[c] Waiver of Privileges and Work Product Protection

The party from whom the exchange is sought may not refuse to comply with the exchange on the grounds of privilege or work product, because by demanding and obtaining a report of a physical or mental examination under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.610, that party waives in the pending action, and in any other action involving the same controversy, any privilege, as well as any protection for work product under Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.010 et seq. that the party or other examinee may have regarding reports and writings as well as the testimony of every other physician, psychologist, or licensed health care practitioner who has examined or may thereafter examine the party or other examinee. Privileges and work product protection are also waived by taking the deposition of the examiner other than under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470 (expert witness list) [Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.630]. However, nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. requires the party to disclose the identity of an expert consulted by an attorney in order to make the certification required in an action for professional negligence under Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30 or 411.35 [Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010(b)]. For memoranda relating to privilege and work product protection, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion related to demands for and exchange of reports after the taking of physical and mental examinations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 87 DISCOVERY: PHYSICAL AND MENTAL EXAMINATIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Motion to Compel Delivery of Examination Reports

8-87 California Points & Authorities § 87.53

§ 87.53 Supporting Motion for Order of Sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030]--Failure to Obey Order Compelling Delivery of Existing and Later Medical Reports in Exchange for Delivery of Reports Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.610 [Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order of Sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030]--Failure to Obey Order Compelling Delivery of Existing and Later Medical Reports in Exchange for Delivery of Reports Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.610 [Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ORDER OF SANCTIONS FOR FAILURE TO OBEY ORDER COMPELLING DELIVERY OF EXISTING AND LATER MEDICAL REPORTS
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE _____ [specify sanctions sought, e.g., ISSUE AND MONETARY]

SANCTIONS AGAINST _____ [name] FOR HIS/HERS/ITS FAILURE TO OBEY THE ORDER COMPELLING HIM/HER/IT TO DELIVER ALL EXISTING AND LATER MEDICAL REPORTS OF PREVIOUS AND SUBSEQUENT EXAMINATIONS OF _____ [name of examinee] PERTAINING TO THE CONDITION(S) IN ISSUE PURSUANT TO SECTION 2032.650 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, AND SHOULD EXCLUDE AT TRIAL THE TESTIMONY OF ANY HEALTH CARE PRACTITIONER WHOSE REPORT HAS NOT BEEN PROVIDED.

A. Court May Make Orders That Are Just. When a party has demanded a medical report under Section 2032.610 of the Code of Civil Procedure, but fails in exchange to deliver to the other party on whom the demand is made a copy of any existing or later report of any examination of the same condition by any other physician, psychologist, or licensed health care practitioner, and the court thereafter orders the failing party to deliver the existing and later reports pursuant to Section 2032.640 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and the failing party fails to obey the order compelling delivery, the court may make those orders that are just, including the imposition of an issue sanction, an evidence sanction, or a terminating sanction under Section 2023.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650(c)).

B. Exclusion of Trial Testimony of Examiner. The court shall exclude at trial the testimony of any health care practitioner whose report has not been provided by a party ordered to do so by the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650(c)).

C. Imposition of Monetary Sanction. In lieu of or in addition to any other sanction imposed pursuant to Sections 2023.010 et seq. and 2032.650(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, the court may impose a monetary sanction under Section 2023.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650(c)).

[Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of issue, evidence, terminating, and monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities is for use in support of a motion for sanctions for failure of a party to obey a court order compelling him or her to deliver medical reports pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.640, after that party has complied with a demand for delivery of medical reports pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.610 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.650]. For a form of motion for an order compelling delivery, see § 87.52.

This form should be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of an issue sanction, evidence sanction, or terminating sanction under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(b)-(d) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.12 et seq.]. If a monetary sanction is sought is addition to or in lieu of these sanctions, the foregoing form should be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel might wish to insert argument in favor of one particular type of sanction over another. However, counsel need not set forth facts showing that the party against whom the monetary sanction is to be imposed acted without substantial justification [cf. former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) effectively places that burden on the person against whom the sanction is to be imposed, by requiring the court to impose a monetary sanction when it is expressly authorized unless it finds that there was substantial justification or that other circumstances would make the monetary sanction unjust.

For a discussion of the demand for delivery of medical reports pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.610, see § 87.50[2][c].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and discussion related to the imposition of sanctions for failure to obey an order compelling delivery of medical reports and identification of examiners, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 197, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION

8-88 California Points & Authorities 88.syn

§ 88.syn Synopsis to Chapter 88: DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION

§ 88.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 88.02 Governing Law

[1] California Civil Discovery Act and Related Law

[2] Provisions Governing Exchange of Expert Witness Information

[3] Case Law Decided Under Prior Discovery Acts

§ 88.03 Discovery of Experts Other Than Through Exchange Procedures Under Discovery Act

§ 88.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 88.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Memoranda

§§ 88.06-88.09 [Reserved]

§ 88.10 Supporting Motion for Protective Order Regarding Expert Witness Exchange [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 88.11 Supporting Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness Providing Deposition Testimony When Expert's Customary Fee is Unreasonable [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Amount of Fee

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 88.12 Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Procedures If Order Granted

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration

[b] Augmentation Permitted to Cure Mistake, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect If Opposing Party Will Not Be Prejudiced and Statutory Procedures Are Satisfied

[c] Augmentation Permitted After Motion for New Trial Is Granted

§ 88.13 Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Submit Tardy Expert Witness Information [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Terms of Order

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 88.14 Supporting Motion for Order for Relief When Party Makes Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witnesses Information Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 Is Available in Discovery Proceedings

[b] Trial Court's Order Will Be Upheld If There Has Been No Abuse of Discretion

[c] Objection Is Not Proper Response to Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relief Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 Is Available in Discovery Proceedings

§§ 88.15through 88.19 [Reserved]

§ 88.20 Opposing Motion to Compel Discovery--Discovery of Writings and Reports of Expert Witness Improper Under Specified Conditions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210, 2034.270]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings That Are Not Relevant Is Not Permitted

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings Not Available Under Exchange Procedure If Expert Not Designated as Trial Witness

§ 88.21 Opposing Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness--Reasonable and Customary Fee for Testimony by Expert Witness Is Not Limited by Fee Charged Retaining Party for Nontestimonial Services [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fee Charged for Deposition Testimony of Expert Witness May Exceed Fee Charged Retaining Party for Consultative Services by That Expert

§ 88.22 Opposing Motion For Payment of Opponent's Treating Physician's Deposition Fees As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7)--Treating Physician's Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Witness Fees Incurred in Deposing Opponent's Treating Physicians Are Not Recoverable As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7)

[b] Treating Physician's Deposition Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430

§ 88.23 Opposing Motion for Protective Order--Timely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information After Action Reset for Trial Following Mistrial [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.220]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand Served More Than 70 Days Before Second Trial Date Is Timely

§§ 88.24through 88.29 [Reserved]

§ 88.30 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Expert Who Was Designated by Another Party and Deposed May Testify

§ 88.31 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Sufficient Compliance With Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. or Additional Procedures Available

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expert Witness List Providing Brief Statement of General Substance of Expert's Opinion Is Sufficient

[b] Exclusion of Expert Testimony Is Not Mandatory When Failure to Comply With Statutory Requirements Is Not "Unreasonable"

[c] Expert May Testify Regarding Undisclosed Substance If Opposing Counsel Refuses Court's Offer of Recess to Depose Expert

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expert Witness List Providing Brief Statement of General Substance of Expert's Opinion Is Sufficient

§ 88.32 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Failure to File Expert Declaration Does Not Preclude Testimony of Designated Expert Who Is Treating Physician

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Expert Witness Declaration Is Required for Treating Physician Who Is Not Retained Expert Witness

[b] Treating Physician Testifying as Percipient Witness May Provide Expert Opinion Testimony

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Expert Witness Declaration Is Required for Treating Physician Who Is Not Retained Expert Witness

§ 88.33 Supporting Contention That Evidence From Nondesignated Expert Witness Be Admissible in Pretrial Proceeding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion for Failure to Designate Expert Is Not Applicable to Pretrial Proceedings

§§ 88.34through 88.39 [Reserved]

§ 88.40 Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Expert May Not Testify

[b] Expert May Not Testify If No Expert Witness Declaration Provided

[c] Expert May Not Testify Beyond Scope of Testimony Described in Expert Witness Declaration

[d] Expert Listed on Supplemental List May Not Be Substituted

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expert May Not Testify Beyond Scope of Testimony Described in Expert Witness Declaration

§ 88.41 Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)] Is Not Applicable--Party May Not Offer Contrary Opinion As Impeachment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Non-Designated Expert May Testify Concerning Facts Underlying Another Expert's Opinion but May Not Express Contrary Opinion

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.01

§ 88.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter includes memoranda relating to civil discovery by means of demands to another party for an exchange of information relating to expert witnesses. Forms in Part II include the following:

- Subpart A has memoranda relating to various motions arising in the context of an exchange of expert witness information, including those supporting [§ 88.10] and opposing [§ 88.22] a motion for a protective order, supporting [§ 88.11] and opposing [§ 88.21] a motion to set compensation of an expert witness, supporting motions to augment or amend expert witness information [§ 88.12] or to submit tardy expert witness information [§ 88.13], supporting a motion for relief when an untimely demand for an exchange of information is due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect [§ 88.14], and opposing a motion to compel discovery of certain expert witness information [§ 88.20].

- Subpart B has memoranda relating to the effect of noncompliance with information exchange procedures, supporting [§ 88.30 et seq]. and opposing [§ 88.40] the contention that an expert be permitted to testify at trial, and supporting [§ 88.33] a contention that an expert witness's testimony be admissible in a pretrial proceeding.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsExpert Witness DiscoveryCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMotions to CompelCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.02

§ 88.02 Governing Law

[1] California Civil Discovery Act and Related Law

Civil discovery in California is governed primarily by the California Civil Discovery Act, codified at Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016.010 et seq.-2036.010 et seq. Discovery in limited civil cases is further governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 94 and 95. Statewide rules of court relating to discovery papers and discovery motions are set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1000, 3.1345, 3.1346, 3.1347, and 3.1348.

[2] Provisions Governing Exchange of Expert Witness Information

Civil discovery by demand to a party for an exchange of expert witness information is governed primarily by Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. provides for a simultaneous, mutual exchange of expert witness information; it does not permit a unilateral exchange (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.230, 2034.250, 2019.010(f); Hernandez v. Superior Court (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 285, 297, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 883 (case management order requiring unilateral disclosure of identity, curriculum vitae, and opinion concerning causation of each medical expert who would support plaintiffs' wrongful deathclaims was not proper exercise of trial court's power to manage complex litigation)). The exchange of such information under this code section is authorized in limited civil cases pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 94(e).

Discovery relating to expert witnesses may raise issues relating to the attorney-client privilege set out in Evid. Code § 950 et seq. and the attorney work product protection set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 2018.010 et seq. Points and authorities relating to the attorney-client privilege and the work product protection are set out in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations , Subparts B (§ 81.60 et seq.) and F (§ 81.200 et seq.).

In addition, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470 with specified exceptions, incorporates the procedures of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010 et seq.-2028.010 et seq. for taking oral and written depositions of a listed trial expert witness. For points and authorities relating to deposition procedures generally, see Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions .

Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. does not apply to exchanges of lists of experts and valuation data in eminent domain proceedings under Code Civ. Proc. § 1258.010 et seq. [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010]. For points and authorities relating to eminent domain proceedings generally, see Ch. 95, Eminent Domain .

[3] Case Law Decided Under Prior Discovery Acts

The Civil Discovery Act was passed in 2004 and became effective July 1, 2005. It repealed and renumbered the Civil Discovery Act of 1986 but did not substantively change the law of civil discovery [Stats. 2004, ch. 182 §§ 22, 23, 61]. Thus cases decided under the 1986 Act remain controlling authority. A considerable body of case law interpreted the discovery provisions of the Discovery Act of 1956 (former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016-2037.9), which preceded the 1986 Act. Although the 1986 Act, which became operative July 1, 1987, implemented numerous changes in the prior law, it also continued provisions of the prior law in many other instances, or even codified decisions interpreting the prior law. Decisions construing this prior law are therefore cited as persuasive, rather than controlling, authority to the extent that they are consistent with current provisions [see In re Marriage of Skelley (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 365, 369, 134 Cal. Rptr. 197, 556 P.2d 297] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsExpert Witness DiscoveryCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersAttorney-Client PrivilegeCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersWork ProductGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.03

§ 88.03 Discovery of Experts Other Than Through Exchange Procedures Under Discovery Act

Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. provides a comprehensive system that may be used by parties to a civil action who wish to discover information concerning the opposing party's expert trial witnesses. However, this provision does not provide the exclusive means by which discovery of expert witness information may be obtained. Presumably, if neither party initiates a demand for an exchange of expert trial witness information, normal discovery procedures, such as those applying to depositions in general, will apply. Under rules developed prior to the advent of the expert exchange procedure, a party was generally entitled to depose an opposing party's expert if the opposing side planned to use the expert to testify at trial [see Grimshaw v. Ford Motor Co. (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 757, 781, 174 Cal. Rptr. 348 ; Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 963, 93 Cal. Rptr. 719] . Nevertheless, it is probably preferable to use the procedures established by Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. to ensure a mutual exchange of information, especially in cases that may involve more than a minimum amount of expert testimony by either party.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsExpert Witness DiscoveryCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsWritten Depositions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.04

§ 88.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda filed in discovery motion proceedings may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in Subpart A of this chapter are designed to be included in a memorandum supporting or opposing a particular type of discovery motion, such as motion to compel discovery or a motion for a protective order.

In many cases it will be appropriate to combine the forms in Subpart A with additional memoranda set out in the related discovery chapters. In particular, they may be combined with the general memoranda for limiting or regulating discovery set out in Ch. 80, Discovery : Scope, Regulation, and Timing, or with the memoranda for limiting discovery based on the evidentiary privileges, work product protection, or other protective provisions found in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations . It may also be appropriate to modify these memoranda for use in a different procedural context, such as in a trial or appellate brief or office memoranda relating to discovery practice.

The forms included in Subpart B of this chapter are contention forms designed to be combined with other memoranda in a particular procedural context, such as memoranda supporting or opposing a motion in limine to exclude certain evidence at trial.

For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publicationto build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

127 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.05

§ 88.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For background discussion of forms of moving papers relating to civil discovery by demands for an exchange of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

[2] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting or opposing a motion to compel discovery based on general limiting or regulatory provisions of the Discovery Act, see Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing .

For memoranda supporting or opposing a motion to compel discovery on the ground that the matter sought to be discovered is privileged or is otherwise protected from disclosure, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .

For memoranda supporting or opposing a motion to compel discovery, or supporting or opposing a motion for protective order, in the context of another discovery method, see Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions , through Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

For memoranda relating to the use of demands for the production or inspection of tangible evidence in order to preserve evidence before an action is commenced or pending an appeal, see Ch. 89, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence .

For memoranda for use in seeking or opposing writs to review discovery orders, see Ch. 89A, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsExpert Witness DiscoveryCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil

ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMotions to CompelCivil ProcedureDiscoveryProtective Orders

128 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-88 California Points & Authorities §§ 88.06-88.09

[Reserved]

§§ 88.06[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.10

§ 88.10 Supporting Motion for Protective Order Regarding Expert Witness Exchange [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Protective Order Regarding Expert Witness Exchange [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER RE EXPERT WITNESS EXCHANGE AND FOR MONETARY SANCTION [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.030(a), 2034.250]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD ISSUE A PROTECTIVE ORDER _____ [specify order sought, e.g., THAT PLAINTIFF REDUCE THE LIST OF EMPLOYED OR RETAINED EXPERTS DESIGNATED ON HIS/HER/ITS LIST] BECAUSE GOOD CAUSE HAS BEEN SHOWN FOR THE ORDER AND BECAUSE _____ [specify grounds, e.g., DEFENDANT WOULD SUFFER UNWARRANTED ANNOYANCE AND OPPRESSION,

AND UNDUE BURDEN AND EXPENSE or specify other reason]. IF THE MOTION IS GRANTED, THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE A MONETARY SANCTION AGAINST _____ [name(s)] BECAUSE THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT _____ [HE/SHE/IT or THEY] ACTED WITH SUBSTANTIAL JUSTIFICATION OR THAT OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE THE IMPOSITION OF THE SANCTION UNJUST.

A. Protective Orders. A party who has been served with a demand to exchange information concerning expert trial witnesses may promptly move for a protective order. The court, for good cause shown, may make any order that justice requires to protect from unwarranted annoyance, embarrassment, oppression, or undue burden or expense (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250).

B. Types of Orders. The protective orders that the court may make under Section 2034.250 of the Code of Civil Procedure may include, but are not limited to, [one or more of] the following direction(s):

[EITHER]

That the demand be quashed because it was not timely served (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(1)).

[AND/OR]

That the date of exchange be earlier or later than that specified in the demand (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(2)).

[AND/OR]

That the exchange be made only on specified terms and conditions (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(3)).

[AND/OR]

That the production and exchange of any reports and writings of experts be made at a different place or at a different time than that specified in the demand (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(4)).

[AND/OR]

That, on a showing of exceptional hardship, the deposition of an expert, as described in Section 2034.210(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure, be taken at a place over 75 miles from the courthouse where the action is pending (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.420).

[AND/OR]

That some or all of the parties be divided into sides on the basis of their identity of interest in the issues in the action, and that the designation of any experts as described in Section 2034.210(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure be made by any side so created (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(5)).

[AND/OR]

That a party or a side reduce the list of employed or retained experts designated by that party or side under Section 2034.210(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(b)(6)).

[CONTINUE]

C. Court Must Impose Monetary Sanction Absent Specified Findings. The court must impose a monetary sanction under Section 2023.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully opposes a motion for a protective order, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.030(a), 2034.470(g)).

[When appropriate, include specific points and authorities relating to objections, privileges, or other grounds that provide the basis for "good cause." Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum of points and authorities is for use by a party who has been served with a demand to exchange information concerning expert trial witnesses to support a motion for a protective order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250]. The motion must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good-faith attempt at an informal resolution of each issue presented by it [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(a)]. This form should also be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11].

If the motion for a protective order is denied in whole or in part, the court may order that the party provide or permit the discovery against which protection was sought on terms and conditions that are just [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(c)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel's factual showing should demonstrate substantial justification for the motion in order to avoid a monetary sanction if the motion is denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250(d)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to protective orders regarding exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

130 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.11

§ 88.11 Supporting Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness Providing Deposition Testimony When Expert's Customary Fee is Unreasonable [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness Providing Deposition Testimony [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION SETTING COMPENSATION OF EXPERT WITNESS SOUGHT TO BE DEPOSED
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD ISSUE AN ORDER SETTING THE FEE OF _____ [name], AN EXPERT DESIGNATED ON THE EXPERT WITNESS LIST OF _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF], FOR PROVIDING DEPOSITION TESTIMONY BECAUSE THE EXPERT'S CUSTOMARY FEE IS UNREASONABLE. IF THE MOTION IS GRANTED, THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE A MONETARY SANCTION AGAINST _____ [name(s)] BECAUSE THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT _____ [HE/SHE/IT or THEY] ACTED WITH SUBSTANTIAL JUSTIFICATION OR THAT

OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE THE IMPOSITION OF THE SANCTION UNJUST.

A. Court May Set Expert's Compensation. The court is required to set the fee of the expert for providing deposition testimony pursuant to Sections 2034.410-2034.470 of the Code of Civil Procedure if it determines that the hourly or daily fee demanded by that expert is unreasonable, and if the moving party has made a reasonable and good-faith attempt at informally resolving the issue of the expert's fee (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470).

B. Court Must Impose Monetary Sanction Absent Specified Findings. The court must impose a monetary sanction under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 et seq. against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully opposes a motion to set the fee of an expert witness, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.030(a), 2034.250(d)).

[Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of memorandum of points and authorities is for use by a party participating in an exchange of information concerning expert trial witnesses pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. who wishes to depose a designated expert of the opposing party and deems that the expert's fee is unreasonable. The hourly and daily fee of an expert trial witness will be found in the expert witness declaration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)(5)].

The motion must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good-faith attempt at an informal resolution of the fee dispute [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(b)]. This form should also be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11].

In any attempt at an informal resolution, either the party or the expert must provide the other with (1) proof of the ordinary and customary fee actually charged and received by that expert for similar services provided outside the subject litigation, (2) the total number of times the presently demanded fee has ever been charged and received by that expert, and (3) the frequency and regularity with which the presently demanded fee has been charged and received by that expert within the two-year period preceding the hearing on the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(b)].

In addition to any other facts or evidence, the expert or the party designating the expert must provide, and the court's determination of the reasonableness of the fee must be based on, the proof described in the preceding paragraph. The court may also consider the ordinary and customary fees charged by similar experts for similar services within the relevant community, and any other factors the court deems necessary or appropriate to make its determination [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(e)].

On determining that the fee demanded by the expert is unreasonable, and based on the evidence and factors considered, the court must set the expert's fee [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(f)].

Notice of the motion supported by this form must be given to the expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(a)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should therefore specify the reasons why the expert's customary fee is unreasonable, for example, by demonstrating the customary fees in the area or county for obtaining expert opinions in the particular field of expertise in question. Counsel's factual showing should demonstrate substantial justification for the motion in order to avoid a monetary sanction if the motion is denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470(g)].

[c] Amount of Fee

> An expert witness's "customary" fee is not necessarily the "reasonable" fee a deposing party must pay for deposing another party's expert witness. When the deposing party believes the expert's fee is unreasonable, Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470 provides a mechanism for the court to resolve the dispute and set the fee. However, nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470 provides that the court's determination precludes that expert witness from charging or receiving from his or her client any balance or "unreasonable" portion of his or her fee. Accordingly, Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430 et seq. transfers to the deposing party only those fees of the expert that are "reasonable." Any excess fees remain a matter of negotiation and agreement between the expert and the party who designated that expert [Marsh v. Mountain Zephyr (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 289, 304, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 493] .

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

131 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.12

§ 88.12 Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO _____ [AUGMENT and/or AMEND] EXPERT _____ [WITNESS LIST and/or DECLARATION]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S MOTION TO _____ [AUGMENT or AMEND] _____ [HIS/HER/ITS EXPERT WITNESS LIST or THE DECLARATION OF _____ (name of expert)] BECAUSE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] ENGAGED IN A TIMELY EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION, THE _____ [ACTION or DEFENSE] OF THE OPPOSING PARTY WILL NOT BE PREJUDICED, THE

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION WAS EXCLUDED FROM THE ORIGINAL EXCHANGE DUE TO _____ [MISTAKE and/or INADVERTENCE and/or SURPRISE and/or NEGLECT or THE FACT THAT _____ (specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF) WOULD NOT, IN THE EXERCISE OF REASONABLE DILIGENCE, HAVE INCLUDED THE ADDITIONAL INFORMATION IN THE ORIGINAL EXCHANGE], AND ALL THE OTHER CONDITIONS FOR _____ [AUGMENTING or AMENDING] AN EXPERT _____ [WITNESS LIST or DECLARATION] HAVE BEEN SATISFIED. IF THE MOTION IS GRANTED, THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE A MONETARY SANCTION AGAINST _____ [name(s)] BECAUSE THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT _____ [HE/SHE/IT or THEY] ACTED WITH SUBSTANTIAL JUSTIFICATION OR THAT OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE THE IMPOSITION OF THE SANCTION UNJUST.

A. Motion to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration. On motion of any party who has engaged in a timely exchange of expert witness information, the court may grant leave to (1) augment that party's expert witness list and declaration by adding the name and address of any expert witness whom that party has subsequently retained, or (2) amend that party's expert witness declaration with respect to the general substance of the testimony that an expert previously designated is expected to give (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610(a); Richaud v. Jennings (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 81, 87-91, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790).

[EITHER]

B. Augmentation Permitted If Moving Party Did Not Fail to Exercise Reasonable Diligence, Opposing Party Will Not Be Prejudiced, and Statutory Procedures Satisfied. The court shall grant leave to augment or amend an expert witness list or declaration if it determines that any party opposing the motion will not be prejudiced in maintaining the party's action or defense on the merits, and that the moving party (1) would not in the exercise of reasonable diligence have determined to call that expert witness or decided to offer the different or additional testimony of the expert, (2) has sought leave to augment or amend promptly after deciding to call the expert or to offer the different or additional testimony, and (3) has promptly thereafter served a copy of the proposed expert witness information concerning the expert or the testimony described in Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260 on all other parties who have appeared in the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260).

[AND/OR]

C. Augmentation Permitted to Cure Mistake, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect If Opposing Party Will Not Be Prejudiced and Statutory Procedures Are Satisfied. The court shall grant leave to augment or amend an expert witness list or declaration if it determines that any party opposing the motion will not be prejudiced in maintaining the party's action or defense on the merits, and that the moving party (1) failed to determine to call that expert witness or to offer the different or additional testimony of the expert as a result of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, (2) has sought leave to augment or amend promptly after deciding to call the expert or to offer the different or additional testimony, and (3) has promptly thereafter served a copy of the proposed expert witness information concerning the expert or the testimony, described in Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, on all other parties who have appeared in the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260; Dickison v. Howen (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1471, 1476-1480, 270 Cal. Rptr. 188 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f), (k)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Augmentation Permitted After Motion for New Trial Is Granted. If the trial court grants a defendant's motion for a new trial after the plaintiff has rejected a reduction in damages, the court must grant the plaintiff's motion to designate new expert witnesses, provided the motion is made a sufficient time before the new trial to afford the defendant the opportunity to depose the new experts (Guzman v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 705, 708, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 585).

E. Court Must Impose Monetary Sanction Absent Specified Findings. The court must impose a monetary sanction under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2023.010 et seq. against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully opposes a motion to augment or amend expert witness information, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.030(a), 2034.630).

[Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Forms Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party in support of a motion to augment or amend an expert witness list under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610. This provision allows augmentation or amendment only when the moving party has engaged in a timely exchange of expert witness information. For a form supporting the submission of tardy expert witness information, see § 88.13.

The motion must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good-faith attempt at an informal resolution of the issues presented by the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610(c)]. The foregoing form should also be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, facts showing lack of prejudice to the opposing party, facts showing reasonable diligence on the part of the moving party, and facts showing that the moving party did not originally include the information due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect should be set forth. Counsel should also demonstrate compliance with all the other conditions of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.620, as set forth in Paragraphs B and C. Counsel's factual showing should demonstrate substantial justification for the motion in order to avoid a monetary sanction if the motion is denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.630].

[c] Procedures If Order Granted

Leave shall be conditioned on the moving party making the expert available immediately for a deposition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470, and may include leave to any party opposing the motion to designate additional expert witnesses or to elicit additional opinions from those previously designated. Additionally, the court may impose other conditions that are just, including a continuance, and it may award costs and litigation expenses to the opposing party [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.620(d)].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Augment or Amend Expert Witness List or Declaration

In Richaud v. Jennings (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 81, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 790 , the court of appeal noted that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610) provides a procedure for augmentation of a party's expert witness list when for some good reason an expert was not listed on a party's original expert witness list. A party who wishes to substitute an expert for one already designated must make a motion to augment that party's list of experts as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k). A court's order that discovery is closed except for experts who are allowed to be designated late does not constitute permission for a party to augment that party's list of experts without bringing the statutory motion (16 Cal. App. 4th 81, 87-91) .

[b] Augmentation Permitted to Cure Mistake, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect If Opposing Party Will Not Be Prejudiced and Statutory Procedures Are Satisfied

In Dickison v. Howen (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1471, 270 Cal. Rptr. 188 , a medical malpractice action, defendant physician listed Dr. Smith as an expert witness who would testify on his behalf. Although, as a designated expert, Dr. Smith met with defendant's counsel twice, opining that the case was defensible because defendant's care and treatment were not negligent, at deposition Dr. Smith changed his testimony and said that defendant had breached the standard of care. Defendant's motion to augment his expert witness list by substituting another physician expert in place of Dr. Smith was granted, subject to certain conditions, by the trial court. After the trial court entered judgment on the jury verdict in favor of defendant, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that the trial court had not abused its discretion in granting defendant's motion. Plaintiff contended that defendant had not made the requisite showing of surprise, claiming that an expert's failure to stand up under cross-examination is not the type of surprise encompassed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.620(c)(2)). The court said it would not question the trial court's belief of defendant's "shock" at the expert's deposition testimony and, by way of analogy with the showing required for a new trial, said that a change of testimony by a witness is a sufficient showing of surprise when the attorney had previously interviewed the witness to determine the testimony expected (220 Cal. App. 3d 1471, 1478) . The court also concluded that permitting defendant to augment his expert witness list did not prejudice plaintiff. It said that a party is prejudiced when, because of its reliance on the previous list of experts, it is not prepared for the new testimony and cannot be prepared to respond to the new testimony in time for trial. The fact that the new expert will give testimony that is adverse or not cumulative of other testimony does not establish prejudice to the party opposing augmentation. The court also pointed out that the newly designated expert testified on exactly the same issue on which Dr. Smith was to testify, so plaintiff was prepared for the technical aspects of his testimony, and further, that the trial court granted all the conditions requested by plaintiff's counsel to reduce the burden of preparing for a new witness (220 Cal. App. 3d 1471, 1478-1480) .

Although both parties and the court discussed the issue as augmentation, which is governed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.620), in the middle of its analysis the court discussed former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(l) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.710-2034.730), which governs the submission of tardy expert witness information. The language of the two subsections regarding when leave of court will be granted is almost identical, and the discussion of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(l) may be simply a typographical error.

[c] Augmentation Permitted After Motion for New Trial Is Granted

In Guzman v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 705, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 585 , the appellate court held that if a trial court grants a defendant's motion for a new trial after the plaintiff has rejected a reduction in damages, the court must grant the plaintiff's motion to designate new expert witnesses, provided the motion is made a sufficient time before the new trial to afford the defendant the opportunity to depose the new experts (19 Cal. App. 4th 705, 708) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.13

§ 88.13 Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Submit Tardy Expert Witness Information [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order Allowing Party to Submit Tardy Expert Witness Information [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO SUBMIT TARDY INFORMATION CONCERNING EXPERT WITNESS LIST
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S MOTION TO SUBMIT TARDY EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION BECAUSE THE _____ [ACTION or DEFENSE] OF THE OPPOSING PARTY WILL NOT BE PREJUDICED, THE INFORMATION WAS NOT TIMELY SUBMITTED DUE TO _____ [MISTAKE and/or INADVERTENCE and/or SURPRISE and/or NEGLECT], AND ALL THE OTHER CONDITIONS FOR SUBMITTING TARDY EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION HAVE BEEN SATISFIED. IF THE MOTION IS GRANTED, THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE A MONETARY SANCTION

AGAINST _____ [name(s)] BECAUSE THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT _____ [HE/SHE/IT or THEY] ACTED WITH SUBSTANTIAL JUSTIFICATION OR THAT OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE THE IMPOSITION OF THE SANCTION UNJUST.

A. Motion to Submit Tardy Expert Witness Information. On motion of any party who has failed to submit expert witness information on a date specified in a demand for that exchange, the court may grant leave to submit that information on a later date (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710(a)).

B. Tardy Submission Permitted to Cure Mistake, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect If No Prejudice to Opposing Party and Statutory Procedures Satisfied. The court shall grant leave to submit tardy expert witness information if it determines, after taking into account the extent to which the opposing party has relied on the absence of a list of expert witnesses, that any party opposing the motion will not be prejudiced in maintaining the party's action or defense on the merits, and that the moving party (1) failed to submit that information as a result of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, (2) sought that leave promptly after learning of the mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, and (3) has promptly thereafter served a copy of the proposed expert witness information concerning the expert or the testimony, described in Section 2034.260 of the Code of Civil Procedure, on all other parties who have appeared in the action (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.720).

C. Court Must Impose Monetary Sanction Absent Specified Findings. The court must impose a monetary sanction under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.010 et seq. against any party, person, or attorney who unsuccessfully opposes a motion to submit tardy expert witness information, unless it finds that the one subject to the sanction acted with substantial justification or that other circumstances make the imposition of the sanction unjust (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2023.030(a), 2034.730).

[Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party supporting a motion to submit tardy expert witness information [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710]. For a form supporting the augmentation or amendment of expert witness information when the moving party initially submitted a timely list, see § 88.12.

The motion should be made a sufficient time in advance of the time limit for the completion of discovery under Code Civ. Proc. § 2024.010 et seq. to permit the deposition of any expert to whom the motion relates to be taken within that time limit. However, under exceptional circumstances, the court may permit the motion to be made at a later time [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710(b)].

The motion must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good-faith attempt at an informal resolution of the issues presented by the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.710(c)]. This form should also be combined with general points and authorities supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 2023.030(a) [see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, facts showing lack of prejudice to the opposing party and facts showing that the moving party did not originally submit the information due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect should be set forth. Counsel should also demonstrate compliance with all the other conditions of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.720, as set forth in Paragraph B. Counsel's factual showing should demonstrate substantial justification for the motion in order to avoid a monetary sanction if the motion is denied [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.730].

[c] Terms of Order

An order allowing tardy submission of expert witness information must be conditioned on the moving party making that expert available immediately for a deposition under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470, and the order may include leave to any party opposing the motion to designate additional expert witnesses or to elicit additional opinions from those previously designated. In addition, the court may impose other conditions that are just including a continuance, and it may award costs and litigation expenses to the opposing party [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.720(d)].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.14

§ 88.14 Supporting Motion for Order for Relief When Party Makes Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witnesses Information Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM Supporting Motion for Order for Relief When Party Makes Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witnesses Information Through Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS
_____ [name],	)	AND AUTHORITIES IN Plaintiff,	)	SUPPORT OF RELIEF FROM UNTIMELY DE-
vs.	)	MAND FOR EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS
_____ [name],	)	INFORMATION
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S MOTION FOR RELIEF AND _____ [specify relief desired, e.g., SET ANOTHER DATE FOR THE EXCHANGE OF

WITNESS LISTS AND COMPEL DISCOVERY ON THAT DATE] BECAUSE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S FAILURE TO MAKE THE DEMAND FOR EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS LISTS IN A TIMELY FASHION WAS DUE TO _____ [MISTAKE and/or INADVERTENCE and/or SURPRISE and/or EXCUSABLE NEGLECT]. GOOD CAUSE FOR THE RELIEF REQUESTED EXISTS IN THAT _____ [state facts that demonstrate good cause, e.g., PLAINTIFF MADE AN INFORMAL ATTEMPT TO CORRECT THE ERROR and/or NO PREJUDICE TO DEFENDANT RESULTED FROM THE ERROR].

A. Relief Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 Is Available in Discovery Proceedings. A demand for discovery is a proceeding for which the court may order relief under Code of Civil Procedure Section 473(b) from the consequences taken against a party through his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, so long as the applicable discovery statute does not provide analogous relief. Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.210, governing the date for the demand, does not specify any relief. Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.230(b) permits the trial court to order an earlier or later date for the exchange of expert trial witness information, on motion and a showing of good cause. The trial court may therefore change the date of the exchange for good cause (Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1104-1109, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034).

[Optional] B. Trial Court's Order Will Be Upheld If There Has Been No Abuse of Discretion. An order granting relief from an untimely demand for exchange of expert trial witness information will be upheld when there is no abuse of discretion by the trial court. Accordingly, when the mistake by the demanding party is innocent, the steps taken to correct it are reasonable, and there is no prejudice to the other party, an order compelling the requested discovery for a later date is proper (Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1104-1109, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222).

[Optional] C. Objection Is Not Proper Response to Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information. A challenge to a demand for the exchange of expert witnesses information is properly made by filing a motion for a protective order. An objection is not the proper response to a defective demand, such as one that is untimely (Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1109-1112, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party in support of a motion for relief from an untimely demand for the exchange of expert witness information. The relief, in the form of a court order for an earlier or later date of exchange than originally requested, is based on Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). The party seeking such relief must show that the untimely demand was the result of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, and that there is good cause for the requested relief [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 473(b), 2034.230].

The motion must be accompanied by a declaration stating facts showing a reasonable and good faith attempt at an informal resolution of the issues presented by the motion, that the moving party's error was innocent, and that the error did not cause prejudice to the opposing party [Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1109, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222] .

For additional memoranda of points and authorities regarding relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, facts showing lack of prejudice to the opposing party, facts showing reasonable diligence on the part of the moving party, and facts showing that the moving party did not serve the demand in a timely fashion due to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect should be set forth [Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1109, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 Is Available in Discovery Proceedings

In Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 , plaintiff brought a medical malpractice action based on treatment received while a prisoner. A trial date of January 8, 1990, was set at the trial setting conference of October 10, 1989. Based on its mistaken belief that the case was governed by the rules of a local Accelerated Civil Trial project, which required that a demand for exchange of expert witness lists be sent within 15 days of the mailing of notice of the trial setting conference, one defendant served a demand for exchange on October 6, 1989. After that defendant discovered his mistake, both defendants sought to resolve the matter informally by contacting plaintiff's attorney. When they were unable to get through, they spoke with his secretary who informed them that the exchange was calendared, and that the attorney would call them if he did not intend to make the disclosure. Instead, plaintiff filed an objection to the demand for exchange, citing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210), which permits a demand to be served after the setting of the initial trial date, and claimed that the demand was premature. After defendants missed the last day to serve the demand, they filed a motion for relief from the mistake pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 473 3rd Paragraph (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)), and moved to compel the exchange of the expert witness information. Defendants claimed the only reason they did not file a timely demand was that they were lulled into believing that plaintiff had agreed to the exchange. Plaintiff opposed defendants' motion, claiming that they knew of the mistake and could have filed a timely motion, that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 did not authorize relief, and that she would be prejudiced by the requested relief. The trial court found no prejudice to plaintiff, granted defendants the requested relief, and ordered an immediate exchange of expert witness information. Plaintiff refused to make disclosure, and at the mandatory settlement conference refused to say whether she had retained any experts. Plaintiff mailed her list of experts six days before trial, provided declarations for two of the 13 experts, and provided no reports or writings. On the day of trial, defendants moved to preclude plaintiff from introducing expert testimony on the ground she violated the court order. The trial court granted the motion and subsequently granted a nonsuit based on the deficient offer of proof due to no evidence of the standard of care. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 473, 3rd Paragraph, a trial court may fashion relief from a judgment, order, or other proceeding taken against a party through his or her mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. The court determined that a demand for exchange of expert trial witness information is a "proceeding" within the meaning of § 473. It was persuaded by the very broad construction given to that term in the cases, which have held that a proceeding is any step or measure taken in a case by either the court or one of the parties. The court was also persuaded by the Legislature's use of language similar to § 473 in several sections of the Discovery Act that provide for relief, including former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430(c)(2)) (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1105-1107) . It concluded that the Legislature intended to incorporate the principles of § 473 into those provisions of the Act that employ similar language. Relief under § 473 is unavailable if the Act provides analogous, if more limited relief. Since nothing in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 provides for relief from failure to file a timely demand, relief is available under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, and the trial court was authorized to grant relief under it (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1107) .

[b] Trial Court's Order Will Be Upheld If There Has Been No Abuse of Discretion

The facts and procedural background of Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 are discussed in [a], above. To determine whether relief under former Code Civ. Proc. § 473 3rd Paragraph (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)) was properly granted, the court of appeal said it must apply the abuse of discretion standard. It said a motion for relief under § 473 could be granted in a discovery proceeding only if the facts satisfied the grounds for relief stated in the Discovery Act. It cited as an example former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(c) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.230), which permits a court on a showing of good cause to order an earlier or later date of exchange of expert witnesses information than that otherwise specified (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1107-1108) . Although former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210) permits a demand for exchange after the trial date is set, it does not state that an internally defective demand cannot be amended. The court accepted the premise that while there is no right to discovery if the demand is premature, if exceptional circumstances are shown, the court should be able to compel disclosure of opposing experts at any time by granting a protective order against use of their testimony at trial unless presently disclosed. The court held that good cause had been shown and that the trial court had not abused its discretion in ordering a later date of exchange than that specified in defendant's demand. In so ruling, the court observed that defendant's error in misapplying the local rule was innocent and the steps taken to correct it were reasonable. Counsel attempted to reach an informal accord, and when that failed, moved for relief from the mistake. Additionally, there was no prejudice to plaintiff. The court explained that prejudice does not mean an unfavorable result, it means an unfair resolution. The court also addressed the background of the case, noting that defendants had no idea what type of malpractice would be laimed at trial, which was set over five years from the date of the complaint. The court characterized plaintiff's failure to retain experts in a timely fashion as an arrogant disregard of the court system (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1108-1109) .

[c] Objection Is Not Proper Response to Untimely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information

The facts and procedural background of Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 are discussed in [a], above. In Zellerino, plaintiff filed an objection after defendant made an untimely demand for exchange of expert witness information. The court examined former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(e) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.250), and concluded that its use of the word "may" does not mean that a protective order is only one of several avenues of protest to a demand for the exchange of expert witnesses information. Rather, a motion for a protective order is the sole method of challenging such a demand. An objection is an improper method of challenge. Thus, plaintiff's objection to defendant's clearly prematurely filed demand was improper (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1109-1112) . The court went on to articulate several reasons why only a protective order is appropriate. First, the governing statute provides for a prompt motion for a protective order, but does not provide for the filing of an objection. If an objection were permitted, it could be filed at any time, which would interfere with the orderly flow of discovery. Second, an objection carries none of the procedural disincentives built into the protective order motion, such as a good faith effort to resolve the dispute and monetary sanctions for an unsuccessful position on the motion. Third, an objection consumes needless time, since it invites a motion to compel, unlike motions for protective orders which are self-executing. Fourth, a motion for a protective order, unlike an objection, permits the court broad authority to fashion particularized relief for each individual case, which expedites discovery. Fifth, many other procedures in the Discovery Act specifically authorize objections, and its exclusion from the demand for exchange is probably intentional. Sixth, it is commonly understood that a motion for a protective order is the only proper challenge to a demand (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1110-1112) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Relief Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 Is Available in Discovery Proceedings

In Gotschall v. Daley (2002) 96 Cal. App. 4th 479, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 882 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant homeowner for assault, battery, and conspiracy. Plaintiff's attorney did not name treating physicians who would give opinion testimony as experts in the expert witness disclosure. The trial court held that this lack of specificity constituted an improper disclosure of expert witnesses under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.). Accordingly, the trial court dismissed the case for lack of proof of causation. Plaintiff moved to vacate the dismissal based on the mandatory provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b), dealing with attorney errors leading to dismissal or default, and to augment the expert witness list to include a witness who would establish causation. Plaintiff argued that counsel mistakenly believed it was unnecessary to name treating physicians who would give expert opinion testimony in the expert witness disclosure. Plaintiff asserted this was a valid mistake of law, which caused him to lose his day in court, as his case was dismissed prior to adjudication on the merits. The trial court granted both motions and ordered a new trial. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the mandatory provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) applies only to those situations in which the attorney's mistake causes a total failure to oppose a dismissal motion or a failure to appear (96 Cal. App. 4th 479, 484) . The court observed that applying Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) to this case, in which counsel simply failed to present evidence of causation properly, would allow plaintiffs to circumvent the expert witness disclosure requirements, knowing any resulting dismissal could be undone. Such an approach would be contrary to public policy considerations and would provide attorneys with a "perfect escape hatch" for any and all tactical errors and mistaken judgments (96 Cal. App. 4th 479, 484-485) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities §§ 88.15through 88.19

[Reserved]

§§ 88.15[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.20

§ 88.20 Opposing Motion to Compel Discovery--Discovery of Writings and Reports of Expert Witness Improper Under Specified Conditions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210, 2034.270]

[1] FORM Opposing Motion to Compel Discovery--Discovery of Writings and Reports of Expert Witness Improper Under Specified Conditions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210, 2034.270]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO COMPEL DISCOVERY OF EXPERT'S REPORTS AND WRITINGS
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DISCOVERY OF THE EXPERT WITNESS REPORTS AND WRITINGS OF _____ [name] SHOULD NOT BE COMPELLED BECAUSE _____ [THE EXPERT IS NOT A PARTY, AN EMPLOYEE OF A PARTY, OR RETAINED IN ANTICIPATION OF LITIGATION OR FOR TRIAL PREPARATION and/or THE EXPERT HAS NOT BEEN DESIGNATED AS A TRIAL WITNESS and/or THE REPORTS AND WRITINGS ARE NOT RELEVANT TO THE SUBJECT MATTER OF THE ACTION].

[EITHER]

A. Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings Not Available Under Exchange Procedure If Expert Not Party, Employee of Party, or Not Retained for Trial Preparation or in Anticipation of Litigation. Reports and writings of an expert who is not a party, an employee of a party, or who has not been retained by a party for the purpose of forming and expressing an opinion in anticipation of the litigation or in preparation for the trial of the action, are not discoverable (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210(b), 2034.270).

[AND/OR]

B. Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings Not Available Under Exchange Procedure If Expert Not Designated as Trial Witness. Discovery of an expert's reports and writings is not available under the expert reports exchange procedure unless the expert has been designated as a trial witness (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(a)).

[AND/OR]

C. Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings That Are Not Relevant Is Not Permitted. Reports and writings of expert witnesses are not subject to discovery if they are not relevant to the subject matter of the litigation (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2017.010, 2034.210(c), 2034.270; see National Steel Products Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 476, 492, 210 Cal. Rptr. 535).

[Combine the foregoing points and authorities, when appropriate, with points and authorities opposing discovery on the grounds of irrelevance (see, e.g., Ch. 83, Discovery: General Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 80.40), and opposing a motion to compel a particular discovery method (see, e.g., Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions, §§ 83.45, 84.50 (opposing motion to compel deposition).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party seeking to oppose discovery of the writings and reports of an expert witness when the opposing party is seeking discovery under the expert reports exchange procedure of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. Normally, such a motion will arise after a party has attempted to depose an expert under the general deposition procedures of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.010 et seq.-2028.010 et seq., which are incorporated by reference in Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.410. For a form that may be used in opposition to a motion to compel discovery on the ground that designation of a party as an expert trial witness is not itself an implied waiver of the privilege, if the designation is withdrawn before the party discloses a significant part of a privileged communication, or before it is known with reasonable certainty that the party will actually testify as an expert, refer to Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 81.90. For a discussion and forms relating to depositions generally, which may be used in conjunction with this form, see Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings That Are Not Relevant Is Not Permitted

In National Steel Products Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 476, 210 Cal. Rptr. 535 , plaintiff brought suit against a steel manufacturer, alleging that the manufacturer had supplied defective components for plaintiff's metal building. After the parties exchanged expert witness lists, plaintiff brought a motion to discover the reports of one of defendant's designated experts concerning a report the expert had prepared in connection with prior litigation against the defendant. After the trial court granted plaintiff's motion for discovery of the report, defendant petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate prohibiting the discovery.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to conduct an in camera inspection of the expert's report to determine its relevance. In so doing the court noted the broad discretion of the trial court in determining the issue of relevance (164 Cal. App. 3d 476, 492-493) .

Note that National Steel construed law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act of 1986. It is cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that it remains consistent with current provisions.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discovery of Expert's Reports and Writings Not Available Under Exchange Procedure If Expert Not Designated as Trial Witness

In Fairfax v. Lords (2006) 138 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 41 Cal. Rptr. 3d 850 , a medical malpractice action, plaintiff appealed the trial court's decision permitting defendant physician to delay his designation of retained expert witnesses unilaterally under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(a)), until 20 days after the patient had designated his own expert. Defendant's initial list did not include "a single name" of any witness he expected to call. However, once defendant saw that plaintiff's expert list included one retained witness, defendant responded with his own "rebuttal" list of two retained experts.

The court of appeal concluded that § 2034 (now see § 2034.210(a)) expressly contemplated a mutual and simultaneous exchange by all parties of a list containing the name and address of any natural person whose expert opinion any party expected to offer in evidence at the trial. In light of this "clear statutory requirement of a 'simultaneous' exchange," defendant had no right to simply delay his designation of retained experts until after he had the opportunity to view the designation timely served by plaintiff (138 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1027). Moreover, the trial court's error was prejudicial because defendant's belated designation of retained experts likely had an impact on the verdict (138 Cal. App. 4th 1019, 1028).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.21

§ 88.21 Opposing Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness--Reasonable and Customary Fee for Testimony by Expert Witness Is Not Limited by Fee Charged Retaining Party for Nontestimonial Services [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Order Setting Compensation of Expert Witness--Reasonable and Customary Fee for Testimony by Expert Witness Is Not Limited by Fee Charged Retaining Party for Nontestimonial Services [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.470]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR ORDER
vs.	)	SETTING COMPENSATION OF EXPERT WIT-
_____ [name],	)	NESS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

NO ORDER SETTING THE COMPENSATION OF _____ [name], AN EXPERT WITNESS, IS NECESSARY BECAUSE THE FEE HE/SHE IS CHARGING _____ [name of opposing party] FOR

TESTIFYING AT THE DEPOSITION IS THE SAME FEE HE/SHE WOULD CHARGE _____ [name of retaining party] FOR RENDERING TESTIMONIAL SERVICES. IF THE MOTION FOR THE ORDER IS NOT GRANTED, THE COURT SHOULD IMPOSE A MONETARY SANCTION AGAINST _____ [name(s)] BECAUSE THERE IS NO SHOWING THAT HE/SHE/IT/THEY ACTED WITH SUBSTANTIAL JUSTIFICATION OR THAT OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES MAKE THE IMPOSITION OF THE SANCTION UNJUST.

Fee Charged for Deposition Testimony of Expert Witness May Exceed Fee Charged Retaining Party for Consultative Services by That Expert. The party taking the deposition of an expert witness for the opposing party must pay the expert his or her regular fee for testimonial services even when that fee exceeds the fee for consultative services, so long as that fee is reasonable and does not exceed the fee the expert would charge the retaining party for testimonial services (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430; Rancho Bernardo Development Co. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 363, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878).

[Add points and authorities generally supporting the imposition of monetary sanctions (see, e.g., Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse, § 82.11).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party who has retained an expert witness who is deposed by the opposing party in opposing a motion for an order setting the compensation of that expert. It is for use when the opposing party seeks to limit the fee to the rate charged the retaining party for nontestimonial services, such as investigative work or technical consultation.

A daily fee may only be charged for a full day of attendance at a deposition, or when the expert was required by the deposing party to be available for a full day and the expert necessarily had to forego all business he or she would have otherwise conducted that day but for the request that he or she be available all day for the scheduled deposition [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fee Charged for Deposition Testimony of Expert Witness May Exceed Fee Charged Retaining Party for Consultative Services by That Expert

In Rancho Bernardo Development Co. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 878 , an action by a condominium homeowners' association against developers and builders for alleged construction defects, plaintiff retained the services of an architect who charged $200 per hour for ordinary services and technical consultation and $250 per hour for depositions and court appearances. When deposed by defendants, the architect charged them $250 per hour. After plaintiff and the architect refused to accept the lower rate of $200 per hour offered by defendants, defendants moved for relief from the requested fee. The trial court denied the motion. Defendants' petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal denied the petition. The court observed that it is customary for experts to establish a multitiered fee schedule in which more is charged for testimonial services than for investigative or consultative work. The higher rate for testimonial service is justified by the fact that it is a more stressful, and a more valuable, type of service than nontestimonial services (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 362) . The court found that nothing in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430), which sets forth the payment of the opposing party's expert witness, precludes the use of variable fee schedules or indicates that the fee for deposition services is limited to the lower fee charged for nontestimonial services (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 362-363) . It explained that the entire focus of former section 2034(i)(2) is the deposing of an opposing party's expert witness. The fee provision means that payment must be at the rate charged by the expert for deposition testimony. The limitation that the fee not exceed the fee charged the retaining party must be read with the presumption that the Legislature knew that experts customarily charge more for testimonial services (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 363) . Thus, an expert may charge more for testifying at the opposing party's deposition than it charged the retaining party for nontestimonial services, so long as the rate charged is the same it would charge the retaining party for testimonial services (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 361-363) .

The court noted that it was not considering whether the fee the architect had charged for his deposition testimony was reasonable (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 362) . It held only that the fee charged an opposing party for deposition testimony could not exceed the fee charged the retaining party for testimonial services, and that such fee in any case must be reasonable (2 Cal. App. 4th 358, 362-363) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.22

§ 88.22 Opposing Motion For Payment of Opponent's Treating Physician's Deposition Fees As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7)--Treating Physician's Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430

[1] FORM Opposing Motion For Payment of Opponent's Treating Physician's Deposition Fees As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7)--Treating Physician's Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430

[Caption. See § 88.21[1].]

TREATING PHYSICIAN'S DEPOSITION FEES MUST BE PAID UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2034.430

A. Witness Fees Incurred in Deposing Opponent's Treating Physicians Are Not Recoverable As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7). Witness fees incurred in deposing an opponent's treating physicians are not costs recoverable under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7) by the prevailing party because fees paid to physicians are not ordinary witness fees. Deposition fees paid to an opponent's treating physician are recoverable as costs under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(8) only if the expert was ordered by the court (Baker-Hoey v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 595-596, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 593).

B. Treating Physician's Deposition Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430. A treating physician's reasonable and customary hourly or daily fees must be paid by the opposing party under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430 in order to take the treating physician's deposition (Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430; Baker-Hoey v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 600, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 593 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for an order providing for the payment of witness fees incurred in deposing an opponent's treating physicians as costs recoverable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7) by the prevailing party, when the expert was not ordered by the court.

Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7) provides that prevailing party in tort litigation may recover as costs the ordinary witness fees (as defined in Gov. Code § 68093 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1986.5) incurred in deposing a witness. Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(8) allows payment of fees of expert witnesses ordered by the court. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430, the treating physician is entitled to be paid "the expert's reasonable and customary hourly or daily fee for any time spent at the deposition."

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of motion relating to exchanges of expert witness information, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 198, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Witness Fees Incurred in Deposing Opponent's Treating Physicians Are Not Recoverable As Costs Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1033.5(a)(7)

In Baker-Hoey v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 593 , residents brought a class action against a corporation that had allegedly discharged dangerous chemicals and contaminated the city's groundwater. Following denial of class certification and grant of corporation's motion for summary judgment against eight residents based on statute of limitations, defendant corporation brought a motion to tax costs, including costs for taking depositions of the residents' treating physicians. The trial court ruled that defendant could not recover the full costs of taking the deposition of the treating physicians for each of the eight plaintiffs. Defendant appealed, contending, among other things, that the trial court erred in allowing only $35 a day under Gov. Code § 68093. That statute provides: "Except as otherwise provided by law, witness' fees for each day's actual attendance, when legally required to attend a civil action or proceeding in the superior courts, are thirty-five dollars ($35) a day and mileage actually traveled, both ways, twenty cents ($0.20) a mile."

On appeal, defendant invoked the "otherwise provided by law" clause and argued that the witness fees for depositions of treating physicians is otherwise provided in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430). Under that subdivision, the treating physician is entitled to be paid "the expert's reasonable and customary hourly or daily fee for any time spent at the deposition." Since former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) sets ordinary witness fees for treating physicians at the amounts defendant was required to pay to depose them, it therefore follows that those fees are recoverable as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7), because the ordinary witness fee for a treating physician is statutorily set as the physician's ordinary witness fee (111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 598-599) .

The court of appeal rejected defendant's argument for two reasons. First, not all costs required to be paid by the prevailing party are recoverable costs under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1032 and 1033.5. Second, Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(b)(1) specifically disallows expert fees as costs unless the court has ordered the fees to be incurred. Moreover, the introductory clause of Gov. Code § 68093 refers to fees which are recoverable costs under other statutes. former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) only requires the person taking the treating physician's deposition to pay the physician's reasonable and customary hourly or daily fee in order to take the deposition; it does not provide that the fee is a recoverable cost (111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 599-600) . In sum, "[o]nly those costs which are specified in the statute are allowable as a matter of right under section 1033.5, subdivision (a). Under section 1033.5, subdivision (a)(8), the fees or expert witness fees ordered by the court are recoverable. The corollary, provided by section 1033.5, subdivision (b)(1), is that fees of experts not ordered by the court are not recoverable in the absence of a specific authorizing statute. "We find that section 2034, subdivision (i)(2) is not such a statute" (111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 600) . Accordingly, absent statutory authority making the costs incurred in deposing treating physicians recoverable by the prevailing party, the trial court correctly concluded that those costs are not recoverable (111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 602) .

[b] Treating Physician's Deposition Fees Must Be Paid Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.430

The facts and procedural background of Baker-Hoey v. Lockheed Martin Corp. (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 593 are discussed in [a], above. There, treating physicians' fees that defendant corporation had to pay under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430) when deposing the physicians in connection with plaintiff residents' claims against the corporation for groundwater contamination were not recoverable as costs under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5, although the corporation was prevailing party at trial. Recovery was not available under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(8) because the physicians were not court-ordered experts. Recovery was also unavailable under Code Civ. Proc. § 1033.5(a)(7) because the fees paid to physicians were not ordinary witness fees. Accordingly, a treating physician's reasonable and customary hourly or daily fees must be paid by the opposing party under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) in order to take the treating physician's deposition (111 Cal. App. 4th 592, 597-600) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.23

§ 88.23 Opposing Motion for Protective Order--Timely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information After Action Reset for Trial Following Mistrial [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.220]

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Protective Order--Timely Demand for Exchange of Expert Witness Information After Action Reset for Trial Following Mistrial [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.220]

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER RE EXPERT WITNESS EXCHANGE AFTER ACTION RESET FOR TRIAL
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD NOT GRANT _____ [specify moving party, e.g., DEFENDANT]'S MOTION FOR A PROTECTIVE ORDER BECAUSE _____ [specify party opposing, e.g., PLAINTIFF]'S SECOND DEMAND FOR EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION WAS TIMELY BECAUSE IT WAS SERVED MORE THAN 70 DAYS BEFORE THE SECOND TRIAL DATE AFTER THE ACTION WAS RESET FOR TRIAL FOLLOWING THE DECLARATION OF A MISTRIAL.

Demand Served More Than 70 Days Before Second Trial Date Is Timely. When an action is reset for trial after a mistrial, a party's second demand for the exchange of expert witness information, served more than 70 days before the second trial date, is timely under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.220 (Beverly Hospital v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1292-1296, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238 ; see Fairmont Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 245, 247).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use by a party seeking to oppose an adverse party's motion for a protective order when the adverse party argues that the party's demand for exchange of expert witness information is untimely following the setting of a second trial date for the action after a mistrial was declared at the conclusion of the first trial.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Demand Served More Than 70 Days Before Second Trial Date Is Timely

In Beverly Hospital v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238 , the parties engaged in a timely exchange of information concerning expert witnesses pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034. The case was tried before a jury, which was unable to reach a verdict, and, therefore, the court declared a mistrial. The case was reset for trial, and plaintiff served defendants with a new demand for exchange of expert witness information. Defendants moved for a protective order, arguing that the 70-day time limit of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(b) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.220) (party must demand disclosure of expert witnesses no later than 10 days after initial trial date has been set or 70 days before that trial date, whichever is closer to trial date) was required to be calculated with reference to the original trial date, and that plaintiff's demand, served five months later, was untimely. Defendants contended that although an action can have more than one trial, it can only have one "initial trial date," and that is the first trial date set in the action. The trial court denied the motion, and defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal denied defendants' petition, holding that plaintiff's second demand was timely under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(b) in that it was served more than 70 days before the second trial date. The court found that the legislative history of former § 2034 indicates that the phrase "initial trial date" was intended to prevent litigants from extending discovery by obtaining continuances. The legislative history does not reflect an intent to prohibit additional discovery following a mistrial, order granting a new trial, or a reversal on appeal. Allowing additional discovery in these cases is consistent with the overall purpose of the discovery rules, which is to facilitate trial preparation, expedite trial, and encourage settlement (19 Cal. App. 4th 1289, 1292-1296) .

In Fairmont Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2000) 22 Cal. 4th 245 , the Supreme Court approved and adopted the construction given to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2024(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2024.020) by the court of appeal in Beverly Hospital, above, holding that, in a new trial following mistrial, grant of a new trial, or retrial after a reversal on appeal, the time limits for completing discovery under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2024(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2024.020) are determined by reference to the date initially set for the new trial, not the date initially set for the original trial (22 Cal. 4th 245, 247, 249).

139 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
A. Motions Relating to Expert Witness Exchange Procedure

8-88 California Points & Authorities §§ 88.24through 88.29

[Reserved]

§§ 88.24[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.30

§ 88.30 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310]

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

_____ [Name], AN UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESS, _____ [MAY BE or SHOULD HAVE BEEN] ALLOWED TO TESTIFY BECAUSE _____ [HE/SHE WAS DESIGNATED AS AN EXPERT AND SUBSEQUENTLY DEPOSED BY ANOTHER PARTY or HE/SHE IS ONLY BEING CALLED AS A REBUTTAL WITNESS].

[EITHER]

Undisclosed Expert Who Was Designated by Another Party and Deposed May Testify. A party may call as a witness an expert who was not listed on that party's expert witness list if the expert was designated by another party and was subsequently deposed by the party calling the expert as a witness (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(a); Powell v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 441, 443, 259 Cal. Rptr. 390).

[OR]

Undisclosed Expert May Testify to Impeach Testimony of Opposing Party's Expert. A party may call as a witness an expert who was not listed on that party's expert witness list if the expert is called as a witness to impeach the testimony of an expert witness offered by any other party at the trial (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. It supports the contention of a party that an undisclosed expert witness may be called to testify, or should have been allowed to testify. The form contains points and authorities which apply when the contending party wishes to assert the right to call an expert witness under an exception to the general rule of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300, which prohibits a party from introducing the testimony of an expert witness if the party has failed to list the expert.

It should be noted that when an undesignated expert is called to impeach the testimony of another expert witness, that impeachment may include testimony about the falsity or nonexistence of any fact used as the foundation for any opinion by the other expert witness, but may not include testimony that contradicts the opinion [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)]. For further discussion of this issue, see § 88.41.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 88.40 and 88.41 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Expert Who Was Designated by Another Party and Deposed May Testify

Powell v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 441, 259 Cal. Rptr. 390 was a civil action in which defendant hospital disclosed two witnesses, including a physician who had performed a defense medical examination of plaintiff. Plaintiff disclosed nine expert witnesses, and stated she would subpoena and call the defense's examining physician, but did not formally disclose him as an expert witness. After plaintiff deposed the physician pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470), defendant moved for a protective order to prevent her from calling the physician as a witness. The trial court granted the order, finding that plaintiff failed to comply with the disclosure requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.), and was barred from presenting the physician's expert opinion. Plaintiff petitioned for extraordinary relief.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its protective order. The court found that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310) clearly authorized plaintiff to call the physician as an expert witness (211 Cal. App. 3d 441, 443) . In responding to an argument by defendant, the court went on to observe that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m) does not restrict its permission to experts who are not called by the disclosing party or to when coparties agree to share an expert and the disclosing coparty leaves the case (211 Cal. App. 3d 441, 445) .

141 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.31

§ 88.31 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Sufficient Compliance With Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. or Additional Procedures Available

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Sufficient Compliance With Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. or Additional Procedures Available

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name], AN EXPERT WITNESS, _____ [MAY BE or SHOULD HAVE BEEN] ALLOWED TO TESTIFY BECAUSE _____ [THERE WAS SUFFICIENT COMPLIANCE WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2034.010 et seq.or specify other ground].

[EITHER]

A. Expert Witness List Providing Brief Statement of General Substance of Expert's Opinion Is Sufficient. The declaration required in an expert witness list by Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260(c)(2), concerning the general substance of the testimony an expert is expected to give, is not insufficient for failing to disclose specific facts and opinions (see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(b); Williams v. Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 1257, 226 Cal. Rptr. 306 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2)(B)).

[AND/OR]

B. Exclusion of Expert Testimony Is Not Mandatory When Failure to Comply With Statutory Requirements Is Not "Unreasonable." Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.300 requires exclusion of the expert opinion of a witness only if the party offering the witness has "unreasonably" failed to fulfill the requirements of the statute (Stanchfield v. Hamer Toyota, Inc. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1503-1504, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 (construing former Code Civ. Proc.

§ 2034(j)).

[AND/OR]

C. Expert May Testify Regarding Undisclosed Substance If Opposing Counsel Refuses Court's Offer of Recess to Depose Expert. If a party has called an expert witness to testify concerning a matter that is beyond the scope of the party's statement of general substance of the expert's proposed testimony, and the court offers to recess the trial in order for the opposing counsel to depose the expert, but counsel refuses to accept the offer, no prejudice will be found (see Whitehill v. United States Lines, Inc. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 1210, 223 Cal. Rptr. 452).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. It supports the contention of a party that an expert witness may be called to testify, or should have been allowed to testify, because either the contending party sufficiently complied with the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300 or, although compliance was deficient, the ultimate sanction of barring testimony should not be, or should not have been, applied. Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300 prohibits a party from introducing the testimony of an expert witness if the party has unreasonably failed to (1) list that witness as an expert under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260, (2) submit an expert witness declaration, (3) produce reports and writings of expert witnesses as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.270, or (4) make that expert available for a deposition under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act of 1986. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 88.40 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expert Witness List Providing Brief Statement of General Substance of Expert's Opinion Is Sufficient

Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300 provides that unless a party has moved to augment or add information to his or her expert witness list under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.610-2034.630 or 2034.710-2034.730 or unless one of the limited exceptions of Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310 applies, the trial court must exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any expert that is offered by any party who unreasonably has failed to submit an expert witness declaration. Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)(2) provides that if any witness on the list is an expert described in Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b) (party, employee of party, or expert retained in anticipation of litigation or for trial preparation), the exchange must also include or be accompanied by an expert witness declaration signed by that party's attorney. This declaration must contain a brief narrative statement of the general substance of the testimony that the expert is expected to give.

In Williams v. Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 226 Cal. Rptr. 306 , plaintiff, who was injured in an automobile accident, brought an action against the automobile manufacturer, the distributor, and the dealer. The parties engaged in an expert witness exchange pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2037-2037.6 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.). After plaintiff prevailed at trial, defendant appealed, contending that plaintiff's experts had testified concerning matters outside the scope of the statement of general substance of the testimony that the experts were expected to give as found in plaintiff's witness list.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff's declaration concerning the general substance of one of her expert's testimony was sufficient when it stated: "[Name of expert] is expected to testify regarding metallurgical issues concerning the trailing arm in question and cause of accident herein" (180 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 1258 n.5). In so holding, the court noted that specific facts and opinions are not required (180 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 1257) . The clear implication of Williams is that a short statement of the general issue on which the expert will testify is sufficient.

[b] Exclusion of Expert Testimony Is Not Mandatory When Failure to Comply With Statutory Requirements Is Not "Unreasonable"

In Stanchfield v. Hamer Toyota, Inc. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 565 , plaintiff sought damages for breach of an employment agreement and specific performance of a stock purchase agreement. The defendant declared that its damages expert would be prepared for deposition after review of the conclusions and opinions reached by plaintiff's expert witness. Plaintiff's expert was deposed in the morning and, that afternoon, at the deposition of defendant's expert, the expert testified that he needed more time to develop his opinions. Plaintiff never requested a follow-up deposition. When defendant's expert was about to take the stand, plaintiff moved to exclude the expert's testimony, which the trial court denied.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court must exclude the expert opinion of a witness only if the party offering the witness has unreasonably failed to fulfill the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300). Here, because (1) the defendant expert's lack of readiness was attributable to the brief time period between the depositions and was thus reasonable, and (2) plaintiff failed to object until two weeks into the trial, the defendant did not act unreasonably (37 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1503-1504) .

[c] Expert May Testify Regarding Undisclosed Substance If Opposing Counsel Refuses Court's Offer of Recess to Depose Expert

In Whitehill v. United States Lines, Inc. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 223 Cal. Rptr. 452 , plaintiff brought an action against a shipowner for personal injuries. At trial, the shipowner's expert testified regarding a visit he made to the ship three weeks after the trial began. Plaintiff objected to the testimony on the grounds that he had no notice of the expert's testimony, in violation of former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2037.3 and 2037.5 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300). Defendant prevailed at trial and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff was not prejudiced by the testimony. The court noted that plaintiff was entitled to be informed of the general substance of opposing party's expert's testimony under the expert witness exchange procedure. The court held, however, that prejudice did not exist because the trial court offered plaintiff a recess in order to depose the expert and obtain rebuttal evidence but plaintiff refused the offer (177 Cal. App. 3d 1201, 1210) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expert Witness List Providing Brief Statement of General Substance of Expert's Opinion Is Sufficient

The facts and procedural background of Muller v. Fresno Community Hospital & Medical Ct. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 887, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 617 are discussed in § 88.40[4][a]. In this medical negligence action, the court found no statutory authority to impose monetary sanctions for disclosing for the first time during trial a theory that the expert did not disclose in the expert witness declaration (172 Cal. App. 4th 887, 905-906) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.32

§ 88.32 Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Failure to File Expert Declaration Does Not Preclude Testimony of Designated Expert Who Is Treating Physician

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Failure to File Expert Declaration Does Not Preclude Testimony of Designated Expert Who Is Treating Physician

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE TESTIMONY OF _____ [name], AN EXPERT WITNESS, _____ [SHOULD BE or SHOULD HAVE BEEN] ALLOWED. THIS TESTIMONY MAY NOT BE EXCLUDED UNDER SECTION 2034.300(b) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, FOR FAILURE TO FILE AN EXPERT WITNESS DECLARATION UNDER SECTION 2034.260(c) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, BECAUSE THIS WITNESS IS A TREATING PHYSICIAN FOR WHOM NO SUCH DECLARATION IS REQUIRED TO BE FILED.

A. No Expert Witness Declaration Is Required for Treating Physician Who Is Not Retained Expert Witness. When a party designates as an expert witness a treating physician, that party is not required to file an expert witness declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c). A treating physician is a percipient witness and not a retained expert under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b) for whom a declaration is required (Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2), (f)(2)).

B. Treating Physician Testifying as Percipient Witness May Provide Expert Opinion Testimony. A treating physician, testifying as a percipient witness, may testify as to any opinions formed on basis of facts independently acquired and informed by physician's training, skill, and experience, including opinions regarding causation and standard of care (Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 ; Fatica v. Superior Court (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 353, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. It supports the contention that a party may designate a treating physician as an expert witness, but is not required to file an expert witness declaration for such a witness under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c), because that declaration requirement applies only to retained experts as described under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b), and not to a treating physician who testifies as a percipient witness. While testifying as a percipient witness, a treating physician is entitled to give expert opinion testimony formed on the basis of facts acquired through his or her own experience, including opinions relating to causation and standard of care, and such testimony is not precluded under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(b) for failure to file an expert witness declaration [see Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720] .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Expert Witness Declaration Is Required for Treating Physician Who Is Not Retained Expert Witness

In Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 , a personal injury case, plaintiff designated as expert witnesses, but did not submit expert witness declarations for, seven treating physicians. In response to a motion in limine at trial, the trial court ruled the physicians could "testify as percipient witnesses, not as experts." As a result of the court's ruling, the two physicians called by plaintiff were precluded from giving expert opinion testimony concerning causation, that is, that plaintiff's injuries were caused by the accident. The defense stipulated to defendant's negligence. The jury returned a defense verdict, specifically finding that defendant's negligence did not cause plaintiff's damages. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that once a treating physician offers opinion testimony regarding causation, he or she exceeds the ordinary role of a treating physician, which is to give percipient testimony regarding what he or she observed, concluded, and did, and becomes a retained expert within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b)). Thus, an expert witness declaration must be filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)), and if it is not, the expert testimony is subject to exclusion under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300).

The Supreme Court granted review and reversed, holding that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)) does not require the submission of an expert witness declaration for a treating physician (22 Cal. 4th 31, 33) .

Citing Bonds v. Roy, 20 Cal. 4th 140, 144, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 (discussed in § 88.40[3][c]), the Court explained that the declaration requirement of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)) applies only to "certain" expert witnesses, that is, those who are parties, employees of parties, or, as was relevant in this case, those who are "retained by a party for the purpose of forming and expressing an opinion in anticipation of the litigation or in preparation for the trial" (22 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35) . The Court concluded that a treating physician does not fall into the categories of witnesses described in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(c)) whenever he or she gives expert opinion testimony (22 Cal. 4th 31, 34-35) .

In reaching this conclusion, the Court relied on the plain meaning of the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.) and on its legislative history. The Court noted that, in this case, the plaintiff had designated the treating physicians as expert witnesses. This was in compliance with former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(1)(A) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)), which requires a list setting forth the name and address of any person whose expert opinion that party expects to offer in evidence at the trial. Thus, defendants were on notice at the time of the designation that plaintiff intended to offer expert opinion testimony by her treating physicians. By definition, an expert witness is entitled to give opinion testimony. Under Evid. Code § 801, an expert's opinion must generally be related to a subject that is sufficiently beyond common experience that the opinion of an expert would assist the trier of fact, and it must also be based on matter, including the expert's special knowledge, skill, experience, training, and education, perceived by or personally known to the expert or made known to expert. Thus, a treating physician does not become an expert only when he or she is called upon to give nonpercipient opinion testimony (22 Cal. 4th 31, 34) .

The Court found that treating physicians generally fall into none of the categories of expert witnesses set out in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b)), to whom the expert witness declaration requirement applies under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)). This is explained in Section 2034's legislative history, which limited the additional disclosure duty of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2) and (f)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.210(b), 2034.260(c)) to employed or retained experts, and did not include percipient experts. Since a percipient expert acquires his information independently of the party that expects to be calling him, such an expert is more like a fact witness, and the compelled disclosure of the anticipated testimony of fact witnesses constitutes an invasion of the absolute protection given by the work product doctrine to the thought processes of an attorney in preparation for trial. The Court noted that such an expert would be someone who has acquired, independently of the litigation, personal knowledge of relevant facts, and whose training, skill, and experience enable him or her to form an opinion about those facts (22 Cal. 4th 31, 35) .

The Court concluded that although a treating physician is a percipient expert, his or her testimony is not limited only to personal observations. Rather, like any other expert, the treating physician may provide both fact and opinion testimony (22 Cal. 4th 31, 35) . In other words, although no expert witness declaration need be filed for a treating physician, he or she may testify as to any opinions formed on the basis of facts independently acquired and informed by his or her training, skill, and experience. This may include opinions regarding causation and standard of care because such issues are inherent in a physician's work. Thus, an opposing party would be prudent to ask a treating physician at his or her deposition whether he or she holds any opinions on these subjects, and if so, in what manner he or she obtained the factual underpinning of those opinions (22 Cal. 4th 31, 39) .

In so concluding the Court relied again on the legislative history of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.), which clarifies that what distinguishes a treating physician from a retained expert is not the content of the testimony, but the context in which the treating physician became familiar with the plaintiff's injuries that were ultimately the subject of litigation, and which form the basis for the medical opinion. The contextual nature of this inquiry is implicit in the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.210(b)), which describes a retained expert as one retained by a party for the purpose of forming an opinion in anticipation of litigation or in preparation for the trial of the action (22 Cal. 4th 31, 35-36) . A treating physician is not consulted for litigation purposes, but rather learns of the plaintiff's injuries and medical history because of the underlying physician-patient relationship (22 Cal. 4th 31, 36) .

The Court noted that this conclusion was consistent with former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(i)(2) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.430) and Gov. Code § 68092.5(a) (which refer to treating physicians as experts differentiated from retained experts), and with the discovery statutes as a whole (22 Cal. 4th 31, 36-39) . Finally, the Court noted that its interpretation avoids assigning trial judges the nearly impossible task of determining whether an expert witness treating physician is providing percipient or opinion testimony (22 Cal. 4th 31, 39) .

