.42 and 60.44.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Non-Court-Ordered Transcript Not Allowable

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5) provides that transcripts of court proceedings not ordered by the court are not allowable as costs, except when expressly authorized by law.

[b] Daily Transcripts

Gov. Code § 69953 was added, and its predecessor, Code Civ. Proc. § 274 (referred to in Sunny Slope Water Co. v. City of Pasadena (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 87, 33 P.2d 672 , discussed below), was repealed, in 1953. From the time of its enactment until its 1986 amendment, Gov. Code § 69953 provided in relevant part that "[i]n civil cases the fees for reporting and for all other transcriptions ordered by the court to be made" shall be paid by the parties in equal proportion; and either party at his option may pay the whole. In either case, all amounts so paid by the party to whom costs are awarded shall be taxed as costs in the case. The fees for transcripts and copies ordered by the parties shall be paid by the party ordering them. The section was amended in 1986 to substitute for the language above in quotes the following: "In any case where a verbatim record is not made at public expense pursuant to Section 69952 [of the Government Code, authorizing court to specifically direct making of verbatim record and payment therefor from county treasury in criminal matters, juvenile proceedings, proceedings to declare minor free from custody, proceedings under Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, and "as otherwise provided by law'] or other provisions of law, the cost of making any verbatim record ... ." However, Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, which contains the provision set forth in Paragraph A of the foregoing form, was also enacted in 1986.

In Sunny Slope Water Co. v. City of Pasadena (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 87, 33 P.2d 672 , the City of Pasadena and some of its officials appealed from a judgment determining that certain ordinances were inapplicable to plaintiff, and from an order taxing costs which allowed the costs of daily transcripts. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment and order. The parties had stipulated to the preparation of a daily transcript, but the stipulation did not specify who should pay for the transcript or whether the amount could be included in the cost bill by the prevailing party. Though the record did not show any remark by the trial court about the stipulation, plaintiff contended that the trial judge stated, "Very well." Plaintiff did not contend that any order was made by the trial judge as to the transcript other than this observation. The Court stated that this statement fell far short of an order by the court requiring the preparation of a daily transcript, and that the cost of the transcript may only be allowed under Code Civ. Proc. § 274 (now see Gov. Code § 69953 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5)) when the trial court orders the preparation of the transcript (1 Cal. 2d 87, 99-100) .

Moore v. City & County of San Francisco (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 85 Cal. Rptr. 281 , involved an action for false arrest and imprisonment arising out of plaintiff 's arrest on a misdemeanor charge. A daily transcript had been prepared at the city and county's request (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 740) . The jury's verdict was for all the defendants. Plaintiff 's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict was granted as to the city and county only on the issue of liability only, and her motion for new trial was granted as to the city and county on the issue of damages only. The city and county appealed from the orders and plaintiff appealed from the jury verdict. The court of appeal reversed the judgment notwithstanding the verdict and the partial judgment for the individual defendants and affirmed the order granting plaintiff a new trial, extending it to the entire cause (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 740-741) . With respect to the daily transcript, the court of appeal said that no abuse of discretion by the trial court was shown in disallowing as costs expenditures for a daily transcript since no formal order for the transcript had been made (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 739-740) . The court explained that in a civil case, unless there is an express order by the court directing the preparation of a daily transcript of the proceedings, chargeable to both parties, the general rule of Gov. Code § 69953 that fees for transcripts are to be paid by the party ordering them prevails. The court, however, added that since a daily transcript involves the use of more than one reporter, and sometimes certain inconvenience and distraction in their frequent changeovers or relief, such an arrangement when unilateral should have the approval of the trial court. But the appellate court was unable to state as a matter of law that the trial judge's verbal acquiescence to the city and county's request for daily transcripts constituted the order required to place the costs of the transcripts equally on both parties under Gov. Code § 69953 (then providing that costs of transcripts ordered by the court are to be paid by parties in equal proportions with prevailing party awarded as costs amount paid) (5 Cal. App. 3d 728, 740) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.44

§ 60.44 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Allowable as Costs Except When Expressly Authorized by Law

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Allowable as Costs Except When Expressly Authorized by Law

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE ITEM(S) SOUGHT TO BE TAXED _____ [IS or ARE] NOT ALLOWABLE AS COSTS, EXCEPT WHEN EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED BY LAW, AND NO LAW AUTHORIZES THEIR ALLOWANCE IN THIS CASE.

Item Claimed Not Allowable as Costs. Except when expressly authorized by law, the following item(s) _____ [is or are] not allowable as costs: _____ [investigation expenses in preparing the case for trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2)) or postage charges (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3)) or telephone charges (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3)) or photocopying charges, except for exhibits (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3)) or costs in investigation of jurors (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(4)) or costs in preparation for voir dire (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(4)) or all or any combination of the foregoing].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking from the cost bill items that (1) are declared by statute not to be allowable as costs except when expressly authorized by law [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)], and (2) are not expressly authorized by law.

For memoranda relating to the nonallowance of fees of experts not ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1)] or costs of transcripts not ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(5)], which may be combined with the memoranda set forth above, see §§ 60.42 and 60.43.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Item Claimed Not Allowable as Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b) provides that except when expressly authorized by law, investigation expenses in preparing the case for trial, postage charges, telephone charges, photocopying charges other than for exhibits, costs in investigation of jurors, and costs in preparation for voir dire are not allowable as costs.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.45

§ 60.45 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Items Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE ITEMS SOUGHT TO BE STRICKEN WERE NOT REASONABLY NECESSARY TO THE CONDUCT OF THE LITIGATION AND THEREFORE ARE NOT ALLOWABLE AS COSTS.

A. Items of Cost Must Have Been Reasonably Necessary. Any award of costs is subject to the rule that allowable costs must be reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation rather than merely convenient or beneficial to its preparation (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)).

B. Necessity of Costs Is Question of Fact. The necessity for any expenditures sought to be recovered as costs is a question of fact for the trial judge (Moss v. Underwriters' Report, Inc. (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 266, 276, 83 P.2d 503).

[EITHER]

C. Burden When Item Appears Improper on Its Face. When items claimed as costs do not appear on their face to be proper and necessary and the items are properly challenged by a motion to tax costs, the burden of establishing the necessity of the items is on the party claiming them as costs (Whitney v. Whitney (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 577, 585, 330 P.2d 947 ; Stenzor v. Leon (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735, 279 P.2d 802).

[OR]

D. Burden When Objecting to Item Proper on Its Face. Although items in a verified cost bill which appear as proper charges are prima facie evidence that the costs were necessarily incurred, when such items are properly objected to, they are put in issue, and the burden of proof is on the party claiming them as costs (Hadley v. Krepel (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 682, 214 Cal. Rptr. 461 ; Melnyk v. Robledo (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 624, 134 Cal. Rptr. 602).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking from the cost bill specific items which were not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2)].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Items of Cost Must Have Been Reasonably Necessary

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c) provides: "Any award of costs shall be subject to the following: ... (2) Allowable costs shall be reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation rather than merely convenient or beneficial to its preparation." (Other statutory provisions relating to specific items of cost, however, use the term "necessary" or "unnecessary" rather than "reasonably necessary" [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3) ("necessary depositions"); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6) ("necessary" surety bonds) and Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250(b) (premium not allowed as costs on "unnecessary" bond); see § 60.47.)

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), provides: "The memorandum of costs must be verified by a statement of the party, attorney, or agent that to the best of his or her knowledge the items of cost are correct and were necessarily incurred in the case." The rule perpetuates the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed by Stats. 1986, ch. 377), and, as required by the rule, that language also appears in the verification contained in the Memorandum of Costs approved for optional use by the Judicial Council.

Except where a statute expressly requires that the cost be necessary, as opposed to reasonably necessary, the Judicial Council rule, by omitting "reasonably" and perpetuating the language of the repealed statute, appears to impose a stricter standard on allowable costs than that imposed by the statute. If so, whether this is permissible under Cal. Const., Art. VI, § 6, empowering the Judicial Council to adopt rules for court practice and procedure not inconsistent with statute, is unclear.

[b] Necessity of Costs Is Question of Fact

The facts and procedural background of Moss v. Underwriters' Report, Inc. (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 266, 83 P.2d 503 , are discussed in § 60.40[3][b]. In discussing the necessity for certain depositions, a factor incorporated in former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a, which at the time governed the allowance of costs of depositions, the Supreme Court stated that the necessity for such expenditures is always a question for the trial judge (12 Cal. 2d 266, 276) . (Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a was renumbered in 1982 to Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.7, which, in turn, was repealed in 1986 and replaced by Code

Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(2).)

[c] Burden When Item Appears Improper on Its Face

In Whitney v. Whitney (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 577, 330 P.2d 947 , a wife appealed from portions of an interlocutory decree granting her a divorce. Her husband had moved the trial court to tax costs, and the court disallowed all items in the cost bill, including psychiatric and investigation fees. The court of appeal found no abuse of discretion by the trial court. The court stated that the items in question did not appear on their face to be necessary disbursements, and appellant, the party claiming the items, had the burden of proving the element of necessity (164 Cal. App. 2d 577, 585) .

Stenzor v. Leon (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 729, 279 P.2d 802 , involved consolidated appeals arising out of a superior court proceeding by a labor union to confirm an arbitrator's awards and by the employer to vacate the awards. The superior court denied confirmation and vacated the awards. Stenzor, a member and manager of the labor union involved, appealed on behalf of the union. The employer appealed from an order taxing costs which denied him costs claimed for a reporter's transcript of the proceedings before the arbitrator. At that time arbitration was governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1293 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1280-1294.2), which contained no provisions respecting costs.

In affirming the judgment denying confirmation and the order disallowing costs, the court of appeal pointed out that the code sections relating to arbitration are contained in Part 3 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which is devoted to special proceedings, and that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (now see new Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, which applies to actions and special proceedings in all trial courts), authorizing recovery of costs, by its own terms applied to both actions and special proceedings in superior court, but that it did not specify the costs allowable. The court further pointed out that (1) former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)) required the party claiming costs to verify the memorandum of costs stating that to the best of his or her knowledge and belief the items are correct and that the disbursements have been necessarily incurred in the action or proceeding; and (2) Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a (renumbered in 1982 to Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.7, which, in turn, was repealed in 1986 and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(2)) authorized recovery of the cost of depositions unless the court determined that their taking was unnecessary (130 Cal. App. 2d 729, 734-735) . The court explained that the question before the trial court was whether the cost of the reporter's transcript was necessarily incurred by the employer for the purpose of presenting to the court his grounds for seeking annulment of the awards and concluded that under the facts of the case the transcript was of doubtful necessity. The court said it is well settled that when a claim is made for disbursement of doubtful necessity and the item is properly challenged by a motion to tax costs, the burden is on the claimant to establish the necessity for the disbursement; its allowance is within the discretion of the trial court and, if no abuse of discretion is shown, the action of the trial court will not be disturbed (130 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735) . The court found it clear that a party to an arbitration who has the proceedings reported for his exclusive use in court and prevails there cannot claim reimbursement as a matter of course, and that therefore it was not an abuse of discretion for the trial court to disallow the item (130 Cal. App. 2d 729, 736) .

[d] Burden When Objecting to Item Proper on Its Face

Hadley v. Krepel (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 214 Cal. Rptr. 461 , was an action on contract for an unpaid broker's commission during the course of which defendant was represented by three different attorneys. The contract provided that, in any action between Broker and Seller arising out of the agreement, the prevailing party shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees and costs. Defendant prevailed and submitted a memorandum of costs and fees. Plaintiffs moved to tax costs and to determine the reasonableness of attorney's fees. The trial court granted the motion and awarded attorney's fees and costs totaling less than 20 percent of defendant's actual expenses. Defendant appealed, contending the award was unreasonable and an abuse of discretion.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment with directions to the trial court to conduct a new hearing to fix the reasonable amount of fees and costs to which the defendant was entitled. The court, agreeing with defendant's assertion, said that the items on a verified cost bill are prima facie evidence that the costs, expenses, and services listed were necessarily incurred, and when they are properly challenged the burden of proof shifts to the party claiming them as costs (167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 682, 687) .

The facts and procedural background of Melnyk v. Robledo (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 134 Cal. Rptr. 602 , are discussed in § 60.650[3]. In affirming the judgment and order, the court of appeal stated that if the items on a verified cost bill appear to be proper charges they are prima facie evidence that the items listed were necessarily incurred, but that when the items are properly objected to, they are put in issue and the burden of proof is on the party claiming them as costs. The court rejected defendant's contention that, because plaintiff challenged the reasonableness of defendant's claim for attorney's fees by way of a memorandum rather than by affidavit or testimony, the prima facie case in favor of the amount claimed for the fees was not rebutted (64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 624) . Since the trial judge had before it pleadings, depositions, and other work performed by counsel, it had evidence on which it had discretion to set the fee (64 Cal. App. 3d 618, 624-625) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.46

§ 60.46 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Unnecessary Deposition

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Cost of Unnecessary Deposition

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE DEPOSITION OF _____ [name] WAS NOT NECESSARY AND THE CLAIM FOR RECOVERY OF ITS COST SHOULD BE DISALLOWED.

A. Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Cost of Unnecessary Deposition. Although entitled as a matter of right to recover costs (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b)), a prevailing party is not entitled to recover the cost of a deposition that was not necessary (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3)).

[Optional] B. Deponent's Testimony Relevant But Not Necessary. In ruling on allowance of the cost of a deposition taken because it was believed that the deposed witness would not be available at trial, the trial court may reasonably determine that the deponent's testimony, although relevant, was unnecessary and disallow the item of cost (Fellowship of Humanity v. Co. Alameda (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 673, 702, 315 P.2d 394).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking from the cost bill the item of cost claimed for the taking of a deposition that was not necessary [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(3)].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Is Not Entitled to Recover Cost of Unnecessary Deposition

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) provides that, except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party is entitled as a matter of right to recover costs in an action or proceeding. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a) sets forth the items allowable as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3) allows as costs taking, video recording, and transcribing necessary depositions.

[b] Deponent's Testimony Relevant But Not Necessary

In Fellowship of Humanity v. Co. Alameda (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 673, 315 P.2d 394 , defendant appealed from a judgment for plaintiff in an action to recover real property taxes paid under protest and plaintiff appealed from an order taxing costs. The trial court had taxed costs by disallowing the cost of taking the deposition of a minister who expected to be absent from the county at the time of the trial. The deposition was accepted in evidence at the trial, although the deponent was in the county. The court of appeal affirmed the order and held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in disallowing the item. The trial court knew that many other ministers were available to testify as to the tax-exempt status of churches which used exempt property for purposes other than "worship," and could reasonably and within its discretion have determined that the testimony while relevant was not necessary under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a (renumbered in 1982 to Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.7, which, in turn, was repealed in 1986 and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(2)). The court stated that "necessity" and "relevancy" are not the same (153 Cal. App. 2d 673, 702) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.47

§ 60.47 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Unnecessary Surety Bond Premium

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Unnecessary Surety Bond Premium

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE SURETY BOND GIVEN BY _____ [specify party filing memorandum of costs] FOR _____ [specify] WAS NOT NECESSARY AND THE ITEM IS THEREFORE NOT AN ALLOWABLE COST.

Premium on Unnecessary Surety Bond. A party may recover as costs premiums on necessary surety bonds (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6)). That is, he or she may recover the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party pursuant to a statute that provides for the bond in the action or proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250(a)) or the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party in connection with the action or proceeding, unless the court determines that the bond was unnecessary (Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250(b)). Conversely, a party may not recover as costs the premium paid for a surety bond that was not required and not necessary (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1033.5(a)(6), 995.250).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking the amount claimed for the premium paid on a surety bond that was neither required nor necessary [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6)].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Premium on Unnecessary Surety Bond

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6) provides that a party may recover as costs premiums on necessary surety bonds.

Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250(a) provides that a party may recover the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party pursuant to a statute that provides for the bond in the action or proceeding.

Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250(b) provides that a party may recover the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party in connection with the action or proceeding, unless the court determines that the bond was unnecessary.

Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1033.5(a)(6)* and *995.250 provide that a party may not recover as costs the premium paid for a surety bond that was not required and not necessary.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.48

§ 60.48 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Interest Paid on Amount Borrowed to Post Cash Deposit in Lieu of Surety Bond

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Interest Paid on Amount Borrowed to Post Cash Deposit in Lieu of Surety Bond

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

INTEREST PAID ON MONEY BORROWED TO POST A CASH DEPOSIT IN LIEU OF A SURETY BOND IS NOT AN ALLOWABLE ITEM OF COSTS.

Interest on Cash Deposited in Lieu of Surety Bond. A party may not recover as an item of costs the interest paid on cash borrowed and deposited in lieu of a surety bond (Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 289, 40 Cal. Rptr. 203).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking the amount claimed for the interest paid on money borrowed in order to post a cash deposit in lieu of a surety bond [see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.710(a)(1) (authorization for cash deposit)].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interest on Cash Deposited in Lieu of Surety Bond

Sequoia Vacuum Systems v. Stransky (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 281, 40 Cal. Rptr. 203 , is discussed in § 60.40[3][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.49

§ 60.49 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Prior Trial That Resulted in Mistrial

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Prior Trial That Resulted in Mistrial

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE ITEM CLAIMED AS COSTS OF A PRIOR TRIAL THAT RESULTED IN A MISTRIAL IS NOT AN ALLOWABLE COST UNDER THE FACTS OF THIS CASE.

Costs of Prior Trial. A party prevailing on a second trial after mistrial may not recover costs of the first trial when the mistrial resulted from the misconduct of the prevailing party's counsel and the court on declaring the mistrial charged the costs of the trial to the prevailing party (Mullin v. Rousseau (1931) 112 Cal. App. 719, 730-731, 297 P. 944).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking the amount claimed as costs of a prior trial that resulted in a mistrial caused by the misconduct of the prevailing party's attorney.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Prior Trial

Mullin v. Rousseau (1931) 112 Cal. App. 719, 297 P. 944 , involved an action for fraud in the exchange of apartment houses. Defendants appealed from the judgment in favor of plaintiff and from the trial court's orders denying defendants' motions for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and to tax costs by eliminating the amount claimed by plaintiff for the first trial. That trial had ended in a mistrial due to the misconduct of plaintiff 's counsel. Although ordinarily a prevailing party is entitled to recover the costs of a mistrial, the judge at the first trial had apparently ordered plaintiff to pay the costs of the first trial as a penalty for the misconduct of her attorneys. The court of appeal held that the second trial judge improperly reviewed the prior order for costs on the motion to tax costs made after the second trial, and that the second trial judge should not have allowed plaintiff the costs of the first trial (112 Cal. App. 719, 730-731) . The court modified the judgment by deducting the amount taxed as costs of the first trial and affirmed the judgment and orders as modified (112 Cal. App. 719, 731) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.50

§ 60.50 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Cost of Exhibits Prepared by Party Introducing Them

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Cost of Exhibits Prepared by Party Introducing Them

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE COST OF EXHIBITS PREPARED AT THE SOLE INSTANCE OF THE PARTY INTRODUCING THEM AT TRIAL ARE NOT A PROPER ITEM OF COSTS.

Exhibits Prepared for Trial. The cost of exhibits, such as maps and photographs, prepared at the sole instance of the party introducing them at trial is not a proper item of costs (Simms v. County of Los Angeles (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 303, 319, 217 P.2d 936 , cert. denied, (1950) 340 U.S. 891, 71 S. Ct. 207, 95 L. Ed. 646 , reh'g denied, (1951) 340 U.S. 916, 71 S. Ct. 291, 95 L. Ed. 662 ; Crabtree v. Houghton (1923) 191 Cal. 33, 34, 214 P. 846 ; City of Downey v. Gonzales (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 563, 570, 69 Cal. Rptr. 34).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking the amount claimed for the cost of exhibits, such as maps and photographs, that were prepared at the sole instance of the party who introduced them at trial. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhibits Prepared for Trial

In Simms v. County of Los Angeles (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 303, 217 P.2d 936 , cert. denied, (1950) 340 U.S. 891, 71 S. Ct. 207, 95 L. Ed. 646 , reh'g denied, (1951) 340 U.S. 916, 71 S. Ct. 291, 95 L. Ed. 662 , the Supreme Court reversed, with directions, judgments for plaintiffs in actions to recover taxes on certain buildings which were paid under protest. Defendants complained of the trial court's action in allowing certain items as costs to plaintiffs over defendants' objections. One of these items was the cost of photographs which plaintiffs introduced as exhibits at trial and which were apparently obtained at the sole instance of plaintiffs to assist them in proving their case. The Court relied in part on Crabtree v. Houghton (1923) 191 Cal. 33, 214 P. 846 (discussed below) to support its opinion that this expense is not a proper item of costs (35 Cal. 2d 303, 319) .

Crabtree v. Houghton (1923) 191 Cal. 33, 214 P. 846 , involved an appeal from a trial court's order refusing to strike from plaintiff 's cost bill an item claiming plaintiff 's costs for making a map which plaintiff introduced as an exhibit at trial. The map was not prepared at the request or direction of the court or by stipulation of the parties. It was made at the sole instance of plaintiff. The Supreme Court stated that the trial court should have granted defendant's motion to strike this item on the authority of Bathgate v. Irvine (1899) 126 Cal. 135, 149-150, 58 P. 442 (costs of surveys and maps not ordered by court as not allowable), and directed the trial court to modify the judgment by striking this item (191 Cal. 33, 34) .

In City of Downey v. Gonzales (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 563, 69 Cal. Rptr. 34 , defendants appealed from an order granting a motion to retax costs after judgment in an eminent domain proceeding. One of defendants' objections was that the expenses incurred in the preparation of certain photographs introduced at trial were improperly stricken from their cost bill. The court of appeal pointed out that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1255 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1268.710), the trial court had discretion to tax costs in eminent domain proceedings (262 Cal. App. 2d 563, 567) , and, relying on Simms v. County of Los Angeles, discussed above, held that the expenses incurred in the preparation of the photographs were not properly allowable costs and that the trial court was correct in its ruling (262 Cal. App. 2d 563, 570) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.51

§ 60.51 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Attorney's Fee Not Authorized by Contract or Statute

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Claim for Attorney's Fee Not Authorized by Contract or Statute

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

ATTORNEY'S FEES ARE NOT AN ALLOWABLE ITEM OF COSTS IN THIS CASE.

A. General Rule Regarding Attorney's Fees. Except as attorney's fees are specifically provided for by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the agreement, express or implied, of the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021).

B. Attorney's Fees Are Not Generally Recoverable as Costs. Section 1021 of the Code of Civil Procedure is a codification of the general or "American" rule that attorney's fees are not taxable as costs against the losing party (Steele v. Gold (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 928, 931, 198 Cal. Rptr. 257 ; Young v. Redman (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 834-835, 128 Cal. Rptr. 86).

C. Striking Claim for Attorney's Fees. Attorney's fees claimed in a memorandum of costs which are not provided for by statute or contract are properly stricken on a motion to tax costs (Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625-626, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with those set out in § 60.40 in support of a motion to tax costs by striking from the cost bill the claim for attorney's fees which are not authorized by either statute or any contract between the parties.

For discussion of when attorney's fee are recoverable from an opposing party as an item of costs, because they are, contrary to the general American rule, expressly authorized by statute, law, or contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender); see also § 60.90.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Related Memoranda

For extensive memoranda relating to the instances in which attorney's fees are recoverable from an opposing party as an item of costs, see Subpart B, § 60.300 et seq. For memoranda relating to the reduction of an award of attorney's fees on the ground that they are excessive, see §§ 60.41 and 60.650 et seq. For memoranda relating to the reduction of an award of attorney's fees on the ground that part of the services charged were not reasonably related to the litigation, see §§ 60.45 and 60.52 -60.56.

For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion for an award of expenses, including attorney's fees, as a sanction, see § 60.180 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule Regarding Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 provides that except as attorney's fees are specifically provided for by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the agreement, express or implied, of the parties.

[b] Attorney's Fees Are Not Generally Recoverable as Costs

In Steele v. Gold (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 928, 198 Cal. Rptr. 257 , plaintiffs had requested attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (sanctions for dilatory tactics). The trial court expressly declined to make a finding of bad faith, as would be required for an award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5. However, the trial court opined that it had the authority to award the fees as part of an award of costs pursuant to the former version of Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (repealed and reenacted in 1986), relating to an award of costs in superior court cases, and made the requested award on this basis. On petition for writ of mandate, the court of appeal reversed the award. The court stated that the trial court's rationale was at odds with the settled principle, as codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, that a court may generally award attorney's fees only pursuant to an agreement of the parties or statutory authority. The court noted that in the case before it there was no agreement as to fees between the parties, and that the trial court had not relied on any statutory authority that would have permitted an award of attorney fees. The court also declined to hold that the award was proper despite its having been erroneously arrived at, since the trial court could have made the award pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5. Such a holding would require the court to find as a matter of law that an award was required under the cited statutory authority, and the court concluded that it could not make such a finding on the record before it (150 Cal. App. 3d 928, 931) .

In Young v. Redman (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 128 Cal. Rptr. 86 , defendant appealed in part from an award of attorney's fees to the other parties as sanctions for defendant's failure to appear at trial and his vexatious conduct in maintaining unfounded defenses and cross actions in bad faith. In discussing the general power of the trial court to award attorney's fees, the court of appeal stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 (providing that except as specifically provided by statute, compensation for attorney's fees is left to the agreement of the parties) is a codification of the general "American" rule that attorney's fees are not taxable as costs against the losing party (55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 834-835) . The court then discussed the California and federal court exceptions to the general rule, including the rule allowing imposition of fees in federal court when an unfounded action or defense is maintained in bad faith, vexatiously, wantonly, or for oppressive reasons (55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 835-838) . The court held that the trial court abused its discretion in awarding the fees by way of sanctions on the grounds stated, since at the time the case was decided Code Civ. Proc. § 1992 (witness disobeying subpoena) was the only relevant statute providing for such sanctions (55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 839) . The court said that any power of the trial court to impose attorney's fees in exceptional cases when an action is maintained in bad faith must be created by the Legislature with appropriate safeguards and guidelines, and remanded the matter to the trial court for reconsideration of sanctions in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 1992 (55 Cal. App. 3d 827, 839) .

[c] Striking Claim for Attorney's Fees

Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244 , involved an appeal by defendants from an order under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) vacating a previous order denying plaintiff 's motion to tax costs in an action dismissed pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 (now see Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)), requiring the posting of security for expenses, including attorney's fees, in shareholder's derivative action. Defendants timely served on plaintiff a memorandum of costs, which included an item for attorney's fees. Plaintiff 's motion to tax costs on the ground that there was no authority for the award of attorney's fees was not filed within the time allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)), and the trial court denied the motion. Plaintiff then filed a notice of motion based on Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) (relief from order made through party's mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect), requesting that the judgment and order denying the motion to tax costs be vacated and that a corrected judgment which did not include attorney's fees be entered. The trial court granted the motion to vacate the order denying the motion to tax costs and defendant appealed.

In affirming the order, the Supreme Court considered the question of whether attorney's fees could properly be taxed as costs on the dismissal of an action pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 (now see Corp. Code § 800(d)) for failure to provide security, since the trial court would now have to consider the motion to strike on the merits. The Court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, a successful litigant is not ordinarily entitled to attorney's fees as costs in the absence of special statutory authorization (55 Cal. 2d 622, 625) . Former Code Civ. Proc. § 834 (now see Corp. Code § 800(d)) did not contain a provision for an award of attorney's fees when an action was dismissed on the ground that no security was furnished (as opposed to an award of fees incurred in the defense of the action which was to be paid out of the security) and there could therefore be no recovery of attorney's fees as there was no statutory authority for such recovery (55 Cal. 2d 622, 626) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.52

§ 60.52 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Local Travel Expenses Not Incurred to Attend Depositions

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Local Travel Expenses Not Incurred to Attend Depositions

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

LOCAL TRAVEL EXPENSES NOT INCURRED TO ATTEND DEPOSITIONS SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THEY ARE NEITHER EXPRESSLY ALLOWED NOR REASONABLY NECESSARY TO THE CONDUCT OF THE LITIGATION.

Local Travel Expenses Not Needed for Deposition Attendance Are Not Allowable Costs. Local travel expenses are expressly allowed only when incurred to attend depositions (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3)). Furthermore, routine expenses for local travel by attorneys and others are not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation (Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810). Accordingly, these expenses are not recoverable as costs (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.40 and the memoranda set out in §§ 60.44, 60.45, in support of a motion to reduce costs by disallowing local travel expenses incurred in attending a deposition. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Local Travel Expenses Not Needed for Deposition Attendance Are Not Allowable Costs

In Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the defendant prevailed without a trial and filed a memorandum of costs including claims for deposition-related attorney meals; trial exhibits, binders and tabs; faxes; local travel expenses; computer legal research; and investigative expenses. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, but the trial court denied the motion in its entirety.

The court of appeal reversed in part. It noted the only local travel expenses expressly allowed by Code of Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 are those to attend depositions under subdivision (a)(3). The court declared that local travel by attorneys and staff is not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation. In dicta, the court went on to observe counsel had failed to demonstrate how any of the charges claimed as local travel expenses were reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2) (19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775-776) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.53

§ 60.53 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Deposition-Related Attorney Meal Expenses

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Deposition-Related Attorney Meal Expenses

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE DEPOSITION-RELATED MEALS OF ATTORNEYS SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THEY ARE NEITHER EXPRESSLY ALLOWED AS COSTS NOR REASONABLY NECESSARY TO THE CONDUCT OF THE LITIGATION.

Deposition-Related Attorney Meals Are Not Allowable Costs. Although the costs of taking and transcribing depositions and deposition-related travel expenses are allowed as costs by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), deposition-related attorney meals are not similarly allowed. In addition, the court does not have discretion to award these meals as costs because the meals are not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2)). "[A]ttorneys have to eat, whether they are conducting litigation or not" (Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 774, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.40 and the memoranda set out in §§ 60.44, 60.45 in support of a motion to reduce costs by disallowing deposition-related attorney meals. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

This form may also be adapted when any meals are claimed as costs, except meals for jurors which are allowed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(2).

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deposition-Related Attorney Meals Are Not Allowable Costs

In Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the defendant prevailed and filed a memorandum of costs including claims for deposition-related attorney meals; trial exhibits, binders and tabs; faxes; local travel expenses; computer legal research; and investigative expenses. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, but the trial court denied the motion in its entirety.

The court of appeal reversed in part. It noted the only meals specifically allowed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 are juror meals under subdivision (a)(2). The cost of taking and transcribing depositions and travel expenses to attend depositions are allowed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), but not the cost of deposition-related attorney meals. Concluding attorneys must eat, whether or not litigating, the court of appeal held these meals are not allowed as costs because they are not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation (19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 774-775) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.54

§ 60.54 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Exhibits Not Used at Trial

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Costs of Exhibits Not Used at Trial

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE COST OF EXHIBITS NOT USED AT TRIAL SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THEY WERE NEITHER HELPFUL TO THE TRIER OF FACT NOR REASONABLY NECESSARY TO THE CONDUCT OF THE LITIGATION.

A. Exhibits Not Used at Trial Are Not Allowable Costs. The cost of trial exhibits is allowable only if the exhibits were reasonably helpful to the trier of fact (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12)). It follows that costs for exhibits not used at trial are not allowable because they are not helpful to the trier of fact (Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810).

B. Exhibits Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation. Exhibits not reasonably necessary to the conduct of litigation are not allowable (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2), (4); Applegate v. St. Francis Lutheran Church (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 361, 364, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.40 and the memoranda set out in § 60.45 (amounts not reasonably necessary to conduct of litigation), in support of a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing the amount claimed for exhibits not used at trial [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12)]. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhibits Not Used at Trial Are Not Allowable Costs

In Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the defendant prevailed without a trial and filed a memorandum of costs including claims for deposition-related attorney meals; trial exhibits, binders and tabs; faxes; local travel expenses; computer legal research; and investigative expenses. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, but the trial court denied the motion in its entirety.

The court of appeal reversed in part. It held that the exhibits prepared for trial were not helpful to the trier of fact under Code of Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) because the case was dismissed before trial. The court concluded the costs for the exhibits were not allowable. Therefore, the costs were also not reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2) (19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775) .

[b] Exhibits Not Reasonably Necessary to Conduct of Litigation

In Applegate v. St. Francis Lutheran Church (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 361, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 , the plaintiff dismissed the action without prejudice on the day of trial because the trial judge would not grant a continuance. The court granted costs to the defendants, including the cost of preparing trial exhibits. The court of appeal affirmed. The cost of trial exhibits was not allowable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) because they were not helpful to the trier of fact; however, the court still had discretion to grant the costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(2) because they were reasonably necessary to the conduct of the litigation. The defendants had to prepare for trial because they did not know the plaintiff would dismiss on the date set for trial (23 Cal. App. 4th 361, 364) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.55

§ 60.55 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Fax Charges

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Fax Charges

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE FAX CHARGES SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THEY ARE NOT EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED BY LAW AND SHOULD BE TREATED IN THE SAME MANNER AS NONREIMBURSEABLE POSTAGE, TELEPHONE, AND PHOTOCOPYING EXPENSES.

Fax Charges Are Not Allowable Costs. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3) expressly forbids reimbursement of postage, telephone, and photocopying expenses. While the statute makes no reference to fax charges, it is unlikely the Legislature intended to allow this cost while disallowing postage, telephone, and photocopying expenses because a party would be able to circumvent the express prohibitions by using the fax machine. Thus, fax charges are also not allowed (Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.40 and the memoranda set out in § 60.44 (amounts not expressly authorized by law), in support of a motion to tax costs by disallowing fax charges [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3)]. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fax Charges Are Not Allowable Costs

In Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the defendant prevailed and filed a memorandum of costs including claims for deposition-related attorney meals; trial exhibits, binders and tabs; faxes; local travel expenses; computer legal research; and investigative expenses. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, but the trial court denied the motion in its entirety.

The court of appeal reversed in part. It noted Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3) expressly forbids reimbursement of postage, telephone and photocopying expenses. Implying the statute was written when fax machines were not as pervasive, the court reasoned it was unlikely the Legislature intended to allow fax charges as costs while prohibiting postage, telephone and photocopying expenses. The court concluded fax charges are also prohibited under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(3) because the contrary conclusion would allow parties to circumvent the express prohibitions by using the fax machine instead of the mail, the telephone or a photocopier (19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 775) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.56

§ 60.56 Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Computer Legal Research Charges

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--To Strike Computer Legal Research Charges

[For caption, see § 60.40, with which this form should be combined.]

THE COMPUTER LEGAL RESEARCH CHARGES SHOULD BE STRICKEN BECAUSE THEY ARE NONREIMBURSEABLE AS INVESTIGATIVE EXPENSES AND/OR ATTORNEY FEES NOT AUTHORIZED BY CONTRACT OR STATUTE.

Computer Legal Research Charges Are Not Allowable Costs. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2) expressly forbids reimbursement of investigative expenses and Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 prohibits recovery of attorney's fees except by agreement of the parties or statutory authority. Thus, whether characterized as investigative expenses or attorney's fees, computer legal research charges are not allowed as costs (Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 776, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form should be combined with the general form set out in § 60.40 and the memoranda set out in § 60.44 (amounts not expressly authorized by law), and § 60.51 (attorney's fees not expressly authorized by contract, statute, or law), in support of a motion to tax costs by disallowing computer or electronic legal research charges because they are nonreimburseable either as investigative costs or as attorney fees [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2)]. In an appropriate case it may be combined with other forms relating to disallowance or reduction of various attorney-related charges [see § 60.51[2][c]].

This form is not suited for a case in which attorney's fees are recoverable by agreement of the parties or statutory authority. In this event, counsel should argue that computer legal research fees cannot be characterized as attorney's fees because the payment is for the cost of using the research service, rather than compensation for the attorney's time spent.

See also § 60.40[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.40[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Computer Legal Research Charges Are Not Allowable Costs

In Ladas v. California State Auto. Assn. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the defendant prevailed and filed a memorandum of costs including claims for deposition-related attorney meals; trial exhibits, binders and tabs; faxes; local travel expenses; computer legal research; and investigative expenses. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, but the trial court denied the motion in its entirety.

The court of appeal reversed in part. It noted Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(2) expressly forbids reimbursement of investigative expenses and Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 prohibits recovery of attorney's fees except by agreement of the parties or statutory authority. Implying computer legal research fees can be characterized as attorney fees, the court concluded fees for legal research, whether by computer or otherwise, may not be recovered (19 Cal. App. 4th 761, 776) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.57-60.69

[Reserved]

§§ 60.57[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.70

§ 60.70 Opposing Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--Motion Untimely

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items--Motion Untimely

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO TAX COSTS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION TO TAX COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE NOTICE OF MOTION WAS NOT SERVED AND FILED WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED BY RULE 3.1700(b)(1) OF THE CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT, AND THUS ALL OBJECTIONS TO THE COST BILL ARE WAIVED.

A. Time for Filing Motion to Tax. A notice of motion to strike or tax costs shall be filed 15 days, or within the extended period provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 if service was by mail, after service of the cost memorandum (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)).

B. Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs as Waiver of Objections. A party who fails to file a motion to tax costs within the time specified in Rule 3.1700(b)(1) of the California Rules of Court is deemed to have assented to the correctness and lawfulness of the items claimed in the verified memorandum of costs and to have waived his or her right to object (see S.F. etc. Sch. Dist. v. Bd. of Nat. Missions (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 242-243, 276 P.2d 829 (involving former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033, the predecessor to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to strike the memorandum of costs or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items when the motion to tax was filed after the time specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

It is advisable for counsel to also submit cognizable evidence in supports of factual statements, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.], or otherwise by affidavits or declarations. Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits "upon a motion"), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background, research and procedural guides relating to notices of motion to strike a cost bill or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For a memorandum supporting a motion to strike the memorandum of costs on the ground the memorandum was not timely filed, see § 60.13.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

If a motion to tax costs is filed late and is opposed by this memorandum, the party who filed the late motion to strike or tax may file a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), supported by the memorandum set out in § 60.140 et seq. The motion for relief may be accompanied by memoranda supporting a motion to tax costs, set out in § 60.40 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time for Filing Motion to Tax

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), provides that a notice of motion to strike or tax costs is to be filed 15 days, or within the extended period provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1013 if service was by mail, after service of the cost memorandum.

[b] Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs as Waiver of Objections

S.F. etc. Sch. Dist. v. Bd. of Nat. Missions (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 276 P.2d 829 , arose out of a condemnation proceeding. Defendant appealed from the judgment in his favor contending that the award was grossly inadequate and unsupported. Plaintiff appealed from the trial court's order denying plaintiff 's motion to strike the whole cost bill on the ground the motion had been filed late. Plaintiff filed this motion 26 days after the cost bill was served, and therefore after expiration of the time specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)). In affirming the judgment and order, the court of appeal stated that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 has been held to be mandatory in regard to the time to file the cost bill and that, given that fact, it would seem that the requirement in the same section in regard to the time to tax would also be mandatory (129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 242) . The court relied on the discussion in Mojave & B. R. Co. v. Cuddeback (1915) 28 Cal. App. 439, 441-442, 152 P. 943 , in which the court held that a party failing to move to tax costs within the then statutory time is deemed to have assented to the correctness of the items claimed and to have waived any and all objections to the claim for costs. The court also relied on Griffith v. Welbanks & Co. (1915) 26 Cal. App. 477, 480, 147 P. 986 , in which the court stated that if a cost bill is filed and served within the time prescribed, the adverse party is conclusively deemed to have waived any and all objections to the cost bill if he or she fails to file a notice of motion to have the costs taxed within the specified time (129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 242-243) . The court in San Francisco then held that since no motion to tax was filed within the time limit prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033, and since relief from the failure to timely file the motion was not sought under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) (mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect), the trial court properly refused to strike the cost bill (129 Cal. App. 2d 236, 243) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.71-60.79

[Reserved]

§§ 60.71[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.80

§ 60.80 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Costs Allowed to Prevailing Party as Matter of Right

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Costs Allowed to Prevailing Party as Matter of Right

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO _____ [STRIKE MEMOR-
_____ [name],	)	ANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF COST or TAX COSTS] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE _____ [identify party claiming costs, e.g., PLAINTIFF] WAS THE PREVAILING PARTY IN THIS _____ [ACTION or PROCEEDING] AND IS ENTITLED TO COSTS AS A MATTER OF RIGHT.

A. Prevailing Party's Right to Costs. Except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party is entitled as a matter of right to recover costs in any action or proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b); Murillo v. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 985, 991, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682, 953 P.2d 858).

B. "Prevailing Party" Defined. The term "prevailing party," as used in Section 1032 of the Code of Civil Procedure, includes _____[the party with a net monetary recovery or a defendant in whose favor a dismissal is entered or a defendant when neither plaintiff nor defendant obtains any relief or a defendant as against those plaintiffs who do not recover any relief against that defendant] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)).

[Optional] C. "Complaint," "Defendant," and "Plaintiff" Defined. As used in Section 1032 of the Code of Civil Procedure, "complaint" includes a cross complaint, "defendant" includes a cross defendant or a person against whom a complaint is filed, and "plaintiff" includes a cross complainant or a party who files a complaint in intervention (Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(1)-(3)).

[Optional] D. Costs Not Available Only if Expressly Disallowed by Statute. Since the rule that a prevailing party is entitled to recover costs applies "[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided by statute" (Code Civ. Proc. s 1032(b)), there are no implied exceptions to the rule. Costs to the prevailing party are disallowed only if a statute expressly disallows them (Murillo v. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 985, 991, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682, 953 P.2d 858).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate; see, e.g., § 60.81 et seq.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to strike the memorandum of costs [see § 60.10 et seq.] or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items [see § 60.40 et seq.], on the general ground that party seeking costs is the prevailing party in the action or proceeding, and is therefore entitled generally to costs as a matter of right.

This form should be combined with additional memoranda, as applicable, set out in § 60.81 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed discussion of when a party is deemed to be a "prevailing party" in the action or proceedings, and discussion and forms relating to the procedure for the court to determine who is prevailing when necessary, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[d] Related Memoranda

For additional memoranda to combine with this form, see § 60.81 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

Memoranda that may be used in opposition to the general memoranda in this form, are set out in § 60.10 et seq. (supporting motion to strike memorandum) and § 60.40 et seq. (supporting motion to tax costs).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party's Right to Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) provides that except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party is entitled as a matter of right to recover costs in any action or proceeding.

For discussion of Murillo v. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 985, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682, 953 P.2d 858 , see § 60.80[3][d].

[b] "Prevailing Party" Defined

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) provides that the term "prevailing party," as used in Section 1032 of the Code of Civil Procedure, includes the party with a net monetary recovery, a defendant in whose favor a dismissal is entered, a defendant when neither plaintiff nor defendant obtains any relief, and defendant as against those plaintiffs who do not recover any relief against that defendant.

In addition to this definition of the prevailing party, Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) further provides that when any party recovers other than monetary relief and in situations other than as specified, the "prevailing party" shall be as determined by the court, and under those circumstances, the court, in its discretion, may allow costs or not and, if allowed, may apportion costs between the parties on the same or adverse sides pursuant to rules adopted by the Judicial Council under Code Civ. Proc. § 1034.

Nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 prohibits parties from stipulating to alternative procedures for awarding costs in the litigation pursuant to rules adopted by the Judicial Council under Code Civ. Proc. § 1034 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(c)].

[c] "Complaint," "Defendant," and "Plaintiff" Defined

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(1)-(3) provides that as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, "complaint" includes a cross complaint, "defendant" includes a cross defendant or a person against whom a complaint is filed, and "plaintiff" includes a cross complainant or a party who files a complaint in intervention.

[d] Costs Not Available Only if Expressly Disallowed by Statute

In Murillo v. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 985, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682, 953 P.2d 858 , the defendant sellers prevailed in an action under the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act and sought to recover costs and expert witness fees under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032(b) and 998. Even though Code Civ. Proc. § 1794(d), which is part of the Song-Beverly Consumer Warranty Act provides for recovery of costs by buyers, the trial court granted the defendant sellers their costs, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. It held that because Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) provides for recovery of costs by the prevailing party "[e]xcept as otherwise expressly provided by statute," there are no implied statutory exceptions to the rule. Costs to the prevailing party are disallowed only if a statute expressly disallows them. Code Civ. Proc. § 1794(d), at most, only implies the defendant sellers should not recover costs. Accordingly, the general statute providing for costs, Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b), allows recovery (17 Cal. 4th 985, 989-999) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Prevailing Party" Defined

In Agnew v. State Bd. of Equalization (2005) 134 Cal. App. 4th 899, 36 Cal. Rptr. 3d 464 , a taxpayer sued to recover sales tax and interest paid to the State Board of Equalization on the sale of shareholder interests in a racing horse. After the taxpayer made an offer to settle under Code. Civ. Proc. § 998, which the Board did accept, the taxpayer and the Board settled before trial at a sum higher than that offered by the taxpayer. The Court of Appeal held that the taxpayer was entitled to recover costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b), even though he could not recover costs or attorney's fees under Rev. & Tax Code § 7156 because he did not come within definition of "prevailing party" under that section. The taxpayer was the party with a net monetary recovery and thus a "prevailing party" for an award of costs and expert witness fees under Code Civil Proc. §§ 1032, 1028 and 998, and Rev. & Tax. Code § 7156 contains no express exception to the general rule permitting a taxpayer as a prevailing party to recover costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b), as possibly augmented by Code Civ. Proc. § 998. However, the taxpayer was not entitled to attorney's fees as costs as authorized by Rev. & Tax. Code § 7156, because the taxpayer failed to make the required showing under § 7156 that the Board's litigation position was not substantially justified as a condition precedent to qualify for an award of fees as costs (134 Cal. App. 4th 899, 911-916) .

In Arntz Contracting Co. v. St. Paul Fire and Marine Ins. Co. (1996) 47 Cal. App. 4th 464, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 888 , a party prevailed on a cause of action based on a contract which included a unilateral provision allowing the other party to recover costs in excess of statutory costs should it prevail. The nonprevailing party argued the prevailing party could not recover costs in excess of statutory costs as a reciprocal right under Civ. Code § 1717. The court of appeal, however, held that Civ. Code § 1717 may give a party a reciprocal right to recover costs in excess of statutory costs, even though the contract does not provide for an award of costs to that party (47 Cal. App. 4th 464, 492) .

[b] Costs Not Available Only If Expressly Disallowed by Statute

In El Dorado Meat Co. v. Yosemite Meat & Locker Service, Inc. (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 612, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 590 , a complex business tort action, plaintiff alleged that defendant engaged in actions that made plaintiff uncompetitive and drove it out of business. Some claims were dismissed before trial. Others were tried to a jury, which found for defendant. Still others were tried to the court, which also found for defendant. The court entered judgment for defendant on all claims. Defendant filed a memorandum of costs seeking, inter alia, to recover for models, blowups, and photocopies of exhibits under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) for a trial exhibit that summarized voluminous business records produced in discovery by both parties and was projected on a screen during trial. Defendant broke the cost down into three categories: The cost of personnel who compiled the data from the business records upon which the charts and graphs were based; charges for photocopying the source documents that supported the exhibit; and the cost of equipment to project documents on a screen at trial. Defendant argued in the alternative that the portion paid for personnel who processed the data was also awardable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4) in the court's discretion. The trial court's award of costs to defendant reflected the court's deduction for trial transcripts claimed to be but never actually ordered prepared by the court (150 Cal. App. 4th 612, 614-616) .

The appellate court held that the trial court properly allowed defendant to recover costs for hourly billings for personnel employed by defendant's consultant and counsel to process the raw data that went into a trial exhibit that summarized voluminous business records produced in discovery by both parties, even assuming the costs were not recoverable as a matter of right under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12). Those expenses were properly awarded as discretionary cost items under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4). Given the nature of the case, defendant could not mount its defense without presenting years' worth of its own and plaintiff's business data, and given the volume of data, defendant could not present it without summaries. Costs awarded for the photocopying of exhibits were allowable as of right under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12), (b)(3), because the copying was of 160,000 pages of business documents produced by the parties in discovery and admitted into evidence. Costs for equipment to project documents on a screen were allowable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) as an award for blowups of exhibits helpful to aid the trier of fact, because the trial court had discretion both to interpret "blowups" as including blowing up documents by projecting them on a screen and to find the projection equipment reasonably helpful (150 Cal. App. 4th 612, 616-620) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.81

§ 60.81 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Express Award of Costs Not Required

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Express Award of Costs Not Required

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE AN EXPRESS AWARD OF COSTS IS NOT REQUIRED WHEN STATUTE SO PROVIDES.