Defendants had relied on Plunkett v. Spaulding (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 114, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377 in arguing that a treating physician becomes a retained expert for whom an expert witness declaration is required whenever he or she attempts to testify as to issues such as standard of care. The Court accordingly disapproved of Plunkett to the extent it concluded that a treating physician could never testify as to standard of care without an expert witness declaration, regardless of the manner in which he or she obtained the factual basis for the opinion (22 Cal. 4th 31, 39-40) .

Note that the Court in Schreiber declined to decide whether a treating physician or any other percipient witness could later become an expert retained by a party for the purpose of forming and expressing an opinion in anticipation of the litigation or in preparation for the trial of the action. The defendants in this case did not raise that issue, but had rather contended that causation opinion was outside the role of treating physician because it requires information from patient or other sources, and is not based solely on physician's personal observations (22 Cal. 4th 31, 38 n.5).

[b] Treating Physician Testifying as Percipient Witness May Provide Expert Opinion Testimony

Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 is discussed in [a], above.

Fatica v. Superior Court (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 904 arose from a personal injury action for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. In accordance with former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260), petitioners timely designated their treating orthopedic surgeon as one of the expert witnesses they intended to call at trial. At the beginning of his deposition, petitioners' expert conceded he had not reviewed any of petitioners' records regarding prior medical treatment. He admitted receiving those documents and stated he intended to review them for trial. However, he pointed out that he testified "as little as possible" for his patients and had not had sufficient opportunity to review them. Opposing counsel did not request that the deposition be continued, or that he be allowed to further depose the expert after the expert had reviewed the relevant documents. Instead, opposing counsel waited until the day of trial to file a motion in limine to prohibit petitioners' expert from testifying at all. Counsel argued that he was "unable to obtain complete and meaningful expert witness testimony" from the expert "due to his failure to review plaintiffs' medical records." Before ruling on the motion, the trial court held a hearing, in which petitioners' expert testified that he "reviewed the same additional documents after his deposition that he said he would," that after this review "none of his opinions expressed at the deposition had changed or been affected as a result of the additional review," and that "his testimony would not differ from his deposition testimony as a result of the review." Following the hearing, the court ruled that the expert would not be allowed to testify concerning any opinions expressed at his deposition; he could only testify as a percipient witness. The court limited the expert's testimony "to what he heard, saw and did." Petitioners filed this petition for writ of mandate, after the trial court denied both their request for a temporary stay to permit writ review of the court's order and their request for a short adjournment to permit the expert to be further deposed (99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 351-353) .

The court of appeal ordered the trial court to vacate its order granting the motion in limine and to enter a different order denying it. Petitioners' expert was clearly a treating physician. Under Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 (discussed in [a], above), the trial court's order prohibiting the expert, a treating physician, from testifying concerning his opinions was wrong as a matter of law (99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 353) . Although a treating physician is a percipient expert, his or her testimony is not limited to personal observations. Rather, like any other expert, the treating physician may provide both fact and opinion testimony. He or she may testify as to any opinions formed on the basis of facts independently acquired and informed by his or her training, skill, and experience. This may include opinions regarding causation and standard of care because those issues are inherent in a physician's work. Thus, an opposing party would be prudent to ask a treating physician at his or her deposition whether he or she holds any opinions on these subjects, and if so, in what manner he or she obtained the factual underpinning of those opinions (99 Cal. App. 4th 350, 353) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Expert Witness Declaration Is Required for Treating Physician Who Is Not Retained Expert Witness

The facts and procedural background of Kalaba v. Gray (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570 are discussed in § 88.40[3][a]. In this medical malpractice case, the appellate court reiterated the rule enunciated in Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 (discussed in [3][a], above) and in Bonds v. Roy (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 140, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 (discussed in § 88.40[3][a]) that no expert declaration is required for a treating physician who will be called to testify at trial as an expert witness, even though a designation of retained experts must be accompanied by the expert witness declaration described in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260(c)). However, the court of appeals explained that "the transformation from treating physician to expert" does not occur unless the treating physician is identified by name and address in the proponent's designation. Thus, the court held that plaintiff complied with neither the letter nor the spirit of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.), when she failed to list or identify her treating physicians by name (as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(1), now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(a)), but simply referred to them in the designation as "all past or present examining and/or treating physicians" (95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423-1424) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.33

§ 88.33 Supporting Contention That Evidence From Nondesignated Expert Witness Be Admissible in Pretrial Proceeding

[1] FORM Supporting Contention That Evidence From Nondesignated Expert Witness Be Admissible in Pretrial Proceeding

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [A DECLARATION BY or TESTIMONY BY] _____ [name], AN UNDISCLOSED EXPERT WITNESS, _____ [MAY BE or SHOULD HAVE BEEN] PERMITTED BECAUSE THE EXCLUSION OF EVIDENCE FOR FAILURE TO COMPLY WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2034.010 ET SEQ. DOES NOT APPLY TO PRETRIAL PROCEEDINGS.

Exclusion for Failure to Designate Expert Is Not Applicable to Pretrial Proceedings. The exclusion mandated by Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.300 is applicable only to trial proceedings, and does not apply to pretrial proceedings. Thus, in a summary judgment proceeding, declarations of experts who were not properly designated as experts may not be excluded from consideration by the trial court (Kennedy v. Modesto City Hospital (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 582, 270 Cal. Rptr. 544 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. It supports the contention of a party that a nondesignated, or improperly designated, expert may not be prohibited from submitting evidence, either through a declaration or through testifying, in a pretrial proceeding, because the exclusion of testimony from a nondesignated expert mandated by Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300 applies only to trial proceedings and has no application to pretrial proceedings.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 88.40 may be used to oppose the contention supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion for Failure to Designate Expert Is Not Applicable to Pretrial Proceedings

In Kennedy v. Modesto City Hospital (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 270 Cal. Rptr. 544 , a medical malpractice action, defendants hospital and physician moved for summary judgment, claiming there was no triable question on the issue of negligence. Plaintiff's opposition to the motion was based on the theory of res ipsa loquitur and was supported by the declarations of two physicians, one of whom had not been designated as an expert witness and the other of whom had been improperly designated. The trial court refused to consider the physicians' declarations and granted the motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeal reversed. The court said that the trial court's refusal to consider the declarations was decisive, because had it considered them, it would have properly denied the motion. The court noted that the exclusion was based solely on the procedural bar posed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.), and was unrelated to any evidentiary objection under the Evidence Code (221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 580) . The court said that this was a case of first impression, observing that absent a trial court order, the timing provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 437c and former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 make it unlikely that summary judgment proceedings would overlap the exchange of expert witness information (221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 581) . In finding that testimony will not be excluded from pretrial proceedings for failure to comply with former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034, the court examined the statutory language, finding that by use of terms such as "trial date," "trial witness," "evidence at trial," and "trial of the action," the Legislature intended that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 apply only to the actual trial, and not to pretrial proceedings. Additionally, the court noted that admissibility at trial is not necessarily the same as admissibility at a pretrial proceeding such as a summary judgment proceeding, citing as an example the fact that a declaration is not admissible at trial but is expressly admissible in a summary judgment proceeding. Accordingly, evidence made inadmissible at trial by reason of the express procedural bar contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300) is not necessarily made inadmissible in a summary judgment proceeding (221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 582) . Moreover, the court opined that excluding the physicians' declarations would not further the purpose of summary judgment, which is to eliminate the necessity of trying sham and meritless cases. It said that summary judgment is not intended to stop facially meritorious cases by reason of a procedural bar that at trial may be overcome, and cited motions to augment or amend and to submit tardy information under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k), (l) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.610, 2034.710) as mechanisms that might be used at trial to admit that evidence (221 Cal. App. 3d 575, 582-583) .

144 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities §§ 88.34through 88.39

[Reserved]

§§ 88.34[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.40

§ 88.40 Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300]

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300]

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

_____ [Name of expert] SHOULD NOT _____ [BE or HAVE BEEN] PERMITTED TO TESTIFY BECAUSE _____ [HE/SHE IS AN UNDISCLOSED EXPERT and/or NO EXPERT WITNESS DECLARATION CONCERNING THE SUBSTANCE OF HIS/HER EXPECTED TESTIMONY WAS PROVIDED and/or HIS/HER DISCOVERABLE REPORTS AND WRITINGS HAVE NOT BEEN PRODUCED and/or HE/SHE HAS NOT BEEN MADE AVAILABLE FOR A DEPOSITION].

[EITHER]

A. Undisclosed Expert May Not Testify. Except as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.610-2034.630, 2034.710-2034.730, or 2034.310, on objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, the trial court is required to exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to list that witness as an expert on his or her expert trial witness list (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(a); see Kalaba v. Gray (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1419, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570, 572 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034); Sprague v. Equifax, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1037-1039, 213 Cal. Rptr. 69 (same); Gallo v. Peninsula Hospital (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905, 211 Cal. Rptr. 27 (same)).

[AND/OR]

B. Expert May Not Testify If No Expert Witness Declaration Provided. Except as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.610-2034.630, 2034.710-2034.730, or 2034.310, on objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, the trial court is required to exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to submit an expert witness declaration (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(b); see Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1116, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034).

[AND/OR]

C. Expert May Not Testify Beyond Scope of Testimony Described in Expert Witness Declaration. Except as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.610-2034.630, 2034.710-2034.730, or 2034.310, on the objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, the trial court is required to exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to submit an expert witness declaration (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(b)). The trial court, under this provision may exclude testimony not only when there is a failure to submit an expert witness declaration altogether, but also when there is a failure to submit a complete expert witness declaration; thus it is proper to preclude an expert witness from testifying at trial on a subject whose general substance was not previously described or included in the expert witness declaration (Bonds v. Roy (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 140, 142-143, 145-146, 149, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034).

[AND/OR]

D. Expert May Not Testify If Discoverable Reports and Writings Are Not Produced. Except as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.610-2034.630, 2034.710-2034.730, or 2034.310, on objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, the trial court is required to exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to produce reports and writings of expert witnesses under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.270 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(c)).

[AND/OR]

E. Expert May Not Testify If Not Made Available for Deposition. Except as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.610-2034.630, 2034.710-2034.730, or 2034.310, on objection of any party who has made a complete and timely compliance with Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.260, the trial court is required to exclude from evidence the expert opinion of any witness that is offered by any party who has unreasonably failed to make that expert available for a deposition under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 2034.410-2034.470 (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(d)).

[AND/OR]

F. Expert Listed on Supplemental List May Not Be Substituted. A party who has designated an expert to testify on a particular subject may not replace that expert with one stated on a supplemental list. A party may submit a supplemental expert witness list within 20 days after the simultaneous exchange of information concerning each other's expert trial witnesses (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.280(a)), but only if the party supplementing the expert witness list has not previously retained an expert to testify on that subject (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.280(a); Basham v. Babcock (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1718, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq. It opposes the contention that an undesignated expert may be called to testify or was properly allowed to testify [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities set out in § 88.30 et seq.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act of 1986. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In addition, counsel may wish to allege compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260, as a prerequisite to prohibiting the testimony of an undisclosed expert.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undisclosed Expert May Not Testify

In Kalaba v. Gray (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570 , a medical malpractice action, plaintiff identified two medical experts and "reserved the right to call as potential experts any and all [of her] past or present examining and/or treating physicians." Neither the designation nor the accompanying declaration (describing the experts' qualifications, general scope of testimony, and their fees) identified any of plaintiff's past or present treating physicians. At trial plaintiff attempted to call three of her treating physicians to testify about the standard of care. The trial court granted defendant's motion to exclude the expert testimony of the three doctors on the ground that they had not been designated as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(1) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(a)), and ultimately granted defendant's motion for nonsuit. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. The appellate court reviewed the California Supreme court's holdings in Bonds v. Roy (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 140, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 (discussed in [c], below) and Schreiber v. Estate of Kiser (1999) 22 Cal. 4th 31, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 293, 989 P.2d 720 (discussed in § 88.32[3][a]) and distilled the following rule: Retained experts must be designated, and the designation must be accompanied by the "expert witness declaration" described in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260). However, treating physicians are not "retained experts" within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034, and no expert declaration is required when a party intends to call a treating physician for the purpose of eliciting expert testimony. It is sufficient if a treating physician is identified by name and address in the proponent's designation of expert witnesses. When, as here, the treating physicians were not listed or identified by name but simply referred to in the designation as "all past or present examining and/or treating physicians," there was no compliance with the "letter or the spirit" of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423-1424) .

The appellate court found no authority to support plaintiff's contention that her discovery responses ought to be viewed as "substantial compliance" with the specific requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034. Although the Supreme Court suggested in Schreiber that an opposing party would be prudent to ask a treating physician at his or her deposition whether he holds any opinions on the matters about which expert testimony will be required at trial, and if so, the manner in which he or she obtained the factual underpinning of those opinions, the Supreme Court did not suggest that, to be prudent, defense counsel ought to depose every treating physician without regard to whether the treating physician had been designated as an expert (95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423-1424 , 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 570, 576) . Expressing concern that medical malpractice cases are already particularly complex and expensive to prosecute and to defend, the appellate court found nothing in Schreiber to suggest that the Supreme Court intended to impose further unnecessary economic burdens on either side by encouraging more depositions than reasonably necessary in any particular case (95 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423-1424) .

In Sprague v. Equifax, Inc. (1985) 166 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 213 Cal. Rptr. 69 , plaintiff brought an action against his disability insurer and its agents alleging that defendants engaged in a conspiracy to fraudulently deny him insurance benefits. The parties engaged in an exchange of expert witness lists under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2037 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.). At trial, the court denied defendants' request to introduce the testimony of the expert medical witness who was not listed. Apparently the witness was not listed because another defendant, who settled with plaintiff a month prior to trial, and who had not been served with a demand for an exchange of experts, was scheduled to introduce that expert's testimony. The trial court based its decision on the grounds that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2037.6 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300) defendants had not made a good-faith effort to comply with the witness exchange procedure since they deliberately relied on the settling defendant to introduce the testimony of the expert in a tactical decision to avoid disclosing the name of the expert to plaintiff. After plaintiff prevailed at trial, defendant appealed, contending that the trial court improperly refused permission to call the expert witness.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that under the facts presented the trial court did not abuse its discretion (166 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1039) .

In Gallo v. Peninsula Hospital (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 899, 211 Cal. Rptr. 27 , plaintiff brought a wrongful death action against a hospital and two doctors. The parties engaged in an exchange of expert witness lists pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2037 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.). Following the exchange but prior to trial, one doctor settled and the other was voluntarily dismissed, leaving the hospital the sole remaining defendant. At trial defendant was permitted, over plaintiff's objection, to introduce the testimony of an expert even though defendant's expert witness list did not mention the expert. Defendant's list did state, however, that it reserved the right "to call any experts identified by all parties who were not called by the parties." The expert in question had been listed by one of the doctors. After defendant prevailed at trial, plaintiff appealed, contending that the trial court erred in allowing the expert to testify.

Although the court of appeal agreed with plaintiff's basic contention, it affirmed on the grounds that the error was harmless. The court stated that defendant's list was insufficient and that the trial court's decision to allow the expert to testify could not be sustained in light of the fact that the trial court made no record to support the exercise of its discretion. The court found the error harmless, however, because the expert's testimony was not necessary to the jury's verdict (164 Cal. App. 3d 899, 905) .

Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(a) now permits an undisclosed expert to testify if he or she was designated in another party's expert witness list, and if the expert was subsequently deposed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2034.410-2034.470 [see § 88.30].

[b] Expert May Not Testify If No Expert Witness Declaration Provided

The facts and procedural background of Zellerino v. Brown (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 222 are discussed in § 88.14[3][a]. In Zellerino, the court of appeal upheld a motion in limine excluding the testimony of plaintiff's expert witnesses as a sanction for her failure to submit expert witness declarations. The court explained that a party must provide an expert witness declaration for any expert "designated" as an expert witness, whether or not the expert is retained by that party. "Designation" of an expert occurs when a party lists an expert whose testimony in the form of an expert opinion is that which any party expects to offer in evidence at trial. If the designating party intends to rely on experts produced by other parties, he or she must furnish an expert witness declaration for those experts.

Plaintiff listed defendants' experts in her list of witnesses, but failed to furnish the required expert witness declaration. The court explained that plaintiff was required to submit declarations for all experts whom she planned to call as experts, even though they had been retained by defendant (235 Cal. App. 3d 1097, 1116) .

[c] Expert May Not Testify Beyond Scope of Testimony Described in Expert Witness Declaration

In Bonds v. Roy (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 140, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 , plaintiff sued defendant for medical malpractice. In the exchange of expert witness information, defendant designated two experts. Defendant's expert witness declaration provided that one of the two experts, Dr. Duncan, was expected to testify only as to damages. At trial, however, defense counsel sought to expand the scope of Dr. Duncan's testimony beyond the issue of damages, requesting that the expert be permitted to testify concerning the applicable "standard of care." The trial court denied this request as unfair at that stage in the proceedings. Defendant appealed a jury verdict in plaintiff's favor, contesting this ruling. The court of appeal affirmed, expressly disagreeing with contrary holdings in two other court of appeal decisions. The Supreme Court granted review to resolve the conflict, and affirmed the decision of the court of appeal (20 Cal. 4th 140, 142-143, 149) .

Defendant argued that, since he had submitted an expert witness declaration, there was no unreasonable failure to "submit" a declaration within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(2), and therefore the trial court was powerless to limit the scope of Dr. Duncan's testimony. The Supreme Court disagreed, however, and contrued the failure to "submit" a declaration under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(2) to be not only a failure to submit a declaration altogether, but also a failure to submit an expert witness declaration that complies fully with the content requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(f)(2) (noted above) (20 Cal. 4th 140, 145-146) . Thus, if a submitted declaration does not adequately provide the "general substance of the testimony that the expert is expected to give," the submission of that declaration is defective under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(2). If, prior to the completion of discovery, a party wishes to expand the scope of an expert's testimony beyond that stated in a previously submitted declaration, that party must move to amend the declaration in accordance with the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (20 Cal. 4th 140, 145) .

The Court reasoned that any other construction of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(2) would render meaningless the amendment procedure of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) and other provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034. It would also controvert the very purpose of the statute--to give fair notice of what an expert will say at trial, and to allow other parties time to depose the expert, research the relevant subject area, and otherwise make the special preparations needed to cross examine an expert witness (20 Cal. 4th 140, 146-147) . An inaccurate expert witness declaration is, in this regard, as defective as no declaration at all (20 Cal. 4th 140, 147) .

The Court noted the two contrary court of appeal decisions, in Castaneda v. Bornstein (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1818, 1828-1830, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 10 and Martinez v. City of Poway (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 425, 429-430, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 644 . The Court held that these decisions gave misplaced reliance to a 1987 amendment to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(2); the Court concluded that this amendment, as part of the technical "clean-up" legislation to the 1986 Discovery Act, was not intended to thus limit the trial court's power to exclude testimony (20 Cal. 4th 140, 147-149) . The Court disapproved Castaneda and Martinez to the extent they are inconsistent with its opinion in this case (20 Cal. 4th 140, 149, n.4).

In this case, defendant admitted that he made no motion under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) to amend his expert declaration in order to expand the scope of Dr. Duncan's testimony. If defense counsel's request to expand the scope, made just before Dr. Duncan was called as the last defense witness, were considered to be such a motion, the trial court was well within its discretion to deny it, given the lack of excuse for the delay in making the motion, and the prejudice to plaintiff's efforts to present any effective rebuttal. The trial court, on these facts, properly limited the scope of Dr. Duncan's testimony to that previously described in defendant's expert witness declaration (20 Cal. 4th 140, 149) .

[d] Expert Listed on Supplemental List May Not Be Substituted

In Basham v. Babcock (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 456 , the plaintiff sued for personal injury damages resulting from an automobile accident. Plaintiff was sitting in his parked car when defendant's car struck the side of it. At trial, defendant initially designated an expert witness to testify to the extent of plaintiff's injuries and any pre-existing condition, an annular tear. In a supplemental designation, defendant named another expert witness who would testify as to the physical condition of the plaintiff before and after the accident. During plaintiff's deposition of the initial expert witness the expert stated that, in his opinion, he was unable to diagnose whether plaintiff had suffered from the pre-existing condition of an annular tear. Plaintiff did not depose the substitute expert witness. At trial defendant had the substituted expert testify. Plaintiff's attempts to exclude the second expert's testimony, compel the initially designated expert to testify and read portions of the initial expert's testimony were all denied by the trial court. The jury found for the defendant and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and ordered a new trial. The court ruled that a party may not use a list of supplemental designees as substitutions for experts who have already been retained to testify on particular subject matter (44 Cal. App. 4th 1717, 1718) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expert May Not Testify Beyond Scope of Testimony Described in Expert Witness Declaration

In Muller v. Fresno Community Hospital & Medical Ct. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 887, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 617 , a medical negligence action, the trial court granted plaintiffs' motion for a new trial, but denied their motion for sanctions based on alleged discovery abuses by defendants in connection with plaintiffs' failed attempt to call their medical expert as a rebuttal witness. Both sides appealed. The court of appeal concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(b)--providing for the exclusion of testimony as a sanction for the failure to submit a witness declaration, which under Bonds v. Roy (discussed in § 88.40[3][c]) includes an inaccurate declaration--did not provide the statutory authority to impose monetary sanctions against defendants for disclosing for the first time during the trial a theory that the expert did not disclose in the expert witness declaration (172 Cal. App. 4th 887, 905-906) .

In Jones v. Moore (2000) 80 Cal. App. 4th 557, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 216 , plaintiff appealed from a judgment in favor of defendant in a legal malpractice action, contending, among other things, that the trial court erred in excluding certain testimony of her expert witness (80 Cal. App. 4th 557, 561) . The court of appeal affirmed the exclusion, under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300(d)), of expert testimony going beyond the opinions the expert expressed during his deposition. Even though the expert witness declaration regarding this expert arguably was broad enough to encompass the additional testimony, in his deposition the expert testified as to specific opinions, affirmatively stated that these are the only opinions he intended to offer at trial, and promised to notify defendant if he later formulated others. This he did not do. The court reasoned that this case did not turn on the adequacy of the expert witness declaration, but rather on a party's right to rely on the other party's expert's express representation that the opinions expressed during an expert deposition were the only ones that needed be met at trial. The court concluded that it would be grossly unfair and prejudicial to hold otherwise. The court acknowledged that this case did not present precisely the situation described in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(j)(4), but was sufficiently similar in that the expert in this case was, in effect, not made available for deposition as to the further opinions he offered at trial--opinions which during deposition he assured defense counsel he did not have. The court found support for its holding in Roy v. Bonds, (1999) 20 Cal. 4th 140, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 289, 973 P.2d 66 , discussed in [3][a], which recognized that an important goal of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.010 et seq.) is to enable parties to properly prepare for trial, and allowing new ad unexpected testimony for the first time at trial is contrary to that purpose. The court noted that plaintiff did not make a timely motion to amend the expert witness declaration under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(k) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.610) (80 Cal. App. 4th 557, 564-565) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 88 DISCOVERY: EXCHANGE OF EXPERT WITNESS INFORMATION
PART II. FORMS
B. Subsequent Testimony by Expert Witnesses

8-88 California Points & Authorities § 88.41

§ 88.41 Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify--Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)] Is Not Applicable--Party May Not Offer Contrary Opinion As Impeachment

[1] FORM Opposing Contention That Expert Be Permitted to Testify-Exception to General Rule Barring Testimony of Undisclosed Expert [Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)] Is Not Applicable-Party May Not Offer Contrary Opinion As Impeachment

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Name of expert] SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO TESTIFY BECAUSE HIS/HER EXPRESSION OF OPINION CONTRARY TO THAT EXPRESSED BY _____ [Name of other party's expert] IS NOT THE "IMPEACHMENT" CONTEMPLATED BY CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2034.310(b)

Non-Designated Expert May Testify Concerning Facts Underlying Another Expert's Opinion but May Not Express Contrary Opinion. Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2034.310(b), an undisclosed expert witness called for impeachment purposes is permitted to testify that a foundational fact relied upon by another expert is either incorrect or nonexistent. However, calling an expert witness to express an opinion contrary to that expressed by another expert witness is not impeachment under the rule, and is not permitted (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b); Mizel v. City of Santa Monica (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1067-1068, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use when the parties to an action have exchanged lists of experts pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.300. It opposes the contention that an undesignated expert may be called to testify or was properly allowed to testify. When an undesignated expert is called to impeach the testimony of another witness, that impeachment may include testimony about the falsity or nonexistence of any fact used as the foundation for any opinion by the other expert witness, but may not include testimony that contradicts the opinion (Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)).

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contentions supported by the points and authorities in § 88.30.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In addition, counsel may wish to allege compliance with Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.260, as a prerequisite to prohibiting the testimony of an undisclosed expert.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Non-Designated Expert May Testify Concerning Facts Underlying Another Expert's Opinion but May Not Express Contrary Opinion

In Mizel v. City of Santa Monica (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 649 , plaintiff pedestrian slipped and fell on a uni-directional access ramp, suffering severe and permanent injuries. He sued the defendant city and defendant hotel for personal injuries and damages. The jury returned a judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appealed, challenging, in part, the trial's court refused to permit defendants' undisclosed expert to testify for impeachment purposes under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2034.310(b)). In cross examination, plaintiff's expert witness (his emergency room physician) testified that he and emergency room medical personnel noted in plaintiff's medical records that he had a strong smell of alcohol. Defendants' counsel asked plaintiff's expert a series of questions relating to how much a person would have to drink in order to smell of alcohol. The questions elicited responses based on the expert's medical school training. The expert rejected the suggestion that just because someone smelled of alcohol, that person had to have drunk a significant amount of alcohol. He denied that he was aware of published studies concluding that "the smell of alcohol can't be reliably detected until you are approaching .08" (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1066-1067) . Defendants sought to call an expert, pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m), who had conducted studies relating to the consumption of alcohol, to impeach plaintiff's expert's testimony. Defendant's expert was to testify, based upon his training, research, and studies, including his experience with professionals in the field, that alcohol can only be detected through smell when there has been a consumption level in the range of .08. The trial court excluded this testimony on the ground that it was an expression of opinion, and thus did not qualify under the exception of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m) (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1068) .

The appellate court found the trial court did not err in excluding the testimony of defendants' rebuttal expert witness, because the proposed testimony would not have challenged the foundational facts of the pedestrian's expert's testimony (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1067) . Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m), an undisclosed expert witness called for impeachment purposes is permitted to testify that a foundational fact relied on by a prior expert is either incorrect or nonexistent. This testimony may be elicited either by cross-examining the expert or by calling other witnesses to offer evidence showing the nonexistence or error in the data on which the first expert based his opinion. Thus, a non-designated expert may testify as to the facts underlying the expert's opinion (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1067) . However, under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(m), "calling an expert witness to express an opinion contrary to that expressed by another expert witness is not the 'impeachment' contemplated by [former] section [2034, subdivision (m)]" (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1067-1068) . The appellate court noted that "although the distinction between a 'fact' and 'opinion' may be thin, it has to be made." The court admonished trial courts to strictly construe the term "foundational fact" in order to prevent a party from offering a contrary opinion of his or her expert under the guise of impeachment (93 Cal. App. 4th 1059, 1068) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE

8-89 California Points & Authorities 89.syn

§ 89.syn Synopsis to Chapter 89: DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE

§ 89.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 89.02 Governing Law

[1] California Civil Discovery Act and Related Law

[2] Provisions Governing Preservation of Evidence

[3] Case Law Decided Under Prior Discovery Acts

§ 89.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 89.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Memoranda

§§ 89.05-89.09 [Reserved]

§ 89.10 Supporting Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Likelihood of Litigation

[b] Methods of Discovery

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standing to Bring Petition

[b] Likelihood of Litigation

[c] Prevention of Failure or Delay of Justice

§ 89.11 Supporting Petition for Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action--Trial Court Has Inherent Power to Order Preservation of Evidence Pending Discovery When There Is No Adequate Remedy at Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trial Court Has Inherent Power to Order Preservation of Evidence Pending Discovery, Absent a Statutory Remedy

§§ 89.12-89.19 [Reserved]

§ 89.20 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Use of Procedure for Improper Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Perpetuation Not Designed Primarily for Discovery

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Perpetuation Provision Not Designed Primarily for Discovery

[b] Limitations on Use of Perpetuation of Testimony

§ 89.21 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Petitioner or Petitioner's Successor in Interest Failed to Show Inability to Bring Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

§ 89.22 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Testimony or Evidence Sought to Be Preserved Would Not Be Usable in Subsequent Legal Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Testimony or Evidence Must Be Usable in Action

§§ 89.23-89.29 [Reserved]

§ 89.30 Supporting Motion to Exclude Deposition Testimony--Notice of Deposition Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040 Was Inadequate [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Notice of Deposition to Potential Adverse Party

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.01

§ 89.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter includes memoranda relating to use of discovery methods in order to perpetuate testimony or otherwise preserve evidence before the commencement of an action or pending an appeal. Forms in Part II include memoranda supporting [§ 89.10] and opposing [§ 89.20 et seq.] a petition for leave to utilize one or more discovery methods to preserve evidence prior to the commencement of an action. Also included is a form supporting a motion to exclude deposition testimony that was not acquired in conformity with the notice requirements for preserving evidence [§ 89.30].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of Testimony

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.02

§ 89.02 Governing Law

[1] California Civil Discovery Act and Related Law

Civil discovery in California is governed primarily by the California Civil Discovery Act, codified at Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016.010-2036.050. Discovery in limited civil cases is further governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 94 and 95. Statewide rules of court relating to discovery papers and discovery motions are set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1000, 3.1345, 3.1346, 3.1347, and 3.1348.

[2] Provisions Governing Preservation of Evidence

The use of civil discovery methods to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence prior to the commencement of an action or pending an appeal is governed primarily by Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. (prior to commencement of action) and Code Civ. Proc. § 2036.010 et seq. (pending appeal).

The methods of perpetuating testimony or preserving evidence prior to the commencement of an action or pending appeal are (1) oral or written depositions, (2) inspections of documents, things, and places, and (3) physical and mental examinations [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.020, 2036.020]. For memoranda relating to the specific procedures for each of these discovery methods, see respectively, Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions , Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence , and Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

For discussion of the duty to preserve electronic evidence and sanctions for abuses relating to discovery involving electronic evidence, as well as other issues arising in e-discovery, see Ch. 85A, Discovery : E-Discovery. For a form for a preliminary injunction to preserve electronic evidence pending a discovery order, see Ch. 116, Injunctions, § 116.31.

[3] Case Law Decided Under Prior Discovery Acts

The Civil Discovery Act was passed in 2004 and became effective July 1, 2005. It repealed and renumbered the Civil Discovery Act of 1986 but did not substantively change the law of civil discovery [Stats. 2004, ch. 182 §§ 22, 23, 61]. Thus cases decided under the 1986 Act remain controlling authority.

A considerable body of case law interpreted the discovery provisions of the Discovery Act of 1956 (former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016-2037.9), which preceded the 1986 Act. Although the 1986 Act, which became operative July 1, 1987, implemented numerous changes in the prior law, it also continued provisions of the prior law in many other instances, or even codified decisions interpreting the prior law. Decisions construing this prior law are therefore cited as persuasive, rather than controlling, authority to the extent that they are consistent with current provisions [see In re Marriage of Skelley (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 365, 369, 134 Cal. Rptr. 197, 556 P.2d 297] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of Testimony

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.03

§ 89.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting and opposing memoranda filed in discovery motion proceedings may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be included in a memorandum supporting or opposing a petition for leave to conduct discovery before the commencement of an action. The grounds for a motion to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence prior to an appeal or while an appeal is pending are substantially the same as that applicable to petitions to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence prior to an action [cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.050 and Code Civ. Proc. § 2036.040]. Therefore, it may be appropriate to modify these forms for use in supporting or opposing a petition to preserve evidence pending appeal.

In some cases it will also be appropriate to combine these forms with additional memoranda set out in the related discovery chapters. In particular, they may be combined with the general memoranda for limiting or regulating discovery set out in Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope , Regulation, and Timing, or with the memoranda for limiting discovery based on the evidentiary privileges, work product protection, or other protective provisions found in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations . It may also be appropriate to modify these memoranda for use in a different procedural context, such as in a trial or appellate brief or office memoranda.

For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form for a memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of Testimony

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.04

§ 89.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For background discussion of forms for moving papers relating to the use of civildiscovery methods to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence before the commencement of an action or pending appeal, California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence (Matthew Bender).

For detailed discussion, checklists, and forms for electronic discovery or "e-discovery," see Matthew Bender(R) Practice Guide: California Civil Discovery, Ch. 5, Discovery of Electronic Information .

[2] Related Memoranda

For memoranda supporting or opposing a motion to compel discovery based on general limiting or regulatory provisions of the Discovery Act, see Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing .

For memoranda supporting or opposing a motion to compel discovery on the ground that the matter sought to be discovered is privileged or is otherwise protected from disclosure, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .

For memoranda relating to proceedings involving the particular discovery methods authorized under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.010 et seq. and 2036.010 et seq., that is, depositions, inspection of documents, things, and places, and physical and mental examinations, see respectively Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions , Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence , and Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

For memoranda for use in seeking or opposing writs to review discovery orders, see Ch. 89A, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsMental & Physical ExaminationsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsOral DepositionsCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsPerpetuation of TestimonyCivil ProcedureDiscoveryMethodsRequests for Production & InspectionCivil ProcedureDiscoveryPrivileged MattersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89 California Points & Authorities §§ 89.05-89.09

[Reserved]

§§ 89.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.10

§ 89.10 Supporting Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
Petition of _____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
Petitioner,	)	FOR _____ [PERPETUATION OF
	)	TESTIMONY and/or PRESERVATION OF EVID-
to _____ [Perpetuate	)	ENCE]
Testimony of _____	)	Date: _____
(name(s)) and/or Preserve Evidence] Prior to Filing	)	Time: _____
of Action.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THIS COURT SHOULD GRANT AN ORDER _____ [FOR THE PERPETUATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF _____ (name(s)) BY _____ (ORAL or WRITTEN) DEPOSITION and/or REQUIRING _____ (name(s)) TO PRODUCE AND PERMIT INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS AND OTHER THINGS AS SPECIFIED IN THE ACCOMPANYING PETITION and/or REQUIRING _____ (name(s)) TO SUBMIT TO A _____ (PHYSICAL and/or MENTAL) EXAMINATION] IN ORDER TO PREVENT A FAILURE OR DELAY OF JUSTICE.

A. Standing to Bring Petition. One who expects to be a party or expects a successor in interest to be a party to any action that may be cognizable in any court of the State of California, whether as a plaintiff or as a defendant, or in any other capacity, may obtain discovery within the scope delimited by Code of Civil Procedure Section 2017.010 et seq., and subject to the restrictions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 2019.010 et seq., for the purpose of perpetuating that person's own testimony or that of another natural person or organization, or of preserving evidence for use in the event an action is subsequently filed (Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(a)).

B. Inability to Bring Action. The verified petition must include a showing that the petitioner and, if applicable, the petitioner's successor in interest expects to be a party to an action cognizable in a California court, and is presently unable to bring the action or cause it to be brought (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.010(a), 2035.030(a), (b)(1), (b)(2)).

C. Likelihood of Litigation. Whether there is a sufficient likelihood that theexpected litigation will result is a matter for the sound discretion of the court (see Block v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 478, 33 Cal. Rptr. 205 (decided under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017; now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.010, 2035.030).

D. Methods of Discovery. The methods available for discovery conducted for the purposes set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Section 2035.010 are (1) oral and written depositions, (2) inspections of documents, things, and places, and (3) physical and mental examinations (Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.020).

E. Prevention of Failure or Delay of Justice. If the court determines that all or part of the discovery requested may prevent a failure or delay of justice, it must make an order authorizing that discovery (Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.050).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in support of a petition for an order permitting discovery before an action is filed for the purpose of (1) perpetuating the petitioner's own testimony or the testimony of the petitioner's successor in interest or that of another natural person or organization, and/or (2) preserving evidence for use in the event that an action is subsequently filed by means of a request for inspection of documents or other things, or a request for a physical or mental examination [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.010, 2035.020]. The court must grant the petition if it finds that all or part of the discovery requested may prevent a failure or delay of justice [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.050(a)]. In determining whether to authorize discovery by a petitioner who expects a successor in interest to be a party to the action, the court must consider, in addition to other appropriate factors, whether the requested discovery could be conducted by the petitioner's successor in interest, instead of by the petitioner [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.050(a)].

The procedures of Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. may not be used for the purpose either of ascertaining the possible existence of a cause of action or a defense to it, or of identifying those who might be made parties to an action not yet filed [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(b)]. For points and authorities for use in opposing the petition on this ground, see § 89.20.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the reasons for requesting discovery as set forth in the verified petition [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(6)], and show why the requested discovery may prevent a failure or delay of justice. For example, if appropriate, counsel may wish to refer to facts indicating that the person whose testimony is sought is gravely ill and unlikely to survive the time period estimated for commencement of litigation [see, e.g., DeWagenknecht v. Stinnes (D.C. Cir. 1957) 250 F.2d 414 , discussed in § 89.10[4][b]].

If the validity or construction of a written instrument may be called into question or is connected to the subject matter of the proposed discovery, counsel must attach to the petition a copy of that written instrument [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(3)].

[c] Related Uses

Since the requirements and grounds for requesting discovery prior to an action are similar to those for requesting discovery pending an appeal [cf. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2035.020, 2035.050 and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2036.020, 2036.040], counsel in an appropriate case may adapt this for use in support of a motion for discovery pending appeal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2036.010 et seq.].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For background discussion of forms of moving papers relating to the use of civil discovery methods to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence before the commencement of an action or pending appeal, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence (Matthew Bender).

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 89.20 et seq. may be used to oppose a petition supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Likelihood of Litigation

In Block v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 33 Cal. Rptr. 205 , petitioner sought to perpetuate testimony and require physical examination of a certain minor. Included in the petition were allegations that (1) an automobile accident had occurred involving petitioner's vehicle and the minor; (2) the minor had made a claim against petitioner; (3) petitioner expected to be a defendant in a personal injury action arising from the incident; (4) petitioner was unable to bring or cause the action to be brought; and (5) the facts that petitioner desired to establish by the proposed testimony were the true extent and nature of the injuries, if any, sustained by the minor. Petitioner's attorney filed an affidavit stating, inter alia, that he did not know how long the minor's attorney would wait until filing the lawsuit, and that the delay might be several years due to the minor's age. None of the allegations were denied. The trial court granted the petition and ordered the minor to appear for a physical examination. No order was made concerning the requested deposition. The minor's guardian filed a petition for a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court from enforcing its order.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the contents of the petition appeared to comply with the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030). The court cited De Wagenknecht v. Stinnes (D.C. Cir. 1957) 250 F.2d 414, 417 (discussed in § 89.10[4][b]), to the effect that whether there is sufficient likelihood that the expected litigation will result is a matter for the sound discretion of the trial court (219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 478) .

[b] Methods of Discovery

Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.020 specifically provides that there are three methods for discovery prior to an action: (1) oral and written depositions, (2) inspection of documents, things, and places, and (3) physical and mental examinations. This codifies the previous case law interpretation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 [see Block v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 477, 33 Cal. Rptr. 205 (on proper showing, trial court may order inspection or physical examination without taking a deposition)].

For points and authorities relating to oral and written depositions, inspection of documents, things, and places, and physical and mental examinations, see respectively Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions , Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence , and Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standing to Bring Petition

In Martin v. Reynolds Metals Corp. (9th Cir. 1961) 297 F.2d 49 , petitioner sought perpetuation of evidence, under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rules 27 and 34, claiming that fluorides from a plant had been discharged on his property injuring his cattle, and requesting an order to permit a deposition of petitioner and examinations of the affected land and cattle. The federal court of appeals affirmed the district court's order for inspection, but directed the court to redraft its order relating to the deposition to specify the subject matter of the examination and whether the depositions were to be on oral or written interrogatories. Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 27 requires that the party seeking the deposition be unable to bring the suit or cause it to be brought, and a defendant is entitled to use the procedure, on a proper showing, to preserve important testimony that might otherwise be lost (297 F.2d 49, 55) . (Note that the present controlling state statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(4), requires that the petition set forth the particular discovery method that the petitioner wishes to employ; moreover, it specifically enumerates a potential defendant as having standing to bring the petition.)

[b] Likelihood of Litigation

In De Wagenknecht v. Stinnes (D.C. Cir. 1957) 250 F.2d 414 , petitioner sought an order under Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 27(a)(1), (2), to authorize the taking of a deposition of a 74-year-old witness regarding petitioner's claim to certain property vested by the Attorney General. Petitioner alleged that she or her successors in interest intended to bring one or more actions for the wrongful withholding of her property, but that she was unable at that time to bring them for various specified reasons. The federal court of appeals affirmed the district court's order granting the petition, holding that in the event of either of two contingencies, petitioner would be a party to litigation to try the issue of her ownership of the property in question. The question of whether there is a sufficient likelihood that the expected litigation will result is a matter for the sound discretion of the trial court (250 F.2d 414, 417) .

Note that Code Civ. Proc. § 2017, the predecessor statute of Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq., was based on Fed. R. Civ. P., Rule 27 [see Block v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 475, 33 Cal. Rptr. 205 (citing DeWagenknecht for the rule set out in this point)]. DeWagenknecht may therefore be used as persuasive authority in interpreting Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. [see Gorman Rupp Indus., Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 20 Cal. App. 3d 28, 30, 97 Cal. Rptr. 377 (use of case law interpreting federal rules)].

[c] Prevention of Failure or Delay of Justice

In Arizona v. California (1934) 292 U.S. 341, 54 S. Ct. 735, 78 L. Ed. 1298 , an equitable proceeding to perpetuate testimony (prior to the adoption of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure), the United States Supreme Court held that to sustain a bill to perpetuate testimony it must appear, among other things, that (1) the facts expected to be proved by the testimony of the witnesses sought to be examined would be material in the determination of the matter in controversy; (2) the testimony would be competent evidence; (3) if no suit is pending, plaintiff is not in a position to start one in which the issue might be determined; and (4) the taking of the testimony is made necessary by the danger that it might be lost by delay (292 U.S. 341, 347-348) . The Court denied the bill on the ground that Arizona failed to show that the testimony sought could be material or competent evidence in any action that might thereafter be sought (292 U.S. 341, 360) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.11

§ 89.11 Supporting Petition for Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action--Trial Court Has Inherent Power to Order Preservation of Evidence Pending Discovery When There Is No Adequate Remedy at Law

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 89.20[1].]

TRIAL COURT HAS INHERENT POWER TO ORDER THE PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE PENDING DISCOVERY WHEN THERE IS NO ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW FOR PRESERVATION.

Trial Court Has Inherent Power to Order Preservation of Evidence Pending Discovery, Absent a Statutory Remedy. The trial court has the inherent power to issue an injunction to prevent the potential destruction of evidence pending discovery, based on the trial court's inherent power to make orders facilitating discovery and the presentation of evidence, when the Civil Discovery Act does not provide an adequateremedy at law (Dodge, Warren & Peters Ins. Serv., Inc. v. Riley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419-1420, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 385).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support a petition for preservation of evidence, based on the trial court's broad discretion to make orders facilitating discovery and the presentation of evidence, when there is not an adequate remedy at law that would prevent destruction of potentially discoverable evidence.

These points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities in § 89.10 in an appropriate case.

For further discussion of the duty to preserve electronically stored information and sanctions for e-discovery abuses, as well as other issues arising in e-discovery, see generally Ch. 85A, Discovery : E-Discovery. For a form for a preliminary injunction to preserve electronically stored information a discovery order, see Ch. 116, Injunctions, § 116.31. For forms supporting and opposing motions in the context of the discovery of electronically stored information, see Ch. 85A, Discovery : E-Discovery.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. In particular, counsel should explain the reasons it is appropriate for the trial court to issue an injunction to prevent the potential destruction of evidence pending discovery and show why the requested preservation may prevent a failure or delay of justice.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For background discussion of forms for moving papers related to the use of civil discovery methods to preserve evidence before the commencement of an action or pending appeal, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 199, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Trial Court Has Inherent Power to Order Preservation of Evidence Pending Discovery, Absent a Statutory Remedy

In Dodge, Warren & Peters Ins. Serv., Inc. v. Riley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 385 , plaintiff former employer sued defendant former employees for misappropriation of trace secrets and unfair business practices.

Before leaving their employment to open a competing insurance brokerage firm, defendants copied documents maintained in plaintiff's files and computer storage media. Plaintiff obtained an preliminary injunction against defendants, requiring the preservation of electronic evidence by prohibiting defendants from destroying, deleting or secreting from discovery any of their electronic storage media and by requiring them to allow a court-appointed expert to copy all of it, including computer hard drives and discs, to recover lost or deleted files, and to perform automated searches of that evidence under guidelines agreed to by the parties or established by the court. Defendants appealed, claiming that the trial court erred in issuing the injunction because an adequate remedy at law existed and because plaintiff provided no evidence in support of its issuance.

At issue was whether it was appropriate for the trial court to issue an injunction to prevent the potential destruction of evidence pending discovery. Plaintiff's application for the injunction stated that defendants, "innocently or not," violated plaintiff's right to discovery by destroying potentially discoverable evidence. By doing so, defendants rendered plaintiff's right to discovery ineffectual. The application further requested that the status quo be preserved pending a determination of the question whether certain evidence would be subject to discovery. The court of appeal "[could] not conceive, as a matter of policy, given the broad discretion possessed of the trial court to ensure the effective administration of justice, why injunctive relief should not be available under circumstances such as these, should it otherwise be merited" (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1418-1419) .

The appellate court rejected defendants' claim that the injunction was not properly issued because the Civil Discovery Act of 1986 (Discovery Act) provided plaintiff with an adequate remedy at law. In effect, defendants argued that the Discovery Act provided "an exclusive framework for dealing with evidence in a legal action." However, they provided no authority for this proposition. Further, they failed to establish that the Discovery Act provided any protection under the circumstances. The court observed that neither former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017(e) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2017.010 et seq.) nor former Code Civ. Proc. § 2019 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2019.010 et seq.) provided a mechanism to preserve evidence. Moreover, former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031(f) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.060) authorized the trial court to issue orders protecting a party from producing evidence. It did not specifically authorize the trial court to act on behalf of the party seeking evidence. Rather, a party seeking to preserve evidence must obtain an injunction, not a protective order under the discovery statutes (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419) .

The appellate court also rejected defendants' contention that the availability of sanctions for misuse of the discovery statutes established an adequate remedy at law for the preservation of evidence. Based on the Supreme Court's decision in Cedars-Sinai Medical Center v. Superior Court (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 248, 954 P.2d 511 (discussed in § 85.90[3][a]), that there is no separate tort cause of action for intentional spoliation of evidence, in part because other remedies exist, defendants argued that other sanctions are adequate to protect a litigant's rights. This court declined to read the Cedars-Sinai so narrowly. The appellate court explained that a primary reason for denying the existence of a separate tort remedy was to prevent an endless cycle of litigation. In support of its conclusion, the Supreme Court also cited to the existence of non-tort remedies, including evidentiary and monetary sanctions, as well as criminal penalties, which act as deterrents to intentional acts of spoliation. However, the Supreme Court did not disapprove of injunctive relief as another non-tort alternative. Further, in deciding not to allow a new tort cause of action, the Supreme Court "certainly did not suggest that a litigant could do nothing to prevent spoliation from occurring, but could only react after the fact." Finally, in recognizing the difficulty in proving damages for intentional evidence spoliation, the Supreme Court in Cedars-Sinai also recognized that irreparable harm is likely to result when evidence is destroyed (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419-1420) .

Because plaintiff could lose the evidence if the injunction was not issued, and defendants admitted to copying information from plaintiff's computer discs, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding irreparable harm and the likelihood that the plaintiff would have success on the merits of the injunction (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419-1420) .

155 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities §§ 89.12-89.19

[Reserved]

§§ 89.12[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.20

§ 89.20 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Use of Procedure for Improper Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

Petition of _____ [name], Petitioner, to _____ [Perpetuate Testimony of _____ (name(s)) and/or Preserve Evidence] Prior to Filing of Action.	)))))))))	NO. _____ MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR _____ [PERPETUATION OF TESTIMONY and/or PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE] Date:_____ Time:_____ Location:_____ [Judge:_____] Date Action Filed:_____ [Trial Date:_____]

_____

_____'S [petitioner's name] PETITION FOR _____ [PERPETUATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF _____ (name) or PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE] IS IMPROPER BECAUSE THE PETITION HAS BEEN BROUGHT FOR THE PURPOSE OF _____ [ASCERTAINING THE POSSIBLE EXISTENCE OF A CAUSE OF ACTION OR A DEFENSE TO IT and/or IDENTIFYING THOSE WHO MIGHT BE MADE PARTIES TO AN ACTION NOT YET FILED].

A. Limitation on Use of Perpetuation of Testimony. The procedures of Section 2035.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure may not be employed for the purpose either of ascertaining the possible existence of a cause of action or a defense to it, or of identifying those who might be made parties to an action not yet filed (Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(b)).

B. Perpetuation Not Designed Primarily for Discovery. Perpetuation of testimony is allowed solely to preserve evidence for use in a probable future court case, and the statute providing for it was not designed for discovery. Thus, even though discovery may properly be a by-product of a perpetuation proceeding, discovery should not be the sole purpose (Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. County of Stanislaus (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 98, 77 Cal. Rptr. 832).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose a petition for perpetuation of testimony or preservation of evidence on the ground that the petitioner is improperly seeking to ascertain the possible existence of a cause of action or defense, or to identify those who might be made parties to an action not yet filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010(b) (limiting use of discovery before action is filed)].

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in this form may be combined with those in §§ 89.21 and 89.22 when counsel also wishes to contend that the petition fails to show the present inability of petitioner either to bring the action or to cause the action to be brought, or when the petition seeks to preserve evidence that cannot be used in a subsequent action.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the petition supported by the points and authorities set out in § 89.10.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show facts supporting the contention that petitioner is attempting to ascertain the possible existence of a cause of action, or defense to it; or identify those who might be made parties to a possible future action; or both. If appropriate, counsel should show why there is no sufficient likelihood that litigation will occur.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Perpetuation Not Designed Primarily for Discovery

In Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. County of Stanislaus (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 77 Cal. Rptr. 832 , petitioner planned to file an application with the county supervisors (sitting as the board of equalization) for reduction of an assessment on its inventory, and initiated proceedings pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq.) for an order permitting it to take depositions of the assessor and three of his deputies. The county resisted on the grounds that the depositions would not be admissible evidence either at the equalization hearing [see Rev. & Tax. Code § 1609] or at the trial of any possible court action thereafter, and that depositions under the perpetuation statute cannot be taken for discovery purposes only. The superior court denied the petition, and petitioner appealed from that order.

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying the petition, finding that if the depositions had been permitted, they could not have been used by direct introduction at the hearing before the board of supervisors. Furthermore, if petitioner were unsuccessful before the board, it could not introduce the depositions in any suit to attack the assessment and the board's determination (273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 93-94) . Petitioner conceded the point, but contended that it was entitled to the depositions for discovery purposes. The court of appeal held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq.) was designed for the perpetuation of testimony and that its utility is in the preservation of evidence for introduction in a probable future court case. It was not designed for discovery in the usual sense, which was the sole purpose in the case before the court. When a deposition is ordered under the statute, there may be inquiries that would incidentally constitute discovery. However, if there is no opportunity to use the perpetuated testimony in an actual legal action, the function and purpose of the statute is thwarted and its use to obtain collateral information only should be denied (273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 98) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Perpetuation Provision Not Designed Primarily for Discovery

In Campbell Chain Co. v. County of Alameda (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 248, 90 Cal. Rptr. 501 , an action by corporate taxpayers seeking to recover taxes paid under protest, plaintiffs contended on appeal that the trial court had erred in excluding depositions of the assessor and his deputies taken to perpetuate testimony. The court of appeal affirmed, holding, inter alia, that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq.) was designed for the perpetuation of testimony, even though discovery might be a by-product, and that if there is no opportunity to use perpetuated testimony in an actual legal action, the function and purpose of the statutory device is thwarted and its use to obtain only collateral information should be denied [citing Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. County of Stanislaus (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 77 Cal. Rptr. 832 , discussed in § 89.20[3][a]] (12 Cal. App. 3d 248, 257) .

The facts and procedural background of Block v. Superior Court (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 33 Cal. Rptr. 205 , are discussed in § 89.10[3][a]. In Block, the court of appeal held that it is the province of the trial court to determine whether there is sufficient likelihood that the expected litigation will occur (219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 478) . The court also noted that the then controlling perpetuation statute (former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017, comparable to the present Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq.) restricted its use to perpetuation purposes and eliminated its use for the discovery purposes adequately covered by other statutes (219 Cal. App. 2d 469, 477, n.5).

[b] Limitations on Use of Perpetuation of Testimony

In Orr v. City of Stockton (2007) 150 Cal. App. 4th 622, 630-631, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 662 , defendant city appealed a judgment for plaintiff, who was involved in an automobile accident with a city police officer driving a patrol car. On appeal, defendant renewed its argument that plaintiff failed to satisfy the California Tort Claims Act's six month statute of limitations in Gov. Code § 945.6(a)(1). Plaintiff countered that his petition to preserve evidence under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. constituted an "action" that satisfied the statute of limitations. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the filing of a petition to perpetuate testimony or preserve evidence did not constitute filing "suit" for purposes of satisfying the applicable statute of limitations, because it was not an adversarial proceeding to enforce a right or redress an injury. The procedure to perpetuate testimony or to preserve evidence under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq. "does not provide the petitioner with any further relief beyond obtaining discovery materials" [150 Cal. App. 4th 622, 630-631] .

157 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.21

§ 89.21 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Petitioner or Petitioner's Successor in Interest Failed to Show Inability to Bring Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 89.20[1].]

THE PETITION FOR _____ [PERPETUATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF _____ (name) and/or PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE] IS IMPROPER BECAUSE PETITIONER [OR PETITIONER'S SUCCESSOR IN INTEREST] DID NOT SUFFICIENTLY SET FORTH HIS/HER PRESENT INABILITY EITHER TO BRING THE ACTION TO WHICH PETITIONEREXPECTS TO BE A PARTY, OR CAUSE THAT ACTION TO BE BROUGHT.

Necessity to Show Inability to Bring Action. A petition to obtain discovery under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2035.010 et seq. must set forth the present inability of the petitioner and, if applicable, the petitioner's successor in interest either to bring that action or to cause it to be brought (Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(2)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose a petition for perpetuation of testimony or preservation of evidence on the ground that petitioner and, if applicable, the petitioner's successor in interest failed to show a present inability to bring the action to which he or she expects to be a party, or to cause that action to be brought [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030(b)(2)].

The points and authorities in this form may be combined with the points and authorities in § 89.20 when counsel wishes to contend that the perpetuation of testimony is generally improper because the petitioner is attempting to ascertain the possible existence of a cause of action, or defense to it; or to identify those who might be made parties to a possible future action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010]. This form may be combined with the points and authorities in § 89.22 if counsel wishes to contend that the petition is improper because the testimony or evidence sought to be preserved will not be usable in any subsequent legal action.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the petition supported by the points and authorities set out in § 89.10.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Counsel therefore should explain how petitioner and, if applicable, the petitioner's successor in interest failed to show, either categorically or adequately, an inability to bring the action or cause the action to be brought. Counsel also should show, if possible, why petitioner would be able either to bring the action, or cause the action to be brought. For example, if appropriate, counsel should show that petitioner or petitioner's successor in interest is able to bring an action for declaratory relief regarding the underlying subject matter.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.22

§ 89.22 Opposing Petition for Perpetuation of Testimony and/or Preservation of Evidence Prior to Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.030]--Testimony or Evidence Sought to Be Preserved Would Not Be Usable in Subsequent Legal Action

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 89.20[1].]

THE PETITION FOR _____ [PERPETUATION OF THE TESTIMONY OF _____ (name) and/or PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE _____ [TESTIMONY and/or EVIDENCE] SOUGHT TO BE PRESERVED CANNOT BE USED IN ANY SUBSEQUENT LEGAL ACTION.

Testimony or Evidence Must Be Usable in Action. If there is no opportunity to use perpetuated testimony (or preserved evidence) in a legal action, the function and purpose of the statutory device would be thwarted, and the use of the perpetuation procedure for obtaining only collateral information should be denied (Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. County of Stanislaus (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 98, 77 Cal. Rptr. 832).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose a petition for perpetuation of testimony or preservation of evidence on the ground that the testimony or evidence sought to be preserved cannot be used in any subsequent legal action.

The points and authorities in this form may be combined with the points and authorities in §§ 89.20 and 89.21 in an appropriate case.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the petition supported by the points and authorities set out in § 89.10.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect prior to the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel should thus refer to facts demonstrating that the particular testimony or evidence sought would not be usable in a subsequent legal proceeding and that the petition should therefore be denied.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Testimony or Evidence Must Be Usable in Action

Hunt-Wesson Foods, Inc. v. County of Stanislaus (1969) 273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 77 Cal. Rptr. 832 is discussed in § 89.20[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal had noted that the public officials' testimony that petitioner sought to perpetuate would not be usable in any subsequent legal action by petitioner. The court held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 2017 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 et seq.) was designed for the perpetuation of testimony and that its utility is in the preservation of evidence for introduction in a probable future court case. It was not designed for discovery in the usual sense, which was the sole purpose in the case before the court. When a deposition is ordered under the statute, there may be inquiries that would incidentally constitute discovery. However, if there is no opportunity to use the perpetuated testimony in an actual legal action, the function and purpose of the statute is thwarted and its use to obtain collateral information only should be denied (273 Cal. App. 2d 92, 98) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities §§ 89.23-89.29

[Reserved]

§§ 89.23[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89 DISCOVERY: PRESERVATION OF EVIDENCE
PART II. FORMS

8-89 California Points & Authorities § 89.30

§ 89.30 Supporting Motion to Exclude Deposition Testimony--Notice of Deposition Under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040 Was Inadequate [Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES SUPPORTING MOTION IN LIMINE OF _____ [status and name of moving party]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE MOTION TO EXCLUDE THE DEPOSITION TESTIMONY OF _____ [name], BECAUSE THE DEPOSITION WAS TAKEN PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 2035.010 et seq., BUT WITHOUT ADEQUATE NOTICE OF THE DEPOSITION TO THE MOVING PARTY AS A POTENTIAL ADVERSE PARTY.

Inadequate Notice of Deposition to Potential Adverse Party. Notice of a petition to obtain discovery under Code of Civil Procedure Section 2035.040 must be served on each natural person or organization named in the petition as an expected adverse party. If petitioner is unable to cause service to be made on any expected adverse party named in the petition, after a court order for service by publication, petitioner must serve those adverse parties by publication. Thus, notice is inadequate when it is not served on the party (or the party's attorney) or is not served by publication [see Code. Civ. Proc. § 2035.040; N.N.V. v. American Association of Blood Banks (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1395-1396, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885] .

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion, for example, a motion in limine, to exclude deposition testimony taken pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040, on the ground that the moving party, against whom the testimony is sought to be introduced, was not given adequate notice of the deposition under Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, facts of the case that show that the adverse party was not served in accordance with the prescribed procedure, or that the manner of service was defective, should be brought out [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.040].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of motion in limine to exclude specified evidence at trial, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 373, Motions in Limine (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Notice of Deposition to Potential Adverse Party

In N.N.V. v. American Association of Blood Banks (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 885 , the representative of a deceased minor child appealed a court order granting judgment in favor of defendant blood bank and defendant nurse on a complaint seeking damages for developing acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS) as a result of a blood transfusion (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1363) . Among other things, plaintiff contended that the court should grant a new trial because it erred in ruling that the deposition testimony of the child's father, taken pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2035 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2035.010 etseq.), was inadmissible (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1395) . The court of appeal disagreed, upholding the trial court's exclusion of the deposition in the trial against defendant nurse (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396) .

Former Code Civ. Proc. § 2035 provides a procedure for perpetuating deposition testimony before the filing of the complaint. It requires the filing of a petition in the superior court of the county of residence of at least one of the adverse parties and notice to the adverse parties. A deposition taken pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2035 may be used in any action involving the same subject matter that is brought in a California court, in accordance with former Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(u) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.620) against any party, or that party's successor in interest, named in the petition as an expected adverse party (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396) . In this case, defendant nurse was not given proper notice of the hearing on the deposition. The record showed that two hospitals and a blood bank were given notice of and appeared at the deposition. Plaintiff's notice of the deposition to defendant nurse gave notice to her in care of the attorneys for the two defendant hospitals, neither of which was her employer; and she did not appear at the deposition either personally or through an attorney. The court concluded that notice was inadequate (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396) . The court rejected plaintiff's argument that counsel for the other defendants who were present at the deposition covered matters that defendant nurse would have covered. Since the nurse was not an employee of any of the defendants present at the deposition, none had the motive to question the deponent as to the reliability and credibility of his identification of defendant nurse as the nurse who failed to communicate to the doctors his request for directed blood donation for his son (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396) . The court noted that, if anything, the hospital defendants had an interest adverse to that of defendant nurse's, that is, an interest in establishing that if any nurse failed to communicate a request for directed donation, that nurse was the defendant and not one of the nurses employed by the hospitals (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396-1397) . Moreover, the court added that even if notice were deemed adequate, the deposition testimony at issue was inadmissible hearsay (75 Cal. App. 4th 1358, 1396) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS

8-89A California Points & Authorities 89A.syn

§ 89A.syn Synopsis to Chapter 89A: DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS

§ 89A.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 89A.02 Governing Law

§ 89A.03 Review by Extraordinary Writ

§ 89A.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 89A.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Memoranda

§§ 89A.06-89A.09 [Reserved]

§ 89A.10 Caption for Memorandum in Support of or in Opposition to Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] or Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§§ 89A.11-89A.19 [Reserved]

§ 89A.20 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Remedy at Law

[b] Writ of Mandate Proper to Review Discovery Orders

[c] Questions of General Importance

[d] Abuse of Discretion

[e] Absence of Sufficient Showing to Sustain Trial Court Order

[f] Failure to Consider Legal Concepts

[g] Misconception of Law

[h] Both Writs of Mandate and Prohibition May Be Granted

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of General Importance

§ 89A.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Answers to Written Interrogatories

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers to Interrogatories

[b] Matters Subject to Discovery by Interrogatories

[c] Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Disclosure

[d] Abuse of Discretion in Denying Interrogatories

§ 89A.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Response to Requests for Admissions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Admissions

[b] Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Discovery

[c] Abuse of Discretion in Totally Denying Requests for Admissions

§ 89A.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Deposition Testimony

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers at Deposition

[b] Writ of Mandate to Compel Testimony at Deposition

[c] Urgency of Case Requiring Issuance of Peremptory Writ Without Alternative Writ of Mandate

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers at Deposition

§ 89A.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Inspection, Copying, Testing, of Sampling of Documents, Tangible Things, Land or Other Property, or Electronically Stored Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate When Production Improperly Denied

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mandate When Production Improperly Denied

§ 89A.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Physical or Mental Examination

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate to Compel Examination or Conditions of Examination

§§ 89A.26-89A.29 [Reserved]

§ 89A.30 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Availability of Writs to Review Grant of Discovery

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[e] Related Points and Authorities

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition Proper to Review Discovery Orders

[b] Questions of General Importance

[c] Remedy at Law Inadequate

[d] Abuse of Discretion

[e] Failure to Apply Proper Legal Concepts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of General Importance

§ 89A.31 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper to Prevent Improper Questions or Improper Conditions at Deposition

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Answer Improper Deposition Questions

[b] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Improper Conditions for Deposition

[c] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Disclose Privileged Information

§ 89A.32 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Improperly Ordered Party to Answer Interrogatories

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Answers to Interrogatories

[b] Prohibition Proper When Time Limit Has Expired

§ 89A.33 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure of Privileged Material

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Disclosure of Privileged Material

[b] Written Interrogatories

[c] Production of Documents or Records for Inspection

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Disclosure of Privileged Material

[b] Production of Documents or Records for Inspection

§ 89A.34 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure That Intrudes on Constitutionally Protected Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constitutionally Protected Interests

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Constitutionally Protected Interests

§ 89A.35 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Certain Sanctions Imposed for Not Complying With Discovery Order

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Sanctions

[b] Ultimate Possibility of Appeal No Bar to Writ of Prohibition

§§ 89A.36-89A.39 [Reserved]

§ 89A.40 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prerogative Writ Is Disfavored Method of Reviewing Discovery Order

[b] No Abuse of Discretion

[c] Issues of First Impression

[d] Discovery as Matter of Right

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Issues of First Impression

§ 89A.41 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Request for Sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 907, 1109; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.276(a), 8.764(a)]--Frivolous Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Discovery

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sanctions Appropriate for Frivolous Mandate Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Inspection

§§ 89A.42-89A.49 [Reserved]

§ 89A.50 Opposing Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Abuse of Discretion by Trial Court

[b] Discovery Statutes to Be Liberally Construed

[c] Relevancy Standard

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.01

§ 89A.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter includes memoranda relating to review of discovery orders by extraordinary writ. Forms in Part II include the following:

- A form for a caption for memorandum supporting a petition for writ of mandate or prohibition [§ 89A.10].
- Forms supporting a petition for writ of mandate [§ 89A.20 et seq.] and writ of prohibition [§ 89A.30 et seq.].
- Forms opposing a petition for writ of mandate [§ 89A.40 et seq.] and writ of prohibition [§ 89A.50].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.02

§ 89A.02 Governing Law

Civil discovery in California is governed primarily by the California Civil Discovery Act, codified at Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016.010 et seq.-2036.010 et seq. Discovery in limited civil cases is further governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 94 and 95. Statewide rules of court relating to discovery papers and discovery motions are set out in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1000, 3.1345, 3.1346, 3.1347, and 3.1348.

Provisions generally governing the appealability of interlocutory orders are set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 904.1 et seq. Review of nonappealable orders, by extraordinary writ of mandate or prohibition, are governed generally by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1108 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486 (writ proceedings in appellate courts).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibitionCivil ProcedureAppealsAppellate JurisdictionInterlocutory Orders

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.03

§ 89A.03 Review by Extraordinary Writ

A writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1085 normally is used to compel an inferior court to perform an act that the law requires that inferior court to perform. The writ of prohibition is the counterpart of mandate, and pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1102 is used to arrest, restrain, and prevent proceedings of an inferior court that has exceeded its jurisdiction [American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] . Therefore, mandate is usually the appropriate remedy for an improper denial of discovery, while prohibition is the proper remedy to prevent improper discovery [see Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 277-278 n.1, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409] . Despite the different purposes of the two prerogative writs, courts have often used mandate to prohibit actions of trial courts [Morris Stulsaft Foundation v. Superior Court (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 409, 415, 54 Cal. Rptr. 12] , which has had the effect of changing the test for the writ of prohibition from one of excess of jurisdiction to one of abuse of discretion [American Mut. Liab. Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 579, 589, 113 Cal. Rptr. 561] .

Although counsel should attempt to choose the appropriate writ, a mistake is not fatal if the allegations and prayers of the petition are broad enough to encompass the appropriate remedy, in which case the petition may be treated as one for such relief, and the appropriate writ granted [O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815] . If a single writ will not provide all of the relief required, the court may grant both the writ of prohibition to prevent the lower court from acting in excess of its jurisdiction, and mandate to compel a mandatory act [O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815] . Therefore, if it is not clear which writ is appropriate, counsel may wish to petition the court for both, in the alternative [Peck's Liquors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 775, 34 Cal. Rptr. 735] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.04

§ 89A.04 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Memoranda

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind, particularly with respect to petitions filed in a trial court, are page limits. Supporting and opposing memoranda filed in law and motion proceedings generally may not exceed 15 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded from these page limits. Any party must obtain leave of court to file a longer memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1103(a)(2) (application of law and motion rules to writ petitions in trial court)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Writ petitions in reviewing court are subject to the page limits and other format requirements applicable to appellate briefs generally [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(a)(6) (petitions subject generally to Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 15, now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204 (content and forms of appellate briefs); see also Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(b)(1)(B) (memoranda supporting or opposing writ petitions in reviewing court)]. Thus, the 50-page limit applicable to appellate briefs applies to writs petitions and their supporting memoranda, as well to memoranda opposing a petition [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204(c)(2)].

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The memoranda in this chapter are drafted to be used to support or oppose a petition for a writ of mandate in situations in which discovery has been improperly denied, or to support or oppose a writ of prohibition if discovery has improperly been granted. Counsel should note, however, that the relief granted by courts sometimes varies from this rule [see, e.g., Britt v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 844, 865, 143 Cal. Rptr. 695, 574 P.2d 766 (mandate vacating order compelling discovery)].

They should be combined, whenever appropriate, with memoranda relating generally to review proceedings by writ of mandate or prohibition [see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition]. Often it will also be appropriate to combine them with additional memoranda set out in the related discovery chapters. For example, review of the propriety of an order compelling discovery or a protective order limiting discovery may turn on issues relating to the general limits and timing of discovery, set out in Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing , or on issues relating to evidentiary privileges, work product protection, or other protective provisions found in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations .

It may also be appropriate to modify the memoranda in this chapter for use in a different procedural context, such as an appellate brief or an office memorandum.

For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a skeletal form of memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see also Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting Memoranda

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.05

§ 89A.05 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in writ proceedings to review discovery orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to writs proceedings for mandate or prohibition generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition in that publication.

[2] Related Memoranda

For memoranda relating to writ proceedings for mandate or prohibition generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition . For memoranda relating to discovery orders generally, see Ch. 80, Discovery : Scope, Regulation, and Timing, through Ch. 89, Discovery: Preservation of Evidence.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDiscoveryGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsMandamusCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

8-89A California Points & Authorities §§ 89A.06-89A.09

[Reserved]

§§ 89A.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.10

§ 89A.10 Caption for Memorandum in Support of or in Opposition to Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] or Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]

[1] FORM Caption for Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of or in Opposition to Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086] or Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
[OR]
IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DISTRICT
[DIVISION _____]
[OR]
THE SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	[CIVIL] NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM IN _____ )	[SUPPORT OF or OPPOSITION TO] WRIT OF
vs.	)	_____
	)	[MANDATE and/or PROHIBITION]
THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ _____
CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF	)	(1085, 1086 and/or 1102, 1103); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486]
_____	)	Date: _____
Respondent,	)	Time: _____
_____ [name],	)	Location: _____
Real Party in Interest.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is a standard caption for use in filing a memorandum either in support of or in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate or prohibition if the petition is filed as a separate document. The memorandum may also be attached to a petition for writ of mandate under the brief caption "Memorandum in Support of Petition" when the petition itself is introduced by a full caption which lists the memorandum.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities §§ 89A.11-89A.19

[Reserved]

§§ 89A.11[Reserved]

170 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.20

§ 89A.20 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--General Form

[Caption. See § 89A.10[1].]

A WRIT OF MANDATE IS PROPER TO REVIEW A LOWER COURT ORDER DENYING DISCOVERY.

A. Statutory Basis for Writ of Mandate. A writ of mandate may be issued by any court to any inferior court, to compel the performance of an act that the law specially enjoins as a duty resulting from an office, or to compel the admission of a party to the use and enjoyment of a right to which he or she is entitled, and from which he or she is unlawfully precluded by such inferior tribunal (Code Civ. Proc. § 1085(a)).

B. Inadequate Remedy at Law. The writ of mandate must be issued in all cases when there is not a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1086), including situations in which the remedy of direct appeal would be inadequate (see Browne v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 610, 613, 159 Cal. Rptr. 669).

C. Writ of Mandate Proper to Review Discovery Orders. A writ of mandate is an adequate remedy for reviewing an improper denial of discovery (see Rudnick v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 924, 928, 114 Cal. Rptr. 603, 523 P.2d 643 ; Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 277-278 n.1, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409).

D. Questions of General Importance. A writ of mandate may be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and that may result in the establishment of general guidelines for future cases (Rudnick v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 924, 928, 114 Cal. Rptr. 603, 523 P.2d 643 ; Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 278 n.2, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409).

[Optional] E. Abuse of Discretion. While a trial court bears primary responsibility for the conduct of civil discovery and possesses a concomitant widediscretion in ruling on discovery matters, an order of the trial court denying discovery will be subject to a writ of mandate and overturned on a prerogative writ if there is no substantial basis for the manner in which trial court discretion was exercised or if the trial court applied a patently improper standard of decision (Coriell v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 487, 491 n.1, 114 Cal. Rptr. 310 ; see also Babb v. Superior Court (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 841, 851, 92 Cal. Rptr. 179, 479 P.2d 379).

[Optional] F. Absence of Sufficient Showing to Sustain Trial Court Order. A writ of mandate will issue when the absence of a sufficient showing to sustain the trial court's order and the absence of any reasons or grounds on the part of the trial court for sustaining the objections compel the conclusion that there was an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court (Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 687, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520).

[Optional] G. Failure to Consider Legal Concepts. Any record that indicates failure of a trial court to give adequate consideration to the legal concepts involved on a request for discovery is subject to the attack of abuse of discretion by writ of mandate (Poeschl v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 383, 387, 40 Cal. Rptr. 697).

[Optional] H. Misconception of Law. If a trial court's decision denying discovery is predicated on a misconception of the law, it is subject to reversal by a writ of mandate (Henard v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133, 102 Cal. Rptr. 721).

[Optional] I. Both Writs of Mandate and Prohibition May Be Granted. If a single writ will not grant all of the relief required, an appellate court may grant both a writ of prohibition to prevent the lower court from acting in excess of its jurisdiction and a writ of mandate to compel a mandatory act (O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815).

[Add specific memoranda relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations in question (see, e.g., § 89A.21 et seq.).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is a general form that may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate seeking to review a discovery order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097. It should be combined with specific memoranda relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see § 89A.21 et seq.]. It may also be combined with a memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see § 89A.30 et seq.] pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 if both types of relief are desired [O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815 ; see Optional Paragraph I].

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in writ proceedings to review discovery orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to writs proceedings for mandate or prohibition generally, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition in that publication.

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda in support of petitions for writs of mandate generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[e] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the memorandum set out in § 89A.40 et seq. may be used to oppose the petition supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Remedy at Law

Browne v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 610, 159 Cal. Rptr. 669 concerned a personal injury action, in which plaintiff refused to be medically examined by a vocational rehabilitation expert who was not a licensed physician. On defendants' motion, the trial court granted an order under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2032(a) to require plaintiff to submit to such an examination (but see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.020(b) (physical examination by licensed physician or other appropriate licensed health care practitioner), 2032.220 (demand for physical examination of personal injury plaintiff, without court order), 2032.310(motion for order of physical examination)).

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate, noting that while the use of the prerogative writ to review discovery orders is ordinarily disfavored, it is a proper method of review when the aggrieved party is confronted with the Hobsonian choice of either submitting to the intrusive procedure, or exposing himself or herself to the possibility of sanctions for noncompliance. In support of its position, the court of appeal held further that the Browne petition for a writ of mandate presented a question of first impression for which clear guidelines had been established. In addition, the court noted that the use of the prerogative writ was an appropriate one in that the remedy afforded by direct appeal would be inadequate (98 Cal. App. 3d 610, 613) . Thus the court issued the writ, compelling the trial court to vacate its discovery order (98 Cal. App. 3d 610, 616) .

Note that the court of appeal in Browne issued a writ of mandate, although the trial court error lay in its issuance of an improper order, and not its failure to act, which is the usual ground for a writ of mandate. For a discussion of the interchangeability of the two types of writs, see § 89A.03.

[b] Writ of Mandate Proper to Review Discovery Orders

In Rudnick v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 924, 114 Cal. Rptr. 603, 523 P.2d 643 , plaintiff sued the manufacturers of a drug for damages for injuries allegedly caused by her use of the drug. She notified defendants to produce all of their records of reports of adverse effects of the drug on other users in conjunction with a deposition of their custodian of record, but defendants refused on the ground that the production of such records would violate the physician-patient privilege with respect to the patients involved and their physicians, who had submitted the reports to the manufacturers. Plaintiff then moved pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 (see now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.300 (order compelling response to demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling), 2031.320 (order compelling compliance with demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling)) for an order to produce the records, which the court granted, but only with respect to the names and addresses of the physicians involved. The court of appeal denied plaintiff's application for a writ of mandate, but the Supreme Court granted a hearing and issued an alternative writ. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate after the hearing, the Court said that a writ of mandate is a proper remedy for reviewing discovery procedures and that the Court was compelled to issue the alternative writ because it was presented with a question of first impression that was of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and in conjunction with which general guidelines could be laid down for future cases (11 Cal. 3d 924, 928) .

In Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 , plaintiffs filed an action for wrongful attachment and initiated discovery proceedings. They first propounded requests for admissions that the levy of the attachment was regular and valid on its face, that there had been no motion or proceeding to dissolve or discharge the attachment, that such a motion or proceeding would have been unsuccessful, idle, and futile, and that a successful defense of the underlying action was the only way the attachment would be dissolved. The bonding company objected to these requests for admissions by stating that they called for legal conclusions, not admissions of fact. The lower court sustained the objections.

The plaintiffs then propounded written interrogatories to the bonding company, asking whether it contended that the levy of attachment was not valid and regular on its face, or that plaintiffs could successfully have moved or otherwise proceeded to dissolve the attachment prior to defending the underlying action. The interrogatories requested that if the bonding company did make such contentions, it state all facts on which the denial of all the allegations in the complaint were based. The lower court sustained the bonding company's objections to the interrogatories on the ground that they called for the legal opinion and conclusions of the defendant. It sustained the objection to the general interrogatory on the ground that it was a shotgun question and in effect sought to have the defendant divulge its entire theory of defense. Plaintiffs sought a writ of mandate from the Supreme Court to compel the lower court to set aside the orders sustaining defendants' objections and denying plaintiffs' motion for further responses to written interrogatories.

In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate requiring the lower court to vacate its order sustaining the objections to the requests for admissions and sustaining the lower court's order denying further responses to written interrogatories, the Court in Burke, in discussing the function of discovery proceedings, distinguished the purposes for which a writ of mandate and a writ of prohibition are issued. It stated that mandate is ordinarily the sufficient and appropriate remedy for an improper denial of discovery, while prohibition is the remedy ordinarily employed to prevent improper discovery (71 Cal. 2d 276, 277-278 n.1). Citing Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 (discussed in § 89A.30[3][a]), the Court said that in most cases, the parties must be relegated to a review of an interim discovery order on appeal from the final judgment. Prerogative writs, such as a writ of mandate, should only be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases (71 Cal. 2d 276, 278 n.2). The Court found the case before it to be an appropriate case for review by writ (71 Cal. 2d 276, 277-278) .

[c] Questions of General Importance

Rudnick v. Superior Court (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 924, 114 Cal. Rptr. 603, 523 P.2d 643 and Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 are discussed in [b], above.

[d] Abuse of Discretion

In Coriell v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 487, 114 Cal. Rptr. 310 , plaintiffs filed a class action against a major grocery store chain, alleging that defendant had deliberately and negligently mislabeled packaged meat sold in its stores, thereby damaging its customers who purchased such meat. Plaintiffs submitted written interrogatories to defendant, which answered three of the interrogatories seeking the factual basis for its affirmative defenses, and then moved the court for an order deferring discovery until after a court determination on the class worthiness of the action. The court granted the motion.

In determining the motion, the trial court, in effect, placed the burden on plaintiffs to demonstrate that they were entitled to answers to the interrogatories rather than on defendant to establish factually that it was entitled to a protective order against being required to answer. In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order and hold a new hearing, the court of appeal said that while the trial court bears primary responsibility for the conduct of civil discovery and possesses a concomitant wide discretion in ruling on discovery matters, an order of the trial court denying discovery will be overturned by a prerogative writ if there is no substantial basis for the manner in which the trial court's discretion was exercised or if the trial court applied a patently improper standard of decision (39 Cal. App. 3d 487, 491 n.1).

In Babb v. Superior Court (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 841, 92 Cal. Rptr. 179, 479 P.2d 379 , which did not involve pretrial discovery, plaintiff sued defendant for medical malpractice. Defendant, by way of a cross complaint in declaratory relief against plaintiff and her attorney, sought a judgment declaring that in the event the malpractice action terminated in his favor, such action would have been prosecuted maliciously and without proper cause. Plaintiff's demurrer to the cross complaint was overruled with the trial court relying not only on dictum in a case that appeared to approve the grant of a declaratory judgment for malicious prosecution before the prior suit is terminated, but also on the indemnity analogy whereby a defendant is allowed to file a cross complaint seeking a declaration of his or her right to indemnity from third persons as part of the very suit in which his or her own liability is being determined.

On plaintiff's application for a writ of prohibition, which the court treated as one for a writ of mandate, the Supreme Court granted a peremptory writ commanding the trial court to vacate its order and sustain the demurrer without leave to amend. The Court stated that although it is well established that mandamus cannot be issued to control a court's discretion, in unusual circumstances the writ will lie when, under the facts, that discretion can be exercised in only one way (3 Cal. 3d 841, 851) . The Court said that in this case the trial court had no discretion to overrule plaintiff's demurrer to the cross complaint, which was legally defective on its face (3 Cal. 3d 841, 851) . The Court stated, however, that its action on the matter should not be understood to indicate a willingness to employ the prerogative writs to review rulings on pleadings, but that on occasion, attention is drawn to instances of such grave nature, or of such significant legal impact, that a court feels compelled to intervene through the issuance of an extraordinary writ (3 Cal. 3d 841, 851) .

[e] Absence of Sufficient Showing to Sustain Trial Court Order

In Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520 , plaintiff brought an action for specific performance of an option in a land contract and for a declaratory judgment to determine which party to the action had the obligation to ascertain the number of acres subject to the option agreement. Defendants took plaintiff's deposition, and then on several occasions attempted to obtain a trial court order compelling plaintiff to answer certain questions which he had refused to answer. Finally, defendants submitted written interrogatories to plaintiff, who objected to the same questions in written form, and the trial court denied defendants' motion to compel plaintiff to answer those written questions. Defendants sought a writ of mandate from the court of appeal to compel the trial court to order plaintiff to answer the written interrogatories. In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate, the court said that the trial court made no assignment of its reasons for denying the motion. The absence of a sufficient showing to sustain a trial court's order, and the absence of any reasons or grounds on the part of the trial court for sustaining the objections, compelled the conclusion that there was an abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court, since there could be little doubt that the information sought by the interrogatories was relevant to the subject matter of the pending action (208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 687-688) .

[f] Failure to Consider Legal Concepts

In Poeschl v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 383, 40 Cal. Rptr. 697 , plaintiff sued defendant for damages for an alleged breach of an employment contract. Both sides scheduled depositions by stipulation. Prior to the deposition of plaintiff, defendant moved the trial court to direct plaintiff to produce all recordings taken or possessed by him of conversations between him and defendant relating to his employment or discharge by defendant, which the trial court denied. Defendant sought a writ of mandate from the court of appeal to compel production of the tape recordings for his inspection prior to the taking of plaintiff's deposition on the ground that the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to allow discovery of the recordings. In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate, the court of appeal said that in the record before it, it could see no justification for denying the discovery order of defendant. The court said that any record that indicates failure to give adequate consideration to the legal concepts involved on a request for discovery is subject to the attack of abuse of discretion (229 Cal. App. 2d 383, 386-387) .

[g] Misconception of Law

In Henard v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 129, 102 Cal. Rptr. 721 , plaintiffs, who were husband and wife, sued a drug manufacturer for damages for injuries consisting of cerebral thrombosis allegedly sustained by the wife as a result of the side effects of an oral contraceptive manufactured by defendant and taken by the wife. During discovery proceedings, defendant furnished plaintiffs with copies of drug reaction reports prepared by doctors who had prescribed the drug for their patients, but defendant refused to give plaintiffs the names and addresses of such doctors, who were identified in the reports only by their initials. The trial court denied a motion by plaintiffs requiring defendants to supply such information.

In granting plaintiffs' request for a writ of mandate, the court of appeal said that the trial court apparently agreed with defendant that disclosure of the doctors' identities was prohibited under federal law by the Freedom of Information Act [see 5 U.S.C. § 552], requiring that agencies of the federal government make information available to the public, but making certain exceptions to the mandatory disclosure of such information. The court said that this law had no application to information voluntarily supplied by medical doctors to private companies and only applied to the affected governmental agencies, and therefore had no effect on the information requested by discovery in this case. If a trial court's decision denying discovery is predicated on a misconception of the law, it cannot be permitted to stand (26 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133) . The court issued a peremptory writ requiring the trial court to vacate its order denying plaintiffs' motion, and directing the trial court to enter a new order consistent with the views expressed in the opinion (26 Cal. App. 3d 129, 134) .

[h] Both Writs of Mandate and Prohibition May Be Granted

In O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815 , plaintiff sued defendant to recover damages for personal injuries allegedly incurred in an automobile accident. Plaintiff served defendant with written interrogatories, which defendant answered. Plaintiff then brought a motion to compel further answers to the interrogatories. The motion was made after expiration of the time period specified for such further answers in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2030 (see now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016.050, 2030.300; notice of motion to compel further response must be made within 45 days of service of response, or any supplemental response, or longer if service is by mail or if parties agreed in writing). The court granted the motion compelling defendant to further answer the interrogatories. Defendant sought a writ of prohibition from the court of appeal to restrain the trial court from enforcing its order.

In issuing a peremptory writ of prohibition and a peremptory writ of mandate, the court of appeal said that the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2030 was mandatory and the failure of plaintiff to move for further answers within the statutory time foreclosed further relief (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 391) . The court also said that when the allegations and prayers of a petition for a prerogative writ were broad enough to encompass the appropriate remedy, the petition could be treated as a petition for such relief and the proper order could be granted. If a single writ will not grant all of the relief required, the court may grant prohibition to prevent the lower court from acting in excess of its jurisdiction and mandamus to compel a mandatory act (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of General Importance

Holm v. Superior Court (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 232 Cal. Rptr. 432 was a probate case in which the real parties in interest were contesting decedent's will, alleging that the decedent lacked testamentary capacity and that the will was the product of fraud and undue influence. They requested permission to exhume decedent's corpse so that an autopsy could be performed on the brain to determine whether he had suffered from any organic brain disorder. The probate court issued the requested order. Petitioners filed a writ of mandate and requested a stay of disinterment and autopsy pending review. The court of appeal issued the stay and issued a writ directing the probate court to vacate its order (187 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1244, 1249) . The court acknowledged that review of discovery orders by way of extraordinary writ is not favored, and is generally granted only when the order threatens to infringe on a privilege, or when the case involves significant issues. The court found the case to involve significant issues in light of the especially sensitive nature of the interests affected by the probate court's order, and because the issue was apparently one of first impression. It concluded that the case was within the exception of nonreview (187 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1244) .

In Mavroudis v. Superior Court (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 594, 162 Cal. Rptr. 724 , the court of appeal stated that the writ of mandate is a proper remedy for the review of discovery orders, but is not normally granted in such cases. The court, however, had been compelled to issue the alternative writ in the case before it because it was presented with a question of first impression of general importance to the legal community and in conjunction with which general guidelines could be laid down for future cases (102 Cal. App. 3d 594, 599) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.21

§ 89A.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Answers to Written Interrogatories

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Answers to Written Interrogatories

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., § 89A.20).]

MANDATE IS PROPER TO DIRECT A LOWER COURT TO COMPEL ANSWERS TO WRITTEN INTERROGATORIES.

A. Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers to Interrogatories. A writ of mandate is proper to compel answers to written interrogatories when a lower court improperly denied a party's request for answers to such interrogatories (see Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 282-286, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 ; West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 422, 15 Cal. Rptr. 119, 364 P.2d 295).

B. Matters Subject to Discovery by Interrogatories. Any party may obtain discovery by interrogatories to a party, pursuant to Section 2030.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure, regarding any matter not privileged that is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action or to the determination of any motion made in that action, if that matter is itself admissible in evidence or appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence. The discovery may relate to the claim or defense of the party seeking discovery or of any other party to the action. The discovery may be obtained of the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter, as well as of the existence, description, nature, custody, condition, and location of any document, tangible thing, or land or other property (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2017.010, 2019.010(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.010 et seq.; Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 685, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520 (construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 2016).

[Optional] C. Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Disclosure. In determining the question of relevancy with regard to discovery of information by interrogatories pursuant to Sections 2017.010 and 2030.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure, the discovery statutes should be construed liberally in favor of disclosure unless the request is clearly improper by virtue of well established causes of denial (see Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 685, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520).

[Optional] D. Abuse of Discretion in Denying Interrogatories. The absence of a showing sufficient to sustain a trial court's order denying a motion to compel a party to answer certain questions on written interrogatories, and the failure of the trial court to assign any reasons or grounds for sustaining objections to the interrogatories, compel the conclusion that there was an abuse of the trial court's discretion that may be corrected on a writ of mandate (see Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 687, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular questions are proper and that answers to them should be ordered (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097, seeking to compel answers to written interrogatories when a lower court improperly denied a party's motion to compel answers or further answers to such interrogatories. They should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate contained in § 89A.20, and with any other specific points and authorities relating to other particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see § 89A.22 et seq.].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel answers to interrogatories, see Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories . For points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine points and authorities from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers to Interrogatories

Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][b].

In West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 15 Cal. Rptr. 119, 364 P.2d 295 , plaintiff sued a finance company, alleging that certain transactions between them in the form of sales were actually loans made at usurious rates of interest. Plaintiff served the finance company with written interrogatories. It answered some and filed objections to others with the court (at that time and before its amendment, former Code Civ. Proc. § 2030 required the objecting party to file the objections for a court hearing; but now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2030.090 (protective order regarding interrogatories), 2030.210 (response to interrogatories)). The court sustained some of the objections, and ordered the finance company to answer the remaining interrogatories. In granting plaintiff a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to order the finance company to answer the remaining interrogatories, the Supreme Court said that in this case, a writ of mandate was the proper method to compel answers to the interrogatories because petitioner had alleged sufficient facts to make a prima facie showing of an abuse of discretion (56 Cal. 2d 407, 415) .

[b] Matters Subject to Discovery by Interrogatories

Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][e]. In ordering the issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate, the court of appeal said that discovery by interrogatories could be had pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2016 and 2030 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2017.010, 2019.010(b), 2030.010 et seq.) as to any matter relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action that is not privileged. It is not necessary that such matter be relevant to an issue in the case, and thus admissible at the trial, as long as the testimony sought appears reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence (208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 685) .

In determining the question of relevancy with regard to discovery of information by interrogatories, the discovery statutes must be construed liberally in favor of disclosure unless the request is clearly improper by virtue of well established causes of denial (208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 685) . The court concluded by stating that the absence of a sufficient showing to sustain the trial court's order denying the motion to compel petitioner to answer certain questions on written interrogatories, and the failure of the trial court to assign any reasons or grounds for sustaining objections to the interrogatories, compelled the conclusion that there was an abuse of the trial court's discretion that could be corrected on a writ of mandate (208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 686-687, 689) . The mere fact that the same question had been answered in a previous deposition did not preclude the request for a reply to an interrogatory in the absence of a showing that the requirement of a reply would be unjust, inequitable, oppressive, or burdensome (208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 687) .

[c] Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Disclosure

Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][e], and in [b], above.

[d] Abuse of Discretion in Denying Interrogatories

Darbee v. Superior Court (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 680, 25 Cal. Rptr. 520 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][e], and in [b], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.22

§ 89A.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Response to Requests for Admissions

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Response to Requests for Admissions

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., § 89A.20).]

MANDATE IS PROPER TO DIRECT A LOWER COURT TO COMPEL A PARTY TO RESPOND TO REQUESTS FOR ADMISSIONS.

A. Writ of Mandate to Compel Admissions. A writ of mandate is proper to compel a party to respond to requests for admissions of factual issues and of legal questions properly raised in the pleadings (see Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 282, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 ; Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 426-430, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303).

B. Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Discovery. In determining whether a party objecting to requests for admissions pursuant to Section 2033.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure has met the burden of showing that the requests do not fall within the purview of that statute, courts should adopt a liberal construction in favor of discovery (see Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 427, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303).

[Optional] C. Abuse of Discretion in Totally Denying Requests for Admissions. While a trial court is vested with wide discretion in deciding the propriety of requests for admissions, that discretion does not authorize the trial court to act on grounds not contemplated by Section 2033.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure or to make blanket orders barring disclosure in toto when the factual situation indicates that a just and equitable order could be made that would authorize disclosure with limitations (see Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 427, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular requests are proper and that responses to them should be ordered (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 86, Discovery: Requests for Admissions).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097 requesting the court to compel a party to respond to requests for admissions. They should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate contained in § 89A.20 and with any other specific points and authorities relating to other discovery issues and fact situations on review [see §§ 89A.21, 89A.23 et seq.].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel responses to requests for admissions, see Ch. 86, Discovery: Requests for Admissions . For points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine points and authorities from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Admissions

Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][b]. The Court stated that in California, a party may be required through discovery to disclose not only the evidentiary facts underlying affirmative defenses and denials, but also whether or not he or she makes a particular contention, either regarding the facts or regarding the possible issues in the case (71 Cal. 2d 276, 281) . Similarly, when a party is served with a request for admission concerning a legal question properly raised in the pleadings, he or she cannot object simply by asserting that the request calls for a conclusion of law. The party should make the admission if he or she is able to do so and does not in good faith intend to contest the issue at trial, thereby setting at rest a triable issue. Otherwise, he or she should set forth in detail the reasons why he or she cannot truthfully admit or deny the request (71 Cal. 2d 276, 282) .

In Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303 , plaintiff filed a complaint seeking damages for personal injuries alleged to have been incurred by ingestion of defendants' product and in the manner recommended or suggested in defendants' advertising. Plaintiff served defendants with a request for the admission of the truth of certain matters of fact, and defendants made a motion to strike the request, which the trial court granted in its entirety.

The Supreme Court granted plaintiff a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to require defendants to answer the request for admissions. The Court said that pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2033 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2033.020), requests for admission may be made without first obtaining an order of the court. They thus constitute a vehicle of discovery to which a litigant is entitled as a matter of right, unless the opposing party successfully bears the burden of showing that the request does not fall within the purview of the statute. In determining whether a party objecting to requests for admission has met the burden of showing that such requests do not fall within the purview of such statute, courts must adopt a liberal construction in favor of discovery. When the objections are predicated on annoyance, expense, embarrassment, oppression, or any other ground based on justice and equity, the trial court is vested with wide discretion, the exercise of which will not be disturbed by the appellate courts in the absence of an abuse. Such discretion, however, does not authorize the trial court to act on grounds not contemplated by the statute, nor to make blanket orders barring disclosure in toto when the factual situation indicates that a just and equitable order could be made that would authorize disclosure with limitations. Tested by the standards, the record in the case showed a clear abuse of discretion on the part of the trial court in denying the request for admissions in toto (56 Cal. 2d 423, 427) .

[b] Liberal Construction of Statute Favored for Discovery

Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303 is discussed in [a], above.

[c] Abuse of Discretion in Totally Denying Requests for Admissions

Cembrook v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 423, 15 Cal. Rptr. 127, 364 P.2d 303 is discussed in [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.23

§ 89A.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Deposition Testimony

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Deposition Testimony

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., § 89A.20).]

MANDATE IS PROPER TO DIRECT A LOWER COURT TO COMPEL A WITNESS TO _____ [TESTIFY AT A DEPOSITION or ANSWER SPECIFIC DEPOSITION QUESTIONS].

[EITHER]

A. Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers at Deposition. A writ of mandate is proper to obtain an order compelling a party to answer particular questions at a deposition (see Regents of University of California v. Superior Court (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 788, 789, 19 Cal. Rptr. 568 ; Morris Stulsaft Foundation v. Superior Court (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 409, 415-416, 54 Cal. Rptr. 12).

[OR]

A. Writ of Mandate to Compel Testimony at Deposition. A writ of mandate is proper to obtain an order to compel a party or another witness to attend and testify at a deposition (see Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 963-964, 93 Cal. Rptr. 719).

[Optional] B. Urgency of Case Requiring Issuance of Peremptory Writ Without Alternative Writ. When an impending trial creates a situation of urgency, a court may issue a peremptory writ of mandate in the first instance, without the issuance of an alternative writ, to compel a witness to testify at a deposition (see Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 963-964, 93 Cal. Rptr. 719).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular questions are proper and answers should be ordered or that the particular person may be deposed and should be ordered to attend (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097 requesting the court to compel a party or witness to answer certain questions that he or she has not answered at a deposition, or to appear and testify at a deposition. It should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate contained in § 89A.20, and with other specific points and authorities relating to any other particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see §§ 89A.21, 89A.22, and 89A.23 et seq.].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel testimony, etc., in a deposition, see Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions . For points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine points and authorities from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers at Deposition

Regents of University of California v. Superior Court (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 19 Cal. Rptr. 568 involved an action for false arrest, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution, in which plaintiff refused to answer various deposition questions, claiming privilege and lack of relevance. Defendants moved the trial court for an order to compel plaintiff to answer the deposition questions, and the trial court denied the motion. Defendants sought a writ of mandate to command the trial court to compel answers to the questions propounded to plaintiff at his deposition.

The court of appeal granted the writ, holding that the mandate procedure is a proper method for obtaining relief in the discovery context, since there is no review by appeal from an order denying discovery (200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 789) . Because the court found that plaintiff's reliance on the privilege against self-incrimination was misplaced and that the answers to the proposed questions were relevant to the subject matter of the action (200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 792, 793) , the court granted a peremptory writ of mandate, which required the trial court to vacate its order denying defendants' motion to compel answers to the deposition questions, and which ordered the discovery sought by defendants (200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 796) .

Morris Stulsaft Foundation v. Superior Court (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 409, 54 Cal. Rptr. 12 arose from a will contest. A witness to one of the wills in question refused to answer certain questions at his deposition, and the trial court denied a motion to compel answers to those questions. Contestants to the will filed a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal stated that the writ of mandate is a proper remedy when the trial court has abused its discretion in restraining discovery sought by deposition (245 Cal. App. 2d 409, 415-416) . In support of this statement, the court relied on several cases, including Regents of University of California v. Superior Court (1962) 200 Cal. App. 2d 787, 789, 19 Cal. Rptr. 568 (discussed above). The court found the questions to be reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible evidence or to be relevant, and ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate requiring the trial court to vacate its order and to grant the motion to compel answers and to order the discovery requested (245 Cal. App. 2d 409, 424) .

[b] Writ of Mandate to Compel Testimony at Deposition

In Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 93 Cal. Rptr. 719 , petitioner sought to depose a witness who was expected to testify for another party in an impending trial in which petitioner was involved. When the trial court refused to grant an order compelling the witness to testify, petitioner sought a writ of mandate from the court of appeal. In granting the writ, the court said that although good cause is required to depose an expert witness, petitioner satisfied the requirement and was entitled to the discovery sought, and that a writ of mandate was proper for that purpose. When good cause is required, the showing must be liberally construed. The moving party is entitled to discovery on a showing that the information sought is necessary for the preparation of its case, and the request may be granted without abuse of the rights of the adversary. There is no requirement that the moving party show that it does not have equal access to the facts on which the expert's opinion is based. The court concluded that when an impending trial creates a situation of urgency, a court may issue a peremptory writ of mandate in the first instance to compel a witness to testify at a deposition, without the prior issuance of an alternative writ (15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 963) .

[c] Urgency of Case Requiring Issuance of Peremptory Writ Without Alternative Writ of Mandate

Bolles v. Superior Court (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 962, 93 Cal. Rptr. 719 is discussed in [b], above.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Writ of Mandate to Compel Answers at Deposition

Pember v. Superior Court (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 888, 50 Cal. Rptr. 24 was an action for damages for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. Plaintiff took defendant's deposition, and defendant refused to answer a question that was identical to an interrogatory propounded by plaintiff, which defendant had answered. The trial judge refused to compel defendant to answer on a proceeding in the trial court. Plaintiff brought a petition for a writ of mandate to compel defendant to answer. The court of appeal found that the trial court's refusal to require defendant to answer was an abuse of discretion, since there was no sound basis on which to justify the denial of plaintiff's request for an order that defendant answer (240 Cal. App. 2d 888, 890) . The court of appeal ordered that a peremptory writ of mandate issue requiring the superior court to set aside its order, and enter an order that defendant answer (240 Cal. App. 2d 888, 890) .

In Kramer v. Superior Court (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 753, 47 Cal. Rptr. 317 , plaintiff sought compensatory and exemplary damages in an action for libel and defamation. Defendant refused to answer deposition questions relating to conversations and discussions he had concerning plaintiff, the meaning of words used by defendant, defendant's subjective opinion of plaintiff, and defendant's financial status or condition. Plaintiff moved the court for an order compelling answers pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.450 (motion to compel testimony at deposition)), and the court denied the motion for a lack of a showing of good cause. Plaintiff filed a petition for a writ of mandate, and the court of appeal granted the writ. The court directed the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to determine the motion in accordance with the appellate court's ruling that a party who seeks a court order compelling a nonexpert witness to answer questions on oral deposition relating to relevant and nonprivileged matters is not required to show good cause, as was defined in former Code Civ. Proc. § 2036 (237 Cal. App. 2d 753, 755) .

Note

that the courts in Pember and Kramer did not discuss the propriety of the use of a writ of mandate to obtain an order compelling answers to deposition questions. These cases, however, serve as examples of the use of a writ of mandate for that purpose.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.24

§ 89A.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Inspection, Copying, Testing, of Sampling of Documents, Tangible Things, Land or Other Property, or Electronically Stored Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.]

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Inspection, Copying, Testing, of Sampling of Documents, Tangible Things, Land or Other Property, or Electronically Stored Evidence [Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.]

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., § 89A.20).]

MANDATE IS PROPER TO REVIEW A TRIAL COURT'S ORDER DENYING PRODUCTION AND INSPECTION OF DOCUMENTS OR OTHER THINGS.

Mandate When Production Improperly Denied. Mandate is a proper remedy when the trial court has improperly denied a motion for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of documents, tangible things, land or other property, or electronically stored information (see Shepherd v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 107, 118-119, 130 Cal. Rptr. 257, 550 P.2d 161 ; Associated Brewers Distr. Co. v. Superior Court (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 583, 588-589, 55 Cal. Rptr. 772, 422 P.2d 332).

[When appropriate, add memoranda showing that identification and production of the particular items is proper and should be ordered (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097, by a party seeking to overturn a lower court's order denying a motion for the inspection, copying, testing, or sampling of documents, tangible things, land or other property, or electronically stored information. It should be combined with the general memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of mandate contained in § 89A.20, and with other specific memoranda relating to any other particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see §§ 89A.21 -89A.23, 89A.25].

For memoranda of relating to motions to compel testimony, etc., in a deposition, see Ch. 85, Discovery: Production or Inspection of Tangible Evidence . For memoranda relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine memoranda from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate When Production Improperly Denied

Shepherd v. Superior Court (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 107, 130 Cal. Rptr. 257, 550 P.2d 161 was a wrongful death action against a city and some individual police officers. Among plaintiff's discovery requests was a request under former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010) to photograph the individual defendants in the clothes they wore the night plaintiff's son was shot. Plaintiff claimed that the photographs would facilitate the interviewing of potential witnesses. Defendants refused to comply with the request, and plaintiff made a motion pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (see now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.300-2031.320) for an order requiring defendants to be photographed as requested. The trial court believed that it lacked authority under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031 or 2034 to make the requested order and denied plaintiff's motion.

Plaintiff petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate. The Court held that photographing of the face and body of a person was well within the contemplation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 when the words "objects and tangible things" (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010(c) ("tangible things")) in that statute were liberally construed (17 Cal. 3d 107, 118) . The Court stated that when the trial court denied the motion it was under the erroneous impression that it had no authority under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031 and 2034 to make an order requiring defendants to be photographed in the clothing they wore the night of the incident in question, and that the trial court had therefore denied the motion without making the discretionary determination of good cause that was then required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 2034 (17 Cal. 3d 107, 119) (but now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.300-2031.320, which do not require showing of good cause). While mandate normally does not lie to control the exercise of discretion, it is appropriate to compel an officer both to exercise his or her discretion and to exercise it under a proper interpretation of the law (17 Cal. 3d 107, 118) . The Court therefore issued a writ of mandate to require the trial court to determine whether good cause existed for the order sought (17 Cal. 3d 107, 119) .

In Associated Brewers Distr. Co. v. Superior Court (1967) 65 Cal. 2d 583, 55 Cal. Rptr. 772, 422 P.2d 332 , plaintiff brewing company sued defendant distributing company for goods sold and delivered, but not paid for, and defendant counterclaimed that plaintiff had breached its oral distribution agreement, and the amount owed to it was offset against the damages resulting from the breach. The trial court overruled plaintiff's demurrer to the counterclaim on the grounds the oral agreement was barred by the parol evidence rule. Through interrogatories, defendant became aware of documents in the plaintiff's possession that tended to show the oral agreement. Defendant moved for the production and inspection of the documents pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 (prior to its 1974 amendment), and the motion was denied by the trial court (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.). After the court of appeal denied defendant's request for a writ of mandate compelling the production of the documents, defendant requested a writ of mandate from the Supreme Court, which granted an alternative writ of mandate.

In granting a peremptory writ of mandate, the Supreme Court said that this was an appropriate case for the issuance of such a writ because it offered the court the opportunity to consider a question of first impression and to lay down guidelines for future cases about what the meaning of "good cause" was pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2036 (but see now Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2031.300-2031.320, which do not require showing of good cause) (65 Cal. 2d 583, 585) . The Court said that although the trial court held that defendant did not need the information in the requested documents to prepare for trial, it had erred, since the objective of discovery is to prevent surprise at trial and to allow proper preparation, and this aim would be defeated by denial of the defendant's motion (65 Cal. 2d 583, 588) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mandate When Production Improperly Denied

In Dowell v. Superior Court (1956) 47 Cal. 2d 483, 304 P.2d 1009 , plaintiff sued defendant for personal injuries resulting from defendant's alleged negligence. While plaintiff was hospitalized, a claims investigator for defendant took a written statement from plaintiff concerning the circumstances of the accident, but did not give plaintiff a copy of the statement. After suit was instituted, plaintiff moved the court under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1000 (see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.) to require defendant to produce the statement for inspection and copying, but the trial court denied the motion. Plaintiff sought a writ of mandate from the Supreme Court requiring the trial court to order the production of the statement.

In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate, the Court stated that whether a motion for the production of a document or record for inspection should be granted or denied under former Code Civ. Proc. § 1000 is within the sound discretion of the trial court; a trial court's decision will only be disturbed by an appellate court if the trial court has abused its discretion. Since a trial court's order denying a request for the production and inspection of documents or records is not appealable, there is no plain, speedy, or adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law, and a writ of mandate is the appropriate remedy to obtain relief from the trial court's order (47 Cal. 2d 483, 486) . The Court concluded that although the issuance of a writ of mandate to compel the production of documents is not necessarily a matter of right, but lies within the discretion of an appellate court, a petitioner is entitled to such a writ as a matter of right, and it would be an abuse of discretion to refuse it when (1) a prima facie showing has been demonstrated for such inspection, (2) there is no adequate showing to the contrary, (3) the petitioner has a substantial right to protect or enforce, and (4) there is not another plain, speedy, or adequate remedy available but the issuance of such a writ (47 Cal. 2d 483, 486-487) .

Note

that Dowell was decided prior to the adoption of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq.), the section providing for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling. Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010 et seq. now provides for demand for inspection, copying, testing, or sampling without leave of court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.020(a), (b)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.25

§ 89A.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Physical or Mental Examination

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Trial Court Improperly Denied Discovery--Mandate Proper to Compel Physical or Mental Examination

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of mandate (see, e.g., § 89A.20).]

MANDATE IS PROPER TO DIRECT A LOWER COURT TO COMPEL A PARTY, A PARTY'S AGENT, OR A PERSON IN THE CUSTODY OR UNDER THE LEGAL CONTROL OF A PARTY TO SUBMIT TO A _____ [PHYSICAL or MENTAL] EXAMINATION AND TO SET CONDITIONS FOR THE CONDUCT OF SUCH EXAMINATION.

Mandate to Compel Examination or Conditions of Examination. A writ of mandate is proper to enforce discovery rights, such as those granted by Section 2032.010 et seq. of the Code of Civil Procedure relating to _____ [physical or mental] examinations (see Gonzi v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 586, 588-589, 335 P.2d 97 ; Harabedian v. Superior Court (1961) 195 Ca1 App. 2d 26, 30, 15 Cal. Rptr. 420).

[When appropriate, add memoranda showing why particular examination is proper and should be ordered (see Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of mandate, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097, requesting the court to compel a party, a party's agent, or a person in the custody or under the legal control of a party to submit to a physical or mental examination and set conditions for the conduct of such examination pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.020(a). It should be combined with the general memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of mandate contained in § 89A.20, and with any other appropriate specific memoranda relating to particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see §§ 89A.21 -89A.24].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel physical or mental examinations, and the conditions of those examinations, see Ch. 87, Discovery: Physical and Mental Examinations . Counsel may wish to combine memoranda from that chapter which relate to the particular factual situation in question, with this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate to Compel Examination or Conditions of Examination

In Gonzi v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 586, 335 P.2d 97 , a minor brought an action, through her guardian ad litem, for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. The trial court ordered plaintiff to submit to a physical examination, refusing plaintiff's request that the examination be conducted in the presence of a certified court reporter. Plaintiff brought a petition for a writ of mandate, and the court of appeal issued the writ directing the lower court to permit plaintiff to have a reporter present when she submitted to the examination. The Court cited its holding in Sharff v. Superior Court (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 508, 509, 510, 282 P.2d 896 , a case relating to physical examinations but decided prior to the enactment of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2032 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq.)(physical and mental examinations) or its predecessor (former Code Civ. Proc. § 2032 of the former Discovery Act), that mandate would issue where there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law for a party to obtain use of a right to which he or she is entitled and has been unlawfully precluded from using (51 Cal. 2d 586, 588) .

Harabedian v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1961) 195 Ca1 App. 2d 26, 15 Cal. Rptr. 420 was a personal injury action. In its pretrial order, the trial court ordered defendant to submit to an ophthalmological examination. The court denied defendant's motion to modify the pretrial order, and defendant filed a petition for a writ of prohibition or mandate. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to delete its order and enter an order that complied with the former version of Code Civ. Proc. § 2032.010 et seq. In discussing issuance of the writ, the court stated that a writ of mandamus may issue not only to enforce a proper discovery right, but also to prevent improper discovery proceedings, including physical examinations (195 Cal App. 2d 26, 30) .

176 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities §§ 89A.26-89A.29

[Reserved]

§§ 89A.26[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.30

§ 89A.30 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--General Form

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--General Form

[Caption. See § 89A.10[1].]

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS PROPER TO REVIEW A LOWER COURT ORDER GRANTING DISCOVERY.

A. Statutory Basis for Writ of Prohibition. A writ of prohibition may be issued by any court to an inferior tribunal in all cases when there is no plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1103).

B. Statutory Nature and Effect of Writ of Prohibition. A writ of prohibition arrests the proceedings of any tribunal when such proceedings are without or in excess of the jurisdiction of such tribunal (Code Civ. Proc. § 1102).

C. Writ of Prohibition Proper to Review Discovery Orders. A writ of prohibition may be a proper remedy for reviewing improperly permitted discovery (see Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439).

D. Questions of General Importance. A writ of prohibition may be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial court and to the profession, and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases (see Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439).

E. Remedy at Law Inadequate. A petitioner's remedy of appeal from the final judgment is inadequate when petitioner will be subject to sanctions for failure to obey the order that was in excess of jurisdiction (see O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 391-392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815).

[Optional] F. Abuse of Discretion. A writ of prohibition is a proper remedy when a lower court has abused its discretion in permitting or ordering discovery (see Bunnell v. Superior Court (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 720, 721 n.1, 62 Cal. Rptr. 458 ; O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 391, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815).

[Optional] G. Failure to Apply Proper Legal Concepts. Any record of a trial court that indicates a failure to give adequate consideration to proper legal concepts when granting discovery orders is subject to the attack of abuse of discretion regardless of the fact that the order shows no such abuse on its face (see Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 384, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266).

[Optional] H. Both Writs of Mandate and Prohibition May Be Granted. [See § 89A.20[1], Paragraph I.]

[Add specific points and authorities relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations in question (see, e.g., § 89A.31 et seq.).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities is a general form that may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition seeking to review a discovery order pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105. It should be combined with specific points and authorities relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations on review [see § 89A.31 et seq.]. It may also be combined with a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of mandate [see § 89A.20 et seq.] pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097 when both types of relief are desired [see O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815] .

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Availability of Writs to Review Grant of Discovery

Note that the Supreme Court has stated that the proper rule is that one of the prime purposes of the former Discovery Act, expediting the trial of an action, would be defeated if appellate courts entertained petitions for prerogative writs that did not clearly demonstrate a violation of privilege or of former Cal. Const., art. I, § 19 (unreasonable search and seizure; now see Cal. Const., art. I, § 13) when discovery had been granted, and that the court would not entertain petitions for writs in discovery matters that did not contain facts showing that the petitioner was entitled to relief under these principles [see West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 415, 15 Cal. Rptr. 119, 364 P.2d 295 ; see also § 89A.34]. The Court has also stated that as inadequate as review by appeal may be, prerogative writs should only be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases [see Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 (Court issued alternative writ of prohibition to review propriety of order that plaintiff answer interrogatories)].

The rule in West Pico permitted a person to seek a prerogative writ when an order granting discovery violated a privilege or intruded on a constitutionally secured right to privacy [see Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 171 n.11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854] . Although Pacific Tel. & Tel. was decided before the adoption of Cal. Const., art. I, § 1, which guarantees the right to privacy, the Court's statement would seem to apply to seeking a prerogative writ to protect this right as well as the rights protected by Cal. Const., art. I, § 13 as set out in West Pico [see § 89A.34[3][a]]. In Britt v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 844, 851, 143 Cal. Rptr. 695, 574 P.2d 766 , the Court issued an alternative writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate a discovery order compelling disclosure of extensive information about the private associational activities of plaintiffs and numerous nonparties and raised significant and novel constitutional issues of general importance.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for use in writ proceedings to review discovery orders, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 200, Discovery: Review of Discovery Orders (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to writs proceedings for mandate or prohibition generally, including discussion of the elements of the record necessary for a reviewing court to consider a petition for writ of prohibition, see Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition in that publication.

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities in support of petitions for writs of mandate generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[f] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 89A.50 may be used to oppose the petition supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition Proper to Review Discovery Orders

In Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 , plaintiff school district brought eminent domain proceedings to condemn certain parcels of land belonging to various defendants. In preparation for trial, defendants filed and served on plaintiff written interrogatories calling for the names and addresses of each person who had rendered an opinion to plaintiff regarding the market value or severance damages to each individual parcel of land owned by defendants, together with their opinions, and the area contained in each parcel. No request was made for the written reports of the appraisers. Plaintiff answered all but the two interrogatories calling for the opinions of its appraisers regarding market value and severance damages, and it filed objections with the court regarding the two remaining interrogatories. After a hearing, the trial court overruled plaintiff's objections and ordered it to answer the interrogatories.

Plaintiff was granted an alternative writ of prohibition by the Supreme Court to conduct a hearing on the issues raised by the case, although after the hearing, the alternative writ was discharged and a peremptory writ of prohibition was denied. The Court said that the case was a proper one for the use of an alternative writ of prohibition. The prerogative writs have been used frequently to review interim orders in discovery cases, but this does not mean that these discretionary writs will or should issue as a matter of course in all cases when the court may be of the opinion that the interim order of the trial court was erroneous (58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4). In most such cases, as with most other interim orders, the parties must be relegated to a review of the order on appeal from the final judgment (58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4). As inadequate as such review may be in some cases, the prerogative writs should only be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases (58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4). The present case falls within this category, as it involves an issue of great importance that is present in practically all eminent domain cases (58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4). Guidelines established in Oceanside would be of great benefit in many such cases, so the case was a proper case for the use of the writ of prohibition (58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4).

[b] Questions of General Importance

Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 is discussed in [a], above.

[c] Remedy at Law Inadequate

The facts and procedural background of O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815 are discussed in § 89A.20[3][h]. In discussing the propriety of the writ of prohibition, the court of appeal stated that petitioner's remedy at law, appeal from the final judgment, was not adequate because petitioner would be subject to sanctions for failure to further answer the interrogatories (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392-393) .

[d] Abuse of Discretion

Bunnell v. Superior Court (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 720, 62 Cal. Rptr. 458 arose from an action for defamation that had previously been tried twice. A new trial was granted after the first trial, and a mistrial was declared after the second trial. In preparing for the third trial, defendant submitted interrogatories, including two requesting information concerning witnesses. Plaintiff first responded by referring to testimony and depositions in the prior trials. Defendant's motion for further answers was granted, and plaintiff submitted supplemental answers. A motion to compel further answers was again granted, along with attorney's fees. The trial court's order further stated that if the answers were not filed within five days, plaintiff could not present any witnesses at trial.

Plaintiff filed a petition for a writ of mandate, and the court of appeal issued an alternative writ. The court stated, however, that prohibition rather than mandate is the proper remedy when the lower court allegedly abused its discretion in permitting or ordering further discovery (254 Cal. App. 2d 720, 721 n.1). If the allegations of a petition are broad enough to encompass the appropriate relief, the court treats a petition as one for such relief (254 Cal. App. 2d 720, 721 n.1). The court of appeal concluded that the trial court abused its discretion in requiring further answers and in imposing sanctions for the failure to do so, and issued a writ of prohibition (254 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724) .

The facts and procedural background of O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815 are discussed in § 89A.20[3][h]. In discussing authority for the use of prerogative writs to review interim orders in discovery cases, the court, citing Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 , Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 368 n.1, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266 , and Twin Lock, Inc. v. Superior Court (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 754, 758, 344 P.2d 788 , stated that prohibition has been sought when it is alleged that the lower court has abused its discretion in permitting or ordering further discovery (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 391) .

[e] Failure to Apply Proper Legal Concepts

In Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266 , the petitioner was ordered by the trial court, pursuant to a motion by the plaintiffs, to produce and permit the inspection and copying or photographing of certain described documents. The Supreme Court granted the petitioner an alternative writ of prohibition to review the discovery order, but later discharged the writ and denied an application for a peremptory writ of prohibition. In doing so, the Court said that any record of a trial court that indicates a failure to give adequate consideration to proper legal concepts when granting discovery orders is subject to the attack of abuse of discretion by writ of prohibition, regardless of the fact that the order shows no such abuse on its face (56 Cal. 2d 355, 384) . The Court stated that to constitute a proper exercise of discretion, the factual determination of the trial court should clearly and unequivocally be based on the following legal concepts:

(1) The legislative purposes of discovery statutes are not to be subverted under the guise of the exercise of discretion.

(2) Those purposes are to be given effect rather than thwarted, so that discovery is encouraged.

(3) When disputed facts provide a basis for the exercise of discretion, those facts should be liberally construed in favor of discovery, rather than in the most limited and restricted manner possible.

(4) Although the statutory limitations on discovery must be applied when the facts so warrant, exercise of discretion does not authorize extension beyond these limits.

(5) There is no room for judicial discretion in those situations not included in the statutes but asserted as general limitations of privileges conferred. Such situations, however, may be subject to judicial discretion under the statutory power to prevent abuse and advance the ends of justice.

(6) The power to prevent abuse that is bestowed on the court by the provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 2019(b)(1) (protective orders concerning deposition; now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.260, 2025.420, 2028.070; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.090 (protective orders concerning interrogatories), 2031.060 (protective orders concerning inspection demands), 2032.510(d), (e) (protective orders concerning physical and mental examinations), 2033.080(b) (protective orders concerning requests for admissions), 2034.250 (protective orders concerning exchanges of expert witness lists)) is the power to exercise discretion based on the factual showing made. When the record indicates facts on which the court exercised its discretion, that exercise will not be disturbed on appeal. When the facts are undisputed, or there is but one reasonable interpretation of them, the question is not one of fact but of law.

(7) The trial courts, in exercising their discretion, should keep in mind that the Legislature has suggested that, when possible, the courts should impose partial limitations rather than outright denial of discovery.

(8) In the exercise of its discretion, the court should weigh the relative importance of the information sought against the hardship that its production might entail; it must weigh the relative ability of the parties to obtain the information before requiring the adversary to bear the burden or cost of production, keeping in mind the statutory admonition of entering an order consistent with justice (56 Cal. 2d 355, 383-384) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of General Importance

In Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft v. Superior Court (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 840, 176 Cal. Rptr. 874 , overruled on other grounds, American Home Assurance Co. v. Societe Commerciale Toutelectric (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 406, 128 Cal. Rptr. 2d 430 , defendant applied for a writ of mandate and/or prohibition to vacate the respondent court's discovery orders permitting international discovery. The court of appeal held that this unusual and difficult issue may properly be raised by writ petition (123 Cal. App. 3d 840, 846) .

In South Tahoe Public Utility Dist. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 135, 154 Cal. Rptr. 1 , plaintiff applied for a writ of mandate and/or prohibition to compel the trial court to vacate its order compelling plaintiff to answer an interrogatory calling for the disclosure of names and addresses of experts with whom it had consulted, and who might be called to testify. The court of appeal granted a writ of mandate, noting that while ordinarily the prerogative writ is not the favored method of reviewing discovery orders, such a method may be used to review questions of general importance. Because the trial court order in South Tahoe involved a matter of first impression about the scope of the work product privilege, the court held that it was indeed cognizable in a prerogative writ proceeding (90 Cal. App. 3d 135, 137) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.31

§ 89A.31 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper to Prevent Improper Questions or Improper Conditions at Deposition

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper to Prevent Improper Questions or Improper Conditions at Deposition

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition (see, e.g., § 89A.30)].

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION MAY BE PROPER TO RESTRAIN A LOWER COURT FROM ENFORCING AN ORDER REQUIRING A PARTY OR WITNESS TO _____ [ANSWER IMPROPER DEPOSITION QUESTIONS or TESTIFY AT A DEPOSITION UNDER IMPROPER CONDITIONS].

[EITHER]

A. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Answer Improper Deposition Questions. A writ of prohibition may be a proper remedy to restrain a lower court from ordering a deponent to answer improper deposition questions (see Peck's Liquors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 775, 776, 34 Cal. Rptr. 735).

[AND/OR]

B. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Improper Conditions for Deposition. A writ of prohibition may be proper to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring a deponent to testify at a deposition when the conditions of the deposition are improper (see Bailey v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 970, 971, 140 Cal. Rptr. 669, 568 P.2d 394).

[Optional] C. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Disclose Privileged

Information. A writ of prohibition may be a proper remedy to restrain a lower court from ordering a deponent to answer questions requiring disclosure of privileged information (see Peck's Liquors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 775-776, 34 Cal. Rptr. 735).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular deposition questions or conditions are improper (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 seeking to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring a party to testify at a deposition when the questions or the conditions of the deposition are improper. It should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition contained in § 89A.30, and with any other specific points and authorities relating to particular discovery issues and fact situations in question on review [see § 89A.32 et seq.].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel testimony, etc., in a deposition, see Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions . For points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine points and authorities from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Answer Improper Deposition Questions

Peck's Liquors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 34 Cal. Rptr. 735 arose out of an action against a liquor store, in which plaintiff contended that defendants sold alcoholic beverages at less than the fair trade prices, thereby damaging plaintiff. During depositions of various employees of defendant, the deponents refused to answer certain questions on the grounds of self-incrimination. On plaintiff's motion, the trial court ordered them to answer.

Seeking to prevent enforcement of that order, defendant petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of certiorari, prohibition, mandamus, or any other alternative writ. The court held that this procedure was correct, stating that when a pleader is in doubt regarding the type of writ to seek, it is proper to state the prayer in the alternative. The court also held that a writ of prohibition may be a proper remedy for seeking review of the propriety of a lower court order (221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 775) . Additionally, when a lower court issues an order compelling a witness to answer a question which is allegedly incriminating, the propriety of that order may be reviewed on application for a writ of prohibition, in the same manner as if the court had ordered the witness to give answers which would violate the attorney-client privilege (221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 776) .

Note that the Supreme Court in Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 169, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 criticized Peck's Liquors as being an example of a situation in which an appellate court has apparently erroneously considered prerogative writs as the normal (rather than as extraordinary) instruments for reviewing discovery orders. Nevertheless, it appears that Peck's Liquors may be cited for the proposition that when a court issues an order requiring a deponent to answer improper deposition questions, then a petition for a writ of prohibition may be an appropriate vehicle for reviewing the improper order. Indeed, the Pacific Tel. Court has pointed out that under the facts of the case before it, the petition for the writ of prohibition rested on the ground of irrelevancy, and not on the assertion of a privilege (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11). This is to be distinguished from the facts in Peck's Liquors, in which the claimed impropriety was based on violation of a privilege. The Court in Pacific Tel. went on to note that if the impropriety in the questions rested on claims of privilege or the violation of a constitutional right, then a writ of prohibition might well be in order (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11). See also the discussion in § 89A.34[3][a].

[b] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Improper Conditions for Deposition

In Bailey v. Superior Court (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 970, 140 Cal. Rptr. 669, 568 P.2d 394 , plaintiff in a personal injury action was required by the trial court to testify at a deposition. The court order specified that there would be a videotaped reenactment of the circumstances of the accident to supplement plaintiff's oral deposition about how he lost four fingers through the allegedly negligent design and construction of defendant's power saw. The Supreme Court directed that a writ of prohibition be issued to restrain the trial court from enforcing the videotaping provisions of its order. The Court said that in the absence of a stipulation between the parties concerning the videotaping of the deposition, a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring a witness to testify at a deposition that would be videotaped since former Code Civ. Proc. § 2019(c) required the deposition to be stenographically transcribed, and Code Civ. Proc. § 2004 defines a deposition as a written declaration. Thus, it was apparent that a deposition is meant by the Legislature to be in written form (19 Cal. 3d 970, 974) .

Note, however, that under new Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.010 et seq., a deposition may now be recorded by audio or video technology by any party who has provided notice of an intention to record using audio or video technology, or by stipulation of the parties [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.220(a)(5), 2025.330(c); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1010 (oral depositions by telephone, videoconference, or other remote electronic means); Green v. GTE California, Inc. (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 407, 410, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 517 (sanctions order upheld against plaintiff's counsel, who failed to provide three-day notice of use of video camera at deposition); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.420(b)(8) (protective order that testimony be recorded in manner different from that specified in deposition notice)]. Thus, it is no longer true that the videotaping of a deposition is automatically improper. However, if the conditions of a deposition are otherwise improper, then a writ of prohibition should be available to correct a trial court order enforcing the taking of the deposition under the improper conditions.

[c] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Disclose Privileged Information

Peck's Liquors, Inc. v. Superior Court (1963) 221 Cal. App. 2d 772, 775-776, 34 Cal. Rptr. 735 is discussed in [b], above.

179 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.32

§ 89A.32 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Improperly Ordered Party to Answer Interrogatories

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Improperly Ordered Party to Answer Interrogatories

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition (see, e.g., § 89A.30)].

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS PROPER TO RESTRAIN A LOWER COURT FROM ENFORCING AN ORDER REQUIRING A PARTY TO ANSWER WRITTEN INTERROGATORIES.

A. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Answers to Interrogatories. A petition for a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring a party to answer written interrogatories (see Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739).

[Optional] B. Prohibition Proper When Time Limit Has Expired. When a party requests further responses to written interrogatories after the time period set by Section 2030.300 of the Code of Civil Procedure has expired and the lower court orders a further response, a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain enforcement of the lower court's order compelling a response. The time period for moving for an order compelling a further response to interrogatories is mandatory and, if not met, the party seeking the further response waives his or her right to move for the order (Code Civ. Proc. § 2030.300(c)). Thus, under these circumstances, a trial court cannot order that the response be made or impose sanctions for a party's failure to so respond (see O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 390-392, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular interrogatories are improper (see generally Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, and Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 seeking to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring a party to answer written interrogatories. It should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition contained in § 89A.30, and with any other specific points and authorities relating to particular discovery issues and fact situations in question on review [see §§ 89A.31, 89A.33 et seq.].

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to compel answers to interrogatories, see Ch. 84, Discovery: Interrogatories . For points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel may wish to combine points and authorities from those chapters that relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Answers to Interrogatories

In Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 , a class action brought against defendant-retailer alleging it had charged excess sales tax, the trial court granted plaintiff's motion for an order compelling defendant to answer certain interrogatories concerning defendant's sales tax returns. On defendant's application, the Supreme Court issued a writ of prohibition restraining the trial court from enforcing its order regarding one of the challenged interrogatories, but refused the writ regarding the other interrogatories. The Court said that the writ of prohibition is not the favored method of reviewing discovery orders. Ordinarily, the aggrieved party must raise the issue on direct appeal from a final judgment because, in the great majority of cases, the delay due to interim review of discovery orders is likely to result in greater harm to the judicial process by the protracted delay than is the enforcement of a possibly improper discovery order. Nevertheless, this was a proper case for a writ of prohibition restraining the trial court from compelling answers to written interrogatories, because it fell into an exception that a court may properly entertain a petition for extraordinary relief when the petitioning party asserts that to compel an answer to an interrogatory would violate a privilege (15 Cal. 3d 1, 5) .

[b] Prohibition Proper When Time Limit Has Expired

O'Brien v. Superior Court (1965) 233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 43 Cal. Rptr. 815 is discussed in § 89A.20[3][h]. The court concluded that failure to move for further answers within the statutory time forecloses further relief, and stated that in the absence of any showing to the contrary, it is unnecessary to decide whether or not a party may be relieved of failure to make a timely motion (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 391) . The court ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate and prohibition directing the trial court to vacate its order compelling defendant to make further responses to interrogatories and prohibiting the court from taking any proceedings in connection with notices of motions for further answers (233 Cal. App. 2d 388, 392) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.33

§ 89A.33 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure of Privileged Material

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure of Privileged Material

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition (see,e.g.,§ 89A.30).]

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS PROPER TO RESTRAIN A LOWER COURT FROM ENFORCING A DISCOVERY ORDER REQUIRING THE DISCLOSURE OF PRIVILEGED MATERIAL.

A. Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Disclosure of Privileged Material. A petition for a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain a lower court from enforcing a discovery order requiring the disclosure of privileged material (see Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 ; Roberts v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 330, 336, 107 Cal. Rptr. 309, 508 P.2d 309).

[Optional] B. Written Interrogatories. A petition for a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain a lower court from requiring a party to answer written interrogatories when there will be a disclosure of privileged material (see Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 5-8, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739).

[Optional] C. Production of Documents or Records for Inspection. A petition for a writ of prohibition is proper to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order requiring the production of documents or records for inspection when there will be a disclosure of privileged material (see Roberts v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 330, 336, 343-344, 107 Cal. Rptr. 309, 508 P.2d 309 ; Glade v. Superior Court (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742-747, 143 Cal. Rptr. 119).

[Optional] D. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Order Requiring Deponent to Disclose Privileged Information. [See § 89A.31[1], Paragraph C.]

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular material sought is privileged (see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 seeking to restrain a lower court from enforcing a discovery order requiring the disclosure of privileged material. It should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition contained in § 89A.30, and with other specific points and authorities relating to any other particular discovery issues and fact situations in question on review [see §§ 89A.31, 89A.32, 89A.34 et seq.].

For points and authorities relating to motions to compel discovery involving privileges and to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations . Counsel may wish to combine forms from that chapter which relate to the particular factual situation with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Disclosure of Privileged Material

The facts and procedural background of Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 are discussed in § 89A.32[3][a]. The Court issued a writ of prohibition restraining the trial court from compelling defendant to answer an interrogatory which called for privileged information (15 Cal. 3d 1, 7, 8) .

In Roberts v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 330, 107 Cal. Rptr. 309, 508 P.2d 309 , plaintiff sued defendants for injuries suffered in an automobile accident. Defendants subpoenaed the records of plaintiff's psychotherapist concerning plaintiff, but the psychotherapist refused on the ground of privilege to surrender the records unless ordered to do so by the trial court. Following a hearing, the trial court ordered that the records be deposited with the court clerk to be open to inspection only by counsel accompanied by medical examiners.

In granting plaintiff a writ of prohibition barring the production and inspection of the records as ordered by the trial court, the Supreme Court said that the case was an appropriate one for the use of such a writ. The need for the availability of the prerogative writs in discovery cases when an order of the trial court granting discovery allegedly violates a privilege of the party against whom discovery is granted is obvious. The person seeking to exercise the privilege must either succumb to the court's order and disclose the privileged information, or subject himself or herself to a charge of contempt for refusal to obey the court's order pending appeal. The first of these alternatives is hardly an adequate remedy and could lead to disruption of a confidential relationship. The second is clearly inadequate as it would involve the possibility of a jail sentence and additional delay in the principal litigation during review of the contempt order. Thus, the Court said, the use of the prerogative writ in such a case is proper (9 Cal. 3d 330, 336) .

[b] Written Interrogatories

Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 is discussed in § 89A.32[3][a], and in [a], above.

[c] Production of Documents or Records for Inspection

Roberts v. Superior Court (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 330, 107 Cal. Rptr. 309, 508 P.2d 309 is discussed in [a], above.

In Glade v. Superior Court (1978) 76 Cal. App. 3d 738, 143 Cal. Rptr. 119 , an attorney sought a writ of prohibition from the court of appeal to bar the trial court from enforcing its order for the production and inspection of records of confidential attorney-client communications contained in the attorney's files. The attorney was one of several defendants in an action for declaratory relief and damages. The court of appeal said that although resort to prerogative writs during pretrial proceedings is disfavored, they may be employed to review discovery orders challenged by the assertion of a privilege if the procedural situation and the remedies sought justify their application. The instant case was such a case because the discovery order compelled disclosure of confidential communications of defendant's clients who were not parties to the underlying action and would lack standing to assert erroneous disclosure on appeal (76 Cal. App. 3d 738, 742) . The court issued a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from requiring the defendant to produce documents and records for inspection to prevent disclosure of privileged communications (76 Cal. App. 3d 738, 747) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Prevent Disclosure of Privileged Material

In Schlumberger Limited v. Superior Court (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 386, 171 Cal. Rptr. 413 , the court stated that a prerogative writ is available in discovery cases when an order of the trial court granting discovery purportedly violates a privilege (115 Cal. App. 3d 386, 391) . The court of appeal found that all communications and memoranda ordered produced by the trial court were privileged (attorney-client privilege) and protected from disclosure (attorney's work product). The court ordered the issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order granting the motion to compel production of documents and to enter a new order denying the motion (115 Cal. App. 3d 386, 394) .

In Willis v. Superior Court (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 169 Cal. Rptr. 301 , discussed in § 89A.34[3][a], plaintiff brought a petition for a writ of prohibition against enforcement of an order made by the trial court directing plaintiff to answer certain interrogatories. Plaintiff claimed that the information requested was protected by the attorney-client privilege and the right to privacy under Cal. Const., art. I, § 1. The court stated that an application for a prerogative writ is appropriate in discovery cases when an order of the trial court purportedly violates a privilege involving the attorney-client relationship or constitutes an invasion of the constitutional right of privacy (112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289) . The court found that discovery was warranted, although due to the nature of the information plaintiff might wish to seek a protective order to prevent dissemination of the information. The court discharged the alternative writ, and denied the petition for the writ of prohibition (112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 298-299) .

In Alhambra v. Superior Court (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 513, 168 Cal. Rptr. 49 , the trial court granted plaintiffs' motion to compel further answers to interrogatories in an action against police officers for assault and battery, intentional infliction of mental distress, false imprisonment, and violation of the federal Civil Rights Act. The court stated that although pretrial review of discovery orders by means of extraordinary writ is generally disfavored, an exception to this general rule exists when the objection raised is that the information sought is protected from disclosure by a statutory privilege, since redress after disclosure would be impossible (110 Cal. App. 3d 513, 517-518) . Since some of the interrogatories involved presented an issue involving the patient-psychotherapist privilege, the court found review on a petition for writ of mandate to be appropriate (110 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518) . The court ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the lower court to vacate the portion of its order compelling further answers to interrogatories relating to privileged material (110 Cal. App. 3d 513, 521-522) .

[b] Production of Documents or Records for Inspection

In Hiott v. Superior Court (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 712, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 157 , the appellate court noted that trial court rulings concerning discovery sanctions are generally not subject to review by extraordinary writ, but are reviewable on appeal after judgment. An exception to this general rule exists when compelled disclosure of a claimed privilege is threatened. Thus, the court concluded that an alternative writ was appropriate in this case in which the challenged order compelled the disclosure of a videotape as to which the attorney-client privilege was claimed (16 Cal. App. 4th 712, 716) .

181 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.34

§ 89A.34 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure That Intrudes on Constitutionally Protected Interest

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Court Ordered Disclosure That Intrudes on Constitutionally Protected Interest

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition (see, e.g., § 89A.30)].

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS PROPER WHEN A TRIAL COURT'S ORDER GRANTING DISCOVERY INTRUDES ON A CONSTITUTIONALLY SECURED RIGHT TO PRIVACY OR RAISES SIGNIFICANT AND NOVEL CONSTITUTIONAL ISSUES OF GENERAL IMPORTANCE.

Constitutionally Protected Interests. A prerogative writ is the proper remedy when an order granting discovery intrudes on a constitutionally secured right to privacy (see Willis v. Superior Court (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289, 169 Cal. Rptr. 301 ; see also Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 171 n.11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854) or raises significant and novel constitutional issues of general importance (see Britt v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 844, 851-852, 143 Cal. Rptr. 695, 574 P.2d 766).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular discovery sought intrudes on constitutional rights (see, e.g., Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations, § 240 et seq.).]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 restraining a lower court from enforcing a discovery order requiring the disclosure of material that is constitutionally protected. They should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition contained in § 89A.30, and with other specific points and authorities relating to any other particular discovery issues and fact situations in question on review [see §§ 89A.31 -89A.33, 89A.35].

For points and authorities relating to motions to compel discovery involving privileges and to the propriety of discovery of particular matters, see Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations . Counsel may wish to combine forms from that chapter which relate to the particular factual situation with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constitutionally Protected Interests

Willis v. Superior Court (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 169 Cal. Rptr. 301 involved an action between two attorneys arising from the termination of their association for the practice of law. Through objections and a motion for a protective order (all involving various procedural deficiencies), plaintiff refused to answer certain interrogatories on the grounds of attorney-client privilege and his clients' constitutional right to privacy under Cal. Const., art. I, § 1. The trial court denied the motion for a protective order and ordered plaintiff to answer all of the interrogatories without objections. Plaintiff failed to answer, was again ordered to answer, and filed a petition for a writ of prohibition. The court of appeal denied the petition, but the Supreme Court granted an alternative writ of prohibition and retransferred the cause to the court of appeal for hearing on the matter.

On the retransfer, the court of appeal again denied the writ petition. The court of appeal stated that an application for a prerogative writ is appropriate in discovery cases when an order of the trial court granting discovery purportedly constitutes an invasion of the constitutional right of privacy (112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 289) . However, in this instance, the discovery order did not violate the right of privacy of third-party litigants, thus the court discharged the alternative writ and denied the petition (112 Cal. App. 3d 277, 298-299) .

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 , plaintiff brought an action based on an alleged invasion of privacy through unauthorized wiretapping. Two defendants and a nonparty deponent refused to answer certain questions posed by plaintiff's attorney at a deposition on the ground that the questions were irrelevant to the subject matter of the action. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for an order compelling answers to the questions and defendants sought a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from enforcing its order, which they claimed exceeded its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court noted that the lack of general import of the objections might in itself have presented a persuasive ground for an immediate denial of the writ sought (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170) . However, because the court of appeal had issued an order to show cause, plaintiff had not raised the point, and the case had been fully briefed on the merits, the court proceeded to evaluate the contention raised (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170-171) .

In noting that the writ might have been immediately denied, the Court in Pacific Tel. discussed in a footnote an additional objection which might have been raised against granting an extraordinary writ when a deponent refuses to testify solely on the ground that the questions were irrelevant to the subject matter (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11). The Court quoted its statement in West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 415, 15 Cal. Rptr.

119, 364 P.2d 295 , that the proper rule is that the purpose of the former Discovery Act to expedite the trial of the action would be defeated if appellate courts entertained petitions for prerogative writs seeking a review of trial court discovery orders which did not clearly demonstrate an abuse of discretion when discovery was denied, or a violation of privilege or of the provisions of then Cal. Const., art. I, § 19 (search and seizure; now see Cal. Const., art. I, § 13) (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11). The Court stated that the procedural guidelines of West Pico permit a deponent to seek a prerogative writ when an order granting discovery intrudes on a constitutionally secured right to privacy (2 Cal. 3d 161, 171 n.11).

It is not clear whether the Court in Pacific Tel. intended to extend the West Pico rule beyond orders for discovery intruding on the constitutional right against unreasonable search and seizure. Although Cal. Const., art. I, § 1, which guarantees a right to privacy, was not enacted until after the Court's opinion in Pacific Tel. it appears that the language in Pacific Tel. could be applied to discovery orders intruding on that right as well.

Britt v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 844, 143 Cal. Rptr. 695, 574 P.2d 766 was an action for damages allegedly caused by the operation of a facility for jet aircraft. The trial court issued a discovery order which compelled numerous plaintiffs to disclose extensive and intimate details of both their own and others' activities in various local political associations, refusing to honor plaintiffs' request for a protective order to safeguard their associational privacy. Plaintiffs filed a petition seeking extraordinary relief.

The Supreme Court issued an alternative writ, after concluding that the trial court's order raised significant and novel constitutional issues of great importance, citing as example Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 and Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 169, 171 n.11, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 (20 Cal. 3d 844, 851) . The Court stated that review by extraordinary writ was appropriate in the case before it (20 Cal. 3d 844, 851-852) .

Note that the Court in Britt issued a writ of mandate, not prohibition. However, it has been stated that prohibition is the proper remedy to prevent improper discovery [see Burke v. Superior Court (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 276, 276-277 n.1, 78 Cal. Rptr. 481, 455 P.2d 409 ; see also Petterson v. Superior Court (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 267, 269, 114 Cal. Rptr. 20] . Since the Court's statements relating to the proper use of writs for review in the situation before it referred to "review by extraordinary writ" (20 Cal. 3d 844, 851-852) , this case appears to be good authority for supporting a petition for a writ of prohibition as well. Counsel, however, may wish to petition in the alternative for both types of writs [see § 89A.03].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Constitutionally Protected Interests

In Hofmann Corp. v. Superior Court (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 357, 218 Cal. Rptr. 355 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate an order compelling discovery of a business' confidential customer lists (172 Cal. App. 3d 357, 365) . The court held that the list was equivalent to "sensitive information," which in cited cases had been held to be protected under the constitutional right of privacy (172 Cal. App. 3d 357, 362-363) . The court determined that the issuance of the prerogative writ was justified to review an order that allegedly violated the protection afforded to such information (172 Cal. App. 3d 357, 362-363 n.2).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.35

§ 89A.35 Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Certain Sanctions Imposed for Not Complying With Discovery Order

[1] FORM Supporting Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Trial Court Improperly Permitted Discovery--Prohibition Proper When Certain Sanctions Imposed for Not Complying With Discovery Order

[The following may be combined, when appropriate, with a general form of memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition (see,e.g.,§ 89A.30)].

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS PROPER TO RESTRAIN A LOWER COURT FROM ENFORCING AN ORDER IMPOSING SANCTIONS FOR REFUSAL TO COMPLY WITH A DISCOVERY ORDER.

A. Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Sanctions. A petition for a writ of prohibition is a proper remedy to circumvent the imposition of sanctions applied in excess of a lower court's jurisdiction for refusal to comply with a discovery order (see Lund v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 698, 708-710, 39 Cal. Rptr. 891, 394 P.2d 707 ; Twin Lock, Inc. v. Superior Court (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 754, 758, 344 P.2d 788).

[Optional] B. Ultimate Possibility of Appeal No Bar to Writ of Prohibition. A petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain enforcement of an order imposing sanctions involving a discovery order is proper, regardless of the ultimate possibility of an appeal from the lower court's order, when the sanctions were imposed in excess of the lower court's jurisdiction (see Lund v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 698, 709-710, 39 Cal. Rptr. 891, 394 P.2d 707).

[When appropriate, add points and authorities showing that the particular sanctions ordered are improper (see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse)].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 seeking to restrain a lower court from enforcing an order imposing certain sanctions for refusal to comply with a discovery order. It would not be used if an immediate appeal is available, such as from a default judgment or dismissal entered as a discovery sanction. This form should be combined with the general form of points and authorities in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition contained in § 89A.30, and with other specific points and authorities relating to any other particular discovery issues and fact situations in question on review [see §§ 89A.31 -89A.34].

For memoranda of points and authorities generally relating to motions for sanctions generally, see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse . The chapters dealing with particular discovery methods, Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions, through Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information, also include points and authorities relating to the propriety of discovery sanctions in the context of particular proceedings. Counsel may wish to combine forms from that chapter which relate to the particular factual situation in question with the points and authorities set out in this form.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Prohibition to Restrain Enforcement of Sanctions

In Lund v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 698, 39 Cal. Rptr. 891, 394 P.2d 707 , the Supreme Court issued an alternative writ of prohibition restraining the lower court from proceeding further to enforce its order requiring petitioners to make payment to several other parties in the case, and restraining a sheriff from making a levy under that order, when the petitioners refused to testify at a deposition and the trial court assessed costs and other sanctions against them for their failure to appear. In granting a peremptory writ of prohibition, the Supreme Court said that the sanctions imposed were beyond the jurisdiction and power of the trial court because it did not have personal jurisdiction over the petitioners in the first instance. Since there was a question regarding whether the petitioners could appeal the order, the better view was that an order made for the purposes of furthering discovery proceedings, or granting sanctions for refusal to make discovery, is not appealable. The Court said that regardless of the ultimate ability to appeal, if appeal would be an inadequate remedy, prohibition is an appropriate remedy to circumvent the imposition of sanctions applied in excess of a lower court's jurisdiction (61 Cal. 2d 698, 709) .

In Twin Lock, Inc. v. Superior Court (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 754, 344 P.2d 788 , petitioners, who were officers of defendant corporation and residents of New York, failed to appear in California for depositions, claiming that such depositions were scheduled in violation of the 150-mile limit set by the discovery statutes [former Code Civ. Proc. § 1989 (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2025.250, 2026.010]. The trial court imposed sanctions against the defendant corporation for their failure to appear as ordered. In granting a peremptory writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from enforcing such sanctions, the Supreme Court said that prohibition is available if the imposition of sanctions by a trial court would constitute an excess of the power of the court as defined by statute. The Court concluded that the lower court had exceeded its power and stated this was a proper case for the use of the writ of prohibition to restrain the imposition of sanctions (52 Cal. 2d 754, 758) .

[b] Ultimate Possibility of Appeal No Bar to Writ of Prohibition

Lund v. Superior Court (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 698, 39 Cal. Rptr. 891, 394 P.2d 707 is discussed in [a], above.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities §§ 89A.36-89A.39

[Reserved]

§§ 89A.36[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.40

§ 89A.40 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[1] FORM Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[Caption. See § 89A.10[1]].

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE IS GENERALLY NOT A PROPER METHOD FOR REVIEWING A DISCOVERY ORDER.

A. Prerogative Writ Is Disfavored Method of Reviewing Discovery Order. Generally, the party aggrieved by a trial court's court discovery order, or by its failure to grant a discovery order, must seek review by way of direct appeal from a final judgment, since prerogative writs are not favored methods of reviewing discovery orders (see Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 5, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 ; Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 169-170, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854).

[Optional] B. No Abuse of Discretion. Appellate courts should not entertain petitions for prerogative writs to review trial court orders denying discovery unless the orders clearly demonstrate abuse of discretion by the trial court (see West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 415, 15 Cal. Rptr. 119, 364 P.2d 295).

[Optional] C. Other Remedy Available. A writ of mandate will not issue when there is a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law (see Code Civ. Proc. § 1086).

[Optional] D. Issues of First Impression. Prerogative writs should only be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases (see Catanese v. Superior Court (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1163, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280 ; Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439).

[Optional] E. Discovery as Matter of Right. Disclosure by means of discovery is a matter of right unless statutory or public policy considerations clearly prohibit it (see Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 378, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266).

[Add specific points and authorities relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations in question].
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities is a general form which may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of mandate brought pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1084-1097 to attack a trial court order denying a discovery motion [see § 89A.20].

Memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions to obtain various types of discovery are set out in the chapters that Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions, through Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information. Those dealing with the propriety of discovery of various matters are set out in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel should combine this form with those memoranda of points and authorities relating to the particular discovery issue in question.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities in opposition to petitions for writs of mandate, generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prerogative Writ Is Disfavored Method of Reviewing Discovery Order

The facts and procedural background of Sav-On Drugs, Inc. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 1, 123 Cal. Rptr. 283, 538 P.2d 739 are set out in § 89A.32[3][a]. Although the specific procedural context of Sav-On was a writ of prohibition, the Court referred to prerogative writs in general as being not favored methods for reviewing discovery orders (15 Cal. 3d 1, 5) .

In Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 , plaintiff brought an action against a telephone company and two of its employees, alleging that they intercepted his telephone conversations without his knowledge or consent and that, by furnishing information so acquired to the police, they caused his arrest. Plaintiff took the depositions of defendant employees and others, and on the advice of defense counsel, defendants refused to answer general questions relating to the procedures used in making unauthorized taps, knowledge of illegality involved, relationship between the policy and the company, and the monitoring of calls of other subscribers. The trial court granted plaintiff's motions to compel answers to many of the challenged inquiries, and defendants sought a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court to restrain the lower court from enforcing its orders.

In denying the writ of prohibition, the Supreme Court quoted from Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 185-186 n.4, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 , in which it had stated that prerogative writs, such as those for mandate or prohibition, have been used frequently to review interim orders in discovery cases, but this does not mean that these discretionary writs will or should issue as a matter of course in all cases in which a court may be of the opinion that the interim order of the trial court was erroneous (2 Cal. 3d 161, 169) . As inadequate as such review may be in some cases, the prerogative writs should only be used in discovery matters to review questions of first impression that are of general importance to the trial courts and to the profession, and when general guidelines can be laid down for future cases (2 Cal. 3d 161, 169) . The Court noted that despite this express declaration of the necessary limitations on the availability of prerogative writs, at least some appellate courts have apparently continued to consider prerogative writs as the normal instruments for reviewing discovery orders, a practice which rests primarily on a legitimate concern with the inadequacies of a review of discovery orders after trial (2 Cal. 3d 161, 169-170) . The Court said that appellate courts must nevertheless keep in mind that too lax a view of the extraordinary nature of such writs, rendering substantial pretrial appellate delay a usual hazard of discovery, is likely to result in more harm to the judicial process than the denial of immediate relief from less significant errors (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170) .