Express Award of Costs Not Required. When there is express statutory authority for an allowance of costs as a matter of course, the costs are allowed as a matter of right and an express award of costs in the judgment or order is not necessary; the costs may be claimed by filing a memorandum of costs (Miles California Co. v. Hawkins (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 162, 163-165, 345 P.2d 492 (involving former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, which was repealed in 1986 and replaced by a new Code Civ. Proc. § 1032).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use is combination with the general memorandum set out in § 60.80, when a ground for an opposition to a motion to strike the memorandum of costs or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items is that an express award is not required in order to recover costs as the prevailing party.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Express Award of Costs Not Required

In Miles California Co. v. Hawkins (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 162, 345 P.2d 492 , defendants were adjudged in contempt for violation of a permanent injunction. The formal order did not contain a provision for costs, but plaintiff filed a timely memorandum of costs. Defendants moved to strike the memorandum, contending that the contempt order made no provision for costs and that the trial court therefore had no jurisdiction to award costs.

The trial court denied the motion and ordered the costs entered in the margin of the contempt order. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order awarding costs. The court stated that contempt is a special proceeding, that plaintiff as the successful party was entitled to costs as a matter of course under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a) (repealed in 1986; now see new Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), (b)), and that it was not necessary for the court to award costs in its order adjudging defendants guilty of contempt (175 Cal. App. 2d 162, 163-164) . The court distinguished Gould v. Moss (1910) 158 Cal. 548, 549, 111 P. 925 , and Kaufman v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1936) 5 Cal. 2d 761, 769, 56 P.2d 504 , as cases which dealt with the effect of the omission of a provision for costs in judgments that do not carry costs as a matter of course but are within the court's discretion (175 Cal. App. 2d 162, 164-165) .

Under the definition of "prevailing party" set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4) (see § 60.80), it would appear that the plaintiff in Miles, under current law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b)), would no longer be entitled to costs as a matter of right. The court could, of course, under the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), determine that the plaintiff is the prevailing party, and in that event the court could in its discretion allow or deny costs or apportion costs between the parties.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.82

§ 60.82 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A DEFENDANT IS ENTITLED TO COSTS ON DISMISSAL OF A COMPLAINT IN INTERVENTION.

Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention. On dismissal of a complaint in intervention, the defendant is entitled to those costs attributable to the period of time when the plaintiff in intervention was a party to the principal action (Catello v. I.T.T. General Controls (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1012, 1015, 200 Cal. Rptr. 4).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.80, for an opposition to a motion to strike the memorandum of costs or to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that a defendant is entitled to costs when a complaint in intervention is dismissed.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Complaint in Intervention

In Catello v. I.T.T. General Controls (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 200 Cal. Rptr. 4 , a worker's compensation insurance carrier intervened in an action by an employee against defendant for benefits paid to the employee. The insurance carrier voluntarily dismissed its complaint against defendant on the first day of trial. A verdict was ultimately given in favor of defendant. Defendant submitted its cost bill against the intervener regarding those costs incurred while the intervener was in the case. The intervener moved to strike the entire cost bill. The trial court granted the motion and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that dismissal of a complaint in intervention was a dismissal of "the action" within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (repealed in 1986; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)). Therefore, defendant was entitled to costs as a matter of course when plaintiff in intervention voluntarily dismissed its complaint (152 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1012-1013) . The court held that since the intervener becomes a party to the action, with all the same procedural rights and remedies of the original parties, for purposes of allocating costs pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, parties in intervention are either entitled to an award of costs or may be held liable for costs in the same manner as the original parties (152 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1013-1014, 1015) . However, the intervener's liability for costs would be fixed by determining the intervener's alignment with the original parties and would be limited to those costs incurred while the intervener was a party to the action (152 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1012, 1015) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.83

§ 60.83 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff From Recovering Preoffer Costs

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff From Recovering Preoffer Costs

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS ENTITLED TO THOSE COSTS INCURRED BEFORE DEFENDANT MADE THE SETTLEMENT OFFER THAT PROVED TO BE MORE FAVORABLE THAN THE JUDGMENT AWARDED TO PLAINTIFF.

Plaintiff Who Reject More Favorable Settlement Offer Remains Entitled to Preoffer Costs. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998, a plaintiff who rejects a settlement offer that is greater than the recovery that he or she ultimately obtains may nonetheless recover preoffer costs to which he or she would otherwise be entitled[, including preoffer attorney's fees when attorney's fees are an authorized category of recoverable costs under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1032 and 1033.5] (Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.80, to oppose a motion that seeks to strike or tax plaintiff's costs incurred before, rather than after, a settlement offer made under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that proved to be more favorable the judgment ultimately awarded. The ground for opposition is that the plaintiff is nevertheless entitled to recover preoffer costs and fees.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

This form may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion to strike a cost memorandum or to tax costs that is supported by the memoranda set out in § 60.16.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Who Reject More Favorable Settlement Offer Remains Entitled to Preoffer Costs

In Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 , the defendant, the general contractor of a construction project, subcontracted with plaintiff to perform mechanical work on the project. The subcontract included a provision for attorney's fees. Plaintiff incurred large costs overruns in performing its work on the project, and brought an action against defendant alleging that these overruns were the result of defendant's breach of the subcontract due to negligent management. Plaintiff prayed for damages of over $2 million. Before trial, plaintiff rejected a settlement offer made by defendant under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 in the amount of $900,000. After a court trial, the court found that defendant breached the subcontract as alleged by plaintiff, but, since the court disallowed many of the items of plaintiff's alleged damages, plaintiff obtained a judgment of only $442,054. The trial court also awarded plaintiff its preoffer costs, including attorney's fees, amounting to $226,812, and awarded defendant its postoffer costs, including attorney's fees, totaling $881,635 (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1107-1108) .

The Supreme Court granted review to decide (1) whether plaintiff was entitled to its preoffer attorney's fees and other costs and (2) whether defendant was entitled to its postoffer attorney's fees (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1108) . With respect to the first issue, Code Civ. Proc. § 998, at the time relevant to this decision, provided that a plaintiff who rejects a settlement offer but fails to obtain a more favorable judgment "shall not recover his or her costs and shall pay the defendant's costs from the time of the offer." Defendant interpreted the final phrase of this clause, "from the time of the offer," to modify only "the defendant's costs" to be paid by plaintiff. Thus, defendant argued, plaintiff "shall not recover" any costs whatsoever when this clause applies.

The Court rejected this contention, noting that it was also grammatically plausible to construe the clause so that "from the time of the offer" describes not only the costs that recoverable by defendant but also those no longer available to plaintiff. This was the interpretation adopted over a century ago, in Douthitt v. Finch (1890) 84 Cal. 214, 215, 24 P. 929 , when the Court interpreted the predecessor statute to Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to permit a plaintiff to recover preoffer costs after failing to obtain a judgment in excess of the defendant's settlement offer. The Legislature implicitly accepted this interpretation by retaining substantially the same language in the later enactment of, and later amendments to, Code Civ. Proc. § 998. Moreover, the Legislature amended the language in 1997, so that Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c)(1) currently provides that a plaintiff may not recover "postoffer costs" after rejecting a settlement offer more favorable than the ultimate judgment. The Court noted that legislative history showed that this amendment was intended to clarify and confirm, not change, existing law. The Court concluded that a plaintiff who rejects a settlement offer that is greater than the recovery which the he or she ultimately obtains may nonetheless recover preoffer costs to which he or she would otherwise be entitled, including preoffer attorney's fees when attorney's fees are an authorized category of recoverable costs under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1032 and 1033.5 (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1110-1112) .

For discussion of the second issue decided by the Court, that is, defendant's entitlement to recover postoffer attorney's fees as costs, see § 60.85[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.84

§ 60.84 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff's Costs When Judgment Plus Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Fees Exceed Defendant's Settlement Offer

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Does Not Preclude Plaintiff's Costs When Judgment Plus Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Fees Exceed Defendant's Settlement Offer

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S SETTLEMENT OFFER UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 998 DOES NOT EXCEED THE SUM OF THE JUDGMENT OBTAINED BY PLAINTIFF AND PLAINTIFF'S PREOFFER COSTS AND ATTORNEY'S FEES.

Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Added to Judgment When Determining Whether Judgment Is More Favorable Than Defendant's Settlement Offer. When determining whether plaintiff obtained a judgment "more favorable" than the defendant's settlement offer, for purposes of applying the cost-shifting provision of Code of Civil Procedure Section 998, the court is to compare the defendant's settlement offer with the judgment plus plaintiff's preoffer costs, including preoffer attorney's fees (Heritage Engineering Const., Inc. v. City of Industry (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1440-1442, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.80 to oppose a motion that seeks to strike plaintiff's costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 because plaintiff rejected a settlement offer more favorable than the judgment. The ground for opposition is that the settlement offer is not more favorable when compared to the judgment plus plaintiff's preoffer costs and attorney's fees.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

This memoranda that may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion to strike a cost memorandum or to tax costs that is supported by the memoranda set out in § 60.16.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Preoffer Costs and Attorney's Fees Are Added to Judgment When Determining Whether Judgment Is More Favorable Than Defendant's Settlement Offer

Heritage Engineering Const., Inc. v. City of Industry (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 459 is discussed in § 60.16[3][b].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.84A

§ 60.84A Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Plaintiff Recovered More Than Amount Offered by Defendant for Purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 by Taking Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of Time § 998 Offer Was Outstanding, But Not Considering Settlements Not Yet Reached

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Plaintiff Recovered More Than Amount Offered by Defendant for Purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 by Taking Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of Time § 998 Offer Was Outstanding, But Not Considering Settlements Not Yet Reached

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S SETTLEMENT OFFER UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 998 DOES NOT EXCEED THE SUM OF THE RECOVERY OBTAINED BY PLAINTIFF TAKING INTO ACCOUNT OTHER SETTLEMENTS ENTERED AS OF THE TIME DEFENDANT'S § 998 OFFER WAS OUTSTANDING, BUT NOT CONSIDERING SETTLEMENTS NOT YET REACHED.

Plaintiff's Recovery for the Purposes of Determining Whether the Cost-Shifting Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Apply Takes Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of the Time of Defendant's Offer, But Not Other Settlements Not Yet Reached. Plaintiff is the prevailing party for the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 998, even though plaintiff's judgment was reduced to zero by the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 877, offsetting plaintiff's recovery by the amount of a settlement reached with a codefendant, because plaintiff's recovery for the purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 does not take into account settlements not reached as of the time of defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer (Guerrero v. Rodan Termite Control, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1439-1445) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.80 to oppose a motion that seeks to strike plaintiff's costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 because plaintiff's recovery would have been less than defendant's offer when taking into consideration not only settlements entered as of the time of defendant's offer, but also other settlements pending to offset the recovery obtained by plaintiff against defendant. The ground for opposition is that plaintiff's recovery is determined only by taking into consideration the settlements that were entered at the time of defendant's offer, not those not yet reached.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

This memoranda that may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion to strike a cost memorandum or to tax costs that is supported by the memoranda set out in § 60.16.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Recovery for the Purposes of Determining Whether the Cost-Shifting Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Apply Takes Into Account Other Settlements Entered as of the Time of Defendant's Offer, But Not Other Settlements Not Yet Reached

In Guerrero v. Rodan Termite Control, Inc. (2008) 163 Cal. App. 4th 1435 , plaintiff purchased a home from a private party, and both parties were represented in the transaction by the same real estate agent. Prior to the close of escrow, the home was inspected by defendants and its agent. Shortly after the close of escrow, plaintiff discovered dry rot in the bathroom and kitchen and evidence of unpermitted and undisclosed repairs to the home. Plaintiff filed suit against the seller, the realtor, and defendants. Defendants served on plaintiff a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 offer to compromise for $5,000, each side to bear its own costs. Plaintiff did not accept the offer. Approximately three years later, shortly before the start of trial, plaintiff entered a judicially approved good faith settlement with the realtor for $34,000. The seller was dismissed at the start of trial, and the case proceeded to trial against defendants, and the jury returned a special verdict for plaintiff in the amount of $15,600. The court subsequently granted defendant's motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877 to offset the settlement proceeds against the verdict and reduce the judgment to zero, and judgment was entered in favor of plaintiff for zero dollars. After the entry of judgment, the parties both filed cost memoranda. Defendants moved to tax the costs plaintiff incurred subsequent to the filing of the § 998 offer to compromise, arguing that plaintiff's zero judgment was not more favorable than the $5,000 settlement offer. At the same time, plaintiff filed a motion to strike defendants' memorandum of costs, contending he was nonetheless the prevailing party. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion to strike defendants' memorandum of costs and denied defendants' motion, on the ground that the court was on the verge of finding that the § 998 offer was not even a good faith offer, that defendants got the benefit of a pretrial settlement with another defendant, and that the purpose of § 998 is to encourage reasonable prejudgment or pretrial settlements. Defendants filed a timely notice of appeal (163 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1438-1439) .

The Court of Appeal affirmed. The court held that, for the purpose of allocating costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, a plaintiff whose judgment is reduced to zero by operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 877 could be deemed to have obtained a more favorable judgment or award than a rejected § 998 offer to pay $5,000. In determining whether plaintiff obtained a more favorable judgment or award than a § 998 offer, the objective of encouraging settlement requires consideration of the status of the litigation when the § 998 offer was submitted. When defendants submitted their $5,000 offer early in the litigation, plaintiff had recovered nothing by way of settlement or otherwise and had a valid claim against defendants that the jury later determined to be worth substantially more than the $5,000 that defendants offered. Plaintiff thus did not reject an offer that the outcome of trial indicated should have been accepted. Even if defendants' offer was not so low as to have been in bad faith, there was still no reason why defendants should have been rewarded for having submitted the offer, nor was there any reason to penalize plaintiff for having rejected it. Plaintiff incurred costs subsequent to rejecting the offer in pursuit of a claim with a value of at least $15,600. Regardless of the offset based on subsequent developments in the litigation, plaintiff was justified in rejecting the offer when he rejected it. The situation would have been different if defendants had submitted a § 998 offer for $5,000 after plaintiff had accepted $34,000 in settlement from the realtor. In that event, plaintiff would have been required to evaluate the likelihood of recovering at least $39,000 from defendants. Had he rejected the offer at that time, it would have been entirely consistent with the objectives of § 998 to shift the burden of subsequently incurred costs to him. However, because there was no settlement when defendants made their offer, plaintiff had occasion to evaluate only the prospects of recovering more than $5,000. Since plaintiff did in fact recover more than that amount and obtained a verdict against defendants for more than that amount, there was no reason to give defendants a windfall benefit because other defendants later decided to settle for an amount that offset plaintiff's verdict against them. Although in the present case no issue arose as to whether the date on which the § 998 offer was submitted or the date on which it was rejected or deemed withdrawn by expiration of the period for acceptance should control, the court opined that it should be the latter. Should the plaintiff settle with other defendants after receiving a § 998 offer that is still outstanding, there is no reason why the plaintiff should not be required to take that settlement into account in deciding whether to accept the § 998 offer (163 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1439-1445) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.85

§ 60.85 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant Is Entitled to Postoffer Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, Including Postoffer Attorney's Fees

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant Is Entitled to Postoffer Costs Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, Including Postoffer Attorney's Fees

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT, PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 998(c), IS DEEMED A PREVAILING PARTY FOR PURPOSES OF RECOVERING COSTS INCURRED AFTER MAKING A SETTLEMENT OFFER. DEFENDANT IS ENTITLED UNDER THAT SECTION TO RECOVER THOSE COSTS[, WHICH INCLUDE ATTORNEY'S FEES INCURRED AFTER MAKING THE OFFER].

A. When Defendant Is Treated as Prevailing Party for Purposes of Postoffer Costs. While the general rule under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1032 provides that only a prevailing party recovers its costs, the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 998 modify this general rule (see Code Civ. Proc. § 998(a)). Thus, under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998(c), a defendant is treated as the prevailing party for the purposes of recovering postoffer costs, when that defendant's pretrial offer proves to be greater than the judgment received by the plaintiff (Scott Co. v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974).

B. Judgment More Favorable Than Offer Is Prima Facie Evidence of Reasonableness. Where a defendant obtains a judgment more favorable than its offer, the judgment constitutes prima facie evidence showing the offer was reasonable and the offeror is eligible for costs under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998. The burden is on the plaintiff to prove otherwise (Barba v. Perez (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 444, 450-451, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715 ; Carver v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 152, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569).

[Optional] C. Defendant's Postoffer Costs Include Postoffer Attorney's Fees. When a defendant is entitled to recover postoffer costs under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998(c), these costs include postoffer attorney's fees incurred by the defendant to the extent that the defendant, treated as the prevailing party for this purpose, would otherwise be entitled to recover such fees as an element of costs under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 1032 and 1033.5 (Scott Co. v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112-1113, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.80, to oppose a motion to strike or tax a defendant's memorandum of costs seeking postoffer costs, when the defendant has made a pretrial settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 that subsequently proved to be greater than the amount recovered by plaintiff in the judgment. Optional Paragraph B is for use when a defendant is entitled to postoffer attorney's fees as an element of postoffer costs. The ground for opposition is that, while the plaintiff received a net recovery under the judgment and is therefore technically the prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032, defendant is nevertheless to be treated as a prevailing party for the purposes of recovering postoffer costs due to the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 998(a) and (c). Further, these postoffer costs include postoffer attorney's fees incurred by the defendant, when defendant, treated as prevailing party for this purpose, would otherwise be entitled to recover attorney's fees as an element of costs under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032 and 1033.5.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting an award of attorney's fees as costs under pursuant to statute or contract, see § 60.300 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Defendant Is Treated as Prevailing Party for Purposes of Postoffer Costs

The facts and procedural background of Scott Co. of California v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 , are discussed in § 60.83[3][a]. The Supreme Court granted review in this case to decide (1) whether plaintiff was entitled to its preoffer attorney's fees and other costs and (2) whether defendant was entitled to its postoffer attorney's fees (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1108) . With respect to the second issue, the Court noted that the general rule under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 is that only a prevailing party may recover its costs. The Court held, however, that the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 modify this general rule, pursuant to the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 998(a). Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c), a defendant is therefore treated as the prevailing party for the purposes of recovering postoffer costs, when that defendant made a pretrial settlement offer that plaintiff rejected, but which proved to be greater than the judgment plaintiff ultimately received. In other words, the postoffer costs to which a defendant is entitled in this situation consist of the costs a prevailing party would be entitled to recover under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032 (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112) .

The Court noted that the categories of postoffer costs to which a defendant is entitled under Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c) are ordinarily the same as the categories of preoffer costs to which the plaintiff is entitled as prevailing party (20 Cal.

4th 1103, 1115 n.3). For example, attorney's fees are recoverable by a prevailing party as an element of costs when their recovery is authorized by contract or statute [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10), (b)]. Accordingly, when attorney's fees are otherwise recoverable by a prevailing party as an element of costs, a defendant, treated as the prevailing party for purposes of postoffer costs, is ordinarily entitled likewise to recover postoffer attorney's fees as an element of these costs, by operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 in combination with Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032, 1033.5, and any other applicable statute, such as Civ. Code § 1717 (attorney's fees recoverable under contract provision) (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112-1116) .

The Court cautioned in dictum, however, that some statutes authorizing the recovery of attorney's fees make a distinction between prevailing plaintiffs and prevailing defendants. While Code Civ. Proc. § 998 applies to all such statutes for purposes of postoffer costs as if the defendant were the prevailing party, it neither expands nor contracts the categories of costs to which a prevailing defendant would be entitled. Thus, if the case is governed by a statute under which a prevailing plaintiff, but not a prevailing defendant, is entitled to attorney's fees, then a defendant who does not prevail but is nonetheless entitled to its postoffer costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is not entitled to its postoffer attorney's fees as part of those costs, even though the prevailing plaintiff may obtain its preoffer attorney's fees as part of its preoffer costs. (citing Murillo v. Fleetwood Enterprises, Inc. (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 985, 994, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 682, 953 P.2d 858 , discussed in § 60.80[3][d]) (20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1115 n.3).

For discussion of the first issue decided by the Court, regarding the plaintiff's entitlement to preoffer costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c), see § 60.83[3][a].

[b] Judgment More Favorable Than Offer Is Prima Facie Evidence of Reasonableness

In Barba v. Perez (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 444, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 715 , the plaintiff was injured at the defendant's business premises when a refrigerator rolled onto the plaintiff's foot. The plaintiff served the defendant with a settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 along with the summons and complaint. The defendant answered the complaint but did not respond to the settlement offer. Following entry of judgment in the plaintiff's favor, the plaintiff filed a memorandum of costs, including prejudgment interest and expert witness fees, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 998. The defendant filed a motion to tax costs, arguing that the fees and costs were not recoverable. The trial court allowed the plaintiff to recover the costs.

On appeal, the defendant argued that it was unreasonable to expect that when first faced with the service of summons and a complaint, he would have a reasonable basis to determine whether the plaintiff's offer to compromise was fair. The defendant argued that the trial court abused its discretion in denying his motion because at the time the plaintiff served him with the offer, he had no basis to determine if the offer was reasonable. The court of appeal rejected this argument. It held that one factor to be considered by the trial court as to the reasonableness of an offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 is the amount offered as compared to the judgment ultimately recovered (166 Cal. App. 4th 444, 450). If an offeror obtains a judgment more favorable than its offer, the judgment constitutes prima facie evidence showing the offer was reasonable (166 Cal. App. 4th 444, 450). The court held that this is exactly what Code Civ. Proc. § 998 was designed to do: encourage the parties to consider the option of settlement seriously, before significant fees are incurred and they become entrenched in their positions (166 Cal. App. 4th 444, 451).

In Carver v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 569 , petroleum product dealers sued a refiner and retailer of petroleum products in a dispute arising from a variable rent program the refiner introduced for all lease renewals executed after a certain date. The dealers alleged 18 causes of action, including intentional misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, concealment, breach of contract, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and unlawful horizontal and vertical restraints of trade. Individual defendants, who were management employee's of the corporate defendant, were named in causes of action for intentional misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, concealment, negligence and unfair trade practices. Many of the causes of action were disposed of in the defendant's favor in pretrial motion proceedings. In the course of the litigation, the refiner made a settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 of $100 per dealer, plus a waiver of attorney's fees and costs, which the dealers refused. At trial, the jury returned verdicts against the refiner on the causes of action for intentional misrepresentation, negligent misrepresentation, and concealment, but the refiner prevailed on claims for breach of contract, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing and unlawful vertical restraint of trade. On appeal, the appellate court reversed the judgment against the refiner and directed the trial court to enter judgment in its favor on those causes of action, and affirmed the judgment in its favor on the other causes of action. On remand, judgment was entered in the refiner's favor on the case as a whole. The refiner moved for an award of attorney's fees and costs based on the attorney's fees clause in the leases, its status as prevailing party, and the Section 998 offer refused by the dealers. The trial court granted the motion in part, based on Civ. Code § 1717. The trial court also awarded expert witness fees based on the Section 998 offer (97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 137-139) .

The Court of Appeal affirmed the award of expert witness fees. The court held that the dealers failed to prove that the judgment, which was more favorable than the Section 998 offer which waived attorney's fees and costs, was not reasonable. The court found that there is no difficulty reading the requirements for recovery of costs and fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 in conjunction with Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) and that the Cartwright Act's attorney's fees provision did not disable a prevailing defendant from recovering costs and fees in general (97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 153-154) . The court held that the offer could reasonably have been deemed by the trial court to be reasonable and good faith in light of the circumstances at the time the offer was made. It was no secret that the defendant had hired expensive lawyers who were expected to pursue all avenues of defense, and that they might eventually be successful was reasonably foreseeable at the time the offer was made. Further, the trial court limited the recoverable expert witness fees from the requested amount in the exercise of its discretion. The court held further than the fact that the expert fees were largely attributable to the Cartwright Act defense did not make any difference, and the reduction showed an additional effort to achieve an equitable result in light of the policies of Code Civ. Proc. § 998 (97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 154) . The court held that, as to the individual defendants, it was not dispositive that they did not make any settlement offers on their own behalf, since the allegations about them were that they were acting in the course and scope of their employment, so that they trial court had an adequate factual basis on which to conclude that the defenses rendered to the corporation and the individual defendants were well integrated and involved the same issues for purposes of expert fees (97 Cal. App. 4th 132, 155) .

[c] Defendant's Postoffer Costs Include Postoffer Attorney's Fees

For discussion of Scott Co. v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 , see § 60.85[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.86

§ 60.86 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Not Effective to Shift Costs to Plaintiff

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Offer Not Effective to Shift Costs to Plaintiff

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION TO _____ [STRIKE THE MEMORANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S OFFER PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 998(c) IS NOT EFFECTIVE TO SHIFT COSTS TO PLAINTIFF UNDER SECTION 998.

A. Settlement Offer Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 Is Ineffective to Shift Costs to Plaintiff If It Includes a Nonmonetary Component. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998(c), a defendant is treated as the prevailing party for the purposes of recovering postoffer costs, when that defendant's pretrial offer proves to be greater than the judgment received by the plaintiff (Scott Co. v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974). However, the defendant's offer will not be effective to shift costs to plaintiff when it includes a nonmonetary component, such as a release of claims not at issue in the action (Valentino v. Elliott Sav-On Gas, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 247 Cal. Rptr. 483) or, in a defamation case, an agreement to maintain the confidentiality of the settlement and/or the settlement amount (Barella v. Exchange Bank (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 793, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167). Further, an offer made under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to multiple parties is not valid if it is not expressly apportioned among the parties to whom the offer is made and is not conditioned on acceptance by all of them, so that a single, lump sum offer to multiple plaintiffs which requires them to agree to apportionment among themselves is not valid (Weinberg v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1086, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.80 to oppose a motion to strike or tax a plaintiff's memorandum of costs when the defendant has made a pretrial settlement offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 which contained a nonmonetary component in addition to a monetary offer that subsequently proved to be greater than the amount recovered by plaintiff in the judgment. The ground for opposition is that while Code Civ. Proc. § 998(c) normally allows defendant to recover costs when plaintiff recovers less than the amount proposed by defendant in a Section 998 offer, a Section 998 offer is ineffective to shift costs to plaintiff when the offer also contains a nonmonetary component, such as a release of claims not at issue in the action or an agreement in a defamation action to maintain the confidentiality of the settlement and/or settlement amount.

See also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting an award of attorney's fees as costs under pursuant to statute or contract, see § 60.300 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

The facts and procedural background of Scott Co. v. Blount, Inc. (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 1103, 1112, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 614, 979 P.2d 974 are discussed in § 60.83[3][a].

In Valentino v. Elliott Sav-On Gas, Inc. (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 247 Cal. Rptr. 483 , plaintiff slipped and fell at a gasoline station and sued for damages for physical injuries. She rejected an offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 submitted by the gas station's attorney which included a condition that she release the gas station, its attorneys and its insurance carrier from all claims and causes of action arising out of her claims, including insurance bad faith and violation of Ins. Code § 790.03 in order to receive the proposed settlement amount of $15,000. At trial, the jury awarded her a net verdict of $9,750. The trial court then denied her request for costs and granted the gas station's motion for its costs on the ground that her damage award was less than the statutory offer.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that costs cannot be shifted under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 when the offer requires relinquishment of claims in addition to those contained in the complaint that is the basis of the litigation being settled (201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 696-701) . The court found that an "offer" under Section 998 includes all its terms and conditions and must be evaluated in the light of all those terms and conditions in determining whether plaintiff obtained a judgment "more favorable" than defendant's statutory offer (201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 697) . The court held that the term and condition of the offer in the instant case, which required the plaintiff to surrender other causes of action not included in the complaint, reduced the value of the monetary term so much that the damage award the jury returned may well have been more favorable than the monetary term of the offer (201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 698-699) . The court also held that the same term and condition made it extraordinarily difficult to accurately and fairly evaluate the monetary term to decide whether the damage award did or did not exceed the amount offered in settlement (201 Cal. App. 3d 692, 698-701) .

In Barella v. Exchange Bank (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 793, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 167 , a real estate developer sued a bank for defamation. The bank made an offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to pay the developer $25,000 in consideration for dismissal and an agreement to strictly maintain the confidentiality of the settlement and the settlement amount, which the developer did not accept. The parties tried to settle again, but were unsuccessful because of the developer's demand for a public apology. The jury awarded the developer $10,000. The trial court granted the developer's motion to strike the bank's cost bill and denied the bank's motion to tax the developer's cost bill on the ground that the bank's Section 998 offer was invalid to shift costs (84 Cal. App. 4th 793, 796-797) .

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that in a defamation action, a settlement offer that by its terms cannot be made public cannot be effective to shift costs under Section 998 (84 Cal. App. 4th 793, 800-803) . The court concluded that the task of valuing a confidentiality clause attached to a settlement offer in a defamation action is too subjective and therefore cannot be done so that it renders the offer invalid for purposes of shifting costs to the plaintiff (84 Cal. App. 4th 793, 803) .

In Weinberg v. Safeco Ins. Co. of America (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 224 , a husband and wife who were insured under an underinsured motorist policy sued the insurer for bad faith, based on an automobile accident involving the husband and the insurer's handling of the husband's claim. The insurer made an offer under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 to the plaintiffs, which they allowed to lapse. After judgment was entered in the insurer's favor, it sought to recover its expert witness fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. The trial court denied recovery on the ground that the joint offer to the plaintiffs was invalid (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1086) . The court of appeal affirmed, holding that even though the wife's claim was based on the insurer's alleged mishandling of the husband's claim, hers was a separate, not derivative claim. Thus, the plaintiffs did not have a single, indivisible injury and the insurer's joint Section 998 offer was not valid because it was not apportioned among the plaintiffs (114 Cal. App. 4th 1075, 1086-1087) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.87-60.89

[Reserved]

§§ 60.87[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.90

§ 60.90 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--All Claimed Items Are Expressly Authorized by Law

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--All Claimed Items Are Expressly Authorized by Law

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO _____ [STRIKE MEMOR-
_____ [name],	)	ANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE ITEM(S) SOUGHT TO BE STRICKEN ARE EXPRESSLY AUTHORIZED BY LAW.

A. Prevailing Party's Right to Costs. [See § 60.80, Paragraph A.]

B. Allowable Costs. The following item(s) _____ [is or are] allowable to the prevailing party under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1032 as costs:

[EITHER, filing fees]

Filing fees (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1); see generally Gov. Code §§ 70600 et seq.).

[AND/OR, motion fees]

Motion fees (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1)).

[AND/OR, jury fees]

Jury fees (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1); see Code Civ. Proc. § 215).

[AND/OR, juror food and lodging]

Juror food and lodging while they are kept together during trial and after the jury retires for deliberation (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(2)).

[AND/OR, deposition costs]

_____ [Taking or Video recording or Transcribing] necessary depositions, including an original and one copy of those taken by the claimant and one copy of depositions taken by the party against whom costs are allowed, and travel expenses to attend depositions (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3)).

[AND/OR, service of process costs]

Service of process (see Gov. Code § 22; see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 525, 1985(a), defining process) as provided in Section 1033.5(a)(4) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(4)).

[AND/OR, attachment costs]

Expenses of attachment, including keeper's fees (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(5)).

[AND/OR, premiums on bonds]

Premiums on necessary surety bonds (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6); see Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d); Jewell v. Bank of America (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 934, 941, 269 Cal. Rptr. 671 ; Crag Lumber Co., Inc. v. Crofoot (1958) 156 Cal. App. 2d 568, 570, 319 P.2d 668).

[AND/OR, witness fees]

Ordinary witness fees pursuant to Section 68093 of the Government Code (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7)).

[AND/OR, expert witness fees]

Fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(8); see Evid. Code §§ 730, 731).

[AND/OR, transcripts]

Transcripts of court proceedings ordered by the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(9)).

[AND/OR, attorney's fees]

Attorney's fees authorized by contract or statute or law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10); see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)). [Section _____ of the _____ Code authorizes an award of costs and attorney's fees to the prevailing party].

[AND/OR, reporter fees]

Court reporters fees as established by statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(11); see generally Gov. Code §§ 69947-69951, 69953-69955, 69990-70139).

[AND/OR, models and blowups of exhibits]

_____ [Models or Blowups or Models and blowups] of exhibits may be allowed if they were reasonably helpful to aid the trier of fact (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12)).

[AND/OR, photocopies of exhibits]

Photocopies of exhibits if they were reasonably helpful to the trier of fact (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12)).

[AND/OR, items required by statute]

Any item that is required to be awarded to the prevailing party pursuant to statute as an incident to prevailing in the action _____ [at trial or on appeal] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(13)). Recovery of the cost of the item sought to be taxed is authorized by _____ [Section _____ of the _____ Code or Rule _____ (26 or 135) of the California Rules of Court].

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form sets forth the items expressly declared by Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a) to be allowable as costs and may, when appropriate, be submitted in opposition to a motion to strike a memorandum of costs or a motion to tax costs by striking any of the specified items.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For memoranda in opposition, to support a motion to tax costs by reducing the amount claimed for attorney's fees on the ground the amount claimed is unreasonable, see § 60.41.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party's Right to Costs

For discussion, see § 60.80.

[b] Allowable Costs

[i] Filing Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1) allows filing fees as items of costs. The fees for filing papers in various courts are governed by a variety of different statutes, the applicability of which depends on the nature of the paper filed. The total fee for filing the first paper in a civil action or proceeding varies from county to county and court to court. Generally, the total fee for filing a first paper pursuant to Gov. Code §§ 70611, 70612,* and 70650 (unlimited civil cases) and Gov. Code §§ 70613 and *70614 (limited civil cases) is fixed by statute [see Gov. Code §§ 70611, 70612, 70613, 70614].

[ii] Motion Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1) allows as filing fees items of cost.

[iii] Jury Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(1) allows jury fees as items of cost. Code Civ. Proc. § 215 specifies the fee and mileage payable to jurors, unless a higher mileage rate is provided by statute or local ordinance.

[iv] Juror Food and Lodging

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(2) provides for costs for juror food and lodging while they are kept together during trial and after the jury retires for deliberation.

[v] Deposition Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3) provides for costs for taking, video recording, or transcribing necessary depositions, including an original and one copy of those taken by the claimant and one copy of depositions taken by the party against whom costs are allowed, and travel expenses to attend depositions.

[vi] Service of Process Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(4) allows as items of cost service of process by a public officer, registered process server, or other means as follows:

- When service is by a public officer, the recoverable cost is the fee authorized by law at the time of service. Sheriffs' fees for service of process are set forth in Gov. Code § 26721. Marshals and constables are required to charge and collect for their services the same fees allowed by law to sheriffs [Gov. Code § 71266].

- If service is by a registered process server, the recoverable cost is the amount actually incurred in effecting service, including, but not limited to, a stake-out or other means employed in locating the person to be served, unless such charges are successfully challenged by a party to the action.

- When service is by publication, the recoverable cost is the sum actually incurred in effecting service.

- When service is by a means other than that set forth in the three preceding categories, the recoverable cost is the lesser of the sum actually incurred, or the amount allowed to a public officer in this state for such service, except that the court may allow the sum actually incurred in effecting service on application pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4) (providing that items not mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 and items assessed on application may be allowed or denied in court's discretion).

Gov. Code § 22 defines "process" as including a writ or summons issued in the course of a judicial proceeding. In addition to a number of writs expressly so designated (e.g., writ of attachment, writ of execution, writ of possession), Code Civ. Proc. § 525 defines an injunction as a "writ or order," and Code Civ. Proc. § 1985(a) expressly refers to a subpoena as process.

[vii] Attachment Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(5) provides for costs for expenses of attachment, including keeper's fees.

[viii] Premiums on Bonds

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(6) allows premiums on necessary surety bonds as items of cost. Code Civ. Proc. § 995.250 provides that if a statute allows costs to a party in an action or proceeding, the costs shall include (a) the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party pursuant to a statute that provides for the bond in the action or proceeding, and (b) the premium on a bond reasonably paid by the party in connection with the action or proceeding, unless the court determines that the bond was unnecessary. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d) , relating to costs on appeal in civil cases other than limited civil cases, expressly includes as an item recoverable as costs on appeal the cost to procure a surety bond, including the premium and the cost to obtain a letter of credit as collateral, unless the trial court determines the bond was unnecessary [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278(d)(1)(F)]. Although Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.764, relating to appeals from municipal and justice courts, does not contain a similar provision, it would nevertheless appear that recovery by the prevailing party of premiums on necessary surety bonds on appeal would nevertheless be proper under the authority of the foregoing statutes and Crag Lumber Co., discussed below.

In Jewell v. Bank of America (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 934, 269 Cal. Rptr. 671 , the plaintiffs received multimillion-dollar judgments against defendant. These judgments were reversed on appeal. After the appellate court reversed judgments in favor of plaintiffs, the defendant filed memoranda of costs on appeal seeking, among other costs, appeal bond costs. The plaintiffs filed a motion to tax costs, arguing that the appeal bond costs should be taxed in their entirety because it was not necessary for defendant to post the bond. After a hearing, the court granted in part and denied in part the motion to tax costs, ruling that the appeal bond costs were necessary and therefore chargeable in their entirety to plaintiffs. Plaintiffs appealed this ruling.

The court of appeal affirmed. Finding that substantial evidence supported the trial court's decision that the appeal bond was necessary, the court concluded that the trial court's exercise of discretion should not be disturbed. The court of appeal noted that although the defendant, as a bank, had an alternative to posting an appeal bond (a stay of execution without the requirement of a bond under 12 U.S.C. § 91), this alternative did not make the appeal bond "unnecessary," because the alternative was comparatively burdensome and potentially risky (220 Cal. App. 3d 934, 941) .

In Crag Lumber Co., Inc. v. Crofoot (1958) 156 Cal. App. 2d 568, 319 P.2d 668 , plaintiff appealed from that portion of the trial court's order denying plaintiff 's motion to retax costs on a prior appeal by striking the item for the premium on the undertaking to stay execution. The court of appeal affirmed the order, stating that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1035 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 995.250, 1033.5(a)(6)), which allows the premium on surety bonds to be included as costs, applies to costs on appeal (156 Cal. App. 2d 568, 569-570) . The section provided that premiums on any surety bond may be recovered as costs unless the trial court determines as a matter of fact that the bond was unnecessary. The burden of proof on this issue is on the party who opposed the allowance of the item. Since the trial court made the determination that the bond was not unnecessary and that the premium paid on the bond was a reasonable and necessary cost, its refusal to strike the item for the premium on the bond was proper (156 Cal. App. 2d 568, 570) .

[ix] Witness Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7) provides for costs for ordinary witness fees pursuant to Gov. Code § 68093.

[x] Expert Witness Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(8) allows fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court as items of costs. Evid. Code § 730 authorizes the court at any time before or during trial on its own motion or the motion of a party to appoint one or more experts to investigate, render a report, and testify as an expert at the trial of the action when it appears that expert evidence may be required and to fix the expert's compensation. Evid. Code § 731(c) provides that, except as otherwise provided in Evid. Code § 731, the compensation fixed shall in the first instance be apportioned and charged to the several parties in such proportion as the court may determine and may thereafter be taxed and allowed in like manner as other costs.

[xi] Transcripts

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(9) provides for costs for transcripts of court proceedings ordered by the court.

[xii] Attorney's Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10) allows attorney's fees as items of costs when authorized by either contract or statute or law. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5) provides that when any California statute refers to the award of "costs and attorney's fees," attorney's fees are an item and component of the costs to be awarded and are within the ambit of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10). Any claim not based on the court's established schedule of attorney's fees for actions on a contract must bear the burden of proof [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)].

The procedure for claiming attorney's fees as costs depends on whether the fees sought are authorized by "statute," "law," or "contract." Fees authorized by statute or law must be fixed on a noticed motion, at the time a statement of decision is rendered, on application supported by an affidavit made concurrently with a claim for other costs, or on entry of default judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)]. Fees authorized by contract (including contractual attorney's fees awarded pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717) must be fixed on a noticed motion or on entry of a default judgment, unless otherwise provided by stipulation of the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)].

Fees are authorized "by statute" in numerous types of actions. Examples of statutes authorizing an award of attorney's fees include the following: Code Civ. Proc. §§ 685.040 and 685.070(a)(6) (award of attorney's fees incurred in enforcing judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 680.010 et seq. when underlying judgment includes award of attorney's fees to judgment creditor); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.4 (award of attorney's fees to prevailing plaintiff on motion in action for damages based on defendant's commission of felony for which defendant has been convicted); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (award of attorney's fees to successful party on motion in action resulting in enforcement of important right affecting public interest); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 (award of attorney's fees to person who prevails on claim for implied indemnity on finding that (a) indemnitee through tort of indemnitor has been required to act in protection of indemnitee's interest by bringing action against or defending action by third person, and (b) if indemnitor was properly notified of demand to bring action or provide defense and did not do so, and (c) trier of fact determined that indemnitee was without fault in principal case that is basis of action in indemnity or that indemnitee had final judgment entered in his or her favor granting summary judgment, nonsuit, or directed verdict); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.7 (award as part of costs made to defendant on finding that action against peace officer, or public entity employing peace officer, for damages arising out of performance of peace officer's duties, or action for libel or slander, was not filed or maintained in good faith and with reasonable cause); Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.9 (attorney's fees awarded to prevailing plaintiff in addition to other costs in action for damages for trespass on cultivated lands or lands intended or used for raising livestock); Code Civ. Proc. § 1028.5 (award of litigation expenses in addition to other costs to prevailing small business or licensee in action between small business or licensee and state regulatory agency on determination that agency action was undertaken without substantial justification); Code Civ. Proc. § 1029.8 (award of treble damages and all costs and attorney's fees to prevailing plaintiff in action by injured person against unlicensed person for damages resulting from providing goods or performing services for which license is required); and Code Civ. Proc. § 1031 (award to prevailing plaintiff of attorney's fees as part of cost in action for wages not exceeding $300). For further, detailed memoranda supporting and opposing notices of motion for an award of attorney's fees, see § 60.300 et seq.

In City of Santa Paula v. Narula (2003) 114 Cal. App. 4th 485, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 75 , the court held that an ordinance is a statute for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10) when it permits recovery of attorney fees. That case, for example, was an action by a city against property owners foreclosing a lien against their real property based on the owners' refusal to remedy the violation of numerous building and safety codes and to pay administrative costs and penalties. The court held that the trial court properly awarded the city attorney's fees under a city ordinance providing for an award of attorney's fees when a lien may be foreclosed and property sold by the filing of a complaint for foreclosure in a court of competent jurisdiction and the issuance of a judgment to foreclose. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10), the ordinance was a law and the award of fees furthered the purposes underlying Gov. Code § 53069.4, authorizing the city to enact ordinances to enforce its administrative orders by imposing fines and penalties, and the state's policy to maintain habitable housing (114 Cal. App. 4th 485, 492-493) .

Attorney's fees are authorized by contract when a sued-on contract specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs incurred to enforce the provisions of the contract are to be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party.

Civ. Code § 1717 authorizes an award of this type of fee, but it is important to note that contractual attorney's fees are not considered fees "authorized by statute" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)]. In the absence of a stipulation to the contrary, contractual attorney's fees may not be fixed at the time a statement of decision is rendered and may not be fixed on an application supported by affidavit made concurrently with a claim for other costs. Typically, the party seeking fees must use the noticed motion procedure [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)]. The time for serving and filing a notice of motion to claim attorney fees is specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1702. For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion for attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, see Subpart B, § 60.440 et seq.

[xiii] Reporter Fees

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(11) allows court reporters' fees as established by statute as items of cost. Reporter fees vary from county to county and court to court [see generally Gov. Code §§ 69947-69951, 69953-69955, 69990 et seq.].

Gov. Code § 69953 provides in relevant part that in any case when a verbatim record is not made at public expense pursuant to Gov. Code § 69952 (criminal matters, juvenile proceedings, proceedings to declare a minor free from custody, proceedings under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act, and as otherwise provided by law) or other provision of law, the cost of making any verbatim record shall be paid by the parties in equal proportion; and either party at his or her option may pay the whole. In either case, all amounts so paid by the party to whom costs are awarded shall be taxed as costs in the case. The fees for transcripts and copies ordered by the parties shall be paid by the party ordering them.

[xiv] Models and Blowups of Exhibits

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) provides for costs for models and/or blowups of exhibits, if they were reasonably helpful to aid the trier of fact.

[xv] Photocopies of Exhibits

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(12) provides for costs for photocopies of exhibits, if they were reasonably helpful to the trier of fact.

[xvi] Items Required by Statute

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(13) provides for costs of any item that is required to be awarded to the prevailing party pursuant to statute as an incident to prevailing in the action at trial or on appeal.

Recovery of the cost of an item sought to be taxed may be authorized by statute or by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.278 or 8.764.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.91-60.99

[Reserved]

§§ 60.91[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.100

§ 60.100 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--General Form
[For caption, see § 60.80.]
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO _____ [STRIKE MEMOR-
_____ [name],	)	ANDUM OF or TAX] COSTS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE COURT HAS DISCRETION TO ALLOW THE ITEM(S) SOUGHT TO BE STRICKEN AND THESE ITEMS WERE NECESSARY AND PROPER.

A. Verified Memorandum Is Prima Facie Evidence of Necessity. Items on a verified memorandum of costs that appear to be proper and necessary are prima facie evidence that the costs, expenses, and services listed were necessarily incurred and, unless controverted, should control the decision of the trial court on a motion to tax costs (see Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore I. Dist. (1928) 205 Cal. 6, 10, 269 P. 525 ; Hadley v. Krepel (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 682, 214 Cal. Rptr. 461).

B. Discretion of Court to Allow Item as Costs. Section 1032(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure provides that except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party, as defined in that section, is entitled to costs as a matter of right. Section 1033.5(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure lists a number of items specifically allowable as costs to the prevailing party under Section 1032 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Items not mentioned in Section 1033.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure and items assessed on application may be allowed or denied in the court's discretion (Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4)).

C. Reason for Court's Discretion. Although the right to costs is said to be statutory, it is not possible for the Legislature to foresee all the various items of costs that arise in litigation, and the allowance of items of costs must be left in nearly every instance to the discretion of the trial judge (People ex rel. Mosk v. Barenfeld (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 185, 21 Cal. Rptr. 501 (decided prior to 1986 enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, cited in Paragraph B, above); Maguire v. Corbett (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 252, 259 P.2d 507 (same)).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking specific items when the moving party contends that the items were not necessary or not properly claimed as costs.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see §§ 60.40 and 60.45.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Verified Memorandum Is Prima Facie Evidence of Necessity

Tulare Irrigation Dist. v. Lindsay-Strathmore I. Dist. (1928) 205 Cal. 6, 269 P. 525 , was an action to determine conflicting claims to water rights. During the first trial, the parties stipulated that the official reporter should transcribe three copies of the testimony and proceedings taken and to be taken during the trial (one copy for each side and one copy for the court), that each party was to pay one-half the cost thereof, and that the prevailing party was to recover as costs the amount so paid by it. Following that trial, defendant obtained a writ prohibiting the trial judge from making any further orders on the ground that he was disqualified because of an interest in the subject matter of the litigation. Following the second trial, findings of fact and conclusions of law were entered in favor of plaintiffs, who were also awarded their costs. On motion of the defendant, the trial court taxed costs by striking from plaintiffs' cost bill the costs claimed by plaintiffs on the first trial, and plaintiffs appealed.

In reversing the order with directions to enter a judgment for costs in favor of plaintiffs in the amount claimed in their cost bill, the Supreme Court stated that it appeared from the record that the costs on the former trial were necessarily incurred and that they were legally chargeable pursuant to stipulation. The Court stated that the verified cost bill constituted a prima facie showing that the items therein were necessarily expended or incurred and, unless controverted, should control the decision of the trial court when the charges on the face of the cost bill appeared to be for proper and necessary disbursements (205 Cal. 6, 9-10) .

The facts and procedural background of Hadley v. Krepel (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 682, 214 Cal. Rptr. 461 , are discussed in § 60.45[3][d]. In reversing the judgment with directions to the trial court to conduct a new hearing to fix the reasonable amount of attorney's fees and costs to which the defendant is entitled, the court of appeal, agreeing with defendant's assertion, said that the items on a verified cost bill are prima facie evidence that the costs, expenses, and services listed were necessarily incurred (167 Cal. App. 3d 677, 682) .

[b] Discretion of Court to Allow Items as Costs

Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(b) provides that except as otherwise expressly provided by statute, a prevailing party, as defined in that section, is entitled to costs as a matter of right.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a) lists a number of items specifically allowable as costs to the prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4) provides that items not mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 and items assessed on application may be allowed or denied in the court's discretion.