The Court stated that in reviewing an order of a lower court granting discovery, it must be recognized that the discovery statutes vest a wide discretion in the trial court in granting or denying discovery, and such exercise of discretion may only be disturbed when it can be said that there has been an abuse of discretion. In this context, absent a showing by a petitioner that a substantial interest will be impaired by the discovery, the liberal policies of the discovery rules will generally counsel against overturning a trial court's decision granting discovery (2 Cal. 3d 161, 171) .

[b] No Abuse of Discretion

West Pico Furniture Co. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 407, 15 Cal. Rptr. 119, 364 P.2d 295 arose from an action in which plaintiff alleged that certain sales transactions were really disguised loans at usurious interest rates. Defendants cross complained for money owed, and plaintiff then counterclaimed for violations of the Financial Code. During the course of discovery, plaintiff propounded a number of interrogatories on various grounds, including irrelevance, burden, and oppression. The trial court sustained some of the objections and overruled others. Plaintiff filed a petition for a writ of mandate seeking to compel the court to set aside its order sustaining the objections.

In considering the contention made by real party in interest that petitioner failed to show that the trial court abused its discretion, the Supreme Court stated that the proper rule had been stated in Ryan v. Superior Court (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 813, 816-817, 9 Cal. Rptr. 147 . The court in Ryan stated that the purposes of the former Discovery Act would be defeated if appellate courts entertained petitions for prerogative writs reviewing trial court orders denying discovery unless the petition clearly demonstrated an abuse of discretion by the trial court. The Ryan court stated its intent to refuse to entertain petitions for prerogative writs in discovery matters which did not allege facts which would entitle the petitioner to the relief sought under the principles the court had set forth (56 Cal. 2d 407, 415) .

The Court in West Pico then went on to state that the language in Ryan does not require a petitioner seeking to show an abuse of discretion to allege specifically that the trial court has committed such abuse, but the petitioner may allege the facts which show that abuse. The Court in West Pico, by issuing the alternative writ, indicated its belief that petitioner had alleged sufficient facts to show, prima facie, an abuse (56 Cal. 2d 407, 415) .

[c] Issues of First Impression

In Catanese v. Superior Court (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 280 , the court of appeal held that interim writ review should be limited to matters of first impression, which have importance to the courts and the profession, and to situations where general guidelines can be established. Writ review is not the favored method for reviewing discovery orders, since in the majority of cases, the delay caused by such review would result in greater harm than enforcement of an improper order (46 Cal. App. 4th 1159, 1163) .

Oceanside Union School Dist. v. Superior Court (1962) 58 Cal. 2d 180, 23 Cal. Rptr. 375, 373 P.2d 439 is discussed in § 89A.30[3][a].

[d] Discovery as Matter of Right

The facts and procedural background of Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266 are discussed in § 89A.30[3][e]. The Court stated that for the guidance of the trial courts the proper rule is not only one of liberal interpretation of the former Discovery Act, but one that also recognizes that disclosure is a matter of right unless statutory or public policy considerations clearly prohibit it (56 Cal. 2d 355, 378) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Issues of First Impression

The facts and procedural background of South Tahoe Public Utility Dist. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 135, 154 Cal. Rptr. 1 are discussed in § 89A.30[4][a]. In South Tahoe, the court held that because the question raised by the petition for a writ of mandate and/or prohibition was one concerning the hitherto undelineated scope of work product protection, this was a proper instance for use of the writ. However, in ordinary circumstances, the favored method is to test the discovery order, or the trial court's failure to make a discovery order, by way of direct appeal from a final judgment (90 Cal. App. 3d 135, 137) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.41

§ 89A.41 Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Request for Sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 907, 1109; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.276(a), 8.764(a)]--Frivolous Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Discovery

[1] FORM Opposing Petition for Writ of Mandate [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1085, 1086]--Request for Sanctions [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 907, 1109; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 26(a), 135(a)]--Frivolous Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Discovery

[Caption. See § 89A.10[1].]

SANCTIONS SHOULD BE IMPOSED AGAINST PETITIONER'S ATTORNEY FOR FILING A FRIVOLOUS PETITION FOR A WRIT OF MANDATE IN RESPONSE TO A LEGITIMATE DEMAND FOR INSPECTION THAT WAS CLEARLY AND CORRECTLY RESOLVED [TWICE] BY THE TRIAL COURT.

Sanctions Appropriate for Frivolous Mandate Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Inspection. Sanctions are properly imposed by an appellate court on petitioner's attorney for filing [two] frivolous mandate petitions that objected to a legitimate demand for inspection [of property] that should have been disposed of informally and that was clearly and correctly resolved [twice] by the trial court (Manzetti v. Superior Court (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 373, 378-381, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used to support a request for sanctions against a petitioner pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 907 and 1109 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.276(a) and 8.764 for filing a frivolous petition for a writ of mandate that objected to a legitimate demand for inspection.

Memoranda relating to motions to obtain various types of discovery are set out in the chapters that Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions, through Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information. Those dealing with the propriety of discovery of various matters are set out in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel should combine this form with those memoranda relating to the particular discovery issue in question.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[c] Related Memoranda

For forms of memoranda in opposition to petitions for writs of mandate, generally, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sanctions Appropriate for Frivolous Mandate Petition Objecting to Legitimate Demand for Inspection

In Manzetti v. Superior Court (1993) 21 Cal. App. 4th 373, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 857 , the trial court granted defendants' motion to compel access to property that was the subject of the case, in order to conduct an inspection of that property pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031(a)(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.010(d)). Plaintiff filed two petitions for a writ of mandate with respect to the inspection, both of which were denied. The court of appeal imposed sanctions of $1,500 on plaintiff's attorney with respect to the second petition, noting that both petitions focused on an objection to a legitimate demand for the inspection of property that should have been disposed of informally and that was clearly and correctly resolved twice by the trial court. The court found that plaintiff's reliance on former Code Civ. Proc. § 2031(c)(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 2031.030(c)(4)), relating to specification of related activity being demanded in addition to inspection, was without merit and that plaintiff's motivation was to delay the proceedings.

In imposing sanctions, the court of appeal held that plaintiff and his attorney had engaged in a pattern of unwarranted procedural maneuvers designed to delay and prevent the legitimate exercise of a discovery right. The mandate petition was frivolous when considered in connection with plaintiff's prior conduct with respect to the discovery dispute, which the court properly considered. The second mandate petition raised issues that indisputably had no merit. Thus, sanctions were appropriate pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 907 and 1190 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 26 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.276(a) and 8.764) (21 Cal. App. 4th 373, 378-381) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities §§ 89A.42-89A.49

[Reserved]

§§ 89A.42[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89A DISCOVERY: REVIEW OF DISCOVERY ORDERS
PART II. FORMS

8-89A California Points & Authorities § 89A.50

§ 89A.50 Opposing Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[1] FORM Opposing Petition for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--Extraordinary Writs Generally Improper for Review of Discovery Orders

[Caption. See § 89A.10[1].]

A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF PROHIBITION IS GENERALLY NOT A PROPER METHOD FOR REVIEWING A DISCOVERY ORDER.

A. Prerogative Writ Is Disfavored Method of Reviewing Discovery Order. [See § 89A.40[1], Paragraph A.]

[Optional] B. Other Remedy Available. A writ of prohibition will not issue when there is a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of the law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1103).

[Optional] C. No Abuse of Discretion by Trial Court. The discovery statutes vest a wide discretion in the trial court in granting or denying discovery, and such exercise of discretion may only be disturbed when it can be said that there has been an abuse of discretion by the trial court (see Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 171, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 ; Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 380, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266).

[Optional] D. Issues of First Impression. [See § 89A.40[1], Paragraph D].

[Optional] E. Discovery Statutes to Be Liberally Construed. Discovery statutes are to be liberally construed and, absent a showing that a substantial interest will be impaired by discovery, the liberal policies of the discovery rules will generally counsel against overturning a trial court's decision granting discovery (see Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 171, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854).

[Optional] F. Relevancy Standard. An objection on irrelevancy grounds to the trial court's grant of discovery will generally not support the issuance of an extraordinary writ. Furthermore, an appellate court cannot reverse a trial court's grant of discovery under a relevancy attack unless it concludes that theinformation sought by the discovery method cannot as a reasonable possibility lead to the discovery of admissible evidence or be helpful in preparation for trial (see Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11, 173, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854).

[Add specific points and authorities relating to the particular discovery issues and fact situations in question].
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum is a general form that may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of prohibition brought pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102-1105 to attack a trial court order granting discovery [see § 89A.30].

Memoranda relating to motions to obtain various types of discovery are set out in the chapters that Ch. 83, Discovery: Depositions, through Ch. 88, Discovery: Exchange of Expert Witness Information. Those dealing with the propriety of discovery of various matters are set out in Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations [see also Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing]. Counsel should combine this form with those memoranda relating to the particular discovery issue in question.

Note that some cases cited in this form construe law in effect before the operative date of the Civil Discovery Act. They are cited and discussed as persuasive authority to the extent that they remain consistent with current provisions [see § 89.02[3]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Abuse of Discretion by Trial Court

The facts and procedural background of Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 are discussed in § 89A.40[3][a]. In that case, the Court stated that in reviewing a trial court order granting discovery, it must be recognized that the discovery statutes vest a wide discretion in the trial court in granting or denying discovery, and such exercise of discretion may only be disturbed when it can be said that there has been an abuse of discretion. In this context, absent a showing by the aggrieved party that a substantial interest will be impaired by the discovery, the liberal policies of the discovery rules will generally counsel against overturning a trial court's decision granting discovery (2 Cal. 3d 161, 171) .

The facts and procedural background of Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266 are discussed in § 89A.30[3][e]. In discussing several opinions of the court of appeal relating to discovery, the Court stated that those courts properly held that the trial court's discretion in discovery matters may only be disturbed when it can be said that there has been an abuse of discretion (56 Cal. 2d 355, 380) .

[b] Discovery Statutes to Be Liberally Construed

The facts and procedural background of Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 are discussed in § 89A.40[3][a]. The Court discussed the statements of the Court in Greyhound Corp. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 355, 378-379, 15 Cal. Rptr. 90, 364 P.2d 266 regarding the liberal policies of the discovery statute. The Court stated in Pacific Tel. that absent a showing by the petitioner that a substantial interest will be impaired by the discovery, the liberal policies of the discovery rules will generally counsel against overturning the trial court's decision granting discovery (2 Cal. 3d 161, 171) .

[c] Relevancy Standard

The facts and procedural background of Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 161, 84 Cal. Rptr. 718, 465 P.2d 854 are discussed in § 89A.40[3][a]. The Court noted that an objection might properly have been made against the granting of an extraordinary writ to prohibit discovery when the only objection raised to the discovery was the irrelevancy of the information sought to the litigation. The Court stated that an objection on "irrelevancy" grounds to the trial court's grant of discovery will generally not support the issuance of an extraordinary writ (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170 n.11). The Court did, however, consider the question despite the lack of general import of defendant's objections because the court of appeal had issued an order to show cause, plaintiff did not raise the point, and the case had been fully briefed (2 Cal. 3d 161, 170-171) .

The Court stated that a question of relevancy must be determined in each case according to the teachings of reason and judicial experience. Past cases made clear that the relevancy of the subject matter criterion is a broader concept than relevancy to the issues (2 Cal. 3d 161, 172) . In sum, the relevance of the subjectmatter standard must be reasonably applied. In accordance with the liberal policies underlying the discovery procedures, doubts concerning relevance should generally be resolved in favor of permitting discovery. Given this very liberal and flexible standard of relevancy, a party attempting to show that a court abused its discretion in finding material relevant for purposes of discovery bears an extremely heavy burden. An appellate court cannot reverse a trial court's grant of discovery under a relevancy attack unless it concludes that the answers sought by a given line of questioning cannot as a reasonable possibility lead to the discovery of admissible evidence or be helpful in preparation for trial (2 Cal. 3d 161, 173) .

188 of 190 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89B DISCOVERY ACT CORRELATION TABLES (July 1, 2005)

8-89B California Points & Authorities 89B.syn

§ 89B.syn Synopsis to Chapter 89B: DISCOVERY ACT CORRELATION TABLES (July 1, 2005)

CT.01 Former Civil Discovery Act of 1986 to Civil Discovery Act (July 1, 2005)

CT.02 Civil Discovery Act (July 1, 2005) to Former Civil Discovery Act of 1986

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89B DISCOVERY ACT CORRELATION TABLES (July 1, 2005)

8-89B California Points & Authorities CT.01

CT.01 Former Civil Discovery Act of 1986 to Civil Discovery Act (July 1, 2005)

[All references are to the California Code of Civil Procedure]

Former Provision _____ New Provision

Code Civ. Proc. 2016(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2016(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2016(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.070

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.210

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(c), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(c), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(d), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.220(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(d), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(3), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(3), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(5), 1st-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.740(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(5), 5th-7th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.740(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(6) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.710

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(7) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(8) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.040

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.050

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(e), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.070(a)-(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(e), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.070(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(f), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.080

Code Civ. Proc. 2018(f), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(c), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(c), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019.210

Code Civ. Proc. 2019(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.050

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 3d snt. (including items (1)-(3)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.030

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.210(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.210(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.310

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(a)-(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(1), 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.420

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(a), (e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 5th & 6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.440

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(6) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.230(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.230(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020(h) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020.240

Code Civ. Proc. 2021 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.030

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(a)(1)-(8) & (9), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(a)(9), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030, intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023.040

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 2d snt. Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060.

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(d) (excluding 2d snt.) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.030

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(d), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(4)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.210

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.230

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 2d P, 2d snt. Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2020.310(e), 2020.510(a)(1).

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(2), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(2), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), 2d P (including items (A)-(F)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.280(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.280(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), 2d P (including items (1)-(15)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.430

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(2), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.440(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(2), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.440(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320, intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 3d-5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340, intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(A) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 4th-6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 7th & 8th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 9th & 10th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(C) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(D) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(h)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(E) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(i)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(F) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(j)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(G) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(k)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(H) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(l)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(I) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(m)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.470

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(b)(16)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.470

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 5th & 6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 7th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 5th & 6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 7th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(h)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(r)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.540(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(r)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.540(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(1), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.550(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(1), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.550(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620, intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(6) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(7) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(v) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(b)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(b)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 3d-7th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027(b)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027(b)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027(c), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027(c), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 5th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 3d-5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 3d-5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(e), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.060(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(e), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.060(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.070

Code Civ. Proc. 2028(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028.080

Code Civ. Proc. 2029 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2029.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(2), 1st P (including items (A)-(C)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(2), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.050

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(6) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(7) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(8), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.070(a)-(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(8), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.070(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.080

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(7)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.230

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(3), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.240(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(3), 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.240(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(h), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.260(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(h), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.260(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(j), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.280(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(j), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.280(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 2d P, 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030(n) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030.410

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a), intro. P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 3d snt. (including items (1)-(4)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.040

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(e), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.050(a)-(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(e), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.050(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), 2d P (including items (1)-(6)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.220

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.280(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.280(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.230

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(3), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.240(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(3), 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.240(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(i) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.260

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(k), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.290(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(k), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.290(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300, intro. cl. & (a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 2d P, 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.1 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.310

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.2 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017.320

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.5, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.510(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.5, 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.510(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.210

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(5), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.230(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(5), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.230(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(7), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.250(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(7), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.250(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(8), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.260(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(8), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.260(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(b)-(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(e). Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.030.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(f), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.410

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(f), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.420

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.520

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(2), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.530(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(2), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.530(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(i) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.630

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.640

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032(k) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(2), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(2), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.050

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(6) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(7) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(h)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.070

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(5)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(2), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.230(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(2), 2d-4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.230(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(h) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.250

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(j), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.270(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(j), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.270(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 2d P, 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(n), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.410(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(n), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.410(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(o), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.420(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033(o), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.420(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(a), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.710

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(a), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.730(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 2d snt., 1st clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.730(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 2d snt., 2d clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.720(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.720(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(f). Not continued (obsolete).

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210, intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(b) (excluding 3d snt.) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.220

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(b), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.230(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 2d P (excluding 3d snt.) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.230(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.240

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(6)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), next-to-last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f), intro. P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f)(1) (including items (A) and (B)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f)(2) (including items (A)-(E)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.270

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i), intro. P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.410

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.420

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(a)-(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.440

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(3), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.460(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(3), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.460(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 1st P, 1st & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 1st P, 2d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(c)-(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 2d P, 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 4th P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(j) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.300

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 6th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.620, intro. cl. & (a)-(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 7th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.620(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 2d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.630

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.720, intro. cl. & (a)-(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d P, 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.720(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 3d P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.730

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(m) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.310

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(n), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034(n), 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(a), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.010(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(a), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.010(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(d), 1st P (including items (1)-(9)) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(d), last P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 1st & 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 3d & 4th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 5th snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 2d P, 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 2d P, 2d & 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.010

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.020

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.030(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 1st snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 2d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 3d snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036.050

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 8 Chapters 80-89A DISCOVERY
CHAPTER 89B DISCOVERY ACT CORRELATION TABLES (July 1, 2005)

8-89B California Points & Authorities CT.02

CT.02 Civil Discovery Act (July 1, 2005) to Former Civil Discovery Act of 1986

[All references are to the California Code of Civil Procedure]

New Provision _____ Former Provision

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(d), 2d snt.; 2034(b), 3d snt.; 2034(c), 2d P 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.070 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.210 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(c), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(c), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.220(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(d), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(d), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(3), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.730(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(3), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.740(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(5), 1st-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.740(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(5), 5th-7th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.710 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(7)

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.720(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2017(e)(8)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.040 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.050 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.060 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(d), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.070(a)-(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(e), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.070(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(e), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.080 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(f), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2018.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2018(f), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(a)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(b), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(c), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(c), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2019.210 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.050 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2019(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), 3d snt. (including items (1)-(3))

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.030 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(a), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.210(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.210(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.310 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(a)-(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(1), 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.410(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.420 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(a), (e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(4), 5th & 6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.440 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.430(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(d)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.510(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(e), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.230(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.230(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(f), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.220(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2020.240 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2020(h)

Code Civ. Proc. 2016.030 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2021

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(a)(1)-(8) & (9), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(a)(9), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030, intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.030(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(b)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2023.040 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2023(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 1st snt.

Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060. Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(a), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.030 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(d) (excluding 2d. snt.)

Code Civ. Proc. 2024(d), 2d. snt. now see Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(4))

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.050(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(e), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2024.060 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2024(f)

Not continued (redundant) See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060. Code Civ. Proc. 2024(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.210 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(c), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a), intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(1) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(2) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(3) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(4) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(5) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 1st P now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.220(a)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.230 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 2d P, 1st snt.

Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2020.310(e), 2020.510(a)(1). Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.240(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(d)(6), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(2), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.250(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(2), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), 2d P (including items (A)-(F))

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.260(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(e)(3), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.270(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(f), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.410(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(g), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.280(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.280(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.310(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(h)(3), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), 2d P (including items (1)-(15))

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(i), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.430 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.440(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(2), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.440(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(2), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.450(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(j)(3), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320, intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(k)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 3d-5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(1), 6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340, intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(A)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 4th-6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 7th & 8th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(B), 9th & 10th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(C)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(h) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(D)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(i) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(E)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(j) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(F)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(k) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(G)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(l) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(H)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.340(m) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(2)(I)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.330(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(l)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.460(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(m)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.470 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.420(b)(16) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.470 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(n), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 5th & 6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 7th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.480(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(o), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 5th & 6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 7th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.510(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(p), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 3d P, 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.520(h) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(1), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.530(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(q)(2), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.540(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(r)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.540(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(r)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.550(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(1), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.550(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(1), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.560(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(s)(2), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.610(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(t), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620, intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(5)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.620(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(u)(7)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.320(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025(v)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2025.570(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2025.5(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(b)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(b)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2026.010(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2026(c), 3d-7th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027(b)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027(b)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027(c), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2027.010(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2027(c), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.030(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(c), 5th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 3d-5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.040(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(1), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 3d-5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.050(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(d)(2), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.060(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(e), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.060(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(e), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.070 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2028.080 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2028(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2029.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2029

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.020(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(b), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(1), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(2), 1st P (including items (A)-(C))

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(2), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.050 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(4), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(5), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.060(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(7)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.070(a)-(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(8), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.070(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(c)(8), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.080 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(7))

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.090(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(e), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.210(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.220(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(1), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.230 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.240(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(3), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.240(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(f)(3), 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.250(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(g), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.260(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(h), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.260(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(h), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.270(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(i), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.280(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(j), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.280(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(j), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.290(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(k), 2d P, 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.300(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(l), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.310(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(m), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2030.410 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2030(n)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a), intro. P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.010(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(a)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.020(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(b), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(c), 3d snt. (including items (1)-(4))

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.040 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.050(a)-(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(e), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.050(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(e), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), 2d P (including items (1)-(6))

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.060(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(f), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.210(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.220 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.280(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.280(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(1), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.230 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.240(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(3), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.240(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(g)(3), 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.250(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(h), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.260 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(i)

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.270(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(j), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.290(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(k), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.290(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(k), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300, intro. cl. & (a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.300(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(l), 2d P, 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.310(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(m), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.320(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031(n), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.310 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.1

Code Civ. Proc. 2017.320 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.2

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.510(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.5, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2031.510(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2031.5, 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.020(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(b), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.210 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(2), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.220(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(4)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.230(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(5), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.230(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(5), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.240(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(6), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.250(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(7), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.250(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(7), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.260(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(8), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.260(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(c)(8), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.310(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(b)-(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.320(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(d), 2d P, 4th snt.

Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.030. Code Civ. Proc. 2032(e)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.410 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(f), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.420 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(f), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.510(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.520 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(1), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.530(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(2), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.530(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(g)(2), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.610(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.620(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(h), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.630 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(i)

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.640 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.650(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(j), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2032.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2032(k)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.020(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(b), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(1), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(2), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(2), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.050 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(4), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(5), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(6)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.060(h) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(c)(7)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.070 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(5))

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.080(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(e), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.210(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f), intro. P, 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.220(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(1), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.230(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(2), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.230(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(f)(2), 2d-4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.240(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(g), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.250 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(h)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.260(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(i), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.270(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(j), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.270(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(j), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.280(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(k), 2d P, 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.290(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(l), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.300(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(m), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.410(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(n), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.410(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(n), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.420(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(o), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.420(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033(o), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.710 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(a), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(a), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.730(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.730(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 2d snt., 1st clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(b), 2d snt., 2d clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.740(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.720(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2033.720(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(e)

Not continued (obsolete) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2033.5(f)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210, intro. clause now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a), intro. clause

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(2)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.210(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a)(3)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(a), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.220 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(b) (excluding 3d. snt.)

Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060. Code Civ. Proc. 2034(b), 3d. snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.230(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.230(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 2d P (excluding 3d. snt.)

Not continued (redundant). See Code Civ. Proc. 2016.060. Code Civ. Proc. 2034(c), 2d. P, 3d. snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.240 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), 1st P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), 2d P (including items (1)-(6))

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), next-to-last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.250(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(e), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f), intro. P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f)(1) (including items (A) and (B))

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.260(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(f)(2) (including items (A)-(E))

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.270 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.280(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(h), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.410 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i), intro. P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.420 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(1)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(a)-(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.430(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 1st P, 5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.450(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.440 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(2), 2d P, 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.460(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(3), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.460(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(3), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 1st P, 1st & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 1st P, 2d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(c)-(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 2d P, 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 2d P, 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(f) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.470(g) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(i)(4), 4th P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.300 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(j)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.610(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.620, intro. cl. & (a)-(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 6th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.620(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 1st P, 7th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.630 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(k), 2d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.710(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.720, intro. cl. & (a)-(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.720(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 2d P, 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.730 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(l), 3d P

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.310 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(m)

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(n), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2034.290(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2034(n), 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.010(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(a), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.010(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(a), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(d), 1st P (including items (1)-(9))

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.030(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(d), last P

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 1st & 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 3d & 4th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 5th snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(d) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 2d P, 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.040(e) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(e), 2d P, 2d & 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.050(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(f), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2035.060 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2035(g)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.010 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(a)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.020 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(b)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.030(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(c)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.030(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(d)

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(a) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 1st snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(b) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 2d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.040(c) now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(e), 3d snt.

Code Civ. Proc. 2036.050 now see Code Civ. Proc. 2036(f)

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL

9-90 California Points & Authorities 90.syn

§ 90.syn Synopsis to Chapter 90: DISMISSAL

§ 90.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 90.02 Governing Statutes

§ 90.03 Right to Voluntary Dismissal

§ 90.04 Use of Memoranda

§ 90.05 Statutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution

[1] Failure to Effect Service

[2] Failure to Bring Action to Trial

[a] In General

[b] Dismissal on Motion Seeking to Avoid Mandatory Dismissal

[c] Dismissal of Contractual Arbitration Proceeding

[d] Dismissal of Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

§ 90.06 Nonstatutory Dismissal

§ 90.07 Dismissal Following Successful Demurrer

§ 90.08 Dismissal for Inconvenient Forum

§ 90.09 Types of Dismissals

§ 90.10 Trial Court Delay Reduction Act

§ 90.11 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 90.12 When Memoranda Are Required

§ 90.13 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

§ 90.14 Related Memoranda Chapters

§§ 90.15-90.29 [Reserved]

§ 90.30 Supporting Motion for Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice Before Trial

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice Before Trial

§ 90.31 Supporting Motion for Dismissal on Ground of Abandonment [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)]--Plaintiff's Intent to Abandon Demonstrated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Intent to Abandon Demonstrated

§ 90.32 Opposing Motion for Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Voluntary Dismissal if Cross Complaint Filed

[b] No Voluntary Dismissal if Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted Without Leave to Amend

[c] No Voluntary Dismissal if Failure to Amend After Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted With Leave to Amend

[d] No Voluntary Dismissal If Moving Papers In Summary Judgment Motion Negate Plaintiff's Claims Entitling Defendant to Judgment as a Matter of Law and Time to File Opposition Has Elapsed

[e] No Voluntary Dismissal After Adverse Tentative Summary Judgment Ruling Announced and a Hearing Has Been Commenced Which is Continued to Permit Gathering of Previous Unavailable Opposition Evidence

§ 90.33 Opposing Motion for Dismissal for Abandonment [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)]--Insufficient Showing of Intent to Abandon

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Abandon Required

§ 90.34 Opposing Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)]--Dismissal Requested After Ruling of Mandatory Dismissal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Voluntary Dismissal After Court Grants Motion for Mandatory Dismissal

[b] Defendant's Right to Mandatory Dismissal Prevails Over Plaintiff's Right to Voluntary Dismissal

§§ 90.35-90.49 [Reserved]

§ 90.50 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Mandatory Period for Completing Service

[c] Computation of Period for Does and Defendants Added by Amendment

[d] Effect of Defendant's General Appearance After Three Years

[e] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[g] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Failure to Complete Service or File Proof of Service Within Statutory Period

[b] Dismissal Mandatory

[c] Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Not Extended by Filing Amended Complaint

[d] General Appearance After Three Years Does Not Make Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Inapplicable

[e] Defendant Not Estopped to Move for Dismissal by Requesting Extension of Time to Respond

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Mandatory

§ 90.51 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss After Two Years

[b] Factors Considered

[c] Two-Year Period Applicable to Doe Defendants

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss After Two Years

§ 90.52 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Statutory Time Limits Excused by Defendant's General Appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] General Appearance Must Be Made Within Three Years and Sixty Days

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Appearance Defined

[b] Period During Which General Appearance Must Be Made

[c] Action Indicating Status as Party

[d] Written Stipulation Constituting Appearance

[e] Complaint in Intervention Not Separate Action From Original Complaint

§ 90.53 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Service and Proof of Service Completed Within Statutory Time Period [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Holiday Defined

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service by Mail Complete at Time of Mailing

[b] Statutory Period Extended When Last Day Is Holiday

§ 90.54 [Reserved]

§ 90.55 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Extended by Stipulation of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.220, 583.230]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Construction of Dismissal Statutes

[b] Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal

§ 90.56 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Defendant Was Not Amenable to Process [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amenability to Process

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amenability to Process

§ 90.57 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Proceedings Were Stayed [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b)] or During Which Service Was Being Litigated [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time During Stay Is Not Included

§ 90.58 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Service Was Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile

[b] Compliance With Facially Valid but Void Stay Order

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Service Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile

§ 90.59 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Defendant Is Estopped From Requesting Dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Is Estopped From Asserting Compliance With Service Deadlines

[b] Estoppel Arising From Defendant's Request for Extension of Time to Plead

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Is Estopped From Asserting Compliance With Service Deadlines

§ 90.60 Opposing Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Excuse for Delay

[c] Actual Prejudice by the Delay

[d] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss Not Arbitrary

[b] Plaintiff's Proof of Good Cause Is Sufficient to Preclude Discretionary Dismissal

[c] Plaintiff's Excuse That Is Credible and Not Clearly Unreasonable Under the Circumstances Constitutes Good Cause

[d] Factors Set Out in Court Rule Reveal Good Cause for Delay

[e] No Injustice Has Resulted From the Delay

[f] Conditional Denial of Discretionary Dismissal

§ 90.61 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Defendant Has Not Made General Appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Appearance by Defendant After Period Expired

[b] General Appearance by Defendant in Cross Action

[c] General Appearance by Codefendant

[d] General Appearance in Separate Action

[e] General Appearance in Complaint in Intervention

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Appearance by Defendant After Period Expired

§ 90.62 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Defendant Was Amenable to Process [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Amenable to Process

[b] Plaintiff Bears the Burden of Proof Regarding Defendant's Nonamenability to the Process of the Court

[c] Defendant Amenable to Process When Served by Publication

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Amenable to Process

§ 90.63 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Plaintiff Has Not Shown That Service Was Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiff's Control [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Exclusion for Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility Applies

[b] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof Regarding Excuses of Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility

[c] Exclusion Is Strictly Construed

[d] Failure to Serve Defendant After Default Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiff's Control

[e] Failure to Serve Defendants During Pendency of Federal Court Action Between Same Parties on Same Cause Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control

[f] Failure to Serve Defendants Not Subject to Stay Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control.

[g] Actuality of Service Is Question of Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof Regarding Excuses of Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility

§ 90.64 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Plaintiff's Legal Incompetency Does Not Toll Periods for Service Specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action for Nonservice of Summons

[b] Legal Incompetency of Plaintiff Is No Exception

§ 90.65 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1)]--Plaintiff Has Not Shown Good Cause for Delay in Service

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Inference of Prejudice

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legislative Intent and Purpose

[b] Investigation and Procurement of Evidence Is No Excuse for Delay in Service

[c] Financial Inability to Conduct Discovery or Prosecute Lawsuit Is No Excuse for Delay in Service

[d] Unreasonable Delay in Service May Give Rise to Inference of Prejudice

[e] Dismissal Statutes Apply When Defendant Is a Public Entity

[f] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Service May Give Rise to Inference of Prejudice

[b] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

§§ 90.66-90.79 [Reserved]

§ 90.80 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal Mandatory

[b] Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to Trial

[c] Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to New Trial After Appeal

[d] When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial

[e] No Exceptions to Mandatory Dismissal Apply

[f] Equitable Estoppel Does Not Bar Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial Within Five Years.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial

§ 90.81 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Judgment Not Yet Entered on Settlement Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Must Be Dismissed if Not Brought to Trial and Settlement Agreement Not Yet Enforced

§ 90.82 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Expiration of Special Extension After Statutory Tolling [Code Civ. Proc. § 530.350]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring to Trial Within Special Exception After Statutory Tolling

§ 90.83 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1340, 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lapse of Minimum Period

[b] Other Criteria to Be Considered

[c] Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay

[d] Burden of Showing Good Cause Increases Over Time

[e] Prejudice Inherent in Delay

[f] Prejudice to Defendant Not Necessary Factor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Other Criteria to Be Considered

[b] Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay

[c] Prejudice Inherent in Delay

[d] Prejudice to Defendant Not Necessary Factor

§ 90.84 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340, 3.1342]--Motion Made While Case Is Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Retains Jurisdiction to Exercise Discretion to Dismiss Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

[b] Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence While Matter Is Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

[c] Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence Prior to Submission of Case to Judicial Arbitration

[d] Submission of Action to Judicial Arbitration Does Not Suspend Running of Time Periods Applicable to Discretionary Dismissal

§ 90.85 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340, 3.1342]--Dismissal After Request for Trial de Novo Following Judicial Arbitration

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undergoing Judicial Arbitration Does Not Immunize Plaintiff Against Discretionary Dismissal

§ 90.86 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Was Brought to Trial or New Trial Within Statutory Period

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition of Trial

[b] Impaneling of Jury

[c] Swearing and Testimony of Witness

[d] Ruling on Demurrer

[e] Dismissal Not Authorized if Partial Trial Occurs Within Statutory Period

[f] Bifurcated Marital Dissolution Proceeding

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Not Authorized if Partial Trial Occurs Within Statutory Period

§ 90.87 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Extended by Stipulation of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Construction of Stipulation

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Written Stipulation

[b] Oral Agreement

[c] Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal

[d] Trial Precluded by Indefinite Extension

[e] Acceptable Writings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Agreement

[b] Trial Precluded by Indefinite Extension

§ 90.88 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Was Settled Within Statutory Period

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Settlement of Case in Open Court Within Five-Year Mandatory Period for Bringing Action to Trial Precludes Dismissal of Action

[b] Settlement Agreement Reached Before, But Partially Executed After, Expiration of Five-Year Period Precludes Dismissal

§ 90.89 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Court's Jurisdiction to Try Action Was Suspended [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction Suspended

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(a)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction Suspended

§ 90.90 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Prosecution or Trial of Action Was Stayed or Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Stay of Action Submitted to Arbitration

[i] Contractual Arbitration

[ii] Judicial Arbitration

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prosecution or Trial Stayed or Enjoined

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(a)

[c] "Continuance" Having Legal Effect of "Stay"

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prosecution or Trial Stayed or Enjoined

§ 90.91 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Bringing Action to Trial Was Impossible [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impossibility

[b] Impossibility Defined

[c] Extraordinary Delay

[d] Default

[e] No Courtroom Available

[f] Application of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) After Judicial Arbitration

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impossibility

[b] Impossibility Defined

[c] Extraordinary Delay

[d] No Courtroom Available

§ 90.92 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Bringing Action to Trial Was Impracticable or Futile [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impracticability or Futility

[b] Impracticability and Futility Defined

[c] Multiple Defendants

[d] When Severance Is Impracticable

[e] Appeal of Separate Action

[f] Pending Interlocutory Appeal

[g] Pending Successful Review by Writ of Trial Court's Summary Adjudication of Issues

[h] Unsuccessful Writ Proceeding to Overturn Denial of Summary Judgment Motion

[i] Time Needed for Consolidation

[j] Pending Assignment of New Judge Following Successful Peremptory Challenge

[k] Time Between Death of Claimant and Appointment of Personal Representative

[l] Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel

[m] Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impracticability or Futility

[b] Appeal of Separate Action

[c] Pending Assignment of New Judge Following Successful Peremptory Challenge

[d] Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining

§ 90.93 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Defendant Is Estopped From Requesting Dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel

[b] Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Request for Extension

[c] Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Defendant's Willingness to Go to Trial

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel

§ 90.94 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Court Is Estopped to Dismiss Action for Failure to Bring It to Trial Within Five Years [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel Applies to Motion to Dismiss

[b] Assertion of Estoppel Against Government

[c] Applicable Principle

§ 90.95 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--No Failure to Bring Action to New Trial After Mistrial When No Order Declaring Mistrial Was Entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Order Declaring Mistrial Required

§ 90.96 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq.]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial Is Extended Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Actions Submitted to Civil Action Mediation

[c] Computation of Time Remaining to Bring Action to Trial

[d] Reasonable Diligence

[e] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

§ 90.97 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq.]--Post-Arbitration Tolling Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Calendaring Case After Judicial Arbitration to Avoid Penalizing Plaintiff

[b] Duty of Court to Calendar Case After Arbitration

[c] Post-Arbitration Tolling of Five-Year Period to Bring Case to Trial

§ 90.98 Opposing Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Absence of Actual Prejudice Not Determinative

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Grounds for Discretionary Dismissal

[b] Discretion Not Arbitrary

[c] Any Basis for Good Cause Is Sufficient

[d] Plaintiff's Lack of Showing of Good Cause Not Controlling

[e] Factors Relevant to Ruling on Motion

[f] Counsel's Workload Is Sufficient Excuse

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion Not Arbitrary

[b] Any Basis for Good Cause Is Sufficient

[c] Counsel's Workload Is Sufficient Excuse

§ 90.99 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Exclusion Based on Impossibility Does Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[b] Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception When Failure to Bring to Trial Did Not Result From Illness

[c] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impossibility Exeption

[d] Plaintiff's Bankruptcy Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[e] Death of Coplaintiff Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[f] Plaintiff's Lack of Representation by Guardian Ad Litem Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[g] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception.

[h] Impossibility Exception Is Inapplicable When Setting of Trial Date Beyond Five-Year Period Resulted From Plaintiff's Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial

[i] Impossibility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[b] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[c] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

[d] Impossibility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

§ 90.100 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Exclusion Based on Impracticability or Futility Does Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

[b] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

[c] Pending Appeal of Related Action Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

[d] Separate Action by Plaintiff Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

[e] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is Not Basis for Impracticability Exception

[f] Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial

[g] Plaintiff's Alleged Inability to Fulfill Requirements for Certificate of Merit Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception

[h] Impracticability and Futility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

[i] Impracticability or Futility Exception Not Available if Time Remains

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Separate Action by Plaintiff Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

[b] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception

[c] Impracticability and Futility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

§ 90.101 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Delay Based on Factual Error by Plaintiff's Counsel Is Not Excused

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Factual Error by Counsel No Excuse

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Factual Error by Counsel No Excuse

§ 90.102 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Estoppel When Sufficient Time Remains to Bring Action to Trial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel Not Available if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains

§ 90.103 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Waiver Based on Open Extension to File Responsive Pleading When Sufficient Time Remains to Bring Action to Trial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Limit Not Waived if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains After Defendant Has Filed Pleading

§ 90.104 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Estoppel or Waiver Based on Defendant's Failure to Attend Trial Setting Conference or to Notify Plaintiff of Continued Trial Date

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Failure to Attend Trial Setting Conference Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel

[b] Defendant's Failure to Notify Plaintiff of Continued Trial Date or to Appear at Continued Trial Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel

§ 90.105 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.10-1141.31]--No Extension of Time Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20(b) Absent Showing of Reasonable Diligence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

[c] Exclusion Under Moran

[i] Statement of Rule

[ii] Diligence Requirement

[iii] Former Split Among Courts of Appeal

[d] Exclusion Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[f] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Diligence Is Required Under Moran

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable Diligence Is Required Under Moran

§ 90.106 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410]--No Waiver or Estoppel Based on Open Extension to File Responsive Pleading When Extension Was for Plaintiff's Benefit

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Open Extension for Plaintiff's Benefit Does Not Act as Estoppel or Waiver of Dismissal

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Open Extension for Plaintiff's Benefit Does Not Act as Estoppel or Waiver of Dismissal

§§ 90.107-90.119 [Reserved]

§ 90.120 Supporting Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss

[b] Power Applicable if Statute Absent

[c] Power Applicable if Statutory Period Unexpired

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Power Applicable if Statute Absent

§ 90.121 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Amend Complaint After Successful Demurrer or Motion to Strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), (4)]--Dismissal Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Motion to Strike Untimely Amended Pleading Required

[c] Ex Parte Motion

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[e] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements

[b] Dismissal Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Required

§ 90.122 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Special Proceeding--Dismissal Statutes Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.120]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Administrative Mandate

§ 90.123 Opposing Motion for Dismissal Based on Court's Inherent Powers Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

§ 90.124 Opposing Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution--Inherent Power to Dismiss

Unavailable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

§ 90.124A Opposing Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Failure to Appeal Telephonically

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Did Not Wilfully Fail to Appear Telephonically at Proceedings in the Case.

§ 90.125 Opposing Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Amend Complaint After Successful Demurrer or Motion to Strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), (4)]--Amendment Filed Before Motion for Dismissal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Filed Before Defendant's Motion

[b] Motion to Strike Is Prerequisite

§ 90.126 Supporting Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Judgment of Dismissal--Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vacating Judgment of Dismissal Proper

[b] When Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Made

[c] Counsel's Neglect

§ 90.127 Opposing Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Judgment of Dismissal--Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 Available Only From Failure to Oppose Dismissal Motion

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.01

§ 90.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda supporting [see §§ 90.30, 90.31] and opposing [see §§ 90.32 -90.34] motions for voluntary dismissal of a civil action before and during trial.

This chapter also includes memoranda relating to involuntary dismissal. It includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 90.50, 90.61 -90.64] and opposing [see §§ 90.52 -90.59] a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve the summons and complaint and file proof of service of summons. It also includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 90.51, 90.65] and opposing [see § 90.60] a motion for discretionary dismissal on the same ground.

This chapter also includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 90.80 -90.82, 90.99 -90.106] and opposing [see §§ 90.86 -90.97] a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or a new trial. It also includes memoranda supporting [see §§ 90.83 -90.85] and opposing [see § 90.98] a motion for discretionary dismissal on the same ground.

This chapter also includes memoranda supporting [see § 90.120] and opposing [see § 90.124] a nonstatutory motion for involuntary dismissal. It also includes memoranda supporting [see § 90.121] and opposing [see § 90.125] a motion for dismissal for failure to amend a complaint after a demurrer is sustained, supporting a motion to vacate a judgment of dismissal [see § 90.126], and supporting a motion to dismiss a special proceeding [see § 90.122].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.02

§ 90.02 Governing Statutes

The principal statutes governing voluntary dismissal of actions are Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581 and 581d.

The principal court rules governing voluntary dismissal of actions are Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.770 (class actions) and 3.1390 (notice of entry of dismissal).

The principal statutes governing involuntary dismissal of actions are Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430, which pertain to mandatory and discretionary dismissal for delay in prosecution. Court rules governing involuntary dismissal for delay in prosecution are Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1340, and 3.1342.

Dismissals under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430 are also governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(4) and (g) and, in cases that have been submitted to judicial arbitration, by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.17 and 1141.20(b). Dismissals under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. are also governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10 when made within the defendant's time to respond to a pleading.

Other statutes relating to involuntary dismissal on other grounds include Code Civ. Proc. §§ 399 (failure to pay costs on transfer of action), 410.30, 418.10 (inconvenient forum), 581(b)(3), (5), (l) (nonappearance of party at trial), and 581(f) (following order sustaining demurrer).

The entry of court-ordered dismissals are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 581d and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1390.

In the absence of statutory authority, a court also has inherent power to dismiss an action for lack of diligent prosecution [see, e.g., Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 630-631, 147 P. 466] . Code Civ. Proc. § 581 expressly provides that its provisions are not to be deemed to be an exclusive enumeration of the court's power to dismiss an action or complaint as to a defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(m)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.03

§ 90.03 Right to Voluntary Dismissal

A plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice at any time before the actual commencement of trial if affirmative relief has not been sought by cross complaint and if no motion is pending for an order transferring the action to another court under Code Civ. Proc. § 396b [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(a); Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 784, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217] . Voluntary dismissal without prejudice may also be obtained at any time before a decision is rendered if the opposing party consents in writing to it, or if a showing of just cause is made [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b), (e)]. In addition, a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss an action with prejudice at any time before a decision is rendered by the court, but any such dismissal with prejudice does not dismiss a cross complaint filed in the action [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(e)]. Furthermore, a plaintiff may, in effect, voluntarily cause the court to dismiss the action by deliberately abandoning it after trial has commenced and before final submission of the case [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d); see §§ 90.31, 90.33].

A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1) if a demurrer to the complaint has been sustained without leave to amend, or if a demurrer has been sustained with leave to amend and plaintiff has failed to amend within the time allowed [Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 789, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217 (demurrer sustained with leave to amend and plaintiff failed to amend); Goldtree v. Spreckels (1902) 135 Cal. 666, 668-673, 67 P. 1091 (demurrer sustained without leave to amend); Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (demurrer sustained without leave to amend)]. Plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice if the dismissal is filed within thetime period the court has allowed for an amendment to a complaint following the sustaining of a demurrer [Parsons v. Umansky (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 867, 870-872, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 144] . Also, if leave to amend is granted, plaintiff may amend the complaint and then voluntarily dismiss the amended complaint without prejudice [Christensen v. Dewor Developments (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 778, 785, 191 Cal. Rptr. 8, 661 P.2d 1088] .

A plaintiff who attempts to dismiss the complaint after a motion for summary judgment has been filed and the time for opposition has passed is subject to the trial court's continuing jurisdiction to hear and rule on the pending motion. A plaintiff may not frustrate the summary judgment statute by interposing a voluntary dismissal without prejudice in lieu of opposition to a defendant's motion [Cravens v. State Bd. of Equalization (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436] . Thus, a trial court has the power to grant an unopposed defense motion for summary judgment when the defendants' moving papers have met their burden of negating the plaintiff's claims, entitling them to judgment as a matter of law if no issues of disputed fact are raised, and plaintiff, rather than filing opposition papers within the requisite time, files a request for dismissal without prejudice one day before the scheduled hearing date [Cravens v. State Bd. of Equalization (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 257, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436] .

Moreover, a plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice after an adverse tentative summary judgment ruling has been announced and a hearing has commenced which is thereafter continued for the express and exclusive purpose of permitting the plaintiff the opportunity to present opposition evidence that plaintiff claims was previously unavailable [Mary Morgan, Inc. v. Melzark (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 767, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4] . Furthermore, a summary judgment order bars voluntary dismissal [Sweat v. Hollister (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614-615, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 399 ; see Mary Morgan, Inc. v. Melzark (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 769, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.04

§ 90.04 Use of Memoranda

Generally, points and authorities are not required for dismissal without prejudice before trial commences [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)], dismissal by consent [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(2), (e)], or dismissal with prejudice pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(e), because instead of a motion to dismiss, use of the Judicial Council Request for Dismissal form [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.31 and Appendix A] is mandatory. Furthermore, except for narrow limitations, voluntary dismissal before trial is a matter of right and may be exercised by the plaintiff without the knowledge of the other parties or the consent of the court [Roski v. Superior Court (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 841, 845, 95 Cal. Rptr. 312] .

A notice of motion with points and authorities is not strictly required for dismissals on the grounds of nonappearance or abandonment at trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d), (l) [see also Code Civ. Proc. § 594(a) (dismissal in absence of adverse party)]. Some cases have held that dismissal on these grounds is not invalidated by lack of notice to the plaintiff, because the court must dismiss the action if factors necessitating dismissal are brought to the court's attention [see, e.g., Dumm v. Pacific Valves (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 792, 795-796, 304 P.2d 738 (notice of motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3) after successful demurrer and plaintiff's failure to amend not required); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 594(a) (permitting dismissal at trial in absence of opposing party after proof of notice of trial submitted)].

Nevertheless, the right to voluntarily dismiss is sometimes contested [see, e.g., Herbert Hawkins Realtors, Inc. v. Milheiser (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 334, 337-340, 189 Cal. Rptr. 450 (dismissal request after arbitration)], and even when not required, notice of the motion accompanied by points and authorities is strongly advised [see Consolidated Constr. Co. v. Pacific E. Ry. Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 244, 246, 193 P. 238 (cautioning against dismissal without notice when determination of motion required consideration of extrajudicial matters)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.05

§ 90.05 Statutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution

[1] Failure to Effect Service

The court or any person interested in the action, whether named as a party or not, may move for mandatory dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250 for failure to effect service of summons and complaint within three years after the action is commenced against the defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210(a), 583.250(a)(2)]. However, Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b) provides an additional 60 days within which proof of service of summons must be filed with the court. 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

The defendant or the court may move for discretionary dismissal for failure to effect service prior to trial pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 if service is not made within two years after the action is commenced against the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1)].

Exceptions to these time periods are contained in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.220-583.240 and apply to both mandatory and discretionary dismissals [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.250(b) (mandatory), 583.420(b) (discretionary)].

The statutory provisions tolling the running of the statute of limitations do not toll the time within which service must be made once an action is commenced. The purpose of the statute of limitations is distinct and apart from that of the time limitations in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 [Tzolov v. International Jet Leasing, Inc.(1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327, 262 Cal. Rptr. 606] .

Points and authorities in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to effect service are set out in §§ 90.50, 90.61 -90.64 (mandatory), and 90.51, 90.65 (discretionary). Points and authorities in opposition to such motions are set out in §§ 90.52 -90.59 (mandatory) and 90.60 (discretionary).

[2] Failure to Bring Action to Trial

[a] In General

The defendant or the court may move pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360 for mandatory dismissal of an action that is not brought to trial within five years after it is commenced against the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310; see Gray v. Firthe (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 202, 209, 239 Cal. Rptr. 389 (action is commenced against defendant named in original complaint, either expressly or by fictitious name, on date complaint is filed, but action is commenced in regard to defendant subsequently added to action on date of order adding him or her as party, or on date pleading naming him or her as new party is filed)].

The court has the discretion, however, to dismiss the action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 if it is not brought to trial within three years after the action is commenced against the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(A)], or, pursuant to a rule adopted by Judicial Council effective January 1, 1990, if it is not brought to trial or conditionally settled within two years after the action is commenced [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340; see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B) (authorizing adoption of rule)].

Following the grant of a new trial the action is subject to mandatory dismissal if it is not brought again to trial within three years after any of the following: (1) the order of the court declaring a mistrial or disagreement of a jury is entered, if a trial is commenced but no judgment is entered because of a mistrial or inability of a jury to reach a decision; (2) the order granting a new trial is entered, if after a judgment a new trial is granted and no appeal is taken; or (3) the remittitur is filed by the clerk of the trial court, if on appeal an order granting a new trial is affirmed or judgment reversed and the action is remanded for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320]. However, the court has the discretion to dismiss the action if it is not brought to a new trial within two years after the occurrence of each of the foregoing events [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3)].

Exceptions to these time periods for bringing an action to an original or new trial are contained in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.330-583.350 and apply to both mandatory and discretionary dismissals [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.360(b) (mandatory), 583.420(b) (discretionary)].

Certain proceedings are completely excluded from the dismissal requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.430. Specifically, a court may not dismiss a dissolution or legal separation proceeding for delay in prosecution if an order for child or spousal support has been issued in the proceeding and is still in force or, in the case of dissolution, if a separate trial on the status of the marriage has been conducted [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161].

Points and authorities in support of a motion to dismiss for failure to bring an action to trial are set out in §§ 90.80, 90.81, 90.99 -90.105 (mandatory), and § 490.83 (discretionary). Points and authorities in opposition to such motions are set out in §§ 90.86 -90.96 (mandatory) and § 90.98 (discretionary).

[b] Dismissal on Motion Seeking to Avoid Mandatory Dismissal

Whenever a plaintiff makes any motion seeking to avoid mandatory dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial within five years, the trial court, before entering any order on the merits of the motion, should consider the factors relevant to a motion to dismiss under the discretionary dismissal provisions of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430 [see Sisler v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 864, 868, 252 Cal. Rptr. 665] . This rule applies, for example, when a plaintiff seeks to avoid mandatory dismissal by making a motion to refer the case to judicial arbitration [Sisler v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 864, 868, 252 Cal. Rptr. 665 (holding trial court erred in granting plaintiff's motion to refer matter to arbitration when order was entered on last day of five-year period and trial court based its ruling solely on imminent expiration of that period)]. Most frequently, however, the rule is applied when a plaintiff makes a motion to set his or her case specially for trial in order to avoid mandatory dismissal [see, e.g., Salas v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 342, 349, 228 Cal. Rptr. 504, 721 P.2d 590 ; Parlen v. Golden State Sanwa Bank (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 906, 912, 240 Cal. Rptr. 73] . For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to specially set a case for trial in order to avoid mandatory dismissal, see Ch. 180, Pretrial Proceedings .

[c] Dismissal of Contractual Arbitration Proceeding

Courts have held that the statutes governing mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial apply indirectly in determining whether a contractual arbitration proceeding should be dismissed for failure to prosecute the proceeding diligently [see Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1315, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 ; Kuzmanoff v. Kron (1988) 207 Cal. App. 3d Supp. 1, 3 , 255 Cal. Rptr. 168] . For memoranda relating to dismissal for delay in prosecuting a contractual arbitration proceeding, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

[d] Dismissal of Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

With two exceptions, submission of an action to judicial arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.10-1141.31 does not suspend the running of the time periods specified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430 [see Code Civ. Proc.§ 1141.17(a); see also § 90.84]. The first exception is set out under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a), while the second is recognized by case law construing Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20(b) [see Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 240-242, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216] . Memoranda of points and authorities relating to these exceptions are set out in §§ 90.96 and 90.105.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to Prosecute

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.06

§ 90.06 Nonstatutory Dismissal

A trial court has the inherent power, limited only by its sound discretion, to control its own calendar, without the aid of legislation, by dismissing an action if delay in prosecution is inexcusable. Discretionary dismissal is available if the situation is not governed by a dismissal statute [see Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 630-631, 147 P. 466 ; Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 581(m) (Section 581 grounds for dismissal not to be deemed to be an exclusive enumeration of court's power to dismiss); Pearlson v. Does 1 to 646 (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 1010-1012, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 (inherent discretionary power to dismiss action when complaint shown to be fictitious or sham such that plaintiff has no valid cause of action)]. Points and authorities in support of a nonstatutory dismissal motion are set out in § 90.120; points and authorities in opposition to such a motion are set out in § 90.124.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsFailures to Prosecute

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.07

§ 90.07 Dismissal Following Successful Demurrer

Points and authorities in support of dismissal on the ground of failure to amend a complaint after a successful demurrer or motion to strike [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), (4)] are set out in § 90.121; opposing points and authorities are set out in § 90.125.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.08

§ 90.08 Dismissal for Inconvenient Forum

For memoranda in support of dismissal on the ground of inconvenient forum under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 410.30, 418.10, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum, § 132.130 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureVenueGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.09

§ 90.09 Types of Dismissals

Dismissal of an action is a termination of the court's consideration of the case prior to completion of a full trial of the issues [Schisler v. Mitchell (1959) 174 Cal. App. 2d 27, 29, 344 P.2d 61 ; Guardianship of Lyle (1946) 77 Cal. App. 2d 153, 156, 174 P.2d 906] . A dismissal that is not rendered on the merits does not operate as a bar to the filing of a subsequent action based on the same facts [Stephan v. American Home Builders (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 98 Cal. Rptr. 354] and is said to be without prejudice [see Kinley v. Alexander (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 382, 387, 290 P.2d 287] .

If the dismissal is with prejudice, it is a final judgment on the merits and bars a subsequent action on the same cause [Gagnon Co., Inc. v. Nevada Desert Inn (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 448, 455, 289 P.2d 466 ; Roybal v. University Ford (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1080, 1085-1087, 255 Cal. Rptr. 469 (voluntary dismissal with prejudice of municipal court action held to bar identical action in superior court)]. A dismissal with prejudice is the modern name for a common-law retraxit. A retraxit has always been deemed a judgment on the merits against the plaintiff, estopping him or her from subsequently maintaining an action for the cause renounced [Rice v. Crow (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 725, 733-736, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 110 ; Torrey Pines Bank v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 813, 820, 265 Cal. Rptr. 217] . A dismissal that does not specify whether it was with or without prejudice should be deemed to be with prejudice absent a contrary contention by the plaintiff [Tudor Ranches, Inc. v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1429, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 574] .

Dismissals, with or without prejudice, may be voluntary, by the party filing the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b), (c), (e); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d) (abandonment, treated as voluntary in this chapter if plaintiff's inaction deliberate)], or involuntary, by the court [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581(b), (f), (g), (h), 583.110 et seq.]. A voluntary dismissal with prejudice under Code Civ. Proc. § 581 has the same effect as a common-law retraxit and bars any future action on the same subject matter. A dismissal with prejudice is determinative of the issues in the action and precludes the dismissing party from litigating those issues again [Torrey Pines Bank v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 813, 820, 265 Cal. Rptr. 217] . Involuntary dismissals are either discretionary [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430] or mandatory [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.250, 583.360] in the sense that dismissal is required unless some statutory exception applies [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.250(b), 583.360(b)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.10

§ 90.10 Trial Court Delay Reduction Act

All California trial courts are required to implement delay reduction programs [Gov. Code § 68605.5].

In order to enforce the requirements of a delay reduction program, courts are expressly vested with power to impose sanctions. These sanctions may include orders striking pleadings or dismissing actions, if it appears that less severe sanctions would not be effective, after taking into account the effect of previous sanctions or previous lack of compliance in the case [Gov. Code § 68608(b); see also Code Civ. Proc. § 583.150 (authority of court to dismiss action pursuant to local rule)]. Accordingly, several counties have adopted rules authorizing dismissal as a sanction for any failure to comply with the rules [see, e.g., Orange Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 454; Sacramento Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 11.12].

Gov. Code § 68616 restricts the extent to which local delay reduction rules may shorten time periods. Among other things, Section 68616 provides that unnamed (DOE) defendants must not be dismissed before the conclusion of the introduction of evidence at trial, except on stipulation or motion of the parties [Gov. Code § 68616(h)]. The section also bars courts from requiring service of a complaint less than 60 days after filing [Gov. Code § 68616(a)]. Local rules generally do require that the complaint be served and proof of service filed within 60 days after the complaint has been filed [see, e.g., Alameda Co. Unified Super. Ct. Rules, Rule 4.2(2) (60 days); San Diego Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Div. II, Rule 5.6 (60 days)], but longer periods of time must be granted on a showing that service could not reasonably be achieved within the time required with the exercise of due diligence consistent with the amount in controversy [Gov. Code § 68616(a)].

Failure of the plaintiff to meet the local deadline for service of the complaint does not constitute grounds for mandatory or discretionary dismissal of the action for failure to effect service under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 or 583.420. However, failure to meet the local deadline may result in the imposition of sanctions [see Sacramento Co. Super. Ct. Rules, Rules 11.03(C), 11.12].

Given the importance of trial delay reduction rules, counsel in cases governed by the trial delay reduction programs should consult the rules to determine how they may affect dismissal.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.11

§ 90.11 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.12

§ 90.12 When Memoranda Are Required

A memorandum must be served and filed with motions requiring notice to parties, except motions for a new trial [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. Notice of a motion for dismissal is expressly required by certain statutes. A motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or a new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360] requires notice to the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360(a); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1005, 1005.5]. Similarly, notice is required for a dismissal motion under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250 for failure to make timely service of the summons and complaint, or return of the summons or other proof of service [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(a)(2)]. A 45-day notice requirement applies to discretionary dismissals under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. In addition, points and authorities are expressly required to support motions for discretionary dismissal [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(b); Maguire v. Collier (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 309, 314, 122 Cal. Rptr. 510] .

Even when not required, however, notice of the motion accompanied by points and authorities is strongly advised [see Consolidated Constr. Co. v. Pacific E. Ry. Co. (1920) 184 Cal. 244, 246, 193 P. 238 (cautioning against dismissal without notice if determination of motion requires consideration of extrajudicial matters)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresDismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.13

§ 90.13 Related Pleadings and Practice Chapters

For discussion, a procedural guide, and forms relating to dismissal generally, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. Additional discussion and forms relating to motions for dismissal may be found in the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 3, Abatement of Actions.
- Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights.
- Ch. 12B, Adoptions: Unmarried Minors.
- Ch. 12E, Adoptions: Attack on Decree.
- Ch. 48, Appeal: Abandonment, Dismissal, and Stipulated Reversal.
- Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration.
- Ch. 36, Judicial Arbitration.
- Ch. 37, Judicially Mandated Civil Action Mediation.
- Ch. 72, Attorney Practice and Ethics.
- Ch. 76, Attorney Professional Liability.
- Ch. 120, Class Actions.
- Ch. 160, Corporations.

- Ch. 174, Costs and Attorney's Fees.
- Ch. 192, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse.
- Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.
- Ch. 220, Dissolution of Marriage and Related Proceedings.
- Ch. 247, Eminent Domain.
- Ch. 265, Federal Courts: Jurisdiction and Removal.
- Ch. 318, Judgments.
- Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances.
- Ch. 324, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 492, Review (Certiorari), Writ of.
- Ch. 520, Settlement and Release.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.14

§ 90.14 Related Memoranda Chapters

For memoranda relating to dismissal for delay in prosecuting a contractual arbitration proceeding, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling . For a memorandum relating to dismissal as a discovery sanction, see Ch. 82, Discovery: Sanctions for Discovery Misuse . For memoranda in support of dismissal on the ground of inconvenient forum, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum, § 132.130 et seq. For memoranda supporting and opposing a motion to set a case specially for trial in order to avoid mandatory dismissal, see Ch. 180, Pretrial .

For additional related memoranda concerning dismissal that may be useful in particular civil matters, see the following chapters:

- Ch. 24, Attorneys at Law: Substitution, Withdrawal, Disqualification, and Authority to Appear.
- Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions.
- Ch. 56, Corporations.
- Ch. 95, Eminent Domain.
- Ch. 123, Interpleader.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition.
- Ch. 158, Motions to Reconsider and Renewed Motions.

For discussion of relief from judgments of dismissal, see Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief from Judgments and Orders .

For discussion of the use of memoranda generally and how to use the forms to draft complete memoranda or briefs, as well as an illustration of a completed memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

16 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-90 California Points & Authorities §§ 90.15-90.29

[Reserved]

§§ 90.15[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.30

§ 90.30 Supporting Motion for Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DISMISS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COURT SHOULD GRANT PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO DISMISS WITHOUT PREJUDICE BECAUSE _____ [TRIAL HAS NOT COMMENCED, NO AFFIRMATIVE RELIEF IS SOUGHT BY CROSS COMPLAINT, AND NO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 396b MOTION FOR TRANSFER IS PENDING or ALL AFFECTED PARTIES TO THE TRIAL CONSENT TO THE DISMISSAL WITHOUT PREJUDICE or GOOD CAUSE EXISTS WHY THE COURT SHOULD DISMISS WITHOUT PREJUDICE EVEN THOUGH TRIAL HAS COMMENCED].

[EITHER, if dismissal before trial]

Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice Before Trial. A plaintiff may dismiss an action with or without prejudice at any time before the actual commencement of trial if affirmative relief has not been sought by cross complaint and no motion is pending for an order transferring the action to another court under Section 396b of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), (i); see Lewis C. Nelson & Sons, Inc. v. Lynx Iron Corp. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 67, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 ; Franklin Capital Corp. v. Wilson (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 187, 219, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 424 ; In re Mercantile Guaranty Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 350, 69 Cal. Rptr. 361 ; see also Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 789-790, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217).

[OR, if dismissal without prejudice during trial]

Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice During Trial. A plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice after the commencement of trial and before a decision is rendered by the court if all affected parties to the trial consent in writing, or by order of the court on a showing of just cause (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(e); see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(2)).

[Add further points and authorities, as necessary, to expand the grounds for the motion or to anticipate objections of the opposing party (see, e.g., § 90.31).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by plaintiff to support a motion for voluntary dismissal of an action. While voluntary dismissals are less frequently litigated than involuntary dismissals and are not usually the subject of a motion, the issue may arise, for example, if there is disagreement between the parties over the time of commencement of trial, or if a cross complaint was filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(a)(6) (commencement of trial)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if defendant contends that dismissal before trial is precluded because a cross complaint has been filed, plaintiff should state the dates on which the dismissal was requested and entered of record in relation to the dates the cross complaint was served and filed.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion relating to, and a form requesting voluntary dismissal of, an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(i), see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.32 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice Before Trial

In Lewis C. Nelson & Sons, Inc. v. Lynx Iron Corp. (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 67, 94 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , plaintiff, the general contractor on a middle school project, filed suit against its structural steel subcontractor for breach of contract resulting in delay damages. Shortly after plaintiff filed its complaint, but before the complaint was served, a settlement meeting took place, and an agreement was reached whereby defendant released claims against plaintiff in exchange for payment of a certain amount, but plaintiff did not release any claims against defendant. Plaintiff thereafter served its complaint on defendant, and defendant filed a motion to enforce the settlement, arguing that the settlement agreement was intended as a global resolution. Plaintiff did not oppose the motion, but rather filed a request for voluntary dismissal of the action without prejudice, which was duly entered. Shortly thereafter, plaintiff filed the same lawsuit in a different court. Defendants again moved to enforce the settlement, but the court denied the motion on the basis that the prior court had jurisdiction. Defendants then returned to the original court and filed a motion to vacate plaintiff's voluntary dismissal on the ground that their motion to enforce settlement was a dispositive motion. The trial court granted the motion to vacate, stating that the dismissal was a tactical maneuver and that the defendants were likely to have prevailed on their motion to enforce settlement. Thereafter, the trial court granted defendants' new motion to enforce settlement and dismissed the action with prejudice. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeals reversed. Code Civ. Proc. § 581 allows a plaintiff to voluntarily dismiss an action at any time before the actual commencement of trial. The California Supreme Court has stated that this right is absolute. However, commencement of trial includes pretrial proceedings that effectively dispose of the case, such as a general demurrer sustained without leave to amend. In this case, when plaintiff voluntarily dismissed its action, there had not yet been a ruling or other indication as to how the court would rule on the motion to enforce settlement, and therefore a final disposition of the case in defendant's favor was not a foregone conclusion. There had therefore been no "commencement of trial" and plaintiff was entitled to voluntarily dismiss its action (174 Cal. App. 4th 67, 78-79) .

In Franklin Capital Corp. v. Wilson (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 187, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 424 , plaintiff's attorney failed to appear for a mandatory settlement conference, and the trial court set an order to show cause hearing re: dismissal or sanctions. The day before the scheduled hearing, plaintiff's attorney filed a voluntary dismissal without prejudice. At the hearing the next day, in the absence of plaintiff's counsel, the court dismissed the case with prejudice. Although the court did not cite any authority for its action, it indicated in the hearing that the dismissal was based on failure to prosecute the action. Plaintiff's attorney subsequently filed a motion to vacate the dismissal, and the trial court denied that motion. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court was stripped of jurisdiction to dismiss once plaintiff filed its voluntary dismissal. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss an action, with or without prejudice, at any time before the actual commencement of trial. "Actual commencement of trial" is defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 581(a)(6) as "the beginning of the opening statement or argument of any party or his or her counsel ... ." However, the California Supreme Court held in Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217 that this definition of commencement of trial is not exclusive; the right to dismiss can be cut off by other dispositive procedures. In Wells, the court held that a plaintiff did not have a statutory right to dismiss after the court sustained a demurrer with leave to amend and the time for amending had expired. The court discussed post-Wells appellate court cases and summarized them by stating that a plaintiff's dismissal has been held to be ineffective when either (a) there had been a public and formal indication by the trial court of the legal merits of the case, or (b) there was some procedural dereliction by the plaintiff making dismissal inevitable. Stated another way, voluntary dismissal is effective at any time before the case reaches a stage where disposition is a "mere formality" (148 Cal. App. 4th 187, 201-202 , quoting Zapanta v. Universal Care, Inc. (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 1167, 1173-1174, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 842). Applied to the case at hand, disposition was not a mere formality because the looming OSC hearing contemplated dismissal or sanctions, not just dismissal. Therefore, the trial court had been without jurisdiction to dismiss the case with prejudice because plaintiff had validly dismissed the case without prejudice the day before (148 Cal. App. 4th 187, 219) .

In re Mercantile Guaranty Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 69 Cal. Rptr. 361 , involved voluntary dissolution of a foreign corporation. After the state intervened, the corporation requested a voluntary dismissal. The state (plaintiff in intervention) moved to strike the voluntary dismissal and to compel defendant (in intervention) corporation to answer interrogatories. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion and ordered entry of the dismissal. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiff's complaint in intervention did not seek affirmative relief. However, it recognized the statutory basis for voluntary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 581, and set forth definitions of "affirmative relief" and "defendant" for purposes of that statute. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1), (5) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(i)], a plaintiff may not dismiss an action, with or without prejudice, if a defendant has requested affirmative relief. The term "defendant" includes an intervenor if the intervenor has sought affirmative relief against a party to the action (263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 350) . An answer or complaint in intervention, however, does not seek affirmative relief unless it contains affirmative allegations or introduces new affirmative matter entitling the pleader to relief. Here, plaintiff's complaint in intervention appeared to be nothing more than a denial of defendant's claim concerning liquidation of certain distributions (263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 351) .

In Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217 , plaintiff attempted to voluntarily dismiss its action after expiration of a period authorized for amendment of its complaint, following a successful general demurrer. Defendants moved to dismiss with prejudice pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2)] after the period expired. However, prior to the hearing on defendants' motion plaintiff requested and was granted a voluntary dismissal without prejudice pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)] by the court clerk. After a hearing on defendants' motion the trial court initially dismissed the action with prejudice under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3), but later reversed itself, and set aside that dismissal on the ground that plaintiff's voluntary dismissal divested the court of jurisdiction to act. Defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed the order. It held that once a general demurrer to a complaint is sustained with leave to amend and the plaintiff does not amend within the time authorized by the court or within the time otherwise extended by stipulation or appropriate order, the plaintiff can no longer voluntarily dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1), even if the trial court has not yet entered a judgment of dismissal on the sustained demurrer (29 Cal. 3d 781, 789) . The Court cited Goldtree v. Spreckels (1902) 135 Cal. 666, 67 P. 1091 (discussed § 90.32[3][b]) for the proposition that the term "trial," as used in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1), includes the act of sustaining a general demurrer without leave to amend, as well as the failure to amend within the time permitted after a general demurrer (29 Cal. 3d 781, 785) . However, the Court noted that the right to voluntarily dismiss under that section is not barred until expiration of plaintiff's time to amend after a demurrer is sustained, nor is the right barred before a decision sustaining the demurrer (29 Cal. 3d 781, 789-790) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Right to Voluntary Dismissal Without Prejudice Before Trial

Cardiff Equities, Inc. v. Superior Court (2008) 166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 83 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 was a breach of contract action arising out of a partnership agreement and a guaranty pertaining to the partnership agreement. In response to plaintiff's complaint, defendants moved to compel arbitration. The trial court granted the motion to compel arbitration and stayed the court proceedings. Plaintiff then sought leave to lift the stay to file a first amended complaint, deleting the claims that were subject to arbitration. Plaintiff's motion was granted, and plaintiff dismissed the original complaint without filing an amended complaint. Plaintiff then filed a new complaint, identical to the proposed first amended complaint. Defendant moved to stay the second case, and the trial court granted that motion, staying the case pending the arbitration of the original case. Plaintiff petitioned the court of appeals for a writ of mandate. On appeal, plaintiff argued that the voluntary dismissal of the first case divested the court of jurisdiction with respect to the original case. The court of appeals considered the issue of whether a plaintiff may voluntarily dismiss a case after a motion to compel arbitration is granted, but before the arbitration has commenced. The voluntary dismissal statute states that a plaintiff may dismiss a complaint at any time before the actual commencement of trial. Assuming an arbitration can be considered a "trial" within the meaning of the statute, the trial had not yet commenced. Therefore, plaintiff had an absolute right to dismiss the original complaint even after the trial court granted the motion to compel arbitration (166 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1549-1550) .

In Sanabria v. Embrey (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 837 , the plaintiff filed with the clerk a request for voluntary dismissal without prejudice of his complaint against the defendant. Dismissal was entered by the clerk and the defendant was served with the notice of entry of dismissal. At the time of the plaintiff's voluntary dismissal of his complaint, a third party complaint-in-intervention and the plaintiff's cross-complaint against the third party will still pending, however the original defendants were no longer parties to the action. The complaint-in-intervention and the cross-complaint were subsequently resolved. On appeal of an award of costs and attorney fees for the defendant, the court found that while a plaintiff may not unilaterally dismiss the entire action if a cross-complaint or complaint-in-intervention is pending [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(i)], the court held that a plaintiff may unilaterally dismiss the complaint before trial regardless of the pendency of such other pleadings [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(c)]. Entry of dismissal is entered in the clerk's register and is effective when entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 581d]. Entry of dismissal terminates the action against the dismissed defendants and the action then proceeds as to other parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 579] (92 Cal. App. 4th 422, 425) .

In Roski v. Superior Court (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 841, 95 Cal. Rptr. 312 , the court of appeal reinstated the dismissal of a personal injury action that had been settled without trial by a worker's compensation insurance carrier and the owner of a building where an injury occurred. In directingthe trial court to vacate its order permitting intervention by an injured employee after the suit had been voluntarily dismissed with prejudice, the court held that the carrier had an absolute right to dismiss when it did, under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1) and (5) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), (i)], since there was no pleading on file seeking affirmative relief. Once the dismissal was entered, the trial court was without jurisdiction to vacate it. The court noted that if no affirmative relief has been sought in the pleadings by the opposing party, the privilege of dismissal belongs to the plaintiff and may be exercised by the plaintiff without the knowledge of the other parties or the consent of the court (17 Cal. App. 3d 841, 845) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.31

§ 90.31 Supporting Motion for Dismissal on Ground of Abandonment [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)]--Plaintiff's Intent to Abandon Demonstrated

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.30.]

THE ACTION SHOULD BE DISMISSED ON THE GROUND OF ABANDONMENT PURSUANT TO SECTION 581(d) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS DEMONSTRATED AN INTENT TO ABANDON THE ACTION.

A. Statutory Requirements for Dismissal After Abandonment. After the actual commencement of trial, the court shall dismiss the complaint, or any causes of action asserted in it, in its entirety or as to any defendant, with prejudice, when on the trial and before the final submission of the case, the plaintiff abandons it (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)).

B. Plaintiff's Intent to Abandon Demonstrated. Dismissal of an action on the ground of abandonment pursuant to Section 581(d) of the Code of Civil Procedure is proper if plaintiff demonstrates an intent to abandon the action (see Burnett v. Burnett (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 805, 807, 199 P.2d 685).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used in support of a motion for dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d) if counsel alleges that plaintiff has demonstrated an intention to abandon the action. The memorandum is drafted to support a motion by the plaintiff because case law has stated that former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)] is a vehicle for dismissal by the plaintiff [see, e.g., Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortg. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 212-213, 88 Cal. Rptr. 858] . Nevertheless, it appears that this type of motion could also be brought by a defendant, as well as the court.

The foregoing memorandum may be combined, if appropriate, with the general form of points and authorities in support of voluntary dismissal [see § 90.30].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Abandonment of the case should be shown by reference to the commencement of trial and the specific actions taken by plaintiff prior to any final submission.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.33 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Intent to Abandon Demonstrated

In Burnett v. Burnett (1948) 88 Cal. App. 2d 805, 199 P.2d 685 , plaintiff, after commencement of trial, moved to dismiss the action without prejudice, but the trial court dismissed with prejudice.