[c] Reason for Court's Discretion

People ex rel. Mosk v. Barenfeld (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 21 Cal. Rptr. 501 , was an action by the State to recover rents and the purchase price paid by it for a building first leased and then sold to it by defendants. The parties took several depositions during which plaintiff had marked for identification numerous exhibits, including letters, memoranda, and reports. The exhibits were not attached to or copied into the depositions but, by stipulation of the parties, were retained in the files of the office of the Attorney General to facilitate that office's taking of further depositions at which it intended to use the same exhibits again, and to aid it in reading and understanding the depositions already taken. Because of this, defendants had the exhibits photostatted and claimed the item as costs. Judgment was for defendants and plaintiff 's motion to tax costs by disallowing the cost of the photocopies was denied. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment and the order denying the motion to tax costs.

In affirming the judgment and order, the court, quoting Maguire v. Corbett (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 252, 259 P.2d 507 (discussed below), said that it is not possible for the Legislature to foresee all the various items of costs that arise in litigation and that the allowance or disallowance of items incurred on the trial of an action must be left in nearly every instance to the discretion of the trial judge (203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 185) .

It should be noted that in 1986, on a substantial revision of the costs statutes (Stats. 1986, ch. 377), a number of items are now expressly declared by statute to be allowable items of cost [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a); see also § 60.90].

Maguire v. Corbett (1953) 119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 259 P.2d 507 , involved a third-party claim that the trial court denied. Plaintiffs (judgment creditors) had obtained a judgment against defendant husband. Thereafter, defendant husband married third-party claimant. An execution issued and was levied on an automobile that was in the possession of the third-party claimant, who filed a third-party claim alleging her absolute ownership. The trial court entered a formal order determining that the automobile was community property and subject to execution for satisfaction of the judgment. The trial court taxed against the third-party claimant the cost of storage of the automobile during the time the third-party claim was pending. Claimant appealed from both the order that the automobile was community property and from the order taxing costs.

In affirming both orders, the court of appeal stated that when the third-party claimant entered the litigation with her claim, she became an adversary to the judgment creditors and assumed the burdens of the litigation (119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 252) . The only question was whether storage of the car during the dispute was a reasonable action and within the discretion of the trial court under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.6 (repealed in 1982; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 685.040; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 680.150 (defining "costs" on enforcement of judgment as including but not limited to statutory fees, charges, commissions, and expenses)), providing that the judgment creditor was entitled to the costs and necessary disbursements of proceedings taken by him in aid of an execution on any judgment (119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 251-252) . The court said that it was not practicable for the Legislature to foresee all the various items of costs that arise in litigation and, as the Supreme Court stated in Miller v. Highland Ditch Co. (1891) 91 Cal. 103, 105, 27 P. 536 , the allowance or disallowance of items incurred in trial of an action must be left in nearly every instance to the discretion of the trial judge (119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 252) . The court held that since the storage bill would have been taxable against the judgment creditors had the third-party claimant prevailed, the reverse is also true (119 Cal. App. 2d 244, 252) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Items as Costs

The facts and procedural background of People ex rel. Mosk v. Barenfeld (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 21 Cal. Rptr. 501 , are discussed in § 60.100[3][c]. In affirming the judgment and order, the court of appeal pointed out that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1032a (renumbered in 1982 to Code Civ. Proc. § 1032.7, which was repealed in 1986; now see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(3), (c)(3)), defendants were entitled to the reasonable cost of taking and transcribing depositions, together with the reasonable cost of one copy of each such deposition, unless it appeared to the court that the taking of the deposition was unnecessary, and to the reasonable cost of one copy of all depositions taken by the party or parties against whom costs are allowed (203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 183-184) . The court said that to all intents and purposes the photocopies became a part of the deposition. The court pointed out that defendants, who were entitled to tax the reasonable cost of a copy of the depositions, could properly have insisted on the documents being copied into the deposition or attached to it, so that the testimony of the witnesses and the effect of the potential exhibits could be used by defense attorneys in their preparation for and during trial of the action. Instead, they cooperated with the Attorney General and procured photostats, which answered the full purpose of their being transcribed in the deposition. Although plaintiff had not claimed that the documents were not necessary or that the cost was excessive, the court of appeal said that the verified cost bill made a prima facie case of such necessity (203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 184) . The court held that the allowance of a challenged item is within the discretion of the trial court when the necessity is debatable, and that the trial judge exercised reasonable discretion in denying the motion to tax costs (203 Cal. App. 2d 166, 185) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.101

§ 60.101 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Referee Fees

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Referee Fees

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE TRIAL COURT MAY ORDER REFEREE FEES PAID BY THE PARTY WHO SOUGHT THE REFERENCE.

Referee Fees. The trial court has power to order that referee fees be paid initially by the party who sought the reference (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 645.1, 1023), and the party who is ultimately successful may include this sum in his or her costs against the losing party (Most Worshipful Lodge v. Sons etc. Lodge (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 833, 834, 295 P.2d 912).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.100, for an opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that the trial court may order referee fees paid by the party who sought the reference.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Referee Fees

In Most Worshipful Lodge v. Sons etc. Lodge (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 833, 295 P.2d 912 , plaintiff appealed from the trial court's order that plaintiffs pay a referee an $800 fee for his services. After the referee presented his report to the trial court, a judgment was entered against plaintiffs, including an item for costs that included an $800 fee for the referee. The judgment was reversed. The referee then filed a petition for an order fixing his fee at $800 and for payment of the fee. The trial court again fixed the fee at $800, which it ordered plaintiffs to pay. The court of appeal affirmed the order, stating that the trial court has power to order that referee fees be paid initially by the party who sought the reference and that the party who is ultimately successful may include the amount of the fees in his or her costs against the losing party. The fact that the original judgment was reversed did not deprive the court of its power to order the payment of the referee fees (140 Cal. App. 2d 833, 835) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.102

§ 60.102 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Prior Trials

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Prior Trials

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A SUCCESSFUL PARTY IS ENTITLED TO COSTS OF PREVIOUS TRIALS FROM THE PARTY ULTIMATELY DEFEATED.

Costs of Prior Trials. A party ultimately successful is entitled to recover the costs of previous trials from the party ultimately defeated (Senior v. Anderson (1900) 130 Cal. 290, 299, 62 P. 563).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.100, for an opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that a successful party is entitled to recover the costs of previous trials from the party ultimately defeated.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Prior Trials

In Senior v. Anderson (1900) 130 Cal. 290, 62 P. 563 , plaintiffs appealed from a judgment for defendants and from orders denying a new trial and a motion to retax costs in an action to quiet title to a water right. A former judgment for defendants had been reversed on appeal and a new trial granted. Plaintiffs objected to various items in the cost bill that defendant filed after retrial, including the costs of the former trial. The Supreme Court held that the party ultimately defeated is liable for the costs of previous trials so far as they are legitimate and properly taxed (130 Cal. 290, 299) . Since this item appeared to be for proper or necessary disbursements, and since there was no evidence showing it to be false, excessive, or erroneous, it was properly allowed (130 Cal. 290, 301) . The court did, however, order that other items of costs be stricken (130 Cal. 290, 300-301) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.103

§ 60.103 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Special Master Fees

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Special Master Fees

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE COURT HAS DISCRETION TO ALLOW SPECIAL MASTER FEES AS COSTS.

Special Master Fees. A trial court has discretion to allow special master fees as an item of costs (Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 282, 293, 261 Cal. Rptr. 605).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.100, for an opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that a trial court has discretion to allow special master fees as costs.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Special Master Fees

Winston Square Homeowner's Assn. v. Centex West, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 282, 261 Cal. Rptr. 605 , was an action by a homeowners' association against a developer and subcontractors for various alleged defects in a townhouse development. In this action, the trial court appointed a special master to control discovery and to conduct settlement conferences, and charged the special master's fees to the parties. One of the defendants, who was dismissed after successfully asserting the defense of the statute of limitations, sought special master's fees as an element of costs from the plaintiff. The trial court allowed special master's fees as an element of costs, and the plaintiff challenged this allowance on appeal.

The court of appeal upheld the trial court's allowance of special master's fees as an item of costs. The court noted that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(4), items not mentioned in Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5 and items assessed on application may be allowed or denied in the court's discretion. The plaintiff conceded that Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c) grants the trial court discretion to award an item of costs not specifically disallowed, but contended that the Legislature did not mean entirely new "categories" of costs would be left to the discretion of the trial court. The court of appeal could find no authority for this contention, and determined that when a special master is appointed by the court, his or her fee is analogous to the award of fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court; thus, the expense is first apportioned and charged to the parties, and then the prevailing party's share is allowed as an item of costs (213 Cal. App. 3d 282, 292-293) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.104

§ 60.104 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Arbitrator's Award

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Arbitrator's Award

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A TRIAL COURT HAS DISCRETION TO ALLOW COSTS FOR AN ARBITRATOR'S AWARD THAT DOES NOT INCLUDE COSTS.

Arbitrator's Award. A trial court has discretion to allow costs when entering judgment on a judicial arbitration award even though the arbitrator's award does not include costs (Guevara v. Brand (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 995, 997-998, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.100, for an opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that a trial court has discretion to allow costs for an arbitrator's award that does not include costs.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b]

regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Arbitrator's Award

In Guevara v. Brand (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 995, 997-998, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 780 , a personal injury case was resolved by judicial arbitration. The arbitrator found the defendant responsible for the underlying accident, and awarded the plaintiff an amount for medical expenses, lost wages, and pain and suffering. The award did not mention costs. The plaintiff filed a memorandum of costs in trial court, and the defendant moved to strike the memorandum. The court denied the defendant's motion, and awarded costs to the plaintiff as a matter of law.

The Sixth District Court of Appeal affirmed. Although, the arbitrator has authority to award costs, there is no statutory or judicial authority requiring that the arbitrator make this determination at the time of the arbitration award. Therefore, the procedure for obtaining costs for judgments implementing a judicial arbitration award should be no different from the procedure for claiming costs for ordinary civil judgments (8 Cal. App. 4th 995, 997-998) .

Unlike Guevara, however, the Third District Court of Appeal subsequently ruled that a prevailing party to cannot claim costs in the trial court on entry of judgment when the arbitrator fails to include costs in the award [see Wagy v. Brown (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1, 7-9, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48 , discussed as an authority to § 60.15].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.105

§ 60.105 Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Strike Costs Memorandum or Tax Costs--Allowance of Items Is Discretionary With Court--Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation

[For caption, see § 60.80.]

THE MOTION OF _____ [party, e.g., DEFENDANT] TO TAX COSTS BY STRIKING SPECIFIC ITEMS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A TRIAL COURT HAS DISCRETION TO ALLOW COSTS AFTER AN UNSUCCESSFUL COURT-ORDERED MEDIATION.

Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation. When an unsuccessful mediation has been court-ordered, reasonably necessary expenses incident thereto may, in the sound discretion of the trial court, be awarded after trial to a prevailing party (Gibson v. Bobroff (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1209, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 235).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with the form set out in § 60.100, for an opposition to a motion to tax costs by striking or reducing specific items, on the ground that a trial court has discretion to allow costs of an unsuccessful court-ordered mediation.

See also § 60.70[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.70[2][b]

regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Costs of Unsuccessful Court-Ordered Mediation

In Gibson v. Bobroff (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 235 , prior to a trial de novo after the defendant rejected an arbitration award, the parties attended a court-ordered mediation before a private mediator. The mediation was unsuccessful and the parties filed statutory offers to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. Both offers were rejected and the case proceeded to jury trial. After the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiff in excess of the offers to compromise, the plaintiff filed a memorandum of costs which included costs of the court-ordered mediation. Defendants filed their motion to strike or tax this cost as being excessive and not properly recoverable, contending that there was no statutory authority to allow mediation costs. The trial court denied the motion to tax.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that an aware of costs for mediation expenses is not statutorily proscribed under Code Civ. § 1033.5(b). Despite the defendant's argument that, because the mediation statutory scheme does not expressly provide those expenses may be awarded as costs, as is the case with respect to arbitration, the Legislature must have determined such expenses cannot be awarded as costs. The court did not agree with this argument. Rather, stated the court, had the Legislature intended to exclude mediation expenses from items allowable as costs, it would have been a simple matter to have listed them in section 1033.5(b), as an item which could not be awarded. In the light of the general authority to award as costs "items not mentioned in this section ... in the court's discretion," it is far more reasonable to conclude that, if the Legislature meant to exclude mediation expenses as costs, it would have done so explicitly in subdivision (b) (49 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1207-1208) . Thus, the court held that when an unsuccessful mediation has been court-ordered, reasonably necessary expenses incident thereto may, in the sound discretion of the trial court, be awarded after a trial to a prevailing party (49 Cal. App. 4th 1202, 1209) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
2. Motion to Tax Costs by Striking or Reducing Specific Items

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.106-60.119

[Reserved]

§§ 60.106[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.120

§ 60.120 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
vs.	)	RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF COSTS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE FAILURE TO FILE IT ON TIME WAS THE RESULT OF _____ [MISTAKE or INADVERTENCE or SURPRISE or EXCUSABLE NEGLECT].

A. Time to File Cost Bill. A prevailing party who claims costs shall serve and file a memorandum of costs within 15 days after the date of mailing of the notice of entry of judgment or dismissal by the clerk under Section 664.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure or the date of service of written notice of entry of judgment or dismissal, or within 180 days after entry of judgment, whichever is first (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)).

B. Time Requirement Not Jurisdictional. The time prescribed for filing a memorandum of costs is not jurisdictional ( Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 512, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731 (involving former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033, the predecessor to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)); Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 (same)).

C. Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect. A court may, on any terms as may be just, relieve a party or the party's legal representative from a judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against him or her through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)).

D. Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to Failure to File Cost Bill. A party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding may be granted relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure for failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed (Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 ; Rio Vista Gas Assn. v. State of California (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 565, 10 Cal. Rptr. 559).

E. Broad Discretion of Court in Absence of Prejudice to Adverse Party. In the absence of prejudice to the adverse party, the trial court has broad discretion in allowing relief from failure to timely file a memorandum of costs (Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 381, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 513, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion by the party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) from the party's failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 870(a)(1). The form should be combined, as appropriate, with the memoranda set out in § 60.121 et seq.

The statute requires that the motion be made within a reasonable time, not exceeding six months. Consequently, the notice of motion and its supporting papers should be served and filed promptly on learning that the memorandum of costs was not timely filed; any delay between that time and the filing of the notice of motion for relief should be explained in the supporting papers [see Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 659, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754 (discussed in § 60.150[3][b]); see also Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244] . In addition, the notice of motion should be accompanied by a copy of the cost bill proposed to be filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)].

This form may also be used in support of a countermotion for relief when the memorandum of costs was filed after the time prescribed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), and the opposing party has filed a motion to strike it [see § 60.

13]. Because in this situation the memorandum of costs has already been filed, there is no need to attach a copy of it to the notice of motion for relief [see Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244 (involving relief from delay in filing motion to tax costs)]. Counsel may, however, need to secure an order shortening time for service of the notice of countermotion in order that both the motion to strike and the countermotion for relief may be heard at the same time.

Code Civ. Proc. § 473 generally permits the trial court to relieve a party from a judgment, dismissal, or order against him or her on the grounds specified and on "any terms as may be just." Courts have long construed this phrase to allow payment of costs or attorney's fees to the adverse party to compensate that party for any losses or expenses suffered by the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion [Hearst v. Ferrante (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 201, 204, 234 Cal. Rptr. 385] . In addition, courts granting relief from default or dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 are expressly authorized to impose a penalty of up to $1,000 on an offending attorney or defaulting party, and to direct that an offending attorney pay up to $1,000 to the State Bar Client Security Fund [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(1)]. For discussion of legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms relating to relief from orders generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

Counsel should submit cognizable evidence in supports of factual statements regarding specific items of costs, by request for judicial notice [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq., or otherwise by affidavits or declarations. Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits "upon a motion"), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of notice of motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), from failure to have filed a cost bill within the prescribed time with a form of supporting declaration and a form of order granting the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender). For discussion of legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms relating to relief from orders generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For memoranda opposing a motion for relief from untimely filing of memorandum, see § 60.150 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to File Cost Bill

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), provides that a prevailing party who claims costs is to serve and file a memorandum of costs within 15 days after the date of mailing of the notice of entry of judgment or dismissal by the clerk under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.5 or the date of service of written notice of entry of judgment or dismissal, or within 180 days after entry of judgment, whichever is first.

[b] Time Requirement Not Jurisdictional

In Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731 , the trial court sustained defendants' demurrers, and orders of dismissal were filed on December 20 and 23, 1974. Plaintiffs filed a motion to reconsider and the court vacated its orders of dismissal nunc pro tunc. On reconsideration, the court again sustained the demurrers, and the order of dismissal was signed January 13, 1975. The court received defendants' memorandum of costs on January 23, 1975, although the memorandum was stamped filed on January 30, 1975. At that time, former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)) provided that the party claiming costs must serve on the adverse party, and file at any time after the verdict or decision of the court, and not later than 10 days after the entry of the judgment, a memorandum of costs. Plaintiff 's motion to strike the memorandum of costs on the ground it was untimely filed was denied, and plaintiffs appealed. In affirming the order, the court of appeal stated that the time requirement for filing a memorandum of costs is not jurisdictional (67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 512) .

Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 , involved an action to declare a right of way of necessity over a parcel of land. Judgment was entered on May 25, 1961, and plaintiffs filed their cost bill on June 19, 1961, after the 10-day period prescribed in former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)) had run. Defendants' motion to strike the cost bill on the ground that it was filed late was denied and plaintiffs' request for relief from their late filing under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) was granted. Defendants appealed. In affirming the judgment and order denying the motion to strike the cost bill, the court of appeal stated that the time limit of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 is not jurisdictional, but is directed to the sound discretion of the court (216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334) .

It would appear that the holding of the above two cases, that the time requirement for filing a cost bill is not jurisdictional, would apply equally to the time limit specified in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), for filing the memorandum of costs. There is nothing in the language of Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), that would suggest that the Judicial Council, in adopting the rule, intended to change existing case law construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.

[c] Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) provides that a court may, on any terms as may be just, relieve a party or the party's legal representative from a judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against him or her through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect.

[d] Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to Failure to File Cost Bill

The facts and procedural background of Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][b]. In affirming the judgment and order denying the motion to strike the cost bill, the court of appeal thought it clear from the affidavit in opposition to the motion to strike that it also contained an application for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), and that the affidavit itself was supportive of such an application. The court said that while it would have been better procedure for plaintiffs to have filed the usual notice of motion with a supporting affidavit, plaintiffs' affidavit served the same purpose (216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334-335) .

Rio Vista Gas Assn. v. State of California (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 10 Cal. Rptr. 559 , involved an action in inverse condemnation against the State. Plaintiff appealed from a judgment of dismissal following the trial court's order sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend, and from the order permitting defendant to file a cost bill after the then statutory time had expired (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)). In affirming the judgment and order, the court stated that it is well established that under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 a superior court may grant relief to a party who through mistake, inadvertence, or excusable neglect does not file a memorandum of costs within the statutory [now rule] period (188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 565) .

[e] Broad Discretion of Court in Absence of Prejudice to Adverse Party

In Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 , the trial court granted defendants' motion on the ground of inadvertence for permission to file a late memorandum of costs and plaintiffs appealed. In affirming the order allowing the late filing of the cost bill, the Supreme Court stated that in the absence of prejudice, the trial court has broad discretion in allowing relief on the grounds of inadvertence from failure to timely file a cost bill. The Court pointed out that there was no showing of prejudice and held that the trial court, therefore, did not abuse its discretion (12 Cal. 3d 374, 381) .

The facts and procedural background of Wilson v. Hinkle (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 136 Cal. Rptr. 731 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][b]. In affirming the order denying the motion to strike the cost bill on the ground it was untimely filed, the court of appeal, quoting Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 381, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 (discussed above), stated that in the absence of prejudice, the trial court has broad discretion in allowing relief on the ground of inadvertence from a failure to file a timely cost bill. Although it is not clear from the opinion whether a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) was actually filed, the court of appeal concluded that, given the confused procedural circumstances following the initial orders of dismissal and plaintiffs' attempts to have the ruling on the demurrer reconsidered, there was good cause for the trial court's denying plaintiffs' motion to strike and allowing defendants relief from the late filing (67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 513) . The court noted in addition that there was some question about whether the memorandum was in fact filed late (67 Cal. App. 3d 506, 513 n.7).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Time Requirement Not Jurisdictional

The facts and procedural background of LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 22 Cal. Rptr. 747 , are discussed in § 60.123. In ruling that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to strike the memorandum of costs and granting the motion for relief and for leave to file the memorandum after the then statutory period had expired, the court said that the time limitation [of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)] is not a matter of jurisdiction but is directed to the sound discretion of the court (205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 170) .

[b] Applicability of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to Failure to File Cost Bill

In Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787 , the prevailing party filed a cost memorandum, but failed to serve it on the opposing party, then successfully petitioned the court for permission to refile it pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473 on the ground of inadvertence. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 has long been considered a proper mechanism to seek relief for failing to file timely a cost memorandum (191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 910) .

[c] Broad Discretion of Court in Absence of Prejudice to Adverse Party

The facts and procedural background of LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 22 Cal. Rptr. 747 , are discussed in § 60.123. In ruling that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to strike the memorandum of costs and granting the motion for relief and for leave to file the memorandum after the then statutory period had expired, the court said that defendants did not offer any showing that the 22-day delay in filing the cost bill had caused them prejudice (205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 170) .

55 of 186 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.121

§ 60.121 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

[For caption, see § 60.120.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE COUNSEL HAS FILED A SWORN AFFIDAVIT OF FAULT.

Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault. Whenever an application for relief under Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 is made no more than six months after entry of judgment, is in proper form, and is accompanied by an attorney's sworn affidavit attesting to his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect, the court must vacate any (1) resulting default entered by the clerk against his or her client, and which will result in entry of a default judgment, or (2) resulting default judgment or dismissal entered against his or her client, unless the court finds that the default or dismissal was not in fact caused by the attorney's mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in combination with those set out in § 60.120, in support of a motion by the party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) when the party's attorney has filed an affidavit of fault.

When relief from default is based on a sworn declaration of fault by the defaulting party's attorney, the court is required to order that attorney to pay reasonable compensatory legal fees and costs to opposing counsel or parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]. However, if the court grants relief from a default judgment based on an attorney's affidavit of fault, the relief must not be made conditional on the attorney's payment of compensatory legal fees or costs or monetary penalties imposed by the court or on compliance with other sanctions ordered by the court [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(c)(2)].

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) provides that whenever an application for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is made no more than six months after entry of judgment, is in proper form, and is accompanied by an attorney's sworn affidavit attesting to his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect, the court must vacate any (1) resulting default entered by the clerk against his or her client, and which will result in entry of a default judgment, or (2) resulting default judgment or dismissal entered against his or her client, unless the court finds that the default or dismissal was not in fact caused by the attorney's mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.122

§ 60.122 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Timely Deposit in Mail

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Timely Deposit in Mail

[For caption, see § 60.120.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE MEMORANDUM WAS TIMELY MAILED BUT DELAYED IN THE MAIL.

Timely Deposit in Mail. A trial court may properly grant relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure from the failure to timely file a memorandum of costs when it is shown that the memorandum was timely mailed but was delayed or went astray in the mail and relief from the late filing is promptly sought (Rio Vista Gas Assn. v. State of California (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 565, 10 Cal. Rptr. 559 ; see also Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 624-625, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in combination with those set out in § 60.120, in support of a motion by the party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), when the party's attorney had timely mailed the memorandum of costs but it was delayed in the mail.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.10[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Timely Deposit in Mail

The facts and procedural background of Rio Vista Gas Assn. v. State of California (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 10 Cal. Rptr. 559 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][d]. In affirming the order permitting defendant to file a cost bill after the then statutory time had expired (former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)), the court pointed out that (1) the memorandum of costs was timely prepared and placed in the mail; (2) a copy was received by plaintiff 's counsel within the time allowed for filing, but the original was apparently lost in the mail and never reached the superior court clerk's office; and (3) the failure of the original to be filed was discovered 11 days after mailing, and the attorney general immediately moved to be relieved of the late filing. The court held that, under these circumstances, whether the late filing of the cost bill should have been permitted was within the trial court's discretion and that it could not hold that that discretion was abused (188 Cal. App. 2d 555, 565) .

In Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244 , a shareholder's derivative action was dismissed pursuant to former Corp. Code § 834 (now see Corp. Code § 800(c)-(f)) for failure to post security. Defendants served a timely memorandum of costs on plaintiff who moved to tax costs by striking an item claimed for attorney's fees. The trial court denied the motion to strike that was filed beyond the time allowed in former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)). Two and one-half months after plaintiff learned that his motion to tax costs had been denied, plaintiff filed a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). In support of the motion, plaintiff 's attorney submitted affidavits showing that the notice of motion had been deposited in a mailbox four days after the memorandum of costs had been served on plaintiff, and that under normal circumstances, this would have been sufficient time for the motion to have been received by the court and filed within the time allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033. However, the day of mailing was the Friday before a long holiday weekend. The motion was deposited in a mailbox prior to the hour designated for the last collection on Friday, and several mail collections were designated for Saturdays. After being informed that the notice had not been timely received by the court, the attorney ascertained from postal employees that, although Fridays and Saturdays were designated as days for collection at the mailbox, collections were frequently not made on those days. In addition, a letter from the postmaster stated that mail was customarily collected at the mailbox in question on Saturdays but that it was possible that mail deposited at the beginning of the holiday weekend remained in the box until the morning of the following Tuesday. The trial court granted the motion for relief and vacated the order denying the motion to strike. Defendants appealed from the order vacating the prior order.

In affirming the order, the Supreme Court held that while it would have been preferable if plaintiff had given a clearer explanation for his delay in making the motion to vacate, it was within the trial court's discretion to conclude that under the circumstances the motion for relief should have been granted and was made within a reasonable time. The Court also held that since the motion to tax costs had already been filed, it was proper for the trial court to grant the motion for relief even though the motion was not accompanied by a copy of the motion to tax costs (55 Cal. 2d 622, 625) .

Note that the above case involved relief from the untimely filing of a motion to tax costs, rather than from the late filing of a memorandum of costs. However, it has been held that there is no distinction between granting relief from default in filing a memorandum of costs and a motion to tax costs [Lane v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 914, 916, 187 P.2d 9 ; see § 60.140].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.123

§ 60.123 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Press of Business

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Press of Business

[For caption, see § 60.120.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE COUNSEL'S FAILURE WAS INADVERTENT AND DUE TO THE PRESS OF OTHER MATTERS.

Press of Business. A trial court may properly grant relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure from the failure to timely file a memorandum of costs when counsel's failure was inadvertent and due to the press of other matters (Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 380-381, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 ; LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 169-170, 22 Cal. Rptr. 747).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in combination with those set out in § 60.120, in support of a motion by the party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), when the party's attorney failed to file the memorandum of costs through inadvertence from the press of business.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda see § 60.151.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Press of Business

The facts and procedural background of Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][e]. The ground of defendants' motion for permission to file a late memorandum of costs was that counsel had inadvertently failed to file a timely memorandum due to the press of other matters (12 Cal. 3d 374, 380-381) . Without discussing what the other matters were, the Supreme Court upheld the trial court's discretion in granting the motion, but the Court did not specifically discuss the validity of the excuse of the press of other matters (12 Cal. 3d 374, 381) .

Note that because the Court in Pollard did not discuss the matters constituting the press of business or other cases discussing this ground and affirmed the trial court's order granting relief, it is not clear whether the intent was to impliedly overrule prior Supreme Court cases and disapprove prior court of appeal cases holding to the contrary [see, e.g., Dow v. Ross (1891) 90 Cal. 562, 563-564, 27 P. 409 , and Fairfield v. Ahlstrom (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 592, 24 Cal. Rptr. 70 , both discussed in § 60.151].

In LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 22 Cal. Rptr. 747 , plaintiffs filed their cost bill 22 days beyond the time allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)). Defendants moved to strike the cost bill, and plaintiffs moved for relief from their default. Plaintiffs' grounds for relief were that their attorney mistakenly believed that the notice of appeal would stay the running of the time for filing the memorandum of costs and also that he was involved in specified activities that put him under "a tremendous work load fourteen to sixteen hours a day ... ." The trial court denied defendants' motion to strike and granted plaintiffs' motion for relief. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal found no abuse of discretion in the trial court's rulings on the motions (205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 169-170) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.124

§ 60.124 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs--Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment

[For caption, see § 60.120.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE COUNSEL REASONABLY BELIEVED THAT JUDGMENT HAD NOT BEEN ENTERED.

Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment. A trial court has discretion to grant a motion for relief when counsel's failure to timely file a memorandum of costs was due to his or her reasonable belief that judgment had not been entered (Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 333-334, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be used in combination with those set out in § 60.120, in support of a motion by the party entitled to recover costs in an action or proceeding for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), when the party's attorney failed to file the memorandum of costs because of his or her reasonable belief that judgment had not been entered.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b]

regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Knowledge of Entry of Judgment

The facts and procedural background of Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][b]. In opposition to defendants' motion to strike the cost bill on the ground that it was filed late, an associate of plaintiffs' counsel filed an affidavit stating in substance that he had left the proposed judgment, approved and signed by counsel for both parties, with the trial judge's clerk with instructions to endorse, file, and return the copies after the judge had signed the judgment, and that plaintiffs' counsel had instructed him to file the cost bill when the copies of the judgment were returned. After the time for filing the cost bill had run, the associate learned by telephone that the judgment had been entered, and that the clerk disclaimed any knowledge of the copies of the judgment. The cost bill was thereupon mailed to defendants' counsel and endorsed and filed three days later. Plaintiffs' counsel claimed that he was justified in assuming that judgment had not been entered and requested relief from the untimely filing under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). The trial court denied the motion to strike the cost bill, and defendants appealed. In affirming the order denying the motion, the court of appeal stated that the trial judge could properly infer that plaintiffs' counsel was justified in relying on the clerk to return endorsed filed copies of the judgment promptly on entry and that the late filing of the cost bill was due to the clerk's failure to do so (216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 334) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.125-60.139

[Reserved]

§§ 60.125[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.140

§ 60.140 Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR Plaintiff,	)	RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE MO-
vs.	)	TION TO TAX COSTS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Discovery Cut-Off: _____
	)	Motion Cut-Off: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO FILE A LATE MOTION TO TAX COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE FAILURE TO FILE THE NOTICE OF MOTION ON TIME WAS THE RESULT OF _____ [MISTAKE or INADVERTENCE or SURPRISE or EXCUSABLE NEGLECT].

A. Time to File Notice of Motion to Tax Costs. A notice of motion to strike or to tax costs must be served and filed 15 days after service of the cost memorandum, but if the cost memorandum was served by mail, the period is extended as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1013 (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)).

B. Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect. [See § 60.120, Paragraph C.]

C. Relief From Failure to Timely File Motion to Tax Costs. The court has broad discretion under the provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 to grant relief from failure to timely file a motion to tax costs (Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244 ; Lane v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 914, 916-917, 187 P.2d 9).

[Optional] D. Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault. [See § 60.121.]

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for relief from failure to file a motion to tax costs within the time allowed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1).

In view of the holding in Lane v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 914, 916-917, 187 P.2d 9 (Paragraph C of this form) , any of the paragraphs set forth in §§ 60.120 -60.139 may, when appropriate, be incorporated in this form. The notice of motion must be filed within a reasonable time, not exceeding six months, from the time the period for filing the notice of motion to tax costs expired, and be accompanied by a copy of the notice of motion to tax costs proposed to be filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]. Notwithstanding the time limit in § 473(b), the notice of motion for relief should be served and filed promptly, together with the notice of motion to tax costs, on learning of the failure to have timely filed the motion to tax costs [see, e.g., Bennett v. California Custom Coach, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 333, 336, 285 Cal. Rptr. 649] . Any delay between that time and the filing of the notice of motion for relief should be explained in the supporting papers.

This memorandum may also be used in support of a countermotion for relief when the notice of motion to tax costs was filed after the time prescribed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), and the opposing party has filed a motion to strike it. Because in this situation the notice of motion to tax costs has already been filed, there is no need to attach a copy of it to the notice of motion for relief [see Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 625, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244] . Counsel may, however, need to secure an order shortening time for service of the notice of countermotion in order that both the motion to strike and the countermotion for relief may be heard at the same time.

For discussion concerning conditions of relief based on an attorney's affidavit of fault (§ 60.121), and other conditions of relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 in general, see §§ 60.120 and 60.121.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts stated.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For memoranda that may be used to oppose a motion for relief from filing an untimely motion to tax costs, see § 60.150 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time to File Notice of Motion to Tax Costs

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), provides that a notice of motion to strike or to tax costs must be served and filed 15 days after service of the cost memorandum, but if the cost memorandum was served by mail, the period is extended as provided in Code Civ. Proc, § 1013.

[b] Relief on Ground of Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

See discussion in § 60.120[3][c].

[c] Relief From Failure to Timely File Motion to Tax Costs

In Freeman v. Goldberg (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 622, 12 Cal. Rptr. 668, 361 P.2d 244 , a blank space for the amount of costs to be awarded was left in the judgment dismissing a shareholder's derivative action under former Corp. Code § 834 (repealed effective January 1, 1977; now see Corp. Code § 800). Within ten days after entry of the judgment, defendants served plaintiff with a memorandum of costs. Plaintiff did not file a motion to tax costs within the time allowed under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1)), and at the expiration of that time period the clerk filled in the blank space in the judgment with the amount of costs from defendants' memorandum. Subsequently, plaintiff served and filed the motion, but the trial court denied it as untimely filed. Two and a half months later, plaintiff filed a notice of motion based on Code Civ. Proc. § 473 for vacation of the judgment of dismissal and the order denying the motion to tax costs, and for entry of a corrected judgment reflecting a cost award comporting with his unsuccessful motion to tax. Plaintiff supported the motion with an affidavit setting forth, in detail, his timely deposit in the mail of the motion to tax costs and the ensuing problems with mail pick-up and delivery that resulted in the court's tardy receipt of the motion. The trial court granted plaintiff 's motion to vacate the judgment and the previous order denying his motion to tax costs, and defendant appealed from the order.

The Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the question of whether plaintiff made a sufficient showing to warrant the granting of relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 must be determined in light of the established rule that a trial court has broad discretion in deciding such a motion, and that its ruling will not be disturbed on appeal unless an abuse of discretion clearly appears. The Court then held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in concluding that under all the circumstances, defendant's Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion was made within a reasonable time (55 Cal. 2d 622, 625) .

In Lane v. Pacific Greyhound Lines (1947) 30 Cal. 2d 914, 187 P.2d 9 , defendants filed their motion to tax costs on appeal beyond the time allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1034 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.278, 8.764, 3.1700(b)(1)), relating to costs on appeal. They then made a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) for relief from their failure to file their motion to tax costs on time; and plaintiffs moved to strike the motion to tax on the ground it was not timely filed. In ruling on the merits of defendants' motion to tax costs, the trial court granted defendants' motion for relief, denied plaintiffs' motion to strike, and struck three items in the cost bill. Plaintiffs appealed from all three orders. The court of appeal held that the appeal from the order refusing to strike the motion to tax was moot because the motion had been withdrawn and that the order granting the motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) contemplated a further order on the merits and was not appealable. The Court therefore dismissed the appeal, but reviewed the propriety of the order on the appeal from the final order taxing costs (30 Cal. 2d 914, 916) .

The Court stated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) the court may relieve a party from the effect of a delay in taking procedural steps that do not involve pleadings, and pointed out that such relief has been allowed when parties failed to file cost bills under the provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1); see also § 60.120, or former Code Civ. Proc. § 1034. The Court concluded that insofar as granting relief from default in filing is concerned, there appeared to be no reason for making a distinction between a cost bill and a motion to tax costs (30 Cal. 2d 914, 916) . The Court therefore held that in the absence of any express provision to the contrary, the trial court has power to grant relief from such a default (failure to timely file a notice of motion to tax costs) under the broad provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), and that the granting of such relief rests primarily within the discretion of the trial court (30 Cal. 2d 914, 917) . The Court further affirmed the order taxing costs (30 Cal. 2d 914, 918) .

[d] Relief Based on Attorney's Affidavit of Fault

See discussion in § 60.121[3].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relief From Failure to Timely File Motion to Tax Costs

In Bennett v. California Custom Coach, Inc. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 333, 285 Cal. Rptr. 649 , plaintiff prevailing party filed a memorandum of costs. One month later, defendant filed a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 for relief from default for its failure to file a timely motion to tax costs. The trial court granted the motion for default relief and the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order granting the motion to tax costs (234 Cal. App. 3d 333, 337, 338, 340) . The issue on appeal was plaintiff 's entitlement to attorney's fees in the action, rather than the propriety of using Code Civ. Proc. § 473 to obtain relief from failure to timely file the motion to tax costs. However, neither the plaintiff nor the trial and appellate courts objected or took exception to this use of the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 procedure.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.141-60.149

[Reserved]

§§ 60.141[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.150

§ 60.150 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	FOR RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO TIMELY FILE
_____ [name],	)	_____ [MEMORANDUM OF Defendant.	)	COSTS or MOTION TO TAX COSTS]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
		Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO FILE A _____ [MEMORANDUM OF COSTS or MOTION TO STRIKE/TAX COSTS] WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED BY RULE 3.1700 OF THE CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE NO SHOWING OF _____ [MISTAKE or INADVERTENCE or SURPRISE or EXCUSABLE NEGLECT] HAS BEEN MADE.

A. Burden of Proof. The burden of proof is on the party seeking relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure to show that the failure to act within the prescribed time was due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect (Fairfield v. Ahlstrom (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 592, 24 Cal. Rptr. 70).

B. Showing Required. The party seeking relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure is required to show a reasonable excuse for the delay as well as diligence in giving notice of the motion for relief (Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 659, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion for relief from failure to file a timely memorandum of costs under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), by the party seeking costs, or in opposition to a motion for relief from failure to file a timely motion to strike or tax costs, under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(b)(1), by the party opposing the costs bill.

This form should be combined, as appropriate, with memoranda in § 60.151 et seq.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.120 et seq. and § 60.140 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden of Proof

In Fairfield v. Ahlstrom (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 24 Cal. Rptr. 70 , the court granted a motion for nonsuit in an action for libel and malicious abuse of process. Defendant filed his memorandum of costs late, and plaintiff moved to strike the memorandum on that ground. Defendant then filed a motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). The trial court granted the motion to strike the memorandum and denied the motion for relief, and defendant appealed from the order denying relief. In his affidavit in support of the motion for relief, defendant's attorney had stated that his failure to file the memorandum within the statutory time [former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct.,

Rule 3.1700(a)(1)] was due to his work load and to his difficulty in verifying the amounts of the items of taxable costs. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order and stated that the burden of proving that the failure to act within the time allowed by statute [former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033] was due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect was on the party seeking relief, and that plaintiff had made a very weak case (206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 592) .

[b] Showing Required

In Nutting v. Herman Timber Co. (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 29 Cal. Rptr. 754 , an action to quiet title, counsel for both plaintiff and defendant had been unaware that the trial court had signed findings submitted by plaintiff and entered judgment before receiving defendant's objections to the findings. Plaintiff 's counsel learned of the judgment 24 days after it was entered and did not submit his memorandum of costs until eight days after that. He filed his notice of motion for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) from his late filing at the same time he submitted his cost memorandum. Defendant's counsel filed opposition to the motion in which he pointed out that plaintiff 's delay in filing the memorandum of costs had prevented defendant from learning of the entry of judgment and thereby prevented him from filing a notice of intention to move for a new trial within the time prescribed by law. The trial court denied plaintiff 's motion for relief. Defendant appealed from the judgment for plaintiff and plaintiff cross appealed from the order denying his motion for relief. In affirming the order, the court of appeal stated that relief from failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033 (repealed in 1986; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)) may be given under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 and that denial or allowance of relief rests in the exercise of a sound discretion by the trial court. The court said that the moving party seeking relief must have a reasonable excuse for the original delay and must also make a showing of diligence in giving notice of a motion for relief after discovery of the default. If the trial court believed that the eight days that plaintiff had allowed to elapse before filing his notice of motion was a delay designed to prevent defendant from becoming aware of the judgment until the time to move for a new trial had expired, then the delay was neither reasonable nor inadvertent. The court held that the trial court was entitled to so believe and that denial of the motion was not an abuse of discretion (214 Cal. App. 2d 650, 659) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.151

§ 60.151 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Press of Business

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Press of Business

[For caption, see § 60.150.]

THE MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO FILE A MEMORANDUM OF COSTS WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED BY RULE 3.1700(a)(1) OF THE CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE "PRESS OF BUSINESS" IS AN INSUFFICIENT GROUND FOR RELIEF.

Press of Business. Although the Supreme Court has found that a trial court's granting of a motion under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground of "press of business" was not an abuse of discretion (Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 381, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88), "press of business" has been held to be an insufficient ground to warrant relief under Section 473(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Dow v. Ross (1891) 90 Cal. 562, 563-564, 27 P. 409 ; Fairfield v. Ahlstrom (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 592, 24 Cal. Rptr. 70).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with those in § 60.151, in opposition to a motion for relief from failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), on the ground that the press of business is insufficient to warrant relief.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts

[c] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.123.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Press of Business

In Dow v. Ross (1891) 90 Cal. 562, 27 P. 409 , defendant filed his memorandum of costs beyond the statutory time, but the clerk entered the costs in the judgment. Plaintiff moved to strike the costs from the judgment on the ground that the memorandum was filed late. Defendant's attorney apparently requested relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 on the ground that his failure to timely file the memorandum was due to what would amount to "press of business." The trial court granted the motion to strike the costs and denied defendant's request for relief. Defendant appealed. In affirming, the Supreme Court held that, conceding without deciding that relief can be granted under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 on a proper showing, such relief was properly denied on an affidavit showing mere forgetfulness on the part of the attorney to file the memorandum in time owing to the press of other business, and said that the showing made was insufficient to authorize the relief asked for (90 Cal. 562, 564) .

The facts and procedural background of Fairfield v. Ahlstrom (1962) 206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 24 Cal. Rptr. 70 , are discussed in § 60.150[3][a]. In affirming the order denying the motion for permission to file a late memorandum of costs, the court of appeal said that it is settled that an attorney's occupation with other matters affords insufficient grounds to warrant relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473. Quoting Willett v. Schmeister Mfg. Co. (1926) 80 Cal. App. 337, 340, 251 P. 932 , the court added that unusual press of business is not a legal excuse, and that to accept this as legal justification for the failure to comply with the statute [former Code Civ. Proc. § 1033; now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1)] would be to discourage diligence in the prosecution of appeals and establish a precedent that might lead to vexatious delays (206 Cal. App. 2d 590, 592) .

The status of the above two cases is uncertain in view of the holding in Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 , which is discussed in § 60.123. In Pollard, the Supreme Court affirmed the order granting relief from a failure to timely file a costs bill because of the press of other matters. As pointed out in the discussion of that case in § 60.123, the Supreme Court did not identify what the matters were or discuss the elements necessary to establish this excuse. It is, therefore, not clear whether the intent of the Supreme Court was to overrule prior Supreme Court cases, such as Dow, above, or disapprove prior court of appeal cases, such as Fairfield, above. Because in each of the three cases the appellate court was affirming the order of the trial court, the true rule might be no more than that the granting of relief on the ground of press of business depends on the facts of the case and lies within the discretion of the trial court, whose ruling will not be disturbed on appeal in the absence of a showing of abuse of that discretion.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.152

§ 60.152 Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Denial for Prejudice

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Relief for Untimely Filing of Memorandum of Costs or Motion to Tax Costs--Denial for Prejudice

[For caption, see § 60.150.]

THE MOTION FOR RELIEF FROM FAILURE TO FILE A MEMORANDUM OF COSTS WITHIN THE TIME PRESCRIBED BY RULE 3.1700(a)(1) OF THE CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE GRANTING THE MOTION WOULD RESULT IN PREJUDICE TO _____ [opposing party, e.g., DEFENDANT].

Denial for Prejudice. Relief may be granted on any terms as may be just (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)). A motion for relief from failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed by law should not be granted if the opposing party will be prejudiced (see Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 381, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be combined with those in § 60.151, in opposition to a motion for relief from failure to file a memorandum of costs within the time prescribed by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1700(a)(1), on the ground that counsel's client will be prejudiced by a grant of relief.

See also § 60.120[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.120[2][b] regarding evidentiary support for facts.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial for Prejudice

The facts and background of Pollard v. Saxe & Yolles Dev. Co. (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 374, 115 Cal. Rptr. 648, 525 P.2d 88 , are discussed in § 60.120[3][e]. In affirming the order granting relief from the late filing of the cost bill, the Supreme Court, citing Reese v. Borghi (1963) 216 Cal. App. 2d 324, 333-334, 30 Cal. Rptr. 868 , and LeDeit v. Ehlert (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 154, 169-170, 22 Cal. Rptr. 747 , stated that in the absence of prejudice, the trial court has broad discretion in allowing relief on the grounds of inadvertence from failure to timely file a cost bill (12 Cal. 3d 374, 381) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
3. Motion for Relief From Failure to Timely File Based on Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.153-60.159

[Reserved]

§§ 60.153[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
4. Motion to Amend Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.160

§ 60.160 Supporting Motion to Amend Memorandum of Costs

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Amend Memorandum of Costs
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	AMEND MEMORANDUM OF COSTS
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER GRANTING LEAVE TO AMEND THE MEMORANDUM OF COSTS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE AMENDMENT IS JUST AND NECESSARY.

A. Discretion of Court to Allow Amendment. The court may, in furtherance of justice, and on any terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any proceeding by correcting a mistake in any respect and may likewise, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, allow on such terms as may be just, an amendment to any proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(1)).

B. Amending Cost Bill. The trial court has the right under Section 473 of the Code of Civil Procedure to allow such amendments to a cost bill as appear just and necessary when a party to the action has moved to tax the costs claimed by the other party (Puppo v. Larosa (1924) 194 Cal. 721, 724, 230 P. 440 ; see also Ferry v. O'Brien (1923) 63 Cal.

App. 620, 625, 219 P. 467).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion requesting leave to amend a cost bill or to file an amended cost bill.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

Counsel should submit cognizable evidence in supports of factual statements, by request for judicial notice (e.g., when a court must order the event for which costs are claimed and no order was issued) [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq., or otherwise by affidavits or declarations. Affidavits (or declarations under penalty of perjury [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5]) are authorized generally for use in support of or in opposition to a motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (authorizing use of affidavits "upon a motion"), 2015.5]. Their purpose is to supply the facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant (or declarant) necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

In addition to submitting affidavits or declarations in support of the motion, counsel should attach a copy of the proposed amended cost bill.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of notice of motion for an order striking a memorandum of costs and allowing the filing of an amended memorandum, along with a form of supporting declaration and a form of order granting the motion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion of Court to Allow Amendment

Code Civ. Proc. § 473(a)(1) provides that the court may, in furtherance of justice, and on any terms as may be proper, allow a party to amend any proceeding by correcting a mistake in any respect and may likewise, in its discretion, after notice to the adverse party, allow on such terms as may be just, an amendment to any proceeding.

[b] Amending Cost Bill

In Puppo v. Larosa (1924) 194 Cal. 721, 230 P. 440 , defendant filed a motion to tax costs claimed in plaintiff 's cost bill. Before the final hearing on the motion to tax, plaintiff was permitted to file an amended cost bill that was the same as the original cost bill except for more detail explaining the nature of and reasons for certain expenditures. Defendant then filed another motion to tax costs as well as a motion to strike the amended cost bill. The trial court denied both motions and defendant appealed from those orders. The Supreme Court affirmed and, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 473, said that the right of a trial court, when a party to the action has moved for taxation of the other's costs, to allow such amendments to a cost bill as appear just and necessary has always been recognized in this state (194 Cal. 721, 724) .

Ferry v. O'Brien (1923) 63 Cal. App. 620, 219 P. 467 , involved appeals from an order granting motions to strike out a cost bill, file a new one, and vacate the judgment entered on the first cost bill, and from an order refusing to vacate the order granting the motions. Respondent had filed a memorandum of costs on appeal in a prior appeal. Respondent's motion to file a new cost bill was made on the ground that the former one was not correct due to inadvertence and mistake. Respondent also made a motion to vacate the judgment for costs on appeal that had already been entered, on the ground that it was for a smaller amount than it should have been because of respondent's inadvertence and mistake. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that while a motion to amend might have been the better practice, no authority has been cited holding that proceeding by a motion to strike out the first cost bill and for leave to file a new one was not permissible. The court stated that the facts presented to the trial court entitled respondent to relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 (63 Cal. App. 620, 625-626) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
A. Costs
4. Motion to Amend Memorandum of Costs

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.161-60.299

[Reserved]

§§ 60.161[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.300

§ 60.300 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES
	)
	)

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, AND SUCH FEES SHOULD BE AWARDED IN THE INTERESTS OF JUSTICE.

A. General Rule. Except as attorney's fees are specifically provided for by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the express or implied agreement of the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021).

B. Equitable Exceptions. The courts have fashioned equitable exceptions to the general rule of Section 1021 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Three such exceptions are the common fund theory, the substantial benefit theory, and the private attorney general theory (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 34, 43, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303).

C. Common Fund Theory. One who expends attorney's fees in winning a suit which creates a fund from which others derive benefits may require the passive beneficiaries to bear a fair share of the litigation costs, including attorney's fees ( Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 35, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 ; Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 272-273, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713).

D. Rationale for Common Fund Exception. The bases of the common fund exception are: (1) fairness to the successful litigant, who might otherwise receive no benefit because his or her recovery might be consumed by the expenses; (2) correlative prevention of an unfair advantage to the others who are entitled to share in the fund and who should bear their share of the burden of its recovery; (3) encouragement of the attorney for the successful litigant to undertake and diligently prosecute proper litigation for the protection or recovery of the fund by assurances of prompt and direct compensation upon success in the litigation (Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 273-274, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713).

E. Amount of Fees. The amount of attorney's fees in such cases rests within the trial court's discretion (Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 623, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244), after the court has made certain preliminary determinations (Mandel v. Lackner (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 747, 758, 155 Cal. Rptr. 269).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule against awarding attorney's fees not expressly authorized by statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021]. It should be combined with other memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.301 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Evidence cognizable by the court in such a motion proceeding should be submitted with the memorandum to support its factual statements. A request for judicial notice will support facts subject to such notice [Evid. Code § 450 et seq.]. Otherwise supporting affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury should be submitted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (affidavits), 2015.5 (declarations)], averring to such facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant as may be necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motions for attorney's fees with supporting declarations and orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the common fund exception are set out in § 60.301 et seq. Memoranda based on other equitable exceptions and statutory bases for an award of attorney's fees are set out in § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5), and § 60.440 et seq. (award based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717).

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.320 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 provides that except as attorney's fees are specifically provided for by statute, the measure and mode of compensation of attorneys is left to the express or implied agreement of the parties.

[b] Equitable Exceptions

In Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , plaintiffs had brought an action which resulted in a prior Supreme Court decision declaring that the existing school finance system was unconstitutional insofar as it operates to deny equality of educational opportunity to the school children of the state. Plaintiff 's attorneys moved the trial court for an award of attorney's fees against defendants. The motions were addressed to the equitable powers of the court and based on three theories: the private attorney general theory, the common fund theory, and the substantial benefit theory. The trial court's award of attorney's fees was based on the private attorney general theory only. Defendants appealed from the order granting fees, and plaintiffs appealed from the denial of fees on the other two theories and also objected to the amount awarded. The Supreme Court affirmed the order awarding fees on the basis of the private attorney general theory, but also discussed the other two equitable theories set out in Paragraph B of this form. For a discussion of the substantial benefit and private attorney general theories, see §§ 60.340 -60.349 and §§ 60.370 -60.399.

[c] Common Fund Theory

The facts and procedural background of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , are discussed under § 60.300[3][b]. In affirming the trials court's order, the Court analyzed the common fund theory. The Court stated that the common fund theory is based on the equitable powers of the court and provides that one who expends attorney's fees in winning a suit which creates a fund from which others derive benefits may require the passive beneficiaries to bear a fair share of the litigation. However, the trial court properly declined to award attorney's fees under this theory as no common fund was created or preserved by the litigation.

In Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713 , plaintiff filed a class action on behalf of all police officers and firefighters employed by the City of Los Angeles. Subsequently, the Los Angeles Fire & Police Protective League filed a similar action. The cases were consolidated and judgment was entered in favor of the entire class. Plaintiff and the league had separate attorneys, and the league had a written fee agreement with its attorneys providing for an hourly fee. Attorney's fees were requested by both sets of counsel for plaintiffs and the trial court granted the request, awarding the attorneys different percentages of the common fund recovered on behalf of the class. Plaintiffs appealed from the order awarding the fees, objecting to the distribution of the fees. Though the court of appeal modified the amounts awarded in the order, it approved the common fund theory as the basis of the award stating that California is in accord with the rule that the attorney whose client is the plaintiff in a class action suit is entitled to attorney's fees from all members of the class benefited if a fund is obtained or protected and brought into court.

[d] Rationale for Common Fund Exception

Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713 , is discussed in § 60.300[3][c]. In reviewing the development of the common fund exception, the court of appeal set out the bases of the rule, citing Estate of Stauffer (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 124, 132, 346 P.2d 748 . These bases are: (1) fairness to the successful litigant, who might otherwise receive no benefit because the recovery would be consumed by the expenses; (2) correlative prevention of an unfair advantage to the others who are entitled to share in the fund and who should bear their share of the burden of its recovery; and (3) encouragement of the attorney for the successful litigant to undertake and diligently prosecute proper litigation for protection or recovery of the fund by assurances of prompt and direct compensation upon success in the litigation.

[e] Amount of Fees

Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244 , is discussed in § 60.340[3][c]. In holding that the amount of attorney's fees which was granted by the trial court was not excessive, the court of appeal stated that the amount of an award of attorney's fees rests within the sound discretion of the trial court.

Mandel v. Lackner (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 747, 155 Cal. Rptr. 269 , is discussed in § 60.430[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.301

§ 60.301 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award in Class Action

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award in Class Action

[For caption, see § 60.300, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, WHEN THE ACTION IS A CLASS ACTION.

Award in Class Action. An attorney whose client is the plaintiff in a class action suit is entitled to attorney's fees from all members of the class benefitted if a fund is obtained or protected and brought into court (Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 272, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.300, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule, on the ground that the award may be made in a class action suit in which the members have benefited.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award in Class Action

Melendres v. Los Angeles (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 267, 119 Cal. Rptr. 713 , is discussed in §§ 60.300[3][c] and 60.300[3][d].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.302

§ 60.302 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

[For caption, see § 60.300, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, WHEN AN INSURER OR OTHER THIRD PERSON IS THE PASSIVE BENEFICIARY OF THE INJURED PARTY'S EFFORTS.

Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received. Where an injured party recovers a judgment from a third party and an insurer or other person recoups payments made to the injured party, the insurer or other person is the passive beneficiary of the injured party's efforts and may be required to contribute toward payment to the litigant's attorney for the services which produced the recovery (Quinn v. California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 164-166, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 ; Lee v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 458, 466-469, 129 Cal. Rptr. 271).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.300, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule, when an insurer or other third person is the passive beneficiary of the injured party's efforts.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

Plaintiff in Quinn v. California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 , sustained injuries in the course of his work on the construction of a dam. Plaintiff received worker's compensation benefits for his injury. He then sued the state, which owned the construction site, for its negligence as the proximate cause of his injuries. On the first day of the trial the insurance carrier which had paid workers' compensation benefits to plaintiff filed a lien pursuant to Lab. Code § 3856 against any judgment that might result. The carrier did not otherwise participate in the litigation. After a judgment in his favor, plaintiff moved for an order apportioning his attorney's fees between himself and his employer since plaintiff 's attorney had performed all the work leading to the recovery. The trial court denied the motion and plaintiff appealed. In reversing the trial court's order, the Supreme Court noted that the Legislature had incorporated the equitable principle of apportionment of attorney's fees under the common fund theory into Lab. Code § 3856 which includes provisions for attorney's fees in actions where an employee recovers against a third party. The Court stated that by incorporating into the words of the statute the precepts of equity which requires a passive beneficiary to recompense his or her actively litigating benefactor, the Legislature has directed our courts to apportion fees in relation to benefits. The Court directed the court on remand to first calculate a reasonable attorney's fee reflecting the total services rendered to both beneficiaries of the recovery, and then to make a reasonable apportionment of the fee between the parties benefited by the recovery. The Court stated that an employer which receives its fair share of the recovery must bear its fair share of the cost of the recovery.

In Lee v. State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 458, 129 Cal. Rptr. 271 , plaintiffs appealed from the portion of a summary judgment which declared as valid provisions in automobile insurance policies issued by defendant requiring plaintiffs to reimburse defendant for certain medical payments received by plaintiffs pursuant to the insurance agreement. Defendant appealed from the portion of the judgment which required it to pay a pro rata share of attorney's fees incurred by plaintiffs in securing a settlement or recovery from a third party, out of which the reimbursement was required. The court of appeal held that the trial court had properly held valid the so-called "subrogation provisions" of defendant's insurance policy. The court of appeal also held that the lower court had properly ordered defendant to pay a pro rata share of attorney's fees. The court stated that the application of the equitable common fund doctrine for an award of attorney's fees had been extended by the Supreme Court in Quinn v. California (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 162, 124 Cal. Rptr. 1, 539 P.2d 761 , discussed above, and that the common fund doctrine also must apply to the case before the court. Unless defendant was ordered to pay a pro rata share of plaintiffs' attorney's fees and costs, defendant as a passive beneficiary would be unjustly enriched by reimbursement of medical payments as required by the provisions of the insurance contract.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Apportioning Fees When Benefit Received

In Steinberg v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 216, 277 Cal. Rptr. 32 , the court of appeal affirmed an award directing a insurer to pay attorney's fees to two law firms from its subrogation recovery. It noted that the insurer's subrogation recovery was a benefit received almost entirely through the efforts of the two firms, and that the role of the insurer's own attorneys in obtaining the recovery was only minimal (226 Cal. App. 3d 216, 221-223) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.303

§ 60.303 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association

[For caption, see § 60.300, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, WHEN MEMBERS OF AN ASSOCIATION HAVE MAINTAINED A SUCCESSFUL EQUITABLE ACTION RESULTING IN THE PROTECTION OF RIGHTS.

Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association. When some members of an association maintain a successful equitable action resulting in the protection of rights in a common fund of members of the association under a contract between the members and the association, those who brought the action are entitled to recover attorney's fees (Weber v. Marine Cooks' & Stewards' Ass'n. (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 327, 340-341, 208 P.2d 1009).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.300, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule, when members of an association have maintained a successful equitable action resulting in the protection of rights.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Equitable Action Protecting Contract Rights of Members of Association

In Weber v. Marine Cooks' & Stewards' Ass'n (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 327, 208 P.2d 1009 , plaintiffs brought an action for declaratory relief involving the status of the constitution and bylaws of defendant labor union. The trial court found that the labor union had not complied with the provisions of the original and controlling constitution in its attempted adoption of a new constitution. In affirming the judgment for plaintiffs, the court of appeal stated that attorney's fees should be paid to plaintiffs' attorneys. The court stated that when a common fund is maintained for the benefit of a number of persons bound together by an association, and a contract exists between the association and its members directing the course of action for changing the rights of the members, and an effort is made to break the contract and substitute another which impairs and injures the right of the members, then attorney's fees may be recovered in the successful maintenance of an equitable action by some of the members which results in the protection of the original contract rights. The court stated that the fees could be recovered even though no actual court order to return the erroneously spent funds had been made.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.304

§ 60.304 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award Directly to Attorney

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Award Directly to Attorney

[For caption, see § 60.300, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, DIRECTLY TO THE ATTORNEY.

Award Directly to Attorney. A court awarding attorney's fees in the exercise of its equitable powers may award them directly to the attorney (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 47 n.21, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.300, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule, on the ground that the award may be made directly to the attorney.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Award Directly to Attorney

The facts and procedural background of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , are discussed in § 60.300[3][b]. In affirming the order awarding attorney's fees to plaintiffs' attorneys, the Supreme Court stated that California courts may in the exercise of their equitable powers award attorney's fees directly to a party's attorney.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.305-60.319

[Reserved]

§§ 60.305[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.320

§ 60.320 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES
	)
	)

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY [BECAUSE _____ (state applicable grounds)].

A. General Rule. Except when attorney's fees are specifically provided for by statute, the measure and mode of compensation is left to the express or implied agreement of the parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021). Such fees are generally not recoverable from the opposing party unless there is an express statutory or contractual provision providing for them (Russell v. Carleson (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 334, 348, 111 Cal. Rptr. 497).

B. Rationale for Common Fund Exception. An equitable exception to the general rule permits surcharging a common fund with the expenses, including attorney's fees, of its protection or recovery. This rule, however, should be applied only if the following criteria will be satisfied: (1) fairness to the successful litigant who might otherwise receive no benefit because his or her recovery would be consumed by the expenses; (2) correlative prevention of an unfair advantage to those who are entitled to share in the fund and should bear their share of the burden of its recovery; and (3) encouragement of the attorney for the successful litigant who will be more willing to undertake and diligently prosecute the litigation if assured of prompt and direct compensation for successful efforts (Estate of Korthe (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 572, 575, 88 Cal. Rptr. 465).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021. It should be combined with additional memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.321 et seq.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[c] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the common fund exception are set out in § 60.321 et seq. If the motion being opposed presents other grounds for an award of attorney's fees, memoranda appropriate to opposing those grounds should be added [see § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5), and § 60.440 et seq. (award based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717)]. For memoranda for opposing the motion on the ground that the award of attorney's fees sought is excessive, see § 60.550.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see §§ 60.300 -60.319.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

In Russell v. Carleson (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 334, 111 Cal. Rptr. 497 , plaintiffs appealed from a judgment denying them a writ of mandate and injunctive relief in their class action challenging the constitutionality of Welf. & Inst. Code § 11351.1 (financial contribution by unrelated adult male living with family applying for aid under Aid to Families with Dependent Children). The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. On appeal, plaintiffs also contended that the trial court erred in denying their request for statutory attorney's fees under their fourth cause of action and on equitable grounds in their first three causes of action. In upholding the trial court's rulings, the court of appeal stated that the general rule is that attorney's fees are not recoverable from the opposing party in the absence of an express statutory provision or contractual agreement. The court then set out the common fund and "common benefit" (substantial benefit) exceptions to the general rule, stating that litigation success is a necessary predicate to invoking these doctrines. Except in one respect involving the third cause of action, plaintiffs were unsuccessful. The court added that even if a case comes within the doctrine, plaintiff may not be entitled to recover attorney's fees under all circumstances, and the allowance of the fees rests largely in the discretion of the trial court (36 Cal. App. 3d 334, 348) .

[b] Rationale for Common Fund Exception

In Estate of Korthe (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 572, 88 Cal. Rptr. 465 , a settlement was reached in a will contest. The executor appealed from the probate court's order that the executor of the estate pay attorney's fees out of the assets of the estate to the attorney for five of the residuary legatees on the basis that the attorney had rendered services in preservation of a common fund. Most of the beneficiaries had joined in the will contest and were represented by various counsel on a contingent fee basis. In reversing the order, the court of appeal stated that although a court may award attorney's fees from a common fund to an attorney who has succeeded in preserving that fund when equity requires the award, the court may not do so when there are multiple beneficiaries and all, or substantially all, are represented by counsel.

The court examined the rationale for the equitable rule as set out by the Supreme Court in Estate of Stauffer (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 124, 132, 346 P.2d 748 , and stated that it only applies where a single beneficiary takes the risk and expense of litigation while the others do nothing. In this case the benefit of the recovery would not be consumed by the litigation expenses because the clients whose lawyer was awarded the fees had contingent fee agreements as did the other beneficiaries with their counsel. No unfair advantage would flow to the other beneficiaries as they participated in the contest. The aim of encouraging diligence of counsel was also satisfied by the contingent fee arrangements (9 Cal. App. 3d 572, 575) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.321

§ 60.321 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Identifiable Fund Required

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Identifiable Fund Required

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY BECAUSE THAT PARTY'S EFFORTS HAVE NOT EFFECTED THE CREATION OR PRESERVATION OF AN IDENTIFIABLE FUND OF MONEY.

Identifiable Fund Required. If plaintiff 's efforts have not effected the creation or preservation of an identifiable fund of money out of which the attorney's fees are to be paid, the common fund exception is not applicable (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 35, 37-38, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when the moving party's efforts have not effected the creation or preservation of an identifiable fund of money.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Identifiable Fund Required

In Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , plaintiffs had brought an action which resulted in a prior Supreme Court decision declaring that the existing school finance system was unconstitutional insofar as it operates to deny equality of educational opportunity to the schoolchildren of the state. Plaintiff 's counsel made a motion for an award of attorney's fees to be paid by defendants. The motions were addressed to the equitable powers of the court and based on three theories: the private attorney general theory, the common fund theory, and the substantial benefit theory. The trial court's award was based on the private attorney general theory, only. Defendants appealed from the order granting fees, and plaintiffs appealed from the denial of fees on the other two theories and also objected to the amount awarded. The Supreme Court affirmed the order. In agreeing with the trial court's decision that plaintiffs were not entitled to attorney's fees under the common fund theory, an equitable exception to the general rule, the Court stated that plaintiff 's efforts had not effected the creation or preservation of an identifiable fund of money out of which the fees they had requested could be paid and the exception, therefore, did not apply (20 Cal. 3d 25, 35-38) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.322

§ 60.322 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Litigation Success Required

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Litigation Success Required

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY BECAUSE THAT PARTY HAS NOT BEEN SUCCESSFUL IN THE LITIGATION.

Litigation Success Required. The party seeking attorney's fees under the "common fund" or "common benefit" (substantial benefit) theory, must have been successful in the litigation (Russell v. Carleson (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 334, 348, 111 Cal. Rptr. 497).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when the moving party has not been successful in the litigation.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Litigation Success Required

Russell v. Carleson (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 334, 111 Cal. Rptr. 497 , is discussed in § 60.320[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Litigation Success Required

In Johnson v. Tago, Inc. (1986) 188 Cal. App. 3d 507, 233 Cal. Rptr. 503 , the court of appeal reversed that portion of an order for a preliminary injunction ordering proxy expenses and attorney's fees of shareholder/officers to be paid from the corporate treasury. The court said that even if the award of attorney's fees in connection with a proxy fight and election or ouster of officers could be sustained under the substantial benefit theory, such an award at the preliminary injunction stage was premature (188 Cal. App. 3d 507, 518) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.323

§ 60.323 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Interests Adverse to Fund

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Interests Adverse to Fund

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY'S ULTIMATE OBJECTIVE IS TO ESTABLISH PERSONAL ADVERSE INTERESTS IN THE FUND.

Interests Adverse to Fund. Attorney's fees may not be awarded under the common fund theory if the ultimate objective of the client and the attorney is not to recover or preserve a common fund but to establish personal adverse interests in the fund (Gabrielson v. Long Beach (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 224, 229, 14 Cal. Rptr. 651, 363 P.2d 883).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when the moving party's ultimate objective is to establish personal adverse interests in the fund.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interests Adverse to Fund

In Gabrielson v. Long Beach (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 224, 14 Cal. Rptr. 651, 363 P.2d 883 , petitioner contended that his legal efforts on behalf of his client (a taxpayer) had secured oil and gas revenues for the state and that he was entitled to reasonable attorney's fees from that fund. The trial court entered judgment denying an award of attorney's fees based on its decision that the ultimate objective of petitioner and his client had been to deprive the city and state of all title and interest in the oil and gas contained in the land in question and to prevent the city's expenditure of the revenues from the oil and gas until a mineral leasing application of the corporations in which petitioner and his client had interests was granted and the mineral leases were issued to them. The court of appeal found that this inference from the evidence was reasonable and affirmed the judgment. The court stated that attorney's fees may not be awarded on the basis of the common fund doctrine if the ultimate objective of the attorney and the client is not to secure or preserve a common fund but to establish personal adverse interests in the fund. Such litigation does not call for the added incentive of fees from the common fund if the ultimate objective fails (56 Cal. 2d 224, 229) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.324

§ 60.324 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Primary Beneficiary

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Primary Beneficiary

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY IS THE PRIMARY BENEFICIARY OF THE FUND.

Primary Beneficiary. The court may properly deny recovery of attorney's fees under the common fund theory if the successful litigant is the primary beneficiary of the fund recovered or preserved (In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 445, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 ; Baker v. Pratt (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 222 Cal. Rptr. 253).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when the moving party is the primary beneficiary of the fund.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Primary Beneficiary

In re Trinity Tractor Co. (1970) 3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 83 Cal. Rptr. 783 , involved the winding up and dissolution of a corporation under court supervision. CIT Corporation filed objections to the preliminary accounting and to the claims of two creditors. CIT claimed that it was entitled to attorney's fees for presenting and prosecuting its objections to the claims because the result was to increase the fund for all unsecured creditors. The court denied this request, and CIT appealed from the portion of the court's order denying attorney's fees, asserting its right to attorney's fees under the common fund exception to the general rule. The court of appeal affirmed the order, stating that the allowance of attorney's fees under such circumstances rests largely in the discretion of the trial court and should not be reversed unless there was a clear abuse of discretion. CIT was the primary beneficiary of its efforts as the only creditor with a substantial claim, except for the creditors whose claims it objected to, and it was proper that CIT should bear its own attorney's fees (3 Cal. App. 3d 428, 445) .

In Baker v. Pratt (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 222 Cal. Rptr. 253 , plaintiff sole minority shareholder sought attorney's fees under the common fund theory following a successful shareholder's derivative action against the sole majority shareholder for breach of fiduciary duty of the corporation for misappropriation of corporate funds and property. The trial court found that the litigation had resulted in substantial benefit to the corporation in that it corrected or prevented an abuse that would be prejudicial to the rights and interests of the corporation or affect the enjoyment of an essential right to the stockholder's interests. Accordingly, it awarded the plaintiff attorney's fees. However, the court of appeal ruled that the plaintiff was not entitled to the award, noting that the plaintiff, being the only affected shareholder, could not claim that his action extended a substantial benefit to a clearly identifiable class of passive beneficiaries who had not had to bear the cost of litigation on his or her own (176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 377-380) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Primary Beneficiary

In Baker v. Pratt (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 222 Cal. Rptr. 253 , plaintiff sole minority shareholder sought attorney's fees under the common-fund theory following a successful shareholder's derivative action against the sole majority shareholder for breach of fiduciary duty to the corporation for misappropriation of corporate funds and property. The trial court found that a common fund had been created as a result of the plaintiff 's action, awarding the plaintiff attorney's fees. However, the court of appeal ruled that the plaintiff was not entitled to the award, noting that it was clear that the plaintiff 's ultimate objective was not to secure or preserve a common fund, but rather to establish personal adverse interests in the fund. Plaintiff, being the only affected shareholder, could not claim that there were other passive beneficiaries of his action that should be made to bear their fair share of the litigation costs (176 Cal. App. 3d 370, 377-379) .

In Avikian v. WTC Financial Corp. (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 243 , shareholders alleged that defendants, one of which was the corporation of which they were shareholders, mismanaged or looted the assets of the corporation, culminating in its involuntary liquidation. The California Insurance Commissioner had placed the corporation into liquidation. The order specified that the Insurance Commissioner held title to all of the corporation's assets, including all "rights of action," and enjoined all persons from instituting or prosecuting actions or proceedings against the corporation without the court's consent. After the shareholders filed suit, the trial court granted the Commissioner's motion for an order enjoining the further prosecution of the case and denied the shareholders' motion for an order allowing their further prosecution. The court dismissed the shareholders' action with prejudice and granted defendants' motion for attorney's fees pursuant to Corp. Code § 800, awarding defendants the full bond for $50,000 which the court had ordered plaintiffs to post to furnish security to cover the reasonable attorney's fees defendants would incur defending a shareholders' derivative action (98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1110-1114) .

The Court of Appeal affirmed. The shareholders argued that they were entitled to an award of attorney's fees under Baker v. Pratt, discussed above. The court found that Baker v. Pratt makes clear that if corporate shareholders seek to advance their individual interests, rather than the interests of the corporation generally, no fees should be awarded on a common fund or substantial benefit theory. Consequently, to the extent the shareholders were seeking to vindicate individual as opposed to derivative rights, which was an intention they maintained even through appeal, they could not recover fees as a matter of law. Further, although the court rejected their assertion that any of their claims were individual and concluded that all their claims were derivative, the court could not conclude the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to award them fees on those claims. Their attempt to pursue derivative claims on behalf of the corporation was a clear, even if not subjectively intentional, violation of the liquidation restraining order. To the extent they believed the claims to be of value, they were required to proceed in cooperation with the Insurance Commissioner and the liquidation proceeding. Their failure to do so resulted in substantial additional litigation by the Commissioner (98 Cal. App. 4th 1108, 1117-1118) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.325

§ 60.325 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, BECAUSE SUBSTANTIALLY ALL OF THE INTERESTED PARTIES ARE REPRESENTED BY THEIR OWN ATTORNEYS.

Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel. The court may not award attorney's fees to one party out of a common fund when substantially all of the interested parties are represented by their own attorneys in the same litigation (Estate of Korthe (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 572, 575-576, 88 Cal. Rptr. 465).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when substantially all of the interested parties are represented by their own attorneys.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Other Beneficiaries of Fund Represented by Counsel

Estate of Korthe (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 572, 88 Cal. Rptr. 465 , is discussed in § 60.320[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.326

§ 60.326 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception--Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor

[For caption, see § 60.320, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE COMMON FUND THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY HAS A DEBTOR-CREDITOR RELATIONSHIP TO THE LIEN CLAIMANT.

Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor. The common fund doctrine does not apply when the relationship of the litigation plaintiff and the lien claimant is that of debtor and creditor; in this instance the amount of the lien may not be reduced or diminished by apportioning attorney fees (City and County of San Francisco v. Sweet (1995) 12 Cal. 4th, 105, 118 , 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42, 906 P.2d 1196).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.320, in opposition to a motion for attorney's fees based on the common fund exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021, when the moving party has a debtor-creditor relationship to the lien claimant.

See also § 60.300[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.300[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lien Claimant Is Plaintiff 's Creditor

In City and County of San Francisco v. Sweet (1995) 12 Cal. 4th 105, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 42, 906 P.2d 1196 , a pedestrian brought an action against the driver of an automobile that struck and injured plaintiff. The pedestrian then settled with the driver. Plaintiff county, whose hospital facility had treated the injured pedestrian, then brought a separate action against the pedestrian and the attorney who had represented the pedestrian in the prior action, to enforce its lien for services provided by the hospital. Plaintiff sought attorney's fees and a constructive trust, in the amount of its lien, to be placed upon the funds obtained by defendant in the settlement of the prior action. Defendant argued that the amount of attorney's fees sought by plaintiff county should be proportionately reduced under the common fund theory, because defendant had incurred attorney's fees in pursuing recovery against the driver and obtaining the settlement funds that ultimately benefitted plaintiff by providing a fund against which plaintiff could enforce its lien. The trial court ruled on this issue on behalf of the defendant, and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment, citing with approval Lindsey v. County of Los Angeles (1980) 167 Cal. Rptr. 527 . The court of appeal in Lindsey had held that the common fund principle does not apply to a debt owed to a county for medical care provided at public expense. The Supreme Court stated that in common fund cases, three common elements appeared: there would have been no recovery without the litigation; (2) the beneficiaries of the litigation would be paid out of the fund made available by the litigation; (3) the attorney's fees were sought by the sole "active litigant" whose recovery created the fund. In this case, plaintiff county's rights were not contingent on the defendant's successful litigation against a third party; defendant was primarily liable to plaintiff county for the medical treatment he had received (12 Cal. 4th 105, 114-115) . Defendant made no effort to explain why equitable principles support apportionment when plaintiff county obtains a lien under Gov. Code § 23004.1 during the pendency of the injured party's action, when no apportionment is available if the same fund is attached or levied on after payment of the judgment (12 Cal. 4th 105, 117) . Therefore, the Court held that the common fund doctrine has no applicability when the relationship of a plaintiff in a prior action for injuries suffered, and a plaintiff county in a subsequent action seeking to enforce a lien for reimbursement for medical services rendered, is that of debtor and creditor; in this situation the amount of the lien may not be reduced or diminished by apportioning attorney's fees. The conclusion, stated the Court, accords with the almost unanimous view of the sister state courts that have considered the question (12 Cal. 4th 105, 118, 124) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
1. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Common Fund Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.327-60.339

[Reserved]

§§ 60.327[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.340

§ 60.340 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES
	)
	)

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____[specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY, AND SUCH FEES SHOULD BE AWARDED IN THE INTERESTS OF JUSTICE.

A. General Rule. [See § 60.300, Paragraph A.]

B. Equitable Exceptions. [See § 60.300, Paragraph B.]

C. Substantial Benefit Theory. The substantial benefit theory is an outgrowth of the common fund doctrine and permits the award of attorney's fees when the litigant, proceeding in a representative capacity, obtains a decision resulting in a substantial benefit of a pecuniary or nonpecuniary nature (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 38, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 ; Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 620-623, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244).

D. Requirements for Application of Doctrine. The substantial benefit principle may be a basis for an award of attorney's fees in an action (1) in which the court's equitable powers come into play; (2) which is commenced and maintained as a representative action; and (3) which results in a disposition that confers substantial benefits either pecuniary or nonpecuniary on the persons represented (Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 249, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766).

E. Amount of Fees. [See § 60.300, Paragraph E.]

F. Award Directly to Attorney. [See § 60.304.]

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit exception to the general rule against awarding attorney's fees unless expressly authorized by statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021]. It should be combined with other memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.341 et seq.

Note that this and following forms supporting a motion under the substantial benefit exception may be combined with, or modified to conform with, the memoranda supporting a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, which is commonly referred to as the "public interest" or "private attorney general" statute expressly authorizing an award of attorney's fees. These memoranda are set out in § 60.370 et seq. For all practical purposes, the equitable exception to the general rule against attorney fee awards based on substantial benefit has been, like the private attorney general exception, codified and subsumed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. That statute allows an award when, among other conditions, "a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, has been conferred on the general public or a large class of persons" [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5]. Counsel is advised, in any event, to insure that any motion for an award under the substantial benefit exception also conform to the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 [see § 60.370].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

Evidence cognizable by the court in such a motion proceeding should be submitted with the memorandum to support its factual statements. A request for judicial notice will support facts subject to such notice [Evid. Code § 450 et seq.]. Otherwise supporting affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury should be submitted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (affidavits), 2015.5 (declarations)], averring to such facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant as may be necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid.

Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms of notices of motions for attorney's fees with supporting declarations and orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the substantial benefit exception are set out in § 60.341 et seq. Points and authorities based on other equitable exceptions and statutory bases for an award of attorney's fees are set out in § 60.300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5), and § 60.440 et seq. based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717). See also the comments regarding Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 in § 60.340[2][a].

For memoranda for use when the action is a shareholder's derivative action, see Ch. 52, Corporations , in this set, instead of or in combination with this form.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.361 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

For discussion, see § 60.300[3][a].

[b] Equitable Exceptions

For discussion, see § 60.300[3][b].

[c] Substantial Benefit Theory

The facts and procedural background of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , are discussed in § 30.300[3][b]. Though the Supreme Court held that the substantial benefit theory was not applicable under the facts of the case, the Court analyzed the theory. The Court stated that the theory is an outgrowth of the common fund doctrine and permits an award of attorney's fees when the litigant, proceeding in a representative capacity, obtains a decision resulting in the conferral of a "substantial benefit" of a pecuniary or nonpecuniary nature. The Court also stated that an award of attorney's fees under this theory does not depend on a substantial benefit to defendant; there need only be a substantial benefit to the members of an ascertainable class.

In Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244 , a judgment was awarded against the state which enjoined the state from closing its offices during Good Friday afternoon and from paying its employees for time they might take off during that period. The judgment also awarded plaintiff 's counsel attorney's fees to be paid by the state. On rehearing, the court of appeal again affirmed the judgment including the award of attorney's fees. The court stated that all of the criteria for an award of attorney's fees under the substantial benefit exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021 were met. The suit was one in which the court's equitable powers came into play, it was commenced and maintained as a representative action, and it resulted in a disposition that conferred substantial benefits, pecuniary or otherwise, on the persons represented.

[d] Requirements for Application of Doctrine

Plaintiffs in Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766 , sought a writ of mandate and declaratory and injunctive relief testing amendments to the Los Angeles County General Plan and certain implementing ordinances. The trial court granted the relief sought and reserved jurisdiction to determine the matter of attorney's fees. The court awarded plaintiffs $170,000 as reasonable attorney's fees and defendants appealed challenging the propriety of this postjudgment award, as well as the amount awarded.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's award of attorney's fees which was based on the substantial benefit theory. The court of appeal discussed the development of the substantial benefit theory and stated that the fact that the action is not a corporate derivative or class action does not prevent application of the theory. The court then set out the following requirements for use of the substantial benefit theory as a basis for awarding attorney's fees: (1) the suit must be one in which the court's equitable powers come into play, (2) the suit must be commenced and maintained as a representative action, and (3) the suit must result in a disposition that confers substantial pecuniary or nonpecuniary benefits on the persons represented. The court of appeal stated that the trial court had found the elements of the theory to be present and had properly exercised its discretion to award the attorney's fees. The court also approved the trial court's method of determining what was a reasonable fee.

[e] Amount of Fees

For discussion, see § 60.300[3][e].

[f] Award Directly to Attorney

For discussion, see § 60.304.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Substantial Benefit Theory

In Rich v. Benicia (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 428, 159 Cal. Rptr. 473 , the court of appeal upheld the award of attorney's fees on both the "private attorney general" theory and the "substantial benefit" theory. The court held that, in bringing an action to require the city to prepare an environmental impact report prior to permitting the conversion of an old residential house to commercial and residential property, plaintiff benefitted not only himself (in that he lived across the street from the property in question), but the other residents of Benicia as well (98 Cal. App. 3d 428, 432, 436) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.341

§ 60.341 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Benefit to Defendant Not Required

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Benefit to Defendant Not Required

[For caption, see § 60.340, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO THE DEFENDANT _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY, WHICH DOES NOT REQUIRE THE BENEFIT TO BE TO THE DEFENDANT.

Benefit to Defendant Not Required. This theory does not require that the benefit be to the defendant (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 40 n.10, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 ; Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 247 n.6, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.340, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit exception to the general rule, on the ground that there need not be benefit to the defendant.

See also § 60.340[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.340[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Benefit to Defendant Not Required

This portion of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , is discussed in § 60.340[3][c].

Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766 , is discussed in § 60.340[3][d]. In discussing the development of the substantial benefit theory for awarding attorney's fees, the court relied on Serrano (discussed in § 60.340[3][c]) for the statement that despite earlier confusion, it is now clear that the benefit must be to those represented, not the defendant.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.342

§ 60.342 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Action Saving Public Funds

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Action Saving Public Funds

[For caption, see § 60.340, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____[specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY, WHEN THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT IS TO THE CITIZENS AND TAXPAYERS.

Action Saving Public Funds. Where the proper criteria are met, attorney's fees may be awarded on the basis of the substantial benefit theory where the "substantial benefit" is to the citizens and taxpayers of this state in the form of savings of public funds (Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 623, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.340, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit exception to the general rule, when there is a substantial benefit to the citizens and taxpayers.

See also § 60.340[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.340[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Saving Public Funds

The facts of Mandel v. Hodges (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 596, 127 Cal. Rptr. 244 , are discussed in § 60.340[3][c]. In upholding the award of attorney's fees, the court of appeal stated that plaintiff rendered a substantial benefit to the citizens and taxpayers of the state by saving them the public funds expended for work not performed by state employees during the three-hour holiday period of Good Friday.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.343

§ 60.343 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Environmental Litigation

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Environmental Litigation

[For caption, see § 60.340, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS ACTION TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY, WHEN THE LITIGATION RESULTS IN ENVIRONMENTAL BENEFITS.

Environmental Litigation. Where the proper criteria are met, attorney's fees may be awarded on the basis of the substantial benefit theory where the litigation results in environmental benefits (Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 248-251, 248-249, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.340, in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit exception to the general rule, when the litigation results in environmental benefits.

See also § 60.340[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.340[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Environmental Litigation

The facts of Coalition for Los Angeles County Planning in the Public Interest v. Board of Supervisors (1977) 76 Cal. App. 3d 241, 142 Cal. Rptr. 766 , are discussed in § 60.340[3][d]. In upholding the award of fees the court of appeal found that the trial court had properly decided that the class of persons benefited was the residents of the County of Los Angeles and that this is an ascertainable class under the substantial benefit doctrine. The court of appeal stated that the benefits in the case flowed directly and immediately from the decision of the trial court in that defendants were prevented from undertaking or permitting ill-considered intrusions on sensitive areas of the environment.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.344-60.359

[Reserved]

§§ 60.344[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.360

§ 60.360 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	FOR AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES
_____ [name], Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

IT IS IMPROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY BECAUSE _____ [state grounds, e.g., THERE WERE _____ (NO BENEFITS BESTOWED or NO CONCRETE BENEFITS) or IT WOULD NOT BE IN INTEREST OF JUSTICE].

A. General Rule. [See § 60.320, Paragraph A.]

B. Substantial Benefit Exception. A court may, in the exercise of its equitable discretion, decree that those receiving a substantial benefit as a result of litigation by one proceeding in a representative capacity must contribute in the interests of justice to the costs of the production of the benefit, including attorney's fees (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 38, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303).

C. Actual and Concrete Benefits Necessary. An award of attorney's fees under the substantial benefit theory must be based on concrete benefits actually bestowed as a result of the litigation and not on benefits of a "conceptual or doctrinal" nature (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 41-42, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 ; Ciani v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 563, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581).

D. Litigation Success Required. [See § 60.320, Paragraph D.]

E. No Award Where Adverse Interest. Where the interest of the party seeking attorney's fees in pursuing the lawsuit are adverse to the interests of the party from whom the fees are sought, attorney's fees may not be properly awarded on the basis of the substantial benefit theory (Inyo County v. Los Angeles (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 82, 91, 144 Cal. Rptr. 71).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit theory. It should be combined with additional memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.361 et seq.

See also § 60.340[2][a], regarding the connection between the significant benefit exception and the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and § 60.340[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.340[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[c] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the common fund exception are set out in § 60.361 et seq. If the motion being opposed presents other grounds for an award of attorney's fees, memoranda appropriate to opposing those grounds should be added [see § 60.300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5), and § 60.440 et seq. (award based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717)]. For memoranda for opposing the motion on the ground that the award of attorney's fees sought is excessive, see § 60.550. If the motion for attorney's fees is based on more than one ground, this form may be combined with those set out in §§ 60.320 -60.339 and §§ 60.400 -60.419, as appropriate.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.340 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

For discussion, see § 60.320[3][a].

[b] Substantial Benefit Exception

The facts and procedural background of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , are discussed in § 60.320[3][c]. The Court described the substantial benefit doctrine as an outgrowth of the common fund theory, and as allowing an award of attorney's fees when a litigant, proceeding in a representative capacity, obtains a decision which results in a substantial benefit of a pecuniary or non-pecuniary nature. A court may then, under the "dictates of justice" exercise its equitable discretion by ordering those receiving the benefit to contribute to the costs of its production. The Court held, for the reasons set out in § 60.36[3][c], that the trial court correctly denied an award of attorney's fees based on this theory (20 Cal. 3d 25, 38) .

[c] Actual and Concrete Benefits Necessary

The facts and procedural background of Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , are discussed in § 60.320[3][c]. Serrano is also discussed in § 60.360[3][b]. In approving the lower court's denial of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit theory, the Court stated that the litigation did nothing in and of itself to assure that concrete benefits will accrue to anyone. Concrete benefits would accrue to the state or its citizens only insofar as the Legislature, in implementing the command of equality of the Court's prior opinion in Serrano II [Serrano v. Priest (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 728, 135 Cal. Rptr. 345, 557 P.2d 929] , chooses to bestow them. Plaintiffs also contended that while Serrano II may not have had the direct effect of producing increased educational opportunity or tax savings, it did produce benefits of a "conceptual or doctrinal character." The court rejected this contention, holding that the substantial benefit theory requires that actual and concrete benefits be bestowed (20 Cal. 3d 25, 41-42) .

In Consumer Cause, Inc. v. Mrs. Gooch's Natural Food Markets, Inc. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 387, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 514 , the plaintiff and defendants negotiated a settlement that included a putative class of the general public and an opt-out provision for class members not wishing to be included in the settlement. An unnamed member of the putative class objected to the class certification and proposed settlement. The court denied the motion for class certification and final settlement approval. Thereafter, plaintiff dismissed the action. The objector moved for attorney's fees asserting that, by providing an "adversarial context" to the court's review of the proposed class action and settlement and persuading the court to deny class certification and final approval of the settlement, he had vindicated important rights for the benefit of the provisionally certified class, entitling him to attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and general equitable principles including the substantial benefit doctrine. The trial court denied the motion on the ground that it had no authority to award attorney fees under section 1021.5 because the objector was not a party in the action, and there was no basis for a fee award under equitable principles. The trial court also denied the objector's subsequent motion to intervene in the action. The court of appeal affirmed. The court held first that because of the opt-out provision, disapproval of the proposed settlement was unnecessary to accomplish a preservation and vindication of statutory rights intended to protect the health and safety of consumers. The court then held that even assuming the right to assert statutory claims was preserved, the objector did not establish there was any value to those potential claims, since although the proposed general release swept more broadly than the claims asserted by plaintiff in the litigation, the voluntary dismissal of the lawsuit once the defendant moved for summary judgment suggested the core claims lacked substantial merit. Finally, even if the court were to assume the objector's efforts in preventing class certification and approval of the proposed settlement conferred a benefit on an identifiable class, the beneficiaries--the members of the putative class consisting of the general public in California--were no longer before the court (127 Cal. App. 4th 387, 396-400) .

In Ciani v. San Diego Trust & Savings Bank (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 563, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 581 , plaintiff brought an action to enjoin the demolition of buildings he claimed were part of the city's heritage. His efforts resulted only in de minimis conditions being placed on the demolition permits. The trial court denied plaintiff 's request for attorney's fees under the substantial benefit theory, because plaintiff did not contribute actual and concrete benefits. The court of appeal affirmed, holding plaintiff was not entitled to fees under this theory, in that any benefits bestowed by his action were ephemeral, and that it would be difficult to identify any class of persons benefited (25 Cal. App. 4th 563, 578-579) .

[d] Litigation Success Required

For discussion, see § 60.320[3][d].

[e] No Award Where Interest Adverse

In Inyo County v. Los Angeles (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 82, 144 Cal. Rptr. 71 , petitioner County of Inyo brought an original mandate action in the court of appeal, and the court issued a peremptory writ directing the City of Los Angeles to prepare an environmental impact report covering the city's increased extraction and use of certain groundwater. The court found that the report prepared and filed by the city did not comply with the writ and directed the city to take action to comply. The county filed a motion for attorney's fees against the city. The court of appeal denied the motion for attorney's fees. In rejecting an award of fees based on the substantial benefit theory, the court stated that although the litigation might have brought some water conservation benefits to the City of Los Angeles, those benefits were a byproduct of a lawsuit whose object was hostile to the city's interest in the unrestricted utilization of its groundwater resources. The court stated that this adversity of interest required rejection of the substantial common benefit theory for awarding attorney's fees (78 Cal. App. 3d 82, 91) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.361

§ 60.361 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception--Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit

[For caption, see § 60.360, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS IMPROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY BECAUSE THE GENERAL BENEFIT FLOWS FROM STARE DECISIS.

Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit. The general benefit flowing from stare decisis is not a benefit justifying an award of attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine (Northington v. Davis (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 955, 961, 154 Cal. Rptr. 524, 593 P.2d 221 ; Serrano v. Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 186-190, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.360, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit theory, when the benefit has flowed only from stare decisis.

See also § 60.340[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.340[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stare Decisis Not a Substantial Benefit

In Northington v. Davis (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 955, 154 Cal. Rptr. 524, 593 P.2d 221 , plaintiffs instituted a taxpayers' suit against various employees and agencies of the City of Los Angeles challenging the legality of construction of a helipad on the roof of a proposed police station. The trial court granted a summary judgment in favor of plaintiffs on the ground that the city had failed to obtain certain required approval, and awarded attorney's fees on the basis of the substantial benefit theory. The court of appeal reversed the award of attorney's fees and remanded the matter to the trial court. The court of appeal stated that the fact that litigation establishes a legal principle that may effect future litigation does not entitle an attorney who obtained the initial victory to collect attorney's fees under the substantial benefit doctrine from those who may, by virtue of stare decisis, obtain a so-called benefit of those labors in future cases, and this factor had played a dominant role in the trial court's award (23 Cal. 3d 955, 961) .

Serrano v. Stefan Merli Plastering Co. (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 186-190, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 777 , involved a prior published appeal in which the appellate court held that a trial court had the authority to require a deposition reporter to provide a copy of a transcript to a non-noticing party for a reasonable fee and to determine the amount of the reasonable fee in the event of a dispute. After that ruling, the plaintiffs sought attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.The trial court denied the fees, holding that the plaintiffs had not done anything to further the public interest other than raise an issue in the course of private litigation that could establish legal precedent adverse to a portion of the public.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that Adoption of Joshua S. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 945, 70 Cal. Rptr. 3d 372, 174 P.3d 192 established the applicable criteria under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 for determining whether litigation has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest [184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 186-188] . The court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 was not intended to impose fees on an individual seeking a judgment that determines only his or her private rights, but who has done nothing to adversely affect the public interest other than being on the losing side of an important appellate case [184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 188] . The court held that the fact that the prior appellate decision was published did not make it of public interest. The court held that although stare decisis provides that a legal doctrine established in a case involving a single litigant benefits all others similarly situated, stare decisis has never been viewed as sufficient justification for permitting an attorney to obtain fees from all those who may, in future cases, use a precedent he or she has helped to secure [184 Cal. App. 4th 178, 188] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.362

§ 60.362 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Theory--In Catalyst Case, Plaintiff Must Have Made Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter Short of Litigation

[1] FORM

[For caption, see § 60.360, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS IMPROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE SUBSTANTIAL BENEFIT THEORY BECAUSE UNDER CATALYST THEORY, PLAINTIFF MUST HAVE MADE REASONABLE ATTEMPT TO SETTLE MATTER SHORT OF LITIGATION.

Party Must Have Made Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter. In a catalyst case, under the substantial benefit theory, to be entitled to attorney's fees a party must first have made a reasonable attempt to settle the matter short of litigation (Pipefitters Local No. 636 Defined Benefit Plan v. Oakley, Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548-1551, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 78).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.360, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the substantial benefit theory when the moving party failed to make a reasonable attempt to settle the matter short of litigation.

See also § 60.340[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms Of Pleading And Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.340[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Must Have Made Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter

In Pipefitters Local No. 636 Defined Benefit Plan v. Oakley, Inc. (2010) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548-1551, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 78 , the plaintiff was a shareholder in the defendant, a publicly traded company. The defendant announced that it was being sold to another company, at a premium over the defendant's average trading price. The plaintiff filed an action to enjoin the sale, alleging that the directors breached their fiduciary duty by failing to maximize shareholder value and by failing to disclose all material facts. The defendant then filed a preliminary proxy statement with the SEC. The plaintiff filed an amended complaint citing alleged omissions in the proxy statement. The defendant demurred to the amended complaint. The plaintiff wrote the defendant's board of directors a letter pointing out problems with the proxy statement. In an effort to moot the plaintiff's claims, the defendant slightly revised the proxy statement. The plaintiff did not oppose the defendant's demurrer and did not pursue the lawsuit. Instead, the plaintiff filed a motion for attorney's fees, arguing that it produced a substantial benefit to the defendant's shareholders by obtaining disclosure of additional material information related to the acquisition. The trial court denied the motion.

On appeal, the court first held that because there was no settlement or judgment in the action, plaintiff's fee claim arose under the catalyst theory, which allows for attorney's fees if the defendant changes its behavior substantially because of, and in the manner sought by, the litigation [180 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548] . The court held that Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 [discussed at § 60.400], applied to the case. Under Graham, in a catalyst case the plaintiff must have engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle its dispute with the defendant before litigation. The court held that Graham applied even though Graham involved recovery of attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory, rather than the substantial benefit theory [180 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1549] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
2. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Substantial Benefit Exception

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.363-60.369

[Reserved]

§§ 60.363[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.370

§ 60.370 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
vs.	)	AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____

_____

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1021.5.

A. General Rule. [See § 60.300, Paragraph A.]

B. Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. On motion, a court may award attorney's fees to a successful party against one or more opposing parties in any action that has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest if:

(1) a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, has been conferred on the general public or a large class of persons; (2) the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement, or of enforcement by one public entity against another public entity, are such as to make the award appropriate; and (3) such fees should not in the interest of justice be paid out of the recovery. [No claim for fees is required to be filed when one or more of successful parties and one or more opposing parties are public entities] (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).

C. Private Attorney General Theory. Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 constitutes a legislative declaration of policy on attorney's fees and provides explicit statutory authority for court-awarded attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory (Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 925, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200).