The court of appeal affirmed dismissal of plaintiff's action with prejudice, holding that after trial begins the court may dismiss the action with prejudice pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)] if plaintiff abandons the action before final submission. A court has discretionary power to dismiss an action without prejudice if the parties consent or just cause is shown. There was no consent or showing of just cause in this case, and defendant's insistence on proceeding was sufficient evidence to support the implied finding of abandonment. The court's only proper order was one of dismissal with prejudice (88 Cal. App. 2d 805, 807) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.32

§ 90.32 Opposing Motion for Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO DISMISS WITHOUT PREJUDICE BECAUSE _____ [DEFENDANT HAS SOUGHT AFFIRMATIVE RELIEF BY CROSS COMPLAINT or A MOTION TO TRANSFER THE ACTION PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 396b IS PENDING or A _____ (DEMURRER or MOTION TO STRIKE) HAS BEEN SUSTAINED WITH LEAVE TO AMEND AND PLAINTIFF FAILED TO AMEND or A MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT HAS BEEN FILED AND THE TIME FOR OPPOSITION HAS PASSED WITHOUT OPPOSITION PAPERS HAVING BEEN FILED or AN ADVERSE TENTATIVE SUMMARY JUDGMENT RULING HAS BEEN ANNOUNCED AND A HEARING HAS COMMENCED WHICH HAS BEEN CONTINUED FOR THE EXPRESS AND EXCLUSIVE PURPOSE OF PERMITTING THE PLAINTIFF THE OPPORTUNITY TO PRESENT

OPPOSITION EVIDENCE THAT PLAINTIFF CLAIMS WAS PREVIOUSLY UNAVAILABLE] AND DEFENDANT DOES NOT CONSENT TO THE DISMISSAL.

[EITHER, if cross complaint filed]

No Voluntary Dismissal if Cross Complaint Filed. A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice before trial, without consent of the defendant, if the defendant has sought affirmative relief by cross complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), (i); see also In re Mercantile Guaranty Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 350, 69 Cal. Rptr. 361).

[OR, if motion to transfer pending]

No Voluntary Dismissal if Motion to Transfer Pending. A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice before trial, without consent of the defendant, if there is pending a motion to transfer the action pursuant to Section 396b of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), (i)).

[OR, if demurrer or motion to strike sustained without leave to amend]

No Voluntary Dismissal if Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted Without Leave to Amend. A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice if a _____ [demurrer or motion to strike] has been sustained without leave to amend, unless defendant consents to the dismissal (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(2), (f)(2), (4); Goldtree v. Spreckels (1902) 135 Cal. 666, 668-673, 67 P. 1091 ; Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688).

[OR, if leave to amend granted but plaintiff fails to amend]

No Voluntary Dismissal if Failure to Amend After Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted With Leave to Amend. A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice if a _____ [demurrer or motion to strike all or a portion of the complaint] has been sustained with leave to amend, but plaintiff fails to amend within the time allowed, unless defendant consents to the dismissal (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(2), (f)(2), (4); Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 789, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217).

[OR, if a summary judgment motion has been filed and the time to file opposition papers has expired]

No Voluntary Dismissal If Moving Papers in Summary Judgment Motion Negate Plaintiff's Claims Entitling Defendant to Judgment as a Matter of Law and Time to File Opposition Has Elapsed. A plaintiff who seeks to dismiss the complaint after a motion for summary judgment has been filed and the time for opposition has passed is subject to the trial court's continuing jurisdiction to hear and rule on the pending motion. A plaintiff may not frustrate the summary judgment statute by interposing a voluntary dismissal without prejudice in lieu of opposition to a defendant's motion [Cravens v. State Bd. of Equalization (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436] .

[OR, if after tentative ruling hearing on summary judgment motion continued to permit gathering of unavailable evidence]

No Voluntary Dismissal After Adverse Tentative Summary Judgment Ruling Announced and a Hearing Has Been Commenced Which is Continued to Permit Gathering of Previous Unavailable Opposition Evidence. A plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice after an adverse tentative summary judgment ruling has been announced and a hearing has commenced which is thereafter continued for the express and exclusive purpose of permitting the plaintiff the opportunity to present opposition evidence that plaintiff claims was previously unavailable [Mary Morgan, Inc. v. Melzark (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 767, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4] .

[OR, if class action]

No Voluntary Dismissal if Class Action. No action may be dismissed which has been determined to be a class action under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure unless and until notice that the court deems adequate has been given, and the court orders the dismissal (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(k)).

[Add further points and authorities, as necessary, to expand the grounds for the motion or to anticipate objections of the opposing party (see, e.g., § 90.33).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to oppose a motion for voluntary dismissal made by plaintiff pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581. The point "No Voluntary Dismissal if Cross Complaint Filed" in the foregoing memorandum, however, will need to be modified if a partition action is involved. In a partition action, contrary to normal pleading procedure, a defendant may seek affirmative relief in his or her answer which avoids the need for the defendant to file a cross-complaint seeking such relief [Code Civ. Proc. § 872.430; Gray v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 165, 168 fn. 2, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 428] . Dismissal has been held inappropriate when a defendant has requested affirmative relief in its answer [Gray v. Superior Court (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 165, 174, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 428] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if a demurrer has been sustained with leave to amend [see Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 789, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217] , defendant should set forth the date by which amendment was to have occurred.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.30.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of voluntary dismissals under Code Civ. Proc. § 581, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For a form of a notice of motion requesting dismissal of an action under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) for failure to amend a complaint after a demurrer has been sustained with leave to amend, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Voluntary Dismissal if Cross Complaint Filed

The facts and procedural background of In re Mercantile Guaranty Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 69 Cal. Rptr. 361 , are discussed in § 90.30[3][a]. In In re Mercantile Guaranty Co., the court of appeal held that plaintiff's complaint in intervention did not seek affirmative relief. However, it recognized the statutory basis for voluntary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 581, and set forth definitions of "affirmative relief" and "defendant" for purposes of that statute. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1), (5) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1), (i)] a plaintiff may not dismiss an action, with or without prejudice, if a defendant has requested affirmative relief. The term "defendant" includes an intervenor if the intervenor has sought affirmative relief against a party to the action (263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 350) . An answer or complaint in intervention, however, does not seek affirmative relief unless it contains affirmative allegations or introduces new affirmative matter entitling the pleader to relief. Here, plaintiff's complaint in intervention appeared to be nothing more than a denial of defendant's claim concerning liquidation of certain distributions (263 Cal. App. 2d 346, 351) .

[b] No Voluntary Dismissal if Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted Without Leave to Amend

Goldtree v. Spreckels (1902) 135 Cal. 666, 67 P. 1091 , was an action to quiet title and to restrain a person from obtaining a deed to certain real property. Defendant's general demurrer was sustained for all but one cause. Plaintiff did not request leave to amend. At trial, plaintiff requested dismissal of the causes to which demurrer was made. The trial court denied the request on the ground that in sustaining the demurrer, trial had occurred. Plaintiff then obtained a dismissal from the court clerk, but the court vacated this entry on the ground that the clerk lacked authority to enter a dismissal. Plaintiff moved to dismiss its remaining cause without prejudice, and this motion was granted. Defendants successfully moved for judgment on the causes for which the demurrer was sustained. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the order canceling entry of the clerk's dismissal, but reversed the judgment on the demurrer. The Court held that for the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 581 (in its 1902 version), a "trial" occurs if a general demurrer to an action is sustained and no amendment to the complaint is made. Once the demurrer is sustained, the plaintiff stands on the pleading and submits to judgment on the demurrer. This cuts off the right of dismissal, unless it was first set aside or leave was given to amend. Here, after the demurrer was sustained the court clerk had no authority to enter the dismissal, and, since it was void, the trial court rightly set it aside. However, the allegations stated a cause of action on the basis of another case decided the same day by the Court. Therefore, the demurrer should have been overruled (135 Cal. 666, 672-673) .

The holding of Goldtree was questioned in United Shippers, Inc. v. Superior Court (1980) 104 Cal. App. 3d 359, 362-363, 162 Cal. Rptr. 871 , on the ground that the 1947 amendment to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581 changed the language concerning commencement of trial and must have been intended to change Goldtree. However, in light of the holdings in Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 (discussed below), and Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 789, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217 (discussed under Failure to Amend After Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted With Leave to Amend, infra), it appears that Goldtree is valid for the proposition stated. Furthermore, the court in United Shippers, Inc., acknowledged that Witkin accepts the Goldtree holding as still valid (104 Cal. App. 3d 359, 363) .

Bell v. Hummel (1982) 136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 186 Cal. Rptr. 688 , was an action for legal malpractice, originally brought by a married couple, arising from another action. Defendants demurred to plaintiffs' second amended complaint, which was filed after the death of plaintiff wife, on the ground of the statute of limitations. The demurrer was sustained without leave to amend. Plaintiff husband filed a request for voluntary dismissal thereafter, but the trial court dismissed the action with prejudice. Plaintiff husband appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. It held that plaintiff's attempted voluntary dismissal of the action was improper, since the trial court had previously sustained the demurrer and had filed and entered the dismissal order. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)] a voluntary dismissal must be made at any time before actual commencement of trial, but the right to dismiss ends when a trial court sustains a general demurrer without leave to amend. That ruling is a conclusive determination of the litigation on its merits and is therefore a trial (136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1015). While plaintiff had the right to appeal the order dismissing the action with prejudice, the action was barred by the statute of limitations (136 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1018).

[c] No Voluntary Dismissal if Failure to Amend After Demurrer or Motion to Strike Granted With Leave to Amend

The facts and procedural background of Wells v. Marina City Properties, Inc. (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 781, 176 Cal. Rptr. 104, 632 P.2d 217 , are discussed in § 90.30[3][a]. In Wells, the Supreme Court held that once a general demurrer to a complaint is sustained with leave to amend and the plaintiff does not amend within the time authorized by the court, or within the time otherwise extended by stipulation or appropriate order, the plaintiff can no longer voluntarily dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)], even if the trial court has not yet entered a judgment of dismissal on the sustained demurrer (29 Cal. 3d 781, 789) . The Court cited Goldtree v. Spreckels (1902) 135 Cal. 666, 67 P. 1091 , discussed under § 90.32[3][b] for the proposition that the term "trial," as used in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(1), includes the act of sustaining a general demurrer without leave to amend, as well as the failure to amend within the time permitted after a general demurrer (29 Cal. 3d 781, 785) .

[d] No Voluntary Dismissal If Moving Papers In Summary Judgment Motion Negate Plaintiff's Claims Entitling Defendant to Judgment as a Matter of Law and Time to File Opposition Has Elapsed

Cravens v. State Bd. of Equalization (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 436 , involved the issue of whether a trial court has the power to grant an unopposed defense motion for summary judgment when a request for dismissal has been filed by the plaintiff and entered on the day before the schedule hearing date. The trial court rejected the plaintiff'sargument that under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(c), a claimant's power to voluntarily the action before the commencement of trial is absolute, and entered judgment in favor of the defendants in accordance with an order granting summary judgment. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that a plaintiff who waits until a motion for summary judgment has been filed and the time for opposition has passed to attempt to dismiss the complaint is subject to the trial court's continuing jurisdiction to hear and rule on the pending motion. A plaintiff may not frustrate the summary judgment statute by interposing a voluntary dismissal without prejudice in lieu of opposition to a defendant's motion (52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 255) . Thus, a trial court has the power to grant an unopposed defense motion for summary judgment when the defendants' moving papers have met their burden of negating the plaintiff's claims, entitling them to judgment as a matter of law if no issues of disputed fact are raised, and plaintiff, rather than filing opposition papers within the requisite time, files a request for dismissal without prejudice one day before the scheduled hearing date (52 Cal. App. 4th 253, 257) .

[e] No Voluntary Dismissal After Adverse Tentative Summary Judgment Ruling Announced and a Hearing Has Been Commenced Which is Continued to Permit Gathering of Previous Unavailable Opposition Evidence

Mary Morgan, Inc. v. Melzark (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 4 , involved an action to cancel a deed of trust attached to real property that had been acquired in settlement of litigation. Defendants filed separate summary judgment motions. Plaintiff filed written opposition to one of defendant's motions and formally requested a continuance as to the other defendants' motions. The trial court issued a tentative ruling granting the summary judgment motions, and commenced a hearing at which time plaintiff claimed certain deposition transcripts had only recently become available. Plaintiff requested a continuance to permit filing of opposition to one of the motions and further opposition to the other motions. The court granted the continuance. Plaintiff never filed any papers on the summary judgment motions, but instead filed a request without prejudice. The plaintiff did not attend the hearing on the reconvened hearing date, and defendants requested the court to adopt the court's tentative ruling. Ultimately, the trial court found that plaintiff was not entitled to dismiss without prejudice, and judgment was entered in defendants' favor. Following an unsuccessful plea for reconsideration, plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that a plaintiff may not voluntarily dismiss an action without prejudice after an adverse tentative summary judgment ruling has been announced and a hearing has commenced which is thereafter continued for the express and exclusive purpose of permitting the plaintiff the opportunity to present opposition evidence that plaintiff claims was previously unavailable (49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 767) . Citing Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(h), the court noted that an opposing party on a summary judgment motion can compel a continuance, but it is for a particular purpose, i.e., for production of opposition evidence. The continuance does not entitle the opposing party to defeat the motion by collateral maneuvers (49 Cal. App. 4th 765, 771) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.33

§ 90.33 Opposing Motion for Dismissal for Abandonment [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)]--Insufficient Showing of Intent to Abandon

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.32.]

DISMISSAL OF THE ACTION PURSUANT TO SECTION 581(d) OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE ON THE GROUND OF ABANDONMENT IS IMPROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT, ON THE RECORD, DEMONSTRATED TO THE COURT A CLEAR INTENT TO ABANDON THE ACTION.

A. Statutory Requirements for Dismissal After Abandonment. [See § 90.31, Paragraph A.]

B. Intent to Abandon Required. Dismissal of an action pursuant to Section 581(d) of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground of plaintiff's abandonment is improper unless on the record plaintiff demonstrates to the court a clear, unequivocal, and express intent to abandon the action (Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortg. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 212-213, 88 Cal. Rptr. 858).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used in opposition to a dismissal motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d) onthe ground of plaintiff's abandonment if plaintiff has not expressly indicated an intent to abandon the action. It may also be combined, if appropriate, with a general memorandum in opposition to a voluntary dismissal by plaintiff under Code Civ. Proc. § 581[see § 90.32].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Specific facts showing plaintiff's lack of intent to abandon should be set forth, including facts appearing on the record in the action.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.31.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Abandon Required

In Kaufman & Broad Bldg. Co. v. City & Suburban Mortg. Co. (1970) 10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 88 Cal. Rptr. 858 , the trial court granted a directed verdict for defendant on the theory that plaintiff had abandoned the second cause of action and thus, pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d)], a dismissal with prejudice would have been proper.

On appeal, the court of appeal reversed. Although former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(4) appeared to grant to the court a power to dismiss, the section had traditionally been a mechanism by which a plaintiff, and not the court, might voluntarily dismiss an action which had been expressly and intentionally abandoned (10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 212-213) . However, the court of appeal did not find sufficient intent here to sustain the trial court's action. A dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(4) is improper unless there is a clear, unequivocal, and express intent to abandon the action by plaintiff that is demonstrated to the court by way of a motion to dismiss, stipulation of the parties, or some other form of express intent on the record. In this case, the record was devoid of any statement that could be taken as an unequivocal and voluntary motion to dismiss that demonstrated to the court an express intent to abandon the cause of action (10 Cal. App. 3d 206, 213) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.34

§ 90.34 Opposing Voluntary Dismissal by Plaintiff Before or During Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(b)(1)]--Dismissal Requested After Ruling of Mandatory Dismissal

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.32.]

PLAINTIFF'S VOLUNTARY DISMISSAL IS INVALID BECAUSE IT WAS REQUESTED AFTER THE COURT GRANTED DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR MANDATORY DISMISSAL.

A. No Right to Voluntary Dismissal After Court Grants Motion for Mandatory Dismissal. A plaintiff has no right to voluntary dismissal of an action after the court has granted a motion to dismiss the action involuntarily, but before the order for involuntary dismissal has been filed (M & R Properties v. Thomson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 900-901, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579).

B. Defendant's Right to Mandatory Dismissal Prevails Over Plaintiff's Right to Voluntary Dismissal. When there is a conflict between a plaintiff's right to voluntary dismissal and a defendant's right to a mandatory dismissal, the defendant's right prevails (M & R Properties v. Thomson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 905, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a dismissal motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(d) on the ground that plaintiff's request for voluntary dismissal is invalid because it occurred after a ruling of involuntary dismissal but before an order of involuntary dismissal was filed. In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.30.

Because voluntary dismissals are not ordinarily handled as motions, the defendant may not learn of the dismissal in time to oppose it. In that case,this form may also be used to support a motion by a defendant to vacate a plaintiff's voluntary dismissal [see M & R Properties v. Thomson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 901, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579] .

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should tie in the specific facts showing the timing of the plaintiff's request for dismissal and the ruling of involuntary dismissal.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Voluntary Dismissal After Court Grants Motion for Mandatory Dismissal

In M & R Properties v. Thomson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579 , plaintiff filed a complaint for breach of contract which included a clause entitling the prevailing party to its attorney fees. When the plaintiffs did not bring the matter to trial within five years, defendants moved under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360, for mandatory dismissal of the action, a procedure which would be a determination on the merits, entitling defendants to their attorney fees. The afternoon before the hearing on the defendants' motion, the court issued a tentative ruling granting the motion and giving the time in the morning when any oral argument on the matter would be heard. Under local court rules, plaintiffs waived their right to the hearing by failing to notify the court and the defendants of their request for oral argument by 4:30 p.m. that afternoon. The next morning plaintiffs filed a request for dismissal of the action without prejudice, which the clerk entered that day. The defendants discovered the voluntary dismissal when they sent plaintiffs a proposed order granting the motion for mandatory dismissal. The defendants moved under former Code Civ. Proc. § 473, 3rd Paragraph [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)], to vacate the voluntary dismissal based on surprise, inadvertence, or excusable neglect. The trial court vacated the voluntary dismissal and entered an order of mandatory dismissal (11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 901) .

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the tentative ruling became the ruling of the court when plaintiffs failed to act by 4:30 p.m. to request a hearing. Distinguishing between the order granting the motion to dismissal and the order of dismissal, the court held that the matter was, however, still pending the next morning because no order of dismissal had been entered as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 581d. The court then held that a plaintiffs' right to seek a voluntary dismissal is cut off by a ruling granting a defendant's motion to dismiss the action for lack of prosecution (11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 902) .

[b] Defendant's Right to Mandatory Dismissal Prevails Over Plaintiff's Right to Voluntary Dismissal

The facts and procedural background of M & R Properties v. Thomson (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 579 , are discussed under § 90.34[3][a]. In M & R Properties the court characterized the case as involving the conflicting rights of defendant to a mandatory dismissal, which is intertwined with the trial court's duty to dismiss an action for lack of prosecution, and of a plaintiff to a voluntary dismissal. The court concluded that the defendant's right to a mandatory dismissal is the stronger, and declined to balance the competing rights in such a fashion as to render a defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal pointless, and the ruling of the court on that motion a nullity (11 Cal. App. 4th 899, 902-903) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureDismissalsVoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
A. Voluntary Dismissal

9-90 California Points & Authorities §§ 90.35-90.49

[Reserved]

§§ 90.35[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.50

§ 90.50 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DISMISS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT _____ [name] MUST BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.250 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE _____ [THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT WERE NOT SERVED ON DEFENDANT WITHIN THREE YEARS AFTER THE ACTION WAS COMMENCED AGAINST DEFENDANT and/or PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS WAS NOT FILED WITHIN 60 DAYS AFTER THE THREE-YEAR PERIOD FOR SERVICE OF THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT EXPIRED] IN ACCORDANCE WITH SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Dismissal for Failure to Complete Service or File Proof of Service Within Statutory Period. An action must not be prosecuted or proceed further, and must be dismissed by the court on motion of any interested person, whether or not a named party, after notice to the parties, if service of the summons and complaint on the defendant is not made within three years after the action is commenced against defendant, and filing of the proof of service of summons not made within three years and 60 days after commencement of that action; an action is commenced for this purpose at the time the complaint is filed (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250(a); see Elling Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 93-94, 123 Cal. Rptr. 734).

B. Dismissal Mandatory. Dismissal of an action for failure to complete service and file proof of service of summons within the period required under Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure is mandatory and is not subject to exception, extension, or excuse except as expressly provided by statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(b); see Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 50, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 ; Floyd Neal & Associates, Inc. v. Superior Court (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 734, 738-739, 140 Cal. Rptr. 301).

[Optional] C. Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Not Extended by Filing Amended Complaint. The statutory periods for completing service and filing proof of service described in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure run from the date of filing of the original complaint against defendants named in the complaint and are not affected regarding named defendants by the filing of an amended complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210; see Elling Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 94-95, 123 Cal. Rptr. 734 ; Perati v. Atkinson (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 251, 252-253, 40 Cal. Rptr. 835).

[Optional] D. General Appearance After Three Years Does Not Make Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Inapplicable. When a defendant makes a general appearance only after three years have elapsed from the date the complaint was filed, that appearance does not make inapplicable the requirement that plaintiff complete service within three years and file proof of service of summons within 60 days thereafter (Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-511).

[Optional] E. Defendant Not Estopped to Move for Dismissal by Requesting Extension of Time to Respond. Defendant's request for an extension of time to respond does not equitably estop the defendant from moving to dismiss when the defendant does not file an answer within the extended time and when that time expires the time within which plaintiff must file a return of service of summons has not expired (Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1252-1253, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for mandatory dismissal on the ground that service of the summons and complaint on defendant was not completed within three years after the action was commenced against defendant, or that proof of service of summons within 60 days thereafter [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250].

Optional Paragraph C may be used if there is a question of law whether the statutory requirements have been met.

Optional Paragraph D may be used if defendant made a general appearance more than three years after the action was commenced but plaintiff had not completed service and return within the required periods.

Optional Paragraph E may be used if the defendant had asked for an extension of time to respond to the complaint, but did not respond, and the plaintiff still had time to file the proof of service of summons prior to the expiration of the three-year, sixty-day limit of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250.

Additional memoranda supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in service are set out in §§ 90.61 -90.63. These memoranda are intended for use as supplemental points and authorities, to be submitted in response to any opposition to the motion for dismissal. Supplemental memoranda are expressly authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, this memorandum may be combined with these additional memoranda, when counsel wishes to anticipate any known ground for opposition.

If there is a possibility that the mandatory period may be inapplicable, counsel may wish to combine these points and authorities with others that support a motion for discretionary dismissal for failure to serve and return a summons within two years after commencement of an action against defendant [see § 90.51]. Similarly, counsel may also wish to combine these points and authorities with others that support an alternative motion for discretionary dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial within the periods specified under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) [see § 90.83].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The exact dates of filing and service of the summons and complaint and of return of the summons or other proof of service should be alleged, to establish noncompliance with the service requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250].

[b] Mandatory Period for Completing Service

Service of the summons and complaint must be made within three years after the commencement of the action against the defendant. The proof of service of summons must be filed within 60 days after the time for service, that is, three years and 60 days from commencement of the action against the defendant [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Computation of Period for Does and Defendants Added by Amendment

Some courts have held that the mandatory period for completing service on a fictitiously named defendant begins to run from commencement of the action [Nelson v. A.H. Robins Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 862, 866, 197 Cal. Rptr. 179 ; Watson v. Superior Court (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 61, 100 Cal. Rptr. 684 (discussed in § 90.61[3][c])]. If a defendant is added as a party to the complaint by amendment, one court of appeal has held that the action is commenced regarding the added defendant as of the time of filing the amended complaint [Warren v. Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Ry. Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 24, 38, 96 Cal. Rptr. 317] .

Other courts, however, have shifted the focus of analysis to whether the amended complaint would "relate back" to the original complaint under the doctrine governing whether amendments are barred by the statute of limitations [see Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 936-937, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 ; Coronet

Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366 (factors involved in determiningrelation back)]. If a cause of action in an amended complaint does not relate back to the original complaint for purposes of determining the statute of limitations, the three-year period commences as to that cause of action at the time when it is first alleged in an amended complaint [see Barrington v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 146, 150, 151-158, 216 Cal. Rptr. 405, 702 P.2d 563 (decided under prior law, but stating its applicability to current law in dicta; relation back)]. This rule applies both to defendants named by a fictitious name in the original complaint [see Barrington v. A.H. Robins Co. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 146, 150, 151-158, 216 Cal. Rptr. 405, 702 P.2d 563] , and to defendants added by the amended complaint [see Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1354, 1360-1361, 251 Cal. Rptr. 859] . Similarly, the three-year period has been held to have commenced at the time the original complaint was filed because the amended complaint involved the same accident and the same offending instrumentality as alleged in the original complaint, and thus related back for purposes of avoiding a bar of a statute of limitations [Nelson v. A.H. Robins Co. (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 862, 866-868, 197 Cal. Rptr. 179 ; but see Hennessey's Tavern, Inc. v. American Air Filter Co. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1351, 1354, 1357-1360, 251 Cal. Rptr. 859 (three-year period commences s to allege alter ego of corporate defendant at time when amended complaint is filed first naming that defendant)].

[d] Effect of Defendant's General Appearance After Three Years

The majority in Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-511 (Fourth App. Dist., Div. Two) , held that a defendant's general appearance after three years from the date the complaint was filed does not make inapplicable the mandatory requirements for service and return [see § 90.50[3][d]]. This holding conflicts with Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1034, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 (First App. Dist., Div. Three) , and has been strongly criticized by Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 (Fourth App. Dist., Div. Three) , in which the court reasoned that an answer filed during the three year period excuses failure to serve summons within that time, while an answer filed during the three-year, sixty-day period excuses failure to return summons within that time [Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 ; see § 90.52[3][b]].

[e] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles. 2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[g] Opposing Memoranda

The memoranda set out in §§ 90.52 -90.59 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal for Failure to Complete Service or File Proof of Service Within Statutory Period

In Elling Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 123 Cal. Rptr. 734 , the trial court denied a motion to dismiss an action for failure to effect service within the period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate requiring entry of dismissal, holding that dismissal is mandatory as to a party who has not been served within three years from the commencement of the action unless the case comes within one of the exceptions expressly stated in the statute or implied by case law (48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 93) . Dismissal was proper because defendants were parties to the original complaint (48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 96) , plaintiff could not show that he came under an implied exception to the statutory requirements, and there was nothing in the statute suggesting that notice or knowledge of the pendency of the action would be a substitute for service and return (48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 96-98) .

[b] Dismissal Mandatory

In Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 , an action was brought on March 12, 1970, against a corporation, an employee, and others for damages under an insurance contract. On March 15, 1973, an officer of the corporation, by then dissolved, wrote plaintiff a letter in which he acknowledged that "it would appear that service has been made on" an officer of the former corporation on the previous day and noted plaintiff's agreement that the corporation have an extension of time in which to answer or otherwise plead. Subsequently, on August 3, 1973, the former corporation and its employee filed a notice of motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a). The motion was denied and the moving parties petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal of the action.

The Court issued the writ, holding that unless the actions of plaintiff came within the exceptions expressly or impliedly stated in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a), dismissal of the action was mandatory where the summons on the complaint was not served and return made within three years after commencement of the action (12 Cal. 3d 44, 50) . One of the exceptions considered by the Court was whether the letter by the corporation's officer constituted a general appearance. The Court found that it did not. It merely acknowledged that service might have been made, but did not purport to waive any of the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) regarding timely service. Moreover, merely seeking an extension of time to plead cannot be deemed to indicate an intention to submit to the jurisdiction of the court for a ruling going to the merits, because the purpose may be only to obtain adequate time to determine whether or not to object to the court's jurisdiction. Even if the party's action did constitute a general appearance, it took place after expiration of the three-year period, and a general appearance after the three years have run did not operate to deprive a defendant of the right to dismissal (12 Cal. 3d 44, 50-53) .

Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220 now provides that a general appearance is not made by a stipulation pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230 extending the time within which service must be made, by a motion to dismiss pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430, or by an extension of time to plead after a motion to dismiss is made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430.

In Floyd Neal & Associates, Inc. v. Superior Court (1977) 72 Cal. App. 3d 734, 140 Cal. Rptr. 301 , plaintiff failed to serve and return service within three years after the action was filed. After expiration of the three-year period but before dismissal of the action, a complaint in intervention was filed. Subsequently, the trial court dismissed the complaint under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) but refused to dismiss the complaint in intervention. Defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal.

The court of appeal granted the petition. The court reasoned that the language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a was mandatory and jurisdictional in that if no express or implied exception to the statute exists, the court has power only to order a dismissal. Since former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) provided that if its requirements were not met, then no further proceedings could be had, and in the instant case no express or implied exception was applicable, the trial court specifically lacked power to order the filing of a complaint in intervention (72 Cal. App. 3d 734, 738-739) .

[c] Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Not Extended by Filing Amended Complaint

The facts and procedural background of Elling Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 123 Cal. Rptr. 734 , are discussed under § 90.50[3][a]. In Elling, plaintiff contended that dismissal was improper because, although the defendants were named in the caption, the statutory period did not commence until the complaint was amended almost one year later to state a cause of action against them. In response, the court held that the period commences on the date of filing of the original complaint for all parties named in that complaint. Persons named in the title of the action are thereby made parties and eligible for service of process, even if a cause of action is not stated against them (48 Cal. App. 3d 89, 94-95) .

In Perati v. Atkinson (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 251, 40 Cal. Rptr. 835 , plaintiff contended on appeal that the trial court had erred in dismissing the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a for failure to return the summons within three years, because the period commenced running on the filing of the third amended complaint rather than the original complaint. The court held that the period was not extended by the filing of an amended or supplementary complaint (230 Cal. App. 2d 251, 253) . Not only would a contrary rule conflict with interpretations of when the period commences under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) and (b), but to construe the word "complaint" to mean the "last amended complaint" would violate the plain meaning of the statute and utterly defeat its purpose (230 Cal. App. 2d 251, 253) .

Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a), enacted in 1984, provides that an action is commenced at the time the complaint is filed.

[d] General Appearance After Three Years Does Not Make Statutory Periods for Service and Proof of Service Inapplicable

In Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506 , plaintiff completed service within the three-year period, but failed to return summons within three years and 60 days. Defendant, meanwhile, made a general appearance after the three-year period but within three years and 60 days. The Fourth District Court of Appeal, Division Two, affirmed the trial court's dismissal for plaintiff's failure to satisfy the mandatory requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b).

In a majority opinion, two members of the appellate panel rejected plaintiff's argument that, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110(f) ("service" includes return of summons unless provision or context otherwise requires) and 583.220 (time within which "service" must be made does not apply if defendant makes general appearance), defendant's general appearance within three years and 60 days after the filing of the complaint made inapplicable the requirement for return of summons during that period. The majority reasoned that the additional sixty days was intended by the Legislature to provide only that notice of the lawsuit could be filed sixty days after the three-year period had run within which service must be accomplished. The court applied the rule in Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 52, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241 (decided under former Code Civ.Proc. § 581(a), and discussed under § 90.50[3][b]), that a general appearance after the lapse of the three-year mandatory period for completing service did not operate to deprive a defendant of his right to dismissal (233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-511) .

The reasoning of Weatherby has been criticized by Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 (Fourth App. Dist., Div. Three) , discussed in § 90.52[3][b]. Biss, in criticizing Weatherby, reasoned that an answer filed during the three-year period excuses failure to serve summons within that time, while an answer filed during the three-year, sixty-day period excuses failure to return summons within that time [Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 ; see Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1034, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 (reaching opposite result from Weatherby), both discussed in § 90.52[3][b]; see also Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 514 (dissenting opinion)].

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[e] Defendant Not Estopped to Move for Dismissal by Requesting Extension of Time to Respond

In Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 , a medical malpractice action, the trial court dismissed a defendant on the ground that service had not been timely made. Plaintiff had served the summons and complaint, but had not completed service by effecting return of summons in a timely manner.

On appeal, plaintiff raised the doctrine of equitable estoppel, contending that communication by defendant's attorney suggested that it was unnecessary to make a return of service. The attorney had asked for an extension of time to answer, but had then failed to file an answer during the extension period. Although recognizing that the doctrines of equitable estoppel and waiver are preserved by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140 (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1251) , the court of appeal held that, even accepting all the plaintiff's allegations, plaintiff could not prevail. After reviewing the elements of estoppel (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1252) , the court concluded that even if some reliance had been engendered by the request for an extension, the reasonableness of that reliance ended when the defendant did not file an answer. The court noted that the plaintiff still had time at that point to file a timely return of summons, but failed to do so. Since that failure was not attributable to any conduct by defendant's attorney, plaintiff could not claim that defendant's attorney's conduct prevented timely filing of the return of summons (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1253) . The court thus affirmed the judgment of dismissal.

Note that the court did reverse the dismissal as to two other defendants who filed answers. That result conflicts with and included criticism of Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 284 Cal. Rptr. 622 , which is the authority for Optional Paragraph D of this form. For discussion, see § 90.50[3][d].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Mandatory

In Tires Unlimited v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 974, 226 Cal. Rptr. 25 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to dismiss the action for failure to serve and return summons within three years. The court stated that because of the mandatory statutory language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, a trial court has no discretionary power to decline to dismiss a case in which the service has not been made and the summons has not been returned within the statutory time limit, unless the circumstances fall within the narrow statutory exceptions. The court stated that no such statutory exceptions applied in this case (180 Cal. App. 3d 974, 983) .

The facts and procedural background of Republic Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1253, 207 Cal. Rptr. 241 , are discussed in § 90.63[3][b]. In Republic, the court of appeal held that the time provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] are mandatory and not excusable, unless one of the exceptions in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(f) exists. The court found that belated service on a defendant more than four years after commencement of an action was unexcused under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(f), and granted a writ of mandate that the action be dismissed (160 Cal. App. 3d 1253, 1258) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.51

§ 90.51 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	DISMISS ACTION
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1); Cal.
_____ [name],	)	Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT _____ [name] SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S DISCRETIONARY POWER UNDER SECTION 583.410 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE SERVICE AND PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS HAVE NOT BEEN MADE WITHIN TWO YEARS AFTER THE ACTION WAS COMMENCED AGAINST DEFENDANT AND DISMISSAL IS APPROPRIATE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. Discretion to Dismiss After Two Years. The court has the discretionary power to dismiss an action pursuant to Section 583.410 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution, on the defendant's motion, if service and proof of service of summons are not made within two years after the action is commenced against the defendant and dismissal appears appropriate to the court under the circumstances (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1); see Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 398, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(f) ("service" defined to include return of summons).

B. Factors Considered. In exercising its discretion regarding dismissal under Section 583.410 of the Code of Civil Procedure for failure to effect service and return of summons within two years as provided in Section 583.420(a)(1), the trial court must consider the factors set forth in Rule 3.1342(e) of the California Rules of Court, including the diligence used in seeking to effect service of process (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(a), (e); see Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 407-408, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912).

[Optional] C. Two-Year Period Applicable to Doe Defendants. The court's discretion to dismiss an action for failure to effect service and return summons within two years pursuant to the provisions of Section 583.420(a)(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure is not limited by Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which allows amendment of a pleading to set forth the true name of a fictitiously named defendant. The requirement of reasonable diligence in effecting service within two years of the commencement of an action to avoid discretionary dismissal is applicable to both named and fictitious defendants (Clark v. Stabond Corporation (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 50, 58, 242 Cal. Rptr. 676).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal based on a failure to serve and return a summons within two years after commencement of an action against defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1)].

An additional memorandum supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal for delay in service is set out in § 90.65. This memorandum is intended for use as supplemental points and authorities, to be submitted in response to any opposition to the motion for dismissal. Supplemental memoranda are expressly authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing memorandum may be combined with the additional memorandum, when counsel wishes to anticipate any known ground for opposition.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with others supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure serve thesummons and complaint within three years and return the summons within 60 days thereafter [see § 90.50].

The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)]. Thus, §§ 90.52-90.59, which set out points and authorities opposing a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in service, may also be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for discretionary dismissal supported by the foregoing form. Conversely, the foregoing points and authorities may be supplemented by, or combined with, the points and authorities set out in §§ 90.61 -90.63, which respond to various grounds for opposition set out in §§ 90.52 -90.59.

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, the date the action was filed and facts showing no apparent reason for delay in service should be included, along with facts showing any prejudice to defendant in failing to dismiss [see, e.g., Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487-488, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. The provision for discretionary dismissal for failure to serve and return a summons contained in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) was not previously codified. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) provided that the court, in its discretion, might dismiss an action for want of prosecution if it was not brought to trial within two years after it was filed. This section was interpreted to include the failure to serve a summons [see, e.g., Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 ; Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 398, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912] . Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) in this way have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 90.60 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss After Two Years

Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 , involved a complaint for personal injuries arising out a slip-and-fall accident on defendant's premises. Plaintiff did not complete service of process until two and one-half years after filing suit. After receiving an extension of time to plead, defendant filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420]. Prior to the hearing on the motion, plaintiff obtained entry of default, which was later vacated because of clerical error. In the interim, defendant filed an answer. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. After rejecting the argument that it was improper to vacate the clerk's entry of default, the court addressed the issue of discretion in dismissing the action. The court held that in opposing the dismissal motion, plaintiff had the burden of showing excusable delay. A trial court exercises its discretion by reference to the factors set forth in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e), discussed under § 90.51[3][b]], and its rulings will be disturbed only in cases of manifest abuse. Here, plaintiff's principal explanation of delay was the press of other business, coupled with disruption of office personnel. Although an exceptional press of business has sometimes been cited as a factor militating against dismissal, this has only been one of several factors justifying a delay in service. The court concluded that a long delay in serving a summons and complaint poses an especially great potential for prejudice to a defendant because the passage of time may preclude defendant from adequately preparing a defense, particularlyin a slip-and-fall case, in which the condition of the defendant's premises at the time of the injury is at issue. The court relied largely on Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 399-400, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (discussed below), in reaching its conclusion (105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487-488) .

Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 , was an action for wrongful employment termination. Plaintiff did not complete service of process for almost two years and four months after filing suit, and took no further action for two additional months. After filing suit, plaintiff's attorneys reassigned the case to other staff members and were involved in extensive litigation for other clients. Defendant moved to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420], but his motion was initially denied. After granting a later motion for reconsideration, the court reheard the dismissal motion and granted it on the basis that plaintiff had not shown good cause for the long delay. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. After upholding the propriety of granting the motion for reconsideration, the court held that if in the exercise of its discretion a trial court determines that insufficient cause or justification has been shown for protracted delay, it may grant the motion to dismiss. Here, the sole justification advanced was that plaintiff's attorneys were so busy in representing other clients and legislative advocacy that they had no time to serve the sole defendant or otherwise pursue the lawsuit. While the press of business was a factor to be considered by the trial court, the court of appeal reasoned, it did not constitute good cause for failure to serve defendant or otherwise bring the case to trial (91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 399-400) . The court further reasoned that although several cases have rejected the view that prejudice to a defendant is presumed because of a long delay in prosecuting an action, the concept of presumed prejudice had a sound basis in a case of this nature. The factors in this case included plaintiff's request for injunctive relief and per diem damages for employment loss. The court termed the delay in service a particularly pernicious form of delay in terms of potential prejudice because the defendant may be unaware of the action and not alerted to the necessity of conducting discovery, interviewing witnesses, and preserving evidence. While here the adverse effects on defendant from the delay were not overwhelming, the court concluded that there were some adverse effects. Considering the nature of the case, the relief sought, the nature and length of the delay, and the lack of justification for it, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the action (91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 401-405) .

[b] Factors Considered

California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1342(e) sets out factors that must be considered by the court in ruling on a motion for discretionary dismissal brought either for failure to serve and return the summons or for failure to bring the case to trial or new trial [Cal. Rules of Ct. 3.1342(e); see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1), (2), (3)]. The rule requires the court to consider all matters relevant to a proper determination of the motion, including the court's file in the case and the affidavits and declarations and supporting data submitted by the parties. When applicable, the court must also consider (1) the availability of the moving party and other essential parties for service of process; (2) the diligence in seeking to effect service of process; (3) the extent to which the parties engaged in any settlement negotiations or discussions; (4) the diligence of the parties in pursuing discovery or other pretrial proceedings, including any extraordinary relief sought by either party; (5) the nature and complexity of the case; (6) the law applicable to the case, including the pendency of other litigation under a common set of facts or determinative of the legal or factual issues in the case; (7) the nature of any extensions of time or other delay attributable to either party; (8) the condition of the court's calendar and the availability of an earlier trial date if the matter was ready for trial; (9) whether the interests of justice are best served by dismissal or trial of the case; and (10) any other fact or circumstance relevant to a fair determination of the issue.

Cal. Rules of Ct. 3.1342(e) further provides that the court shall be guided by the policies set forth in Code Civ. Proc. 583.130. Under that statute, it is the policy of the state that a plaintiff shall proceed with reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action but that all parties shall cooperate in bringing the action to trial or other disposition. Except as otherwise provided by statute or rule, the policy favoring the right of the parties to make stipulations in their own interests and the policy favoring trial or other disposition of an action on the merits are generally to be preferred over the policy that requires dismissal for failure to proceed with reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action.

The facts and procedural background of Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 , are discussed under § 90.51[3][a]. In Brown, the court of appeal held that the trial court exercises its discretion by reference to the factors set forth in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)], and its rulings will be disturbed only in cases of manifest abuse (105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487) .

The facts and procedural background of Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 , are discussed under § 90.51[3][a]. In Lopez, the court of appeal held that former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)], was promulgated pursuant to authority granted by an amendment to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) and enumerates factors the court must consider on a motion for dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a). The court rejected the argument that the trial court had failed to consider one of those factors, namely,whether the interests of justice would be served by imposing a sanction less dire than dismissal. The trial court had seriously considered the decision to dismiss and nothing in the record indicated that plaintiff suggested to the court any specific alternative or that the court failed to consider the possibility of imposing a lesser sanction (91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 407-408) .

[c] Two-Year Period Applicable to Doe Defendants

Clark v. Stabond Corporation (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 50, 242 Cal. Rptr. 676 , was an action for wrongful death against five named defendants and unknown defendants fictitiously named as Does 1 through 1,000. Two defendants, Stabond Corporation and Fiber Resin Corporation, were subsequently named in place of two Doe defendants over two years later. They moved to dismiss the action for failure to serve the complaint within two years pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. 583.420(a)(1), and the trial court granted the motion. The trial court found that, in regard to Stabond, plaintiffs had failed to pursue timely discovery that presumably would have led to Stabond's identity and service within two years of the filing of the action, that Stabond was available for service during the entire period of delay, that the case was relatively simple and could have been tried if the complaint had been timely served, and that, under all the circumstances of the case, it would have been an injustice to deny the motion. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the plaintiffs' argument that absent an abuse of the fictitious name procedures, a complaint should never be dismissed before the three-year limitations period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. Instead, the court noted that neither Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 or Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) make any distinction between service on named or fictitious defendants. Rather, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) requires consideration of the availability of the moving party for service of process and "the diligence in seeking to effect service of process." Finally, the court noted that one of the purposes of the discretionary dismissal statutes that is particularly significant when delay is caused by failure to effect service is to avoid prejudice to the defendant caused by the dissipation of material evidence, thus limiting the defendant's ability to defend. The court concluded that this purpose would be frustrated by carving out an exception based on how a defendant is identified in the complaint (197 Cal. App. 3d 50, 58) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss After Two Years

In A. Groppe & Sons Glass Co. Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 220, 283 Cal. Rptr. 352 , the court of appeal upheld a dismissal for failure to serve defendant within two years of commencing the action, following Danielson v. ITT Industrial Credit Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 245 Cal. Rptr. 126 . Plaintiff argued that it was impossible to serve the complaint during a 17-month period while the Chapter 11 bankruptcy trustee controlled plaintiff's action. The court disagreed, stating that plaintiff could have sought an order compelling the trustee to maintain the action, and failed otherwise to demonstrate that service was impossible, impracticable or futile (232 Cal. App. 3d 220, 225-226) .

Kuchins v. Hawes (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 276 Cal. Rptr. 281 , was an action for damages for injuries sustained in an automobile accident. The summons was not served until more than two and one-half years after the complaint was filed. The only attempt at prosecution of the action during that period was the writing of a letter by plaintiff's counsel confirming a telephone conversation. After the summons was served, plaintiff did conduct some discovery. The defendants' motion for discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a) and 583.420(a)(1) for failure to serve summons within two years was granted, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that a belated manifestation of diligence does not operate to justify an earlier unjustified protracted delay, and that the policy that the interests of justice weigh against disposing of litigation on procedural grounds will prevail only if a plaintiff makes some showing of excusable delay. No such showing had been made (226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 541) .

In Hilliard v. Lobley (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 638, 265 Cal. Rptr. 5 , the court of appeal affirmed dismissal of the action on the ground plaintiff had failed to serve the complaint within two years from the filing of the action. Plaintiff filed a medical malpractice action on August 22, 1985. An amended complaint was filed by a substituted attorney on March 18, 1986, and on May 14, 1987, plaintiff retained her present attorney, who had the amended complaint served on defendant on October 8, 1987. Defendant answered the complaint and moved to dismiss. In affirming the dismissal, the appellate court held that actual prejudice need not be established before a court may dismiss an action, since the legislative policy underlying the dismissal statutes is not solely to avoid prejudice to the defendant but is also to expedite the administration of justice by requiring every person to prosecute his or her action promptly and diligently. Even assuming plaintiff's contention were correct, plaintiff made no showing of justifiable delay or diligence in prosecution. While plaintiff did offer some explanation for the delay from May 1987 when her present attorney was hired until October when service was effectuated, there was an insufficient explanation for the delay before May 1987 (216 Cal. App. 3d 638, 641-642) . It is incumbent on plaintiff to establish reasonable or excusable delay in service. In the absence of such a showing the court may dismiss the action in its discretion even if defendant fails to establish actual prejudice (216 Cal. App. 3d 638, 642) .

In Danielson v. ITT Industrial Credit Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 245 Cal. Rptr. 126 , the court of appeal upheld a dismissal for failure to serve the summons and complaint for nearly three years after the action was filed. The action was based on the failure of defendants, a tractor-trailer company, a credit company, and others, to lease a tractor-trailer under an oral agreement to an employee of a trucking company. After the defendants refused to change title to the employee and repossessed the tractor-trailer, the employee filed for bankruptcy in federal court, listing potential state court litigation claims against defendants as assets of the estate. The bankruptcy court discharged the employee's debts, but the trustee did not close the case or pursue the litigation claims. The employee then filed the action against the defendants in state court, and waited nearly three years to serve the defendants. After opposing the motion to dismiss, the employee moved the bankruptcy court for an order that the trustee had abandoned the state court claims, which was denied. The court of appeal found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the case pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1). The court held that the prosecution of the action was not stayed by the bankruptcy proceedings, and that the employee could have petitioned the bankruptcy court for relief. Furthermore, the appellate court stated that the trial court could have reasonably concluded that service was not beyond the employee's control during the three years in which he sat on his rights, and that defendants demonstrated actual prejudice caused by the delay (199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 658-660) .

House v. State of California (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 174 Cal. Rptr. 279 , was an action for false imprisonment against various police officers and their employers. In affirming the dismissal of the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) against certain individual defendants and a public entity, who were served with process almost three years after suit was filed, the court of appeal held that the plaintiff was not excused for the delay in service. The claim of plaintiff's attorney that his father's nine-month illness prevented him from attending to his law practice did not adequately explain the failure to effect service (119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 880-882) .

Feingersh v. Lutheran Hosp. Society (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 406, 136 Cal. Rptr. 155 , was a medical malpractice action in which two groups of defendants were served with process. The first was served two years and seven months after suit was filed, and the second some four months later. Plaintiff claimed that delays in service resulted from his desire to adjudicate a worker's compensation claim and to see the outcome of a similar appellate case. The court of appeal held that neither the pendency of a worker's compensation case or an appeal in a similar case between different parties is a valid excuse for not pressing a tort action against a third party. Although the trial court had denied one motion for dismissal after service had been made on the first group of defendants, that denial did not bar a later dismissal regarding both groups under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a). The court reasoned that as the time for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring a case to trial draws closer, the showing required to excuse a failure to bring a case to trial grows ever greater, and a trial court, in exercising its discretion, must consider the length of this interval. The court also noted that trial court's have inherent power to dismiss actions for unreasonable delay in prosecution (66 Cal. App. 3d 406, 410-411) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.52

§ 90.52 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Statutory Time Limits Excused by Defendant's General Appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	TO DISMISS
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE HE/SHE GENERALLY APPEARED IN THE ACTION, AND THUS THE TIME WITHIN WHICH SERVICE IS MADE AND PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS IS FILED PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE DOES NOT APPLY.

A. Effect of General Appearance. Compliance with the statutory time requirements for service and proof of service of summons in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure is excused if the defendant has made a general appearance

(Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220).

B. General Appearance Defined. A defendant makes a general appearance when the defendant answers, demurs, files a notice of motion to strike, files a notice of motion pursuant to Section 396b of the Code of Civil Procedure, moves for reclassification pursuant to Section 403.040 of the Code of Civil Procedure, gives the plaintiff written notice of appearance, or when an attorney gives notice of appearance for the defendant, or when the defendant does any act that indicates an intention to submit to the jurisdiction of the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 1014; see General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 453, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289).

[Optional] C. Period During Which General Appearance Must Be Made. The time limitation within which service of summons is made and proof of service is filed must be made is inapplicable when a defendant makes a general appearance within three years and sixty days of commencement of the action (Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 ; Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1034, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870).

[Optional] D. Action Indicating Status as Party. A request by a defendant for relief that could only be given to a party on appearance in what would be a regular proceeding in the case constitutes a general appearance (see Slaybaugh v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222, 138 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[Optional] E. Written Stipulation Constituting Appearance. A written stipulation between attorneys which expressly or by implication establishes an intent to accept service or appear constitutes a general appearance (see Knapp v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 802-803, 145 Cal. Rptr. 154 ; RCA Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1009-1010, 121 Cal. Rptr. 441).

[Optional] F. Complaint in Intervention Not Separate Action From Original Complaint. A complaint and complaint in intervention are not independent actions, because the latter simply joins the intervenor in an action already instituted; thus, a general appearance in defending the complaint will preclude obtaining dismissal of the complaint in intervention (Rhode v. National Medical Hosp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 528, 537-538, 155 Cal. Rptr. 797).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to complete service and file proof of service of summons. The ground for opposition is that the defendant made a general appearance in the action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and return the summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.53 -90.59].

The form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is alleged by plaintiff that defendant appeared by filing an answer, counsel should state the date or dates of filing and service of the answer in relation to the time required for plaintiff's service under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210.

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.50. The points and authorities set out in § 90.61 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in the foregoing form.

[b] General Appearance Must Be Made Within Three Years and Sixty Days

In Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1034, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 (First App. Dist., Div. Three) , the court held that a defendant's general appearance within three years and 60 days from the date the complaint was filed makes inapplicable the mandatory requirements for service and return [see now proof of service of summons] [see § 90.52[3][b]]. This holding conflicts with Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 233 Cal. Rptr. 506 (Fourth App. Dist., Div. Two) , in which another court of appeal held that the mandatory requirements still apply when a defendant makes a general appearance after three years but within three years and 60 days [see § 90.50[3][d]]. Weatherby has subsequently been criticized by Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 (Fourth App. Dist., Div. Three) , discussed under § 90.52[3][b]. Biss, in criticizing Weatherby, reasoned that an answer filed during the three-year period excuses failure to serve summons within that time, while an answer filed during the three-year, sixty-day period excuses failure to return summons within that time [Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692] .

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Appearance Defined

In General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 , plaintiff's attorney mailed a summons and complaint to defendant's designated agent and thereafter granted defendant's attorney several written extensions of time in which to answer or otherwise respond. Defendant's attorney in turn agreed to accept service. Subsequently, defendant moved for dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] and former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(c) (repealed with no succeeding statute), and after denial of the motion, petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal.

The Supreme Court denied the petition. On the issue of whether defendant had made a general appearance, the Supreme Court held that whether a particular act of the defendant reflects an intent to submit to the jurisdiction of the court depends on the circumstances. The Court held that the written stipulation between the parties' attorneys recognized jurisdiction of the court over the parties and constituted a general appearance by defendant (15 Cal. 3d 449, 453) .

[b] Period During Which General Appearance Must Be Made

In Biss v. Bohr (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 , a medical malpractice action, the trial court dismissed two defendants on the ground that service had not been timely made. Plaintiff had served the summons and complaint on these defendants within the three-year period required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210, but had not completed service by effecting return of summons [see now proof of service of summons] in a timely manner within the three years, sixty days required by that section.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that the time limitation was made inapplicable because the defendants had answered the complaint within three years and sixty days after the complaint was filed. The court of appeal noted that the purpose of a return of service is to inform the court that the defendant received jurisdictional notice, and that this purpose is fulfilled where the defendant files an answer (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250) . The court recognized the conflict between Wong v. Armstrong World Industries (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 , and Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 284 Cal. Rptr. 622 (both discussed below). In criticizing the Weatherby reasoning with regard to the applicable time period, the court distinguished between the time periods for the service of the complaint and return of summons (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1250-1251) . Thus, the court concluded that an answer will excuse the requirement that summons be served within three years only if the answer is filed within the three-year period. However, because the time requirement for a return of summons is three years, sixty days, an answer filed during that period excuses compliance with respect to the return. Since the defendants had answered within three years, sixty days, they were not entitled to a dismissal on the ground that the summons had not been returned (40 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1251) . The court thus reversed the judgment as to these defendants with directions to deny their motion to dismiss the complaint.

In Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 , plaintiff completed service within the three-year period, but failed to return summons within three years and 60 days. Defendant made a general appearance after the three-year period but within three years and 60 days. The First District Court of Appeal, Division Three, reversed the trial court's dismissal for plaintiff's failure to satisfy the mandatory requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b). The court reasoned that a general appearance during the period for return of summons eliminates the provision for mandatory dismissal because the filing of an answer serves the same purpose as the return of summons of informing the court that the defendant has received jurisdictional notice (232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1033-1037) [2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300]].

Another court of appeal has held that defendant's general appearance after three years from the date the complaint was filed, but within the three years and sixty days period for return of summons, does not render inapplicable the requirement that return of summons must be made within three years and sixty days [Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-511, 233 Cal. Rptr. 506 , discussed in § 90.50[3][d]].

[c] Action Indicating Status as Party

In Slaybaugh v. Superior Court (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 138 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the court of appeal was asked to issue a writ of mandate directing the trial court to dismiss an action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. The basic issue was whether the party seeking dismissal had made a general appearance. The established test applied by the court was that if a party appears and asks for any relief which could be given only to a party in a pending case or for relief which itself would be a regular proceeding in the case, it is a general appearance regardless of how adroitly, carefully, or directly the appearance may be denominated or characterized as special (70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222) . On the facts of the case, however, the party seeking dismissal had not made a general appearance, because voluntary participation as a witness is not sufficient (70 Cal. App. 3d 216, 223-224) .

[d] Written Stipulation Constituting Appearance

In Knapp v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 145 Cal. Rptr. 154 , defendant attempted to dismiss the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] on the ground that plaintiffs had failed to return the summons within three years. Plaintiffs defended on the theory that defendant's acceptance of a written agreement, terminable on ten days' notice, providing defendant with an open extension of time in which to plead, constituted a general appearance. The trial court denied the motion. Defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal.

The court of appeal denied the petition. It held, in part, that the request for extension of time constituted a general appearance. The court cited General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 453-454, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 (discussed under § 90.52[3][a]) for the rule that a written stipulation between attorneys which recognizes jurisdiction of the court over the parties constitutes a general appearance (79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 802-803) . In Knapp, unlike General Ins. Co., defendant did not explicitly submit to the court's jurisdiction by agreeing to acceptance of service. However, the declaration of plaintiff's counsel indicated that defendant never questioned or challenged the personal service and custom of the insurance company litigants involved in the case regarding such stipulations (79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804-805) .

Knapp may be distinguished from two cases holding that an extension of time to plead does not constitute a general appearance: Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 50-51, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 (discussed in § 90.50[3][b]), in which defendant explicitly did not accept service; and Woodruff v. McDonald's Restaurants (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 655, 657-658, 142 Cal. Rptr. 367 , in which the extension agreement was not between attorneys. In Knapp the stipulation was between attorneys, and although its language did not explicitly accept jurisdiction by agreeing to acceptance of service, the trial court's decision accepted plaintiff's contention that such stipulations implied acceptance of service according to the custom in the insurance industry (79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 803-804) . It should be noted, however, that an extension of time to plead after a motion to dismiss pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430 is not a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220(c)]. Furthermore, a stipulation to extend the time for service does not itself constitute a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220(a)].

In RCA Corp. v. Superior Court (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 121 Cal. Rptr. 441 , plaintiff served but failed to return the summons within the three years allowed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. However, before the statutory period expired, the parties stipulated in writing that defendant's time within which to appear in the action would be extended to a date within the period. Defendant petitioned for a writ of prohibition to prevent the trial court from continuing with the trial.

The court of appeal denied defendant's petition. The court held that the stipulation was tantamount to a general appearance for the purpose of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a (47 Cal. App. 3d 1007, 1009-1010) .

[e] Complaint in Intervention Not Separate Action From Original Complaint

Rhode v. National Medical Hosp. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 528, 155 Cal. Rptr. 797 , involved an action for personal injuries arising out of an industrial accident. The workers' compensation insurance carrier for plaintiff's employer intervened in the action, seeking reimbursement from defendants for amounts paid because of the injuries. Following a judgment for plaintiffs, one of the defendants appealed on the ground that the trial court should have dismissed the carrier's complaint in intervention for failure to effect service of summons within three years.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that because defendant had already made a general appearance in the action by answering an amended version of the principal complaint, it could not obtain dismissal of the complaint in intervention. An intervention is not to be treated as a separate action, but rather is to be viewed as coming within the original, main action. The concept of intervention, including the rule that an intervenor joining on the side of a plaintiff does so in subordination to the plaintiff's right to control the action, supports that conclusion. Furthermore, dismissal of the complaint in intervention would not advance the purpose of the dismissal statute: to compel reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action and expedite litigation. Prosecution by the original plaintiff, in which defendant appeared, was sufficient to ensure that the action in intervention would be diligently prosecuted. The court also noted that permitting dismissal could lead to anomalous results (93 Cal. App. 3d 528, 537-539) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

26 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.53

§ 90.53 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Service and Proof of Service Completed Within Statutory Time Period [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250(a)]--General Form

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE SERVICE AND PROOF OF SERVICE OF THE SUMMONS WERE COMPLETED WITHIN THE TIME REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Statutory Grounds for Mandatory Dismissal. The court is required to grant a properly noticed motion to dismiss an action only if service of the summons and complaint on the defendant is not made within three years after the action is commenced against defendant, and proof of service of summons is not made within threeyears and 60 days after commencement of that action against defendant; an action is commenced for this purpose at the time the complaint is filed (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250(a)(2)).

[Optional] B. Service by Mail Complete at Time of Mailing. The requirement of Section 583.210(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure that service of summons be made within three years after the action is commenced against a defendant is satisfied if service is by mail pursuant to a statute authorizing mailing as a manner of service and the mailing occurs within the three-year period, even though authorizing statute does not deem service complete at the time of mailing (see Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 243, 252, 211 Cal. Rptr. 517, 695 P.2d 1058 ; Billings v. Edwards (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 826, 830, 154 Cal. Rptr. 453).

[Optional] C. Statutory Period Extended When Last Day Is Holiday. If the last day in the time period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 for service or proof of service of the summons would otherwise fall on a holiday, then the period is extended to and including the next day which is not a holiday; holidays include Saturdays, all holidays specified in Sections 6700 (except Section 6700(c)) and 6701 of the Government Code, and days on which any city, county, state, or public office, other than a branch office, is closed for the whole of any day (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 12a, 12b; see Ystrom v. Handel (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 144, 152, 252 Cal. Rptr. 110 (service of summons)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal made by the court, defendant, or any other person interested in the action based on plaintiff's failure to serve and return the summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that the service and proof of service were completed within the required time periods. Optional Paragraph B is for use when plaintiff mailed the summons and complaint before the statutory time period expired but the statute authorizing service by mail deems service complete on a date after the period expired. Optional Paragraph C may be used when the last day of the period for service or proof of service calculated under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 fell on a weekend or holiday, and the service or return was completed by the next day that was not a weekend day or holiday.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and return the summons with the statutory time period [see §§ 90.52, 90.54 -90.56].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, when using Optional Paragraph B, counsel should state the date of service of the summons and complaint and identify the holiday that coincided with the last day for service under the statute. If the last day for service fell on a Saturday, counsel should show that service was made on the following Monday, or on the following Tuesday if Monday was a holiday.

In an appropriate case, the memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Holiday Defined

The term "holiday," for purposes of computation of time, includes every Saturday and Sunday and most holidays specified in Gov. Code §§ 6700 and 6701 [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 10, 12a]. One holiday listed in Gov. Code § 6700 but excluded from the meaning of "holiday" under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 10 and 12a is September 9, known as "Admission Day" [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 10, 12a, 135; Gov. Code § 6700]. Insofar as the business of any city, county, state, or public office other than a branch office is concerned, any day when the office is closed for the whole day is considered a holiday [Code Civ. Proc. § 12b].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service by Mail Complete at Time of Mailing

Johnson & Johnson v. Superior Court (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 243, 211 Cal. Rptr. 517, 695 P.2d 1058 , involved separate actions against an out-of-state drug manufacturer, arising out of injuries allegedly caused by a drug. Plaintiffs served defendant by mail pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.40 (service on person outside of state) by mailing a copy of the summons and complaint one day before expiration of the three-year period for service under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. The following day plaintiffs filed a return of service consisting of the original summons and a copy of the complaint with an affidavit showing the time and place of mailing. Subsequently, the trial court permitted a nunc pro tunc amendment to the return to include a copy of the return receipt, which had been signed after the three-year period expired. Defendant filed a motion to quash service of process and to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a. These motions were denied and defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The Supreme Court denied the petition, holding that service was timely. Although Code Civ. Proc. § 415.40 states that service by mail is not complete until the tenth day after mailing, the 10-day period is a "grace" period provided by statute to allow actual notice to the defendant before the beginning of the period allowed for filing a responsive pleading. For purposes of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) service by mail is complete on the date of mailing, which was before expiration of the mandatory three-year service period. The Court analogized the 10-day period of Code Civ. Proc. § 415.40 to the 10-day service period of Code Civ. Proc. § 415.20, which was similarly held to be a grace period in Ginns v. Shumate (1977) 65 Cal. App. 3d 802, 805, 135 Cal. Rptr. 604 (38 Cal. 3d 243, 248-250) .

In Billings v. Edwards (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 826, 154 Cal. Rptr. 453 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's action for failure to serve and return summons within three years. Plaintiff had mailed copies of the summons and made a return to the trial court within the statutory period, but Code Civ. Proc. § 415.20 provides that a summons served in the manner used by plaintiff would not be complete until the tenth day after the mailing. Thus service was not technically complete until after the period had expired. The court dismissed the action under former Code Civ. Proc. 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that this flaw, as well as variances in nomenclature, which could be corrected by an amended return, were not fatal to proper completion of service within the former three-year period (91 Cal. App. 3d 826, 830-831) .

[b] Statutory Period Extended When Last Day Is Holiday

In Ystrom v. Handel (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 144, 252 Cal. Rptr. 110 , plaintiffs served defendants with the summons and complaint three years and two days after filing their complaint. The day three years after the filing date was a Saturday, and service was made on the following Monday. Defendants moved to dismiss the action for failure to serve the complaint within three years under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250 (mandatory dismissal) and within two years under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420 (discretionary dismissal). The trial court granted the motion for mandatory dismissal and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the three-year time period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 is to be calculated with reference to Code Civ. Proc. § 12a. Code Civ. Proc. § 12a provides that if the last day for the performance of any act provided or required by law to be performed within a specified period of time shall be a holiday, then such period is extended to and including the next day which is not a holiday (205 Cal. App. 3d 144, 147-148) . Because service of process within the three-year period allotted by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 is plainly an act required by law, the court held, Code Civ. Proc. § 12a operates to extend the three-year period when the last day would otherwise fall on a Saturday or holiday (205 Cal. App. 3d 144, 152) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.54

[Reserved]

§ 90.54[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.55

§ 90.55 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Extended by Stipulation of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.220, 583.230]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE PARTIES IN THE ACTION EXTENDED THE TIME WITHIN WHICH SERVICE HAD TO BE MADE BY _____ [A WRITTEN STIPULATION or AN ORAL AGREEMENT MADE IN OPEN COURT].

A. Construction of Dismissal Statutes. It is state policy that a plaintiff must proceed with reasonable diligence in prosecuting an action, but that all parties must cooperate in bringing it to trial or other disposition (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.130; see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(e)). In construing the dismissal provisions of Sections 583.110-583.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the policies favoring the right of parties to stipulate in their own interests and favoring trial or other disposition of an action on the merits are generally preferred over the policy requiring dismissal for failure to proceed with reasonable diligence, except as provided otherwise by statute or court rule (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.130; see General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 454, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289).

[EITHER]

B. Written Stipulation. The time within which service must be made pursuant to Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure does not apply if the defendant enters into a written stipulation with the plaintiff that time may be extended (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220).

[AND/OR]

C. Oral Agreement in Open Court. The parties may extend the time within which service must be made pursuant to Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure by oral agreement made in open court, if entered in the minutes of the court or a transcript is made (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] D. Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal. A stipulation is adequate to extend time for performance of an act required to avoid dismissal if it expressly waives the right to dismissal or extends the time for performance of the act to a time beyond the statutory period (see General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 455, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289).

[Optional] E. Stipulation Embodied in Letters Between Counsel Adequate. The provision that a stipulation to extend time may be in writing is satisfied by a stipulation embodied in correspondence between counsel (see Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928 fn. 5, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that the parties entered into a written stipulation or oral agreement to extend the time for service. It should be noted that a stipulation need not be filed, but if it is not filed, it must be brought to the court's attention if relevant to a dismissal motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230(a)].

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and return the summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.72 -90.74, 90.76 -90.79].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the sameas those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is claimed that the statutory period for service should be extended because an oral agreement to extend time for service was made by the parties in open court, counsel should state the date, time, and place of the stipulation, by whom it was made, before which judge it was made, and whether it was entered in the court minutes or a transcript was made, along with the content of the stipulation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230(b)]. If it is claimed that the parties extended the time for service by written stipulation, and the stipulation was not filed, counsel should submit the original or a true and correct copy of the stipulation with the foregoing form [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230(a)].

In an appropriate case, the foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Construction of Dismissal Statutes

The facts and procedural background of General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 are discussed in § 90.52[3][a]. After reviewing several written extensions granted by plaintiff in exchange for defendant's agreement to accept service, the Supreme Court refused to compel dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210], which required that the summons be served and return made within three years. The Court stated that the purpose of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, like the five-year requirement of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (mandatory dismissal), was to encourage diligence in the prosecution of an action once it has been filed. However, defendant by written stipulation had precluded plaintiff from taking a default judgment prior to the expiration of the three-year period. Therefore, the Court held, defendant could not rely on plaintiff's failure to take a default to obtain dismissal of the action (15 Cal. 3d 449, 454-455) .

[b] Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal

The facts and procedural background of General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 , are discussed in § 90.52[3][a]. In General Ins. Co., the Supreme Court reviewed the adequacy of a stipulation between the parties to extend time. The general principle, as described in J.C. Penney Co. v. Superior Court (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 666, 669, 343 P.2d 919 , is that a stipulation is adequate if it expressly either waives the right to dismissal or extends the time for performance of the act necessary to avoid dismissal to a date beyond the statutory period. A mere extension of time within the period does not extend the deadline absent a showing that the parties intended such an extension (15 Cal. 3d 449, 455) .

J.C. Penney Co. involved a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial within five years. The Court held that an extension for a specific period of time within the statutory period for a pretrial activity did not extend the five-year period, because time necessarily consumed by ordinary proceedings is not usually excluded (52 Cal. 2d 666, 666, 669-670) . However, subsequent appellate rulings appear to have limited the effect of J.C. Penney Co. by holding that an indefinite extension of time for pretrial activities does extend the period [see, e.g., Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928-929, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127 , discussed in § 90.87[3][d]].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.56

§ 90.56 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Defendant Was Not Amenable to Process [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE HE/SHE WAS NOT AMENABLE TO PROCESS FROM _____ [date], UNTIL _____ [date], AND THIS TIME IS EXCLUDED FROM CALCULATION OF THE TIME PERIODS FOR SERVICE SPECIFIED IN SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

Amenability to Process. The time during which a defendant was not amenable to service of process is excluded from the calculation of the time periods specified in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure for completing service and filing proof of service (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a); see Polony v. White (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48, 117 Cal. Rptr. 341).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and return the summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that the time when defendant was not amenable to process must be excluded when computing the time within which service must be made [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)], and that service was therefore timely, taking this exclusion into account.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.52 -90.55, 90.57 -90.59].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if defendant died and was thereby unamenable to service of process, counsel should state the date of death and when, if at all, a personal representative was appointed for the decedent [see, e.g., Polony v. White (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48, 117 Cal. Rptr. 341] .

In an appropriate case, the foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50. The points and authorities set out in § 90.62 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in foregoing form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amenability to Process

In Polony v. White (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 44, 117 Cal. Rptr. 341 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's complaint pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] for failure to serve and return summons [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 requiring only filing proof of service of summons] within three years.

Plaintiff appealed, contending that the time between defendant's death and appointment of a personal representative must be excluded from the calculation.

The court of appeal agreed and reversed the judgment. It noted that former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(d) excluded time during which a defendant was not amenable to process, and the section meant precisely what it said. Since defendant died prior to service, there was no one in existence on whom process could be served until the personal representative was appointed. Thus, defendant was not amenable to process, because service of process was not possible (43 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Amenability to Process

In Quaranta v. Merlini (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 22, 237 Cal. Rptr. 179 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment of dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. Plaintiffs had unsuccessfully attempted to locate defendant by consulting voter registries, city directories, tax rolls, and telephone directories. After learning that defendant was a seaman residing in Italy, they attempted to serve him personally following the procedures outlined in the Hague Service Convention. Under these circumstances, the court of appeal held that the statute of limitations for service was tolled because defendant was not amenable to service (192 Cal. App. 3d 22, 30) . The court also held that the judgment of dismissal was improper because another trial judge had granted an order for service by publication, and the implied finding in making the order for publication that respondent was not amenable to process stood as a binding adjudication (192 Cal. App. 3d 22, 29) . Quaranta was disapproved in Watts v. Crawford (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 743, 761, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 896 P.2d 807 , which held that a finding under Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50 that a defendant was not reasonably available for service of process other than by publication is not the equivalent of a finding that a defendant is not amenable to process within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a). Watts also held that a court's finding that a defendant could not with reasonable diligence be served other than by publication does not constitute a binding adjudication that the defendant was not amenable to process for purposes of Section 583.240(a). For discussion of Watts, see § 90.62[3][c].

In Herring v. Peterson (1981) 116 Cal. App. 3d 608, 172 Cal. Rptr. 240 , defendant died approximately three years after the complaint was filed. Three years after her death, the trial court dismissed the complaint pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring the case to trial within five years of filing. Despite the continued presence of defendant's counsel, and the fact that almost seven years had passed since the filing of the action, the dismissal was reversed on appeal. The appellate court noted that a personal representative for defendant had not been appointed. Since defendant's death rendered her not amenable to service of process, the three years since her death were excluded from the statutory period and it was not proper to dismiss the action (116 Cal. App. 3d 608, 612, 615-616) .

While Herring construed amenability to process in the context of failure to bring a case to trial rather than failure to serve and return summons [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 requiring only filing proof of service of summons] it appears that its reasoning is consistent with Polony v. White (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48, 117 Cal. Rptr. 341 , discussed above, and may lend further authority in opposition to a dismissal motion.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.57

§ 90.57 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Proceedings Were Stayed [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b)] or During Which Service Was Being Litigated [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [PROSECUTION OF THE ACTION OR PROCEEDINGS IN THE ACTION WAS STAYED AND THE STAY AFFECTED SERVICE and/or THE VALIDITY OF SERVICE WAS LITIGATED BY THE PARTIES], AND THE TIME DURING WHICH _____ [THIS or THESE] CONDITION(S) EXISTED MUST BE EXCLUDED FROM THE PERIOD WITHIN WHICH SERVICE MUST BE MADE.

[EITHER]

A. Time During Stay Is Not Included. In computing the time within which service must be made pursuant to Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the time during which the prosecution of an action or proceedings in the action was stayed, if the stay affected service, must be excluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b); see Highland Stucco & Lime, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 643-644, 272 Cal. Rptr. 60).

[AND/OR]

B. Validity of Service Litigated. In computing the time within which service must be made pursuant to Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the time during which the validity of service was the subject of litigation by the parties must be excluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that the time during which the action was stayed and the stay affected service, or the time during which the validity of the service was being litigated by the parties, must be excluded when computing the time within which service must be made [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b), (c)], and that service was therefore timely, taking this exclusion into account.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.52 -90.56, 90.58, 90.59].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if counsel claims that defendant litigated the validity of service with a motion to quash service, counsel should set out the dates on which the relevant motion, hearing, and order on the motion occurred and relate those dates to the statutory time periods for service and return of the summons.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles. Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c), concerning litigation of the validity of service of process, is new and applies if the person to be served is aware of the action but challenges jurisdiction of the court or sufficiency of service [Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time During Stay Is Not Included

Highland Stucco & Lime, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 272 Cal. Rptr. 60 , arose out of an action, commenced in January 1983, by a school district against numerous defendants, including "Doe" defendants, for property damages resulting from asbestos products used in about 10,000 school buildings on more than 700 separate campuses in defendant school district. The action was "complex litigation," within the definition set forth in the standards issued by the Judicial Council (Cal. Rules of Ct., Appen., Div. I, § 19), and pursuant to those standards, the trial court, in January 1984, ordered that issues concerning abatement and statutes of limitation were to be resolved first and stayed all otherproceedings in the case. In March 1984, the trial court ordered that from and after January 20, 1984, plaintiff was prohibited from serving any defendant not served on or before January 24, 1984. The stay was lifted in January 1988, and plaintiff served one of the Doe defendants in November 1989, almost seven years after the action was filed. The Doe defendant moved to quash service of process and to dismiss for failure to serve process within three years after the action was commenced (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210(a), 583.250), or, in the alternative, for discretionary dismissal for failure to serve the summons within two years (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1)). The motion was denied, and the Doe defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate seeking to compel the trial court to grant the motion. The court of appeal denied the writ. The court said that the March 28, 1985, order affected and precluded service of additional defendants by plaintiff from and after January 20, 1984, for the purposes of computing the time periods set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581(a) and 583.210 through 583.250 (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 641) . The court pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240 provides that in computing the time within which service must be made, the time during which prosecution of the action or proceedings in the action was stayed and the stay affected service is excluded (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 643-644) . The court said that the stay clearly affected the service of process and was in effect from January 20, 1984, through January 26, 1988, a period of four years and six days, which time had to be excluded in computing the three-year time for service prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a), and that, when that is done, the defendant was served with the summons and complaint approximately two years, nine months, and fourteen days after the action was commenced against it, well within the required three years (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 644) . The court further held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion insofar as it was based on the court's discretionary power, in that the plaintiff had acted diligently from the outset of the action and no prejudice to the defendant from the delay had been shown (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 645-646) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.58

§ 90.58 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Time During Which Service Was Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE SERVICE WAS _____ [IMPOSSIBLE and/or IMPRACTICABLE and/or FUTILE], AND THE TIME DURING WHICH _____ [THIS or THESE] CONDITION(S) EXISTED MUST BE EXCLUDED FROM THE PERIOD WITHIN WHICH SERVICE MUST BE MADE.