D. Federal Law as Guide to Interpretation. Since the Legislature drew heavily on federal decisions relating to the private attorney general theory in framing Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5, such federal decisions are useful as guides in interpreting the California statute (Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 934-938, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200).

E. Significant Benefit. The significant benefit that will justify an attorney fee award under the private attorney general doctrine does not need to represent a tangible asset or concrete gain; in some cases it may be recognized simply from the effectuation of a fundamental constitutional or statutory policy (Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 939, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 ; see Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1083-1086, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239 ; Braude v. Automobile Club of Southern Cal. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1013, 223 Cal. Rptr. 914).

F. Necessity and Financial Burden. The necessity and financial burden of private enforcement that make an award of attorney's fees appropriate exist when the cost of the claimant's legal victory transcends his or her personal interest and places a burden on the plaintiff out of proportion to his or her individual stake in the matter (Mejia v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 157, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228 ; Families Unafraid to Uphold Rural El Dorado County v. El Dorado County Board of Supervisors (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 ; Schmid v. Lovette (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 475, 201 Cal. Rptr. 424 ; see Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1083, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for attorney's fees under the private attorney general exception, formerly an equitable exception to the general rule against attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, but now long since codified and expressly authorized under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. It should be combined with additional memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.371 et seq.

Counsel may wish to include in this form those federal cases relating to the private attorney general theory that support the particular request for attorney's fees [see § 60.370[3][d]].

See also § 60.340[2][a], regarding the connection between Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and the significant benefit exception.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Evidence cognizable by the court in such a motion proceeding should be submitted with the memorandum to support its factual statements. A request for judicial notice will support facts subject to such notice [Evid. Code § 450 et seq.]. Otherwise supporting affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury should be submitted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (affidavits), 2015.5 (declarations)], averring to such facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant as may be necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For forms for notices of motions for attorney's fees with supporting declarations and orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the private attorney general exception under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 are set out in § 60.371 et seq. Points and authorities based on other equitable exceptions and statutory bases for an award of attorney's fees are set out in § 60.300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), and § 60.440 et seq. (award based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717).

With appropriate modifications, this form also may be used to oppose a motion to tax costs that is supported by the memoranda set out in § 60.40 et seq.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.400 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

For discussion, see § 60.300[3][a].

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 provides that on motion, a court may award attorney's fees to a successful party against one or more opposing parties in any action that has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest if: (1) a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, has been conferred on the general public or a large class of persons; (2) the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement, or of enforcement by one public entity against another public entity, are such as to make the award appropriate; and (3) such fees should not in the interest of justice be paid out of the recovery. No claim for fees is required to be filed when one or more of successful parties and one or more opposing parties are public entities.

[c] Private Attorney General Theory

In Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 , plaintiffs had instituted an underlying mandate action against three governmental entities of the City of Los Angeles challenging the entities' approval of a subdivision map. Initially, the trial court rejected all of plaintiffs' contentions and entered judgment in favor of defendant city agencies. On appeal, however, the court of appeal reversed, concluding that the city agencies had erred in approving the subdivision map without making specific findings that the proposed subdivision was in fact consistent with the city's general plan. The court of appeal directed the trial court to set aside the city's approval of the subdivision map and to remand the matter to the city council to proceed in the manner required by law, and the trial court did so.

Plaintiffs, as prevailing parties, then moved the trial court for an award of attorney's fees against the city under either the substantial benefit or private attorney general theories. The trial court denied the fee motion and plaintiffs appealed the judgment insofar as it failed to provide for an award of fees to their counsel. The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's denial of attorney's fees on the private attorney general theory and remanded the case to the trial court in light of the enactment, while the case was pending on appeal, of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 which specifically authorizes attorney fee awards under the private attorney general theory. The Court stated that although it had concluded in Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , that a court may, under its equitable powers, award attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory when a constitutional right has been vindicated, Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 now gives the court explicit statutory authority to award attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory without regard to whether the public policy vindicated rests on constitution or statute (23 Cal. 3d 917, 925) .

[d] Federal Law as Guide to Interpretation

Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 , is discussed in § 60.370[3][c]. In discussing the criteria enumerated in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the Court stated that it was clear from both the statutory framework and language that in drafting Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 the Legislature relied heavily on federal private attorney general authorities prior to Alyeska Pipeline Co. v. Wilderness Soc'y (1975) 421 U.S. 240, 95 S. Ct. 1612, 44 L. Ed. 2d 141 (holding that in the absence of statutory authorization, federal courts under federal law could not properly award attorney's fees on a private attorney general theory). The Court also stated that since the Legislature drew heavily on the pre-Alyeska federal decisions in framing Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, such authorities, while no longer viable in the federal realm, often will be helpful and reliable guides in interpreting the various provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (23 Cal. 3d 917, 934-938) .

[e] Significant Benefit

Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 , is discussed in § 60.370[3][c]. In discussing the requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, that a significant benefit be conferred on the general public or a large class of persons, the Court pointed out that the statute itself provides that the significant benefit conferred by the litigation may be either pecuniary or nonpecuniary in nature. The Court also stated that under the private attorney general doctrine, the significant benefit that will justify an attorney fee award does not have to represent a tangible asset or a concrete gain, but in some cases may be recognized simply from the effectuation of a fundamental constitutional or statutory policy, such as the fundamental constitutional principles involved in Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 [see § 60.340[3][c]] (23 Cal. 3d 917, 939) .

In Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239 , the court of appeal reversed an order denying attorney's fees in a prior action that had resulted in an appellate opinion emphasizing the unconditional right of a competent adult patient to refuse any medical treatment. The court said that to obtain an award of fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, must have been conferred on the general public or a broad class of persons, and pointed out that those cases upholding or allowing an award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 consistently emphasize that the benefits provided by the protagonist's action must accrue primarily to the public and be substantial in a doctrinal if not a material sense (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1083) . The court explained that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 itself provides no concrete standard by which a court may determine whether the right sought to be vindicated is sufficiently important to justify an award of fees; ultimately the inquiry is an intensely pragmatic one requiring a realistic assessment of the gains resulting in a particular action (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1083) . The court held that in the present case, the prior appellate opinion, declaring the unconditional right of a competent adult patient to decide his or her own fate and emphasizing that the right to forego medical treatment ultimately belongs to the one whose life is in issue, effectuated important legal principles that potentially impact on a large segment of society (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1085) , and that, based on this, the plaintiff was entitled to an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1086) , including reasonable compensation for the time spent prosecuting the fee issue at both the trial and pell levels (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1086 n.9).

Braude v. Automobile Club of Southern Cal. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 223 Cal. Rptr. 914 , was an action by members of a nonprofit mutual benefit corporation (which paid no dividends and in which members had no financial interest and membership could not be transferred), to set aside an election of directors on the ground the election procedures, which involved the use of misleading techniques in the solicitation of general proxies, were unfair. The trial court invalidated the corporation's use of general proxies in contested directors' elections, but declined to award plaintiffs any attorney's fees under either the substantial benefit theory [see § 60.340] or the private attorney general theory of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, as well as the denial of attorney's fees under the substantial benefit theory on the ground the benefit conferred was not actual and concrete, but potential, conceptual, intangible, and doctrinal in nature (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 999, 1005-1010) . It reversed the denial of attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine, however, on the ground the judgment benefitted a large class of persons (the corporation's 1.8 million members) regarding their rights to participate in fair elections, and that these are important rights affecting the public interest (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1010, 1012-1012) . The court pointed out that most of the limitations imposed on the application of the substantial benefit doctrine do not apply to the private attorney general concept and that under this latter concept the benefit conferred may be conceptual or doctrinal and need not be actual and concrete, and, further, that the effectuation of a statutory or constitutional purpose may be sufficient (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1011) . Quoting Rich v. City of Benicia (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 428, 433, 159 Cal. Rptr. 473 , the court said that the private attorney general theory is predicated on achievement of benefits substantial from the viewpoint of the general public but too ephemeral from the standpoint of individual beneficiaries to warrant application of the substantial benefit theory and that, while the substantial benefit theory is based in concepts of unjust enrichment, the private attorney general theory seeks, without regard to material gain, to encourage vindication of strong public policies by private lawsuit (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1011) . The court further said that the benefit must accrue primarily to the public (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1011) . The court added that the important right being vindicated was doctrinal and conceptual in nature and not necessarily actual and concrete, and that whether actual or concrete benefits were in fact conferred, whether the members of the corporate management were indifferent to the doctrinal benefits to the club and its membership, and whether the board or club members opposed or supported the change is of no importance. Accordingly, the court held that the trial court erred in denying an award of attorney's fees under the private attorney general principle (178 Cal. App. 3d 994, 1013) .

[f] Necessity and Financial Burden

In Mejia v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228 , a homeowner filed a petition for writ of mandate in superior court challenging the city's approval of a development project adjoining her land under CEQA and on other grounds. The developer opposed the petition as the real party in interest. The superior court denied the petition, but the court of appeal concluded that substantial evidence supported a fair argument that the project would have significant, unmitigated environmental impacts on animal wildlife and traffic and that a mitigated negative declaration was improper. The court of appeal reversed the judgment with directions to the superior court to grant the petition and issue a peremptory writ of mandate ordering the city to vacate its approval of the project and cause an environmental impact report to be prepared prior to any project approval. The superior court then entered a judgment pursuant to the appellate court's directions and the homeowner moved for an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

The developer and the city each opposed the motion for attorney's fees. The trial court awarded attorney's fees to the homeowner, which it apportioned between the developer and the city. The developer appealed the order; the city did not appeal (156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 156) .

The court of appeal affirmed. The court found that the homeowner's personal interest as a homeowner and resident in opposing the proposed development based on an inadequate environmental review was substantial. However, her substantial personal interest did not preclude a finding that the financial burden of the litigation was out of proportion to her personal stake in this matter. The demands of the litigation caused her to deplete her retirement savings and she was forced to refinance her home to support the litigation (156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 157-159) .

In Families Unafraid to Uphold Rural El Dorado County v. El Dorado County Board of Supervisors (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 205 , plaintiffs, who were private individuals and nonprofit corporations, sued a county and its board of supervisors for failure to comply with the county's draft general plan and the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) in approving a residential subdivision project. Although the trial court ruled in the county's favor, on appeal, the plaintiffs prevailed. The trial court then denied plaintiff's motions for attorney's fees for the trial and original appeal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, finding that plaintiffs failed to meet their burden of proof on the "financial burden" criterion. The court of appeal reversed. The court found that specific, concrete, nonfinancial interests, including environmental or aesthetic interests can satisfy the "personal interest" aspect of the financial burden criterion (79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 514) , that a "nimby" (not in my backyard) personal interest does not automatically disqualify a party from meeting the financial burden criterion of § 1021.5(b) (79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 516-517) , and that plaintiffs had no financial interests in the trial or appeal (79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 518-521) , and remanded to the trial court to consider whether the costs of the trial and appeal were out of proportion to the plaintiffs' nonfinancial interests in the trial and appeal, and, if so, to award attorney's fees (79 Cal. App. 4th 505, 520, 521) .

Schmid v. Lovette (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 201 Cal. Rptr. 424 , was an action brought by plaintiff to enjoin a school district from requiring a loyalty oath from applicants for jobs with the district. The court held that the loyalty oath was unconstitutional and awarded attorney's fees to plaintiff under the federal attorney's fees statute (42 U.S.C. § 1988) and under California's private attorney general statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).

The court of appeal affirmed the award of attorney's fees. The court stated that such loyalty oaths had been held unconstitutional in decisions rendered long ago by both state and federal authorities and that it was distressing to be required to reiterate it at this late date. The court held that an attorney's fee award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 was a proper exercise of the trial court's equitable discretion. The court stated that the trial court had to evaluate whether plaintiff 's action (1) vindicated an important public right, (2) conferred a significant benefit on the general public or a large class of persons, and (3) imposed a financial burden on plaintiffs that was out of proportion to their individual stake in the matter. The court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion because all of the requirements had been met. The first two requirements were met because loyalty oath requirements are threats to academic freedom, and the requirement that applicants for jobs with the district take such an oath had a detrimental affect on a sufficiently wide segment of the public (154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 477-478) . With regard to the requirement that the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement be shown, the court stated that an award under the private attorney general theory is appropriate when the cost of the claimant's legal victory transcends his or her personal interest, that is, when the necessity for pursuing the lawsuit places a burden on the plaintiff out of proportion to his or her individual stake in the matter (154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 478-479) . The plaintiff met this test because she had already signed the oath and been hired by the district, and the purpose of the action was to prevent the district from administering and enforcing the oath in the future. Further, the eligibility of plaintiff 's attorney for the award of fees granted is not affected under the private attorney general theory by the fact that plaintiffs are under no obligation to pay the attorney or that plaintiff 's attorney receives funding from charitable sources or the public (154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 479) .

The facts and procedural background of Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239 , are discussed in § 60.370[3][e]. In reversing the order denying attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine, the court said that to obtain an award of fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement must transcend the litigant's personal interest in the controversy and that such fees should not, in the interest of justice, be paid out of any recovery (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1083) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Theory

In Daniels v. McKinney (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 42, 193 Cal. Rptr. 842 , the court of appeal reversed a decision denying an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to jail inmates who prevailed in two lawsuits brought regarding conditions in the county jail. The court stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 expands and codifies the private attorney general theory and that the fundamental objective of the theory as codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is to encourage suits that effectuate a strong public policy by awarding substantial attorney's fees to those who successfully bring the suits, and thereby bring about benefits to a large number of citizens (146 Cal. App. 3d 42, 49) . The court found that petitioners had fulfilled the statutory requirements and were entitled to an award of attorney's fees (146 Cal. App. 3d 42, 50-54) .

In State of California v. County of Santa Clara (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 608, 191 Cal. Rptr. 204 , owners of timberland brought an action for declaratory relief to require the county to adopt proper procedures for designating land as being within a timberland preserve zone and to declare invalid a county ordinance requiring a use permit as a prerequisite to obtaining that status. The court of appeal upheld the trial court's award of attorney's fees to the landowners based on the private attorney general theory (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5) because the landowners were the moving force in securing benefits that the county had a statutory duty to provide for the general public (142 Cal. App. 3d 608, 615) . Plaintiffs had met the criteria that a significant benefit had been made to the public, the financial burdens of private enforcement made the award appropriate, and the fees should not have been paid out of the recovery (142 Cal. App. 3d 608, 614) .

In Starbird v. County of San Benito (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 657, 176 Cal. Rptr. 149 , a landowner brought an action for a writ of mandate and an injunction against a county seeking to vacate a conditional permit issued for manufacturing use in a combined industrial and scenic highway zoning district. In issuing the permit, the county had failed to comply with regulations requiring the submission of landscaping plans and preparation of an environmental impact report under the California Environmental Quality Act (Pub. Res. Code §§ 21000-21177). The trial court held for defendant and the court of appeal reversed, finding that plaintiff was entitled to attorney's fees under the "private attorney general" provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The court held that the conditions for such an award were met because plaintiff

's action had defended county citizens' environmental rights otherwise ignored by the officials charged with their enforcement (122 Cal. App. 3d 657, 665) .

Save El Toro Ass'n v. Days (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 544, 159 Cal. Rptr. 577 , arose out of an action by a private association against the mayor and other city officials to prevent defendants from acquiring and regulating certain lands in the absence of an open space plan. Plaintiff won on appeal, and thereupon sought attorney's fees, which the trial court denied on the ground that the "substantial benefit" exception did not apply. The court of appeal reversed. Although agreeing on the substantial benefit ground, the court of appeal remanded with directions to the trial court to consider the private attorney general ground. The court noted that if the trial court determined that the litigation had culminated in the vindication of an important public policy, the costs of securing this result required subsidization, and a substantial number of people stood to benefit, the private attorney general theory might apply. The court also noted that the private attorney general doctrine contains no requirement that a party establish that its opponent was guilty of obdurate behavior.

[b] Significant Benefit

In Friends of the Trails v. Blasius (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 810, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 , plaintiffs sued landowners and an irrigation district in a quiet title action to declare a public easement for use of a road along the side of an irrigation canal that had been used by the public from the 1940's through 1971. The trial court concluded that the public acquired an easement for passage and recreational purposes before March 4, 1972, because the public use was sufficient to convey to the landowner at the pertinent time that it was "adverse." The trial court also awarded attorney's fees to plaintiffs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The court of appeal affirmed the award on the ground that the right in issue was sufficiently important to warrant an award of fees, and that there was no abuse of discretion in the determination that the benefit conferred was significant enough to warrant an award under § 1021.5 (78 Cal. App. 4th 810, 832-835) .

In Planned Parenthood v. Aakhus (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 162, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510 , a pro-abortion organization brought an action against an anti-abortion organization resulting in a stipulated judgment issuing an injunction preventing the defendant from obstructing access to an abortion clinic. The court of appeal upheld the award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, stating that the benefit of the litigation to the public was "conceptual and overriding" (14 Cal. App. 4th 162, 171-172) .

Hull v. Rossi (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1763, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 457 , two persons who authored a ballot statement in support of a city water-supply measure were challenged by petition of writ of mandate in which the petitioners alleged the ballot argument contained false and misleading statements. The trial court ordered minor wording changes. Both parties sought attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1021.5, which the trial court refused on the ground that no important public policy was vindicated by the proceeding. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the respondent, in defending the action, achieved substantial victory within the meaning of § 1021.5 in staving off censorship of a ballot statement; noting that the right to seek deletion of false and misleading ballot arguments should not be used as a weapon against differing--as opposed to misleading--opinions (13 Cal. App. 4th 1763, 1768-1769) .

In Citizens Against Rent Control v. City of Berkeley (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226 Cal. Rptr. 265 , the court of appeal affirmed the award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to a citizen's action group who successfully challenged the constitutionality of a city ordinance that placed a $250 limit on contributions to campaign committees for or against municipal ballot measures. The court held that the "important right" and "public benefit" criteria were established since the litigation established the unconstitutionality of an ordinance that infringed on First Amendment rights and thus indirectly benefited society as a whole (181 Cal. App. 3d 213, 229-230) .

[c] Necessity and Financial Burden

In Committee to Defend Reproductive Rights v. A Free Pregnancy Center (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 633, 280 Cal. Rptr.

329 , after private litigants filed a public-interest action against a family planning clinic that had engaged in allegedly unfair business practices, the Attorney General brought a similar action on behalf of the people of California. The two actions were consolidated, and the plaintiffs prevailed. The private plaintiffs moved for fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court held that the plaintiffs were automatically barred from recovering attorney's fees, because of the Attorney General's participation as colitigant; the court deemed the private plaintiffs' action as being "unnecessary" under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the private parties were not automatically barred from recovering fees, and that their recovery would depend on an evaluation of whether the private plaintiffs' participation contributed significantly to the result in the case (229 Cal. App. 3d 633, 641-644) .

In Citizens Against Rent Control v. City of Berkeley (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 213, 226 Cal. Rptr. 265 (discussed in § 60.370[4][b]), the court rejected the contention of the party appealing the award of attorney's fees that the financial burden of private enforcement was not so great as to justify an award of attorney's fees. Noting that the issue is whether a claimant has an individual stake that is out of proportion to the cost of the action, not whether the claimant is financially able to bear the costs of litigation, the court found that "financial burden" criterion was satisfied in light of the fact that the claimants gained no direct pecuniary benefit from the litigation. The court additionally relied on the fact that the claimants pursued the litigation on appeal even after they had apparently lost all indirect pecuniary benefit (181 Cal. App. 3d 213, 230-231) .

In Henneberque v. City of Culver City (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 837, 218 Cal. Rptr. 704 , the court of appeals reversed an order denying back pay and attorney's fees in a second writ proceeding brought by a police officer who was attempting to enforce his rights under the Public Safety Officers Procedural Bill of Rights Act (Gov. Code §§ 3300-3311). The police officer had originally initiated a writ proceeding to direct defendants to provide him with an administrative appeal of his demotion, which he claimed had resulted from his active participation as a labor leader in the local police officers' association, and to reinstate him with back pay. The trial court denied a writ of mandate, but the court of appeal reversed and ordered that the officer be given an administrative appeal [see Henneberque v. City of Culver City (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 250, 194 Cal. Rptr. 869]. The officer then moved in the trial court for a peremptory writ directing defendants to provide him with an administrative appeal, and moved for back pay for the time period in which he was unlawfully demoted and for an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court granted the writ relief with regard to the administrative appeal, which the officer was given and which resulted in affirmance of his demotion and reduction of future salary. However, the trial court issued an order denying the motion for back pay and attorney's fees, which the court of appeal in the instant case reversed, holding that the officer was entitled to the back pay for the period in which he had been unlawfully demoted, and that the trial court had abused its discretion in denying the award of attorney's fees. Specifically, the court noted that even though the officer was entitled to a modest amount of back pay during the time he was unlawfully demoted, he nevertheless sustained a financial burden of prosecuting two writ proceedings and two appeals to enforce his rights. Furthermore, he had been given an administrative appeal that had resulted in affirmance of his demotion and reduction of future salary. The court concluded that the financial burden that the litigation placed on the officer was out of proportion to his personal stake in the case, and that in the interest of justice his attorney's fees should not be paid out of the recovery. Because the trial court had abused its discretion in denying an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the order was reversed.

92 of 186 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.371

§ 60.371 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Enforcement of Existing Right

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Enforcement of Existing Right

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER CODE CIV. PROC. § 1021.5, TO ENFORCE EXISTING RIGHTS.

Enforcement of Existing Rights. The enforcement of existing rights, as well as the creation of new rights, may serve as a basis for awarding fees under the private attorney general doctrine (Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1084, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the party has obtained enforcement of existing rights.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Existing Rights

The facts and procedural background of Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239 , are discussed in § 60.370[3][e]. On appeal defendant argued that no significant benefit was conferred on the public by the litigation because the prior opinion in Bouvia was merely reiterating principles articulated in earlier cases. The court rejected the argument. The court said that the enforcement of existing rights, as well as the creation of new rights, may serve as a basis for awarding fees under the private attorney general doctrine (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1084) . The court added that the declaration of rights in so-called landmark cases would have little, if any, importance if those rights could not be enforced in subsequent litigation, and that defendant's interpretation of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 would allow vital constitutional principles to become mere theoretical pronouncements of little practical value to ordinary citizens who cannot afford the price of vindicating those rights (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1084) . The court nevertheless held that the prior decision did more than simply apply well-settled legal principles to a particular factual setting (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1084) . In the prior decision, the court stated that it found "nothing new in the law to suggest the right to refuse medical treatment may be exercised only if the patient's motives meet with someone else's approval" and that it "certainly is not illegal or immoral to prefer a natural, albeit sooner, death than a drugged life attached to a mechanical device." The court said that its independent research had revealed no other prior decision, either within or without California, that expresses the same view, and that the court's earlier emphasis on the unconditional right of a competent adult patient to decide his or her own fate appears unique among cases that have considered the issue (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1085) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.372

§ 60.372 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Suits Between Private Parties

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Suits Between Private Parties

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH IT IS A SUIT BETWEEN PRIVATE PARTIES.

Suits Between Private Parties. When the criteria of Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure are otherwise met, attorney's fees may be awarded in suits between private parties (Franzblau v. Monardo (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 522, 529, 166 Cal. Rptr. 610).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, in a suit between private parties.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suits Between Private Parties

Franzblau v. Monardo (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 522, 166 Cal. Rptr. 610 , was an action brought by respondent electors in the Marin Hospital District to contest the election of appellant to the hospital's board of directors. Under a conflict of interest statute [former Health & Safety Code § 32110], appellant could not serve on the board of a public hospital if he were currently president of a private hospital and both hospitals served the same area. The trial court set aside the election, but denied respondents' claim for attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

The court of appeal affirmed the annulment of the election, but reversed the trial court's order denying attorney's fees. Although appellant contended that attorney's fees were proper under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 only in suits against public agencies, the court held that they were allowable in suits between private parties as well (108 Cal. App. 3d 522, 529) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.373

§ 60.373 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees Sought Against Court

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees Sought Against Court

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH THAT PARTY IS A COURT.

Fees Sought Against Court. A court is a public entity, and when it is a real party in interest that does not prevail in a lawsuit, it is not excluded from the legislatively-imposed obligation for attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine (Rhyne v. Municipal Court (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 807, 826-827, 170 Cal. Rptr. 312).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the other party is a court.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees Sought Against Court

In Rhyne v. Municipal Court (1980) 113 Cal. App. 3d 807, 170 Cal. Rptr. 312 , Rhyne appeared in municipal court, without counsel, for a misdemeanor arraignment session, and was jailed after pleading guilty to petty theft. Rhyne obtained an attorney, and in superior court sought a writ of habeas corpus and a writ of mandate on behalf of herself and others similarly situated regarding the municipal court's denial of her constitutional rights. The superior court issued a writ of mandate compelling the municipal court to furnish counsel to any persons charged with crimes which could result in confinement; however, the superior court denied Rhyne's request for attorney's fees. The municipal court and Rhyne appealed from the rulings against them, respectively.

The court of appeal, following a discussion of various procedural issues, affirmed the superior court's mandate requiring appointed counsel. However, it reversed the lower court's denial of attorney's fees, and held that the private attorney general doctrine should apply against the municipal court. The court noted that the objectives of the private attorney general doctrine are to give citizens access to the judicial process to enforce important rights, and to encourage suits effectuating strong public policy, which otherwise might be economically infeasible to initiate. These objectives would be substantially frustrated if judicial public entities were to be excluded from the "public entities" obligated to pay attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (113 Cal. App. 3d 807, 825) . The court held that since the municipal court was a real party in interest, did not prevail in the suit, and otherwise met the preconditions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, it should be required to pay attorney's fees (113 Cal. App. 3d 807, 826-827) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.374

§ 60.374 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Good-Faith Exception

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Good-Faith Exception

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH THAT PARTY ACTED IN GOOD FAITH.

No Good-Faith Exception. There is no exception to the granting of fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure because a defendant may have obeyed a statute or otherwise acted in good faith (Schmid v. Lovette (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 474-475, 201 Cal. Rptr. 424).

[2] Comments

[A] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the other party has acted in good faith.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Good-Faith Exception

The factual and legal background of Schmid v. Lovette (1984) 154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 201 Cal. Rptr. 424 , are discussed in § 60.370[3][f]. In affirming the award of attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the court of appeal stated that there is no good faith exception to the statute. Thus, the school district's argument that it had merely obeyed a statute that it thought was valid, requiring it to administer loyalty oaths to job applicants, was not a sufficient reason to deny attorney's fees because the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is not to punish the defendant but to encourage plaintiffs to enforce their civil rights (154 Cal. App. 3d 466, 475) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.375

§ 60.375 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE/IT/THEY DID NOT PREVAIL ON EVERY CLAIM.

Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim. A party need not prevail on every claim presented in the action to be considered a successful party within the meaning of Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure. Rather, the fact that he or she has prevailed on some claims but not on others, or the fact that not all grounds alleged were relied on by the trial court in reaching its decision, is merely one factor to be considered in determining the amount of the award (Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 846-847, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the moving party has not prevailed on every claim.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649 , is discussed in § 60.384.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Not Required to Prevail on Every Claim

In Lyons v. Chinese Hospital Ass'. (2006) 136 Cal. App. 45th 1331, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 550 , a building contractor and a hospital contracted for the contractor to remodel certain portions of the first floor of the hospital building. The remodeling required some demolition work, including removal of floor tile. In response to questions by contractor about the presence of asbestos-containing material in the construction area, the hospital informed him that an asbestos survey of the hospital was performed and the construction area was free of asbestos-containing material. After work started, the contractor discovered the presence of asbestos present throughout the construction site. In their work, the contractor and his brother were personally exposed to the airborne asbestos. Plaintiff produced evidence that the release of asbestos occurred directly adjacent to the hospital lobby, in employees worked and members of the general public congregated, and through which patients, employees and members of the public walked on a daily basis. However there was no finding that employees, patients or the public were actually exposed to asbestos. After two or three asbestos lawyers refused to take the case because plaintiff would not know for at least 20 years whether he would become sick as a result of the exposure, plaintiff found a lawyer to represent him on a contingency fee, with the main focus of the representation being an effort to encourage the government to prosecute the hospital. Counsel and plaintiff contacted federal and state authorities, and the district attorney's office eventually brought an action which resulted in a stipulated judgment and injunction. Plaintiff also filed a civil complaint seeking tort damages for exposure to asbestos, declaratory relief for indemnity against future liability the plaintiff might incur related to the asbestos-containing material from the hospital, and seeking injunctive relief to require the hospital to comply with asbestos laws and regulations, and for attorney fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. In the criminal action, the defendants did not admit liability and the stipulated injunction provided it was not to be used as evidence or admission of liability, and the injunction permanently enjoined the hospital from violating any asbestos-related provisions and imposed a $10,000 civil penalty for violations involving false statements and illegal disposal of hazardous waste. The tort claims went to arbitration, in which the arbitrator found negligent misrepresentation by the hospital, but no fraud or any type of intentional tort, including intentional infliction of emotional distress. Plaintiff also failed to prove tort damages. The arbitrator determined that plaintiff should recover nothing from defendants and awarded neither plaintiff nor defendants indemnity against either of the others. After conclusion of the arbitration, the parties agreed to entry of a stipulated judgment and permanent injunction in he civil action, in which neither party was named the prevailing party and defendants did not admit fault. The injunction permanently enjoined defendants from violating asbestos-related provisions and required the hospital to hire someone to monitor its compliance with asbestos laws and report to the court regarding compliance. The trial court then denied plaintiff's motion for an award of attorney's fees under section 1021.5 on the ground that plaintiff was not a successful party within the meaning of section 1021.5 because the case was not primarily directed at achieving a public benefit by forcing defendant to comply with laws regulating asbestos; the plaintiff's limited success was outweighed by the lack of success on other scores (136 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1336-1343) . However, the Court of Appeal held that the trial court abused its discretion in finding that the plaintiff was not a successful party. The appellate court held that although plaintiff prevailed on only one of six causes of action, and the significance of the issue resolved by the injunction, i.e., defendant's compliance with asbestos laws and regulations, was a matter for the trial court's judgment, the trial court agreed that the relief resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest and conferred a significant benefit on the general public or a large class of persons. The plaintiff obtained, through the final judgment entered by the court, injunctive relief consisting of employee, tenant and contractor notification about the presence of asbestos, employee training, and asbestos testing and monitoring for three years for the hospital and an adjacent medical building, as well as other buildings owned by the defendant. Further, the plaintiff succeeded in obtaining relief on a significant issue in the action (136 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1345-1348) .

In Bowman v. City of Berkeley (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 173, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 447 , a group of neighbors petitioned for writ of mandate seeking, among other things, to overturn a city's approval of a housing project for senior citizens, and the petition was successful in vacating the original approval of the project. The court found that as a matter of due process, the neighbors did not receive a fair hearing when the project was first approved. The court granted the petition in part, ordered the approval voided, remanded to the city for a further hearing, and reserved other issues for determination after return of the writ. The city again approved the project at a new city council meeting. The matter was returned to the trial court, which denied the balance of the petition and entered judgment against the neighbors, which the appellate court affirmed. Following return of the writ, the neighbors moved for attorney fees under the private attorney general statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], supported by invoices showing that the neighbors had been billed $96,592, and had paid $89,696.50, for legal services. The City opposed the motion. The trial court determined that the neighbors were entitled to fees and costs incurred in connection with the due process issue litigated at the outset of the case, and awarded them $17,314.35 in fees and $979.00 in costs (131 Cal. App. 4th 173, 175-176) . The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that even though the neighbors prevailed on only one of the six causes of action in their mandate petition, the neighbors' early due process victory was not undermined by the failure to prevail on the remaining issues. The trial court had regarded the due process problem as significant because removal of the due process infirmity was key to the court being able to fully consider the remaining issues raised, and the significance of the due process issue was a matter for the trial court's judgment (131 Cal. App. 4th 173, 177-179) .

In City of Sacramento v. Drew (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 255 Cal. Rptr. 704 , plaintiff city brought a validation action under Code Civ. Proc. § 860 to declare the validity of a special tax assessment. Defendant initially asserted in the validation action that the assessment was invalid under Cal. Const. Art. XIIIA (Proposition 13), but later, in its closing brief, challenged the assessment on statutory grounds. Defendant prevailed on summary judgment in the action, obtaining a ruling that the assessment was statutorily invalid. The trial court, however, denied the defendant's request for fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, asserting that the defendant "belatedly" raised the prevailing statutory legal theory. On appeal, the court of appeal reversed. It noted that litigation often involves a succession of attacks on an opponent's case, and that the final ground of resolution may only become clear after a series of unsuccessful attacks. The court concluded that the defendant should not be penalized for failure to make the winning statutory argument at the outset of the litigation, in the absence of a finding that the defendant's unsuccessful arguments addressed discrete unrelated claims, were pursued in bad faith, or were pursued incompetently (207 Cal. App. 3d 1287, 1303-1304) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.376

§ 60.376 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE/IT/THEY IS/ARE NOT THE PREVAILING PARTY, BECAUSE THIS ACTION RESULTED IN THE ENFORCEMENT OF AN IMPORTANT RIGHT AFFECTING THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party. A party who does not prevail in an action may be entitled to attorney's fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure on the theory that the party's filing of the action resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest by conferring a significant benefit on the general public or a large class of persons (see Stevens v. Geduldig (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 24, 38, 227 Cal. Rptr. 405, 719 P.2d 1001 ; County of Colusa v. California Wildlife Conservation Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 637, 648-651, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the moving party is not the prevailing party but has obtained the enforcement of an important right.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Successful Party Need Not Be Prevailing Party

In Stevens v. Geduldig (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 24, 227 Cal. Rptr. 405, 719 P.2d 1001 , plaintiff brought a taxpayer's representative action against a member of a governor's tax-reduction task force, a director of a state health care services department, and a state contractor. Plaintiff sought to hold the first two defendants personally liable to the State of California for their negligence in failing to exercise due care in authorizing the expenditure of funds from various state department budgets for expenses incurred by the task force. Plaintiff sought to hold the third defendant personally liable to the state, on a strict liability theory, for obtaining money from the state under an illegal contract. Plaintiff alleged that the funds expended under the contract were improperly allocated from a state department budget to cover expenses incurred by the task force. Subsequent to the filing of the suit, the governor's office reimbursed all departments involved for all funds authorized, expended, and received by all defendants. The trial court entered judgment against all defendants, ruling that the reimbursement of the funds by the governor's office was improper and thus did not mitigate defendants' liability. Defendants appealed from the trial court's judgment.

The Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment. The Court found that the first two defendants were indeed negligent in failing to exercise due care in authorizing the expenditure of public funds, and that the third defendant in fact obtained funds from an illegal contract. However, the Court also held that reimbursement of the funds by the governor's office eliminated all damages attributable to the first two defendants' negligence (42 Cal. 3d 24, 35) . The Court also held that reimbursement by the governor's office of the funds spent under the illegal contract mitigated the third defendant's duty to repay the funds (42 Cal. 3d 24, 36) . The Court then remanded the case to the trial court to determine whether, and in what amount, plaintiff was entitled to attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The Court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 authorizes an award to a successful party in an action that has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest, if the award confers a significant benefit on the general public or a large class of persons. The Court ruled that, even though plaintiff had not prevailed in the case, it was possible he might be entitled to fees on the theory that the filing of his suit caused the governor's office to reimburse the funds improperly spent from the state departments' budgets (42 Cal. 3d 24, 38) .

In County of Colusa v. California Wildlife Conservation Bd. (2006) 145 Cal. App. 4th 637, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , a county sued state agencies to challenge a proposed conversion of agricultural land into wildlife habitat. The county and the landowner entered into Williamson Act (Gov. Code § 51200 et seq.) contracts limiting use of the landowner's property to agriculture and compatible uses. The state agencies then purchased a conservation easement from the owner for a managed wildlife habitat and wetlands, which prohibited cultivation of agricultural crops. The county challenged the validity of the purchase without compliance with Williamson Act procedural requirements, which the state agencies maintained was not necessary. After the county obtained a preliminary injunction, the state agencies and the landowner modified the conservation easement to allow agricultural use, and the county voluntarily dismissed its Williamson Act claims. Over the opposition of the state agencies, the trial court granted the county's motion for an award of attorney's fees against the state agencies under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (145 Cal. App. 4th 637, 642-646) .

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the county was a successful party entitled to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, because the modification of the conservation easement was a result of the lawsuit. The court found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding the county was a successful party against the state agencies on its second cause of action alleging that the state agencies failed to follow the notice procedures of the Williamson Act and failed to make the findings required by Gov. Code § 51292 before approving the acquisition of the conservation easement on the property for public use. In ruling on the motion for a preliminary injunction, the trial court found that the county had demonstrated a reasonable probability of success on the merits of its claims. Further, in addition to ruling against the state agencies on the second cause of action, the preliminary injunction also found a reasonable probability of success in the county's substantive claims of incompatibility of the easement with the property owner's Super Williamson Act contract, which was the county's first cause of action for breach of contract against the property owner. After the granting of the preliminary injunction, the state agencies actively and directly negotiated a contract amendment satisfactory to the county, and the trial court could reasonably have found that the state agencies were acting under the compulsion of the preliminary injunction. Although the state agencies were never ultimately compelled to renotice the action to the county or make findings under Gov. Code § 51292 because of the county's dismissal of the second cause of action, the practical result of the county's lawsuit was an agreement regarding the easement, which excused the findings requirement of Gov. Code § 51292 and apparently satisfied the county's notice concerns (145 Cal. App. 4th 637, 648-651) . Further, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding that the county's action enforced the important public interest set forth in the Williamson Act (Gov. Code § 51220) of preserving agricultural land, because similar future actions of the state agencies were affected; that the county's action conferred a significant benefit on the public; and that the county's action was necessary, because the record could reasonably be read to find that the state agencies would not have followed through with the contract amendment without the pressure of the county's action (145 Cal. App. 4th 637, 651-657) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.377

§ 60.377 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, REGARDLESS OF THE NATURE OF THE RELIEF SOUGHT IN THIS PROCEEDING.

Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought. The nature of the relief sought, not the label or procedural device by which the action is brought, is determinative of the right to seek fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure (In re Head (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 223, 230, 227, 228 Cal. Rptr. 184, 721 P.2d 65 ; National Parks & Conservation Assn. v. County of Riverside (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 242, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 (administrative proceedings)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, regardless of the nature of the relief sought in the proceeding.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Type of Proceedings Brought

In re Head (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 223, 230, 227, 228 Cal. Rptr. 184, 721 P.2d 65 , was a habeas corpus proceeding brought by prison inmates challenging the procedures under which the Department of Corrections implemented the work furlough program authorized by Penal Code §§ 6260-6265. The inmates were represented by the Prison Law Office, a privately supported group of attorneys who provide free legal services to prisoners. After prevailing on the merits, the Prison Law Office was awarded attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. On appeal by the Director of Corrections, the court of appeal reversed the order awarding attorney's fees, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 applies only to civil cases, and that because habeas corpus is a special proceeding of a criminal nature, an award of attorney's fees was not authorized.

On review, the Supreme Court of California reversed, and held that the award of attorney's fees to the Prison Law Office was proper under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The Court observed that although Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 has been held inapplicable to attorney's fees incurred in the defense of criminal cases, in which the primary effect is vindication of the litigant's personal rights, the same is not true of habeas corpus proceedings brought to vindicate prisoners' rights, which may be utilized as a speedier and more expeditious alternative to the purely civil procedures of mandamus or actions for declaratory or injunctive relief (42 Cal. 3d 223, 227-228) . The Court found nothing in the legislative history of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to support a conclusion that the Legislature intended that fee awards be denied in actions in which an important right affecting the public interest has been enforced simply because enforcement was by means of habeas corpus (42 Cal. 3d 223, 231-232) . The Court concluded that the nature of the relief sought, not the label or procedural device by which the action is brought, is determinative of the right to seek fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (42 Cal. 3d 223, 227) .

In National Parks & Conservation Assn. v. County of Riverside (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 96 Cal. Rptr. 2d 576 , an association petitioned for writs of mandate to force a county to obtain an adequate environmental impact report for a proposed landfill project. The trial court granted the petitions and ordered the county to take specific steps to bring the report into compliance with the California Environmental Quality Act and awarded attorney's fees to the association as the prevailing party. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's orders (see National Parks & Conservation Assn. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1505, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 339).

The county then certified a new environmental impact report and submitted it to the trial court as its return on the prior writs. The trial court found that the county failed to comply with two of the writ requirements and awarded attorney's fees to the association based solely on the return report, but the court of appeal reversed the trial court's substantive order, determining that the return report was proper (see National Parks & Conservation Assn. v. County of Riverside (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 1341, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 563). The attorney's fees awarded on the return report included approximately $13,902 in fees reflecting work performed during the administrative process leading to the certification of the return report (81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 242) .

The court of appeal reversed the award of attorney's fees, finding that an appellate court's reversal of the substantive judgment required reversal of the attorney's fee award as well (81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 239-242) . However, the court remanded to the trial court to exercise its discretion with regard to the fees awarded for work performed during the administrative process. The court held that a party may be awarded fees for services performed in connection with an administrative proceeding if the activities were "useful and necessary and directly contributed to the resolution of the action" (81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 242) . The court found that there was an arguable basis for the trial court to find that the services performed before the county filed the return report had the effect of ensuring the return report would address the specific deficiencies found in the original report, and that the trial court could find that these services contributed to the county's compliance with the trial court's initial writ order and therefore resulted in a public benefit (81 Cal. App. 4th 234, 243) .

99 of 186 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.378

§ 60.378 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Private Party

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Private Party

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH THAT PARTY IS A PRIVATE PARTY.

Defendant Is Private Party. Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure allows a private party to receive an award of attorney's fees when a private party is a defendant (Bartling v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 97, 103, 228 Cal. Rptr. 847).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, even though the defendant is a private party.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Is Private Party

Bartling v. Glendale Adventist Medical Center (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 97, 228 Cal. Rptr. 847 , was an appeal from an order denying attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 following the court of appeal's prior remand of the case to the trial court for a determination of that issue. In the prior proceeding, the court of appeal had held that the trial court erred in denying an injunction ordering the real party in interest to disconnect life-preserving equipment from a patient who wished it disconnected, on the ground that a competent, nonterminally ill adult patient has a constitutionally based right to refuse or to terminate medical treatment [see Bartling v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 186, 193-194, 195-196, 209 Cal. Rptr. 220] . In reversing the order denying attorney's fees, the court of appeal, after pointing out that practically all private attorney general and Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 cases have involved a public entity and vindication of recognized public policy and that the case before it concerned two private civil litigants, held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 allows for an award of attorney's fees when the defendant is a private party (184 Cal. App. 3d 97, 103) .

Note that in Bouvia v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 241 Cal. Rptr. 239 , discussed in § 60.370[3][e], the court of appeal said that while it is true that the court in both Bartling v. Superior Court (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 186, 209 Cal. Rptr. 220 , and Bouvia v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 225 Cal. Rptr. 297 , alluded to a constitutional basis for the right vindicated, it seems clear that the right primarily is a development of the common law (citing Cobbs v. Grant (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 229, 104 Cal. Rptr. 505, 502 P.2d 1), and for that reason applies to patients in private as well as governmental facilities and to patients being treated by private as well as publicly employed medical practitioners (195 Cal. App. 3d 1075, 1088) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.379

§ 60.379 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH THE ACTION WAS DISMISSED FOR LACK OF PROSECUTION.

Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution. A party whose action was dismissed for lack of prosecution is not precluded from seeking fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure because the dismissal does not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to consider matters ancillary to the underlying action (see Maria P. v. Riles (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1281, 1290, 240 Cal. Rptr. 872, 743 P.2d 932).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the action has been dismissed for lack of prosecution.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Seek Fees Not Affected by Dismissal of Action for Lack of Prosecution

In Maria P. v. Riles (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1281, 240 Cal. Rptr. 872, 743 P.2d 932 , plaintiffs sought a preliminary injunction to halt implementation of former Educ. Code § 6957, which required school districts to report the names of illegal alien students to federal immigration authorities. Plaintiffs filed suit in April 1975, and obtained a preliminary injunction in September 1975 that remained in effect for almost three years. As of July 1978, the plaintiff 's litigation was moot, because the legislature had renumbered and amended former Educ. Code § 6957 and deleted the reporting requirements. In September 1980, defendants moved to dismiss the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring it to trial within five years of its filing. The trial court granted the defendant's motion. After the order dismissing the action, plaintiffs moved for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court found that plaintiffs were entitled to reasonable attorney fees for obtaining the preliminary injunction, and it awarded fees to the plaintiffs. The court of appeal reversed, determining that the trial court had no jurisdiction to make the fee award after it had dismissed the underlying action. In addition, the court of appeal held that the plaintiffs were not "successful litigants" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

The Supreme Court reversed, concluding that plaintiffs were successful litigants and that the dismissal did not divest the trial court of jurisdiction to award fees. The court noted that, under the federal Constitution, a dismissal for mootness deprives a federal court of jurisdiction to hear the underlying cause; nevertheless the federal court still retains jurisdiction to address the issue of attorney fees for a prevailing party under 42 U.S.C. § 1988 (Civil Rights Attorney's Fees Awards Act of 1976). Following this federal precedent, the Court stated that a dismissal for failure to prosecute would not divest a trial court of jurisdiction to consider matters ancillary to the underlying action, such as an application for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (43 Cal. 3d 1281, 1290) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.380

§ 60.380 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, WITHOUT NEEDING TO REMAND THE QUESTION TO THE TRIAL COURT.

Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. An appellate court may make an initial determination of whether a party is entitled to fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure; the appellate court is not required to remand the question of fee entitlement to the trial court (Laurel Heights Improvement Assn. v. Regents of University of California (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 376, 427, 253 Cal. Rptr. 426, 764 P.2d 278).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the motion is made in an appellate court.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Appellate Court May Award Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5

In Laurel Heights Improvement Assn. v. Regents of University of California (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 376, 253 Cal. Rptr. 426, 764 P.2d 278 , a neighborhood association challenged an environmental impact report concerning the proposed relocation of University of California biomedical research facilities. The association petitioned in the superior court for a writ of mandate setting aside the report. The superior court denied the petition. The court of appeal reversed and granted a request by the neighborhood association for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The regents of the university petitioned to the Supreme Court for review of the court of appeal's decision on the merits contending, inter alia, that the court of appeal should have remanded the action to the trial court to determine in the first instance whether the association was entitled to a fee award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

The Supreme Court affirmed the court of appeal's decision concerning attorney's fees, holding that a court of appeal is not required to remand to the trial court the question of whether to award fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The Court stated that the decision as to which court is better equipped to make the initial determination is a matter within the discretion of the court of appeal. Citing Wilkerson v. City of Placentia (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 435, 173 Cal. Rptr. 294 , as authority, the Court indicated that a court of appeal is particularly qualified to make the fee determination when it is the court of appeal's decision, rather than the trial court's, that provides a basis for fees in the first instance (47 Cal. 3d 376, 427) . The Court noted that in many cases, the trial court is better equipped to decide whether fees should be awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and that it is proper in such cases for a reviewing court to defer to the trial court in making the fee determination. That a procedure is normal or customary, however, does not make it mandatory (47 Cal. 3d 376, 426) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.381

§ 60.381 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Public Entity

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Defendant Is Public Entity

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], _____ [name], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____ [name], UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, EVEN THOUGH THAT PARTY IS A PUBLIC ENTITY.

Defendant Is Public Entity. _____ [A private party or A public entity] may receive an award of attorney's fees when a public entity is a defendant (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the defendant is a public entity.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Is Public Entity

Code of Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 allows a private party or a public entity to receive an award of attorney's fees when a public entity is a defendant.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.382

§ 60.382 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Entitlement to Amount Requested

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Entitlement to Amount Requested

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____, UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Fees to Establish Fee Claim. The type of fees recoverable under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure include compensation for the hours reasonably spent to establish and defend the fee claim, including time spent preparing fee motions and defending the fee award on appeal (Serrano v. Unruh (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 621, 626-627, 636-639, 186 Cal. Rptr. 754, 652 P.2d 985).

B. Fee Is Based on Application of Multiplier to Lodestar Figure. In determining the amount of attorney's fees to be awarded, the trial court must first determine a "lodestar" figure based on a careful compilation of the time spent and reasonable hourly compensation for each attorney involved in the representation of the case. That figure may then be increased or reduced by the application of a "multiplier" after the trial court has considered other factors concerning the lawsuit (Press v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 311, 322, 193 Cal. Rptr. 900, 667 P.2d 704).

C. Factors on Which Multiplier Is Based. The factors that should be considered by the trial court in determining what "multiplier" should be used to increase or reduce the "lodestar" figure include the following: (1) the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill displayed in presenting them; (2) the extent to which the nature of the litigation precluded other employment by the attorneys; (3) the contingent nature of the fee award, both from the point of view of eventual victory on the merits and the point of view of establishing eligibility for the award; (4) the fact that an award against the state would ultimately fall on taxpayers; (5) the fact that the attorneys in question received public and charitable funding for the purposes of bringing lawsuits of the character involved; and (6) the fact that the monies awarded would inure not to the benefit of the attorneys involved but to the organizations that employ them (Press v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 311, 322 n.12, 193 Cal. Rptr. 900, 667 P.2d 704).

D. Trial Court's Discretion in Applying Multiplier. The trial court's multiplier will not be disturbed on appeal unless it represents an abuse of discretion (Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 49, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, to set forth the methods and factors properly employed to determine the amount of the award of fees. It should also be combined with additional memoranda, as appropriate, set out in §§ 60.383 -60.385.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees to Establish Fee Claim

In Serrano v. Unruh (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 621, 186 Cal. Rptr. 754, 652 P.2d 985 , plaintiffs successfully challenged the financing of public schools on equal protection grounds and were awarded attorney's fees under the private attorney general theory of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The fee award included services for defending the fee award on appeal, but excluded services for preparing the fee motions.

The Supreme Court affirmed the principal fee award on appeal, but remanded that portion of the order denying compensation for services on the fee motions. The Court held that the fees recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 ordinarily include compensation for hours reasonably spent, including those necessary to establish and defend the fee claim, unless circumstances render the award unjust (32 Cal. 3d 621, 639) .

[b] Fee Is Based on Application of Multiplier to Lodestar Figure

In Press v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 311, 193 Cal. Rptr. 900, 667 P.2d 704 , in order to qualify an initiative measure for a statewide election, plaintiffs sought voter signatures. Plaintiffs circulated signature petitions outside the entrance to defendant grocery store. After defendant threatened plaintiffs with arrest if they did not abandon their endeavor, plaintiffs filed an action for injunctive relief. The trial court granted the requested the relief. Plaintiffs were able to obtain a sufficient number of signatures to qualify for the ballot. After the election, plaintiffs sought an award of attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Plaintiffs' representative was a nonprofit corporation that provides legal services without charge in cases that raise issues of broad public interest. The trial court granted plaintiffs' motion for fees. Plaintiffs appealed the award, claiming that the court abused its discretion in failing to follow the lodestar adjustment method, and in using an arbitrary method of calculation.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the judgment insofar as it found that plaintiffs were entitled to an award of attorney's fees, but reversed and remanded the judgment regarding the amount of fees awarded (34 Cal. 3d 311, 324-325) . Citing Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 (Serrano III), as authority, the Court explained that in determining the amount of attorney's fees that should be awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the trial court must first determine a "touchstone" or "lodestar" figure based on a careful compilation of the time spent and reasonable hourly compensation for each attorney involved in the representation of the case. That figure may then be increased or reduced by the application of a "multiplier" after the trial court has considered other factors concerning the lawsuit. The proper determination and use of the lodestar figure is extremely important. Anchoring the award analysis to the lodestar concept is the only way of approaching the problem that can claim objectivity. Ultimately, the trial judge has discretion to determine the value of professional services rendered in his or her court. However, since determination of the lodestar figures is so fundamental to calculating the amount of the award, the exercise of that discretion must be based on the lodestar adjustment method (34 Cal. 3d 311, 322) . The court said that the trial court failed to follow the proper method of determining the fee award. Its calculation never even referred to the lodestar figure. Also, the trial court improperly intertwined the determination of the litigation's importance with the question of the amount to be awarded. The amount to be awarded should arise only after it has been concluded that an award is proper. The amount of the award requires the court to consider a wide range of factors. The trial court had devised a fraction that did not take into account those factors, but reflected only the trial judge's view of the results achieved by the litigation. It was not a proper adjustment mechanism or multiplier (34 Cal. 3d 311, 323) . While a trial court has discretion to determine the proper amount of an award, the resulting fee must bear some reasonable relationship to the lodestar figure and to the purpose of the private attorney general doctrine (34 Cal. 3d 311, 324) .

[c] Factors on Which Multiplier Is Based

The facts and procedural background of Press v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 311, 193 Cal. Rptr. 900, 667 P.2d 704 , are discussed in § 60.382[3][b]. In Press, the Supreme Court articulated the factors that should be considered by the trial court in determining what "multiplier" should be used to increase or reduce the "lodestar" figure. The factors the trial court may consider in adjusting the lodestar figure include the following: (1) the novelty and difficulty of the questions involved, and the skill displayed in presenting them; (2) the extent to which the nature of the litigation precluded other employment by the attorneys; (3) the contingent nature of the fee award, both from the point of view of eventual victory on the merits and the point of view of establishing eligibility for the award; (4) the fact that an award against the state would ultimately fall on taxpayers; (5) the fact that the attorneys in question received public and charitable funding for the purposes of bringing lawsuits of the character involved; and (6) the fact that the monies awarded would inure not to the benefit of the attorneys involved but to the organizations that employ them (34 Cal. 3d 311, 322, 322 n.12).

[d] Trial Court's Discretion in Applying Multiplier

Serrano v. Priest (1977) 20 Cal. 3d 25, 141 Cal. Rptr. 315, 569 P.2d 1303 , is discussed in § 60.320[3][c].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Trial Court's Discretion in Applying Multiplier

In Californians for Responsible Toxics Management v. Kizer (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 961, 259 Cal. Rptr. 599 , the court of appeal held that the California Supreme Court's list of six factors for determining the multiplier to be used to increase or reduce the loadstar figure is not an exhaustive list. The court found that the trial court did not err in looking to the relative lack of success of the plaintiff 's suit as a factor justifying reduction of the amount of the lodestar (211 Cal. App. 3d 961, 973-975) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.383

§ 60.383 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____, UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, APPLYING THE MULTIPLIER TO THE FEE-RELATED PORTION OF THE LODESTAR.

Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar. The court may apply the same multiplier to the fee-related portion of the lodestar that it applies to the other portions (Serrano v. Unruh (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 621, 626-627, 636-639, 186 Cal. Rptr. 754, 652 P.2d 985).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in §§ 60.370 and 60.382, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, to set forth the methods and factors properly employed to determine the amount of the award of fees, to assert the application of the multiplier to the fee-related portion of the lodestar.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Multiplier to Fee-Related Portion of Lodestar

Serrano v. Unruh (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 621, 626-627, 636-639, 186 Cal. Rptr. 754, 652 P.2d 985 , is discussed in § 60.382[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

In Thayer v. Wells Fargo Bank (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 , five class actions against a bank were coordinated and resolved by a settlement agreement. Subsequently, the court awarded attorney's fees to nine law firms that represented plaintiffs in the coordinated actions under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. After an appeal was filed, the defendant entered settlement agreements regarding all individual attorney's fee awards except that to one of the attorneys, who was co-counsel in one of the actions; his co-counsel's fee was among those compromised by the settlement. The trial court made the award by dividing the history of the litigation into four periods, determined the attorney's lodestar based on an hourly fee lower than the one he sought, determined the amounts for each of the four periods, and then applied a multiplier to two of those periods (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 823-832) . The trial court based the multiplier on the contingent nature of the case, the novelty and complexity of the litigation, the skill displayed in fashioning an appropriate remedy, the results obtained, and the continuing obligations of counsel. The sole issue on the defendant's appeal and the attorney's cross-appeal was the amount of fees awarded. The defendant did not challenge the number of hours claimed by the attorney or the reasonableness of the hourly fee used by the court in calculating the lodestar.

The Court of Appeal reversed and remanded to the trial court. The court held that the factors justifying use of a multiplier to enhance the lodestar figures were wholly missing. The court found that the case was not genuinely questionable or contingent, since the defendant never contested plaintiffs' legal claims or their right to reasonable attorney's fees and communicated a desire to settle the cases and pay fees almost immediately after the complaints were filed (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835) . The court then held that the litigation was neither novel nor complicated, but was based on simple anticipatory breach of contract, and that neither a problem posed by a provision in the settlement agreement nor the remedy was so complex as to seriously tax the ingenuity or resources of any of the attorneys involved (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 835-837) . The court also held that enhancement of the lodestar was not justified by the attorney's role in persuading the trial court to initiate coordinated proceedings, since the defendant, after initially opposing coordination because it justifiably expected the cases would settle promptly, dropped its opposition when the cases did not promptly settle and counsel for the plaintiffs in the four other cases neither supported nor opposed coordination (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 837-838) . Enhancement on the basis of results obtained based on the high dollar value of the settlement was also not justified, where the trial court concluded it was unnecessary to determine the dollar value by refusing to award percentage fees as sought by counsel and so could not use the results obtained factor to enhance the lodestar simply because the settlement conferred a significant benefit on a large group of people as this is a factor under Section 1021.5 relevant only to the entitlement to fees, not the amount (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 838-839) . The court then held that based on the unjustified duplication of work so that the hours were not reasonably spent, the trial court should apply a negative multiplier decreasing the lodestar (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 840-845) . The court then held that there was no reason to apply a positive multiplier to ensure that the fee awarded was within the range of fees freely negotiated in the legal marketplace for comparable litigation. The court held that the holding in Lealao does not mandate that fee awards calculated under the lodestar methodology be measured by a percentage-of-the-benefit yardstick whenever a class recovery can be monetized with a reasonable degree of certainty, but is limited to cases in which a lodestar award would not produce a fee within that range and it is not otherwise inappropriate to increase the basic lodestar. In this case, a percentage-of-the benefit approach would have been inappropriate since the court did increase the lodestar, and counsel had not shown that the lodestar would not produce a fee within the range of fees freely negotiated in the marketplace (92 Cal. App. 4th 819, 845-846) .

Lealao v. Beneficial California, Inc. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 19, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 797 , was a class action against a major lender for allegedly wrongfully charging a prepayment penalty for prepayment of open-end loans on certain credit line account agreements, in which an attorney's fee award was sought after a settlement providing that the lender would pay members of the class who filed claims 77 percent of the amount paid as prepayment penalties, and pay class counsel reasonable fees determined by the court. The trial court granted fees solely on the basis of the hours counsel expended on the case, declining to utilize a multiplier to enhance fees under a lodestar calculation and declining to award a percentage fee. The court of appeal held that the trial court properly rejected a pure percentage fee since there was no conventional common fund in this case (82 Cal. App. 4th 19, 37-39) . However, the court remanded to the trial court for reconsideration of evaluating the lodestar as a percentage of the actual class recovery for the following reasons (82 Cal. App. 4th 19, 50-53) :

- Although the settlement did not create a common fund out of which attorney's fees were to be paid, the monetary value of the benefit to the class was much less speculative than that of some traditional common funds, since the settlement exposed the lender to claims in the collective amount of $14,748,000 if all class members filed valid claims, and class counsel provided the court the exact number of valid claims submitted at the time of the fee application and the collective value of those claims ($7.35 million) was undisputed, so that the value of the class recovery could be monetized within a reasonable degree.

- The amount of claims actually paid and the basis for the percentage analysis urged by class counsel was approximately $7.4 million less than the amount the lender agreed to pay class members, so that if the lodestar amount were reasonably adjusted upward to reflect an appropriate percentage of the claims paid, the total amount of the lender's out-of-pocket expense would still be considerably less than that to which it exposed itself in the settlement agreement, and the fee would be less than that which the court could award as a pure percentage in a traditional common fund case.

- Adjusting the lodestar to reflect the monetary value of the class benefit was justified by the fact that the class was notified that counsel would seek a fee representing approximately 24 percent of the recovery and no members objected and only two opted out.

- Class counsel rejected any offer including a specific amount of fees to avoid any conflict of interest with the class, and a fee award that fails to take into account commendable conduct by counsel, which subordinates counsel's economic interests to that of the class, encourages attorneys to accept settlement proposals more favorable to them than to the class.

- The prompt settlement of the case accounted for the relatively small of time spent on the case and was the major reason the basic lodestar was so low relative to the monetary amount of the recovery, and using the promptness of settlement to justify the refusal to apply a multiplier to reflect the size of the class recovery would exacerbate the disincentive to settle promptly inherent in the lodestar methodology.

- Permitting the amount of recovery to influence the fee is most justified where the amount of the recovery is not due primarily to the size of the class, and this case was not one in which the individual recoveries of class members were de minimis.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.384

§ 60.384 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____, UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, TO INCLUDE TIME SPENT ON CLOSELY RELATED PROCEEDINGS.

Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings. An award of attorney's fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure includes compensation for time reasonably spent on other separate but closely related court proceedings (Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 849, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649). [The award may also include compensation for time reasonably spent on administrative proceedings that follow and result from the commencement of the action (Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 849 n.5, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in §§ 60.370 and 60.382, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, to set forth the methods and factors properly employed to determine the amount of the award of fees, when the attorney spent time in related proceedings.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

In Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649 , defendant decided to challenge the legality of minimum milk retail price regulations by selling milk below the minimum price. Plaintiff director of the state Department of Food and Agriculture obtained both a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction against defendant, who then cross complained against plaintiff. The parties entered into settlement negotiations, and agreed to a memorandum of understanding. Subsequently, plaintiff issued orders suspending the minimum milk price regulations throughout the state. Defendant moved for an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and the trial court awarded the fees. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the award, with a modification deleting provisions directing the award to be paid out of certain sources. The court held that the award of fees for services performed in conjunction with administrative proceedings against defendant was proper. The court first explained that a party need not prevail on every claim presented in an action to be considered a successful party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 846) . Rather, the fact that the party prevailed on some claims but not on others is a factor to be considered in determining the amount of the fee award (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 846-847) . The court next explained that, in considering the factors to determine the amount of the fee, the trial court must first calculate a "touchstone" figure of the attorney's services in terms of the time expended on the case (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 847) . The hours reasonably expended on an action may include services performed in closely related administrative proceedings that follow and result from the commencement of an action (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 847, 849 n.5). The hours reasonably expended may also include time spent on other separate but closely related court proceedings (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 849) . Finally, the court explained that the trial court may adjust the touchstone figure upward or downward in light of the results obtained, among other factors. If the unsuccessful claims were unrelated to the successful ones, the figure would be adjusted downward. However, when the unsuccessful and successful claims involve a common core of facts or are based on related legal theories, the trial court focuses on the significance of the overall relief obtained in relation to the hours reasonably expended. If the successful party has obtained excellent results, his or her attorney recovers a fully compensatory fee (170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 849-850) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Time Reasonably Spent in Related Proceedings

In Best v. California Apprenticeship Council (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1448, 240 Cal. Rptr. 1 , the court of appeal held that fees may be awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 for services provided in conjunction with administrative proceedings that took place prior to a court action, when such administrative proceedings were useful and necessary to the public interest litigation (193 Cal. App. 3d 1448, 1461-1462) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.385

§ 60.385 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT], _____, UNDER SECTION 1021.5 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, TO REFLECT TIME SPENT ON UNSUCCESSFUL CLAIMS RELATED TO SUCCESSFUL CLAIMS.

Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims. In determining the amount of an award of attorney's fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure, when a successful party's successful and unsuccessful claims for relief involve a common core of facts or are based on related legal theories, the trial court focuses on the significance of the overall relief obtained in relation to the hours reasonably expended. [When the successful party has obtained excellent results, his or her attorney recovers a fully compensatory fee] (Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 850, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in §§ 60.370 and 60.382, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, to set forth the methods and factors properly employed to determine the amount of the award of fees, when the attorney spent time on unsuccessful claims related to successful claims.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determining Fee When Unsuccessful Claims Related to Successful Claims

Wallace v. Consumers Cooperative of Berkeley, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 836, 216 Cal. Rptr. 649 , is discussed in § 60.384.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.386

§ 60.386 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., defendant], UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1021.5, DESPITE FACT THAT THE COURT HAS ALSO AWARDED PENALTIES FOR _____ [identify, e.g., VIOLATIONS OF THE UNFAIR COMPETITION STATUTE].

Private Attorney General Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action. Both fees under Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5 and penalties can, as a matter of law, be awarded in the same action when such penalties and fees are appropriate in the particular instance (Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 544, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in §§ 60.370 and 60.382, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when penalties have also been awarded in the action. Counsel may choose to use this form in a reply brief to respond to an opposing party's contention that both fees and penalties are not proper as a matter of law.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Fees and Penalties May Be Awarded in Same Action

In Hewlett v. Squaw Valley Ski Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 544, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 118 , a private individual and a private organization brought a lawsuit against the operator of a ski resort alleging unlawful business practices in cutting down more than 1,800 trees to develop ski runs. The county district attorney had brought a separate action, but dismissed his action and joined as a plaintiff in the action brought by the private individual and organization. The trial court found that the ski resort had engaged in unfair competition by committing unlawful business practice by violating provisions of the Public Resources Code, terms of a conditional use permit, and a temporary restraining order. The trial court awarded mandatory and prohibitory injunctive relief, imposed fines, and attorneys fees to the private individual and organization. The ski resort appealed, challenging among other things, the remedies imposed and the award of attorney fees.

The court of appeal affirmed. The ski resort contended that the trial court could not award attorneys fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 if it has also awarded penalties for violations of the unfair competition statute. The ski resort posited that it was the county district attorney who initially brought the action, thereby making the monetary penalties possibility. The ski resort argued that outside counsel in this case was merely doing the work on behalf of the district attorney and that the public benefit fee doctrine has never been applied as a "subterfuge by which public bodies make private defendants pay for legal work done on behalf of the public body." In the alternative, the ski resort argued that if the case was truly brought by private parties and not the district attorney, the penalties imposed were inappropriate.

The court concluded that the ski resort's analysis was faulty. It observed that numerous cases have awarded both penalties and attorney's fees. The court stated that the question is not whether both fees and penalties can, as a matter of law, be awarded in the same action. Instead, it is whether penalties and fees are appropriate in a particular instance (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 544) . After considering those circumstances, the court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in awarding attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (54 Cal. App. 4th 499, 546) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

2-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.387

§ 60.387 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Reduction in Amount for Pursuit of Unsuccessful Claims

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Reduction in Amount for Pursuit of Unsuccessful Claims

[Caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THIS CASE, IT IS PROPER FOR THIS COURT TO AWARD ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THE AMOUNT OF _____ [specify dollar amount], TO _____ [specify party, e.g., plaintiff], AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., defendant], UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1021.5 WITHOUT REDUCING THE AWARD BASED ON _____ [e.g., plaintiff's] PURSUIT OF UNSUCCESSFUL CLAIMS.

Attorney's Fees Award Need Not Be Reduced Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 Because Successful Party Pursued Unsuccessful Claims. The court is not required to reduce an attorney's fees award under Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5 because the successful party pursued unsuccessful as well as successful claims (Hogar Dulce Hogar v. Community Development Com. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1368-1369, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in § 60.370, in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when the successful party to whom fees are being awarded has pursued both successful and unsuccessful claims. Counsel may choose to use this form in a reply brief to respond to an opposing party's contention that the fee award should be reduced based on the pursuit of both successful and unsuccessful claims.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Reduction in Amount for Pursuit of Unsuccessful Claims

The facts and proceedings in Hogar Dulce Hogar v. Community Development Com. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250 , are set forth in § 60.387. In that case, after the trial court awarded the plaintiff attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, defendant on appeal argued the trial court erred in not reducing the award to account for the fact that plaintiff pursued a number of claims which were not successful and its reimbursement claim was only partially successful. Defendant argued the trial court should have applied a negative multiplier to the lodestar amount and, in any event, should have excluded hours spent on unsuccessful matters (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358).

The court of appeal found no abuse of discretion. The court held that an attorney's fee award need not be reduced simply because the successful party failed to prevail on every contention raised in the lawsuit (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1369 ; see also Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 435, 103 S. Ct. 1933, 76 L. Ed. 2d 40). The court found that only when a successful party achieved limited success, or failed with respect to distinct and unrelated claims, should the court reduce the lodestar (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1369 ; see also Sokolow v. County of San Mateo (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 231, 250, 261 Cal. Rptr. 520). When a lawsuit consists of related claims, a plaintiff who has won substantial relief should not have the attorney's fee reduced simply because the trial court did not adopt each contention raised (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1369 ; see also Hensley v. Eckerhart (1983) 461 U.S. 424, 440). In Hogar, given the long-term impact of defendant's amendment to a tax-sharing agreement with the county and the significant amount of reimbursement plaintiff obtained, the trial court could reasonably have found plaintiff had achieved excellent results. Moreover, because all of plaintiff's claims were related to its contention the Housing Fund had not been properly reimbursed, it had standing to assert those claims, and the statute of limitations had not expired, the trial court was not required to segregate the claims between those upon which plaintiff was successful and those on which defendant prevailed. Finally, given the overall results achieved and the relationship between the claims asserted, the trial court was not required to reduce the lodestar amount (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1369) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.388

§ 60.388 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees

[For caption, see § 60.370, with which this form should be combined.]

PRIVATE PARTIES WHO SUE WITH PUBLIC ENTITIES AND PREVAIL ARE ENTITLED TO ATTORNEY'S FEES UNDER THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY WHEN THEY PREVAIL AND MEET THE OTHER CRITERIA.

Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees. When two parties achieve the same relief acting essentially as private attorneys general, even though one of the parties is a public entity, there is no rational basis to conclude that the public entity is entitled to be rewarded for its success under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, but the private party is not (State Water Resources Control Bd. Cases (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 304, 311-318, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 842).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the form set out in § 60.370 in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, when private parties and public entities sue together and prevail. Counsel may choose to use this form in a reply brief to respond to an opposing party's contention that there was no necessity for the private party to sue, given the public entities' action.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Private Party Suing With Public Entities Is Also Entitled to Fees

In State Water Resources Control Bd. Cases (2008) 161 Cal. App. 4th 304, 73 Cal. Rptr. 3d 842 , in an earlier opinion, the Court of Appeal decided eight appeals and three cross-appeals in seven coordinated cases that arose out of an omnibus water rights proceeding before the State Water Resources Control Board. One of the seven coordinated cases was a mandamus proceeding brought by five nonprofit organizations. Another one was a mandamus proceeding brought by six public agencies. Ultimately, the court determined the nonprofit organizations and the public agencies were entitled to essentially the same mandamus relief. On remand, after the trial court entered judgment in favor of the nonprofit organizations in compliance with the appellate court's directive, they sought attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine embodied in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court denied their motion, concluding they had not shown that the necessity of private enforcement made a fee award appropriate based on the fact that the relief they obtained directed the Board to do nothing more than provide the relief the public agencies had already obtained (161 Cal. App. 4th 304, 305-306) .

The Court of Appeal reversed, concluding that the trial court erred in denying the nonprofit organizations' motion for attorney's fees under § 1021.5. That the success they achieved was the same success the public agencies parties achieved did not justify a denial of a fee award under the private attorney general theory, especially since the trial court granted the motion by two of the public agencies for fees under § 1021.5. The public agencies received an award of attorney's fees under § 1021.5 for their efforts in the coordinated cases. There was no public attorney general available to pursue litigation against the defendant because the Attorney General represented the defendant. Thus, it fell to other public and private parties to pursue the litigation, with the prospect of obtaining fees under § 1021.5 in the event they succeeded. The services of the public agencies could not be deemed unnecessary because the success they achieved was largely mirrored by the success achieved by the nonprofit organizations, and likewise the services of the nonprofit organizations could not be deemed unnecessary because the success they achieved was mirrored by that of the public agencies. To require the nonprofit organizations to make the necessity showing would have effectively elevated the public agencies to the role of a public attorney general, whose job it is to litigate the important public issues at stake, while relegating the nonprofit organizations to the subordinate role of private attorneys general, who were required to show that their services, which supplemented those of the public attorney general, were necessary and valuable to the ultimate outcome of the case. There was no rational basis for doing so, however, when the public agencies were rewarded for their efforts under § 1021.5 and therefore clearly were not acting like a true public attorney general, who is not entitled to fees under § 1021.5 because it is his or her job to pursue litigation in the general interest of the state's population. It also did not matter that the nonprofit organizations achieved their success after the public agencies had already obtained relief from the trial court (161 Cal. App. 4th 304, 310-317) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.389

§ 60.389 Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Need Not Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Need Not Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

IT IS PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, EVEN IF THAT PARTY DID NOT SEEK TO ENFORCE THE RIGHT WITHOUT LITIGATION.

Party Need Not Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation. Attorney's fees under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 may be awarded even if the plaintiff seeking such fees had not reasonably endeavored to enforce the important right affecting the public interest without litigation and its attendant expense (Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 251-261, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memoradum set out in § 60.370 in support of a motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Counsel may choose to use this form in a reply brief to respond to an opposing party's contention that a party seeking fees must have attempted to enforce the right without litigation.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 251-261, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 , is discussed in greater length in § 60.403. In brief, a taxpayer sued the state for waste, alleging that the state had failed to collect and disburse payments due from employers engaged in joint ventures with prison facilities. The plaintiff argued that the state permitted employers to pay less than comparable wages to prison inmates. The trial ended when the parties agreed to a stipulated injunction. The plaintiff moved for attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, which the trial court granted. Soon thereafter, the California Supreme Court decided Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 560, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 , holding that, to recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a plaintiff in a catalyst case must have engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle its dispute with the defendant prior to litigation.

As a result of Graham, the defendant argued that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover attorney's fees because, among other reasons, the taxpayer had not engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle before resorting to litigation. The court of appeal affirmed the award of attorney's fees.

On appeal to the California Supreme Court, the Court first looked at the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. It held that the statute's language provides the court may award attorney's fees if, among other things, "the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement, or of enforcement by one public entity against another public entity, are such as to make the award appropriate." The Court held that this language did not expressly require that a plaintiff have attempted to settle the dispute (45 Cal. 4th 243, 251) . The Court further held that its holding in Graham was limited to catalyst cases (i.e., cases after which the defendant changes its behavior substantially because of, and in the manner sought by, the litigation) (45 Cal. 4th 243, 253) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.390-60.399

[Reserved]

§§ 60.390[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.400

§ 60.400 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Defendant.	)	FOR AWARD OF ATTORNEY'S FEES
	)
	)

_____

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY BECAUSE _____ [state grounds for denial of fees].

A. General Rule. [See § 60.320, Paragraph A.]

B. Factors Necessary for Right to Fees. A court may award attorney's fees to a successful party against one or more opposing parties on the basis of the private attorney general theory in any action which has resulted in the enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest only if: (1) a significant benefit, whether pecuniary or nonpecuniary, has been conferred on the general public or a large class of persons; (2) the necessity and financial burden of private endorsement, or of enforcement by one public entity against another public entity, are such as to make the award appropriate; and (3) such fees should not in the interest of justice be paid out of the recovery (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 934, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 ; Karuk Tribe of Northern California v. Cal. Regl Water Quality Control Board (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 330, 364-369, 108 Cal. Rtpr. 3d 40) .

C. Causal Connection Between Lawsuit and Relief Required. Attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5) are properly awarded when plaintiff s lawsuit is the catalyst motivating defendant to provide the primary relief that is sought; there must be a causal connection between the lawsuit and the relief obtained (Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 565-577, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 ; Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 ; Westside Community for Independent Living, Inc. v. Obledo (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 348, 353, 188 Cal. Rptr. 873, 657 P.2d 365).

D. Under Catalyst Theory, Plaintiff Must Show Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter Short of Litigation. A plaintiff seeking attorney's fees under a catalyst theory must first reasonably attempt to settle the matter short of litigation (Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 577, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 ; Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174).

[Insert other memoranda, as appropriate.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5]. It should be combined with other memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.401 et seq.

See also § 60.340[2][a], regarding the connection between Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and the significant benefit exception, and § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[c] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on the common fund exception are set out in § 60.401 et seq. If the motion being opposed presents other grounds for an award of attorney's fees, memoranda appropriate to opposing those grounds should be added [see § 60.300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), and § 60.440 et seq. (award based on contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717)]. For memoranda for opposing the motion on the ground that the award of attorney's fees sought is excessive, see § 60.550.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[d] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.370 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Rule

For discussion, see § 60.320[3][a].

[b] Factors Necessary for Right to Fees

Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 , is discussed in § 60.370[3][c].

In Karuk Tribe of Northern California v. Cal. Regl Water Quality Control Board (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 330, 364-369, 108 Cal. Rptr. 3d 40 , a number of plaintiffs filed a petition with the defendant water board to order the owner of a dam project to submit a Report of Waste Discharge for its discharges of pollutants in the Klamath River. The defendant denied the petition based on two US Supreme Court rulings that federal law preempted state law on the subject. The plaintiffs filed a mandate action in superior court seeking a ruling that federal law did not preempt state law, and that the defendant had power to act. The plaintiffs also sought attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Rather than granting or denying the petition, the trial court sent the matter back to the defendant to give a more complete response to the preemption issue in light of certain cases brought up in the mandate action. The defendant submitted a supplemental report reiterating that it was powerless to act. The trial court discharged the writ petition and granted the plaintiffs attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The trial court held that the litigation had resulted in an important public benefit, in that the defendant submitted a more complete, well-reasoned determination as to whether California or federal law should apply to the water project.

On appeal, the court concluded that the defendant did not have power to order the relief the plaintiffs sought. With respect to the attorney's fees, the court first held that to determine whether the plaintiffs were prevailing parties, it should look at the situation immediately before commencement of suit, and the situation today, and the role, if any, played by the litigation in effecting any changes between the two [183 Cal. App. 4th 330, 364] . The court held that the plaintiffs sought a determination by the trial court that the defendant was legally wrong as to the enforceability of state law and a peremptory writ of mandate compelling the defendant to enforce state law. The court held that the plaintiffs achieved neither objective. The only result was the limited remand of the issues to the defendant, which the plaintiffs had not even sought [183 Cal. App. 4th 330, 365] .

[c] Causal Connection Between Lawsuit and Relief Required

The facts and procedure in Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 are set forth in § 60.400[3][d]. After the trial court awarded plaintiffs attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and the Court of Appeal affirmed (34 Cal. 4th 553, 561-564) , the California Supreme Court first refused to follow the lead of the United States Supreme Court in Buckhannon Board & Care Home, Inc. v. West Virginia Dept. of Health and Human Resources (2001) 532 U.S. 598, 121 S. Ct. 1835, 149 L. Ed. 2d 855 , in which the United States

Supreme Court abolished the catalyst theory as a basis for attorney's fee awards under various federal statutes (34 Cal. 4th 553, 565-575) . The California Supreme Court, however, adopted limitations on the catalyst theory. The Court explicitly adopted a two-prong test for the determination of whether to award attorney's fees under § 1021.5 under a catalyst theory: The requirement that there be a causal connection between the lawsuit and the relief obtained, and a determination that defendant's conduct was required by law, i.e., that the lawsuit was not frivolous, unreasonable, or groundless (34 Cal. 4th 553, 575-577) . The Court then placed another limitation on recovery under the catalyst theory, that a plaintiff seeking attorney's fees must first reasonably attempt to settle the matter short of litigation (34 Cal. 4th 553, 577 ; see § 60.400[3][d]). Applying the catalyst rule with the limitations imposed in the opinion, the Court concluded that the trial court applied the first prong of the rule to conclude that the lawsuit was in fact a substantial causal factor in the defendant's change in policy with respect to its willingness to repurchase or replace the truck or to offer consumers substantial discounts. However, it was unclear whether the trial court considered the merits of the suit, and the trial court did not consider whether plaintiffs attempted to reasonably settle the matter short of litigation, requiring remand (34 Cal. 4th 553, 577) .

In Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 , the California Supreme Court granted the request of the federal Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals to answer two certified questions of law: (1) May attorney fees as provided for in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 be awarded when the plaintiff has been the "catalyst" in bringing about the relief sought by the litigation? and (2) If the catalyst theory is viable under California law, will that theory support an award of attorney's fees when the plaintiff "activates" the defendant to modify its behavior, or does California law require a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties, such as a judgment on the merits, a consent decree, or a judicially ordered settlement? The federal district court had awarded attorney's fees to the plaintiff in a class action on behalf of women officers and women civil employees of a city's police department who alleged they were subjected to discrimination on the basis of sex and/or race. After the case was filed, the parties entered into settlement discussions leading to a consent decree that later was revoked by the district court. Thereafter, plaintiffs began new settlement discussions with the newly appointed police chief, which did not result in a contractual or court-ordered agreement. Instead, the police department voluntarily instituted several changes directed toward antidiscrimination. The district court noted that the changes were very similar to the original consent decree and on the joint motion of the parties, dismissed the litigation. The court then granted the plaintiffs attorney fees under both § 1021.5 and the FEHA (34 Cal. 4th 604, 607-608) . The California Supreme Court, based on its holding in Graham v. DaimlerChrysler, answered the certified questions as follows: California law continues to recognize the catalyst theory and does not require a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties as a prerequisite for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and that in order to obtain attorney fees without a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties, a plaintiff must establish that (1) the lawsuit was a catalyst motivating the defendants to provide the primary relief sought; (2) the lawsuit had merit and achieved its catalytic effect by threat of victory, not by dint of nuisance and threat of expense, as elaborated in Graham; and (3) the plaintiffs reasonably attempted to settle the litigation prior to filing the lawsuit (34 Cal. 4th 604, 608) . With regard to a public entity defendant, the Court reiterated its earlier holding in Westside Community for Independent Living, that attorney fees may not be obtained, generally speaking, by merely causing the acceleration of the issuance of government regulations or remedial measures, when the process of issuing those regulations or undertaking those measures was ongoing at the time the litigation was filed. When a government agency is given discretion as to the timing of performing some action, the fact that a lawsuit may accelerate that performance does not by itself establish eligibility for attorney fees (34 Cal. 4th 604, 608-609) .

In Westside Community for Independent Living, Inc. v. Obledo (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 348, 188 Cal. Rptr. 873, 657 P.2d 365 , plaintiffs filed a petition for writ of mandate asking the court to order defendant to issue final regulations implementing Gov. Code § 11135 (barring any program or activity funded by the state from unlawfully discriminating against any person on the basis of ethnic group, religion, age, sex, color, or physical or mental disability). Prior to filing of the lawsuit, defendant issued proposed regulations that plaintiff approved, giving authorization to proceed with the finalization and adoption. At the first scheduled hearing on the petition, defendant revealed that the procedures mandated by the Administrative Procedure Act were underway, and the trial court continued the hearing until January 30, 1980. Prior to the hearing scheduled in January, defendants informed the court that the regulations had been released to the public and would be issued in early June. The court rescheduled the hearing for June 2, 1980. On February 7, 1980, plaintiffs filed a notice of motion for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and the trial court ordered defendant to pay attorney fees of $10,870. Prior to the June 2 hearing, defendant informed the court that the regulations would be issued by the end of June, and the court issued an alternative writ of mandate ordering defendant to issue regulations by June 30, 1980. Defendant issued the regulations on June 24, 1980. Plaintiffs then requested supplemental attorney fees, which the trial court awarded. Defendant appealed from this and the previous award of attorney fees. The Supreme Court reversed.

On appeal, defendant contended that there was no evidence in the record to support the trial court's conclusion that plaintiffs were a "successful party" in the action, or that the lawsuit "resulted in" the enforcement of a right. The Court held that a plaintiff would be considered a "successful party" when an important right was vindicated by activating defendants to modify their behavior. The Court further held that an award of attorney fees would be appropriate when plaintiffs' lawsuit was a catalyst motivating defendant to provide the primary relief sought, but only when there was a causal connection between the lawsuit and the relief obtained. The Court stated that no award was required if the court determined that plaintiffs' suit was completely superfluous in achieving the improvements undertaken by defendants on plaintiffs' behalf. In this case, the Court found that plaintiffs' lawsuit was completely superfluous with no causal connection to defendant's action, the issuance of final regulations implementing Gov. Code § 11139.5 (33 Cal. 3d 348, 353) .

[d] Under Catalyst Theory, Plaintiff Must Show Reasonable Attempt to Settle Matter Short of Litigation

In Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 , defendant car-manufacturer offered to repurchase a truck that had been marketed with false statements about its towing capacity after a lawsuit plaintiffs filed against defendant seeking the repurchase remedy, but before any kind of court judgment was rendered. The trial court awarded plaintiffs attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, finding after its review of declarations and documentary evidence presented that defendant's position that the lawsuit was not a catalyst was largely a transparent fabrication. The Court of Appeal affirmed (34 Cal. 4th 553, 561-564) .

The California Supreme Court remanded for reconsideration of the attorney fees award, based on limitations it imposed on the catalyst theory. After refusing to abolish the catalyst theory as a basis for attorney fee awards under § 1021.5, and after adopting a two-prong test for the determination of whether to award attorney fees under § 1021.5 under a catalyst theory, the Court placed another limitation on recovery under the catalyst theory, that a plaintiff seeking attorney fees must first reasonably attempt to settle the matter short of litigation (34 Cal. 4th 553, 577) . Applying the catalyst rule with the new limitations imposed in the opinion, the Court concluded that the trial court properly applied the first two prongs of the rule to conclude that the lawsuit was in fact a substantial causal factor in the defendant's change in policy, but it was unclear whether the trial court considered the merits of the suit, and the trial court did not consider whether plaintiffs reasonably attempted to settle the matter short of litigation, requiring remand for a determination of whether plaintiffs were eligible for attorney fees under the catalyst rule (34 Cal. 4th 553, 577) .

The facts and procedure in Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 are discussed in § 60.400[3][c]. In Tipton-Whittingham, the California Supreme Court, in response to certified questions of law from the federal Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, reiterated its holding in Graham that as part of its consideration of whether to award attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the trial court must consider whether plaintiffs reasonably attempted to settle the matter short of litigation (34 Cal. 4th 604, 608) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Factors Necessary for Right to Fees

In Fresno Fire Fighters v. Jernagan (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 403, 222 Cal. Rptr. 886 , a firefighters association had been refused interest on a $25,000 undertaking deposited with the county in connection with an action for injunction brought by the association. It filed a class action on behalf of all public and private cash depositers in both civil and criminal court proceedings to compel the county treasurer to remit all interest earned on the deposits. The trial court ruled that the owners of all cash court deposits are entitled to the interest earned on the money and awarded the association attorney's fees under the private attorney general doctrine. On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's ruling concerning cash deposits in civil actions, reversed the ruling concerning cash bail deposits in criminal actions, and, because of the partial reversal, remanded the case for reconsideration of the question of entitlement to attorney's fees. The court noted that "[w]hether the financial burden of private enforcement makes an award appropriate depends on whether the cost of plaintiffs' victory transcends their personal interest, i.e., whether the litigation expenses would place a disproportionate burden on the plaintiffs" (177 Cal. App. 3d 403, 413) . The court directed the trial court to determine whether the association sustained a financial burden out of proportion to its personal stake in the litigation by ascertaining the amount of plaintiffs' attorney's fees in recovering the interest on its $25,000 deposit, and then balancing the fee against the plaintiffs' personal stake in the litigation (177 Cal. App. 3d 403, 414) .

In Miller v. California Com. on Status of Women (1985) 176 Cal. App. 3d 454, 222 Cal. Rptr. 225 , plaintiff sought an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 after having successfully obtained a trial court ruling that the California Commission on the Status of Women (Commission) acted without express authority in expending public funds for the promotion of the Equal Rights Amendment to the United States Constitution. Following this ruling, the trial court awarded the plaintiff attorney's fees. Subsequently, the Legislature enacted Gov. Code § 8246, expressly authorizing the Commission to state its views on issues developed during the performance of its duties and responsibilities. Thereafter, the court of appeal reversed, based on the Legislature's action. On remand, the trial court denied the plaintiff attorney's fees. The court of appeal upheld the ruling, noting that the Legislature's action in reversing the trial court's ruling negated the plaintiff 's success in effecting a fundamental constitutional or statutory policy (176 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457-459) .

In Beach Colony II Limited v. California Coastal Com. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 106, 212 Cal. Rptr. 485 , plaintiff was a real estate developer who successfully challenged the Coastal Commission's requirement that land owners transfer a portion of property to the public in exchange for the right to restore a parcel to its original contours after avulsion had swept away a portion of the land. Evidence showed that plaintiff 's financial stake in the outcome was substantial. On appeal from an award of attorney's fees to the developer under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the court of appeal reversed. The court acknowledged that the litigation established the rights of all land owners similarly situated, but held that the plaintiff had failed to meet the burden of establishing that its litigation costs transcended its personal interest, and pointed out that only plaintiff reaped substantial, present economic benefit as a result of the litigation (166 Cal. App. 3d 106, 113) . The court observed that the private attorney general theory was meant to encourage suits that do not involve any individual's financial interests to the extent necessary to encourage private litigation to enforce a right of significant societal importance, and that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 was not designed as a method for rewarding litigants motivated by their own pecuniary interests who only coincidentally protect the public interest (166 Cal. App. 3d 106, 114) .

In Schwartz v. City of Rosemead (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 547, 202 Cal. Rptr. 400 , petitioner successfully obtained a writ of mandate to compel respondent city to conduct an environmental assessment of a construction project adjacent to petitioner's residence. However, the trial court denied petitioner's request for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and petitioner appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court first noted that attorney's fees may be awarded under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 if three requirements are satisfied: (1) the action resulted in enforcement of an important right affecting the public interest; (2) a significant benefit has been conferred on the public or a large class of persons; and (3) the necessity and financial burden of private enforcement so as to make the award appropriate. The court held that in the present case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying attorney's fees, because petitioner had shown satisfaction of only the first two requirements but not the third. Specifically, petitioner brought the action purely to protect his private property interest; his expenses were not disproportionate to protect that interest, and the resulting advancement of public rights and public benefits were incidental only. The court also upheld the denial on the ground that petitioner had failed to comply with certain service requirements (155 Cal. App. 3d 547, 555-561) .

[b] Causal Connection Between Lawsuit and Relief Required

Marine Forests Society v. Cal. Coastal Commission (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 867, 74 Cal. Rptr. 3d 32 , was the third appeal stemming from litigation between plaintiff, a nonprofit corporation whose purpose is the development of experimental research programs for the creation of marine forests to replace lost marine habitat, and defendant, the state coastal zone planning and management agency with primary responsibility for implementing the provisions of the California Coastal Act of 1976. In the first appeal, Court of Appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment enjoining defendant from granting, denying, or conditioning permits, or from issuing cease and desist orders regarding an experimental marine forest planted by plaintiff on a sandy plain and made of various materials, including used tires, plastic jugs, and concrete blocks. In its suit, among other things, plaintiff claimed that because members of defendant served two-year terms at the pleasure of their appointing authority, defendant should be enjoined from issuing cease and desist orders or from granting or denying permits for coastal development because the scheme for appointment of its voting members gave the legislative branch control over defendant, thereby impermissibly interfering with defendant's executive branch responsibility to execute the laws. The trial court ruled in favor of plaintiff, but stayed its decision pending defendant's appeal. The Court of Appeal affirmed, concluding that defendant's interpretation and implementation of the California Coastal Act was an executive function and the appointment structure giving the state Senate Committee on Rules and the Speaker of the Assembly the power to appoint the majority of defendant's voting members and to remove them at will contravened the separation of powers clause of California's Constitution. Defendant then appealed from the trial court's order awarding § 1021.5 attorney's fees to plaintiff. Defendant argued that plaintiff failed to establish that the financial burden of litigation was outweighed by its personal stake in the matter, because plaintiff had a strong personal and pecuniary motive to pursue the requested relief since its primary objective was to prevent defendant from ordering it to remove its artificial reef, which would have been very costly, or to pay penalties of up to $6,000 a day if it failed to remove the artificial reef. The Court of Appeal reversed the fee award on the ground that, although the trial court's decision resolved a constitutional issue involving the separation of powers doctrine, the public's interest in the outcome was incidental to plaintiff's primary objective of preventing defendant from ordering it to remove its artificial reef or to pay monetary penalties for its failure to do so. The California Supreme Court granted defendant's petition for review concerning the separation of powers issue. And in response to the first appellate decision, the Legislature amended Pub. Res. Code § 30312 to eliminate the provision concerning the ability of the Speaker of the Assembly and the Senate Committee on Rules to remove their appointees to defendant at will. The Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeal's affirming of the trial court's granting of injunctive relief, holding that injunctive relief was not warranted because the current statutory provisions governing the composition of defendant did not violate the separation of powers clause of the California Constitution. The court concluded that even if the statutory scheme had violated the separation of powers clause, defendant's actions prior to the statutory amendment were valid because of the de facto officer doctrine. Hence, the circumstance that the statutory provisions governing the appointment and tenure of the members of defendant who acted on a particular matter might have been vulnerable to constitutional challenge provided no independent basis for overturning the action taken by defendant. After the remittitur was filed in the trial court, plaintiff renewed its motion for attorney's fees in the trial court, asserting that even though it did not obtain a favorable judgment, it was entitled to attorney's fees under a catalyst theory of recovery because its action triggered a legislative change in the manner of appointment of defendant's members, bestowing a significant benefit upon the public. To fill the evidentiary void left in the earlier proceedings as to whether the financial burden of bringing the litigation was out of proportion to its individual stake in the matter, plaintiff provided estimates indicating that it would cost $8,000 to have volunteers remove the artificial reef over a period of approximately six months, or cost $26,300 to have a contractor remove the reef over four days, whereas plaintiff had incurred $500,000 in attorney fees in pursuing the litigation, demonstrating that the financial burden of private enforcement outweighed its personal gain. Defendant opposed the motion, contending that the doctrine of law of the case precluded an award and asserting that plaintiff was not entitled to fees because it was not the successful party and had not achieved its litigation objectives. Ruling the doctrine of law of the case barred only an award of trial attorney's fees, not appellate attorney's fees, the trial court found the lawsuit triggered, and was a catalyst for, the amendment of a statute that violated the California Constitution, which showed plaintiff had achieved a significant goal of its litigation even if it did not obtain a favorable judgment. The court further found that the resulting legislative amendment also satisfied the first and second requirements of § 1021.5, the vindication of an important right affecting the public interest, which conferred a significant benefit on the general public. In addition, the court found that the financial burden of litigation was out of proportion to plaintiff's individual stake in the matter because the cost of removing the reef was outweighed by the cost of litigation (160 Cal. App. 4th 867, 871-875) . The Court of Appeal reversed, holding that plaintiff was not a successful party under the catalyst theory for attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Plaintiff did not ultimately achieve judicially sanctioned relief because the California Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeal decision that affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of plaintiff. Further, in catalyst cases, the defendant must have provided the plaintiff with the primary relief sought. The allegations of plaintiff's complaint disclosed that its primary goal was to save its reef, not to have Pub. Res. Code § 30312 declared unconstitutional or to change the composition of defendant. Plaintiff did not achieve its objective. Defendant continued to issue cease and desist orders, and its preamendment orders, including the order for plaintiff to either remove its reef or face substantial penalties, was not invalidated. Defendant did not change its behavior substantially because of, and in the manner sought by, the litigation. The Legislature's amendment of § 30312 to alter the appointment structure for defendant's members was not a change in the defendant's behavior (160 Cal. App. 4th 867, 875-880) .

In Hogar Dulce Hogar v. Community Development Com. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 69 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250 , plaintiff sued under the Community Redevelopment Law (Health & Saf. Code § 33000 et seq.), challenging the manner in which defendant calculated its required payments to the Low and Moderate Income Housing Fund. The trial court found that defendant miscalculated its payments and ordered that defendant reimburse the amounts which it should have paid into the Fund from the time the fund was established in 1985 until the date of the judgment. On appeal, the appellate court reversed the trial court's judgment in part, finding that under the applicable statute of limitations, the trial court could only order reimbursement of the Housing Fund for a period commencing three years before the complaint was filed. On remand the parties entered into a stipulation with respect to costs and plaintiff's expected motion for attorney's fees. The stipulation stated the time for making a motion for attorney's fees and serving a memorandum of costs would be extended to the time permitted for filing a memorandum of costs following entry of judgment on remand. On remand also, defendant argued it should not be ordered to reimburse the Housing Fund for any period before the date the complaint was filed. The trial court rejected this defense, and defendant did not challenge the judgment. Plaintiff failed to file its motion for attorney's fees within the time limit set forth in the stipulation, and on that basis the trial court denied the initial motion for attorney's fees. However, plaintiff applied for relief from its failure to timely file its motion, which the trial court granted. The trial court then heard the motion on the merits, and found that, although plaintiff did not achieve all of its goals, it was successful in attaining its primary goals. In particular, the court found that by virtue of its litigation, plaintiff not only obtained the judgment which required defendant to transfer $1.35 million to the Housing Fund, it caused defendant to reach an agreement with the county under which, in future years, 20 percent of the agency's gross taxes, plus interest, would be paid into the Housing Fund. Based on its determination that plaintiff had been successful, the trial court found plaintiff was entitled to a total of $643,056.50 in attorney's fees, representing attorney time spent after plaintiff filed its complaint. The trial court did not make any award for fees incurred before the complaint was filed or any additional award based on the difficulty or complexity of the case (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1362-1363) . In its principal argument on appeal defendant contended plaintiff was not a successful party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, because it had agreed to most of the relief plaintiff sought when defendant amended its agreement with the county so that in future years the Housing Fund would receive 20 percent of the agency's gross tax receipts, and that plaintiff's complaint, which was not filed until after the agency had made its agreement with the county, did not cause it to alter its allocation to the Housing Fund (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1364). The Court of Appeal affirmed the award of attorney's fees. The court held that the record fully supported the trial court's conclusion the litigation was the catalyst for defendant's agreement with the county and that plaintiff was also successful in obtaining a reimbursement to the Housing Fund. Although this was only a portion of the $5.6 million reimbursement plaintiff sought, it was a substantial amount that would not have been recovered in the absence of the litigation (157 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1365-1368) .