A. Service Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile. In computing the time within which service must be made pursuant to Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the time during which service was impossible, impracticable, or futile because of causes beyond the plaintiff's control must be excluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d); see Wyoming Pacific Oil Co. v. Preston (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 736, 740-741, 329 P.2d 489 ; Deas v. Knapp (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451-452, 181 Cal. Rptr. 76).

[Optional] B. Compliance With Facially Valid but Void Stay Order. Compliance with a facially valid order is mandatory, and therefore, the legal effect of plaintiff's compliance with a facially valid stay order renders service during the period of the stay impossible, impracticable, or futile for reasons beyond the plaintiff's control within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.240(d) (Highland Stucco & Lime, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 644, 272 Cal. Rptr. 60).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that the time during which service was impossible, impracticable, or futile must be excluded when computing the time within which service must be made [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)], and that service was therefore timely, taking this exclusion into account. Optional Paragraph B should be included if the trial court ordered a stay of the action and the stay affected service, but the defendant contends that the order was void, that the period of the stay was, therefore, not to be excluded, and that service should have been effected during that period.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.52 -90.57, 90.59].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is claimed that service could not be effected because defendant concealed himself or herself, counsel should state the facts of the concealment and the means by which plaintiff sought to locate defendant [see, e.g., Wyoming Pacific Oil Co. v. Preston (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 736, 740-741, 329 P.2d 489 ; Adelson v. Hertz Rent-A-Car (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 221, 228, 183 Cal. Rptr. 779 (diligence required)].

In an appropriate case, the foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50. The points and authorities set out in § 90.63 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in foregoing form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statutes have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Service Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile

In Wyoming Pacific Oil Co. v. Preston (1958) 50 Cal. 2d 736, 329 P.2d 489 , defendant obtained a dismissal for failure to serve and return the summons within the three-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court reasoned that despite its mandatory language, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a vested the trial court with discretion in applying exceptions, which was comparable to the discretion accorded to the trial court under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583. One of the exceptions was the impracticability and futility of bringing the case to trial within the statutory period (50 Cal. 2d 736, 740) . The trial court's order authorizing service by publication established, as a finding of fact, that defendant had concealed himself to avoid service, and thus it would have been impracticable and futile to attempt service (50 Cal. 2d 736, 741) . The Court did not discuss impossibility as part of the exception, but its comments indicate that the exception is comparable to one applied to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 that encompassed impossibility or impracticability and futility.

Deas v. Knapp (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 443, 181 Cal. Rptr. 76 , was a class action to set aside allegedly fraudulent conveyances. In a prior action, defendant was adjudicated indebted to plaintiff and the class members, which defendant appealed. The two proceedings were pending for about 18 months, until the earlier judgment became final on dismissal of the appeal. Plaintiff did not attempt service of the summons during that period. He later attempted service but could not personally serve defendant, because defendant had concealed himself. Substituted service and service by mail were completed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.20 more than two weeks before the three-year period specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] had run, but proof of service was not filed until a month after that period had run. Defendant's motion to quash service of summons was denied, and the conveyances were set aside. Defendant appealed, contending that because plaintiff had failed to return the summons within three years, the trial court lacked jurisdiction to do other than quash service of summons and dismiss the action.

The court of appeal rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment. It said that despite the mandatory language of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, the statute was subject to implied exceptions, such as impracticability and futility, and held that the trial court is vested with discretion in applying the exceptions (129 Cal. App. 3d 443, 450-451) . The court explained that cases have held that futility or impracticability sufficient to extend the time under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a may be created by concurrent and collateral litigation, such as related appeals. The rule particularly applies when the collateral action or appeal was, in effect, a step in the same action sought to be dismissed, or in litigation involving the very basis of the action sought to be dismissed, or in other litigation between the same parties or their privies. The time during which it was impracticable, or futile, to bring the action to trial because of the collateral proceeding would ordinarily be deducted from the statutory period of time for returning summons (129 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451) . The court concluded that the case came within this rule and held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to quash service of the summons (129 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451-452) .

Counsel should note that the court of appeal in Valerio v. Boise Cascade Corp. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1220, 223 Cal. Rptr. 592 (discussed in § 90.63[3][e]) declined to follow Deas to the extent that the Deas court would excuse a plaintiff's delay in service or return when it was impracticable or futile for plaintiff to bring the case to trial. Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d), which was not interpreted by either the Deas or Valerio courts, now makes clear that delay in service and return is excused only when service was impossible, impracticable, or futile due to causes beyond plaintiff's control [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(b) (making applicable only those excuses expressly provided by statute)].

[b] Compliance With Facially Valid but Void Stay Order

The facts and procedural background of Highland Stucco & Lime, Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 272 Cal. Rptr. 60 , are discussed in § 90.57[3][a]. In denying the petition for a writ of mandate sought to compel the trial court to quash service of summons, the court of appeal held, as an alternate basis for denying the petition and thereby affirming the trial court's order, that even if the trial court's stay order were not valid, the legal effect of the court order staying all proceedings except for abatement and statute of limitations issues was to render service impossible, impracticable, or futile for reasons beyond plaintiff's control within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d) (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 644) . The court said that compliance with a facially valid court order is mandatory and, thus, a cause beyond the plaintiff's control, and that to hold otherwise would invite wholesale disobedience to court orders (222 Cal. App. 3d 637, 644) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Service Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile

In Highlanders, Inc. v. Olsan (1978) 77 Cal. App. 3d 690, 143 Cal. Rptr. 679 , plaintiffs sued certain defendants, who successfully demurred. One plaintiff appealed and the court of appeal reversed. The plaintiffs amended their complaint and brought in new defendants, who obtained a dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. On appeal, plaintiff contended that although the three-year period is to be computed from the time the first complaint is filed, the period of time while the case was first on appeal should not be counted, and the court agreed. However, the court affirmed the dismissal, since the time between filing the original complaint and the notice of appeal was two years and 11 months; plaintiff had only one additional month in which to act, and the return of service on the third amended complaint occurred long after the statutory period had expired (77 Cal. App. 3d 690, 695-696) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureDismissalsInvoluntary DismissalsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.59

§ 90.59 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Time for Service and Proof of Service Tolled by Statutory Exclusion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240]--Defendant Is Estopped From Requesting Dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.52.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF REASONABLY RELIED ON DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT IN FORGOING COMPLIANCE WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE FOR SERVICE, AND THE TIME OF REASONABLE RELIANCE IS EXCLUDED FROM THE PERIOD WITHIN WHICH SERVICE MUST BE MADE ON THE GROUND OF ESTOPPEL.

A. Principles of Waiver and Estoppel May Be Applied. Nothing in Sections 583.110 through 583.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure abrogates or otherwise affects the principles of waiver and estoppel (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140).

B. Party Is Estopped From Asserting Compliance With Service Deadlines. If a plaintiff reasonably relies on the defendant's actsor omissions to act and is thereby lulled into a false sense of security or caused to forbear completing service within the time requirements of Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, defendant is estopped from including the time of plaintiff's reliance in calculating when service must be completed (see Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 437-438, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 ; State Air Resources Bd. v. Superior Court (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 803, 808, 155 Cal. Rptr. 726).

[Optional] C. Estoppel Arising From Defendant's Request for Extension of Time to Plead. If a defendant's request for a time extension in which to answer or plead causes plaintiff reasonably to forbear correcting or completing service of process, the defendant is estopped from including the time of reliance in the calculation of the period specified in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 437-439, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 ; Knapp v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804, 145 Cal. Rptr. 154).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for mandatory dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory period set out in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The ground for opposition is that defendant is estopped from asserting timeliness of service for the period during which plaintiff reasonably relied on defendant's conduct in not completing service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140], and that service was therefore timely taking this exclusion into account.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the statutory time period [see §§ 90.52 -90.58].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.60]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if plaintiff claims that defendant lulled plaintiff into believing that it would not oppose service of summons, plaintiff should recite facts demonstrating defendant's actions [see Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 434, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 (defendant requested 20-day time extension to plead after service of process, then moved to dismiss on ground of improper service)].

In an appropriate case, the foregoing memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.50.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a and former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, which governed involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial, were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430. Decisions interpreting the former statutes have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§

583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party Is Estopped From Asserting Compliance With Service Deadlines

In Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 , defendant sought a writ of mandamus to compel dismissal of an action against it pursuant to the first paragraph of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a (later amended to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]) because it had not been served witha summons. Plaintiff had served process on defendant approximately 12 days before expiration of the three-year period then required. Although service was fatally defective, defendant neither moved to quash service of summons nor filed an answer or demurrer, but instead requested a 20-day extension of time in which to answer the complaint.

The Supreme Court denied the writ insofar as it sought dismissal. The Court reasoned that unless the doctrine of estoppel were recognized in cases involving former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, the statute could not be applied to serve rather than defeat the ends of substantial justice. The Court added that, although the earlier precedents were in conflict, its most recent decision, Woley v. Turkus (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 402, 408, 334 P.2d 12 (discussed in § 90.93[3][b]) upheld the application of the doctrine of estoppel to dismissals for failure to bring an action to trial within five years pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (5 Cal. 3d 431, 438) . In the former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a situation, whenever a defendant induces the plaintiff to delay service of summons or to overlook errors in service, and plaintiff's reliance is reasonable, an estoppel is essential to prevent the defendant from profiting by deception (5 Cal. 3d 431, 439-440) . By requesting the time extension, defendant led plaintiff to believe that further service of process would be duplicative and prevented plaintiff from discovering the error and effecting valid service within the statutory period (5 Cal. 3d 431, 441-442) .

In State Air Resources Bd. v. Superior Court (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 803, 155 Cal. Rptr. 726 , the trial court found that defendant was estopped from seeking dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. Defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal denied the writ of mandate, upholding the trial court. It held that the assumption by both plaintiff's and defendant's counsel that defendant's counsel was authorized to accept service on behalf of defendant, causing plaintiff to forgo the legally correct procedure for service of process, created a sufficient legal basis for estoppel (93 Cal. App. 3d 803, 808) .

[b] Estoppel Arising From Defendant's Request for Extension of Time to Plead

Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 , is discussed under § 90.59[3][a].

The facts and procedural background of Knapp v. Superior Court (1978) 79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 145 Cal. Rptr. 154 are discussed in § 90.52[3][d]. In refusing to compel dismissal of the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] for delay in return of the summons, the court of appeal held, in part, that defendant's request for an extension of time to answer estopped the defendant from seeking dismissal for failure to return the summons within three years, as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a). The court reasoned that the request for an extension had induced plaintiff's attorney to overlook the return of service, and in view of the well-known custom of the insurance industry of honoring such extensions, the attorney's reliance was reasonable (79 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 requiring only filing proof of service of summons].

It should be noted that in Owen v. Niagara Machine & Tool Works (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 566, 568-569, 137 Cal.

Rptr. 378 , the court held that an extension of time merely to plead was not sufficient to excuse plaintiff's failure to make a return after service, but Owen may be distinguishable from Knapp in that the reliance of counsel in the latter decision was supported by custom in the industry.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Party Is Estopped From Asserting Compliance With Service Deadlines

In Brookview Condominium Owners' Assn. v. Heltzer Enterprises-Brookview (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 502, 267 Cal. Rptr. 76 , the court of appeal, although it affirmed the order dismissing the complaint on the ground the trial court did not abuse its discretion in finding defendant was not estopped to seek dismissal, ruled that the doctrine of estoppel is applicable to motions to dismiss for failure to effectuate service within three years as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The court said that if a trial court finds statements or conduct by a defendant that lulls the plaintiff into a false sense of security resulting in inaction, and there is reasonable reliance, estoppel must be available to prevent defendant from profiting from his or her deception. The court also distinguished waiver and estoppel, explaining that waiver refers to the act, or the consequences of the act, of one side only, while estoppel is applicable when the conduct of one side has induced the other to take such a position that it would be injured if the first should be permitted to repudiate its acts (218 Cal. App. 3d 502, 512) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.60

§ 90.60 Opposing Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS ACTION
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THERE IS GOOD CAUSE FOR PLAINTIFF'S DELAY AND NO INJUSTICE WILL RESULT FROM DENYING DISMISSAL] AND, THEREFORE, DISMISSAL BY THE COURT UNDER THE DISCRETIONARY POWER OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.410 IS NOT APPROPRIATE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. Statutory Grounds for Discretionary Dismissal. The court may not dismiss an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to effect service unless service and the filing of proof of service of summons are not made within two years after the action is commenced against the defendant and dismissal appears appropriate to the court under the circumstances (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1)).

B. Discretion to Dismiss Not Arbitrary. The trial court's discretion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to effect service as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.420(a)(1) is not unfettered and cannot be exercised arbitrarily, but must be an impartial discretion exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law and in a manner to subserve the ends of substantial justice (see Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 547, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25).

[Optional] C. Plaintiff's Proof of Good Cause Is Sufficient to Preclude Discretionary Dismissal. Discretionary dismissal pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) for failure to effect service is not proper if there is a showing of good cause by plaintiff for the delay and no injustice will result from denying dismissal (see Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 564, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 ; Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25).

[Optional] D. Plaintiff's Excuse That Is Credible and Not Clearly Unreasonable Under the Circumstances Constitutes Good Cause. In determining whether the plaintiff's excuse constitutes good cause to overcome discretionary dismissal pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) for failure to effect service, the trial court should examine whether the excuse is credible and not clearly unreasonable under the factual and procedural circumstances of the case (see Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 ; Yao v. Anaheim Eye Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1029-1030, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856).

[Optional] E. Factors Set Out in Court Rule Reveal Good Cause for Delay. In exercising its discretion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) for failure to effect service, the trial court must consider the factors set forth in California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1342(e), and should not dismiss if application of those factors reveals good reason for delay in service of summons (see Tannatt v. Joblin (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 1066-1070, 182 Cal. Rptr. 112).

[Optional] F. No Injustice Has Resulted From the Delay. Once a plaintiff has demonstrated good cause for the delay, the burden of proof shifts to the defendant who must establish actual prejudice from the delay (see Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 549, 564-566, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 ; Yao v. Anaheim Eye Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1032, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856).

[Optional] G. Conditional Denial of Discretionary Dismissal. In exercising its discretion to dismiss an action pursuant to Sections 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure for failure to effect service, the court may require as a condition of granting or denying dismissal that the parties comply with terms that appear proper to effectuate substantial justice (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.430(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e); see Hansen v. Snap-Tite, Inc. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 208, 213, 100 Cal. Rptr. 51 (action dismissed for noncompliance with condition)).

[Optional] H. Manner of Computing Time Period for Completing Service. The time period for completing service set out under Section 583.420(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure must be computed in the same manner that is provided for computing the comparable time period under Sections 583.210-583.250 of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for discretionary dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to serve and file proof of service of summons within the two-year period prescribed by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1). The ground for opposition is that dismissal is not appropriate under all the circumstances [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)].

Optional Paragraphs C, D, E and F may be used when the plaintiff is seeking to show good cause justifying the delay and that no injustice has resulted therefrom. Optional Paragraph G may be used to suggest that a particular condition be imposed on denial of the motion as a fair alternative to granting the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.430(a)].

Optional Paragraph H may be used when the plaintiff is seeking to show that service was, in fact, within the period specified under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1), after taking into account factors that effectively excuse or extend this period. The basis for this particular ground of opposition is Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b), which provides that the period for completing service under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) is computed in the same manner as the comparable period for completing service in order to avoid mandatory dismissal. If Optional Paragraph H is used, counsel should add additional points and authorities relating to the particular excuse or extension that is sought to be applied. The points and authorities set out in §§ 90.52 -90.58 may be used for this purpose.

The principles of waiver and estoppel apply in ruling on a motion for discretionary dismissal as well as one for mandatory dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]. Thus, the points and authorities set out in § 90.59 may also be combined with the foregoing points and authorities in an appropriate case.

This form opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is alleged that plaintiff diligently tried to effect service of process, counsel should set forth the dates of the attempts at service and the difficulties encountered in serving defendant [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)].

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for discretionary dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.51. The points and authorities set out in § 90.65 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in the foregoing form.

[b] Excuse for Delay

There is a lack of consensus among the courts of appeal on the factors to be applied in determining whether a plaintiff has established a reasonable excuse for the delay in serving the summons and complaint. The Fifth District in Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , set forth a test for making this determination. When the plaintiff offers some excuse reflecting a conscious decision not to serve or otherwise prosecute the action, the court should make two initial determinations. First, the court should determine whether the reasons given for the decision are clearly unreasonable; that is, whether the explanation is credible under all the circumstances. If the court finds substantial evidence that the explanation is merely a pretext designed to cover up neglect, dismissal may be warranted.

Second, the court should determine whether a reasonably competent attorney would conclude that delay was justified under the circumstances. The burden should then shift to the defendant to show that other facts, such as prejudice, support dismissal (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557-558) .

The Fourth Appellate District has applied the Putnam test in Yao v. Anaheim Eye Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1029-1031, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856 . See discussion under § 90.60[3][c].

The Second Appellate District, however, questioned and rejected the Putnam test in Roach v. Lewis (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1184, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281 . It found that the first prong of the test requiring a determination of whether the explanation for the delay is credible under all the circumstances is unnecessary because attorneys are required to be truthful at all times (14 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1184) . It stated that the second prong, requiring a determination of whether a reasonably competent attorney could conclude that the delay was justifiable, provides too much deference to counsel's strategy which would vitiate the trial courts' ability to run their own calendars. It further noted that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 373(e), sets forth the relevant matters to be considered by the court in ruling on a dismissal motion which do not include counsel's strategy calls (14 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1184) .

[c] Actual Prejudice by the Delay

The courts also disagree on whether the defendant must demonstrate actualprejudice by the delay in prosecution. In one line of cases, the appellate courts concluded that the plaintiff's showing was insufficient and dismissal was justified even if the defendant did not demonstrate actual prejudice from the delay [Ladd v. Dart Equipment Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1106-1107, 281 Cal. Rptr. 813 (Second Appellate District) ; Trailmobile, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1451-1458, 259 Cal. Rptr. 100 (Third Appellate District) ; Schumpert v. Tishman Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 598, 606, 243 Cal. Rptr. 810 (Second Appellate District)] .

In another line of cases, certain courts concluded that dismissal was proper both because the plaintiff did not make a sufficient showing to excuse the delay and the defendant showed actual prejudice [State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 750, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545 (Fifth Appellate District) ; Danielson v. ITT Industrial Credit Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 659-660 (Fourth Appellate District)] .

Some courts will infer prejudice from the delay. See discussion in § 90.65[3][d]. However, the court in Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 549, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , stated that once the plaintiff has established good cause for the delay, the burden of proof then shifts to the defendant to demonstrate actual prejudice, discussed under § 90.60[3][e].

[d] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

Before the 1984 enactment Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1), there was no express provision for discretionary dismissal of an action for failure to serve and return a summons. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that they state general principles regarding when discretionary dismissal is not appropriate.

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1), see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Dismiss Not Arbitrary

Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 546-547, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , involved three medical malpractice actions against a physician arising out of a surgical procedure allegedly performed on the plaintiffs. Shortly after plaintiffs served the summons in each action, defendant filed motions to dismiss, citing Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) for failure to effectuate service within two years after the actions were commenced against the defendant. In opposing the motions, plaintiffs stated that each of their cases was one of numerous cases handled by their attorney against the defendant and that counsel elected to pursue one of the actions as the "lead" case on the issue of negligence/standard of care, with the understanding that evidence developed in that case would apply to the other cases. Following substantial discovery in that action, the "lead" case settled, prior to plaintiffs effectuating service in the instant case. The trial court ruled that the reasons given by the plaintiffs did not amount to excusable or justifiable delay and granted the motions to dismiss.

The court of appeal reversed. It noted that under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420, the trial court had discretion to dismiss the action. However, that discretion is not unfettered and cannot be exercised arbitrarily; rather, it must be an impartial discretion to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law and in a manner to subserve the ends of substantial justice (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 547) . The court analyzed what constitutes a reasonable excuse and found that under the facts of this case, plaintiffs' proffered excuse justified the delay in service and reversed the trial court's dismissal of the action (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557-558) .

[b] Plaintiff's Proof of Good Cause Is Sufficient to Preclude Discretionary Dismissal

Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 , involved a construction claim and enforcement of a labor and material bond. Service of process was effected within one month after commencement of the action. However, the law firm representing plaintiff subsequently dissolved and reorganized with one less attorney. Later, two of three remaining attorneys left the firm, leaving one elderly partner to handle the increased workload. Because of the change in attorneys, a trial date was not set until two months prior to expiration of the five-year period set forth in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310], 17 months after filing of the at-issue memorandum. Defendant moved for dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420]. After the trial court denied his motion, he petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal.

The Supreme Court affirmed the denial of the dismissal. The Court stated that a writ of mandate to compel dismissal of an action should issue only when there is an entire absence of any showing constituting good cause. If there is any basis on which the trial court's action can be sustained and it appears that no injustice will result from sustaining the trial court, the refusal to dismiss should be upheld (2 Cal. 3d 557, 564) . In this case, there was not an entire absence of any showing constituting good cause. The frequent changes in plaintiff's attorney's law firm, and the resulting pressure on the attorneys remaining in the office, together with the fact that innumerable pleadings were filed by the parties, may be considered in determining whether plaintiffs have shown that the delay was excusable (2 Cal. 3d 557, 564-565) . Moreover, the delay subsequent to filing of the certificate ofreadiness could be attributed to the fact that the trial court's backlog would have made it useless for plaintiff to have tried to obtain an accelerated trial date (2 Cal. 3d 557, 564-566) .

The facts and procedural background of Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , are discussed under § 90.60[3][a]. In Putnam, the court analyzed the lack of consensus among the courts of appeal regarding what constitutes "some showing of excusable delay" as required by the Denham v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 564, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65 . It stated that a plaintiff who has been inattentive to his case for an unreasonable period of time should not be able to nullify the dismissal statute by simply invoking the general policy favoring trial on the merits or when the plaintiff offers an excuse which is not credible or is clearly unreasonable under the factual and procedural circumstances of the case (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557) . The court articulated a test for making this determination, discussed under § 90.60[3][c]. Applying those factors, the court concluded that plaintiffs' excuse for the delay in service was justifiable and reversed the judgment (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557-558) .

[c] Plaintiff's Excuse That Is Credible and Not Clearly Unreasonable Under the Circumstances Constitutes Good Cause

The facts and procedural background of Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557-558, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , are discussed under § 90.60[3][a]. In Putnam, the court articulated a test for determining whether a plaintiff has shown an excusable delay in serving the summons and complaint to overcome a motion for discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420. It stated that when the plaintiff offers some excuse reflecting a conscious decision not to serve or otherwise prosecute the action, the court should first address two questions. The court should first determine whether the explanation is credible under all the circumstances. If the court finds substantial evidence that the explanation is merely a pretext designed to cover up neglect, dismissal may be warranted. If the explanation is credible, however, the court should then determine whether a reasonably competent attorney would conclude that the delay was justified under all of the circumstances. The burden then should shift to the defendant to show that other facts, such as prejudice, support dismissal (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 557-558) .

Applying this test, the court examined whether the plaintiffs' explanation for the delay was credible. It found that plaintiffs provided substantial evidence that the "lead" case and the pending cases arose out of the same surgical technique employed by defendant, that extensive discovery and production of evidence regarding the issue of negligence and standard of care established in the "lead" case would be applicable to all of the other cases and service of process in the instant cases were deliberately staggered so as to avoid creating unmanageable demands on both parties and their counsel. Based upon this showing, the court found that plaintiffs' counsel's decision to move the "lead" case forward on the common issue of negligence/standard of care was a valid and legitimate reason to stagger service of process in the related actions (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 558) .

The court further noted that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 373(e) (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)) describes one of the factors to be considered by the court in evaluating a motion to dismiss as "the pendency of other litigation under a common set of facts or determinative of the legal or factual issues in the case. ..." The plaintiffs contended that their individual actions were parts of an overall group of cases against the same defendant arising from the same surgical procedure and sharing common questions of fact and law and that the reasonableness of the delay should be viewed within the context of the overall litigation (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 559) . The trial court rejected this argument, finding that the six month delay in effectuating service in the cases at bar after the "lead" case had settled could have been avoided by serving the complaints and requesting a continuance during the pendency of the "lead" case. The court of appeal applied the second prong of the test and concluded that the trial court's suggestion was just the type of second-guessing that is inappropriate when a court is deciding whether the plaintiff has met the initial burden of proof and obscured the relevant inquiry of whether the course actually followed by the plaintiff was a reasonable one (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 559-560) . The court found that reasonably competent attorneys in the position of plaintiffs' counsel could conclude that staggering service in the pending cases would accommodate the parties and their counsel for all of the cases in terms of scheduling discovery and trial.

The court then examined whether the defendant was prejudiced by the delay. It concluded that defendant failed to establish evidence of actual prejudice by the delay and reversed the judgment of dismissal (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 564-566) .

The test the Putnam court formulated in its decision was strongly criticized in Roach v. Lewis (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1179, 1184, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 281 . For discussion, see § 90.60[2][b].

Yao v. Anaheim Eye Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856 , involved a medical malpractice action. Prior to filing the complaint, plaintiff's original attorney notified defendants and certain other medical care providers of his intention to file a medical malpractice action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 364. Shortly before the statute of limitations expired, plaintiff's attorney filed the complaint but opted not to serve it until receiving a favorable medical opinion regarding liability. Before and after this time, the attorney experienced lengthy delays in obtaining all of the plaintiff's medical records and a medical opinion on standard of care. Approximately nine months after the complaint was filed, plaintiff consulted with new counsel who undertook a standard of care review. However, that review was delayed due to theconsultant's schedule. After the review, the new counsel was substituted as attorney of record, and two years and forty days after commencing the action, plaintiff served the summons and complaint. Defendants then moved to dismiss pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a), for failure to serve or bring the action to trial within two years from its commencement. The trial court granted defendant's motion and dismissed the action.

The court of appeal reversed. It found that the court in Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , discussed above, articulated an appropriate approach to analyzing the issue of abuse of discretion in dismissal cases. Applying the Putnam test, the court examined whether the excuse was credible. It noted there was no factual dispute as to the delays in obtaining the necessary medical records and a timely standard of care review (10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1029-1030) . The court then found that a reasonably competent attorney might well have made the same decision not to serve the complaint until a favorable standard of care opinion had been obtained. The court also found the last-minute representation by new counsel should have been considered by the court in assessing diligence. It further noted that new counsel undertook an investigation and served the complaint in an expedited fashion (10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1030-1031) . Since plaintiff met his burden of showing a reasonable excuse, the burden shifted to the defendant to show actual prejudice. The court found no actual prejudice and reversed the judgment of dismissal (10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1031-1032) .

[d] Factors Set Out in Court Rule Reveal Good Cause for Delay

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) is discussed in § 90.51[3][b].

Tannatt v. Joblin (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 182 Cal. Rptr. 112 , was a complaint for wrongful appropriation of funds posted as collateral for a bail bond. The complaint named ten specific and ten fictitiously designated defendants. Plaintiff obtained summary judgment against the single defendant she believed was primarily liable, but was unable to collect on it. Nearly three years after the complaint was filed, plaintiff served the other nine named defendants with summons and complaint. After filing answers, three defendants moved to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 581a and 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.420]. The trial court granted the motion.

The court of appeal reversed the dismissal. It held that the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action. It found that plaintiff's delay in serving the remaining named defendants was not capricious or unreasonable. The delay was based on plaintiff's analysis of the relative liability of the defendants and the mistaken belief of plaintiff's counsel that the two-year period in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) did not begin to run against a defendant until service of summons and complaint. Furthermore, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) favors a trial on the merits. The 1969 amendment to that section provided that discretionary dismissal should be based on rules promulgated by the Judicial Council. Former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)] was later adopted. Subsequent case law has provided that the factors set forth in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e), must be considered by the trial court in ruling on a dismissal motion. Here, the trial court did not consider those factors but simply ruled that plaintiff did not use due diligence in prosecuting the action (130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 1066-1067) . Application of the factors in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e), would have shown, at least impliedly, that plaintiff's reasons for delay were good. The trial court should have considered the law applicable to the case. Since plaintiff could have proceeded in separate suits against the primary defendant and the three defendants who sought dismissal, the fact that she delayed prosecution against them until after trying to adjudicate liability of the primary defendant should not require that she be penalized. The trial court should also have considered the its own calendar. The court of appeal noted that the chance of having a case almost three and one-half years old set for jury trial was beneficial in a court in which jury trials routinely take five years to come to trial. Finally, the trial court should have considered whether the ends of justice would be served by dismissal or trial, or by imposing conditions on dismissal or trial. The failure of the trial court to consider these factors, coupled with plaintiff's demonstrated diligence and the failure of defendants to claim or establish prejudice, resulted in an abuse of discretion preventing a meritorious cause from being heard (130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 1068-1070) .

[e] No Injustice Has Resulted From the Delay

The facts and procedural background of Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , are discussed under § 90.60[3][a]. In Putnam, the court found that plaintiffs demonstrated good cause for the delay in service. It rejected defendant's argument that an inference of prejudice arose from the mere delay in service since plaintiffs had established good cause for the delay (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 564) . The court noted that defendant had actual knowledge of the pending actions. Defendant's counsel provided a vague, conclusory declaration referring to his inability to conduct certain discovery as to plaintiffs' medical condition. The court found defendant's evidence insufficient to establish prejudice since defendant could have conducted discovery, the parties' counsel had arranged a discovery schedule of some of the related cases after the settlement of the "lead" case, and plaintiffs unsuccessfully attempted settlement of all of the actions at or around the time that the "lead" case settled (3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 564-566) . Since the plaintiffs demonstrated good cause for the delay and defendant failed to establish actual prejudice therefrom, the court reversed the judgment in favor of defendant.

The facts and procedural background of Yao v. Anaheim Eye Medical Group, Inc. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 856 , are discussed under§ 90.60[3][c]. In reversing the trial court's dismissal of the action, the court first found that plaintiff established a reasonable excuse for the delay in service. It then stated that the burden of proof shifted to defendant to establish actual prejudice. Defendant made no showing of prejudice, arguing that it was not required to do so. The court rejected that argument, finding that the record reflected an absence of actual prejudice since defendant did not deny receipt of plaintiff's notice of intention to file the action and an investigation had been undertaken by its risk management personnel (10 Cal. App. 4th 1024, 1030-1032) .

[f] Conditional Denial of Discretionary Dismissal

In Hansen v. Snap-Tite, Inc. (1972) 23 Cal. App. 3d 208, 100 Cal. Rptr. 51 , the case was set for trial three years and eight months after the date of filing. The case, however, was placed off calendar because of a negotiated settlement, and when some plaintiffs refused to settle, defendants moved to dismiss for failure to prosecute the action. The trial court denied the motion to dismiss on the condition that plaintiffs pay defendants $10,000 as reimbursement for attorney's fees. Plaintiffs declined to pay the money, and the trial court dismissed the action. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the action of the trial court was justified by former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(f) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(f)], which permits the court, where facts warrant, to continue or defer its ruling pending performance by either party of any conditions relating to trial or dismissal of the case that may be required to effectuate substantial justice. The purpose of this rule was to give the trial court some appropriate sanction against the dilatory litigant short of the harsh remedy of dismissal. If the damage caused by the delay was compensable in money, it was a reasonable exercise of the court's power to offer the plaintiff an opportunity to make redress. Plaintiffs offered no explanation that would excuse their conduct in permitting the case to go off calendar before rejecting the settlement. The effect was to require another trial setting eleven months later, subjecting defendants to additional inconvenience, uncertainty, and expense, and to require their attorneys to rework and renew their previous trial preparation efforts (23 Cal. App. 3d 208, 213-214) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.61

§ 90.61 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Defendant Has Not Made General Appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name] Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	REPLY MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MO-
_____ [name],	)	TION TO DISMISS
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

COMPLIANCE WITH THE STATUTORY TIME REQUIREMENTS FOR SERVICE AND FILING PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS IS NOT EXCUSED UNDER SECTION 583.220 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., DEFENDANT'S ACTIONS DO NOT, BY STATUTE, CONSTITUTE A GENERAL APPEARANCE]

[EITHER]

A. Action by Defendant Is Not General Appearance. Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.220 excuses the time requirements for completing service and filing proof of service of summons when a defendant has made a general appearance. However, the following acts do not constitute a general appearance: (a) a stipulation extending time under Section 583.230 of the Code of Civil Procedure, (b) a motion to dismiss under Sections 583.110-583.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure, whether joined with a motion to quash service or to set aside a default judgment or otherwise, and (c) an extension of time to plead after a motion to dismiss made pursuant to Sections 583.110-583.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220).

[AND/OR]

B. General Appearance by Defendant After Period Expired. A defendant does not make a general appearance under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.220 when the appearance occurs after expiration of the statutory period. (see Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 52-53, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 ; Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 511, 284 Cal. Rptr. 622).

[AND/OR]

C. General Appearance by Defendant in Cross Action. A defendant does not make a general appearance in an action for the purposes of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.220 if the defendant's general appearance occurred only in a cross action resulting from the action (see Glenwood Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Prosher Development Ltd. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1004-1006, 169 Cal. Rptr. 48).

[AND/OR]

D. General Appearance by Codefendant. A defendant does not make a general appearance in an action for the purposes of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.220 if the only general appearance is by a codefendant of the moving defendant, that defendant is not a necessary party, and the suit could have been based on joint or several liability (see Watson v. Superior Court (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 57, 100 Cal. Rptr. 684).

[AND/OR]

E. General Appearance in Separate Action. When a defendant is served in only one of two separate actions that have been brought against him or her by different plaintiffs concerning the same incident, and that are later consolidated for trial but not merged, that defendant does not make a general appearance with regard to the action in which service has not been made by appearing and otherwise defending his or her interests in the action in which service has been made (Sanchez v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1396-1399, 250 Cal. Rptr. 787).

[AND/OR]

F. General Appearance in Complaint in Intervention. When a complaint in intervention has been filed and defendant has beenserved only with that complaint, the defendant does not make a general appearance with regard to the underlying action in which service has not been made by appearing and otherwise defending his or her interests in the action in which service has been made (see Kuchins v. Hawes (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 539, 541, 276 Cal. Rptr. 281 ; Duckett v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1422-1425, 255 Cal. Rptr. 733).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a reply memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in effecting service, in response to the opposing party's position that plaintiff's delay in service is excused by the defendant's general appearance [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220; see also § 90.52]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not shown acts or conduct on the part of defendant that constitute a general appearance.

As a practical matter, these points and authorities are best used in a reply memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of defendant's general appearance. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.50, if counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

This form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.51]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if defendant filed a motion to quash or to set aside a default judgment along with a motion to dismiss, counsel should argue that these additional filings do not constitute a general appearance [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220(b)].

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.52 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal that is supported by the foregoing points and authorities. Counsel should note that there is a split of authority regarding whether a general appearance made within three years and sixty days constitutes a general appearance within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220 [compare Wong v. Armstrong World Industries, Inc. (1991) 232 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1034-1035, 283 Cal. Rptr. 870 (time limitation within which return of summons must be made is inapplicable when a defendant makes a general appearance within three years and sixty days of commencement of the action) discussed in § 90.52[3][b] with Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 284 Cal. Rptr. 622 (appearance prior to the expiration of three years and sixty days from commencement of the action did not constitute a general appearance), discussed in § 90.61[3][a]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Appearance by Defendant After Period Expired

The facts and procedural background of Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 , are discussed in § 90.50[3][b]. In that case, the Court considered whether the letter by the corporation's officer constituted a general appearance, and found that it did not. It merely acknowledged that service might have been made, but did not purport to waive any of the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) regarding timely service. Moreover, the court found that merely seeking an extension of time to plead cannot be deemed to indicate an intention to submit to the jurisdiction of the court for a ruling going to the merits, because the purpose may be only to obtain adequate time to determine whether or not to object to the court's jurisdiction. Even if the party's action did constitute a general appearance, it took place after expiration of the three-year period, and a general appearance after the three years have run did not operate to deprive a defendant of the right to dismissal. The court approved Watson v. Superior Court (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 59-60, 100 Cal. Rptr. 684 , discussed under § 90.61[3][c] below, and disapproved Taylor v. Hizer (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 846, 849-851, 106 Cal. Rptr. 603 , insofar as it reached an opposite conclusion (12 Cal. 3d 44, 50-53) .

Weatherby v. Van Diest (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-509, 284 Cal. Rptr. 622 , involved a personal injury action in which plaintiff identified defendant as a Doe defendant and served him with the summons and complaint two years and ten months after the complaint was filed. Defendant answered the complaint three years and forty-six days after the action commenced but plaintiff did not return the summons to the court until three years and ten months after the summons was issued. Defendant moved for dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250 for failure to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210, and the trial court granted the motion [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 requiring only filing proof of service of summons].

The plaintiff argued on appeal that the court erred because service is not complete until the return of summons is filed with the court and defendant's general appearance in the action three years and forty-six days after the summons was issued thus relieved plaintiff of the necessity of filing the summons within three years and sixty days of its issuance. The court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument. It noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a) requires that summons and complaint be served on the defendant within three years after the action is commenced whereas Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b) provides that return of summons or other proof of service shall be made within sixty days after the time the summons and complaint must be served on a defendant. The court found it apparent from this language that the Legislature simply provided that the notice of the lawsuit could be filed sixty days after the three-year period had run within which service must be accomplished. It further noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.220 provides that the time within which service must be made does not apply if there is a stipulation in writing or if some other act occurs constituting a general appearance in the action. This language recognizes that a defendant, without service on him or her of the complaint and/or the summons, may have knowledge of the lawsuit and file an answer or other pleading constituting a general appearance in the action before the three-year period has elapsed. In such a case, where a general appearance has been made before the three-year period, service of summons and complaint is not a determinative factor of notice and defendant's participation in the lawsuit (233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 508-509) .

The court also stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(b) was added by amendment in 1984. The previous statute required both the service of summons and its return within three years. The new statute, Section 583.210, retained the requirement that the summons be served within three years of filing the complaint and added the provision that the return of the summons must be accomplished within an additional sixty days. The court concluded that these statutes require a dismissal in any action where the summons is not returned within the three year and sixty-day period within Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 (233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 509-511) .

The court rejected plaintiff's argument that defendant made a general appearance prior to the three-year and sixty-day period for return of the summons. It relied on Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 52, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 , discussed above, in which the Supreme Court announced that a general appearance after the three years had run did not operate to deprive a defendant of his right to a dismissal. In this case, defendant made a general appearance after the three-year period within which service had to be made. It made no sense to say that a general appearance by defendant after the three year period for service but before the lapse of three years and sixty days lets the plaintiff off the hook in terms of complying with the requirement of returning the summons within the statutory time period (233 Cal. App. 3d 506, 511) . Therefore, the court affirmed the judgment.

[b] General Appearance by Defendant in Cross Action

In Glenwood Homeowners Assn., Inc. v. Prosher Development Ltd. (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 169 Cal. Rptr. 48 , plaintiff sued several defendants for damages in an action involving construction of a condominium. One defendant filed numerous cross complaints for indemnity against various subcontractors, including respondent. Respondent filed an answer to defendant's cross complaint. Plaintiff then served respondent by mail with the original complaint, meeting the three-year deadline of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210]. Respondent contended that service was improper and filed a motion to quash, which the trial court granted.

The court of appeal noted that a complaint and a cross complaint in the same action are treated as if they were independent actions. It held thatan appearance by an unserved defendant by way of an answer to a cross complaint did not constitute a general appearance for purposes of jurisdiction in the original action, and that service by mail was improper. Respondent should have been served in person. Therefore, the court affirmed the granting of the motion to quash service of the summons and complaint pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a), since respondent had not been properly served within the three-year period and had not made a general appearance in the original action (111 Cal. App. 3d 1002, 1004-1008) .

[c] General Appearance by Codefendant

In Watson v. Superior Court (1972) 24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 100 Cal. Rptr. 684 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to dismiss the action for failure to serve and return summons within three years (24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 61) . In opposing the writ, plaintiff contended that defendant was deprived of his right to dismissal because of a general appearance by the codefendants. The court of appeal disagreed. Whatever doubts about the availability of dismissal might exist in a case in which all defendants are indispensable or necessary parties, they do not arise in this case, because defendants were sued as joint tortfeasors who were proper but not necessary parties and may have been sued jointly or severally (24 Cal. App. 3d 53, 56-57) .

Watson was disapproved with regard to its views on the diligence required of a plaintiff to effect service, in Hocharian v. Superior Court (1981) 28 Cal. 3d 714, 722 n.5, 170 Cal. Rptr. 790, 621 P.2d 829 . However, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(f)(2) overruled Hocharian regarding the effect of a plaintiff's failure to discover facts or evidence, and the provisions of that statute were continued in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d). Therefore, it appears that the validity of Watson is not impaired for the proposition concerning dismissal cited in the foregoing form.

[d] General Appearance in Separate Action

In Sanchez v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 250 Cal. Rptr. 787 , two plaintiffs brought separate actions against the same defendant with regard to the same incident. Both plaintiffs were initially represented by different law firms, but later the law firm in one action substituted into the other action as well. About the same time, the actions were consolidated for trial, but not merged. The defendant was served in one action but not in the other. On behalf of the plaintiff in the served action, the defendant was subpoenaed to attend a deposition. The defendant complied and defended his interests with regard to the served action at the deposition. Thereafter, the defendant moved for dismissal of the unserved action. The trial court denied the motion on the ground that the defendant had made a general appearance in the unserved action by attending and participating in the deposition.

The court of appeal granted the defendant's petition for writ of mandate, and directed the trial court to order the dismissal. The court explained that although the two cases had been consolidated for trial, there was no indication in the record that the two cases had become merged. The plaintiffs were not in fact joined, and the actions remained separate and distinct even after the consolidation (203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1396) . Thus, the defendant's appearance at the deposition and otherwise defending his interests with regard to the served action could not reasonably be construed to be a general appearance in the unserved action (203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1399-1400) . Further, the defendant was not estopped from seeking dismissal merely because he did not state an intention to waive his dismissal rights at the deposition; he was under no duty to engage in such affirmative conduct, and only attended the deposition because he was compelled to do so to protect his interests in the served action (203 Cal. App. 3d 1391, 1400) .

[e] General Appearance in Complaint in Intervention

Kuchins v. Hawes (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 276 Cal. Rptr. 281 , involved a personal injury action in which plaintiff filed a complaint against several defendants, including the employer of the driver of the vehicle involved in the accident. Shortly thereafter, the employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier filed a complaint in intervention naming the same defendants as in the initial action. The insurance carrier served defendant with the summons and complaint in intervention within two years. The plaintiff, however, did not serve any of the defendants until two and one-half years after filing the complaint. The individual defendant and his employer filed motions to dismiss the underlying complaint for failure to serve the summons and complaint within two years under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420, which the trial court granted.

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that the California Supreme Court has not addressed the issue of whether service of a complaint in intervention on a defendant satisfies the requirement that a plaintiff serve his or her complaint within two years. It examined the different conclusions reached by appellate courts addressing the issue in different contexts. For example, in Duckett v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1422-1424, 255 Cal. Rptr. 733 , discussed below, the Second Appellate District held that a defendant's answer to a complaint in intervention did not constitute a general appearance in the underlying action. However, the Fifth Appellate District, in State Compensation Ins. Fund v. Selma Trailer & Manufacturing Co. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 740, 755, 258 Cal. Rptr. 545 , took the position that a complaint and a complaint in intervention were interchangeable and essentially the same lawsuit, concluding that theintervener was not permitted to file a complaint in intervention after expiration of the time period allotted plaintiff to prosecute his action (226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 539-540) .

The court found that to allow a plaintiff to benefit from the diligence of the workers' compensation carrier would sanction dilatory prosecution on the plaintiff's part. It concluded that plaintiff should not be allowed to ride on the coattails of the intervener and rely on the intervener's diligence (226 Cal. App. 3d 535, 540-541) . Therefore, service of the complaint in intervention did not operate as service of plaintiff's underlying complaint and thus, the defendants' answers were not general appearances in the underlying action.

In Duckett v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 255 Cal. Rptr. 733 , plaintiffs brought actions for personal injuries alleging that defendant's faulty brake repairs caused the accident. The plaintiffs' employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier filed a complaint in intervention to recover the amount of workers' compensation benefits it had paid as a result of the accident. The complaint in intervention was served and defendant filed an answer prior to the expiration of three years from the time the complaint was filed. However, the underlying complaint was not served until more than three years after the action commenced and after the complaint in intervention had been dismissed with prejudice. The trial court denied defendant's motion to quash on the ground that defendant had made a general appearance when he filed an answer to the complaint in intervention.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate the order denying defendant's motion. It noted that a complaint in intervention filed by an employer who seeks to recover benefits from a third party tortfeasor whose negligence caused an employee's injury pursuant to Lab. Code § 3852 may be considered a separate action for some purposes and not a separate action for others (207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1422) . The California Supreme Court held in County of San Diego v. Sanfax Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 862, 874, 140 Cal. Rptr. 638 , that the same statute of limitations applies to both actions. However, the appellate courts have recognized the separate nature of a complaint in intervention for reimbursement of workers' compensation benefits, citing Deutschmann v. Sears, Roebuck & Co. (1982) 132 Cal. App. 3d 912, 915-916, 183 Cal. Rptr. 573 . The court found that treating defendant's answer to the complaint in intervention as a general appearance would do injury to the goals of the employee-employer statutes, which have as their objective the goal of reducing the likelihood that a third party will be forced to defend more than one action (207 Cal. App. 3d 1419, 1424-1425) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Appearance by Defendant After Period Expired

In Brookview Condominium Owners' Assn. v. Heltzer Enterprises-Brookview (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 502, 267 Cal. Rptr. 76 , the plaintiffs' original complaint, seeking damages for construction defects, named as a defendant an entity with name similar to the developer, but did not name the developer. The developer was later added as a Doe defendant and was served more than three years after the filing of the complaint. The developer filed a joint answer with the similarly named developer, participated in discovery and filed a cross-complaint. It then filed a motion for dismissal, based on plaintiff's failure to serve the complaint within three years, which the trial court granted.

Plaintiff conceded on appeal that the complaint was not served until well after the three-year time period expired and that the time for service was not tolled or extended by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.230 or 583.240. It contended that defendant's extensive participation in the lawsuit after it was served constituted a general appearance barring dismissal. The court of appeal rejected this argument and affirmed the dismissal. The court found that, as the Supreme Court has continually held, a general appearance made after the three years runs does not operate to deprive a defendant of his right to a dismissal, citing Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 52, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 , discussed in § 90.61[3][a]. Participating in the lawsuit after service did not deprive the defendant of its right to dismissal (218 Cal. App. 3d 502, 508-509) .

In Tires Unlimited v. Superior Court (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 974, 226 Cal. Rptr. 25 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to dismiss the action for failure to serve and return summons within three years pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a. The court stated that a stipulation between the parties extending the time to answer the complaint did not constitute a general appearance precluding dismissal, because it occurred after expiration of the three-year period for service and return of summons, citing Busching v. Superior Court (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 44, 115 Cal. Rptr. 241, 524 P.2d 369 , discussed in § 90.61[3][a] (180 Cal. App. 3d 974, 980-982) .

35 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.62

§ 90.62 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Defendant Was Amenable to Process [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.61.]

THE TIME PLAINTIFF SEEKS TO EXCLUDE FROM THE THREE-YEAR PERIOD FOR SERVICE OF SUMMONS CANNOT BE EXCLUDED UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.240 ON THE GROUND THAT DEFENDANT WAS NOT AMENABLE TO PROCESS BECAUSE SERVICE COULD HAVE BEEN ACCOMPLISHED _____ [specify statutory method that was available, e.g., BY PUBLICATION UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 415.50].

A. Defendant Amenable to Process. The provision of Section 583.240(a) of the Code of Civil Procedure, which excludes the time during which a defendant was not amenable to the process of the court in computing the time period for effecting service set out in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, does not apply if plaintiff fails to negate the possibility that service could have been accomplished under an applicable state statute, although the defendant was absent from the state (see Adelson v. Hertz Rent-A-Car (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 221, 226-227, 183 Cal. Rptr. 779 (decided under former Civ. Code § 581a).

B. Plaintiff Bears the Burden of Proof Regarding Defendant's Nonamenability to the Process of the Court. Whether a defendant was "not amenable to the process of the court" is a question of fact for the trial court on which the plaintiff has the burden of proof (see Buchanan v. Buchanan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 587, 592-593, 160 Cal. Rptr. 577).

[Optional] C. Defendant Amenable to Process When Served by Publication. A defendant is amenable to service of process by any means so long as he or she remains within the jurisdiction of the court, including the method of last resort of service by publication (see Perez v. Smith (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1598, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186). A finding under Code of Civil Procedure Section 415.50 that a defendant was not reasonably available for service of process other than by publication is not the equivalent of a finding that a defendant was not amenable to process within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.240(a) (Watts v. Crawford (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 743, 761, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 896 P.2d 807). Thus, a finding that a defendant could not with reasonable diligence be served other than by publication does not constitute a binding adjudication that the defendant was not amenable to process for purposes of Section 583.240(a) (Watts v. Crawford (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 743, 761-762, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 896 P.2d 807).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a reply memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in effecting service, in response to the opposing party's position that service was timely in view of the exclusion of time during which defendant was not amenable to service [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a); see also § 90.56]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown that defendant was not amenable to service.

Optional Paragraph C may be used when plaintiff contends that defendant was served by publication because he or she was beyond the jurisdiction of the court and thus was not amenable to the process of the court.

As a practical matter, these points and authorities are best used in a reply memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of defendant's amenability to service. Alternatively, they may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.50, if counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

This form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.51]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in anothercontext, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel may describe the facts of defendant's conduct and state the reasons why defendant was amenable to the process of the court [see, e.g., Adelson v. Hertz Rent-A-Car (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 221, 226-227, 183 Cal. Rptr. 779 (defendant's change of name and move out of country did not preclude amenability to process under prior law)].

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.56 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Amenable to Process

In Adelson v. Hertz Rent-A-Car (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 221, 183 Cal. Rptr. 779 , defendant filed a motion to dismiss a personal injury action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250] for failure to serve and return summons within three years. Plaintiff contended defendant was not amenable to the process of the court under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)], because she changed her name and address, and therefore the action should not be dismissed. The trial court granted defendant's motion for dismissal, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that defendant's marriage and subsequent change of name and address did not make her "not amenable to process" pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(d), because Code Civ. Proc. § 413.10 provided plaintiff with a means of obtaining service on a foreign individual residing out of the country (133 Cal. App. 3d 221, 226-227) .

[b] Plaintiff Bears the Burden of Proof Regarding Defendant's Nonamenability to the Process of the Court

In Buchanan v. Buchanan (1979) 99 Cal. App. 3d 587, 160 Cal. Rptr. 577 , plaintiff sued her husband for damages resulting from an automobile injury, but before service could be effected, they both moved to Jamaica. Over three years later, the court granted defendant's motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a). Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Although former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)] provided that time during which a defendant is not amenable to the process of the court shall not be included in computing the time periods specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, the burden is on the plaintiff to establish that the defendant was not amenable, and a showing that the defendant was absent from the state is not sufficient (99 Cal. App. 3d 587, 592-593) . In the instant case, defendant might have been served by mail and have executed an acknowledgment. Additionally, he might have been served under sections of the Vehicle Code or provisions for service of persons outside the state. Plaintiff failed to negate these possibilities or to present facts in support of the claimed nonamenability (99 Cal. App. 3d 587, 593) .

[c] Defendant Amenable to Process When Served by Publication

In Watts v. Crawford (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 743, 42 Cal. Rptr. 2d 81, 896 P.2d 807 , the plaintiffs filed an action against defendant on February 8, 1989, and summons issued that day. Although there was some contact with an attorney who had represented the defendant in relation to the property underlying the lawsuit, the attorney was not authorized to receive service of summons and so informed plaintiffs. Plaintiffs attempted to serve defendant by hiring a licensed process server, who in 1989 sought to serve defendant at her last known address, and then sought an updated address through telephone directories, voter registries, the Department of MotorVehicles, and the county recorder's office. Over the three-year period, the process server made repeated attempts to locate the defendant, using various indices in several counties. In 1990, the process server learned from defendant's tenants that she had been living in a trailer on property adjacent to that which was the subject of the lawsuit. The process server could not get a new address for the defendant from the tenants. In 1991, the process server learned from the tenants that the defendant lived an intinerant lifestyle with no permanent address. On February 6, 1992, the plaintiffs filed an ex parte application for an order directing service of summons by publication, based on these facts. The court granted the motion the same day. Service by publication commenced February 27, 1992, twenty days after the three-year period for service expired, which would result in service being completed on March 25, three years and forty-seven days after the action was filed. On April 20, the defendant moved to dismiss based on plaintiffs' failure to serve the complaint within three years, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a). The trial court granted the motion to dismiss, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. The Court defined its task as being to resolve the conflict between Quaranta v. Merlini (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 22, 27, 237 Cal. Rptr. 179 , relied on by the plaintiffs and Perez v. Smith (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186 , relied on by the defendant (10 Cal. 4th 743, 745, 751) . Quaranta held that the trial court's finding under Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50 that a defendant was not reasonably available for service of process other than by publication is equivalent to a finding that a defendant was not amenable to process within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a), so as to extend the three-year period for service of process. Perez held that "not amenable to process" under Section 583.240(a) refers to a defendant being outside the jurisdiction of the court, and that a finding to allow publication under Section 415.50, that the defendant cannot, despite reasonable diligence, be served by a preferred method, actually presupposes that jurisdiction exists (10 Cal. 4th 743, 750) .

The Supreme Court looked to the history of the statutes, the difference in their terminology, and the common useage of "amenable to the process of the court" to conclude that the time excluded from the three-year period for service of process under Section 583.240(a) refers to time during which the defendant was not subject to the jurisdiction of the court (10 Cal. 4th 743, 751-761) .

The Court accordingly disapproved Quaranta's holding that a finding under Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50 that a defendant was not reasonably available for service of process other than by publication is equivalent to a finding that a defendant is not amenable to process within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a) (10 Cal. 4th 743, 761) . The Court also disapproved Quaranta's holding that a court's finding that a defendant could not with reasonable diligence be served other than by publication constitutes a binding adjudication that the defendant was not amenable to process for purposes of Section 583.240(a) (10 Cal. 4th 743, 761-762) . Resolving the case before it, the Court held that plaintiffs had not demonstrated the existence of any circumstance indicating that the defendant was not subject to the court's jurisdiction during some part of the three-year period. Thus, the three year period was not extended by the "not amenable to process" exclusion, and since the service by publication was not completed within the three year period, the case was properly dismissed (10 Cal. 4th 743, 762-763) . The Court declined to address defendant's alternative assertion that part of the three-year period should be excluded based on the Code Civ. Proc. Section 583.240(e) tolling of time during which service is "impossible, impracticable, or futile," based on plaintiffs' waiver of that issue by failure to properly raise it in the trial court (10 Cal. 4th 743, 763 n.17).

In Perez v. Smith (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 186 , plaintiff filed her original complaint in municipal court in 1988. Approximately three years later, she filed a motion to transfer the case to the superior court. Five months after the action was transferred, she applied for and obtained an order for service of summons by publication pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 415.50. In support of her application, plaintiff's counsel declared that an attempt had been made to serve defendant by mail, but defendant's insurance carrier refused to divulge defendant's present address and attempts at locating defendant through a search of county records and potential employers in the area were unsuccessful. In granting the application, the trial court found that plaintiff could not with reasonable diligence personally serve defendant and ordered that service be made by publication. After notice of the summons was published, defendant moved for mandatory dismissal for failure to serve summons within three years after the action had commenced under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, which the trial court granted.

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that plaintiff's application to serve by publication was made more than three years after her complaint was filed. Therefore, the burden of establishing facts bringing the case within an exception to the general rule requiring dismissal fell on the plaintiff. Plaintiff contended that the order for service by publication established that defendant was not amenable to process until the date of the order (19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1597) .

The court examined the phrase "not amenable to the process of the court" as used in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(a)(2). It found that the legislative history made clear that a finding that a defendant cannot, despite reasonable diligence, be served by one of the preferable means of service, that is, in person, by mail, or by substituted service, is not tantamount to a finding that defendant is outside the jurisdiction of the court. Service bypublication presupposes the defendant is subject to the court's jurisdiction and is used only after the plaintiff has exhausted all other avenues to service of process. The court noted that plaintiff's application did not demonstrate that defendant was ever outside the court's jurisdiction (19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1598) . It distinguished Quaranta v. Merlini (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 22, 27, 237 Cal. Rptr. 179 , in which defendant was a resident of Italy and could not be located for service. In the case at bar, however, defendant was served by publication after the time period for service had expired and the statute does not excuse failure of service except when the defendant is not amenable to the court's process. Plaintiff's application implied that defendant was amenable to service by publication and therefore, dismissal was proper (19 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1599-1600) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Amenable to Process

In Gentry v. Nielsen (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 176 Cal. Rptr. 385 , plaintiff effected service of process on defendants approximately two and one-half years after filing a complaint against them for medical malpractice. Later, plaintiff granted defendants an indefinite extension of time to file an answer, by written stipulation. Defendants answered six months later, leaving approximately two years of the five-year period specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310] to bring the case to trial. A trial date was set about one month after the end of the five-year statutory period. The trial court granted defendants' motion to dismiss for failure to bring the case to trial within the statutory period.

The court of appeal affirmed on the ground that, under the circumstances, the extension of time to file an answer did not extend the statutory period in which plaintiff had to bring the case to trial (123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 33) . The court also refused to exclude from the statutory period a period of one month during which defendant was absent from the state. The court reasoned that during this period service could have been made on persons at defendant's home, or to the office that defendant maintained during the entire time that he was absent from the state (123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 35) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.63

§ 90.63 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Plaintiff Has Not Shown That Service Was Impossible, Impracticable, or Futile Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiff's Control [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.61.]

THE FAILURE TO SERVE SUMMONS WITHIN THE REQUIRED PERIOD WAS NOT DUE TO CAUSES BEYOND PLAINTIFF'S CONTROL AND, THEREFORE, THE TIME SOUGHT TO BE EXCLUDED FROM THE THREE-YEAR PERIOD FOR SERVICE OF SUMMONS UNDER SECTION 583.240 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, ON THE GROUND OF IMPOSSIBILITY, IMPRACTICABILITY, OR FUTILITY, DOES NOT APPLY.

A. When Exclusion for Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility Applies. The exclusion from the computation of the three-year period of any time during which service was impossible, impracticable, or futile applies only when the period sought to be excluded was due to causes beyond plaintiff's control (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d); Bishop v. Silva (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 1322, 285 Cal. Rptr. 910 ; Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 500-502, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8).

B. Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof Regarding Excuses of Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility. When service of the summons and complaint and filing of the proof of service of summons are not completed within the time periods prescribed in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, plaintiff bears the burden of proof that the excuses of impossibility, impracticability, or futility, as provided in Section 583.240(d) of the Code of Civil Procedure, apply to extend the periods for service and filing proof of service of summons (see Republic Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1253, 1258, 207 Cal. Rptr. 241 ; Lesko v. Superior Court, (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 476, 484-485, 179 Cal. Rptr. 595).

C. Exclusion Is Strictly Construed. The excuse of impossibility, impracticability, or futility should be strictly construed in light of the need to give a defendant adequate notice of the action so thatthe defendant can take necessary steps to preserve evidence (Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240; see Damjanovic v. Ambrose (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 509-510, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 ; Graf v. Gaslight (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 296 n.4, 274 Cal. Rptr. 759).

[Optional] D. Failure to Serve Defendant After Default Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiff's Control. When the facts of the case show that plaintiff's failure to serve defendant with summons during the three-year period was a result of plaintiff's own actions in the case and not to any causes beyond his or her control, the period between the entry of default and the date the default and default judgment were set aside is not excluded from the three-year period (Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 500-502, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8).

[Optional] E. Failure to Serve Defendants During Pendency of Federal Court Action Between Same Parties on Same Cause Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control. The period that a federal court action is pending between the same parties on the same cause should not be excluded from the computation of the three-year period for service of summons because the pendency of that action did not prevent plaintiffs from serving the summons in the state court action, and hence the failure to serve was not due to causes beyond plaintiffs' control (Valerio v. Boise Cascade Corp. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1219, 223 Cal. Rptr. 592).

[Optional] F. Failure to Serve Defendants Not Subject to Stay Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control. In an action which has been stayed as to some, but not all, of the defendants pursuant to statute, it is within plaintiffs' control to timely serve the defendants not subject to the stay (Damjanovic v. Ambrose (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 510, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560).

[Optional] G. Actuality of Service Is Question of Fact. Whether defendant was actually served with process is a question of fact (Graf v. Gaslight (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295, 274 Cal. Rptr. 759).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a reply memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in effecting service, in response to the opposing party's position that service was timely in view of the exclusion of time during which service was impossible, impracticable, or futile [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d) and § 90.58]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown service was impossible, impracticable, or futile for reasons beyond his or her control.

As a practical matter, these points and authorities are best used in a reply memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of impossibility, impracticability, or futility. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.50, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

Optional Paragraph D may be used when a default judgment is at issue. Optional Paragraph E may be used when there are separate actions between the same parties on the same cause. Optional Paragraph F may be used when the action has been stayed as to some, but not all, of the defendants. Optional Paragraph G may be used when there is an issue as to whether defendant was actually served with process.

This form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.51]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth the facts showing that the failure to serve summons was due to causes within plaintiff's control.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting the former statutes have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controllingauthority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

2005 amendments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 eliminated the requirement that the original summons be returned to the court; instead, the court retains the original summons, issues copies, and the plaintiff files a proof of service of summons [2005 Stats. 300].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.58 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] When Exclusion for Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility Applies

In Bishop v. Silva (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 285 Cal. Rptr. 910 , plaintiff brought a third party tort action for injuries sustained during the course and scope of his employment, and the employer's workers' compensation insurance carrier intervened. Plaintiff provided defendant with a courtesy copy of the summons and complaint shortly after filing the complaint but did not effect service. Approximately three years later, plaintiff served an individual, described on the proof of service as "staff" at defendant's office. The original summons was never returned to plaintiff's counsel although the process server claimed it was sent to the intervener's counsel. Defendant moved to quash service and for mandatory dismissal of the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250 on the grounds that plaintiff had not effected return of summons or other proof of service within three years and sixty days after the action was commenced. After the motion was filed, plaintiff filed the original proof of service, a photocopy of the summons and a declaration stating that the original summons had been lost or destroyed. The trial court granted defendant's motion and dismissed the action.

Plaintiff contended on appeal that 85 days, which represented the time when plaintiff's counsel first learned that there was a problem with the summons until counsel was able to ascertain the status of the summons, should have been excluded from the computation of the time for the return of summons due to impossibility. The court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument. It noted the Cal. Law Revision Comm'n Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240, providing that the excuse of impossibility, impracticability or futility should be strictly construed in light of the need to give a defendant adequate notice of the action so that the defendant can take necessary steps to preserve evidence. This strict construction is in direct contrast to the liberal construction afforded an excuse for failure to bring an action to trial within the prescribed time period and recognizes that service is ordinarily within the plaintiff's control (234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 1321-1322) .

The court then held that plaintiff's problems with service were within his control. Plaintiff employed his own agent to effect service and allowed the deadline for return of summons to pass without taking any action even though the problem with the original summons had already come to light. The court stated that counsel could have investigated the matter further and still had ample time to meet the deadline for return of summons simply by obtaining and filing an affidavit of the process server under Code Civ. Proc. § 417.30(b). His failure to do so did not fall within the impossibility exception of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d) (234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 1322-1323) .

The plaintiff also argued that his failure to effect timely service was excused because defendant had notice of the lawsuit. The court disagreed, finding that notice of the lawsuit through courtesy copies of the complaint and other communications did not excuse untimely service and plaintiff could not establish a general appearance on the part of defendant during the statutory time period (234 Cal. App. 3d 1317, 1323-1324) .

Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8 , was an action filed against plaintiff's former employer and one of its general agents. Plaintiff attempted to serve the summons and complaint on defendant employer by serving the agent at his business address, despite the fact that the agent was not the defendant corporation's designated agent for service of process. The agent was fired eight days after he was served and he never informed the employer of the lawsuit. Approximately seven months later, plaintiff filed a request to enter the employer's default, but sent the notice in care of the agent at the agent's previous address and did not send notice to the employer. Over two years later, plaintiff obtained a default judgment against the employer for $100,000. Defendant did not learn of the judgment for another two years when plaintiff attempted to levy execution against the employer's assets. The trial court denied the employer's motion to set aside the default judgment, which was reversed on appeal. The employer then moved to dismiss the action for plaintiff's failure to serve the summons within three years of the filing of the complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a)] or to bring the case to trial within five years [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310], and the motion was granted.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the five-year period was tolled from the date the default was entered until the remittitur issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a) (court's jurisdiction to try action suspended) and thus, the five-year rule provided no basis for dismissal of the action, but that this exclusion did not apply to the three-year period for service of summons (207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 499) . The court further pointed out that the exclusion for the period that the validity of service was the subject of litigation of the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(c)] did not apply because the motion to set aside the default judgment for lack of service was not made until five and one-half years after the action was commenced, and that a statutory period cannot be tolled two and one-half years after it has already run (207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 499) . The court said that the only possible exception to the rule of mandatory dismissal was that authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d), providing that the time service was impracticable, impossible, or futile was to be excluded from computation of the three-year period (207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 500) . The court pointed out that under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d), entry of default and default judgment against the employer would toll the dismissal period only if the claimed impracticability was due to causes beyond plaintiff's control (207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 500-502) .

[b] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof Regarding Excuses of Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility

Republic Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1253, 207 Cal. Rptr. 241 , involved a petition for a writ of mandate brought by defendant for dismissal of a suit for personal injuries and property damage. Defendant was substituted for a "Doe" defendant by amendment to a complaint brought for injuries caused by a defective water heater. The complaint was not served on defendant until four years after it was filed. Defendant moved to dismiss the complaint under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]. The trial court denied the motion and set the case for trial. Defendant then petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted the writ, holding that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(f), as amended in 1982 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)], the failure of plaintiff to serve defendant within the existing three-year statutory period required mandatory dismissal. The court reasoned that unless one of the exceptions listed in former Section 581a(f) existed, dismissal was mandatory. Here, the trial record was devoid of any factual showing that defendant was estopped from seeking dismissal or that it was impossible, impracticable, or futile for plaintiffs to comply with the statutory time requirements. The court did not consider whether plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in serving defendant, noting that former Section 581a(f) explicitly provided that failure to discover relevant facts or evidence must not excuse compliance (160 Cal. App. 3d 1253, 1256-1258) .

In Lesko v. Superior Court (1982) 127 Cal. App. 3d 476, 179 Cal. Rptr. 595 , petitioner sought a writ of mandate after the trial court failed to dismiss a medical malpractice action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a for failure to serve and return service of summons within three years of filing the action.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ directing the lower court to set aside its order denying petitioner's motion to dismiss, and to issue an order granting the motion. The court explained that the concept of reasonable diligence applies when a known defendant is not served despite reasonably diligent efforts or when an unknown possible defendant is not ascertained in time to serve him or her within three years (127 Cal. App. 3d 476, 483-485) . The court added that a trial court must dismiss an action if the plaintiff fails to prove reasonable diligence in attempting to serve and return summons. In this case, the court concluded that petitioner was known to plaintiff at all times during the three-year period and that he was available for service of summons. Hence, plaintiff's failure to serve did not come within the reasonable diligence exception to the statute (127 Cal. App. 3d 476, 485) .

[c] Exclusion Is Strictly Construed

In Damjanovic v. Ambrose (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 , plaintiffs filed a complaint on March 9, 1987, against certain deputy sheriffs, certain civilian defendants, and Los Angeles County for civil rights violations, assault and battery, and related tort causes of action. Prior to filing the civil action, one of the plaintiffs was charged with resisting arrest and battery on a peace officer. The first two criminal trials resulted in mistrials and after the third trial commenced, the criminal case was dismissed on the prosecution's motion on October 21, 1988. The civilian defendants were served shortly after three years from the date the action was filed. The defendants filed a motion to dismiss for failure to serve summons and complaint within three years under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210. The court granted the motion as to the civilian defendants and denied the motion as to the other defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The plaintiffs contended on appeal that the three-year period for service of process was tolled pursuant to Gov. Code § 945.3 and Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240 from the date the criminal complaint was filed until its dismissal 771 days later. Gov. Code § 945.3 provides that a person charged with a criminal offense may not bring a civil action for money or damages against a peace officer or the public entity employing a peace officer based on the peace officer's conduct relating to the offense for which the accused is charged. It further provides that any applicable statute of limitations shall be tolled during the period that thecharges are pending. Plaintiffs argued that the operation of Gov. Code § 945.3 is a statutory stay within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b) and makes service of summons "impracticable or futile" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d) (3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 507-509) .

The court of appeal noted that Gov. Code § 945.3 prohibits the commencement of a civil action against peace officers, or their employers, while a related criminal action is pending against the plaintiff but that once the action is filed, the rationale for the tolling provisions of Gov. Code § 945.3 no longer applies. The court also rejected plaintiff's arguments that it was impracticable to prosecute the action against the civilian defendants while the action was stayed against the peace officers. It noted that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 is to give a defendant timely notice of the action so that defendant can take adequate steps to preserve evidence. The excuse of impossibility, impracticability, or futility should be strictly construed to foster this purpose (3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 510) . It concluded that the plaintiffs made no showing that it would have been impracticable to serve the civilian defendants within the three-year period. Moreover, the tolling requested by plaintiff would work a distinct disadvantage to the civilian defendants (3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 509-510) .

In Graf v. Gaslight (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 274 Cal. Rptr. 759 , plaintiff sued a bar, its owner, and an employee for alleged negligent and intentional tortious acts occurring on March 5, 1985. The complaint was filed on January 17, 1986. On May 27, 1988, the trial court mailed to plaintiff's attorney at the latter's address of record notice of its intention to dismiss the action on its own motion, but the attorney had moved and had failed to file a change of address with the court. The court dismissed the action on July 13, 1988, and mailed a notice of the dismissal to the attorney at the same address. The attorney learned of the dismissal in late November 1988. On January 9, 1989, plaintiff moved the court for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, third paragraph. Sixteen days later on January 25, 1989, the court granted the motion and ordered the July 13, 1988, dismissal set aside. On March 1, 1989, defendants moved to dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 for failure to serve the complaint within three years from filing. On March 7, 1989, plaintiff filed a proof of service indicating that the bar had been served on February 9, 1989. Also in March 1989, plaintiff filed proofs of service indicating that the bar and its owner had been served on February 28, 1989.

Finding there was no valid service within three years of the filing of the complaint, the court granted the motion and dismissed the action. The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to plaintiff's claim that during the period the action was dismissed it was impossible or futile to serve process for reasons beyond his control, the court quoted the Cal. Law Revision Commission comment set forth in Paragraph C of the foregoing form (225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 296 n.4). The court said that since plaintiff did not know about the dismissal until November, the failure to serve process before that time was not due to causes beyond plaintiff's control. In addition, plaintiff waited seven weeks after learning of the dismissal before seeking relief and another two weeks after the dismissal was set aside before serving process. The court held that the only period that could be excluded was the 16-day period between the date relief from the dismissal was sought and the date on which the dismissal was set aside, but after subtracting those 16 days, service was still untimely (225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297-298) .

[d] Failure to Serve Defendant After Default Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiff's Control

The facts and procedural background of Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8 , are discussed under § 90.63[3][a]. In affirming the judgment of dismissal on the ground summons was not served within three years from the time the action was commenced, the court of appeal said the plaintiff had to bear responsibility for his agent's failure to effect service of process, that while plaintiff's lawyer may not have filed an intentionally false return of service, he did deliberately avoid giving the employer actual notice of the lawsuit, and that once the employer's default was entered, plaintiff engaged in considerable delay before either securing a default judgment or attempting to obtain satisfaction of the judgment. The court said that had plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case, the invalidity of the service could have been discovered before the statutory period had run (which gave plaintiff the benefit of the doubt as to whether the improper service was deliberate misfeasance or merely negligence) and that, because the circumstances making service impracticable were entirely within plaintiff's control, there were no grounds for tolling the statutory period pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240 (207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 502-503) .

[e] Failure to Serve Defendants During Pendency of Federal Court Action Between Same Parties on Same Cause Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control

Plaintiffs in Valerio v. Boise Cascade Corp. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 223 Cal. Rptr. 592 , had been class action plaintiffs in another action which was settled. After settlement of the class action, plaintiffs filed a complaint in federal court against their attorneys, alleging malpractice relating to the settlement. Defendants obtained summary judgment on the ground that plaintiffs' claims were barred by the statute of limitations. Pending their appeal from this judgment, plaintiffs filed an identical action against defendants in state court. After three years elapsed, defendants moved to dismiss the state action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210(a)] on the ground that they had notbeen served with the complaint and summons within three years of the commencement of the action. The trial court granted the motions, and plaintiffs appealed, contending that prosecution would have been impossible, impracticable, and futile under former Section 581a(f) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d)] because pursuit of the action at any time prior to the final disposition of the federal action would have constituted a potentially wasteful use of time and resources by the parties and the court (177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1215-1217) . In affirming the trial court's ruling, the court of appeal held that plaintiffs' argument was directed to the difficulties of bringing the case to trial, and not to whether it was impracticable or futile to serve and return process. Thus, the federal action did not affect their ability to serve defendants (177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1219) . The court held that the federal action had no bearing on the state action, such as determining that an essential element to a successful trial exists (177 Cal. App. 3d 1212, 1219) .

[f] Failure to Serve Defendants Not Subject to Stay Was Not Due to Causes Beyond Plaintiffs' Control.

The facts and procedural background of Damjanovic v. Ambrose (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 510, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 560 are discussed under § 90.63[3][c]. In affirming the dismissal, the court of appeal rejected plaintiffs' contention that the Gov. Code § 945.3 stay as to the defendants who were peace officers and their employer should apply to the civilian defendants as well. The court found that plaintiffs failed to show that it would have been impracticable to serve the civilian defendants within the three-year period. All of the plaintiffs' arguments pertained to the alleged waste of judicial resources if they were required to try the case involving the civilian defendants separately from the case involving the peace officers. The court noted that plaintiffs were nonetheless required to serve the civilian defendants and would suffer the same expense in serving them within the statutory time period as they would if they were served after the criminal proceedings concluded and therefore, the excuse of impracticability did not apply (3 Cal. App. 4th 503, 510-511) .

[g] Actuality of Service Is Question of Fact

The facts and procedural background of Graf v. Gaslight (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 274 Cal. Rptr. 759 , are discussed under § 90.63[3][c]. Plaintiff also had filed a proof of service regarding an alleged personal service on the bar and its owner on August 13, 1988. In affirming the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal said that it was undisputed that service of process on defendants was effected on February 9, 1989, and on February 28, 1989, more than three years after commencement of the action. With respect to the claimed service on August 13, 1988, which was within the three-year period, the court said that whether defendants were actually served with process was a question of fact, and that appellate review was limited to a determination of whether there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding of no valid service within the statutory period (225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295) . The court discussed the evidence and concluded that on the basis of the record before the trial court, there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding that no service of process was made on August 13, 1988 (225 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Has Burden of Proof Regarding Excuses of Impossibility, Impracticability, or Futility

In American Western Banker v. Price Waterhouse (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916 , plaintiffs filed but did not serve a complaint for negligence against certain accountants. Nine months later plaintiffs filed an amended complaint that added additional plaintiffs and a new cause of action. The amended complaint was served two years and four months after the original complaint was filed. The trial court granted defendants' motions to dismiss. The appellate court reversed dismissal as to the claims of the new plaintiffs because the original complaint did not "commence" their action. However, the court affirmed dismissal as to the original plaintiffs because their excuse of financial inability to conduct discovery or otherwise prosecute a lawsuit did not constitute a reasonable excuse for the delay (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 57) .