In Godinez v. Schwarzenegger (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 73, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 270 , a group of public schoolchildren, and their parents and community groups, sued a variety of defendants, challenging regulations and practices in distributing school bond monies for new construction on a first-come-first-served basis, rather than based on a school district's need or priority. The litigation settled after the state board of education adopted a time-regulated priority point regulation, enabling the plaintiffs' school district to apply for and share in remaining bond funds. The trial court awarded the plaintiffs attorney's fees, finding that the litigation was a catalyst leading the defendants to modify their regulation even though the litigation did not result in judicial relief. However, the trial court ruled on the attorney fee motion before the California Supreme Court issued its opinions in Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 and Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174 , which imposed relevant new limitations on the catalyst theory and which applied retroactively. Although substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that the litigation was a catalyst to the defendants' changed behavior, remand was required to determine whether the plaintiffs engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle the dispute prior to litigation (132 Cal. App. 4th 73, 89-95) .

In Crawford v. Board of Education (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1397, 246 Cal. Rptr. 806 , five separate intervenors in a school desegregation case sought an award of fees and costs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 for their participation in the remedial phase of the case. The trial court denied the award and four of the intervenors appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that the record supported the trial court's finding that the intervenors failed to demonstrate a causal relationship between their participation in the remedial phase of the litigation and its practical result (200 Cal. App. 3d 1397, 1408) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.401

§ 60.401 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Apportionment of Fees

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Apportionment of Fees

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY IN TOTAL, BECAUSE PLACING AT LEAST A PARTIAL PORTION OF THE FEE BURN ON THAT PARTY IS PROPER UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

Apportionment of Fees. Although Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not specifically address the question of the propriety of a partial award of attorney's fees, if the moving party's potential financial gain warrants placing on them a portion of the attorney fee burden, the broad language of Section 1021.5 and the theory underlying the private attorney general concept permit the court to shift only an appropriate portion of the fees to the losing party or parties (Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 942, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when at least part of the fee should be borne by the moving party.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Apportionment of Fees

The Court in Woodland Hills Residents Ass'n v. City Council of Los Angeles (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200 (discussed in § 60.370[3][c]), in remanding the case to the trial court so that it might decide the motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, stated that it believed that if the trial court concluded that plaintiffs' potential financial gain was such as to warrant placing on them a portion of the attorney fee burden, the broad language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and the theory underlying the private attorney general concept would permit the court to shift only an appropriate portion of the fees to the losing parties. The Court gave an example of a finding by the trial court that plaintiffs' potential benefit was such that individuals in their position could reasonably have been expected to incur attorney's fee if the amount of the fee bore a more reasonable relation to such benefit. In such a case, the trial court, in awarding fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, may deduct from the total fee an amount reflecting the fee that plaintiffs could reasonably have been expected to bear themselves (23 Cal. 3d 917, 942) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.402

§ 60.402 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]
_____ [name]
ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THIS IS A CRIMINAL ACTION.

Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions. Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not provide a basis for awarding attorney's fees incurred by a defendant in successfully defending a criminal action (Fogelson v. Municipal Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 858, 861, 175 Cal. Rptr. 64).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the action is criminal in nature.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Private Attorney General Exception Not Applicable to Criminal Actions

In Fogelson v. Municipal Court (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 858, 175 Cal. Rptr. 64 , petitioner was convicted in municipal court of violating certain provisions of a municipal code relating to solicitation on city property. The conviction was reversed by the appellate department of the superior court, but another division of the court of appeal transferred the case to itself and affirmed the conviction. The Supreme Court granted a hearing and reversed, holding that the municipal code provision on which the conviction was based was invalid [see People v. Fogelson (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 158, 161-167, 145 Cal. Rptr. 542, 577 P.2d 677] . Thereafter, the criminal proceeding was dismissed, and petitioner filed a motion for attorney's fees and memorandum of costs with the municipal court. The municipal court denied the motion and the appellate department affirmed. Petitioner then petitioned the superior court for a writ of mandate to compel the municipal court to determine whether petitioner was entitled to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (attorney's fees awarded where action results in enforcement of important right affecting public interest). The superior court denied the relief on procedural grounds, ruling that petitioner had an adequate alternative remedy at law. Petitioner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that although it had serious doubts concerning the procedural grounds on which the superior court denied relief, it was nevertheless convinced that the Legislature never intended Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to apply to attorney's fees incurred in the defense of a criminal prosecution. The court observed that none of the legislative materials indicated that the section might be applied to criminal cases and that no criminal cases were to be found among those which apparently triggered the legislation (120 Cal. App. 3d 858, 861) . Moreover, the court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is contained in Title 14 of Part 2 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which is entitled "of Civil Actions." The court stated that nothing could be clearer than that chapter 6 of that title, in which Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 appears, addresses only the question of costs and attorney's fees in civil actions. In this context, the court held, it would be a highly imaginative exercise of judicial legislation to apply Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to criminal cases (120 Cal. App. 3d 858, 862) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.403

§ 60.403 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES IN THIS CASE TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY DID NOT SEEK TO ENFORCE THE RIGHT WITHOUT LITIGATION.

Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation. Attorney's fees under Section 1021.5 of the Code of Civil Procedure will not be awarded unless the plaintiff seeking such fees in a "catalyst theory" case had reasonably endeavored to enforce the important right affecting the public interest without litigation and its attendant expense (Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 251-261, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 ; Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 560, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the general memorandum set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the moving party in a "catalyst theory" case did not seek to enforce the right without litigation.

In a change from preexisting law, in 2008 the California Supreme Court held that a plaintiff need not first attempt to settle a matter short of litigation to recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 [Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 251-261, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049] . The Court held that an attempt to settle is required only in "catalyst theory" cases [Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 251-261, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 , citing Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 560, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140] .

Although the Court did not expressly define "catalyst theory case" in Graham, a definition is implicit. The Court described the "catalyst theory" as permitting attorney's fees to be awarded even when litigation does not result in a judicial resolution if the defendant changes its behavior substantially because of, and in the manner sought by, the litigation [Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 560, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140] . Similarly, in Tipton-Whittingham, the Court held that Graham's limitations on the catalyst theory set out the factual prerequisites that a plaintiff must establish to obtain attorney's fees without a judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties [Tipton-Whittingham v. City of Los Angeles (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 604, 608, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 371, 101 P.3d 174] . A plaintiff who has not succeeded in obtaining a "judicial resolution" or a "judicially recognized change in the legal relationship between the parties" must obtain attorney's fees under the catalyst theory or not at all [Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 259-260, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 ; see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees, § 174.56[8] (Matthew Bender)].

To the extent Grimsley v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 960, 966, 213 Cal. Rptr. 108 might be read to interpret Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 differently, the Court held that the decision is incorrect [Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 256-257, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049] .

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees in "Catalyst Theory" Case Must Have Attempted to Enforce Right Without Litigation

In Vasquez v. California (2008) 45 Cal. 4th 243, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 466, 195 P.3d 1049 , Vasquez, a taxpayer alleging standing due to waste of State property, sued, claiming that the State had failed to collect and disburse payments due from prison joint-venture employers. According to the plaintiff, the State had permitted employers to pay less than comparable wages to prison inmates in violation of Proposition 139, a prison inmate labor initiative. Trial of the taxpayer's claim ended when the parties agreed to a stipulated injunction. The plaintiff afterward moved for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, which the trial court awarded, entering judgment on the stipulation and award of fees (45 Cal. 4th 243, 248-249) .

Soon after entry of the California Supreme Court's decision in Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. ((2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140), the State appealed the award of attorney's fees under Section 1021.5 because the plaintiff had not engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle before resorting to litigation. The Court of Appeal affirmed, stating that Graham required a reasonable attempt to settle the action only in catalyst cases. The State petitioned for review of the judgment to the extent it awarded attorney's fees, and the California Supreme Court granted review (45 Cal. 4th 243, 249) .

The California Supreme Court concluded that the taxpayer was not required first to attempt to settle the matter short of litigation to recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. Although the State argued that the Court should have treated Vasquez as a catalyst theory case and thus hold that the prelitigation settlement demand requirement applied, this argument lacked merit. The case was not a catalyst case because the taxpayer successfully obtained a stipulated injunction that was entered as a judgment and thus brought about a judicially recognized change in the parties' legal relationship. Because this was not a catalyst case, limitations on the catalyst theory adopted to discourage meritless suits motivated by the hope of fees did not apply (45 Cal. 4th 243, 249) .

In Graham v. DaimlerChrysler Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 553, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 331, 101 P.3d 140 , a vehicle manufacturer offered to repurchase a truck that had been marketed with false statements about its towing capacity. This offer came after a class action suit had been filed against the manufacturer, seeking among others this repurchase remedy, but before any court judgment was rendered. The trial court awarded attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to encourage consumers to bring meritorious claims of this type, and applied a lodestar fee amount and a multiplier (34 Cal. 4th 553, 564) .

The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that to be eligible for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a plaintiff not only had to be a catalyst to the defendant's changed behavior, but the lawsuit had to have some merit, and the plaintiff had to have engaged in a reasonable attempt to settle its dispute with the defendant before litigation. The trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding the substantial benefit and public interest prongs of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 were met. The problem addressed by the lawsuit implicated an issue of public safety, and the lawsuit benefited consumers by acting as a deterrent, to discourage lax responses to known safety hazards (34 Cal. 4th 553, 565) .

The California Supreme Court found that under the first prong of the catalyst theory, the suit was a substantial causal factor in the defendant's decision to change its policies as to marketing and consumer relations. But because it was unclear whether the trial court considered the merits of the suit and the trial court did not consider whether plaintiffs attempted to reasonably settle the matter short of litigation (the second prong of the catalyst theory), the Court reversed the judgment of the Court of Appeal affirming the award of attorney's fees and remanded the cause for further proceedings (34 Cal. 4th 553, 565) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.404

§ 60.404 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THE LITIGATION WAS INSTITUTED SOLELY TO PROMOTE THAT PARTY'S ECONOMIC INTERESTS AND THE PUBLIC BENEFIT WAS MERELY FORTUITOUS.

A. No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous. An award of attorney's fees under Code of Civil Procedure section 1021.5 is not warranted when the plaintiff 's litigation was instituted solely to promote plaintiff 's economic interests and the public benefit conferred by the litigation was merely fortuitous (see Leiserson v. City of San Diego (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 725, 738, 249 Cal. Rptr. 28).

B. Measure of Personal Stake. The proper measure of the plaintiff 's personal stake in the outcome is not the amount the jury actually awarded measured against the actual attorney's fees incurred. Rather, the objective of the private attorney general doctrine is to provide incentive for prosecuting a lawsuit that enforces an important public right and confers a significant benefit, despite the fact that the plaintiff 's own financial stake in the outcome would not be itself constitute an adequate incentive to litigate (Satrap v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-80, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the litigation was instituted solely to benefit the moving party's economic interests and the public benefit was merely fortuitous.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

The plaintiff in Leiserson v. City of San Diego (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 725, 249 Cal. Rptr. 28 , a news cameraman who had been arrested while photographing the site of a jetliner crash, brought a tort action against the City of San Diego and other defendants based on injuries allegedly arising from the arrest. The trial court found for defendants and plaintiff appealed. Although the appellate court affirmed in favor of the defendants, it set out in its published opinion a clarification of the rights of newsgatherers at disaster sites. Plaintiff contended that because of this judicial clarification of rights, he was a "successful party" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the private attorney general statute. The trial court disagreed, and denied plaintiff 's motion for fees.

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that, notwithstanding any public benefit potentially derived from the published opinion, the precise nature of the tort litigation plaintiff elected to pursue and plaintiff 's failure to prevail in any manner within the context of the litigation precluded an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The court stated that although the procedural device by which a plaintiff seeks to enforce an important right does not always determine entitlement to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the relief sought is probative of such entitlement. When only a litigant's personal economic interests are advanced by a lawsuit, fees may not be awarded because the litigation does not significantly benefit a large class of persons. In the instant case, noted the court, plaintiff confined his tort action prayer to civil damages for himself, never requesting a declaration of the access rights of the press at disaster cites; the plaintiff 's primary intent for pursuing the litigation was to advance his own personal economic interest. The court stated that, in light of the narrow focus of plaintiff 's tort pleadings, the published appellate opinion was simply fortuitous (202 Cal. App. 3d 725, 738) .

[b] Measure of Personal Stake

In Satrap v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 , plaintiff brought suit against defendant for wrongful termination in violation of public policy and retaliation in violation of Lab. Code § 1102.5 (the "whistleblower" statute), based on allegations that defendant interfered with and retaliated against plaintiff for disclosing violations of the law by defendant, and other causes of action. Several causes of action were voluntarily dismissed and nonsuit granted on others, but the case went to trial on the main issue and a jury verdict was rendered in plaintiff 's favor. Shortly before the verdict was rendered, the Utilities Commission ruled that defendant's operations were not violative of law but were prudent. Plaintiff sought an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and the motion was denied.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court did not err in finding that the plaintiff 's sole motivation for the lawsuit was his own personal stake in it and his personal financial gain, and that this was not so disproportionate to the burden of private enforcement that the lawsuit would not have been brought (42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 78) . The court rejected plaintiff 's contention that the proper measure of his personal stake in the outcome should be the amount the jury actually awarded measured against the actual attorney's fees incurred (42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 79-80) . Rather, the objective of the private attorney general doctrine is to provide incentive for prosecuting a lawsuit that enforces an important public right and confers a significant benefit, despite the fact that his or her own financial stake in the outcome would not by itself constitute an adequate incentive to litigate (42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 80) . Nor did the trial court err in not making findings concerning all the statutory criteria of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and then engage in a balancing test, because the court found that at least one of the statutory criteria was not met. It is unnecessary to make findings concerning the remaining once one criteria is found not to be met (42 Cal. App. 4th 72, 80-81) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Right to Fees When Litigation Primarily Intended to Advance Plaintiff 's Economic Interest and Conferral of Public Benefit Was Simply Fortuitous

In Christward Ministry v. County of San Diego (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 31, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 435 , a nonprofit corporation filed a petition for writ of mandate challenging the adequacy of an environmental impact report prepared by the county regarding landfill property adjacent to petitioner's land. Petitioner appealed certain portions of the judgment, including denial of attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The court of appeal affirmed, holding with respect to the attorney's fees, that any public benefit was not sufficiently significant to justify application of the statute (13 Cal. App. 4th 31, 49-50) .

In Planned Parenthood v. City of Santa Maria (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 685, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391 , a city approved a grant for the construction of a new health-care clinic on the condition that no abortions be performed there. The organization that applied for the grant brought an action seeking an order declaring that the grant condition was unconstitutional. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the organization but denied the organization's motion for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The appellate court affirmed. Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is not designed to reward litigants motivated by their own pecuniary interests who only coincidentally protect the public interest. In this case, the interests of the public were incidental to the organization's primary objective of obtaining grant money (16 Cal. App. 4th 685, 691) .

In Weeks v. Baker & McKenzie (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 510 , a former employee brought a sexual harassment action against a partner in a law firm and the law firm itself and the trial court awarded attorney's fees under the private attorney general statute. The court of appeal reversed. It held that attorney's fees were not available under the private attorney general statute because the action had the primary effect of vindicating the plaintiff's personal economic interest. Nonetheless, the Court of Appeal concluded fees were available under the Fair Employment and Housing Act (63 Cal. App. 4th 1128, 1169-1171) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.405

§ 60.405 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--First Amendment Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--First Amendment Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE _____ [THIS CASE ONLY MARGINALLY INVOLVED [A] FIRST AMENDMENT ISSUE[S] and/or THE FIRST AMENDMENT WAS RAISED ONLY AS A DEFENSE AND AN EQUIVOCAL RESULT WAS OBTAINED].

First Amendment* Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal. The Legislature did not intend to authorize an award of attorney fees in every case in which first amendment issues are only marginally involved, or when the moving party merely raises first amendment defenses and then obtains an equivocal result (Family Planning Specialists Medical Group, Inc. v. Powers (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1561, 1570, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the case only marginally involved a First Amendment issue and/or the First Amendment was raised only as a defense and an equivocal result was obtained.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Amendment Issue Is Only Marginal and Result Is Equivocal

In Family Planning Specialists Medical Group, Inc. v. Powers (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1561, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667 , a defendant in a defamation action moved for an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 on the ground he was a successful party within the meaning of that section, and that he had enforced an important right affecting the public interest. The motion was made after the plaintiffs voluntarily dismissed their complaint. The trial court denied the motion, and the defendant appealed arguing that the trial court abused its discretion by denying his request.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that although free speech rights are included among those recognized as important rights affecting the public interest, in defendant's case he failed to show that his defense of the libel action actually resulted in the enforcement of his or anyone else's free speech rights. Defendant, according to the court, was free to distribute nonlibelous leaflets and to stage peaceful protests (the court pointed out that defendant did not prevail on a motion to strike the complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the "anti-SLAPP suit" statute) (39 Cal. App. 4th 1561, 1568) . The court also concluded that the trial court was justified in finding that the defendant's success in that litigation was very narrow (39 Cal. App. 4th 1561, 1570) .

The court, citing the Supreme Court's comment that "not all lawsuits enforcing constitutional guarantees will warrant an award of fees" [see Woodland Hills Residents Assn., Inc. v. City Council (1979) 23 Cal. 3d 917, 933, 154 Cal. Rptr. 503, 593 P.2d 200] , reasoned that the Legislature did not intend to authorize an award of attorney fees in every case in which first amendment issues are only marginally involved, or when the moving party merely raises first amendment defenses and then obtains an equivocal result (39 Cal. App. 4th 1561, 1570) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.406

§ 60.406 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY IS A PUBLIC ENTITY.

Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party. A public entity is not entitled to attorney fees against a private party (Code of Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the moving party is a public entity.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b]

for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Entity Has No Right to Fees When Defendant Is Private Party

Under Code of Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, a public entity is not entitled to attorney fees against a private party.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.406A

§ 60.406A Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory-Attorney General Cannot Recover Fees When Acting on Behalf of State

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory-Attorney General Cannot Recover Fees When Acting on Behalf of State
[For caption, see § 60.400.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THE ATTORNEY GENERAL IS ACTING ON BEHALF OF THE STATE.

Attorney General Cannot Recover Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 When Acting on Behalf of State. The State itself, acting through the Attorney General, can never be awarded attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 (People ex rel. Brown v. Tehama County Bd. of Supervisors (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 422, 450-456, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in combination with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the moving party is the Attorney General in an action brought on behalf of the State of California.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney General Cannot Recover Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 When Acting on Behalf of State

In People ex rel. Brown v. Tehama County Bd. of Supervisors (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 422, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 558 , the People of the State of California, acting through the Attorney General, sued the Tehama County Board of Supervisors to obtain an injunction forcing them to apply the provisions of the Subdivision Map Act (Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.) to a lot line adjustment on property owned by another defendant. The trial court granted the People's motion for summary adjudication as to one cause of action and the county defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings as to another cause of action and later entered judgment consistent with its earlier rulings. The judgment required the county defendants to make findings required under the Williamson Act and Subdivision Map Act in regard to specified subdivisions and prohibited the private defendant from offering for sale any of lots until the Williamson Act and Subdivision Map Act were met. The People filed a motion for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, which the trial court granted (149 Cal. App. 4th 422, 427-430) .

After affirming the substantive judgment, the court of appeal reversed the attorney's fees award. The court held that applying the traditional financial burden criterion to public entity litigants would not always preclude a fee award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. However, it does when the public entity litigant is the state itself, acting through the Attorney General. Those cases are always self-serving, in that the People will always be pursuing their own interests through their chief attorney, whose very raison d'etre is to enforce the laws of the state and serve the public interests of the state's population as a whole. To reward the Attorney General with attorney's fees for pursuing litigation it is his or her duty to pursue would stand the private attorney general doctrine on its head (149 Cal. App. 4th 422, 450-456) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.407

§ 60.407 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY WAS NOT A SUCCESSFUL PARTY.

Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful. An award for attorney's fees under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 may only be made to a successful party (Urbaniak v. Newton (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1837, 1844, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the moving party was not a successful party.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees Must Be Successful

In Urbaniak v. Newton (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1837, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 333 , the plaintiff filed suit (represented by his estate after his death) alleging violation of his right to privacy against a doctor, an insurance company, and two attorneys for revealing his HIV-positive status. The trial court granted summary judgment to all defendants, but the judgment was reversed as to the doctor. On remand, the trial court awarded attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 against all defendants.

The appellate court reversed the award because the plaintiff was not a successful party entitled to an award under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The plaintiff was not entitled to fees as to the defendants other than the doctor because the plaintiff did not prevail against them and the action did not motivate a change in their behavior. As to the doctor, the court held that an award of fees was premature because, although the case need not be completely final prior to an award, success against the doctor was not secure. Reversal of the summary judgment merely put the parties in the position they would have been in if the trial court had originally denied the doctor's summary judgment motion (19 Cal. App. 4th 1837, 1842-1844) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.408

§ 60.408 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fees Sought Was Not Opposing Party

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fees Sought Was Not Opposing Party

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., REAL PARTY IN INTEREST]
_____ ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THE PARTY AGAINST WHOM FEES ARE SOUGHT WAS NOT AN OPPOSING PARTY WITHIN THE MEANING OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1021.5.

Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be "Opposing Party" With in Meaning of Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5. An award of attorney's fees under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 may be made only for against an opposing party (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1176-1184, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 788 ; McGuigan v. City of San Diego (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 624-629, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 554).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the general memoranda set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the party against whom fees are sought was not an opposing party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Opposing Party Within Meaning of Statute

In Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1169, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 788 , plaintiff successfully pursued litigation to invalidate state statutes as unconstitutional under Cal. Const., Art. I, section 31, which outlawed governmental preferential treatment by race, sex, and other categories. State agencies that were the respondents in the writ of mandate action for the most part opted not to defend the statutes, or to litigate only issues of standing and justiciability. Various amici curiae advocacy groups in favor of affirmative action opted defend the state programs and statutes on the merits. Those advocacy groups were redesignated from amici curiae to real parties in interest. The groups actively participated in the litigation, unsuccessfully seeking to remove the case to federal court, which was rejected because of the state defendants' lack of concurrence. The groups filed a motion to peremptorily challenge the trial judge, which ultimately was successful, sought discovery regarding the affirmative action policies and practices of the various state agencies named in the litigation, and filed a successful motion to compel discovery when the Governor was not forthcoming. After the litigation concluded, the trial court awarded plaintiff attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, to be paid by the state agencies and the advocacy groups as real parties in interest. The award against the advocacy groups as well as the state agencies was upheld by the Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal reviewed various Court of Appeal cases holding that real parties in interest actively participating in litigation may be assessed attorney's fees, even though they were not responsible for initiating or enforcing the policies that were the subject of the underlying litigation. The Court of Appeal focused on the trial court's finding that the advocacy groups participated in the litigation as full-fledged parties, distinguishing themselves from the typical amicus curiae (37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1172-1175) .

The California Supreme Court reversed the award against the advocacy groups on the ground that they were not "opposing parties" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. The Court held first that under the language of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, only an opposing party can be liable for attorney's fees. Because the term "opposing parties" is not defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, the Court assumed that the Legislature was referring to the conventional definition of that term, and found that the opposing party liable for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 is generally the defendant person or agency sued, which is responsible for initiating and maintaining actions or policies that are deemed harmful to the public interest and that gave rise to the litigation. By this standard, the advocacy groups clearly were not an opposing party, because they were responsible neither for enacting nor enforcing the statutes found to be unconstitutional in the underlying litigation (37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1176-1177) . Moreover, amici curiae traditionally have not been considered parties liable for attorney fees, and the advocacy groups initially appearing as amici curiae were groups generally interested in the protection of minority and civil rights (37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1177-1178) . Further, although they were designated as real parties in interest and actively litigated, attorney's fees could not be awarded against them as opposing parties because they did not have interest to be directly affected by the proceeding. Their policy interest in the case in maintaining affirmative action programs was no different in kind from that of the typical amicus curiae and no different in substance from like-minded members of the general public (37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1178-1182) . Finally, the groups' active litigation and participation in the litigation did not by itself convert them into a real party in interest liable for attorney's fees. They played an active role at plaintiff's invitation and with the encouragement of the trial court, in order to conduct litigation that would otherwise not have been adversarial, and there was no indication the Legislature contemplated that someone in that circumstance, who was neither a defendant nor an authentic real party in interest, could be considered an opposing party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, and construing Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 to allow liability against the advocacy groups would have been contrary to the judicial policy of welcoming amici curiae in order to facilitate informed judicial consideration of a wide variety of information and points of view that could bear on important legal questions (37 Cal. 4th 1169, 1182-1183) .

In McGuigan v. City of San Diego (2010) 183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 624-629, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 554 , the plaintiff as a class representative sued the defendant, claiming that the defendant underfunded various retirement plans. The parties entered into a settlement agreement that required the plaintiff to continue to act as a class representative for purposes of approving and enforcing the agreement. Other parties contested the settlement, arguing that it would limit their ability to pursue existing federal lawsuits. The trial court approved the settlement and certified the class. The settlement agreement provided that the plaintiff class was entitled to recover attorney's fees from the defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5. After mediation, the defendant was ordered to pay the plaintiffs $1.6 million in fees. Meanwhile, the objectors to the class pursued an appeal of the order approving the settlement and certifying the class. The plaintiff and the defendant filed extensive briefs and motions defending the order. The court of appeal upheld the settlement and certification.

The plaintiff then sought approximately $300,000 in additional attorney's fees against the defendant for work conducted for the appeal. The defendant argued that it need not pay these fees because, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5, it was not an opposing party to the plaintiff in the appeal. The trial court denied the motion for fees.

On appeal, the court relied heavily on Connerly v. State Personnel Bd. (2006) 37 Cal. 4th 1169, 39 Cal. Rptr. 3d 788 . The court held that the term "opposing party" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 means a party whose position in the litigation was adverse to that of the prevailing party [183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 626] . The court held that in the appeal, the plaintiff and the defendant both defended the settlement, for their own reasons, against their common opponents, the objectors. Looking at the case law, the court noted that courts use a "practical and pragmatic approach" to evaluate the parties' relationships to one another in interpreting Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 [183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 626] . The court concluded that as a settling party and respondent in the objectors' appeal, the defendant was not an "opposing party" to the plaintiff, but was allied in defending the settlement [183 Cal. App. 4th 610, 628-629] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Opposing Party Within Meaning of Statute

The procedure and facts in Mejia v. City of Los Angeles (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 67 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228 , are discussed at § 60.370[3][f]. In that case, the developer, who had appeared as real party in interest, contested the award of attorney's fees to the homeowner on the grounds that it was not an opposing party and that it was not at fault because of the city's failure to secure compliance with CEQA. However, the court of appeal held that a real party in interest in a mandamus proceeding that has a direct interest in the litigation, more than merely an ideological or policy interest, and actively participates in the litigation, is an opposing party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and can be liable for attorney's fees under the statute. The court held further that an award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 does not require a finding of fault or misconduct by the opposing party. Thus, the developer was an opposing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 and its purported absence of fault or misconduct could not relieve it of liability for fees under the statute (156 Cal. App. 4th 151, 159-162) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.409

§ 60.409 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fee Award Sought Is Not Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Intended to Be Imposed

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--Party Against Whom Fee Award Sought Is Not Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Intended to Be Imposed

[Caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] AGAINST _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] _____ ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THE PARTY AGAINST WHOM FEES ARE SOUGHT IS NOT THE TYPE OF PARTY ON WHOM PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL FEES IS INTENDED TO BE IMPOSED UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1021.5.

Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Are Intended to Be Imposed Under Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5. An award of attorney's fees under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.5 may be made only against a party against whom private attorney general fees are intended to be imposed (Adoption of Joshua S. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 945, 951-958, 174 P.3d 192).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum is for use with the general memorandum set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5], when the party against whom fees are sought is not a party against whom private attorney general fees are intended to be imposed.

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Against Whom Fees Are Sought Must Be Type of Party on Whom Private Attorney General Fees Are Intended to Be Imposed Under Code of Civil Procedure § 1021.5

In Adoption of Joshua S. (2008) 42 Cal. 4th 945, 174 P.3d 192 , two women were in a relationship. One of the women was artificially inseminated by the same sperm donor two different times and gave birth to two children. While retaining her parental rights, the birth mother consented to her partner's adoption of the children. After the relationship deteriorated, her partner filed a motion for an order of adoption. The birth mother moved for court approval to withdraw her consent to adopt and to dismiss the partner's petition, relying on several arguments, including that the form of second parent adoption sought was unlawful. The trial court denied the motion to dismiss the adoption, the Court of Appeal granted a petition for writ of mandate and reversed, holding that the form of second parent adoption sought by the partner was without statutory basis. The California Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeal, finding that these second parent adoptions were lawful. Before the resolution of other issues, the partner moved for an award of attorney's fees pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 for legal services provided in the Court of Appeal and California Supreme Court. The trial court awarded attorney's fees to the partner. The court found the California Supreme Court's decision conferred a significant nonpecuniary benefit on a large class of persons and resolved an important issue of law. The trial court also concluded that, notwithstanding the fact that the partner had a personal stake in the outcome of the litigation, the cost of the litigation was out of proportion to that stake. The Court of Appeal reversed, concluding that the partner's personal stake in the litigation, i.e., vindication of her rights as an adoptive parent, were so large that a private attorney general award under § 1021.5 was not justified and rejecting her argument that nonpecuniary interests such as hers were not to be counted among the personal interests that could defeat a § 1021.5 award (42 Cal. 4th 945, 949-951) .

The California Supreme Court reversed. The Court found first that there was no question the litigation yielded a substantial and widespread public benefit (42 Cal. 4th 945, 951-952) . However, the Court also held that even if the trial court was within its discretion in holding that the costs of the litigation transcended the partner's personal interests, the birth mother was not the type of party on whom private attorney general fees were intended to be imposed, because she only engaged in litigation to adjudicate private rights from which important appellate precedent happened to emerge but otherwise did nothing to compromise the rights of the public or a significant class of people. A party may be held liable for § 1021.5 attorney's fees for engaging in litigation when the party initiates litigation that is determined to be detrimental to the public interest, or for defending against suits by public entities, or those purporting to represent the public, that seek to expand the government's power to curtail important public rights. However, in Adoption of Joshua S., the mother was a private litigant with no institutional interest in the litigation, and the judgment she sought would have settled only her private rights and those of her children and her partner. She simply raised an issue in the course of that litigation that gave rise to important appellate precedent decided adversely to her (42 Cal. 4th 945, 954-958) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.410

§ 60.410 Opposing Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Private Attorney General Theory--No Fee Award When Party Recovers Judgment That Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

[1] FORM

[For caption, see § 60.400, with which this form should be combined.]

IT IS NOT PROPER FOR THE COURT TO GRANT ATTORNEY'S FEES TO _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] _____ [name] ON THE BASIS OF THE PRIVATE ATTORNEY GENERAL THEORY, BECAUSE THAT PARTY RECOVERED A JUDGMENT THAT COULD HAVE BEEN RENDERED IN A LIMITED CIVIL CASE.

Party Seeking Fees May Not Recover Judgment That Could Have Been Rendered in a Limited Civil Case. An award of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5 may not be made to a party who recovered a judgment that could have been rendered in a limited civil case pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) (Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 989, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.400, in opposition to a motion for an award of attorney's fees based on the private attorney general theory [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5] when the moving party recovered a judgment that could have been rendered in a limited civil case pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a).

See also § 60.370[2][c] for references to related chapters in California Forms Of Pleading And Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.370[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Seeking Fees Must Not Have Recovered Judgment That Could Have Been Rendered in Limited Civil Case

In Chavez v. City of Los Angeles (2010) 47 Cal. 4th 970, 989, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 710, 224 P.3d 41 , the plaintiff sued the defendant under the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA) for various incidents of employment discrimination and retaliation over the course of several years. After a jury trial, he received a judgment for a single retaliation claim for $11,500. The plaintiff submitted a motion stating he incurred attorney's fees of about $436,602 for 1,851 attorney hours. The plaintiff sought a lodestar multiplier of two, thereby requesting about $870,935 in fees. The trial court denied the plaintiff's request for attorney's fees based on its discretion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a). The court of appeal reversed, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) does not apply to FEHA actions.

The California Supreme Court first held that, under that Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a), a court has discretion to award fees when a plaintiff has obtained a judgment for money damages in an amount (currently $25,000 or less) that could have been recovered in a limited civil case, but the plaintiff did not bring the action as a limited civil case and thus did not take advantage of the cost- and time-saving advantages of limited civil case procedures [47 Cal. 4th 970, 982] . Further, the Court held that there was no conflict between FEHA and Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a), and that court should use their discretion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033(a) when determining recoverable fees under FEHA [47 Cal. 4th 970, 986] . With respect to the amount of fees the plaintiff requested, the Court held that a reduced fee award is appropriate when a claimant achieves only limited success [47 Cal. 4th 970, 989] . The Court noted that the plaintiff was unsuccessful on most of his claims. The Court held that whether the plaintiff was entitled to an award of attorney's fees for time spent litigating the single successful claim required consideration of whether the request appeared unreasonably inflated [47 Cal. 4th 970, 990] . The Court held that the plaintiff's attorney's fee request in the amount of $870,935 for 1,851 attorney hours was grossly inflated when considered in light of the single claim on which the plaintiff succeeded, the amount of damages awarded on that claim, and the amount of time an attorney might reasonably expect to spend in litigating such a claim [47 Cal. 4th 970, 991] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
3. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5; Public Interest or Private Attorney General Theory

6-60 California Points & Authorities §§ 60.411-60.439

[Reserved]

§§ 60.411[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.440

§ 60.440 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--General Form

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DETERMINE ENTITLEMENT TO RECOVER AT-
_____ [name],	)	TORNEY'S FEES IN ACTION ON CONTRACT
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS BASED ON A CONTRACT PROVIDING FOR SUCH RECOVERY, AND HE/SHE/IT IS THE PARTY PREVAILING ON THAT CONTRACT.

A. Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract. In any action on a contract, when the contract specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs that are incurred to enforce that contract must be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, then the party who is determined to be the party prevailing on the contract, whether he or she is the party specified in the contract or not, is entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to other costs (Civ. Code § 1717(a)).

B. Party Obtaining Unqualified Favorable Decision Has Right to Attorney's Fees as a Matter of Law. A trial court has no discretion to deny attorney's fees to a party who obtains an unqualified, favorable victory. Thus, for example, if the defendant has defeated recovery by the plaintiff on the only contract claim, or if the plaintiff has obtained all relief requested on the only contract claim, that successful litigant is entitled to attorney's fees as a matter of law (Hsu v. Abbara (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 863, 876-877, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824, 891 P.2d 804).

C. Party Prevailing on Contract Is Determined by Court. The court, on notice and motion by a party, shall determine who is the prevailing party on the contract for purposes of Civil Code Section 1717, whether or not the suit proceeds to final judgment. [The court may also determine that there is no prevailing party on the contract for purposes of this section] (Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1)).

D. Party Prevailing on Contract Generally Is Party Who Recovered Greater Relief. Except as provided in Civil Code Section 1717(b)(2), the prevailing party on the contract is the party who recovered greater relief in the action on the contract (Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1); see Public Employees' Retirement System v. Winston (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 205, 211, 258 Cal. Rptr. 612).

[Optional] E. Employer of In-House Counsel May Recover Attorney Fees as Prevailing Party. Civil Code Section 1717 allows the trial court to award reasonable attorney's fees to a prevailing party in an action to enforce a contract who was represented by in-house counsel [PLCM v. Drexler (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1084, 1091-1094, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198, 997 P.2d 511] .

[Optional] F. Attorney Represented by Other Members of Law Firm May Recover Attorney Fees. An attorney represented by other members of his or her law firm, who is a prevailing party when sued in a personal capacity in an action on a contract, may recover attorney fees under Civil Code Section 1717 [Gilbert v. Master Washer & Stamping Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216-223, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461] .
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted, in an action on a contract, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717(b) to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees pursuant to a provision in the contract providing for recovery of those fees. It should be combined with other memoranda, as appropriate, set out in § 60.441 et seq.

This form may also be adapted for use in support of a motion for an award of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717.5 in contract actions based on a book account, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 337a [see Civ. Code § 1717.5].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Evidence cognizable by the court in such a motion proceeding should be submitted with the memorandum to support its factual statements. A request for judicial notice will support facts subject to such notice [Evid. Code § 450 et seq.]. Otherwise supporting affidavits or declarations under penalty of perjury should be submitted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009 (affidavits), 2015.5 (declarations)], averring to such facts within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant as may be necessary to establish the ground or grounds of the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background, research guides, and forms for notices of motions, supporting declarations, and orders relating to the recovery of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

For related forms in seeking attorney's fees in contract actions based on a book account, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts , and Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees .

[d] Related Memoranda

Additional memoranda based on recovery of fees pursuant to a contract provision under Civ. Code § 1717 are set out in § 60.441 et seq.

This form may also be combined, in an appropriate case, with the memoranda set out in § 60.480 et seq., when a motion to determine the party prevailing on the contract is combined with a motion to fix the reasonable amount of fees to be awarded as an element of costs [see Civ. Code § 1717(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)].

If there are other theories upon which the moving party may recovery an award of attorney's fees, memoranda based on these theories may be combined with this form in the alternative [see § 60.300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), and § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5).

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms in this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda generally, see § 60.460 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract

Civ. Code § 1717(a) provides that in any action on a contract, when the contract specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs that are incurred to enforce that contract must be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, then the party who is determined to be the party prevailing on the contract, whether he or she is the party specified in the contract or not, will be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to other costs.

[b] Party Obtaining Unqualified Favorable Decision Has Right to Attorney's Fees as a Matter of Law

Plaintiffs in Hsu v. Abbara (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 863, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 824, 891 P.2d 804 , were a married couple interested in buying the defendants' house. The plaintiffs made a written offer to purchase the home, and the defendants responded with a written counteroffer. There was an attorney's fee provision in both the offer and counteroffer. The plaintiffs commenced this action after the sale fell through because the defendants failed to find a replacement home.

The plaintiffs' complaint alleged the formation of a contract of sale and requested specific performance of that contract. The defendants answer was a general denial, and they also cross-complained against their agent seeking indemnity and damages on various theories. The trial court granted the defendant sellers' motion for judgment on the complaint against them on the ground that no contract was ever formed between the parties because they failed to agree on the price for the home. The defendants then sought attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 as the parties prevailing on the contract cause of action (9 Cal. 4th 863, 868-869) .

The court awarded the defendants their costs of suit, but denied them attorney fees. The court also ruled that the defendants would recover nothing on their cross-complaint. The defendants appealed the portion of the judgment denying them attorney fees. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, construing the lower court judgment as making an implied finding "that there was no prevailing party on the complaint" for purposes of Civ. Code § 1717 (9 Cal. 4th 863, 870) .

The California Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the court of appeal. The Court interpreted Civ. Code § 1717 as giving a "prevailing party" an entitlement to attorney's fees as a matter of right (9 Cal. 4th 863, 872) . Therefore, the issue in this case was whether the trial court abused its discretion when it determined that there was no prevailing party.

The Court concluded that the trial court lacked discretion to determine that there is "no prevailing party" in cases in which a party's victory is unqualified; such as when a defendant defeats recovery by a plaintiff on all contract claims in an action (as in this case), or when a plaintiff obtains all relief requested on the contract claims in an action (9 Cal. 4th 863, 875-876) . Statutory language in Civ. Code § 1717 that gives a court discretion to determine that there is no prevailing party only applies when the results of litigation are equivocal, or mixed (9 Cal. 4th 863, 876) . In this case, the defendants obtained an unqualified victory in the only contract claim in their litigation. Accordingly, the court erred in denying them attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 (9 Cal. 4th 863, 876-877) .

[c] Party Prevailing on Contract Is Determined by Court

Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1) provides that the court, on notice and motion by a party, must determine who is the prevailing party on the contract for purposes of Civil Code Section 1717, whether or not the suit proceeds to final judgment. The court may also determine that there is no prevailing party on the contract for purposes of this section.

For discussion of who is a "prevailing party," see § 60.440[3][d].

[d] Party Prevailing on Contract Generally Is Party Who Recovered Greater Relief

Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1) provides that the party prevailing on the contract is the party who recovered a greater relief in action on the contract, except as provided in Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2). This section also provides that the court, in the alternative, may find that there is no party prevailing on the contract for purposes of Civ. Code § 1717 [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1); see § 60.461].

The exceptions to the general rule set out in Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) are as follows: (1) there will be no party prevailing on the contract when an action has been voluntarily dismissed or dismissed pursuant to a settlement of the case [see § 60.462; compare discussion in § 60.444]; and (2) a defendant is deemed to be the party prevailing on the contract when he or she alleges and proves a tender of the amount to which plaintiff was entitled and deposits that amount with the court.

The definition of "party prevailing on the contract" under Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1) differs from the definition of a "prevailing party" who is entitled to recover costs of suit generally [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4)]. Although an award of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 is an element of costs [Civ. Code § 1717(a); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(10) (attorney's fees authorized by contract is an item of allowable costs); Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5) (attorney's fees awarded pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 are allowable costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032)], a prevailing party entitled to costs generally may not necessarily be the party prevailing on the contract who is entitled to attorney's fees as an element of those costs. For example, a defendant in whose favor a dismissal is entered is a prevailing party entitled to costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), (b)], but if this dismissal is voluntary, there is no party prevailing on the contract under Civ. Code § 1717 [Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2)].

In this situation, if the contract clause for recovery of attorney's fees permits recovery of attorney's fee incurred in defending noncontractual claims arising from the contract, for example, a tort claim for deceit, a defendant may recover such fees as costs as a "prevailing party" under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032. However, because that defendant is not a "prevailing party" under Civ. Code § 1717, he or she is barred by that section from recovering any attorney's fees as costs which were incurred in defending contract claims that fall within the scope of Civ. Code § 1717 [Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 622-623, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830, 951 P.2d 399] .

In Public Employees' Retirement System v. Winston (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 205, 258 Cal. Rptr. 612 , plaintiff lessor brought an action against defendant lessee for the recovery of unpaid rent. The trial court found that defendant owed plaintiff $5,281.57 for unpaid rent and interest, and ordered the defendant to pay plaintiff 's attorney's fees under Civil Code § 1717. Defendant appealed, contending, inter alia, that plaintiff should have debited any unpaid rent against defendant's $5,115 security deposit when defendant vacated the building.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, finding that plaintiff had a statutory obligation to credit the security deposit against the unpaid rent within two weeks after termination of plaintiff 's lease. The court found that, at the time defendant's lease terminated, defendant actually owed plaintiff only $4,185 in rent, which was less than the $5,115 deposit. Therefore, defendant was entitled to a partial refund of his security deposit. The court of appeal noted that Civ. Code § 1717(b)(1) provides, with certain exceptions, that the party prevailing on the contract must be the party who recovered a greater relief in the action on the contract. Furthermore, noted the court, the statute provides that the court may determine that there is no party prevailing on the contract. The court directed the trial court to reassess on remand the issue of whether defendant was the prevailing party in the action or whether neither party was the prevailing party. It stated that as a matter of law, plaintiff was not the party who recovered "a greater relief" in the action, and that plaintiff could not be deemed the prevailing party, since defendant, not plaintiff, was entitled to a net money judgment in his favor (209 Cal. App. 3d 205, 210-212) .

[e] Employer of In-House Counsel May Recover Fees as Prevailing Party

In PLCM v. Drexler (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 1084, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 198, 997 P.2d 511 , an attorney had a malpractice insurance policy with a deductible amount per claim for both indemnity and expense payments and an attorney's fees provision. On being sued for malpractice, the attorney tendered his claim to his insurer, which hired outside counsel selected by the attorney, to defend him. Fees claimed by the law firm for the defense were within the deductible amount. The insurer paid the entire amount and then sued the attorney to collect the deductible amount; in this action, the insurer was represented by in-house counsel. A jury verdict was entered in the insurer's favor, and the insurer sought attorney's fees. The trial court entered judgment including an award of attorney's fees to the insurer in the requested amount.

The California Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that the superior court had authority under Civ. Code § 1717 to award attorney fees to in-house counsel. The Court that although attorney's fees may not be awarded to attorneys who represent themselves in actions on a contract, in-house attorneys, like private counsel but unlike pro se litigants, do not represent their own personal interests and are not seeking remuneration simply for lost opportunity costs that could not be recouped by a nonlawyer. A corporation represented by in-house counsel is in an agency relationship, that is, it has hired an attorney to provide professional legal services on its behalf. The Court found further that there is no impediment to the effective and successful prosecution of meritorious claims because of possible ethical conflict or emotional investment in the outcome. The fact that in-house counsel is employed by the corporation does not alter the fact of representation by an independent third party. Instead, the payment of a salary to in-house attorneys is analogous to hiring a private firm on a retainer (22 Cal. 4th 1084, 1091-1094) .

As discussed further in § 60.480[3][c], the Court went on to hold that the trial court properly determined the award of reasonable attorney's fees in this case by multiplying the reasonable in-house attorney hours by the prevailing hourly rate in the community for comparable legal services (22 Cal. 4th 1084, 1094-1098) .

[f] Attorney Represented by Other Members of Law Firm May Recover Attorney Fees

Gilbert v. Master Washer & Stamping Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 461 , was an action in which a tenant sued the landlord and the landlord's attorney for breach of the lease. The attorney was represented by his own law firm. After sustaining the attorney's demurrer without leave to amend, the trial court denied the attorney's motion to fix his attorney fees as costs on the ground that because he was represented by his own law firm, he was not entitled to fees under Civ. Code § 1717 based on the California Supreme Court's holding in Trope v. Katz (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 274, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 241, 902 P.2d 259 (discussed in § 60.467[3][a]) that an attorney who litigates in propria persona may not recover attorney fees pursuant to § 1717 (87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 216) .

The Court of Appeal reversed the order denying the motion to fix attorney fees as costs and remanded to the trial court to determine whether the attorney was a prevailing party and the amount of attorney fees, if any, he was entitled to recover (87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 224) . The court found that an attorney represented by members of his or her own law firm incurs fees within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1717, since the attorney will experience a reduced draw from the partnership (or a reduced salary from the professional corporation to account for the amount of time his or her partners or colleagues specifically devoted to the representation, or absorb a share of the reduction in other income the firm experiences because of the time spent on the case (87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 220-221) . The court also found that an attorney represented by members of his or her own law firm is a party to an attorney-client relationship, since the members of the law firm represented the separate and distinct interests of the attorney himself rather than their personal interests or even those of the firm (87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 222) . Finally, the court found that permitting an attorney represented by members of his or her own law firm to recover attorney fees under § 1717 would not lead to an inequitable application of § 1717, because the consideration expressed in Trope that it would be inequitable to permit attorneys but not other litigants to recover fees when they litigate in propria persona is absent when the attorney-litigant is represented by members of his or her own firm because the represented attorney seeks to recover fees for work done by others on his or her behalf (87 Cal. App. 4th 212, 223) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Recovery of Reasonable Attorney's Fees in Action on Contract

In Circle Star Center Associates, LP v. Liberate Technologies (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 1203, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 232 , a commercial tenant moved out of the leased premises and filed for bankruptcy. The landlord successfully moved to dismiss the bankruptcy case on the grounds that it was filed in bad faith. The landlord then sued for the breach of the lease and other causes of action and claimed attorney's fees incurred in the bankruptcy proceeding under the attorney's fees provision in the lease, which provided that if the landlord or tenant brought any action for any relief against the other party arising out of the lease, the losing party would pay attorney's fees to the prevailing party. The trial court granted the tenant's motion to strike the attorney's fees claim, on the ground that fees were not recoverable as a matter of law because fees are not obtainable under federal bankruptcy law when bankruptcy litigation involves primarily federal issues (147 Cal. App. 4th 1203, 1206-1208) . The court of appeal held that the trial court erred in granting the tenant's motion to strike the landlord's request for attorney's fees in a postbankruptcy state court action on the lease. Permitting the landlord to seek fees did not interfere with the uniformity required by federal bankruptcy law, risk conflating federal procedural remedies with state tort lawsuits, or interfere with the bankruptcy court's control of its proceedings. Further, extrinsic evidence showed that the parties intended the phrase "any action" in the attorney's fees provision in the lease to encompass any case filed in court, including bankruptcy proceedings, and the trial court could not resolve whether the contract was ambiguous on this point without considering the extrinsic evidence offered in opposition to the motion to strike (147 Cal. App. 4th 1203, 1208-1211) .

In Anmaco, Inc. v. Bohlken (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 675 , an action between corporate directors, defendant was awarded attorney's fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 following dismissal. The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting plaintiff 's unsupported argument that the trial court failed to examine the record and determine whether the fees were incurred solely on the contract cause of action (13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 901) . The court held that so long as an action involves a contract, and one of the parties would be entitled to recover attorney's fees under the contract if that party prevails, the other party should also be entitled to attorney's fees it if prevails, even if it does so by successfully arguing the inapplicability, invalidity, unenforceability, or nonexistence of the same contract (13 Cal. App. 4th 891, 902) .

[b] Party Prevailing on Contract Determined by Court

In First Security Bank of Cal. v. Paquet (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 468, 119 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 , a bank that was a defendant in a shareholders' derivative action filed a cross-complaint against the shareholders in their individual capacities. The trial court sustained the shareholders' demurrer without leave to amend and dismissed the cross-complaint as to them. The shareholders moved for an award of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, and the trial court granted the motion and awarded fees. The bank appealed from that order on the ground that the determination that the shareholders had prevailed was premature because the shareholder derivative action was not resolved. The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that because the shareholders are parties to the derivative complaint in name only, the action on the cross-complaint was final as to them and the trial court properly determined that they had prevailed. The possibility they might be individually liable for fees or other costs if the derivative action is unsuccessful did not change the conclusion that the judgment on the cross-complaint was final (98 Cal. App. 4th 468, 475-476) .

In Pacific Custom Pools, Inc. v. Turner Construction Co. (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 94 Cal. Rptr. 2d 756 , the trial court granted summary judgment to a general contractor who cross complained against the subcontractor that had sued it on the ground that the subcontractor was unlicensed during the period of the contract, so that under Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031, the unlicensed subcontractor cold not maintain an action for work performed. The trial court denied attorney's fees to the general contractor under Civ. Code § 1717, on the ground that it believed the attorney's fees clause in the contract pertained only to pleadings against the subcontractor, not to pleadings by the subcontractor or pleadings in an action in which the subcontractor was sued, so that there was no prevailing party entitled to fees under Civ. Code § 1717 (79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1268-1269) . The court of appeal reversed the denial of attorney's fees as an abuse of discretion, finding that the trial court's interpretation of the attorney's fees clause would undermine the bilateral nature and required liberal construction of Civ. Code § 1717, and that the general contractor greatly succeeded in achieving its litigation objectives of defeating the subcontractor's claims while the subcontractor clearly failed to accomplish its desired goals, so that the general contractor should have been declared the prevailing party under Civ. Code § 1717 (79 Cal. App. 4th 1254, 1270-1273) .

In Deane Gardenhome Assn. v. Denktas (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 16 Cal. Rptr. 2d 816 , homeowner successfully defended a suit by the homeowners' association for injunctive relief, damages, costs, and attorney's fees (based on the attorney's fees provision in the CC & R's). The court of appeal reversed the trial court's denial of attorney's fees to defendants. The court rejected plaintiff 's assertion that defendants were not the prevailing parties within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1717, holding that their successful defense of the suit constituted a "simple, unqualified win" (13 Cal. App. 4th 1394, 1397-1400) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.441

§ 60.441 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract

[For caption, see § 60.440.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES BECAUSE A CONTRACT PROVIDING FOR SUCH RECOVERY IS ENFORCEABLE ON THE ENTIRE CONTRACT.

Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract. When a contract provides that attorney's fees and costs that are incurred to enforce that contract shall be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, that provision shall be construed as applying to the entire contract, unless each party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the contract, and the fact of that representation is specified in the contract (Civ. Code § 1717(a)). When more than one document comprises the agreement between the parties, attorney's fees can be awarded on the basis of a provision in any one of the documents (Kachlon v. Markowitz (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 316, 345-348, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 532 ; Neptune Society Corp. v. Longanecker (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1249-1250, 240 Cal. Rptr. 117 ; Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 912, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, to allege that recovery should be had on the entire contract.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Provision Applies to Entire Contract

In Kachlon v. Markowitz (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 316, 345-348, 85 Cal. Rptr. 3d 532 , the plaintiffs purchased a home from the defendants. The plaintiffs executed a promissory note in favor of the defendants, secured by a second deed of trust on the residence. The note and deed of trust contained attorney's fees provisions requiring the plaintiffs to pay the defendants' attorney's fees if litigation arose from the note or deed of trust. Ultimately, the defendants initiated a foreclosure and caused a notice of default to be recorded. The plaintiffs sued the defendants challenging the nonjudicial foreclosure, arguing that the foreclosure was wrongful because the promissory note to the defendants had been fully satisfied. The plaintiffs sought damages against the defendants for breach of duty to secure a reconveyance of the deed of trust and for slander of title. The plaintiffs sought damages against the trustee for slander of title and negligence. The plaintiffs also sought equitable remedies against the defendants for declaratory relief (seeking cancellation of the note and a reconveyance of the deed of trust), an injunction against the foreclosure, and quiet title in favor of the plaintiffs. The jury found for the plaintiffs on the legal claims. The trial court found for the plaintiffs on the equitable claims. Relying on the attorney's fee clauses in the note and deed of trust, the plaintiffs sought attorney's fees against the defendants on their equitable claims. The trial court ruled that the plaintiffs were the prevailing parties and entitled to attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717.

On appeal, the defendants argued that Civ. Code § 1717 did not apply because the plaintiffs' claims for declaratory and injunctive relief and quiet title were not based on contract. The court of appeal held that the plaintiffs agreed to pay attorney's fees in any action instituted on the promissory note, and in any action affecting the security of the deed of trust and that Civ. Code § 1717 made these unilateral attorney's fee clauses reciprocal, and entitled the plaintiffs to attorney's fees if they prevailed in an action on the note or deed of trust (168 Cal. App. 4th 316, 347) . In determining whether an action is "on the contract" under Civ. Code § 1717, the court held that the focus is on the basis of the cause of action, not on the nature of the remedy. Here, the court held, although the remedy sought was equitable, the claims were actions "on the contract," i.e., the note and deed of trust (168 Cal. App. 4th 316, 347) .

Plaintiff in Neptune Society Corp. v. Longanecker (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 240 Cal. Rptr. 117 , was a franchisor who sued the franchisees for breach of their contract. The franchisees cross complained for rescission and restitution. There was no attorney's fee provision in the agreement between the parties, but the notes that defendants signed to finance their performance under the agreement contained attorney's fee provisions. Judgment was for defendants and cross complainants for rescission, restitution, dissolution of the partnership between the parties, and attorney's fees. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. One of plaintiff 's contentions on appeal was that defendants were not entitled to their attorney's fees. Although the provision in the notes said "in case suit is instituted to collect this note ..., I promise to pay such additional sum as the court may adjudge reasonable attorney's fees in said suit," that provision was reciprocal, and applied to defendants as the prevailing parties (194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1249-1250) . The court noted that neither party was represented by counsel in the negotiation and execution of the agreement and said that because the notes were an inherent part of the partnership-franchise agreement that was the subject matter of the litigation, the attorney's fee provisions were properly construed under Civ. Code § 1717(a) as applying to the entire agreement (194 Cal. App. 3d 1233, 1250) .

Ganey v. Doran (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 236 Cal. Rptr. 787 , involved cross actions between buyers, seller, and their agents after a real estate sale was not completed, in part because defendants' check in payment of a note given to plaintiff as reimbursement for loan origination fees was dishonored. Plaintiff-seller sued to foreclose a vendor's lien, for money due on a dishonored check, and for breach of contract. Buyers cross complained for fraud and misrepresentation. Judgment was for plaintiff and included an award of attorney's fees. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. One of defendants' contentions on appeal was that because plaintiff had sued on the dishonored check and to collect on the note, not on the real estate sales agreement itself, the attorney's fee provision in the agreement would not support the award of attorney's fees. The court of appeal said that under Civ. Code § 1642, it is a general rule that several papers relating to the same subject matter and executed as parts of substantially one transaction are to be construed together as one contract. Thus, the note, mortgage, and agreement of sale constituted one contract, and the attorney's fee award was proper (191 Cal. App. 3d 901, 912) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.442

§ 60.442 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--No Waiver of Fees Allowed

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--No Waiver of Fees Allowed

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES, WHICH ARE NOT SUBJECT TO WAIVER.

No Waiver of Fees Allowed. Attorney's fees provided for by Civil Code Section 1717 shall not be subject to waiver by the parties to any contract entered into after November 13, 1968, the effective date of this section. Any provision in any such contract that provides for a waiver of attorney's fees is void (Civ. Code § 1717(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, to allege that the fees provision is not subject to waiver.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Waiver of Fees Allowed

Civ. Code § 1717(a) provides that attorney's fees provided for by Civ. Code § 1717 shall not be subject to waiver by the parties to any contract entered into after November 13, 1968, the effective date of this section. Any provision in any such contract that provides for a waiver of attorney's fees is void.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.443

§ 60.443 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES, BECAUSE HE/SHE/IT HAS TENDERED THE FULL AMOUNT TO THE OTHER PARTY AND DEPOSITED THAT AMOUNT IN COURT, AND IS THEREFORE DEEMED TO BE A PREVAILING PARTY ON THE CONTRACT.

Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit. When the defendant alleges in his or her answer that he or she tendered to the plaintiff the full amount to which he or she was entitled, and then deposits that amount in court for the plaintiff, the defendant is deemed to be a party prevailing on the contract within the meaning of Civil Code Section 1717 if that allegation is found to be true (Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the party has tendered and deposited the full amount in court.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Tender and Deposit

Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) provides that when the defendant alleges in his or her answer that he or she tendered to the plaintiff the full amount to which he or she was entitled, and then deposits that amount in court for the plaintiff, the defendant is deemed to be a party prevailing on the contract within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1717 if that allegation is found to be true.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.444

§ 60.444 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES, BECAUSE THE JUDGMENT HAS BEEN ENTERED IN HIS/HER/ITS FAVOR PURSUANT TO A COMPROMISE AGREEMENT.

Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. Attorney's fees authorized by a contract provision are available to the party in whose favor a judgment is entered pursuant to a compromise agreement under Code of Civil Procedure Section 998, even if the compromise agreement is silent about attorney's fees and costs (Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 187-191, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when judgment has been had in the party's favor pursuant to a compromise agreement.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Compromise Under Code Civ. Proc. § 998

Lanyi v. Goldblum (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 223 Cal. Rptr. 32 , arose out of a real property contract with an attorney's fee provision. After the litigation was commenced, defendants made an offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998. The offer was accepted in 1981, after which plaintiffs moved for entry of judgment and for an award of costs and attorney's fees. Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), providing that there is no prevailing party for purposes of Civ. Code § 1717 when there is a voluntary dismissal or a dismissal pursuant to a settlement, became effective on January 1, 1982. On January 22, 1982, judgment was entered on the compromise agreement. Plaintiffs were awarded costs, but not attorney's fees. Plaintiffs appealed the denial of attorney's fees.

The court of appeal reversed the denial of attorney's fees. The court of appeal first determined that attorney's fees pursuant to a contract provision are available to a party who prevails by a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 agreement that is silent about costs and fees (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 187) . The court concluded that an award of attorney's fees was proper under Civ. Code § 1717, notwithstanding the language of Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2), because that language refers only to dismissals, whereas a settlement reached under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 results not in a dismissal but a judgment (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 189) . Defendants argued that there is no rational distinction between a dismissal following a settlement and a judgment entered on a settlement. The court of appeal disagreed, saying that Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) appeared to codify preexisting case law, including International Industries, Inc. v. Olen (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 218, 145 Cal. Rptr. 691, 577 P.2d 1031 . The court of appeal cited International Industries for the proposition that equitable principles require rejection of any rule that automatically permits recovery of attorney's fees when the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses before trial. Such a rule would undermine the policy in favor of settlement and encourage plaintiffs to maintain pointless litigation in moot cases or against insolvent defendant to avoid liability for attorney's fees. Such a rule would also be too burdensome on trail courts, forcing them to determine who was the prevailing party in such cases (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 190) . The court of appeal noted that Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) is broader than the holding in International Industries, but not broad enough to bar recovery of attorney's fees following a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 compromise judgment. The equitable and judicial efficiency considerations are different with respect to settlements under Code Civ. Proc. § 998 than they are with voluntary dismissals (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 191) . Resulting judgments under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, unlike voluntary dismissals, finally determine the rights of the parties (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 190-191) . There is no burden on the trial court, because the Code Civ. Proc. § 998 agreement itself will determine who is the prevailing party. Nor does allowance of an award of attorney's fees after a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 agreement encourage pointless litigation because the plaintiff can always eschew a Code Civ. Proc. § 998 compromise and instead voluntarily dismiss, thus avoiding liability for attorney's fees (177 Cal. App. 3d 181, 192) .

[4] Additional Authorities

In Wong v. Thrifty Corp. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 261, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 276 , a lessor of commercial real property sued a lessee for breach of contract and breach of statutory duty based on damage caused by the lessee. The lease provided for payment of reasonable attorney's fees to the lessor in a enforcement action in which it was "determined" that the lessees were in default. The lessor accepted the lessee's offer to compromise under Code Civ. Proc. § 998, which was silent as to fees and costs. The trial court then denied the lessor's motion for attorney's fees. The Court of Appeal reversed. The court held that a party who accepts a section 998 offer may recover attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, as an item of costs after judgment, where the compromise agreement is silent on costs and fees (97 Cal. App. 4th 261, 263-264) . The court then held that the conditions of section 1717 had been met: there was an action on a contract, the contract provided that fees incurred to enforce the contract be awarded to one of the parties, and the lessor clearly was the prevailing party on the contract. The court found that language in the attorney's fee provision conflicting with the prevailing party definition in section 1717 was void, since to give it effect would thwart the statutory purpose (97 Cal. App. 4th 261, 264-265) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.445

§ 60.445 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES, BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS INVOLUNTARILY DISMISSED IN HIS/HER/ITS FAVOR.

Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360. Attorney's fees authorized by a contract provision are available to the defendant in whose favor an involuntary dismissal is entered under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.360(a) due to failure by the plaintiff to bring the case to trial within five years (Elms v. Builders Disbursements, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 671, 675, 283 Cal. Rptr. 515).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the action has been involuntarily dismissed in the party's favor.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Prevailing on Contract After Involuntary Dismissal Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360

In Elms v. Builders Disbursements, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 671, 283 Cal. Rptr. 515 , plaintiffs sued defendant on a contract entitling the successful litigant to attorney's fees. Five years after the filing of the complaint, the trial court dismissed the plaintiffs' action under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360(a). Defendant moved for attorney's fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717. After hearing, the trial court concluded that there was no prevailing party within the provisions of Civ. Code § 1717(b) and denied defendant's motion for fees and costs.

The court of appeal reversed, stating that pragmatically and legally, defendant was the prevailing party under Civ. Code § 1717 and was entitled to benefits of its provisions (232 Cal. App. 3d 671, 675) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.446

§ 60.446 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE, EVEN THOUGH HE/SHE/IT WAS NOT A SIGNATORY TO THAT CONTRACT.

Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract. A prevailing party, who would have been liable for attorney's fees pursuant to the fee provision of a contract had the other party prevailed, may recover attorney's fees pursuant to Section 1717 of the Civil Code even though the prevailing party was not a signatory to the underlying contract (Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 129, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the party is not a signatory to the underlying contract.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83 , was an action to hold defendants personally liable for corporate debts under the alter ego theory. Plaintiff supplied goods to a subsidiary company owned and operated by defendants. The parent corporation, of which defendants were shareholders and directors, guaranteed payments pursuant to an agreement that did not provide for recovery of attorney's fees. Subsequently, the subsidiary executed and delivered to plaintiff two promissory notes, which provided for recovery of collection costs, including attorney's fees, in the event of default. Both companies became insolvent and initiated bankruptcy proceedings. Plaintiff filed a creditor's claim, and also brought an action seeking to hold defendants personally liable for the debts owed, claiming they were alter egos of the companies. The trial court held for defendants, and granted defendants attorney's fees in excess of the 15 percent limitation set forth in the promissory notes. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment awarding defendants attorney's fees.

The Supreme Court reversed for redetermination of attorney's fees, but upheld the recovery of fees per se. The Court noted that unless authorized by either statute or agreement, attorney's fees ordinarily are not recoverable as costs (25 Cal. 3d 124, 127) . Civ. Code § 1717 is unclear with respect to whether litigants who have not signed the contract may recover fees. Civ. Code § 1717 was enacted to establish mutuality of remedy when a contract provides recovery of attorney's fees for only one party. Its purposes require a reciprocal remedy for a nonsignatory defendant, sued on a contract as if a party to it, when a plaintiff would be entitled to attorney's fees if it prevailed in enforcing the contractual obligation against the defendant (25 Cal. 3d 124, 128) . Had plaintiff prevailed on its cause of action claiming defendants were the alter egos of the corporation, defendants would have been liable on the notes. Because defendants would have been liable for attorney's fees pursuant to the fee provision had plaintiff prevailed, they were entitled to attorney's fees incurred in successfully defending the cause of action based on the notes. Attorney's fees incurred solely for defending the other causes of action were not recoverable (25 Cal. 3d 124, 129) . Furthermore, defendants' attorney's fee award was subject to the same 15 percent limitation that would have applied had plaintiff been the prevailing party (25 Cal. 3d 124, 130) .

The portion of the opinion in Reynolds that discusses attorney's fees incurred for issues common to more than one cause of action is discussed in § 60.481.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prevailing Party Not Signatory to Contract

In Loduca v. Polyzos (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 334, 62 Cal. Rptr. 3d 780 , a property owner, as a third party beneficiary, sued a subcontractor in contract and tort for breach of the contract between the subcontractor and the general contractor. The trial court granted judgment in favor of the owner on breach of contract, but against the owner on negligent misrepresentation (tort). The trial court granted the owner's motion for attorney's fees pursuant to an attorney fee clause in the contract (153 Cal. App. 4th 334, 337-340) , and the appellate court affirmed. The court found that the subcontractor did not dispute that the property owner was a third party beneficiary to the contract, and the contract contained an attorney's fees clause that did not impose any limitation on third party rights. Thus, it was apparent the subcontractor and the general contractor intended the property owner's enforcement right to include a right to attorney's fees. There was mutuality of remedies, because the subcontractor could have sued on the contract instead of filing a lien, and in so doing, availed himself of the attorney's fee provision. Further, a formal assignment was not required before the property owner, as an intended third party beneficiary, could recover attorney's fees on the underlying contract. The contract contained no limitation by the subcontractor on any rights that the property owner could derive from the contract, and the attorney's fee clause's broad language extended to any court action on the contract without reference to whom might bring it. Since the owner had paid the subcontractor directly, the subcontractor likely understood that the party most likely to bring such a claim was the property owner. The absence of an attorney's fee provision in a side agreement between the owner and the subcontractor did not demonstrate the parties did not intend for the property owner to be able to recover fees, because that agreement did not state it superseded the agreement between the general contractor and the subcontractor. It simply changed the terms of payment and imposed an additional penalty if delivery continued to be late (153 Cal. App.4th 334, 341-345) .

In Dell Merk v. Franzia (2005) 132 Cal. App. 4th 443, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 694 , a bank intervened into an action on a construction contract between the project owner and the contractor. The contractor had obtained a line of credit from the bank by executing a promissory note, commercial security agreement and business loan agreement. Although neither of the original construction contracts contained an attorney's fees clause, both the note and security agreement included clauses which entitled the bank to attorney's fees in any action to enforce the agreement or to collect on the note. The bank informed the project owner to make payments directly to the bank. However, the owner made the first progress payment under the construction contract to the contractor. The project owner later terminated the contractor and the contractor defaulted on its payment obligation to the bank and sued the project owner. The bank intervened, alleging that it was entitled to the proceeds of the first progress payment and to any proceeds the project owner still owed the contractor. The bank stipulated its potential right to damages was limited to any rights it had in the first progress payment. The trial court then granted the project owner's motion in limine to exclude evidence of the bank's first cause of action regarding the progress payment. After entering judgment against the bank on its complaint in intervention, the trial court granted the project owner's motion for attorney's fees under the reciprocity provision of Civ. Code § 1717 based on the security agreement (132 Cal. App. 4th 443, 445-449) . The Court of Appeal held that trial court properly awarded attorney's fees to the project owner against the bank on the bank's unsuccessful intervention to claim a breach of obligation to pay for the owner's failure to make the first progress payment jointly payable to the bank and the contractor. Even though the construction contract between the contractor and the owner did not contain an attorney's fees clause, both the note and the security agreement contained fees clauses requiring the contractor to pay fees incurred by the bank in connection with the enforcement of agreement. The bank was only entitled to require the joint payment of the progress payment because of the security agreement containing a contractual agreement for that collection right, so that its action necessarily involved the security agreement containing that right (132 Cal. App. 4th 443, 454-456) . However, since the bank would not have been entitled to attorney's fees on the portion of its complaint in intervention as an assignee of the construction contract seeking payment of any remaining proceeds due to the contractor from the owner, the owner was not entitled under the reciprocity provision of § 1717 to its fees in defending the claim on the contract between the contractor and the owner (132 Cal. App. 4th 443, 451-454) .

In Sessions Payroll Management, Inc. v. Noble Construction Co. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 671, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127 , the trial court awarded attorney's fees to a general contractor that had been sued by a payroll management company that provided payroll services to a subcontractor. The subcontractor had breached its promise to pay the payroll management company employee wages, taxes, union fringe benefits and workers' compensation insurance premiums which the payroll management company paid to and on behalf of the subcontractor's employees in reliance on the subcontractor's promise to pay those amounts and in reliance on assurances that the general contractor had issued checks to the subcontractor to cover payment to the subcontractor's employees. The general contractor and subcontractor had entered into a subcontract which provided the general contractor with the option of issuing joint checks to the subcontractor and its subcontractors whenever the general contractor so elected, but explicitly stating that so electing conferred no enforceable rights on any third party, and an attorney's fees provision. The trial court sustained the general contractor's demurrer to the payroll management company's complaint, which had alleged that the general contractor recognized and agreed that the payroll management company was a beneficiary under the subcontract, and dismissed the action as to the general contractor and awarded the general contractor attorney's fees as a prevailing party under Civ. Code § 1717 (84 Cal. App. 4th 671, 675-677) .

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the payroll management company did not qualify as a third party beneficiary of the general contractor's and subcontractor's contractual attorney's fees clause, since there was no indication that the general contractor and subcontractor intended to benefit the payroll management company by including it within their attorney's fees clause (84 Cal. App. 4th 671, 680) . Thus, since the payroll management company could not have recovered attorney's fees even if it had prevailed on its third party beneficiary breach of contract cause of action, it should not have had attorney's imposed against it (84 Cal. App. 4th 671, 681) .

In Abdallah v. United Savings Bank (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1101, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 , plaintiff claimed he was not liable for attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, because he was not a signatory to the contracts on which the fee award was based. The court of appeal rejected the contention, holding that he was not relieved from liability from the fees merely because he did not sign the note or deed of trust. He had sued defendants for breach of these contracts, and sought attorney's fees for the action. Since he would have been entitled to fees if he had been a prevailing party, he was liable for fees as a losing party (43 Cal. App. 4th 1101, 1112) .

In Milman v. Shukhat (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 538, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 526 , the plaintiffs filed a declaratory relief action against the defendants to determine the rights of the parties concerning two promissory notes containing attorney's fees provisions. The defendants prevailed by proving their signatures were forged on the notes, but the trial court denied their motion for attorney fees under Civ. Code § 1717 because they were not signatories to the contract. On the defendants' appeal, the court of appeal reversed the denial of attorney fees. It held that even though the action was for declaratory relief and the defense was nonexistence of the contract based on forgery, the defendants were entitled to recover attorney fees under the mutuality doctrine because the plaintiffs would have recovered attorney fees had they prevailed (22 Cal. App. 4th 538, 545) .

In Super 7 Motel Associates v. Wang (1993) 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 , a buyer of real estate sued the seller and its broker in an action for rescission based on fraud. The buyer recovered damages against the seller but not against the broker, and the trial court awarded the broker attorney fees under a fee provision in the buy-sell agreement. The appellate court held that the broker was not entitled to the award because the broker was a nonsignatory to the buy-sell agreement even though he signed a commission contract that was part of the same document. When different parts of a document represent distinct contracts between different parties, then an attorney fee provision in one part does not cover parties who are nonsignatories to that part. Moreover, the broker was not a third-party beneficiary to the buy-sell agreement since it contained no promise to pay the broker (16 Cal. App. 4th 541, 546-547) .

Steve Schmidt & Co. v. Berry (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 228 Cal. Rptr. 689 , was an action by a real estate broker against a real estate seller to recover its share of a commission. A summary judgment and an award of attorney's fees pursuant to the listing agreement to which the broker was not a party, authorizing attorney's fees to the prevailing party, was entered in the action for plaintiff. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that the broker was entitled to the fees under Civ. Code § 1717 (providing that in any action on a contract that specifically provides that attorney's fees and costs that are incurred to enforce the provisions of that contract shall be awarded either to one of the parties or to the prevailing party, then the party who is determined to be the prevailing party, whether he or she is the party specified in the contract or not, shall be entitled to reasonable attorney's fees in addition to costs and necessary disbursements) as the prevailing party in the litigation, although it was not a signatory to the original listing contract between the seller and the seller's broker (183 Cal. App. 3d 1299, 1314-1317) .

Montgomery v. Bio-Med Specialties, Inc. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 1292, 228 Cal. Rptr. 709 , was an action against a corporation and two of its officers on a promissory note in which two of the principal shareholders intervened to insure a good-faith defense of the corporation. The interveners prevailed in the action and were awarded attorney's fees under the terms of the note and Civ. Code § 1717. Plaintiffs appealed, contending that interveners were not entitled to attorney's fees because they were not signatories to the promissory note. They argued that the rule in Reynolds Metals Co. v. Alperson (1979) 25 Cal. 3d 124, 158 Cal. Rptr. 1, 599 P.2d 83 (discussed in § 60.446[3][a]), did not apply because in that case the nonsignatory was alleged to be the alter ego of the signatory. Rejecting this argument and affirming the judgment, the appellate court said that the relevant consideration in awarding attorney's fees under Civ.

Code § 1717 is whether the plaintiff has forced the defendant to wage a defense against liability for attorney's fees and that, because plaintiffs would have been entitled to attorney's fees from interveners had plaintiffs prevailed against the corporation, the interveners were entitled to recover their fees incurred in successfully defending against that claim (183 Cal. App. 3d 1292, 1295-1296) .

[b] Losing Party Not Signatory to Contract

In Exarhos v. Exarhos (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 898 , a grandson filed a complaint against a bank, alleging that before her death, his grandmother maintained savings and checking accounts with the bank, that she created a revocable living trust pursuant to the terms of which he was the named beneficiary of the savings account, and that he was pursuing the action against the bank as her successor in interest. He claimed the bank mishandled the accounts, which had originally been opened pursuant to a written deposit agreement. Along with the complaint, the grandson filed a declaration pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 377.32 asserting that he was his grandmother's successor in interest to the causes of action asserted in the complaint and that a proceeding was pending in California for administration of her estate, although no personal representative had yet been appointed for the estate. The trial court granted the bank's demurrer on the ground that the grandson was precluded from pursuing the action as her successor in interest because there was a pending probate proceeding. The court then granted the bank's motion for attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 pursuant to the agreement, which included a signature card with an attorney's fee provision (159 Cal. App. 4th 898, 900-902) . The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that the grandson was liable to bank for attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717. By acting as his deceased grandmother's successor in interest, he stepped into her position. His action was premised on the agreement between the bank and his grandmother, which contained an attorney's fees provision, and, if the bank had prevailed in an action brought by his grandmother decedent premised on the agreement, the bank would have been entitled to an award of attorney's fees (159 Cal. App. 4th 898, 903-907) . The grandmother's estate, rather than the grandson, was not liable for fees, because there was no basis on which to conclude that any judgment the grandson might obtain in the action against the bank would become the property of the estate, rather than of the grandson (159 Cal. App. 4th 898, 908-909) .

In California Wholesale Material Supply, Inc. v. Norm Wilson & Sons, Inc. (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 598, 117 Cal. Rptr. 2d 390 , a drywall subcontractor executed a financing statement in favor of its supplier granting the supplier a security interest in its accounts receivable. The subcontractor had previously given its accounts receivable as security for a bank loan. The subcontractor entered into contracts with the general contractor, and the general contractor became indebted to the subcontractor so that its accounts receivable included money the subcontractor was owed by the general contractor. After the subcontractor defaulted on its obligation to its supplier, the supplier sought to have the general contractor pay directly to it the money owed to the subcontractor. The general contractor advised the supplier that its demand letter was insufficient to constitute notice under the Commercial Code and it also appeared that the bank had a senior position. The general contractor then paid the bank's assignee the money owed to the subcontractor on the assignee's demand. The supplier filed a collection action against the general contractor, alleging breach of former Commercial Code § 9502, setting forth the collection rights of a secured party. Judgment was entered in favor of the general contractor because it had properly paid the full amount it owed the subcontractor to the bank's assignee. The general contractor then moved to recover attorney's fees incurred in defending the action as the prevailing party in a collection action and as the prevailing party in the litigation pursuant to the underlying subcontract, which contained an attorney's fees provision, and that the supplier stood in the subcontractor's shoes as its assignee relative to its claim for the money due. The trial court denied the motion, finding that the action did not arise out of the subcontract, but out of the security agreement between the supplier and the subcontractor (96 Cal. App. 4th 598, 601-604) .

The Court of Appeal reversed and remanded for a determination of the amount of fees to be awarded to the general contractor. The court held that the action arose out of the subcontract between the general contractor and subcontractor, which had been assigned to the supplier pursuant to the security agreement (96 Cal. App. 4th 598, 605-606) . The court then held that the supplier was liable for attorney's fees pursuant to the subcontract even though it was not a signatory to it. The court held that when a nonsignatory plaintiff sues a signatory defendant, the defendant is entitled to attorney's fees only if the plaintiff would have been entitled to attorney's fees had it prevailed, and that in this case, the general contractor would have been liable to the supplier for attorney's fees pursuant to the subcontract had the supplier prevailed (96 Cal. App. 4th 598, 608) . The court then held that there was no merit to the contention that as a mere holder of a security interest the supplier could not be liable for attorney's fees, and that in denying the motion, the trial court overlooked the relationship between the security agreement and the underlying subcontract (96 Cal. App. 4th 598, 609-610) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.447

§ 60.447 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Unenforceable

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Unenforceable

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE, EVEN THOUGH THE CONTRACT ON WHICH THE ACTION WAS BASED IS UNENFORCEABLE.

Fees Recoverable Although Contract Unenforceable. In an action based on a contract, the prevailing party who seeks attorney's fees under the agreement is entitled to recover his or her own fees pursuant to Section 1717 of the Civil Code whether or not the contract is enforceable (Manier v. Anaheim Business Center Co. (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 507, 207 Cal. Rptr. 508 ; Jones v. Drain (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 490, 196 Cal. Rptr. 827).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the general memorandum set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the contract is unenforceable.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fees Recoverable Although Contract Unenforceable

Manier v. Anaheim Business Center Co. (1984) 161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 207 Cal. Rptr. 508 , was an action to obtain specific performance of a contract to sell property. Plaintiff buyers and defendant sellers entered into a written agreement for the sale of commercial property. The signator for defendants added a handwritten note to the agreement that conditioned the defendants' acceptance on plaintiffs' execution of escrow instructions satisfactory to defendants. Plaintiffs did not initial the addition. Defendants canceled the agreement after plaintiffs failed to obtain financing, and plaintiffs brought suit, claiming the defendants agreed to assist them in obtaining financing. The trial court found in favor of defendants. Defendants sought to recover attorney's fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717. The court found that the handwritten changes constituted a counteroffer that plaintiffs never accepted. Therefore, there was no contract and, consequently, no right to attorney's fees. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeals reversed the order denying attorney's fees, and remanded the matter to the trial court for a determination of defendants' attorney's fees at trial and on appeal (161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 509) . Plaintiffs contended that Civ. Code § 1717 does not apply because the court ruled that no enforceable contract existed between the parties, and mere allegations by a plaintiff of entitlement to attorney's fees are insufficient to invoke Civ. Code § 1717 if the court determines that the contract never existed (161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 505) . However, the existence of an enforceable agreement is not a prerequisite to an award of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717. Relief under that section is available even if the prevailing party succeeds on the theory that there was never an enforceable contract (161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 505-506) . The court discussed conflicting rulings in various districts and panels of the court of appeal. It said that the better rule holds that, in an action based on a contract, the prevailing party is entitled to recover fees pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717 if the opposing party seeks attorney's fees under an agreement even if the contract is not enforceable (161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 507) . Alternatively, plaintiffs contended that Civ. Code § 1717 does not apply because they would not have been entitled to attorney's fees had they prevailed. Citing Jones v. Drain (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 489, 196 Cal. Rptr. 827 (discussed below), the court held that the pleadings, and not the evidence adduced at trial, determine whether a party is entitled to attorney's fees for the purpose of invoking Civ. Code § 1717 (161 Cal. App. 3d 503, 508) .

Jones v. Drain (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 196 Cal. Rptr. 827 , was an action brought by a real estate broker and its purchaser against sellers of property and another broker, to obtain relief from defendants' refusal to sell the property. Sellers entered into an exclusive listing contract with defendant broker to sell their home. Plaintiff broker orally agreed with defendant broker to act as a cooperative broker and find a purchaser for the property. Sellers accepted an oral offer from a purchaser, and agreed to reduce the agreement to writing at a later time. Meanwhile, a purchaser obtained by plaintiff broker made written offers to sellers to buy the property, which sellers rejected because of their prior agreement to sell. Plaintiff broker and its purchaser filed suit against sellers and defendant broker, alleging housing discrimination, misrepresentation, and breach of contract, and requesting declaratory relief. The trial court found in favor of defendants on the first two causes of action, and granted summary judgment in favor of defendants on the third and fourth causes of action. Plaintiffs appealed the fourth cause of action, and the court of appeal affirmed. Defendant sellers appealed the trial court's order taxing the attorney's fees request from its memorandum of costs.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the matter to the trial court for determination of attorney's fees and costs (149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 490) . Defendants contended that since plaintiffs brought suit for breach of a contract that contained an attorney's fee provision, defendants were entitled to fees as the prevailing party, pursuant to Civ. Code § 1717. Plaintiffs asserted that defendants should not be allowed to recover their costs because the trial court found, as a matter of law, that no contract existed between plaintiff broker and defendant sellers (149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 486) . The court noted that if plaintiffs had prevailed in their cause of action, they would have been entitled to attorney's fees. However, even though plaintiffs possessed no evidence to support their contract cause of action, they alleged sufficient facts in their pleadings to force defendants to defend the action (149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 489) . It is inequitable to deny the recovery of attorney's fees and costs to a party that successfully defends an action on a contract that allows attorney's fees, simply because the plaintiff filed a frivolous lawsuit (149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 489-490) . Consequently, a prevailing defendant sued for breach of a contract that allows for attorney's fees is entitled to recover its own attorney's fees and costs therefor, even though the trial court finds no contract existed (149 Cal. App. 3d 484, 490) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.448

§ 60.448 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Rescinded or Canceled

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Contract Rescinded or Canceled

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE, BECAUSE THE ACTION IS DEEMED TO BE AN ACTION ON THE CONTRACT FOR THE PURPOSES OF THAT SECTION, EVEN THOUGH IT WAS AN ACTION FOR _____ [RESCISSION OF or CANCELLATION] OF THE CONTRACT.

Rescission or Cancellation. An action _____ [based on rescission or for cancellation] of an agreement[, even on the ground that the contract was induced by fraud], is an action "on the contract" for purposes of determining entitlement to attorney's fees under Section 1717 of the Civil Code. Thus, if the _____ [rescinded or canceled] agreement contains an attorney's fee provision that does not limit the recovery of attorney's fees to particular types of action on the contract, the prevailing party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees (Star Pacific Investments, Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 459-463, 176 Cal. Rptr. 546).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the action was to rescind or cancel the contract.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission or Cancellation

Star Pacific Investments, Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 176 Cal. Rptr. 546 , was an action for cancellation of an "override" agreement made in connection with the assignment of an option to purchase real property. Although the action was labeled "for cancellation," the court of appeal said in a footnote that it was actually for rescission (121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 461 n.11). Plaintiff also sought to cancel or rescind the note and deed of trust given in payment of the agreement. The agreement did not contain an attorney fee provision, but the note and deed of trust did. On the basis of intentional misrepresentations that it owned an interest in the option, defendant negotiated the override that obligated plaintiff to pay defendant a fee for each acre that was purchased through the exercise of the option. Plaintiff brought the action when it learned that defendant had no interest in the option at the time it negotiated the override. Judgment for plaintiff was based on both the intentional misrepresentations and on failure of consideration, and included an award of attorney's fees. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court first disposed of defendant's claim that the action was a tort action grounded in fraud. The court said it was well known that a defrauded party has an election to pursue a contract remedy, consisting of restitution based on rescission, or a tort remedy by affirming the contract and seeking damages. Plaintiff here had not elected the tort remedy (121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 460-461) . The court next considered the attorney fee provision in the note, which limited recovery of fees to suits for collection of the note. Such a limitation is valid (121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 462-463) . The attorney fee provision in the deed of trust, however, applied to "any action in which the beneficiary of the deed appears." The court concluded that the provision in the deed of trust provided the basis for recovery of plaintiff 's attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 (121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 463) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission or Cancellation

In Super 7 Motel Associates v. Wang (1993) 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 193 , a buyer of real estate sued the seller and its broker in an action for rescission based on fraud. The buyer recovered damages against the seller but not against the broker, and the trial court awarded the broker attorney fees under a fee provision in the buy-sell agreement. The appellate court found that the broker was not entitled to attorney fees because the broker was a nonsignatory to the buy-sell agreement, and therefore the broker's liability in the rescission claim was premised on a tort (his own fraud) and not on the contract (16 Cal. App. 4th 541, 549-550) .

The trial court in Leaf v. Phil Rauch, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 120 Cal. Rptr. 749 , awarded plaintiff/purchaser restitution and rescission of a motor vehicle conditional sales contract based on major defects and malfunctions and breach of warranties but declined to award plaintiff attorney's fees. The contract at issue was governed by Civ. Code §§ 2981-2984.4, and in particular Civ. Code § 2983.4, which provides for an award of reasonable attorney's fees to the prevailing party in any action on a conditional sales contract subject to the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 2981-2984.4. In reversing the judgment to provide for plaintiff 's recovery of attorney's fees, the court of appeal noted that Civ. Code §§ 1717, 1811.1, and 2983.4 all contain the same language. The court cited Morgan v. Reasor Corp. (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 881, 896-897, 73 Cal. Rptr. 398, 447 P.2d 638 , which held that Civ. Code § 1811.1 supports an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party in an action for declaratory relief, for the proposition that no limitation on the type of action covered by Civ. Code § 1811.1 was intended so long as the subject matter involved a contract subject to the provisions of Civ. Code §§ 1801-1812.20. Since identical language should be given the same meaning in statutes intended to accomplish the same purpose, the court concluded that Civ. Code § 2983.4 supports an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party in an action based on rescission of contract (47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 377-379) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.449

§ 60.449 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Enforcement of Rescission of Contract

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Enforcement of Rescission of Contract

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE, BECAUSE THE ACTION IS DEEMED TO BE AN ACTION ON THE CONTRACT FOR THE PURPOSES OF THAT SECTION, EVEN THOUGH IT WAS AN ACTION FOR SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT OF AN AGREEMENT TO RESCIND THE CONTRACT.

Specific Performance of Rescission Agreement. In an action to enforce the rescission of an agreement containing a provision for attorney's fees which does not limit the recovery of such fees to any particular form of action involving the contract, the prevailing party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under to Section 1717 of the Civil Code (Hastings v. Matlock (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 826, 840-842, 217 Cal. Rptr. 856).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the action was to enforce a rescission of the contract.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Performance of Rescission Agreement

Plaintiffs in Hastings v. Matlock (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 826, 217 Cal. Rptr. 856 , agreed to sell to defendants land and a home to be built by husband/contractor. Both the contract of sale and a rental agreement under which defendants went into possession contained provisions for recovery of attorney's fees. The provision in the contract of sale applied if any party to the agreement instituted legal action against any other party. The provision in the rental agreement applied if plaintiffs were required to obtain the services of an attorney to enforce the terms of the agreement or to recover possession of the premises. Disputes arose between the parties prior to the close of escrow and litigation was commenced by plaintiffs. During the course of that litigation, the parties negotiated a settlement rescinding the transaction and restoring possession to plaintiffs. When it came time to sign the settlement agreement, defendants refused. Plaintiffs' motion to enforce the settlement agreement was granted, but judgment based on that motion was reversed on appeal for error in enforcing an out-of-court settlement by means of a nonstatutory "speaking motion." On remittitur, the pleadings were amended to add a cause of action for specific performance of the settlement agreement. Pursuant to stipulation of the parties, trial was bifurcated, and the issue of the oral settlement agreement was tried first. Judgment was for plaintiffs for specific performance of the oral settlement agreement attorney's fees. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. Defendants first contended that the subject of attorney's fees was never discussed during the settlement negotiations. The court of appeal found evidence to the contrary. Plaintiffs' attorney said he had directed that the attorney fee provision be inserted in the written settlement agreement because they were settling disputes under agreements containing attorney's fee provisions. Defendants' attorney was present when that direction was given (171 Cal. App. 3d 826, 840) . The court, citing Leaf v. Phil Rauch, Inc. (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 371, 377-379, 120 Cal. Rptr. 749 (discussed in § 60.448[4]), noted that Civ. Code § 2983.4, which governs contracts under the Automobile Sales Finance Act (Civ. Code §§ 2981-2984.4) and applies to actions "on the contract" similar to Civ. Code § 1717, has been held to support an award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party in an action for rescission of the contract. Also citing Star Pacific Investments, Inc. v. Oro Hills Ranch, Inc. (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 447, 463, 176 Cal. Rptr. 546 (discussed in § 60.448[3]), the court concluded that an action to enforce rescission of an agreement containing a provision for attorney's fees that does not limit the recovery of such fees to any particular form of action involving the contract is an action "on the contract" within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1717 and therefore supports the award of attorney's fees to the prevailing party (171 Cal. App. 3d 826, 840-842) . Furthermore, the court said, the provision in the rental agreement allowing attorney's fees in an action to recover possession of the premises provided an additional basis for the award of attorney's fees (171 Cal. App. 3d 826, 842) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.450

§ 60.450 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal After Determination on the Merits

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal After Determination on the Merits

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

DEFENDANT IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES PURSUANT TO SECTION 1717 OF THE CIVIL CODE BECAUSE, EVEN THOUGH PLAINTIFF VOLUNTARILY DISMISSED THE ACTION, A DETERMINATION WAS MADE ON THE MERITS.

Attorney's Fees After Determination Made on the Merits. As a general rule, when the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses an action on a contract with an attorney's fees provision, there is no prevailing party for the purpose of recovery of attorney's fees (Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2)). However, when a determination is made on the merits of the case before the action is dismissed on the plaintiff's motion, the plaintiff forfeits the unlimited right to dismiss without bearing attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717(a) (Kelley v. Bredelis (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1819, 1830-1831, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use with the form set out in § 60.440, in support of a motion under Civ. Code § 1717 to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees under that section, when the action was voluntarily dismissed after a determination on the merits.

See also § 60.440[2][c] for related chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees After Determination Made on the Merits

After a judicial arbitration award in the defendant's favor in Kelley v. Bredelis (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1819, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 536 , the plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the action. The defendant moved for attorney's fees, and the trial court found the defendant was a prevailing party on a contract with an attorney's fees provision for the purpose of Civ. Code § 1717. It awarded attorney's fees even though Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2) provides that there is no prevailing party for the purpose of awarding attorney's fees when the plaintiff voluntarily dismisses the action. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that if a party chooses to wait until after there has been a determination of the issues on the merits, then the party has forfeited the unlimited right to dismiss without consequences. Civ. Code § 1717 is triggered when there is a determination of the issues on the merits in the defendant's favor, and the defendant becomes the prevailing party for the purpose of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717 (45 Cal. App. 4th 1819, 1830-1831) . The court also held the defendant could recover attorney's fees under the broader provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032, 1033.5 (45 Cal. App. 4th 1819, 1832-1833) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 6 Chapters 60-69 COSTS---to---DECLARATORY RELIEF
CHAPTER 60 COSTS
PART II. FORMS
B. Award of Attorney's Fees
4. Motion for Award of Attorney's Fees Under Civ. Code § 1717; Contract Provision

6-60 California Points & Authorities § 60.451

§ 60.451 Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal of Noncontractual Claims

[1] FORM Supporting Motion to Establish Entitlement to Fees in Action on Contract Under Civ. Code § 1717--Voluntary Dismissal of Noncontractual Claims

[For caption, see § 60.440, with which this form should be combined.]

DEFENDANT IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER THE REASONABLE AMOUNT OF HIS/HER/ITS ATTORNEY'S FEES, NOTWITHSTANDING PLAINTIFF'S VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL OF THE ACTION, BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS A NONCONTRACTUAL CLAIM ARISING FROM A CONTRACT PROVIDING FOR SUCH RECOVERY, AND HE/SHE/IT IS THE PARTY PREVAILING ON SUCH NONCONTRACTUAL CLAIM.

Voluntary Dismissal Does Not Preclude Recovery of Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending Noncontractual Claims. Contractual attorney fee provisions are generally enforceable in voluntary pretrial dismissal cases except as barred by Civil Code Section 1717. A defendants in such a case may recover attorney's fees as costs to the extent the fees were incurred defending noncontractual claims asserted in the action, and Civil Code Section 1717 does not bar recovery of these fees because that section applies only to bar, in the case of a voluntary dismissal, fees incurred defending contractual claims (Gogri v. Jack in the Box Inc. (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 255, 82 Cal. Rptr. 3d 629).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted, in an action on a contract, in support of a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5) to determine the party prevailing on the contract for purposes of determining which party is entitled to an award of attorney's fees pursuant to a provision in the contract providing for recovery of such fees. It is for use by a defendant when the plaintiff has voluntarily dismissed the action, for the recovery of attorney's fees incurred in defending tort or other noncontractual claims in that action that are covered under the contractual provision for fees.

[b] Argument

The basis for argument in this case is that, in the case of a voluntary dismissal, defendant is the prevailing party under Code Civ. Proc. § 1032(a)(4), and may recover attorney's fees allowable under a contract provisions for fees except as barred by Civ. Code § 1717(b)(2). The latter section applies only to contractual claims, and hence does not bar recovery in the case of attorney's fees incurred in defending noncontractual claims that are ultimately dismissed voluntarily, so long as the contract provision for fees otherwise permits the recovery of such fees [Santisas v. Goodin (1998) 17 Cal. 4th 599, 622-623, 71 Cal. Rptr. 2d 830, 951 P.2d 399 , discussed in § 60.451[3][a]].

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See also § 60.440[2][b] for discussion of evidentiary support.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed legal background, research guides, and forms of notices of motions, supporting declarations, and orders relating to the recovery of attorney's fees under Civ. Code § 1717, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

This form may also be combined, in an appropriate case, with the memoranda set out in § 60.480 et seq., when a motion to determine the party prevailing on the contract is combined with a motion to fix the reasonable amount of fees to be awarded as an element of costs [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(c)(5)].

If there are other theories upon which the moving party may recovery an award of attorney's fees, memoranda based on these theories may be combined with this form in the alternative [see § 60. 300 et seq. (common fund exception), § 60.340 et seq. (substantial benefit exception), and § 60.370 et seq. (award based on private attorney general theory under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.5)].

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

For opposing memoranda, see § 60.463.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Voluntary Dismissal Does Not Preclude Recovery of Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending Noncontractual Claims