In Nelson v. State of California (1982) 139 Cal. App. 3d 72, 188 Cal. Rptr. 479 , plaintiff appealed the order of the trial court in granting the motions of individual defendants to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250] for failure to return summons within three years from the filing of the complaint. The original complaint was filed in July, 1976, and was amended in October, 1977, to substitute the true names of certain doe defendants; however, these defendants were not served until August, 1980. The court of appeal rejected plaintiff's contention that the three-year time limit of former Section 581a did not begin to run until the filing of the amended complaint, and affirmed the order of the trial court, holding that the trial court was required to dismiss the action in light of plaintiff's failure to meet his burden of showing diligence or excuse for delay. The court concluded that plaintiff had known the true names of defendants well before the expiration of the three-year limit and had failed to serve them within the required time (139 Cal. App. 3d 72, 76-77) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.64

§ 90.64 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210, 583.250]--Plaintiff's Legal Incompetency Does Not Toll Periods for Service Specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.61.]

THE LEGAL INCOMPETENCY OF THE PLAINTIFF DOES NOT TOLL THE PERIODS SPECIFIED IN SECTION 583.210 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, WITHIN WHICH THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT MUST BE SERVED AND THE PROOF OF SERVICE OF SUMMONS, ONCE THE ACTION IS FILED.

A. Dismissal of Action for Nonservice of Summons. The requirements of Sections 583.210-583.250 of the Code of Civil Procedure are mandatory and are not subject to extension, excuse, or exception except as expressly provided by statute. Hence, if the summons and complaint are not served and the proof of service of summons filed within the periods specified in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure, excluding any times specified in Section 583.240 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the action must be dismissed (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(a)(2), (b); see Tzolov v. International Jet Leasing, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327, 262 Cal. Rptr. 606).

B. Legal Incompetency of Plaintiff Is No Exception. Once an action is commenced by the filing of the complaint, the legal incompetency of the plaintiff does not operate to toll the periods specified in Section 583.210 of the Code of Civil Procedure within which the summons and complaint must be served and the summons returned (Tzolov v. International Jet Leasing, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327, 262 Cal. Rptr. 606).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a reply memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in effecting service, in response to the opposing party's position that, because he or she was legally incompetent, the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 were tolled. The ground for the response is that legal incompetency is not one of the grounds specified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250, and that dismissal of the action is therefore mandatory under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(b).

As a practical matter, these points and authorities are best used in a reply memorandum after the opposing party has raised the issue of tolling. Alternatively, they may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.50, if counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The form may also be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.51]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This form supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210 and 583.250, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal of Action for Nonservice of Summons

Tzolov v. International Jet Leasing, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 262 Cal. Rptr. 606 , was an action for damages for a severe head injury sustained by plaintiff when he fell from the bed of a truck owned and operated by defendant. Plaintiff had been rendered incompetent by the injury and the action was filed by and through his mother as guardian ad litem. The action lay dormant for almost four years, at which time anamended complaint alleging additional causes of action was filed, following the substitution of counsel, and defendant was served with the summons and amended complaint a month later. Defendant's motion to dismiss the action for failure to serve the summons and complaint within three years after the action was commenced was granted, and plaintiff appealed. In affirming, the court of appeal pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.250(b) provides that dismissal for failure to serve within the three-year period is mandatory and not subject to extension, excuse, or exception except as expressly provided by statute (214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327) .

[b] Legal Incompetency of Plaintiff Is No Exception

The facts and procedural background of Tzolov v. International Jet Leasing, Inc. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 262 Cal. Rptr. 606 , are discussed under § 90.64[3][a]. Plaintiff contended that because he was legally incompetent at the time he filed his complaint, the provisions of Code of Civ. Proc. § 583.210 were tolled and that the trial court should have denied the motion to dismiss. In rejecting this argument and affirming the dismissal, the court of appeal said that if it were concerned with a statute of limitations for commencing an action, plaintiff's incompetence clearly would result in a tolling of the limitations period under Code Civ. Proc. § 352, but that there is neither statutory nor case authority for the proposition that once the action is commenced the time within which the summons must be served and the action prosecuted is similarly tolled (214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327) . The court explained that the statute of limitations is concerned only with the timeliness of instituting an action, while Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 is concerned with the speedy prosecution of an action after the action has been commenced (214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327) . Because legal incapacity was not excluded by statute from the operation of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210, the court held that plaintiff's argument was without merit (214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 327) . The court held that because plaintiff failed to serve defendant with process within three years after the action was commenced and there was no evidence establishing the existence of any recognized exception to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210, the trial court properly granted defendant's motion to dismiss (214 Cal. App. 3d 325, 328) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.65

§ 90.65 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(1)]--Plaintiff Has Not Shown Good Cause for Delay in Service

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT
vs.	)	OF MOTION TO DISMISS
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

IT WOULD BE AN ABUSE OF DISCRETION TO DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS NOT ADEQUATELY SHOWN GOOD CAUSE FOR THE DELAY IN SERVING THE SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT.

A. Legislative Intent and Purpose. Sections 583.410 and 583.420 of the Code of Civil Procedure are intended to compel reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action after it has been commenced, in order to expedite the administration of justice and avoid prejudice to the defendant caused by the dissipation of evidence, thereby limiting the defendant's ability to defend the action (County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1209, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481).

[Optional] B. Investigation and Procurement of Evidence Is No Excuse for Delay in Service. The investigation or procurement of evidence does not excuse a long, unexplained delay in serving the summons and complaint (County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1209, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481).

[Optional] C. Financial Inability to Conduct Discovery or Prosecute Action Is No Excuse for Delay in Service. The plaintiff's financial inability to conduct discovery or otherwise prosecute the action does not excuse a delay in serving thesummons and complaint (American Western Banker v. Price Waterhouse (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 57, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916).

D. Unreasonable Delay in Service May Give Rise to Inference of Prejudice. Some courts find an inference of prejudice to the defendant when there has been an unreasonable delay in service (Scarzella v. DeMers (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1771, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 ; Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hospital (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1405, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521).

[Optional] E. Dismissal Statutes Apply When Defendant Is a Public Entity. The dismissal statutes apply to all plaintiffs and to all defendants, including public entities (County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1212, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481).

F. Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion. To deny the motion to dismiss when plaintiff has made absolutely no showing that would legally excuse the delay, and the delay has resulted in prejudice to the defendant, would be an abuse of discretion (see Scarzella v. DeMers (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1768-1770, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 ; Trailmobile, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1455-1456, 259 Cal. Rptr. 100).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal for delay in effecting service, in response to the opposing party's position that dismissal is not appropriate under all the circumstances [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(1) and § 90.60]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown good cause for the delay in service, and that prejudice to the moving party may be presumed from an unreasonable delay in effecting service.

As a practical matter, these points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has presented its reasons for arguing that the discretionary dismissal is inappropriate under the circumstances. A supplemental memorandum in response to written opposition to the motion is expressly authorized in motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, these points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal that are set out in § 90.51, if counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

Optional Paragraph B may be used when plaintiff contends that the delay in service was due to the need to conduct an investigation and/or to procure evidence. Optional Paragraph C may be used when plaintiff contends that the delay was due to his or her financial inability to conduct discovery or otherwise prosecute the action. Optional Paragraph E may be used when the defendant is a public entity.

In an appropriate case, this form may be combined with one or more of the reply points and authorities supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in effecting service, which are set out in §§ 90.61 -90.63. These memoranda support the position that the mandatory period for effecting service has not been excused or extended but has, in fact, lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.220-583.240 (principles applicable in calculating mandatory period)]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth the facts showing that the failure to serve summons within two years after the action was commenced was without any legal excuse and any facts showing the prejudice to the defendant.

[b] Inference of Prejudice

One court of appeal has stated that it could find no logical basis for requiring an inference of prejudice from the delay in serving the summons in every discretionary dismissal case, or in the one before it, that the Legislature has never provided in the discretionary dismissal statutes for such an inference, that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e), does not require prejudice to be inferred from the mere passage of time, and that no decision of the California Supreme Court requires or permits a trial court to infer prejudice in all cases from a failure to diligently prosecute, and hence no such inference should be drawn in the absence of evidence to support it [Ladd v. Dart Equipment Corp. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 1088, 1106-1107, 281 Cal. Rptr. 813 (reversing judgment of dismissal and remanding case to the trial court with direction to exercise its discretion in ruling on motion to dismiss)]. See also §§ 90.60[2][c] and [3][e].

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for involuntary dismissal for delay in service and return, former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[e] Opposing Memoranda

The memorandum set out in § 90.60 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legislative Intent and Purpose

County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481 , was an action for damages for personal injuries, resulting from an alleged assault, battery, and false arrest. On March 15, 1984, plaintiff presented a timely government tort claim against the county, which was denied. He filed his complaint against the county on January 28, 1985. The court's file lay dormant until November 6, 1987, at which time the court gave notice of its intent to dismiss the action for failure to serve the summons and complaint within two years after the action was commenced. Plaintiff filed an amended complaint and served a copy of it and the summons on the county on January 6, 1988. The court denied its own motion, whereupon defendant filed a motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1). The trial court denied the motion, and defendant petitioned the appellate court for a writ of mandate.

In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its denial of the motion to dismiss and to dismiss the action, the court of appeal pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 provides that an action may be dismissed if service is not made within two years after the action is commenced and that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 provides for dismissal for delay in prosecution if it appears to the court appropriate under the circumstances. The court stated that the intent of the statutory scheme is to compel reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action after it has been commenced (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1208) , and that the purpose of these statutes is to expedite the administration of justice and to avoid prejudice to the defendant caused by the dissipation of evidence, thereby limiting the defendant's ability to defend the action (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1209) .

[b] Investigation and Procurement of Evidence Is No Excuse for Delay in Service

The facts and procedural background of County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481 , are discussed under § 90.65[3][a]. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to dismiss the action, the court of appeal said that the law is well established that the investigation or procurement of evidence does not excuse a long unexplained delay in serving the complaint, that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(d) codifies that law, and that plaintiff's sole excuse that service of the complaint was delayed because his counsel was conducting discovery does not provide a reasonable basis for denial of the motion to dismiss and does not justify the failure to serve the county within the time period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1209) .

[c] Financial Inability to Conduct Discovery or Prosecute Lawsuit Is No Excuse for Delay in Service

In American Western Banker v. Price Waterhouse (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 916 , plaintiffs served their amended complaint, which added plaintiffs and a new cause of action against defendant, two years and four months after the action commenced. The trial court dismissed the complaint for failure to serve the summons within two years after the action was filed, under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1).

The court of appeal reversed dismissal as to the claims of the new plaintiffs because the original complaint did not commence their action. However, the court affirmed dismissal as to the original plaintiffs because their excuse of financial inability to conduct discovery or otherwise prosecute the lawsuit did not constitute a reasonable excuse for the delay (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 57) The court found that a plaintiff opposing a motion to dismiss for delay in prosecution has the initial burden to show excusable delay. If such a showing is not made, the court may dismiss the action in its discretion even if defendant fails to establish actual prejudice, citing Putnam v. Clague (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 542, 549, 5 Cal. Rptr. 2d 25 , discussed in § 90.60[3][c]. The court applied the test set forth in Putnam and concluded that substantial evidence supported the trial court's implied finding that the excuse tendered by plaintiffs, that they were too poor to actively pursue the litigation during the 28 months between commencement of the action and service of the complaint, was not credible (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 54-55) . The court also found that the trial court would have been justified in concluding that the financial impracticability excuse was unreasonable (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 55-56) . It noted that the reasonableness prong of the Putnam criteria is limited to instanceswhen there has been a decision to delay service, and that inadvertent delay, as claimed in this case, is addressed by the factors in Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 373(e). The court further noted that both the Putnam test and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 373(e) (now see Cal Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)) require a rational relationship between the asserted reason for the delay and the fact of delay of service of the summons, aside from some generalized delay in the action as a whole (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 55-56, n.11). The court then concluded that financial inability to conduct discovery or otherwise prosecute the lawsuit does not constitute a reasonable excuse for failure to simply serve the summons (12 Cal. App. 4th 39, 57) .

[d] Unreasonable Delay in Service May Give Rise to Inference of Prejudice

In Scarzella v. DeMers (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 , the plaintiff brought a malpractice action against his former attorney who represented him in a wrongful termination of employment action in which plaintiff prevailed. Both sides appealed that judgment and plaintiff was represented by new counsel on appeal. During the first appeal, plaintiff filed a complaint in propria persona against defendant, without disclosing the nature of the malpractice alleged. Two years and one month later, the court of appeal issued its opinion and affirmed the judgment, except as to the punitive damages issue. Thereafter, plaintiff, represented by counsel, filed a motion to change the venue of the malpractice action to the appropriate venue. After filing a first amended complaint, plaintiff served defendant with a summons and complaint in the malpractice action two years and four months after commencing the action.

Over three years after the complaint was filed, defendant moved for discretionary dismissal for failure to serve the summons and for failure to diligently prosecute the action by bringing it to trial within three years of filing pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(A). As to the failure to timely serve the summons, plaintiff contended that he wanted to ascertain the outcome of the appeal in the wrongful termination action before serving the summons in the malpractice action. He also argued that he was advised that if the malpractice action was not filed when it was that he might waive his right to pursue any claim against his former attorney and that he did not intend to pursue it if he was entirely successful on appeal. Moreover, he declared that a representative of defendant's insurance company learned of the malpractice complaint during the appeal. The trial court granted defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to complete service within two years after commencement of the action, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1). It opined that plaintiff's delay in moving the litigation to the proper venue was an attempt to evade the local rules of that forum which required prompt service under the Trial Court Reduction Delay Act of 1986 (17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1766-1767) .

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that the question of whether dismissal is appropriate under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) is within the trial court's discretion (17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1768) . It further stated that as to service of summons, delay attributed to awaiting the outcome of related proceedings with a direct bearing on the action in which summons is not timely filed is not excusable per se. It inferred an inherent prejudice in a failure to serve summons in a timely manner and rejected plaintiff's argument that defendant learned of the pendency of the complaint prior to service. The court stated that knowledge of the complaint, obtained despite plaintiff's subterfuge in filing it in the wrong forum, was not equivalent to the notice provided by service of the summons and complaint. The defendant is not obliged to provoke or advance the litigation prior to the service of process. Moreover, the complaint on file was so nondescript that it gave no effective notice of the nature of plaintiff's claim (17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1771) .

Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hospital (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 , involved three separate actions against a hospital and other defendants by a physician alleging breach of his radiology contract. The first action was filed in state court on August 30, 1985. Defendants answered the complaint and discovery commenced until June 1986, when the parties took no further action in the case. Plaintiff filed a federal action against defendants on October 7, 1986, adding an antitrust and discrimination claim. In October 1989, plaintiff entered into a stipulation with defendants to a dismissal of his federal claims with prejudice and all other state claims without prejudice and the court dismissed the federal action on December 26, 1989. During the discussions leading to the dismissal of the federal action, plaintiff disclosed for the first time that two and one-half years earlier, on May 11, 1987, he had filed, but not served, a second state court action. Defendants acknowledged service of that complaint on March 6, 1990, two years and ten months after it was filed. In April, 1990, defendants moved to dismiss based on the failure to serve the complaint within two years from the filing of the complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420. The trial court granted the motion and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff conceded that defendants' whereabouts were known and they could have been served within the two-year statutory period but argued that defendants had adequate notice of the claims in the second state action because of the pendency of identical claims in the federal action. He further contended that the pendency of the federal action made it impracticable or futile to serve defendants and that defendants had failed to demonstrate that they were prejudiced by the delay in service. The court of appeal, however, found that the fact that defendants were aware of the claims asserted in the federal action neither excused plaintiff's protracted delay in serving the summons in the second state action nor did it negate the prejudice inherent in such a delay (6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1405) .

[e] Dismissal Statutes Apply When Defendant Is a Public Entity

The facts and procedural background of County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481 , are discussed under § 90.65[3][a]. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to dismiss the action, the court of appeal noted that plaintiff's counsel, in his opposition to the motion to dismiss, had argued that the filing of the government tort claim was sufficient to give the county notice. The trial court, in turn, had denied the motion based on its reasoning that a government claim changes the application of the dismissal statute; the main purpose of dismissal for lack of diligence is to preclude the "ambush" of a stale claim, but once a claim is filed there is no ambush (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1208) . The court of appeal rejected this reasoning. The court pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 373(e) (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)) (setting forth the factors which must be considered in ruling on a discretionary dismissal) make no distinction between service on government entities or on any different category of defendants (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1209) . The court said that the filing of a government tort claim is not equivalent to the service of summons in a lawsuit, that, until defendant was served with summons, it was under no legal duty to search the records to see if a complaint had been filed or to take any steps in the pending action, that a defendant has no legal duty to do anything more than meet the plaintiff step by step, beginning with the service of summons, and that the purposes of the dismissal statutes are defeated by carving out exceptions to the statutes based on who the defendant is (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1211-1212) . Permitting a plaintiff who has displayed a total lack of diligence in the prosecution of the civil action and who has failed to effect service during a lengthy unexcusable delay to pursue a lawsuit merely because the defendant is a public entity clearly frustrates the policy underlying the dismissal statute. While plaintiffs must satisfy the government claims act as a prerequisite to tort suits against public entities, the Legislature has not excused those plaintiffs from the statutory mandate to prosecute their tort actions diligently. The dismissal statutes apply to all plaintiffs and to all defendants, including those defendants which are public entities (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1212) .

[f] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

The facts and procedural background of Scarzella v. DeMers (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 , are discussed under § 90.65[3][d]. In affirming the dismissal of the action, the court of appeal noted that a dismissal for failure to serve summons within two years under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) is a matter within the discretion of the trial court (17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1769-1770) . The standard of excuse for delay in service of summons is more stringent than that applicable to a delay in bringing a matter to trial. Since plaintiff did not establish that the failure to timely serve the summons was beyond his control, the court found that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the action (17 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1770-1771) .

Trailmobile, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 259 Cal. Rptr. 100 , arose out of an action by a forklift operator who was injured when the forklift she was driving fell through the floor of a trailer manufactured by a defendant. The manufacturer, who was not served with process until 27 months after the complaint was filed, moved for dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) for failure to serve process within two years. In opposing the motion, plaintiff's attorney set forth as an excuse for the delay only that he had unspecified difficulties gathering information from the Army base on which the accident had occurred, and made vague references to settlement negotiations with another defendant. The trial court denied the motion.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to enter a new order granting the motion. The appellate court pointed out that a reviewing court generally will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial court absent a clear abuse of discretion, and that the burden was on petitioner to establish such abuse, but added that although discretion is vested in the trial judge, that discretion is not unfettered, that it cannot be exercised arbitrarily, but must be an impartial discretion to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law and in a manner to subserve the ends of substantial justice (210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1455) . The appellate court declared itself mindful of the general policy favoring trial on the merits over termination of a case on procedural grounds but said that policy cannot be indiscriminately applied so as to render impotent the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 (210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1455) . The court said that to avoid dismissal, a plaintiff who has delayed prosecution beyond the discretionary deadlines must make some showing that the delay was excusable (210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1455-1456) , and concluded that the plaintiff had made no such showing (210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1456) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Service May Give Rise to Inference of Prejudice

The facts and procedural background of County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481 , are discussed in § 90.65[3][a]. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to dismiss the action, the court of appeal noted that plaintiff's counsel, in opposing to the motion to dismiss, had contended that the filing of the government tort claim was sufficient to give the county notice of the issues to be raised so that the county could not assert prejudice resulting from the delay (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1208) . Rejecting this argument, the court said that, as a general rule, courts arereceptive to an inference of prejudice when there has been an unreasonable delay in service, and that an unjustified delay in serving the summons and complaint is accorded less appellate tolerance than one in which service was timely but the case was not diligently pursued (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1210) . Quoting Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 402-403, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (discussed in § 90.51[3][a]), the court said that delay in effecting service constitutes a particularly pernicious form of delay in terms of potential prejudice. The defendant, during the period of that delay, may be unaware that the action has been filed and thus not alerted to the necessity for making discovery, interviewing witnesses, and preserving evidence essential to the defense, and that, even if witnesses do not become unavailable, their memories of details such as times and dates and specific words used in critical conversations will fade (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1210) . The court pointed out that the superior court file in the action reflected a total absence of activity between the filing of the complaint and the court's notice of intent to dismiss, and that plaintiff's argument that he was conducting informal discovery during the lengthy delay merely provided support for the county's contention that it was prejudiced in that the delay denied the county the reasonable opportunity to question the witnesses and preserve their testimony before memories of details faded (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1211) . The court said that an inference of prejudice was especially appropriate as the case was based on the allegedly wrongful conduct of individuals and the extent to which they and witnesses recalled the incident giving rise to the action. Nearly four years had passed between the incident and the service of the complaint, effectively denying the county the right to gather evidence and conduct meaningful discovery and that, to accept plaintiff's argument, would, in effect, reward unreasonable procrastination to the detriment of the defendant (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1211) .

[b] Denial of Motion as Abuse of Discretion

Trailmobile, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 259 Cal. Rptr. 100 , arose out of an action by a forklift operator who was injured when the forklift she was driving fell through the floor of a trailer manufactured by a defendant. The manufacturer, who was not served with process until 27 months after the complaint was filed, moved for dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420(a)(1) (failure to serve process within two years). In opposing the motion, plaintiff's attorney set forth as excuse for the delay only that he had unspecified difficulties gathering information from the Army base on which the accident had occurred, and made vague references to settlement negotiations with another defendant. The trial court denied the motion. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion and to enter a new order granting the motion. The appellate court pointed out that a reviewing court generally will not substitute its judgment for that of the trial court in the absence of a clear abuse of discretion, and that the burden was on petitioner to establish such abuse, but added that although discretion is vested in the trial judge, that discretion is not unfettered, that it cannot be exercised arbitrarily, but must be an impartial discretion to be exercised in conformity with the spirit of the law and in a manner to subserve the ends of substantial justice. The appellate court declared itself mindful of the general policy favoring trial on the merits over termination of a case on procedural grounds but said that policy cannot be indiscriminately applied so as to render impotent the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420. The court said that, to avoid dismissal, a plaintiff who has delayed prosecution beyond the discretionary deadlines must make some showing that the lack of activity was excusable, and concluded that the plaintiff had made no such showing (210 Cal. App. 3d 1451, 1456) .

The facts and procedural background of County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 250 Cal. Rptr. 481 , are discussed in § 90.65[3][a]. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to dismiss the action, the court found: (1) the government tort claim did not satisfy the purpose of the dismissal statutes as to delay after the complaint was filed; (2) plaintiff's delay in serving the complaint was unreasonable and inexcusable; (3) the county had no duty to search the records to determine whether a complaint had been filed; and (4) the unreasonable delay gave rise to an inference that the county had been prejudiced by loss of the opportunity to participate fully in discovery and to fully investigate the matter (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1212-1213) . Weighing all the factors, the appellate court concluded that the county had satisfied its burden of showing a manifest abuse of discretion by the trial court and that it would be an injustice not to dismiss the action (203 Cal. App. 3d 1205, 1212-1213) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
1. Dismissal For Failure To Serve Summons and Complaint and File Proof of Service of Summons

9-90 California Points & Authorities §§ 90.66-90.79

[Reserved]

§§ 90.66[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.80

§ 90.80 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff,	)	DISMISS ACTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE ACTION MUST BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.360 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE BECAUSE IT WAS NOT BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL] WITHIN THE TIME PERIOD SPECIFIED IN SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE].

[EITHER, if no trial occurred]

A. Statutory Requirements. An action must be dismissed by the court on its own or the defendant's motion, after notice to the parties, if it is not brought to trial within five years after it is commenced against the defendant (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360(a)).

[OR, if new trial did not occur and no appeal was taken]

A. Statutory Requirements. If a new trial is granted after judgment in an action and no appeal is taken, the action must be dismissed by the court on its own or the defendant's motion, after notice to the parties, if it is not brought again to trial within three years after the order granting the new trial is entered (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(2), 583.360(a)).

[OR, if new trial after appeal did not occur]

A. Statutory Requirements. If on appeal in an action an order granting a new trial is affirmed or a judgment is reversed and the action is remanded for a new trial, the action must be dismissed by the court on its own or the defendant's motion, after notice to the parties, if it is not brought again to trial within three years after the remittitur is filed by the clerk of the trial court (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(3), 583.360(a)).

[OR, if retrial did not occur because of mistrial]

A. Statutory Requirements. If a trial is commenced in an action but no judgment is entered because of a mistrial or because a jury is unable to reach a decision, the action must be dismissed by the court on its own or the defendant's motion, after notice to the parties, if it is not brought again to trial within three years after the order declaring the mistrial or disagreement with the jury is entered (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(1), 583.360(a)).

[CONTINUE]

B. Dismissal Mandatory. Dismissal of an action pursuant to Section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure is mandatory in the sense that if the action is not brought to _____ [trial within the period provided in Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure or a new trial within the period provided in Section 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure], the court is without discretion to refuse dismissal unless the plaintiff can establish an extension, excuse, or exception expressly provided by statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360(b); see andersen v. Superior Court (1921) 187 Cal. 95, 97, 200 P. 963 ; Fannin Corp. v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 745, 749, 111 Cal. Rptr. 920).

[Optional] C. Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to Trial. The statutory period described in Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure runs from the date of filing of the original complaint against the defendant [and is not affected by the filing of an amended complaint stating the same cause of action against the same defendant] (see Davalos v. County of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 57, 63, 190 Cal. Rptr. 711).

[Optional] D. Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to New Trial After Appeal. The statutory period described in Section 583.320(a)(3) of the Code of Civil Procedure, which requires that an action that has been remanded for new trial following an appeal be retried within three years, begins to run on the filing of the remittitur in the trial court, whether the decision expressly provides for a new trial, is an unqualified reversal, or simply directs the overruling of a demurrer (see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3); McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 532-533, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338).

[Optional] E. When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial. The requirement that an action be brought to trial or new trial within a specified period of time is not satisfied unless a jury is impaneled, a witness is called who testifies, or there has otherwise been a determination of law or fact that brings the action to the stage of final disposition (see McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 531-532, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338 ; Weeks v. Roberts (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 802, 805, 69 Cal. Rptr. 305, 442 P.2d 361).

[Optional] F. No Exceptions to Mandatory Dismissal Apply. Exceptions to mandatory dismissal include written stipulations or oral agreements made in open court extending the five-year time period; exclusion from the computation of the five years any time period during which the jurisdiction of the court was suspended or the prosecution of the action was stayed; and bringing the action to trial was impossible, impracticable, or futile (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.330(a), (b), 583.340(a)-(c); Jordan v. Superstar Sandcars (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1420, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5) .

[Optional] G. Equitable Estoppel Does Not Bar Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial Within Five Years. Equitable estoppel does not bar mandatory dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial within five years where plaintiff is aware of the date when the five-year period ends (Jordan v. Superstar Standcars (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for mandatory dismissal on the ground that the action has not been brought to trial or new trial within the period required under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Optional Paragraphs C and D may be used if there is a question concerning when the applicable period began. Optional Paragraph E may be used if there is a question regarding whether a trial or new trial has occurred for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360.

Additional memoranda supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing the action to trial or new trial are set out in §§ 90.99 -90.105. These memoranda are intended for use as supplemental points and authorities, to be submitted in response to any opposition to the motion for dismissal. Supplemental memoranda are expressly authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing memorandum may be combined with these additional memoranda, when counsel wishes to anticipate any known ground for opposition.

If there is a possibility that the mandatory period may be inapplicable, counsel may wish to combine these points and authorities with others that support a motion for discretionary dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial or new trial within the periods specified under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) or (3) [see § 90.83].

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should indicate the date the complaint was filed against defendant who is moving for dismissal, because the five-year period for bringing an action to trial commences when the complaint is filed against that defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 350 (action commences when complaint is filed), 583.310 (action must be brought to trial within five years "after the action is commenced against the defendant")].

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to motions to dismiss actions pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, based on the time periods for bringing actions to trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310] or retrial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320], see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in §§ 90.86 -90.96 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dismissal Mandatory

In Andersen v. Superior Court (1921) 187 Cal. 95, 200 P. 963 , defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate from the Supreme Court to compel the trial court to dismiss the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring it to trial within five years.

The Court granted the writ, holding that the failure of plaintiffs to bring the action to trial within the statutory period was clear and unjustifiable (187 Cal. 95, 103) . The requirement of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 for bringing an action to trial within five years is mandatory, and the trial court is without discretion to refuse an order of dismissal when it appears that the action has not been brought to trial within the prescribed period and no stipulation in writing to extend thetime has been made (187 Cal. 95, 97) . The mere condition that some question of fact must be determined before the court may act under this mandatory provision of law does not make the act dependent upon judicial discretion (187 Cal. 95, 99) .

Fannin Corp. v. Superior Court (1974) 36 Cal. App. 3d 745, 111 Cal. Rptr. 920 , was a proceeding for a writ of prohibition to prevent the trial court from proceeding with a trial after it had denied petitioner's motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360].

The court of appeal issued the writ, holding that after excluding the time that had elapsed during a prior appeal, the five-year statutory period had expired without the case coming to trial, and under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b), dismissal was mandatory if the statutory period had elapsed (36 Cal. App. 3d 745, 749-750) . The court conceded that there were both statutory and decisional exceptions to the mandatory dismissal requirement of the statute but found that none of them applied in this case (36 Cal. App. 3d 745, 753-754) .

[b] Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to Trial

Davalos v. County of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 57, 190 Cal. Rptr. 711 , was an action by a surviving wife for wrongful death based on medical negligence against a county hospital for the death of her husband. Plaintiff filed suit after presenting a claim to the county but before the statutory period for a reply to the claim had expired. She filed an amended complaint after the reply period had expired, alleging that the claim had been denied by operation of law. Some six months later she obtained a court order relieving her of the need to file a late claim [see Gov. Code § 946.6], after which defendant filed an answer. Defendant moved to dismiss the action about five years and seven months after the date of original filing pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. The trial court granted the motion, and plaintiff appealed, claiming that the period for bringing an action to trial was tolled until she obtained the court order relieving her of the need to file a late claim.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. It held that in this situation, in which a complaint was prematurely filed and compliance with a statute regulating claims against public entities was mandatory [see Gov. Code § 945.4], the time period utilized by plaintiff to effect compliance with the claim requirements did not toll the five-year period set forth in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b). Therefore, that period began to run from the date of filing of her original complaint, and not from the date of the court's order permitting plaintiff to proceed without filing a late claim. The court said that this order should be deemed equivalent to a right to amend the premature complaint, and any amendment would relate back to the date of the original filing (142 Cal. App. 3d 57, 62-63) .

[c] Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to New Trial After Appeal

In McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338 , the trial court dismissed the action after sustaining defendant's demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed and the court of appeal reversed. Subsequently, defendant moved for dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial within three years after filing of the remittitur under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3)]. The trial court denied the motion, and defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The Supreme Court issued a writ of mandate requiring dismissal (8 Cal. 3d 527, 530, 534) . The Court rejected plaintiff's contention that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 did not apply because there had been no remand for a new trial. Although the court of appeal merely directed the trial court to overrule the demurrer, a cause is remanded for a new trial on the filing of the remittitur in the trial court whether the decision expressly provides so, is an unqualified reversal, or, as here, contains a direction regarding only the overruling of the demurrer (8 Cal. 3d 527, 532-533) .

[d] When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial

The facts and procedural background of McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338 , are discussed under § 90.80[3][c]. In that case, the Court rejected plaintiff's argument that the three-year statute applied only to actions reversed after trial on the merits. A trial occurs, for purposes of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, if there is a determination or examination of an issue of law or fact which brings the action to a stage where final disposition is to be made. A hearing on a demurrer constitutes a trial if ruling on the demurrer is a final determination of the case (8 Cal. 3d 527, 531-532) .

In Weeks v. Roberts (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 802, 69 Cal. Rptr. 305, 442 P.2d 361 , plaintiff made a motion, 28 days before the five-year statute was to run, to set the case specially for trial. The court set trial for a date three days before the end of the five-year period. A week later, defendant moved to vacate the trial date. The trial court granted defendant's motion, finding that plaintiff's failure to allow sufficient time for ordinary trial setting was inexcusable. After the five-year period elapsed, defendant successfully moved to dismiss the action and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the dismissal, holding that the preferential setting was properly granted and that the trial court did not have the discretion to vacate the trial date without setting another date within the statute(68 Cal. 2d 802, 807-808) . The Court noted that a trial court has the discretion to dismiss the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430] any time after the lapse of two years but cannot dismiss the case in the guise of a refusal to set the case specially for trial (68 Cal. 2d 802, 805, 807) . In its discussion of the mandatory portion of the former dismissal statute [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360], the Court noted that dismissal on expiration of the five-year period is mandatory unless trial has commenced or delay is excusable. A case may be brought to trial merely by empaneling a jury or calling one witness who testifies (68 Cal. 2d 802, 805) .

[e] No Exceptions to Mandatory Dismissal Apply

In Jordan v. Superstar Sandcars (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5, in 2003, plaintiffs filed a complaint against defendants for breach of contract, fraud, breach of warranties, and negligent repair, in connection with the sale of allegedly defective dune buggies. In 2006, plaintiffs amended their complaint to add a defendant. Defendants filed numerous demurrers and motions to strike, and plaintiffs filed three amended complaints. The third amended complaint was filed in January 2008. In January 2008, the trial court held a case management conference. The trial court noted a trial date had not been set but set a trial status conference for February 2008. The court noted that new courtrooms were available for trying civil cases. Defense counsel appeared at the TSC, but plaintiffs' attorney was unavailable. The court erroneously assumed that the only defendant remaining in the action was the defendant added in 2006. The trial court postponed setting the trial at the February hearing and continued the TSC to March 2008 and again to June 2008. In May 2008, the trial court overruled the demurrer of the defendant added in 2006 to the third amended complaint and denied his motion to strike. During the hearing, plaintiffs requested the trial court to continue the June TSC a few of months, and the trial court accordingly continued the TSC to August. In June, defendant answered the third amended complaint. In August 2008, defendants filed a motion to dismiss plaintiffs' complaint for failure to prosecute the case within five years. Plaintiffs filed opposition, arguing that it had been impractical and impossible to try the case within the five-year period due to court congestion and the two moratoriums on civil trials in 2004 and 2005. At the TSC hearing in August, defense counsel objected to setting the case for trial because defendants of the motion to dismiss. The court stated the motion was not before it and set the trial for December. In October, the trial court heard and granted the motion to dismiss, finding the five-year period to try the case was not tolled (182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1419-1420).

The Court of Appeal affirmed. Plaintiffs acknowledged the case was not brought to trial within five years as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. However, they asserted the five-year period was tolled for at least 12 weeks due to the trial court twice imposing a moratorium on civil trials, and there was an ongoing de facto moratorium on all but priority cases. The court found that the third statutory exception to mandatory dismissal, bringing the action to trial was impossible, impracticable, or futile [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.330(a), (b), 583.340(a-c)] did not apply. Time consumed by the delay caused by ordinary incidents of proceedings, like disposition of demurrer, amendment of pleadings, and the normal time of waiting for a place on the court's calendar, are not within the contemplation of the exceptions (182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1420-1421) . The determination of whether the prosecution of an action was indeed impossible, impracticable, or futile during any period of time, and hence, the determination of whether the impossibility exception to the five-year statute applies, is within the trial court's discretion. Plaintiffs acknowledged the moratorium periods in 2004 and 2005 were remote in time relative to the five-year statutory cutoff in June 2008, and did not prevent or interfere with plaintiffs prosecuting their case as plaintiffs were not ready for trial at the time of the moratoriums. With regard to the alleged de facto moratorium during the final year within which plaintiffs were required to bring their case to trial, it was well established that few civil cases were being tried due to the backlog in cases. Nevertheless, the record demonstrated that cases approaching the five-year cutoff were being tried. Thus, plaintiffs failed to establish that, had they been reasonably diligent and requested their case be tried before the five-year period ran in June 2008, their case would not have been tried (182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1421) . Furthermore, plaintiffs were not reasonably diligent in bringing the case to trial within five years. There were hearings in January, February, March, April, and May 2008, during which plaintiffs could have requested the matter be tried before June 2008, due to the impending expiration of the five-year period. Plaintiffs failed to do so, and did not file a motion for a priority trial setting. The obligation that plaintiff monitor the case in the trial court, keep track of relevant dates, and determine whether any filing, scheduling, or calendaring errors occurred increased as the five-year deadline approached. Plaintiffs took no steps to set the case for trial before the expiration of the five-year period in June 2008. Thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing plaintiffs' action based on the finding that plaintiffs failed to establish that bringing the action to trial was impossible, impracticable, or futile (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c); 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1421).

[f] Equitable Estoppel Does Not Bar Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial Within Five Years.

The facts and proceeding in Jordan v. Superstar Sandcars (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 107 Cal. Rptr. 3d 5 is discussed in [e], above. Plaintiffs contended defendants were estopped from relying on the five-year dismissal statute, because defense counsel submitted a declaration stating he was not available for trial until after September 2008, leading plaintiffs to believe defendants did not object to trying the case after the five-year trial deadline of June 2008. The Court of Appeal first identified the elements of equitable estoppel (182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1422-1423) :

- The party to be estopped was aware of the true facts.
- The party to be estopped either intended that its act or omission be acted upon, or so acted that the party asserting estoppel has a right to believe it was intended.
- The party asserting estoppel was unaware of the true facts.
- The party asserting estoppel relied on the other party's conduct to its detriment.

The court then found that the trial court appropriately rejected the doctrine of equitable estoppel since plaintiffs were aware the five-year trial period ran in June 2008, and it was not reasonable to assume defendants were willing to waive the deadline. Defense counsel was obligated to tell the court when he was unavailable for trial. The fact that defense counsel's notice of unavailability extended beyond the five-year cutoff date did not constitute any misrepresentation or waiver of the five-year period. Any ambiguity or confusion created by defense counsel mentioning his unavailability beyond the cutoff date could have been clarified by plaintiffs' counsel, who was responsible for insuring the case was tried before the five-year period expired. Further, plaintiffs showed no conduct on the part of defendants that would have lulled plaintiffs into a reasonable false sense of security (182 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial

In Sagi Plumbing v. Chartered Construction Corporation (2004) 123 Cal. App. 4th 443, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 835 , plaintiff, a plumbing contractor, sued defendant, a general contractor, for breach of contract based on defendant's failure to pay on three unrelated projects. The parties agreed to bifurcate the action and to try first the cause of action arising out of one project. After that trial was completed, plaintiff did nothing to bring the other action to trial other than to file a notice of trial and attend a status conference. Defendant brought a motion to dismiss the two remaining causes of action based upon plaintiff's failure to bring them to trial within five years. The appellate court held that the plaintiff's failure to bring the remaining two causes of action to trial within five years resulted in their involuntary dismissal. The court held that the earlier trial of issues unrelated and irrelevant to remaining two causes of action did not constitute commencement of trial on the remaining two causes of action (123 Cal. App. 4th 443, 449) .

In Finnie v. District No. 1 Pacific Coast Dist. etc. Assn. (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 1311, 12 Cal. Rptr. 2d 348 , plaintiff was expelled from defendant unions. He filed a petition for a writ of mandate alleging defendants' failure to follow their constitutions and bylaws in the expulsion proceedings. After reversing the judgment of dismissal on defendants' motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, the court of appeal issued a remittitur. The trial court then granted defendants' motion to dismiss on the ground of plaintiff's failure to bring the action to trial within five years of the filing of the complaint, and a judgment of dismissal was entered. Plaintiff moved to vacate the order and judgment of dismissal on the grounds that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3) gave plaintiff three years after remittitur to bring the action to trial if judgment is reversed on appeal and the case is remanded for a new trial. The court granted plaintiff's motion, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the order vacating the dismissal, following the reasoning of McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527 , discussed in § 90.80[3][d]. The court held that the earlier dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction was a "trial" for purposes of the three-year statute, and that there is no functional difference between a dismissal for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and the dismissal on statute of limitations grounds in McDonough (9 Cal. App. 4th 1311, 1318) .

In Hendrix v. Hendrix (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 859, 217 Cal. Rptr. 609 , plaintiff brought an action to recover real and personal property given to defendant by her husband. The court granted a motion in limine by defendant, to exclude any evidence of the incompetence of plaintiff's husband, on the ground that the pleadings did not properly raise the issue of incompetence. Plaintiff then amended her complaint and defendant answered it. Five years and two days after the original complaint was filed plaintiff filed an at-issue memorandum and notice of motion for calendar preference. Defendant's motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) was granted. Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal affirmed. The court defined "trial" for mandatory dismissal purposes as an examination before a competent tribunal, according to the law of the land, of questions of fact or of law put in issue by pleadings, for the purpose of determining the rights of the parties. The court said that the hearing on defendant's motion in limine was not a trial, because it did not involve a question of law or fact raised by the pleadings (171 Cal. App. 3d 859, 862) . The court's ruling on the motion in limine made no determination of plaintiff's rights under her existing cause of action (171 Cal. App. 3d 859, 863) .

In Central Mutual Ins. Co. v. Executive Motor Home Sales, Inc. (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 791, 192 Cal. Rptr. 169 , plaintiff sought review of dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) on the basis that the court clerk set the trial for two months after the expiration of the five-year period, with the acquiescence of defendant's counsel. The court of appeal held that plaintiff must show that it was impossible, impractical, or futile to bring the case to trial and said that the setting of a trial date by the court clerk was not such a showing. The plaintiff should have attempted to use the "trial-started" fiction to obtain one day or a short period of trial to avoid dismissal (143 Cal. App. 3d 791, 794-795) .

In Khoury v. Comprehensive Health Agency, Inc. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 714, 189 Cal. Rptr. 653 , plaintiff appealed the granting of a motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring the case to trial within five years. Plaintiff contended that an arbitration proceeding between plaintiff and defendant, consisting of 14 hearings and involving the same evidence, witnesses, and issues that would be presented at trial, was a partial trial, and that therefore a trial did commence within five years of filing the action for purposes of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b). The court of appeal rejected this argument, stating that an arbitration hearing conducted pursuant to the judicial arbitration rules for civil cases does notconstitute a trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (140 Cal. App. 3d 714, 719) .

In Brown v. Engstrom (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 152 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the parties executed a written stipulation for arbitration approximately 10 months before expiration of the five-year period described in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. Subsequently, while arbitration was still in progress, the period expired and the trial court granted a motion to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed, contending in part that the action was brought to trial by virtue of the holding of an arbitration hearing. The court of appeal rejected this argument. Even though a hearing was held in which one witness was called, an arbitration hearing cannot be considered a trial (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 518-519) . It does not lead to a final disposition of law or fact, because under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1616 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.826), a party can reject the award and obtain a trial (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 520) . However, the court did reverse on the ground that plaintiff could claim impossibility as an excuse (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 523-524) .

41 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.81

§ 90.81 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Judgment Not Yet Entered on Settlement Agreement

[1] FORM

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310 and 583.360 (see § 90.80).]

THE ACTION MUST BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.360 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE EVEN THOUGH THE PARTIES ENTERED INTO A SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT, BECAUSE NO PARTY HAS YET SOUGHT ENFORCEMENT OF THE SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT BY A MOTION UNDER SECTION 664.6 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, AND THE ACTION STILL HAS NOT BEEN BROUGHT TO TRIAL WITHIN THE TIME PERIOD SPECIFIED IN SECTION 583.310 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

Action Must Be Dismissed if Not Brought to Trial and Settlement Agreement Not Yet Enforced. If the parties have entered into a settlement agreement, but none have sought to enforce the agreement by a motion under Section 664.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, then there has been no final disposition of the underlying action, and the action consequently must be dismissed pursuant to Sections 583.310 and 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure if it has not been brought before the trier of fact within five years of its commencement (see Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 315, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for mandatory dismissal on the ground that, although the parties may have entered into a settlement agreement, that agreement was not enforced and judgment entered thereon by a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6, and plaintiff did not otherwise bring the action to trial within the period required under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. This form should be combined with the general points and authorities supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80.

This memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, defendant should state that plaintiff made no attempt to bring a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 to enforce the alleged settlement agreement, and that plaintiff made no attempt to bring the action to trial within the five-year period [see, e.g., Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 315-316, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310 and 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The point supported by conflicting authority in Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34 , set out in § 90.88, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by this point and authority.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action Must Be Dismissed if Not Brought to Trial and Settlement Agreement Not Yet Enforced

In Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208 , plaintiff brought an action in 1976 against defendants to recover a deed on real property. The parties reached an agreement at a pretrial conference on January 30, 1980, and decided to settle their claims. The action was then taken off calendar. In 1982, the defendants moved to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. Plaintiff opposed the motion, and argued that the settlement disposed of all issues to be tried and that dismissal was therefore inappropriate. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss, and plaintiff appealed.

The First District Court of Appeal, Division Two, affirmed the judgment, holding that defendants were entitled to a mandatory dismissal of the action because it was not brought to trial within the five-year period. The court explained that the action had not been finally disposed of, because no party had sought to enforce the settlement agreement and have judgment entered thereon by a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6. Thus, the fact that a settlement agreement had been entered into by the parties was irrelevant, and dismissal was required. However, the court noted that the settlement agreement was nevertheless still governed by the general principles of contract law (171 Cal. App. 3d 317) .

The court noted that its decision was in conflict with a recent decision by the Court of Appeal of the Second District, Division Two, Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34 , discussed in § 90.88[3][a] (171 Cal.

3d 312, 315-316). Moreover, in a subsequent decision by the Court of Appeal of the Sixth District, Schiro v. Curci (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 269 Cal. Rptr. 639 (discussed in § 90.88[3][b]), the court rejected the reasoning of Varwig and followed that of Gorman. The First District Court of Appeal, Division Five, has also rejected the reasoning of Varwig and followed Schiro and Gorman [see Canal Street, Ltd. v. Sorich (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 , (discussed in § 90.88[3][a])].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.82

§ 90.82 Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Expiration of Special Extension After Statutory Tolling [Code Civ. Proc. § 530.350]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.80.]

THE ACTION MUST BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.360 BECAUSE IT WAS NOT BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or NEW TRIAL] WITHIN THE TIME PERIOD SPECIFIED IN CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320] OR WITHIN THE SPECIAL SIX-MONTH EXCEPTION AFTER STATUTORY TOLLING CONTAINED IN CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.350.

Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring to Trial Within Special Exception After Statutory Tolling. An action is subject to mandatory dismissal if not brought to trial within six months after the end of the period of statutory tolling of the date by which it must be brought to trial (Greene v. Howmedica, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 912, 915).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for mandatory dismissal on the ground that the action has not been brought to trial or new trial within the special six-month exception period after statutory tolling of the date by which it must be brought to trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should show that six months has elapsed between the date on which the tolling period ended and the date, if any, when trial setting was requested or granted.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring to Trial Within Special Exception After Statutory Tolling

In Greene v. Howmedica, Inc. (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th 912 , plaintiff in a products liability action relating to a defective hipbone prosthesis moved for preferential trial setting 48 days before the expiration of the five-year dismissal statute. The motion was denied and the action dismissed. After a successful appeal, the action was ordered set for trial. Over six months after the remittitur was filed in the trial court, plaintiff had not made any application for trial setting, and the case was not brought to trial. The case was dismissed. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that the five-year period had never run because of the tolling of the statuteand that the appellate decision imposed an affirmative duty of trial setting on the trial court (13 Cal. App. 4th 912, 914-915) .

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal, holding that when the reversal occurred and trial setting was ordered, the six-month provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350 became operative, and appellant could not, at this late date, change his theory (13 Cal. App. 4th 912, 915) . The court also held that it was plaintiff's affirmative obligation, not the trial court's duty, to see that the action was brought to trial within the five-year period. In this regard, the court distinguished cases in which a specific statutory provision imposed a duty on the trial court sua sponte to recalendar a case after the tolling event terminated. The court also noted that even if the plaintiff believed the case would be set automatically, plaintiff would have some obligation to bring the matter to someone's attention (13 Cal. App. 4th 912, 915) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.83

§ 90.83 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 3.1340, 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DISMISS
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE ACTION SHOULD BE DISMISSED PURSUANT TO THE COURT'S DISCRETIONARY POWER UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.410 BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS NOT BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL WITHIN THREE YEARS UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.420(a)(2)(A) or TRIAL WITHIN TWO YEARS UNDER CALIFORNIA RULES OF COURT, RULE 3.1340 or A NEW TRIAL WITHIN TWO YEARS UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.420(a)(3)] AND DISMISSAL IS OTHERWISE APPROPRIATE UNDER ALL THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. Discretionary Dismissal. The court may in its discretion dismiss an action for delay in prosecution pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure, either on its own motion or on motion of the defendant, if to do so appears to the court to be appropriate under the circumstances of the case (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a)).

[EITHER, if the action was not brought to trial within three years]

B. Lapse of Minimum Period. The court may dismiss an action pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution if the action is not brought to trial within three years after it is commenced against the defendant, unless otherwise prescribed by rule under Section 583.420(a)(2)(B)of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(A)).

[OR, effective January 1, 1990, if the action was not brought to trial within two years]

B. Lapse of Minimum Period. The court may dismiss an action pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution if the action is not brought to trial or conditionally settled within two years after the action is commenced against the defendant (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340(a); see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B)).

[OR, if no new trial within two years of mistrial or hung jury]

B. Lapse of Minimum Period. The court may dismiss an action pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution if trial is commenced but no judgment is entered because of a mistrial or because the jury was unable to reach a decision, and the action is not brought to a new trial within two years after the order is entered declaring a mistrial or disagreement of the jury (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3)(A)).

[OR, if no new trial within two years of order after judgment]

B. Lapse of Minimum Period. The court may dismiss an action pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution if a new trial is granted after judgment and no appeal is taken, and the action is not brought to a new trial within two years after the order granting the new trial is entered (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3)(B)).

[OR, if no new trial within two years after remittitur is filed]

B. Lapse of Minimum Period. The court may dismiss an action pursuant to sections 583.410-584.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure for delay in prosecution if on appeal an order granting a new trial is affirmed or a judgment is reversed and the action is remanded for a new trial, and the action is not brought to a new trial within two years after the remittitur is filed by the clerk of the trial court (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3)(C)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to Trial. [See § 90.80, Paragraph C.]

[Optional] D. Beginning of Period for Bringing Action to New Trial After Appeal. [See § 90.80, Paragraph D.]

[Optional] E. When Action Is Deemed to Have Been Brought to Trial or New Trial. [See § 90.80, Paragraph E.]

F. Other Criteria to Be Considered. Dismissal in the court's discretion shall be in accordance with the criteria prescribed by the Judicial Council (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(b)). These criteria require consideration of all matters relevant to a proper determination of the motion, including _____ [specify particular matters enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) that are relevant to the determination of the present motion, e.g., the nature of any extensions of time or other delay attributable to either party] (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)).

[EITHER]

G. Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay. Discretionary dismissal of an action pursuant to sections 583.410 and 583.420 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be granted unless plaintiff makes some showing of good cause or justification that explains and justifies the total delay in bringing the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] (see White v. Mortgage Finance Corp. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 770, 774-775, 191 Cal. Rptr. 277 ; Kunzler v. Karde (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688-689, 167 Cal. Rptr. 425).

[OR]

G. Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay. When a defendant has shown that discretionary dismissal is warranted through a showing of some prejudice or the presence of factors under Rule 3.1342(e) of the California Rules of Court that militate in favor of dismissal, the burden shifts to the plaintiff to show excusable delay. If none is shown by the plaintiff under these circumstances, the trial court does not abuse its discretion in dismissing the action (see San Ramon Valley Unified School Dist. v. Wheatley-Jacobsen, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1057, 221 Cal. Rptr. 342).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] H. Burden of Showing Good Cause Increases Over Time. The showing required to justify delay in prosecuting an action increases as the time since the action was filed increases (see andre v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 843, 118 Cal. Rptr. 95).

[Optional] I. Prejudice Inherent in Delay. If delay in prosecuting the action is unjustified, prejudice to defendant is presumed to occur (Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 401, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912).

[Optional] J. Prejudice to Defendant Not Necessary Factor. Prejudice to the defendant is not a necessary factor to support a discretionary dismissal, because the policy of Sections 583.410-583.420 of the Code of Civil Procedure is also to expedite the administration of justice by compelling every person who files an action to prosecute it with promptness and diligence (Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal on the ground that the action has not been brought to trial or new trial within the applicable period set out under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) or (3) [see § 90.83[3][a], and Alternative Paragraph B, above, and that the circumstances of the case otherwise indicate that dismissal is appropriate [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410].

Paragraph F of the foregoing form sets out that rule that the court must consider all relevant matters in ruling on a motion [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)], and also permits the moving party to add any particularly relevant factor that is specifically enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e). For further discussion of these factors, see § 90.83[3][b].

Optional Paragraphs C and D may be used if there is a question concerning when the applicable period began. Optional Paragraph E may be used if there is a question regarding whether a trial or new trial has occurred for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) or (3). Additional optional paragraphs relate to the prejudice to the moving party [Optional Paragraphs I, J] and to the increased burden of justifying delay as more time elapses [Optional Paragraph H].

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with others supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period set out under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see § 90.80]. They may also be combined in an appropriate case with points and authorities supporting a motion for mandatory [see § 90.50] or discretionary [see § 90.51] dismissal for delay in completing service.

The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)]. Thus, §§ 90.86-90.96, which set out points and authorities opposing a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial, may also be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for discretionary dismissal supported by the foregoing form. Conversely, the foregoing points and authorities may be supplemented by, or combined with, the points and authorities set out in §§ 90.99 -90.105, which respond to various grounds for opposition set out in §§ 90.86 -90.96.

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if plaintiff's delay in bringing the action to trial or a new trial is unexplained, counsel for defendant should state facts showing that plaintiff would have had sufficient time to bring the action to trial if reasonable diligence had been used [see, e.g., White v. Mortgage Finance Corp. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 770, 774-775, 191 Cal. Rptr. 277 (plaintiff's explanation, accounting for only small portion of delay of almost five years, as insufficient)].

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in §§ 90.98 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lapse of Minimum Period

A court may not dismiss an action under Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430 for delay in bringing the action to trial unless one of the following conditions has occurred:

(1) The action is not brought to trial within three years after it is commenced against the defendant, unless otherwise prescribed by rule under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B) [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(A); see the first Alternative Paragraph B, above].

(2) The action is not brought to trial within two years after it is commenced against the defendant if the Judicial Council adopts a rule to that effect [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B)]. Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(B) is implemented by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340. Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340, the court may dismiss an action under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430 if the action has not been brought to trial or conditionally settled within two years after it was commenced against the defendant. "Conditionally settled" means (i) a settlement agreement conditions dismissal on the satisfactory completion of specified terms that are not to be fully performed within two years after the filing of the case, and (ii) notice of the settlement is filed with the court as provided under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1385 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340(a); see the second Alternative Paragraph B, above].

A court may not dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430 for delay in bringing the action again to trial unless one of the two-year time periods specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3) has elapsed [see the third, fourth, and fifth Alternative Paragraphs B, above].

[b] Other Criteria to Be Considered

Cal. Rules of Ct. 3.1342(e) sets out factors that must be considered by the court in ruling on a motion for discretionary dismissal brought either for failure to serve and return the summons or for failure to bring the case to trial or new trial [Cal. Rules of Ct. 3.1342(e); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(b), 583.420(a)]. The rule requires the court to consider all matters relevant to a proper determination of the motion, including the court's file in the case and the affidavits and declarations and supporting data submitted by the parties. When applicable, the court must also consider: (1) the availability of the moving party and other essential parties for service of process; (2) the diligence in seeking to effect service of process; (3) the extent to which the parties engaged in any settlement negotiations or discussions; (4) the diligence of the parties in pursuing discovery or other pretrial proceedings, including any extraordinary relief sought by either party; (5) the nature and complexity of the case; (6) the law applicable to the case, including the pendency of other litigation under a common set of facts or determinative of the legal or factual issues in the case; (7) the nature of any extensions of time or other delay attributable to either party; (8) the condition of the court's calendar and the availability of an earlier trial date if the matter was ready for trial; (9) whether the interests of justice are best served by dismissal or trial of the case; and (10) any other fact or circumstance relevant to a fair determination of the issue.

Cal. Rules of Ct. 3.1342(e) further provides that the court shall be guided by the policies set forth in Code Civ. Proc.

583.130. Under that statute, it is the policy of the state that a plaintiff shall proceed with reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action but that all parties shall cooperate in bringing the action to trial or other disposition. Except as otherwise provided by statute or rule, the policy favoring the right of the parties to make stipulations in their own interests and the policy favoring trial or other disposition of an action on the merits are generally to be preferred over the policy that requires dismissal for failure to proceed with reasonable diligence in the prosecution of an action.

[c] Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay

White v. Mortgage Finance Corp. (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 770, 191 Cal. Rptr. 277 , was an action to quiet title. Defendants successfully demurred to the original complaint, but plaintiffs were granted leave to amend and filed an amended complaint. During the pendency of the litigation, plaintiffs' attorney died, but a second was substituted within six months. On the date set for trial and 14 days before the expiration of the five-year period for bringing the action to trial under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310], the trial court granted defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420]. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. The court held that delay attributable to sickness or death of counsel or of the parties is not necessarily excusable; each case must be decided on its own facts. Here, the delay caused by the death of plaintiffs' counsel was minimal in view of the overall time of inactivity involved, and defendants' dismissal motions contained detailed reasons why they were prejudiced by the delay. The record did not reveal that plaintiffs' failure to bring their case to trial was caused by their counsel's death or delay in service of one of defendants. Therefore, the trial court's dismissal was justified and not an abuse of discretion (142 Cal. App. 3d 770, 774-775) .

In Kunzler v. Karde (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 167 Cal. Rptr. 425 , the trial court dismissed an action for fraud and conversion after a dismissal hearing on the court's own motion. It found that plaintiff had failed to justify a delay of over three years in prosecuting the action and had waived the 45-day-notice requirement on a dismissal motion, as provided by former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(a) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(a)].

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal, holding that there had been no abuse of the trial court's discretion (109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688) . Moreover, the court rejected plaintiff's reliance on United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 (discussed in § 90.98[3][b]). Contrary to the reasoning in United Farm Workers, the court held that a trial court may not in its discretion deny a motion to dismiss in the absence of any evidence of good cause for protracted delays (109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688-689) .

In San Ramon Valley Unified School Dist. v. Wheatley-Jacobsen, Inc. (1985) 175 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 221 Cal. Rptr. 342 , plaintiff filed a breach ofcontract action against numerous defendants. Defendant architects sought judicial arbitration, which was granted and which stayed the proceedings between plaintiff and those defendants. The arbitration did not commence until four years later, but resulted in settlement. As to the remaining defendants, however, plaintiff took no action in prosecuting its claim other than one request to produce documents and four depositions. Four years and ten months after filing the complaint, plaintiff moved to set specially the case for trial. One defendant countered with a motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420], which the court granted, mooting the request for special setting. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of discretionary dismissal, holding that the trial court had not abused its discretion in granting the dismissal. The court determined that the proper standard for review of the dismissal was whether the trial court had manifestly abused its discretion. In so holding, the court rejected the "plenary appellate scrutiny" standard enunciated in Hurtado v. Statewide Home Loan Co. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 213 Cal. Rptr. 712 (175 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1054) . (The ruling in Hurtado was later disapproved on this point in Shamblin v. Brattain (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 474, 479 fn 4, 243 Cal. Rptr. 902, 749 P.2d 339 .) In examining whether the trial court had abused its discretion, the court of appeal held that, if defendant has shown that dismissal is warranted due to prejudice or the presence of factors under Rule 373(e) (now see Cal Rules of Ct., Rule 3.342(e) of the California Rules of Court that militated in favor of dismissal, the burden shifts to plaintiff to show excusable delay. In the case at bar, defendants made the proper showing, and plaintiff failed to show excuse for his delay. Thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the dismissal (175 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1056-1058) .

[d] Burden of Showing Good Cause Increases Over Time

In andre v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 118 Cal. Rptr. 95 , plaintiff filed an at-issue memorandum eight months after filing the complaint, filed a certificate of readiness eight months later, and received a trial setting approximately four months after that. However, the case was continued once at defendant's request and twice at plaintiff's request for an additional year. It was then taken off calendar by plaintiff's counsel, who believed the matter was settled. Plaintiff refused to accept the settlement and, after her attorney withdrew from the case, took an additional five months to retain another attorney. Subsequently, a notice of motion to dismiss for want of prosecution pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] was served on plaintiff by the court on its own motion. After a hearing, the court dismissed the action, approximately eight months after plaintiff had retained new counsel. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. The court acknowledged that plaintiff may be able to demonstrate an abuse of discretion by a showing of good cause for delay in bringing the action to trial, which the trial court manifestly failed to recognize. Nevertheless, the burden was on the plaintiff to bring the case to trial, and as the time passed from two years nearer to five, the showing required to justify a failure to bring a case to trial grew greater (43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 843) . In this case, plaintiff made no showing that the delay in obtaining other legal representation was beyond her control; she merely listed the attorneys she had consulted and stated that for various reasons she did not retain any of them. Moreover, her new attorneys waited six weeks before the trial court filed its notice of motion to dismiss without attempting to reset the case for trial (43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 843-844) .

[e] Prejudice Inherent in Delay

The facts and procedural background of Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 , are discussed in § 90.51[3][a]. In Lopez, the court rejected plaintiff's assertion that defendant failed to show any adverse consequence or prejudice from plaintiff's delay. Prejudice is inherent in protracted delay and will be presumed when such delay is unjustified (91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 401) . Contrary to the decision in United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 236, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 (discussed in § 90.98[3][b]), this court was persuaded that prejudice to the defendant inheres in protracted delay (91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 402) .

[f] Prejudice to Defendant Not Necessary Factor

In Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , defendant city enacted an ordinance legalizing the operation of poker clubs. The city then rezoned a parcel of property controlled by defendant landowners, permitting its use for poker clubs. Plaintiff and another defendant, a limited partnership, each subsequently applied for poker club licenses. The city approved defendant partnership's license, but delayed consideration of plaintiff's application until plaintiff could acquire property on the rezoned parcel. Plaintiff brought suit, and the city thereafter formally denied plaintiff's application. Plaintiff subsequently filed an amended complaint alleging several causes of action against all defendants. Over two years later, one of the defendants, a partner in defendant limited partnership, moved for dismissal for failure to prosecute pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420]. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed, contending that the court abused its discretion because, among other things, defendants were not prejudiced by his failure to prosecute.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that even if the defendants were not prejudiced, the legislative policy underlying former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] is not grounded solely inprejudice to a defendant caused by delay. Its purpose is also to expedite the administration of justice by compelling every person who files an action to prosecute it with promptness and diligence (39 Cal. 3d 311, 332) .

Counsel should note that several courts of appeal have held that a court cannot grant a discretionary dismissal without a showing of actual prejudice [see Luti v. Graco, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 228, 235-236, 215 Cal. Rptr. 902 ; Troupe v. Courtney (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 930, 934-935, 215 Cal. Rptr. 703 ; Hurtado v. Statewide Home Loan Co. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1028-1032, 213 Cal. Rptr. 712] . However, it appears that these decisions have been impliedly disapproved by the Supreme Court's holding in Blank [see Wong v. Davidian (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 270, 253 Cal. Rptr. 675 ; Schumpert v. Tishman Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 598, 605, 243 Cal. Rptr. 810] . For a discussion of how prejudice to the defendant, though not required to justify dismissal, is still a factor weighing in favor of dismissal, see § 90.98[2][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Other Criteria to Be Considered

In Corlett v. Gordon (1980) 106 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 165 Cal. Rptr. 524 , the court of appeal affirmed dismissal of the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420], noting that factors to be considered in ruling on a motion to dismiss include the length of time since the filing of the complaint, the extent to which the parties had engaged in settlement negotiations, the parties' diligence in pursuing discovery or other pretrial proceedings, the nature and complexity of the case, the court's calendar, and whether the interests of justice would best be served by dismissal (106 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1013) . Rejecting plaintiff's argument that public policy requires allowance for the problems of small firms in handling large caseloads, the court also held that small and large law firms should be judged by the same standards. However, circumstances may exist in small firms, such as illness of one of its members, which might constitute good cause for delay in bringing an action to trial, thereby precluding discretionary dismissal (106 Cal. App. 3d 1005, 1014-1015) .

[b] Dismissal Proper Absent Good Cause for Delay

In Oskooi v. Fountain Valley Regional Hospital (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 233, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 769 , the court of appeal reversed the denial of a motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410 and 583.420 where the plaintiff's argument for the delay in prosecution was that he had not had the money to proceed. The lead opinion (Sonenshine, J.) addressed the question of when dismissal is mandatory under the discretionary dismissal statutes, and noted that the Denham v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65 , expressly disapproved prior cases which had held that a motion to dismiss must be granted unless opposed by an adequate showing of diligence or excuse for delay. The opinion stated that several courts have misinterpreted Denham as permitting the trial court discretion even in the absence of any showing of excusable delay, while the correct rule is that a trial court must grant a motion to dismiss when there is no showing of excusable delay (42 Cal. App. 4th 233, 240) . Addressing the plaintiff's excuse of lack of money, the opinion stated that there is no authority which gives even lip service to the concept that lack of economic resources is sufficient excuse for failure to prosecute with diligence, and that moreover, plaintiff's claim of poverty was not supported by the facts (42 Cal. App. 4th 233, 241-242) .

In Landry v. Berryessa Union School Dist. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 691, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 119 , a personal injury case for assault and battery, plaintiffs appealed after the trial court granted a defense motion to dismiss for delay in prosecution pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420. Plaintiffs attempted to show excusable delay by arguing that ongoing settlement discussions were taking place, and also suggested that defendant should be estopped from obtaining dismissal because it had attempted to lull the plaintiffs into a false sense of security by leading them to believe settlement was possible. The court of appeal stated that the trial court did not make express findings on the reasonableness of plaintiffs' explanations, but since express findings are not required, it presumed the court followed the law in making its determination. The court noted that notwithstanding plaintiffs' claims of diligent discovery efforts, they allowed seven and one-half months to go by without activity on the case. Similarly, the settlement discussions on which plaintiffs claimed to have relied did not commence until after an eleven month delay in activity (38 Cal. App. 4th 689) . The court thus affirmed the judgment of dismissal.

The facts and procedural background of Brown v. Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 164 Cal. Rptr. 445 , are discussed in § 90.51[3][a]. In Brown, the court of appeal upheld dismissal of the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) for a near three-year delay in effecting service of process on defendant. The court found plaintiff's contentions that the delay was occasioned by the need to garner medical information and by the burdensome workload on plaintiff's law firm were inadequate justification for the delay (105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 487-488) . It noted that a long delay in serving the complaint is particularly pernicious in that the passage of time may preclude the preparation of a defense by a defendant who is unaware of the suit (105 Cal. App. 3d 482, 488) .

Counsel should note that the court of appeal in Troupe v. Courtney (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 930, 934, 215 Cal. Rptr. 703 , criticized the holding in Brown that dismissal should be imposed as a sanction when plaintiff cannot justify the delay. However, the Troupe court's rationale, that dismissal is inappropriate withoutsome showing of prejudice, was impliedly disapproved by the Supreme Court in Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , discussed under § 90.83[3][f].

In Moore v. El Camino Hosp. Dist. (1978) 78 Cal. App. 3d 661, 144 Cal. Rptr. 314 , the court of appeal affirmed dismissal of the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420], holding that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing, since no evidence was presented by plaintiff explaining why the action had not been brought to trial. The unsworn representation of plaintiff's counsel concerning unexplained confusion at his office was not a compelling showing of good cause. Moreover, since none of plaintiff's points on appeal had any substance, the appeal was frivolous and a penalty was imposed against counsel (78 Cal. App. 3d 661, 664) .

In Farrar v. McCormick (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 701, 102 Cal. Rptr. 190 , the court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of plaintiff's action on the ground that the trial court had not abused its discretion in dismissing the action. A declaration filed by plaintiff's counsel opposing the motion for dismissal stated that discovery was not conducted during the first year because of settlement negotiations and that he did not appear at the settlement conference when the case was ordered off calendar because he had been disabled in an accident and later moved his offices, causing confusion for several months. However, this declaration failed to explain or justify the total delay of almost five years in bringing the case to trial and the specific inaction of 13 months between the time the case was ordered off calendar and the motion to set it specially for trial (25 Cal. App. 3d 701, 704) .

In Dunsmuir Masonic Temple v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 90 Cal. Rptr. 405 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate compelling dismissal of the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420], holding that plaintiff had failed to make any relevant showing of good cause for delay on which the trial court could exercise its discretion (12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 23) . Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 563-564, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 (discussed in § 90.60[3][b]), the court held, did not remove the plaintiff's obligation to make some showing of good cause on which the trial court may exercise its discretion. Here, plaintiff was bedridden and in great pain during much of the pendency of the case, but illness that does not handicap plaintiff from communicating with counsel or create other extenuating circumstances is insufficient to prevent a two-year dismissal (12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 21) . Furthermore, this case had remained stagnant without explanation for more than three years and its dismissal would have resulted in its removal from an overcrowded list of pending cases (12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 22) .

Counsel should note that the court of appeal in United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 234-235, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 , criticized the Dunsmuir court's interpretation of Denham as unduly restrictive and did not agree that the court is required to dismiss the action in the absence of some showing of good cause for the delay. For a form of points and authorities that opposes discretionary dismissal based on United Farm Workers, see § 90.98.

[c] Prejudice Inherent in Delay

In Schumpert v. Tishman Co. (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 598, 243 Cal. Rptr. 810 , the court of appeal, in affirming a discretionary dismissal for delay in service, noted that in a negligence case a presumption of prejudice is particularly apt when so much of importance turns on the actions and omissions of the various parties involved, and the extent to which the parties or witnesses recall the events giving rise to plaintiff's injuries. In such a case, defendants were denied the opportunity to question witnesses and preserve their testimony before their recollections became blurred by time (198 Cal. App. 3d 598, 606) .

[d] Prejudice to Defendant Not Necessary Factor

In Wong v. Davidian (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 253 Cal. Rptr. 675 , the court of appeal, in affirming a judgment of dismissal based on Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a)(discretionary dismissal), noted that defendant's showing of prejudice was weak. The court said that the courts remain divided on the issue of whether a discretionary dismissal must be supported by an affirmative showing of prejudice and that the Hurtado [Hurtado v. Statewide Home Loan Co. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1030, 213 Cal. Rptr. 712] line of cases held that the dismissal sanction cannot be imposed without a showing of actual prejudice (206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 269) . However, the court added that the Supreme Court impliedly disapproved that view in Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 (discussed under § 90.83[3][f]), when it affirmed a discretionary dismissal despite no showing of actual prejudice. The court said that other courts of appeal have noted that the Hurtado rationale is irreconcilable with Blank and should not be followed (206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 270) . The court, therefore, concluded it would follow the rule implicit in Blank and later cases, namely, lack of prejudice to a defendant remains a valid consideration when the plaintiff has acted diligently from the outset, but no affirmative showing of actual prejudice is necessary for defendant to be entitled to dismissal when the delay was unreasonable (206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 270) .

In Freedman v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 242 Cal. Rptr. 8 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment of dismissal, entered on an order granting defendants' motion to dismiss made four years and seven months after the action was filed, for delay in prosecution in not bringing the action to trial within three years. On appeal, plaintiff insisted that a defendant must always show actual prejudice, and that there was no such showing in the present case. With respect to the first point, the court said that, although three court of appealdecisions had advanced the notion that actual prejudice must always be shown (citing Luti v. Graco, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 228, 235-236, 215 Cal. Rptr. 902 ; Troupe v. Courtney (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 930, 934-935, 215 Cal. Rptr. 703 ; Hurtado v. Statewide Home Loan Co. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1029-1032, 213 Cal. Rptr. 712), these decisions had all been impliedly disapproved by the holding in Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 (discussed under § 90.83[3][f]), that a showing of actual prejudice was not required (196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 711) . The court added, however, that prejudice remains a factor and, with respect to the plaintiff's second point, stated that the defendants clearly had shown actual prejudice (196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 711) .

44 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.84

§ 90.84 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340, 3.1342]--Motion Made While Case Is Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

[1] FORM

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal for delay in bringing the action to trial, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340 (see § 90.83)].

THE COURT HAS POWER TO EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO DISMISS A CASE FOR DELAY IN PROSECUTION UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.410 WHILE THE CASE IS SUBMITTED TO JUDICIAL ARBITRATION UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 1141.10 ET SEQ. THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO DISMISS THIS CASE BECAUSE THE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO EXERCISE DUE DILIGENCE IN PROSECUTING _____ [THE ARBITRATION PROCEEDING or THE CASE PRIOR TO SUBMISSION TO ARBITRATION or THE CASE PRIOR TO AND DURING SUBMISSION TO ARBITRATION].

A. Court Retains Jurisdiction to Exercise Discretion to Dismiss Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration. Unlike true arbitration, in which the arbitration has a life of its own outside the judicial system, in judicial arbitration the matter is only on a sabbatical from the courthouse and the court retains full jurisdiction to dismiss for lack of diligent prosecution (Nanfito v. Superior Court (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 318-319, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876 ; see D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[Optional] B. Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence While Matter Is Submitted to Judicial Arbitration. A case ordered into judicial arbitration may be dismissed while the case remains in arbitration if the statutory time period for discretionary dismissal has elapsed and plaintiff has failed to exercise due diligence in prosecuting the arbitration (see D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 726, 727 n.3, 730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628).

[Optional] C. Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence Prior to Submission of Case to Judicial Arbitration. When the plaintiff elects arbitration near the end of the five-year mandatory period for bringing the case to trial, the court should consider the factors relevant to motions to dismiss under the discretionary dismissal provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.420 before entering an order for arbitration. If the court fails to do, and the case is submitted to arbitration, the court nonetheless retains jurisdiction to dismiss the action based on the pre-arbitration delay (Nanfito v. Superior Court (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 319-320, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876).

[Optional] D. Submission of Action to Judicial Arbitration Does Not Suspend Running of Time Periods Applicable to Discretionary Dismissal. Submission of an action to arbitration pursuant to sections 1141.10-1141.31 of the Code of Civil Procedure shall not suspend the running of time periods specified in sections 583.110-583.430 of the Code of Civil Procedure, except as provided in section 1141.17 of the Code of Civil Procedure(Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a)). Section 1141.17 suspends the time for bringing an action to trial only if the action is or remains submitted to arbitration more than four years and six months after plaintiff filed the action, and in that case tolls the period beginning four years and six months after plaintiff filed the action until the date a trial de novo is requested (Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b)). Even before Section 1141.17 was amended to limit its tolling provision to the last six months of the five year mandatory dismissal period, it was held that Section 1141.17 should not be interpreted to take away all discretionary power from the trial judge to dismiss a case without regard to delay or the dilatory tactics of a litigant so long as the case is in arbitration (D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a defendant in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal that is made while the case issubmitted to judicial arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq. It may be based on delay occurring during or before the case is submitted to arbitration, or both. The form should be combined with the general points and authorities supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal that are set out in § 90.83.

The form may be combined, if appropriate, with a memorandum in support of mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial [see §§ 90.80 and 90.105]. In some instances, however, the mandatory time period for bringing an action to trial is extended when an action is submitted to judicial arbitration [see § 90.96].

The memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of a plaintiff's complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should state facts showing the plaintiff has failed to exercise diligence in preparing for settlement or arbitration and in setting the arbitration for hearing.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion for discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Memoranda

For forms of memoranda relating to judicial arbitration generally, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Retains Jurisdiction to Exercise Discretion to Dismiss Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

The plaintiff in Nanfito v. Superior Court (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876 , unilaterally elected to submit the case to arbitration two months before the lawsuit's fifth anniversary. The defendant responded with a motion to dismiss for failure to diligently prosecute the action. Before defendant's motion was heard, the case was ordered to arbitration. When the motion to dismiss was heard, the judge decided that the order for arbitration stripped him of jurisdiction. The defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ directing the superior court to hear the motion to dismiss. The court noted that the power of a court to terminate litigation previously ordered to arbitration depends on the nature of the arbitration. In the case of judicial arbitration, the court held that the matter is only on sabbatical from the courthouse and that the superior court retains full jurisdiction to dismiss for lack of diligent prosecution (2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 319) .

The facts and procedural background of D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628 , are discussed under § 90.84[3][d]. Affirming dismissal of the action, the court framed the issue before it as being whether a case ordered into arbitration when it is more than two years old can be dismissed under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] while the case remains in arbitration. The court concluded that there is no prohibition against such a dismissal (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 726) .

[b] Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence While Matter Is Submitted to Judicial Arbitration

The facts and procedural background of D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628 , are discussed under § 90.84[3][d]. The trial court dismissed the case based on the plaintiff's lack of diligence during the two years and eight months the case submitted to arbitration. In affirming, the court of appeal held that the trial court did not err in considering the plaintiff's diligence during the time the matter was submitted to arbitration (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730) .

[c] Court May Consider Plaintiff's Lack of Diligence Prior to Submission of Case to Judicial Arbitration

The facts and procedural background of Nanfito v. Superior Court (1991) 2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 876 , are discussed under § 90.84[3][a]. In issuing the peremptory writ directing the superior court to hear the motion to dismiss while the case was submitted to judicial arbitration, the court of appeal noted that since the plaintiff elected judicial arbitration so close to the five-year deadline for mandatory dismissal, the trial court should have considered the factors relevant to a motion for discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 before entering the order for arbitration. Despite the failure to do so in this case, the court retained jurisdiction to consider a motion to dismiss even though the case had been submitted to arbitration (2 Cal. App. 4th 315, 319-320) .

[d] Submission of Action to Judicial Arbitration Does Not Suspend Running of Time Periods Applicable to Discretionary Dismissal

Except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, submission of an action to judicial arbitration does not suspend the running of any time period specified in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430 [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a)]. The only exception to this rule provided by Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 concerns Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310, which sets out the period for bringing an action to trial afterwhich it is subject to mandatory dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b); see also § 90.96].

In D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the trial court ordered a negligence action into arbitration three years and five months after the complaint was filed. During the period the case was in arbitration, plaintiff postponed the arbitration hearing three times and, after the third postponement, set no new date for the hearing. After the case had been in arbitration for two years and eight months, defendants moved for discretionary dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)(B); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340], which authorized the court to dismiss an action that was not brought to trial within two years after filing. The trial court dismissed the action, finding that plaintiff had failed to exercise due diligence in procuring an arbitration hearing date and that defendants would be prejudiced by the delay in adjudicating a case which by then had been pending for six years and two months. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that a case ordered into arbitration when it was more than two years old could be dismissed under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) (discretionary dismissal for failure to bring action to trial within two years) while the case remained in arbitration (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 726) . The court also held that the trial court did not err when it based its discretionary dismissal on plaintiff's lack of diligence during the two years and eight months that the case was submitted to arbitration. The relevant tolling statutes governing cases submitted to arbitration, former Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 and former Cal. Rule of Ct., Rule 1601(d) (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.811), could not be construed to prohibit consideration of the activities of plaintiff while a matter is submitted to arbitration (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 730) .

Specifically, the court observed that former Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 (submission of case to arbitration within six months of expiration of time periods contained in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 as tolling periods until filing of arbitration award) did not apply in plaintiff's case, which was not submitted to arbitration within the last six months of the two-year discretionary dismissal period (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 729) . The court rejected plaintiff's argument that former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1601(d) (time during which action pending on arbitration hearing list as excluded from periods specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 if action was placed or remained on list for more than four years and six months after date action was filed) foreclosed dismissal while the plaintiff's action was submitted to arbitration (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 728-729) . The court reasoned that the rule was intended to carry out the purpose of former Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, that is, to protect a litigant from the harsh rule of mandatory dismissal while the case was in arbitration during the last six months. Neither provision, the court concluded, took away all discretionary powers from the trial judge to dismiss a case, without regard to delay or the dilatory tactics of a litigant, as long as the case is in arbitration (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 729-730) .

Finally, the court held that the court did not abuse its discretion in dismissing the case, although defendants made no specific allegations of prejudice suffered as a result of the delay (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 731) . Under the circumstances, the court reasoned, when almost seven years had passed from the time of the alleged negligence, it was reasonable for the trial court to conclude that defendants were prejudiced by the passage of time (153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 732) .

Subsequent to D'Hondt, Section 1141.17 was amended so that by its terms it does not even arguably apply to toll the period within which a case must be brought to trial to avoid exposure to discretionary dismissal. Also, Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1601(d), was repealed. Therefore, counsel may wish to consider not including this paragraph in the memorandum.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.85

§ 90.85 Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340, 3.1342]--Dismissal After Request for Trial de Novo Following Judicial Arbitration

[1] FORM

[The following should be combined with a general form of memorandum in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal for delay in bringing the action to trial, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2) and Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340 (see § 90.83)].

THE COURT SHOULD EXERCISE ITS DISCRETION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURESECTION 583.410 BASED ON PLAINTIFF'S FAILURE TO EXERCISE DUE DILIGENCE BEFORE AND AFTER SUBMISSION OF THE CASE TO JUDICIAL ARBITRATION.

Undergoing Judicial Arbitration Does Not Immunize Plaintiff Against Discretionary Dismissal. If a plaintiff is vulnerable to a discretionary dismissal for want of prosecution before arbitration under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410, then undergoing the arbitration process and benefitting from the recalendaring under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.20 does not necessarily immunize plaintiff against discretionary dismissal (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 435, 442, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted by a defendant in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal on the ground that the plaintiff failed to exercise reasonable diligence in prosecuting the action when the plaintiff's failures to move the case forward occurred both before and after the case was submitted to judicial arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq. The form should be combined with the general points and authorities supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal that are set out in § 90.83.

The form may also be combined with a memorandum supporting mandatory dismissal for failure to bring the action to trial [see §§ 90.80 and 90.105].

The form supports a motion for dismissal of a complaint, and may be modified as necessary if used in a different context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should identify all the periods of inactivity in the case caused by plaintiff's failure to take any steps to move it forward [see Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 443, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion or discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 et seq., see ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undergoing Judicial Arbitration Does Not Immunize Plaintiff Against Discretionary Dismissal

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , are discussed in § 90.97[3][a]. The trial court denied a motion to specially set, finding that the five years to bring the case to trial had already elapsed, requiring dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. Moreover, the court held that if, as plaintiff contended, 44 days remained within that period, plaintiff's lack of activity since the request for trial de novo made denial of the motion appropriate on discretionary grounds under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410.

The Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal of the action based on the trial court's discretionary powers under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, after having held that the trial court had erroneously applied the mandatory dismissal statutes. In discussing Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 tolling of the mandatory period for bringing the case to trial when the trial court fails, after timely request, to calendar a trial de novo so that a plaintiff obtains his or her pre-arbitration place in the calendar, the Court stated that a plaintiff who benefits from that tolling may still be subject to discretionary dismissal if the plaintiff would have been subject to discretionary dismissal before arbitration (10 Cal. 4th 424, 435) . Specifically addressing the discretionary dismissal, the Court held that if a plaintiff is vulnerable to a discretionary dismissal for want of prosecution before arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, then undergoing the arbitration process and benefitting from the recalendaring under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 does not necessarily immunize plaintiff against discretionary dismissal (10 Cal. 4th 424, 442) . The Court then held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to specially set the case for trial and exercising its discretion to dismiss. The facts the Court looked to were as follows (10 Cal. 4th 424, 443) :

1. A three-year, seven-month lapse between the filing of the complaint and the first at-issue memorandum, during which the only activity was two discovery requests.

2. The lack of evidence of active settlement negotiations or delay by the defendant.

3. Post-arbitration delay of six months after defendant's request for trial de novo to bring to the court's attention a lack of a trial date (at which time it was less than two months before expiration of the five-year mandatory dismissal deadline).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.86

§ 90.86 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Was Brought to Trial or New Trial Within Statutory Period

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL or A PARTIAL TRIAL] WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD OF SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320] OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Definition of Trial. For purposes of dismissal under Section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure, a trial is defined as a determination of an issue of law or fact, or the examination of the facts or law put in issue in a cause (see McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 531, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338).

[Optional] B. Impaneling of Jury. When a jury is impaneled within the period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure, the case has been brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the meaning of the statute and a motion to dismiss is properly denied (see Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 765-767, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 ; Hilliard v. A.H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 390, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117).

[Optional] C. Swearing and Testimony of Witness. When the _____ [trial or new trial] is before the court without a jury, the action is brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the meaning of section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure when at least one witness is called, sworn, and gives some testimony (see Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 765, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 ; see also Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 711-712, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651).

[Optional] D. Ruling on Demurrer. The determination or hearing on a demurrer to a complaint is a trial within the meaning of section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure if the ruling on the demurrer is a final determination of the case (see McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 532, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338).

[Optional] E. Dismissal Not Authorized if Partial Trial Occurs Within Statutory Period. Dismissal of an action pursuant to the provisions of section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure, which provides for dismissal if the action is not brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period described in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not authorized if there has been a partial trial of the action within the statutory period (see Rose v. Boydston (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 98, 175 Cal. Rptr. 836).

[Optional] F. Bifurcated Marital Dissolution Proceeding. Pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.161, a petition for dissolution of marriage shall not be dismissed under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.360 if there has been an adjudication of the status of the marriage (In re Marriage of Dunmore (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1380, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 450).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the defendant did, in fact, bring the action to a trial within the meaning of those statutes.

Optional paragraphs may be used to support the proposition that an actual trial did commence [Optional Paragraphs C and D], that a trial was had by means of a demurrer proceeding [Optional Paragraph E], or that a partial trial occurred [Paragraph F]. Optional Paragraph F may be used when the case is a family law matter within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.87 -90.96].

The form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing a relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should show either that the jury was impaneled, or, in a nonjury trial, that at least one witness had been sworn and gave some testimony unless the case is a family law matter within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161, in which case it need only be shown that the case falls within that statute [see In re Marriage of Dunmore (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1380, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 450] .

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Definition of Trial

The facts and procedural background of McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338 , are discussed in § 90.80[3][c]. In McDonough, the Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's argument that the three-year provision of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b), later amended to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(c) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3)], applies only when judgment is reversed after a previous trial on the merits. The Court stated that a trial occurs, for purposes of dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, if there is a determination of an issue of law or fact, or an examination of the facts or law put to issue in a cause (8 Cal. 3d 527, 531) . The Court held that a hearing on a demurrer constitutes a trial if the ruling on the demurrer is a final determination of the case (8 Cal. 3d 527, 532) .

[b] Impaneling of Jury

The facts and procedural background of Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 , are discussed in § 90.92[3][j]. The Supreme Court held that the lower court erred in granting defendant's motion to dismiss for failure to bring the action to trial within five years of filing. A jury was impaneled within the five-year period, even though the jury was discharged and the case continued beyond the five-year period. The Court stated that the action was brought to trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] when the jury was impaneled (30 Cal. 3d 762, 765-767) . It explained that today's overcrowded dockets, which often cause even the most aggressive plaintiffs to have unpredictableresults in attempting to proceed to trial within five years, demand safety valves against unjust dismissals (30 Cal. 3d 762, 766) .

In Hilliard v. A.H. Robins Co. (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 196 Cal. Rptr. 117 , the court of appeal held that in a jury trial a party can avoid the bar of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) by commencing jury selection, and affirmed denial of defendant's dismissal motion. In Hilliard, a jury panel was sworn and voir dire examination of prospective jurors began within the five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b), but was not concluded by the last date allowed for trial. On page 390, the court cited the Supreme Court's apparently approving reference to Kadota v. San Francisco (1958) 166 Cal. App. 2d 194, 195, 333 P.2d 75 . There it was held that a jury case is brought to trial when the parties commence the examination of prospective jurors. The court noted that a contrary rule would invite an unscrupulous party to delay or prolong the jury selection process until the expiration of the five-year period (148 Cal. App. 3d 374, 390) .

[c] Swearing and Testimony of Witness

The facts and procedural background of Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 , are discussed in §§ 90.86[3][b] and 90.92[3][j]. The Supreme Court held that an action is brought to trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 when the jury is impaneled (30 Cal. 3d 762, 766-767) , relying on dictum in Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Superior Court (1923) 192 Cal. 333, 342, 219 P. 1006 . In Miller, a nonjury case, the Supreme Court suggested that in order to avoid the statutory bar, counsel could simply have advised the court of the situation, requested that one witness be sworn, and then have the case continued until a convenient time for the court and parties. If the action is set for jury trial, the functional equivalent of swearing a witness is the impaneling of the jury. The Court in Hartman concluded that the pro forma commencement of trial plays a vital part in preserving the right to a trial on the merits (30 Cal. 3d 762, 765-766) .

The facts and procedural background of Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651 , are discussed in § 90.120[3][a]. Although the court of appeal affirmed dismissal of the action, it concluded that the action had been brought to trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583. In trials by the court without a jury, the law is clear that the action is brought to trial when a witness is called, sworn, and gives some testimony. Here, the record reflected that a witness was called, sworn, and some testimony was elicited (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 711) . The court added that although former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 could not be used to justify dismissal of the action, the lower court has the power to dismiss an action when there has been inexcusable delay in bringing it to trial. Here, the lower court properly exercised its inherent power in dismissing the action (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713) .

[d] Ruling on Demurrer

The facts and procedural background of McDonough Power Equipment Co. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 527, 105 Cal. Rptr. 330, 503 P.2d 1338 , are discussed in §§ 90.86[3][a] and 90.80[3][c]. The Supreme Court held that a determination of the issues of law raised by a demurrer constitutes a trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 if the ruling on the demurrer is a final determination of the case. In rejecting plaintiff's contention that the three-year provision of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (amended to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(c)) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(3)] applied only if a judgment is reversed after a previous trial on the merits, the Court noted that if a demurrer has been sustained and a judgment of dismissal entered, there has been a trial and the action is not subject to dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583. The essential element is that the action be brought to a stage when final disposition is to be made (8 Cal. 3d 527, 532) .

[e] Dismissal Not Authorized if Partial Trial Occurs Within Statutory Period

Rose v. Boydston (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 175 Cal. Rptr. 836 , was an action for payment of a fee for services rendered, filed in 1970. Defendants cross complained for dissolution of an alleged joint venture and an accounting. The cross complaint was tried in 1973, and an interlocutory judgment was entered in favor of the cross complainants. The court ordered an accounting and retained jurisdiction over the case for purposes of rendering and settling the account. Later, the trial judge was appointed to the court of appeal, thereby becoming unavailable for further trial. A second judge continued the case for trial and ordered that the trial be de novo on all issues unless either the first judge was reassigned to superior court to try the case, or the parties stipulated that they would be bound by the prior findings, conclusions, and interlocutory judgment. Neither condition occurred. After numerous continuances, cross defendants moved to dismiss. The motion was granted in 1978 pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) and (b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.430].

The court of appeal reversed, holding that because there had been a partial trial of the action before the first judge, dismissal was not authorized under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) and (b) (122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 98) .

Although the court of appeal held only that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) and (b) were inapplicable because of the partial trial of the actionwithin the statutory period, it appears that the court's reasoning would be equally applicable to oppose a motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320 if a partial retrial of the action occurs within three years after a new trial is ordered or a mistrial is declared.

[f] Bifurcated Marital Dissolution Proceeding

In re Marriage of Dunmore (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 450 , was an action for dissolution of marriage. A judgment dissolving the status of the marriage was entered prior to the expiration of the five years from commencement of the action, but a bifurcated proceeding remained with regard to child support, spousal support, and property. Over five years after filing of the petition, the ex-husband moved for dismissal of the matter under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360. The ex-wife opposed the motion on the ground that dismissal was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161(c), which provides that a petition for dissolution of marriage shall not be dismissed if a separate trial on the issue of the status has been conducted. The ex-husband argued that the section was inapplicable because an uncontested proceeding is not a "trial." Agreeing with the ex-husband, the trial court ruled that the bifurcated status proceeding did not constitute a "trial" within the meaning of the dismissal statutes because it was uncontested, and dismissed the proceeding.

The court of appeal noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161 contains several exceptions from the dismissal statutes which are specific to proceedings involving marital status. The common thread of these exceptions is that issues of family support are intertwined with issues of marital status and property rights. The court then reasoned that the state has an interest in insuring that there are no loose ends in the adjudication of the interrelated issues of status and family support, and concluded that the dismissal of an action after the resolution of one but not the other of these interrelated issues risks defeat of the state's interest. The court thus held that the concept of a "trial" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.161 encompasses the final determination of the status of a marriage, and that the statute therefore bars dismissal under the five year statute after the entry of a judgment dissolving the marriage (45 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1380) . The order of dismissal was thus reversed.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Not Authorized if Partial Trial Occurs Within Statutory Period

The wife in In re Marriage of Macfarlane & Lang (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 247, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 157 , petitioned for dissolution of marriage. The husband moved for bifurcation of the proceedings and for judgment on the issue of dissolution of marital status. At an evidentiary hearing approximately 18 months after the petition was filed, the court granted the bifurcation motion, ordered termination of the marriage, and reserved jurisdiction over all other issues. At two subsequent evidentiary hearings, the court rendered judgment on two of the remaining issues (8 Cal. App. 4th 247, 251) . Among other procedural moves, the husband moved to dismiss the petition for failure to bring the matter to trial within five years. The court granted the motion and ordered dismissal.

The court of appeal deemed the wife's appeal to be from the order of dismissal, and reversed, finding that the evidentiary hearings on the dissolution of marriage and two of the major remaining issues constituted partial trial sufficient to take the case out of the operation of the five-year statute (8 Cal. App. 4th 247, 255) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.87

§ 90.87 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Extended by Stipulation of Parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE PARTIES EXTENDED THE TIME WITHIN WHICH THE ACTION HAD TO BE BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL] BY _____ [A WRITTEN STIPULATION _____ (FILED WITH THE COURT or A COPY OF WHICH IS ATTACHED TO THE NOTICE OF MOTION) or BY AN ORAL AGREEMENT IN OPEN COURT _____ (ENTERED IN THE COURT MINUTES or OF WHICH A TRANSCRIPT WAS MADE)].

[EITHER]

A. Written Stipulation. The parties may extend the time within which an action must be brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] pursuant to Sections 583.310-583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure by written stipulation, brought to the attention of the court if relevant to a motion for dismissal, or filed with the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330(a); see Meraia v. McCann (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 246, 147 Cal. Rptr. 756).

[OR]

A. Oral Agreement. The parties may extend the time within which an action must be brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] pursuant to Sections 583.310-583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure by an oral agreement made in open court, if entered in the minutes of the court or if a transcript is made (Code Civ.

Proc. § 583.330(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] B. Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal. A stipulation is adequate to extend time for performance of an act required to avoid dismissal if it expressly waives the right to dismissal or extends the time for performance of the act to a time beyond the statutory period (see General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 455, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289).

[Optional] C. Trial Precluded by Indefinite Extension. A stipulation is adequate to extend time for commencing _____ [trial or a new trial] under Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure if it grants an indefinite extension for some activity which, by necessary implication, precludes the commencement of _____ [trial or a new trial] (see Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928-929, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127).

[Optional] D. Acceptable Writings. The requirement that a stipulation to extend time must be in writing is satisfied by a stipulation embodied in correspondence between counsel (see Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928 n. 5, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127).

[Optional] E. Tolling or Extension of Time Resulting in Less Than Six Months to Bring Action. If the time within which an action must be brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] pursuant to Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure is tolled or otherwise extended pursuant to statute, with the result that at the end of the tolling or extension period less than six months remains within which to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial], the action must not be dismissed under Section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure if it is brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] within six months after the end of the period of tolling or extension (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the period for bringing the action to trial or new trial was extended by written stipulation of the parties [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330(a)] or by an oral agreement of the parties that was entered in the court's minutes or a transcript [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330(b)], and that there has been no failure to bring the action to trial or new trial within the required time after taking this extension into account. It should be noted that a written stipulation need not be filed, but if it is not filed, it must be brought to the court's attention if relevant to a dismissal motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330(a)].

Optional Paragraph E should be included when less than six months remained to bring the action to trial at the time the claimed extension ended, and the motion to dismiss was made prior to expiration of that six months' period.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86, 90.89 -90.96].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if the time to bring the action to trial has been extended betweenthe parties by written stipulation, counsel should state the date and particulars of that stipulation.

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80.

The points and authorities in § 90.106, may in turn, be used to respond to those in this form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Construction of Stipulation

In construing a stipulation extending the five-year period for bringing an action to trial, the ordinary rules for interpretation of contracts apply. In the interpretation of contracts, the paramount consideration is the intention of the contracting parties as it existed at the time of contracting. The court must examine the instrument in the light of the circumstances surrounding its execution so as to ascertain what the parties meant by the words they used. In determining the intention of the parties in relation to the execution of a contract, the court may look to the circumstances surrounding the making of the agreement, including the object, nature, and subject matter of the writing, and thereby place itself for this purpose in the same situation in which the parties found themselves at the time of contracting [Miles v. Speidel (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 879, 883, 259 Cal. Rptr. 582] . However, the objective intent as evidenced by the words of the contract, not the parties' subjective intent, governs the court's interpretation [Miles v. Speidel (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 879, 884, 259 Cal. Rptr. 582] .

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Written Stipulation

In Meraia v. McCann (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 147 Cal. Rptr. 756 , plaintiffs gave attorneys for both defendants open-ended extensions of time in which to file responsive pleadings, subject to termination by plaintiffs' counsel, and counsel for both defendants acknowledged these extensions in writing. Approximately four years later, plaintiffs' attorney requested counsel for both defendants to file answers. Defendants moved to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] and the court granted their motion.

The court of appeal reversed, holding on the authority of General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 455-456, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 (discussed in § 90.52[3][a]), that the written stipulation was effective to defer the proceedings and to mutually excuse the parties from diligence (83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 243) . Although former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) did not expressly provide for written stipulations, former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)], stated that the trial court shall consider in a Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) motion the nature of any extensions of time or other delay attributable to either party (83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 246) .

Meraia has been limited to situations in which the defendant has requested and obtained the extension; it does not apply when the plaintiff has requested the extension for his or her own benefit [see Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332 ; see also § 90.106].

Note that in Martin v. K & K Properties, Inc. (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 234 Cal. Rptr. 161 , another court of appeal upheld a dismissal on finding that, contrary to the facts in Meraia, a written open stipulation to respond expressly provided that the statutory five-year period was not extended, and thus precluded any extension of that period because it put cross-complainants on notice that they were not excused from diligently prosecuting their cross complaint (188 Cal. App. 3d 1559, 1566) .

[b] Oral Agreement

Prior to enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330(b), which sanctions oral agreements made in open court if entered in the court minutes or of which a transcript is made, the Supreme Court declined to decide whether an oral stipulation entered in the minutes constituted a written stipulation [see Miller & Lux, Inc. v. Superior Court (1923) 192 Cal. 333, 339-340, 219 P. 1006] . However, even without the recent statute, such stipulations may be assumed adequate on the strength of Govea v. Superior Court (1938) 26 Cal. App. 2d 27, 31, 78 P.2d 433 , which held that even if the language of the stipulation did not comply with former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, the defendant was estopped, after the minute entry, from seeking dismissal.

[c] Extension to Time Beyond Statutory Period or Waiver of Right to Dismissal

The facts and procedural background of General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 , are discussed in § 90.52[3][a]. In General Ins. Co., the Supreme Court reviewed the adequacy of a stipulation between the parties to extend time. The general principle, as described in J.C. Penney Co. v. Superior Court (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 666, 669, 343 P.2d 919 , is that a stipulation is adequate if it expressly either waives the right to dismissal or extends the time for performance of the act necessary to avoid dismissal to a date beyond the statutory period. A mere extension of time within the period does not extend the deadline absent a showing that the parties intended such an extension (15 Cal. 3d 449, 455) . In J.C. Penney Co., the Court held that an extension for a specific period of time within the statutory period for pretrial activity did not extend the period, because time necessarily consumed by ordinary proceedings is not usually excluded.

It appears that the effect of J. C. Penney Co. is limited by subsequent rulings that an indefinite extension of time for pretrial activities does extend the period [see Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928-929, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127 , discussed under § 90.87[3][d]].

[d] Trial Precluded by Indefinite Extension

In Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127 , defendant had granted plaintiff two open-ended extensions of time for hearings on demurrers and these extensions had delayed proceedings by two years. The action was dismissed under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) after four years had elapsed since the action was filed.

The court of appeal held, on the authority of General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 455, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 (discussed under § 90.55[3][b], 90.87[3][c]), that dismissal was improper because the extensions, while in effect, excused the plaintiff's lack of diligence (88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928-929) .

[e] Acceptable Writings

The facts and procedural background of Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127 , are discussed under § 90.87[3][d]. In Regan Distributors, Inc., the written stipulations on which plaintiff relied were made informally between counsel. The court explicitly noted that in prior cases, stipulations held adequate had been informal in nature and embodied in correspondence between counsel (88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928 n.5).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Agreement

Health Industries of America v. Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 294 provides that oral stipulations to extend the five year statute are adequate and may be considered to exist where in open court the judge acts under the presumption that the parties are entering into such a stipulation and the parties do not object (102 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1376-1378) .

[b] Trial Precluded by Indefinite Extension

In Farrar, Herrick & Associates v. Safecare Co. (1981) 115 Cal. App. 3d 123, 171 Cal. Rptr. 191 , defendant wrote to plaintiff stating that it continued to rely on an expired agreement between the parties extending its time to plead unless plaintiff gave defendant notice of further action. Over three years later, plaintiff gave notice, but neither party acted for almost one and one-half years, until plaintiff took a default judgment. By then, over five years had elapsed since the complaint was filed. Before the default hearing, defendant successfully moved for dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. The court of appeal reversed, citing General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 454-456, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 , discussed under §§ 90.55[3][b] and 90.87[3][c] (115 Cal. App. 3d 123, 127) . The court also relied on an estoppel theory to bar reliance on the diligence statutes. The court should give credence to the parties' intent in a reasonable manner. Finding that the parties had waived diligence by their stipulation and conduct, the court held that once such a waiver has occurred, diligence as prescribed by statute cannot be reinstated without agreement. The court also held that dismissal for lack of due diligence pursuant to the court's inherent discretionary powers without reliance on statute is a question of fact to be determined by reasonableness and good faith. The discretion must be exercised in accordance with the spirit of the law and to serve the substantial ends of justice. To allow defendant to prevail in this case would defeat the spirit of the law (115 Cal. App. 3d 123, 131) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.88

§ 90.88 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Was Settled Within Statutory Period

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ACTION BECAUSE THE MANDATORY DISMISSAL STATUTE FOR FAILURE TO BRING AN ACTION TO TRIAL WITHIN FIVE YEARS DOES NOT APPLY TO A SETTLEMENT OF THE ACTION WITHIN THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD, EVEN THOUGH THE SETTLEMENT IS NOT REDUCED TO A JUDGMENT WITHIN THAT PERIOD.

A. Judgment on Stipulation. If parties to pending litigation stipulate, in a writing signed by the parties outside the presence of the court or orally before the court, for settlement of the case, or part thereof, the court, upon motion, may enter judgment pursuant to the terms of the settlement (Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6).

[EITHER]

B. Oral Settlement of Case in Open Court Within Five-Year Mandatory Period for Bringing Action to Trial Precludes Dismissal of Action. An action settled by oral stipulation of the parties in open court prior to expiration of the five-year period precludes dismissal of the action for failure to bring it to trial when there are no issues left to resolve and nothing remains but to formally execute a written version of the stipulation and submit it to the court for approval (Canal Street, Ltd. v. Sorich (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608-609, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 ; Malouf Bros. v. Dixon (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 280, 284-285, 281 Cal. Rptr. 235 ; Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 987-989, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34).

[OR]

B. Settlement Reached Before, But Partially Executed After, Expiration of Five-Year Period Precludes Dismissal of Action. A settlement agreement that was entered into before expiration of the five-year period for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial but not executed by all the parties until after expiration of that period, and which provides that the superior court would retain jurisdiction over enforcement of its terms, either comes within the exception specified in Section 583.340(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure for the time during which it would be "futile" to bring the action to trial or constitutes an implied waiver or extension of the five-year period (Schiro v. Curci (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 844-845, 269 Cal. Rptr. 639).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring it to trial within the time specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the case was settled within the five-year period by written stipulation of the parties, or by oral stipulation before the court, and that the mandatory dismissal statutes do not apply.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86, 90.87, 90.89 -90.96].

This form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the point and authority set out in § 90.81.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Settlement of Case in Open Court Within Five-Year Mandatory Period for Bringing Action to Trial Precludes Dismissal of Action

Canal Street, Ltd. v. Sorich (2000) 77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 91 Cal. Rptr. 2d 811 , involved an action by purchasers of property against defendants for damages plaintiffs incurred in cleaning up contamination. At a judicially mandated settlement conference, a settlement agreement was reached between the parties that was recited on the record.

Thereafter, however, the parties did not reach final agreement on the text of the settlement agreement. At some point, plaintiffs' counsel sent one of defendants' counsel a revised agreement by letter which noted that it reflected all the points the attorneys had discussed the day before and that plaintiffs' counsel was glad that they had reached final agreement on the text. Some time thereafter plaintiffs' counsel wrote to the other attorney requesting that defendants execute the settlement agreement. Thereafter, plaintiff's attorney, pursuant to plaintiffs' instruction, forwarded to defendants a letter from one of the plaintiffs that stated that plaintiffs' offer to settle the litigation was withdrawn and settlement discussions terminated, except on certain conditions. Defendants then moved for, and subsequently voluntarily dismissed their motions for, an order under Code Civ. Proc. § 572 to deposit the basic amount of the settlement with the court and for judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 on the settlement. During the same period, plaintiffs wrote defendants several times that they were prepared to reject the settlement and proceed to trial unless the amount paid in settlement included interest and daily late penalty charges from a specified date. Ultimately, defendants moved for dismissal of the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 based solely on plaintiffs' failure to bring the case to trial within five years from its commencement. Plaintiffs then moved under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 for judgment under the settlement reached at the judicially mandated settlement conference that had been recited on the record and under Code Civ. Proc. § 572 for an order requiring defendants to deposit the basic amount of the settlement with the court. Plaintiffs' motions were consolidated with defendants' motion to dismiss. The trial court concluded that the settlement was conditioned on plaintiffs obtaining approval of the settlement from the Underground Storage Tank Cleanup Fund and because the Fund never approved the settlement, no settlement was ever reached. The trial court dismissed plaintiffs' action for failure to bring the action to trial or have the settlement reduced to judgment within five years. Plaintiffs appealed (77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 604-607) .

The Court of Appeal, First District, Division Five, reversed. The court noted that defendants relied on Varwig v. Leider (1995) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208 (discussed below), which held that an action that is not brought to trial or reduced to judgment within five years of its commencement must be dismissed, even when settlement of the action in a pretrial conference disposed of all issues, and the action was taken off calendar. The court further noted, however, that Varwig is contrary to the other cases that have considered this issue, Brown & Bryan, Inc. v. Hartford Accident & Indemnity Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 247, 255 , Malouf Bros. v. Dixon (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 280, 285, 281 Cal. Rptr. 235 (discussed below), Schiro v. Curci (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 844-845, 269 Cal. Rptr. 639 (discussed under § 90.88[3][b]), and Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 988 (discussed in § 90.88[3][a]). These case uniformly agree that once there has been a settlement in open court, the court can reasonably assume the matter has been finally disposed of and will not go to trial, even though details of execution remain. Consequently, there is no compelling reason why a settlement agreement must be reduced to judgment within five years. Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 does not require a case to reach judgment in five years, but merely that the trial commence within that period (77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608) . Additionally, since Varwig the five-year statute has been amended to particularly incorporate what had been simply a judicially created exception to the mandatory five-year dismissal. The computation of the five-year period now specifically excludes (in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)) the time during which bring the action to trial was impossible, impracticable, or futile. Thus, the time during which a settlement agreement is in effect tolls the five-year period, for the reason that attempting to bring an action to trial when all issues have been resolved through settlement would be futile (77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608) . Noting that the trial court understandably followed Varwig, an opinion from the same district, the court concluded that Brown & Bryant, Inc., Malouf Bros., Schiro, and Gorman enunciate the better rule, and that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 was tolled following recitation of the settlement on the record (77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 608-609) . Moreover, in reversing the dismissal order, the court remanded the matter to the superior court with directions to reconsider plaintiffs' Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 motion and enter judgment thereon (77 Cal. App. 4th 602, 609) .

Malouf Bros. v. Dixon (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 280, 281 Cal. Rptr. 235 , was an action filed on July 19, 1983, by grading and excavating contractors to recover a sum remaining due on a contract between the parties for construction of a road on defendant's property, and in which the defendant filed a cross complaint. The case was settled at the mandatory settlement conference, and the terms of the settlement were stated in open court. Under the terms of the settlement, defendant was to convey a specified parcel of land to the plaintiffs who would pay defendant $10,000 within 90 days, and plaintiffs, at their expense, would repair portions of the road that had washed out. The road was to be tested for compaction by aqualified soil engineer, and one of the plaintiffs would pay defendant $500 to be paid over to the soil engineer. Thereafter, defendant, claiming the road repair work was unsatisfactory, refused to convey the parcel. After unsuccessful negotiations between the parties, plaintiffs, on January 27, 1989, filed a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 (see Paragraph A of foregoing form) to enforce settlement of the agreement. On July 28, 1989, judgment was entered requiring defendant to convey the parcel on payment of the $10,000. Defendant appealed, contending, among other things, that the trial court was required to dismiss the action because plaintiffs had failed to enforce the settlement before expiration of five years from the date the original complaint was filed, citing as authority Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 315-316, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208 (discussed below).

Division Five of the Court of Appeal of the Second District, rejected the contention. Rejecting the holding in Varwig and following Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 987-988, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34 (discussed below) and Schiro v. Curci (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 844, 269 Cal. Rptr. 639 (discussed under § 90.88[3][b]), the court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 applies only to disputes that can and will be settled by trial and does not apply to a judgment entered pursuant to a motion to enforce a settlement agreement entered into within the five-year period. The court said the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 is to prevent avoidable delay in bringing an action to trial; that once the parties have stated a complete settlement in open court, the court may assume that the matter has been finally disposed of; that, although details of execution may remain, it is reasonable to assume the matter will not go to trial; and that if a dispute about the settlement develops, it can be resolved through the streamlined procedure set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 (230 Cal. App. 3d 280, 284-285) . The court explained that the Varwig view might prevent settlements on the eve of trial shortly before the five-year deadline or settlements which enable the defendant to avoid a court judgment, and that the law should encourage the avoidance of needless trials (230 Cal. App. 3d 280, 285) .

Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34 , was a May, 1978, action for breach of a construction contract and fraud in which defendant also filed a cross complaint. At a mandatory settlement conference in December, 1982, the parties entered into an extensive oral stipulation in open court in which they agreed to settle the action in favor of plaintiff. The stipulation was recorded by a court reporter and plaintiff's counsel was directed to prepare a written order for the court's signature and approval by defendant's counsel. Defendant's counsel rejected the version submitted to him by plaintiff's counsel and prepared his own version, which plaintiff's counsel rejected. In May, 1983, plaintiff's counsel sent his proposed judgment to the court requesting that it be signed notwithstanding defendant's lack of approval, but the court apparently did not respond. In June 1983, defendant moved to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring it to trial within five years. Plaintiff filed a response and moved for summary judgment. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss, and dismissed the summary judgment motion as moot. Plaintiff appealed.

The Court of Appeal of the Second District, Division Two, reversed the dismissal. The court held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) does not apply if, as here, no issues remain to be tried after the parties arrive at a complete settlement of their dispute. The purpose of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) is to prevent avoidable delay in bringing an action to trial and thus obtaining a resolution of the dispute. An action settled by agreement will not proceed to trial and such a settlement renders the five-year limit legally irrelevant. Although the settlement did not adjudicate facts or law, a final disposition of the dispute had been made since there were no issues left to resolve and nothing remained but to formally execute the agreement. Former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) does not require that every action be brought to trial or suffer dismissal. It applies exclusively to disputes that can and will be resolved only by trial. Moreover, nothing in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 requires that a judgment be obtained within five years after filing the complaint; that section requires only that trial commence within that period. Furthermore, a settlement agreement has the attributes of a judgment in that it is decisive of the rights of the parties and serves to bar reopening of the issues involved, and oral agreements to compromise and settle lawsuits at judicially supervised settlement conferences are enforceable. While certain time constraints govern the mechanics of enforcing settlement agreements, they are not found in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (164 Cal. App. 3d.984, 987-989) .

The Court of Appeal of the First District, Division Two, in Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208 (discussed in § 90.81[3][a], noted that its decision was in conflict with Gorman. In Varwig, plaintiff brought an action in 1976, and the parties reached a settlement agreement at a pretrial conference on January 30, 1980, after which time the action was taken off calendar. Afterwards, however, no one moved to enforce the settlement agreement under Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 (Paragraph A of foregoing form) before the lapse of the five-year period. In 1982, defendants successfully obtained dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360], despite plaintiff's contention that the settlement disposed of all issues to be tried and that dismissal was therefore inappropriate. The First District Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that because no party had sought to enforce the settlement, the action had not been finally disposed of, and was thus subject to mandatory dismissal. However, the court noted that the settlement agreement nevertheless could be enforced under the general principles of contract law (171 Cal. App. 3d.312, 315-316) .

[b] Settlement Agreement Reached Before, But Partially Executed After, Expiration of Five-Year Period Precludes Dismissal

Schiro v. Curci (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 269 Cal. Rptr. 639 , was an action to quiet title to a strip of property over which adjoining property owners claimed an easement. After pursuing litigation for several years, but before expiration of the five-year period for mandatory dismissal, the parties settled their case on the day it was set for trial. However, the settlement agreement was not executed by all the parties until after expiration of the five-year period. In addition to settling the case, the agreement also provided that the superior court would retain jurisdiction over enforcement of the terms of the agreement. The plaintiff did not perform despite defendants' repeated requests that he do so, and defendants eventually filed a noticed motion to enforce the agreement and to enter judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 (see Paragraph A of foregoing form). Plaintiff countered with the argument that the court, on its own motion, had to dismiss the case for failure to bring it to trial within five years. The trial court granted the defendants' motion, judgment was entered, and plaintiff appealed.

The Court of Appeal of the Sixth District said the case involved the interaction between Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 and Code Civ. Proc. § 664.6 (Paragraph A of foregoing form), and the question of whether the latter section applied. The court held that it did apply, and affirmed the judgment (220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 843, 845) . The court discussed the facts and holdings in Gorman v. Holte (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 984, 211 Cal. Rptr. 34 , and Varwig v. Leider (1985) 171 Cal. App. 3d 312, 217 Cal. Rptr. 208 (both discussed under § 90.88[3][a]), concluded that Gorman presented the better rule, and rejected the reasoning of Varwig (220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 843-844) . The court believed the case came within the "futile" exception enunciated in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) in that, during the time between the agreement to settle and the final execution of the settlement by all the interested parties, it would have been "futile" to bring the action to trial because all the issues had been resolved through settlement (220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 844-845) . The court added that if it viewed the issue presented as one of fact, it would be whether the settlement agreement constituted an implied waiver or extension of the five-year statute. The court said that in that event the standard of review would be whether the trial court's interpretation was supported by substantial evidence, and in view of the fact that the settlement agreement vested continued jurisdiction in the court to supervise compliance with its terms, it concurred in the trial court's implied finding that the parties impliedly waived their rights under the dismissal statute (220 Cal. App. 3d 840, 845) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.89

§ 90.89 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Court's Jurisdiction to Try Action Was Suspended [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE TIME DURING WHICH THE COURT'S JURISDICTION TO TRY THE ACTION WAS SUSPENDED MUST BE EXCLUDED FROM THE PERIOD WITHIN WHICH THE ACTION HAD TO BE BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL].

A. Jurisdiction Suspended. In computing the time within which an action must be brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.310 et seq., the time during which the court's jurisdiction to try the action was suspended must be excluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a); see Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 ; Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77-78, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91).

B. Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining. [See § 90.92, Paragraph M.]

[Optional] C. Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(a). Lack of jurisdiction is an express statutory exception to the five-year bar, separate and distinct from exceptions based on impossibility or impracticability. When lack of jurisdiction is asserted, plaintiff's diligence, or lack thereof, has no place in the analysis (see Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 ; Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77-78, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 (citing Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f)).

[Optional] D. Tolling or Extension of Time Resulting in Less Than Six Months to Bring Action. [See § 90.87,

Paragraph E.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring it to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the time during which the court's jurisdiction to try the action is suspended must be excluded when calculating the applicable time period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)].

Optional Paragraph C is for use if the defendant contends that plaintiff failed to exercise diligence during that time period in which the court's jurisdiction was suspended.

Optional Paragraph D is for use when less than six months remained to bring the action to trial at the time the claimed suspension ended.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86, 90.87, 90.90 -90.96].

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80. They may also be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing a relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, plaintiff should state what caused the court's jurisdiction to be suspended, and the duration of the suspension in relation to the time periods for bringing the action to an original or new trial.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.360 and 583.410, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction Suspended

While Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , was pending, defendant filed a related action to disqualify plaintiff's trial counsel and obtained a preliminary injunction enjoining counsel from representing plaintiff. Counsel appealed the order and obtained a writ of supersedeas staying the instant action. Counsel prevailed in the related action and judgment was entered in his favor. The stay in the instant action was later vacated. One year later, defendant moved to dismiss the action on the ground that the case had not been brought to trial within the mandatory five-year time period under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. The trial court denied the motion because the statute was tolled during the stay order. Judgment was entered in plaintiff's favor after trial, and defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding, among other things, that the court lacked jurisdiction to try the action during the period of time in which the case was stayed (15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774) . Following Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77-78, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 , the court found that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a) provides an express exception to the five-year dismissal period and thus, plaintiff's diligence, or lack thereof is irrelevant when computing the tolling period (15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774) . Therefore, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying the motion to dismiss.

In Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 , the plaintiff filed a verified complaint in municipal court and six months later, the defendants filed an unverified cross-complaint seeking damages in excess of the municipal court's jurisdiction. Approximately six months later, the defendants filed a motion to transfer the action tosuperior court on the ground that the amount in controversy exceeded the municipal court's jurisdictional limits. The matter was transferred to the superior court approximately two months later. Following an arbitration award, plaintiff filed a trial de novo request and later requested that the case be ordered off the court's active calendar. For two and one-half years, there was no activity on the case until plaintiff moved to restore it to the trial calendar. Three months later, the court granted defendant's motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310, and five years and six months after the complaint was filed, the judgment of dismissal was entered. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, plaintiff argued that the jurisdiction was suspended under Code Civ. Proc. § 396 from the date the unverified cross-complaint was filed until the time when the action was transferred and refiled in superior court. Thus, eight and one-half months would have been excluded from the calculation of the five-year period under the tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a), and the motion to dismiss filed five years and six months from the time the complaint was filed was premature (205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 75) . The court noted that plaintiff's diligence "has no place in the analysis" when computing the tolling period, finding that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a) provides an express exception to the five-year dismissal rule (205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 77-78) . However, the court pointed out that jurisdiction is suspended under Code Civ. Proc. § 396 only when it appears that determination of the action will necessarily involve questions not within the court's jurisdiction. The court then held that jurisdiction was not suspended from the date the cross complaint was filed, but only from the date of the hearing on the motion to transfer, because the unverified cross-complaint was insufficient alone to make it appear that the action would necessarily involve questions not within the court's jurisdiction (205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 78) . Thus, the court affirmed the judgment of dismissal, because calculating the period jurisdiction was stayed on that basis, the motion to dismiss was not premature.

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(a)

Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , is discussed under § 90.89[3][a].

Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 , is discussed under § 90.89[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction Suspended

In Bergin v. Portman (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 23, 190 Cal. Rptr. 81 , defendant successfully appealed summary judgment entered in plaintiff's favor. Following the remittitur, the case was set for trial and the defendant moved to vacate the trial date and dismiss the action, contending that plaintiffs had failed to bring it to trial as required, either under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] (within five years after the complaint was filed), or under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(c) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(3), 583.360] (within three years after the remittitur was filed in the trial court following reversal of the summary judgment). The trial court granted the motion under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(c) and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the dismissal, holding that the statutory period for bringing the action to trial did not include the time of defendant's appeal from the summary judgment since the trial court's jurisdiction was suspended. Therefore, the period in excess of one year when the cause was before the court of appeal could not be counted against the overall five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b).

The facts and procedural background of Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 , are discussed in § 90.91[3][a]. In Christin, the Supreme Court specifically stated that impossibility applies as an exception to the dismissal requirement when the trial court loses jurisdiction in the sense that it is divested of its power to act, as by an appeal or dismissal (9 Cal. 2d 526, 530-531) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.90

§ 90.90 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Prosecution or Trial of Action Was Stayed or Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE TIME DURING WHICH PROSECUTION OR TRIAL OF THE ACTION WAS STAYED OR ENJOINED MUST BE EXCLUDED FROM THE PERIOD WITHIN WHICH THE ACTION HAD TO BE BROUGHT TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL].

A. Prosecution or Trial Stayed or Enjoined. In computing the time within which an action must be brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.310 et seq., the time during which prosecution or trial of the action wasstayed or enjoined must be excluded (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b); see Bruns v. E-Commerce Exchange, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 488, 498-502, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 889 ; Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 ; Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797-1801, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678).

[Optional] B. Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(b). Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(b) is unconditional and is intended to have uniform application. "This is consistent with the treatment given other statutory excuses; it increases certainty and minimizes the need for a judicial hearing to ascertain whether or not the statutory period has run" (Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , quoting 17 Cal. Law Revision Com. Rep. (Jan. 1984) p. 919). Tolling is automatic and not subject to a reasonable diligence restriction (Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 ; Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1798-1799, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678).

[Optional] C. "Continuance" Having Legal Effect of "Stay." If the trial court granted a continuance which has the legal effect of a stay, it should be treated as a "stay" within the meaning of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(b). The term "stay," as used in Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340, is commonly understood as meaning an indefinite postponement of an act or the operation of some consequence, pending the occurrence of a designated event; that is, a stay is a temporary suspension of a procedure in a case pending the happening of a defined contingency. Therefore, if the court's order was not merely a postponement of the trial of a pending action to a later date, then it should have the legal effect of a "stay" of the action, even though the court used the term "continuance" (Holland v. Dave Altman's R. V. Center (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 482, 271 Cal. Rptr. 706).

[Optional] D. Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining. [See § 90.92, Paragraph M.]

[Optional] E. Tolling or Extension of Time Resulting in Less Than Six Months to Bring Action. [See § 90.87, Paragraph E.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the time during which prosecution or trial of the action is stayed or enjoined must be excluded when calculating the applicable time period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b)].

Optional Paragraph B is for use if the defendant contends that plaintiff failed to exercise diligence during the time period in which the action was stayed. Optional Paragraph C is for use when there is an issue whether a stay, as opposed to a continuance, was granted. Optional Paragraph D is for use if, without excluding the period of the stay, there was sufficient time remaining after termination of the stay in which to bring the action to trial. Optional Paragraph E is for use when less than six months remained to bring the action to trial at the time the claimed stay or injunction ended.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.96].

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80. They may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if counsel claims that the action was stayed by a court order, counsel should set out the terms of the order and the dates during which prosecution of the action was stayed and relate those dates to the statutory time periods for bringing the action to trial or new trial.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Stay of Action Submitted to Arbitration

[i] Contractual Arbitration

If an action is subject to a written arbitration agreement and the court has issued an order compelling arbitration, a party may obtain a stay of the action until the contractual arbitration is completed. The party seeking resolution through contractual arbitration must file a motion to stay the action at law; it will not be stayed automatically [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.2, 1281.4; Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1796, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 ; see also § 90.05[2][c]]. For forms relating to dismissal for delay in prosecuting an action submitted to contractual arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

[ii] Judicial Arbitration

Submission of an action to judicial arbitration does not suspend the running of the dismissal statutes, except as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, although circumstances relating to judicial arbitration may result in post-arbitration tolling [see Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 437-438, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469] . For a form of points and authorities opposing dismissal based on those exceptions, see § 90.96. For a form supporting dismissal of an action submitted to judicial arbitration for delay in the arbitration, see § 90.84.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.360 and 583.410, see ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prosecution or Trial Stayed or Enjoined

Bruns v. E-Commerce Exchange, Inc. (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 488, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 889 was a class action against defendants for allegedly sending unsolicited advertisements to facsimile machines in violation of federal law. Plaintiff filed the original action in 2000, and there were numerous subsequent amendments, a petition for coordination and a transfer to a different county. Additionally, the trial court imposed a discovery stay shortly after plaintiff filed the action. Two years later, the entire action was stayed for over a year pending resolution of an appeal in a separate action. The courts imposed various other stays during the course of the litigation as well. Approximately six and one-half years after plaintiff filed her original complaint, one of the defendants moved to dismiss the action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310 and 583.360(b) on the ground that plaintiff had failed to bring the action to trial within five years. The court granted the motion, excluding from the five-year period several of the periods of time during which the action was stayed. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeals reversed. Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360(b) provides that in computing the time within which an action must be brought to trial, certain periods of time are to be excluded, including any time during which the court's jurisdiction was suspended, prosecution or trial of the action was stayed or enjoined and bringing the action to trial was impossible, impracticable or futile. The court agreed with plaintiff that a discovery stay constitutes a stay of the prosecution of the action within the meaning of the statute. Based on the numerous discovery stays in place at various times throughout the litigation, the trial court should have extended plaintiff's time for bringing the action to trial (172 Cal. App. 4th 488, 498-502) .

The facts and procedural background of Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , are discussed in § 90.89[3][a].

In affirming judgment for plaintiff that was entered after denial of defendant's motion to dismiss for delay, the court of appeal rejected defendant's argument that the stay could have been vacated six months earlier but for plaintiff's lack of diligence. The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b) provides that the five-year period "shall be" tolled if "[p]rosecution or trial of the action was stayed or enjoined." This language rendered the statute "unconditional," which the court found to be consistent with the treatment given other statutory excuses by increasing certainty, minimizing the need for a judicial hearing to ascertain whether or not the statutory period has run and upholding the general policy favoring trial over dismissal (15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774) . Moreover, the court held that the trial court had no statutory duty to shorten the tolling period because counsel could have been more diligent in dismissing his appeal in the related action and vacating the stay order (15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774) . Citing Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 , below and Schwenke v. J & P Scott, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 71, 252 Cal. Rptr. 91 , discussed in § 90.89[3][a], the court held that tolling is automatic and reasonable diligence is not required (15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 1774-1775) . Therefore, the court found no abuse of discretion in the trial court's denial of the motion to dismiss.

Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 , was a medical malpractice action in which the parties entered into a stipulation for mandatory binding arbitration pursuant to contract and agreed the action at law was to be stayed pending completion of the arbitration proceedings. The court entered an order enforcing the stipulation by submitting the dispute to arbitration and by staying the action at law. Approximately five years later, the plaintiffs moved to compel certain discovery and the defendants responded with a motion to dismiss both the action at law and the arbitration proceedings on the ground that more than five years had elapsed since the complaint had been filed and the matter ordered to arbitration. The court granted the motion and entered judgment dismissing both the complaint and the arbitration proceedings.

The court of appeal reversed, relying on Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b). It noted that the stay exception was an offshoot of the catchall impossible/impracticable/futile doctrine developed in common law before enactment of Section 583.340 in 1984 (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797, n.4). For example, in Marcus v. Superior Court (1977) 75 Cal. App. 3d 204, 212-213,141 Cal. Rptr. 890 , the court held that in determining whether the five-year period has expired, the time during which it is impossible or impracticable to proceed to trial must be excluded and that while a stay order is in effect, it is impossible or impracticable to proceed to trial. This common law stay exception was then codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b) separately from the catchall exception of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797, n.4).

The court followed the reasoning of Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 , discussed under § 90.90[4][a], in which the court concluded that because a stay pending arbitration had been in effect for almost the entire action at law, it was impossible for the plaintiff to proceed (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797) . Likewise, here, the legal action was stayed during the arbitration proceedings and thus, the time during that stay should have been excluded, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b), for purposes of calculating the five-year period (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801) . The court reviewed cases involving dismissal of cases while submitted to contractual arbitration, and rejected those that failed to distinguish between a stayed civil action and the related arbitration or that improperly analogized contractual arbitration to judicial arbitration (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1797-1801) . Thus, the trial court erred in dismissing the action for delay in prosecution under the mandatory five-year dismissal statute (10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 1801) .

For forms relating to dismissal for delay in prosecuting an action submitted to contractual arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(a)

Ocean Services Corp. v. Ventura Port Dist. (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 1762, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , is discussed under § 90.90[3][a].

Brock v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1790, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 678 , is discussed under § 90.90[3][a].

[c] "Continuance" Having Legal Effect of "Stay"

Holland v. Dave Altman's R. V. Center (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 271 Cal. Rptr. 706 , was a personal injury action arising out of a two-vehicle accident, in which substituted service on the nonresident defendant driver was quashed, and plaintiff appealed. The court granted plaintiff's ex parte motion for a "continuance" pending the appeal; at that time there remained one year, four months, and fourteen days of the five-year period. About three weeks after the trial court granted the motion, it placed the case "off calendar pending ruling on appeal" with mandatory settlement conference and trial "to be reset ... after ruling of appellate court." Subsequently, the appellate court affirmed the order quashing service. The defendants moved to dismiss the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years after the complaint was filed, and the motion was granted. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. The court found that, although the trial court utilized the term "continuance," the order had the legal effect of a stay of the action pending the appeal (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 482) . It explained that the term "stay" appears to have a commonly understood meaning as an indefinite postponement of an act or the operation of some consequence, pending the occurrence of a designated event; that is, a stay is a temporary suspension of a procedure in a case until the happening of a defined contingency. By contrast, a continuance is a postponement of the trial of a pending action to a later date, at which time it automatically resumes (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 482) . The court also noted that it was plain from the trial court's order that the trial court did not intend to postpone trial to any known date, but, rather, it put the trial over indefinitely, until the happening of a designated event, namely, the determination of the appeal. Therefore, the court concluded that the trial was stayed while the order to quash was on appeal, and that by excluding that time from computation of the five-year period, the action was prematurely dismissed (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 483) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prosecution or Trial Stayed or Enjoined

In Gordon's Cabinet Shop v. State Comp. Ins. Fund (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 33, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 , plaintiff appealed after the trial court dismissed its action for failure to bring it to trial within five years. Plaintiff contended that the five-year period was tolled while defendant's coordination petition was pending. The court of appeal affirmed (74 Cal. App. 4th 33, 40) . In so doing, the court noted that Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1510 et seq. (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.510 et seq.) deal with procedure concerning coordination proceedings. Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1514(f) [see now Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.515(j)] provides that the time during which any stay of proceeding is in effect under the California Rules of Court on coordination procedure is not included in determining whether the action stayed should be dismissed for lack of prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. Thus, in the Rule concerning stay orders for coordination proceedings, express provision is made to toll the five year statute when a stay is granted. By implication, no tolling should be imputed to coordination proceedings unless a stay is granted. Accordingly, only that time when a stay has been actually granted is excluded from the time in which a case must be brought to trial. Because no stay was granted in the coordination proceeding, the coordination petition did not operate to toll the five-year dismissal statute ( 74 Cal. App. 4th 33, 40-41) .

In Rose v. Scott (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 537, 284 Cal. Rptr. 487 , plaintiffs alleged causes of action for fraud in the sale of real property,emotional distress and breach of an indemnity contract. Defendants moved to continue the trial setting conference because a related matter was pending before the City of Berkeley Rent Stabilization Board which would have a direct bearing on the case. The court granted the motion and continued the conference, subject to a motion for further continuance if the administrative matter had not become final. After the conference was continued a second time, a trial date was set. Additional delays were caused by motions made by both parties and the lack of an available courtroom. Ultimately, the court dismissed the action on its own motion.

Reversing, the court of appeal found, among other things, that the proceedings were properly stayed due to the administrative action and the time of the stay must be excluded in calculating the five-year limitation period, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b). The court rejected as specious defendants' argument that if the plaintiffs had not opposed the initial motion for continuance of the trial setting conference, the initial trial date would have been set for an earlier date (233 Cal. App. 3d 537, 541) . The court also held that periods of delay caused by defendants and by courtroom unavailability, should have been excluded from the computation of the five-year period so that the dismissal was premature (233 Cal. App. 3d 537, 541-542) .

In Byerly v. Sale (1988) 204 Cal App. 3d 1312, 251 Cal. Rptr. 749 , the defendant successfully moved to compel arbitration pursuant to the parties' contract and to stay the civil action for medical malpractice under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1281.2, 1281.4. Defendant's motion to dismiss on the ground that arbitration was not completed within five years of the filing of the civil action was granted. The court of appeal reversed, holding that it was impossible to bring the action to trial under the court's stay pending arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b), (c) (204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1314) . Under the court's view, dismissal of a previously stayed complaint had no effect on the pending arbitration; on this point the court disagreed with a contrary holding in Preston v. Kaiser Foundation Hospitals (1981) 126 Cal. App. 3d 402, 406, 178 Cal. Rptr. 882 (204 Cal. App. 3d 1312, 1316 n.3). For forms relating to dismissal for delay in prosecuting an action submitted to contractual arbitration, see Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling .

In Rosenthal v. Wilner (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 243 Cal. Rptr. 472 , plaintiffs brought a malpractice action against counsel who had defended them in a prior action. Plaintiffs meanwhile pursued an appeal in the prior action. Forty-one days before the expiration of the five-year period for bringing the action to trial, the trial court ordered the action stayed "pending resolution of the ... appeal" of the prior action. On appeal of the prior action, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment and issued a remittitur following the denial of petitions for rehearing in the court of appeal and review in the California Supreme Court. Plaintiffs, as appellants in the prior action, then filed a petition for writ of certiorari in the United States Supreme Court. While that petition was still pending in the prior action, defendants moved for dismissal of the malpractice action on the ground that the stay had ended on issuance of the remittitur, and plaintiffs had thereafter failed to bring the action to trial within six months after the end of the stay, as required under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350. The trial court dismissed the action accordingly, but the court of appeal reversed and remanded on appeal by plaintiffs. The court held that, because the stay was issued "pending resolution of the ... appeal" in another action, it continued until all avenues of judicial review of that action had been exhausted, including review by the United States Supreme Court (197 Cal. App. 3d 1327, 1333-1334) .

In Hughes v. Portsmouth Square, Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 170, 184 Cal. Rptr. 926 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's action for breach of contract. Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed the dismissal. The court held that since defendant was involved in bankruptcy proceedings in federal court, the filing of a petition in bankruptcy under Fed. R. Bankr. P., Rule 401(a), operated as a stay on the commencement or continuation of any action against the bankrupt person. Consequently, the court held that since it was an impossibility for plaintiff to commence action against defendant during the period of time it was involved in the bankruptcy proceedings, the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action (135 Cal. App. 3d 170, 172-173) .

Note

that the Bankruptcy Act provides that the commencement or continuation of any legal proceeding against the debtor is automatically stayed by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy. Thus it is inapplicable to toll the time within which a debtor-plaintiff has to serve a summons and complaint under the discretionary dismissal statutes [see Lauriton v. Carnation Co. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164, 263 Cal. Rptr. 476 (discussed in § 90.99[3][i]); Danielson v. ITT Industrial Credit Co. (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 645, 652-653, 245 Cal. Rptr. 126 (discussed in § 90.98[4][a])].

51 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.91

§ 90.91 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Bringing Action to Trial Was Impossible [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION BECAUSE THE TIME DURING WHICH IT WASIMPOSSIBLE FOR PLAINTIFF TO COMPLY WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE] SHOULD BE EXCLUDED FROM THE CALCULATION OF THE PERIOD(S) SPECIFIED IN THAT SECTION.

A. Failure to Comply Excused by Impossibility. The time during which it is impossible for a plaintiff to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] is excluded from the calculation of any period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c); see Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 ; Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 532-533, 71 P.2d 205).

B. Impossibility Defined. It is impossible to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] when, as a matter of law or fact, _____ [trial or a new trial] is either legally or factually not possible (Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 531-533, 71 P.2d 205). Impossibility is determined in light of all circumstances in the case (Monzon v. Schaefer Ambulance Service, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 16, 28, 273 Cal. Rptr. 615).

[Optional] C. Extraordinary Delay. The time during which it is not possible for plaintiff, in spite of diligence, to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] because of extraordinary delay in a court proceeding is excluded from calculation of any period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (see Bennett v. Bennett Cement Contractors, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 673, 676-677, 178 Cal. Rptr. 633 ; Brown v. Engstrom (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 524, 152 Cal. Rptr. 628 ; Goers v. Superior Court (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 72, 74-75, 129 Cal. Rptr. 29).

[Optional] D. Default. There are some circumstances in which tolling for impossibility, impracticability, or futility almost invariably applies. Such is the case when a default judgment has been entered in plaintiff's favor, effectively bringing the litigation to a standstill (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 437-438, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 ; Maguire v. Collier (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 309, 313, 122 Cal. Rptr. 510). The period is tolled until the default judgment is vacated [or if it is vacated conditionally, until the condition is fulfilled] (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 437-438, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469). A reasonable period between the default and the entry of judgment is also tolled. [One week between default and entry of judgment is an indubitably reasonable period] (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 438, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).

[Optional] E. No Courtroom Available. The time during which both parties are ready and no courtroom is available is excluded from calculation of any period specified in Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Chin v. Meier (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1473, 1478, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499).

F. Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining. [See § 90.92, Paragraph M.]

[Optional] G. Tolling or Extension of Time Resulting in Less Than Six Months to Bring Action. [See § 90.87, Paragraph F.]

[Optional] H. Application of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) After Judicial Arbitration. Tolling due to a post-arbitration condition of impossibility, impracticability, or futility is controlled by Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.340(c), not by Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.17 (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the time during which it is impossible to bring the action to trial must be excluded when calculating the applicable time period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)], and that there has been no failure to bring the action to trial or new trial within the required time after taking this exclusion into account.

Optional Paragraphs C through E set forth particular situations that courts have held to constitute a period during which bringing the action to trial was impossible. Within Optional Paragraph D two optional clausesare provided in brackets. These clauses may be used when relevant. Optional Paragraph G is for use when less than six months remained to bring the action to trial at the time the claimed period of impossibility ended.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.90, 90.92 -90.96].

The form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80. The points and authorities set out in § 90.99 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in this form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Before the 1984 enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c), which codified impossibility as an express exception to the dismissal statute's time requirements, a similar exception had been implied by the courts [see Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 530, 71 P.2d 205] . Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impossibility

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , are discussed in § 90.97[3][a]. In Howard, the California Supreme Court stated that the determination whether it was impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring a case to trial within a given time period is usually fact specific, depending on the obstacles faced by the plaintiff in prosecuting the action and the plaintiff's exercise of reasonable diligence in overcoming those obstacles (10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435) . The Court then noted that there are some circumstances in which tolling for impossibility, impracticability, or futility almost invariably applies, as discussed under § 90.91[3][d].

In Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 , the trial court granted defendants' second motion for change of venue but its order was reversed on appeal. Later, defendants moved to dismiss the action on the ground that it had not been brought to trial within five years. The trial court denied the motion and defendants petitioned for a writ of prohibition to prevent the court from proceeding with trial.

The Supreme Court denied the writ. In its landmark explanation of the implied impossibility exception, the Court rejected plaintiff's contention that only the written stipulations provided for in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 could suspend running of the period for bringing an action to trial. Despite the mandatory language of the statute, implied exceptions had been recognized when it was not possible to bring an action to trial (9 Cal. 2d 526, 530) . The period must be extended when, for all practical purposes, going to trial would be impossible, whether this is because of total lack of jurisdiction in the strict sense, or because proceeding to trial would be both impracticable and futile (9 Cal. 2d 526, 533) . The court described two forms of impossibility. One form exists when the court has lost jurisdiction in the sense that it is divested, as by an appeal or dismissal, of its power to act (9 Cal. 2d 526, 530-531) . The second form exists when it is not possible for the plaintiff to bring the cause to trial (9 Cal. 2d 526, 531) . Because the appeal from an order granting change of venue did not divest the trial court of the power to proceed, but trial was impossible since the records were absent, the second form of impossibility governed the case (9 Cal. 2d 526, 531-532) . In addition, proceeding to the trial would have been impracticable and futile, since the results would have been nullified if the order changing venue was found to be void. Therefore, the time consumed by appeal from the order changing venue was not counted as part of the five-year period (9 Cal. 2d 526, 532) .

[b] Impossibility Defined

Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 , is discussed under § 90.91[3][a].

In Monzon v. Schaefer Ambulance Service, Inc. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 16, 273 Cal. Rptr. 615 , the court of appeal held that, under the circumstances of the case, the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a motion to dismiss the case for failure to bring it to trial within the five-year period when the case was set for trial within that period but was postponed to a date beyond that period because of court congestion (lack of a courtroom) (224 Cal. App. 3d 16, 26-29) . The court explained that (1) under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 an action shall be brought to trial within five years after the action is commenced against the defendant; (2) the five-year period is tolled under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) when it is impossible, impracticable, or futile to comply with it; (3) a trial court's ruling on a motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 will be disturbed only on a showing of manifest abuse of discretion; and (4) what is impossible, impractical, or futile must be interpreted liberally, consistent with the policy favoring trial on the merits (224 Cal. App. 3d 16, 26) . What is impossible, impractical, or futile must be determined in light of all the circumstances in the individual case, including the conduct of the parties and the nature of the proceedings themselves. The critical factor in applying these exceptions to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case. Thus, whether an exception is applicable is generally a question of fact to be determined by the trial court under a totality of the circumstances test (224 Cal. App. 3d 16, 28) .

[c] Extraordinary Delay

Bennett v. Bennett Cement Contractors, Inc. (1981) 125 Cal. App. 3d 673, 178 Cal. Rptr. 633 , involved consolidated actions on a shareholder's derivative claim and a claim for indemnity. Because of ordinary delays the case had not been brought to trial. When approximately 18 months remained before expiration of the statutory period for bringing the case to trial, plaintiff moved to advance the trial date. The motion was granted, and a trial date was set, approximately 15 months before expiration of the statutory period. The trial date was continued five times and finally set after the statutory period had expired. Defendant's counsel had sought the first continuance because of a scheduling conflict with his own vacation plans. The other four continuances were based on the court's motion, due to lack of an available judge and courtroom. Defendant moved to dismiss for failure to bring the case to trial within the statutory period, and the motion was granted. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, applying the rule of Goers v. Superior Court (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 72, 74-75, 129 Cal. Rptr. 29 (discussed below). The court stated that while the normal time of waiting for a trial date is not excluded from computing the statutory five-year period, the period represented by additional delay because of court congestion after a trial date well within the statutory period has been set should be excluded from calculation of the period. Here, plaintiff had exercised reasonable diligence in moving for an advanced trial date when it appeared that the end of the five-year period was approaching, and had received a trial date well within the period. Subsequent delays were due to causes beyond plaintiff's control. The court concluded that dismissal under such circumstances was an abuse of discretion (125 Cal. App. 3d 673, 677) .

While the Goers opinion specifically addressed delays caused by court congestion, the Bennett court's holding also appears to exclude the period of delay caused by the first continuance on defendant's motion (125 Cal. App. 3d 673, 678) . For this reason, Bennett may broaden the Goers rule to cover periods of delay after setting of the original trial date that are beyond plaintiff's control.

The facts and procedural background of Brown v. Engstrom (1979) 89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 152 Cal. Rptr. 628 , are discussed in § 90.80[4][a]. In Brown, the court of appeal reversed the dismissal of an action for failure to bring it to trial within five years on the ground that it was impossible for trial to commence within that period (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 524) . The parties stipulated to arbitration almost ten months prior to expiration of the five-year period. Once a stipulation for judicial arbitration is executed and filed, a party may not withdraw from the arbitration proceedings (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 523) . Delays that are incidental to judicial procedure generally should be anticipated. The arbitration administrator over whom plaintiff had no control took an extraordinary amount of time and yet plaintiff was powerless to remove her case from arbitration and to proceed to trial (89 Cal. App. 3d 513, 524) .

In Goers v. Superior Court (1976) 57 Cal. App. 3d 72, 129 Cal. Rptr. 29 , petitioner sought to prevent an anticipated dismissal of his cross complaint by a writ of mandate ordering the court to commence trial within the statutory five-year period, or, alternatively, a writ of prohibition restraining the court from dismissing the action. The facts showed that on the date set for trial, no courtrooms were available and the court rescheduled the trial to a date that was one day after expiration of the five-year period. Cross defendant's counsel waived dismissal for up to five days after expiration of the period. However, the parties were unable to go to trial on the date scheduled or two days hence for lack of a judge or courtroom. They were also informed that no judge or courtroom was likely to be available on the last day for which dismissal had been waived.

The court of appeal issued the writ of mandate on the ground that the five-year statutory period had been tolled during the period that petitioner could not go to trial because of court congestion (57 Cal. App. 3d 72, 75) .The court reasoned that although the normal time of waiting for a place on the calendar is not excluded from computing the five-year period, when the plaintiff has waited the normal time and shows diligence in obtaining a trial date well within the five-year period, but it becomes impossible to proceed to trial because of continued court congestion, the period of court congestion should not be chargeable to the five-year period (57 Cal. App. 3d 72, 74-75) .

[d] Default

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , are discussed in § 90.97[3][a].

In Howard, the California Supreme Court held that once a case is no longer submitted to arbitration, Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 ceases to govern tolling of the time to bring the case to trial, and that *Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)*applies to post-arbitration tolling for impossibility, impracticability, or futility (10 Cal. 4th 424, 438) . The Court noted that there are some circumstances in which tolling for impossibility, impracticability, or futility almost invariably applies, including the time between entry of a default judgment the day the judgment is vacated. Therefore, in the case before it, in which the defendant failed to timely request trial de novo after judicial arbitration, the period to bring the case to trial was tolled between the date judgment was entered on the arbitration award and the date that judgment was vacated (10 Cal. 4th 424, 438) . Moreover, because the order vacating the judgment was conditional on the defendant's payment of sanctions, the period was tolled until the defendant paid the sanctions, satisfying that condition (10 Cal. 4th 424, 439) .

The Court also held that a reasonable period between default and the entry of judgment is also tolled. Thus, the Court held that the time to bring the case to trial was tolled for the one week between the day the defendant's right to request trial de novo expired until the entry of judgment. The Court expressly stated that one week was an indubitably reasonable period (10 Cal. 4th 424, 438-439) .

In Maguire v. Collier (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 309, 122 Cal. Rptr. 510 , cross complainant appealed from dismissal of her cross complaint pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360].

The court of appeal reversed, holding that because certain periods should have been excluded from the computation, the five-year period had not expired (49 Cal. App. 3d 309, 312-313) . It is established law that the period during which an adversary is in default, as well as the period during which a default judgment is in effect, is to be excluded from computation of the mandatory five-year dismissal period. Although the court did not discuss the impossibility doctrine directly, it alluded to the principle by commenting that the reason for the rule excluding default time was the impracticability of taking steps to bring the case to trial (49 Cal. App. 3d 309, 313) .

The Maguire "rule" that a period of defendant's default prior to the entry of a default judgment is to be excluded from the mandatory dismissal period, and that the exclusion is not a matter in the court's discretion, was rejected in Hughes v. Kimble (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 59, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 616 . The Hughes court identified the Maguire rule as dictum, and noted that the courts that have accepted it have done so without extensive analysis [citing Dale v. ITT Life Ins. Corp. (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 495, 498-499, 255 Cal. Rptr. 8 ; Alvarado Community Hospital v. Superior Court (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 476, 485, 219 Cal. Rptr. 52 ; Ippolito v. Municipal Court (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 682, 686-687, 136 Cal. Rptr. 795] . The Hughes court held that the normal case-by-case analysis of impossibility, impracticability, or futility should be applied to determine whether, in the court's discretion, a period after default has been taken should be excluded from the time to bring the action to trial [Hughes v. Kimble (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 59, 66-71, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 616] . The Hughes court did, however, recognize that the impossibility exception obviously and necessarily applies when the plaintiff obtains a default judgment and the judgment is later vacated. That time must be excluded from the computation of time remaining to bring the case to trial after vacation of the judgment [Hughes v. Kimble (1992) 5 Cal. App. 4th 59, 68, 6 Cal. Rptr. 2d 616] . In Hughes, after taking the defendant's default, plaintiff took no action for three years until the court moved to dismiss the action, and the appellate court upheld the dismissal. In Howard, the Supreme Court cited both Maguire and Hughes without criticism. Under Howard, it is clear that the impossibility exception will "almost invariably" apply to the period during which a default judgment is in effect, but that only a reasonable period of time between default and the entry of the default judgment will be excluded [Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469] .

[e] No Courtroom Available

In Chin v. Meier (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1473, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 499 , the court granted defendant's motion to dismiss an action for injunctive relief and damages based on plaintiff's failure to bring the action to trial within five years, as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that the statute was tolled during several court-ordered continuances when both sides announced their readiness but no courtroom was available.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that tolling under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) includes the aggregate time a case is continued because ofcourtroom unavailability regardless of whether a reasonable time remains to bring the action to trial before the expiration of the five-year limitation period (235 Cal. App. 3d 1473, 1477-1478) . When the statute was enacted in 1984, the California Law Revision Commission commented that this interpretation overrules cases such as Brown v. Superior Court (1976) 62, Cal. App. 3d 197, 199, 132 Cal. Rptr. 916 , in which the court terminated plaintiff's action even though plaintiff was incarcerated after the complaint was filed but released two years prior to the deadline (235 Cal. App. 3d 1473, 1477) . Thus, for purposes of the five-year limitation period, a court-ordered continuance when both sides announce "ready" and no courtroom is available is to be treated as a discrete tolling event (235 Cal. App. 3d 1473, 1478) .

[f] Application of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) After Judicial Arbitration

Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , is discussed under § 90.91[3][d]. If this optional paragraph is relevant, the facts of the case may allow for an additional period of time to be tolled by Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, and possibly by Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20. For forms of points and authorities arguing that the five-year period for bringing the case to trial is tolled by those statutes, see §§ 90.96 and 90.97, respectively.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impossibility

In Rim Forest Lumber Co. v. Woodside Construction Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 235 Cal. Rptr. 443 , complaints were filed against various defendants for money due and owing, foreclosure of mechanic's liens, and to enforce a stop notice. Some of the defendants, but not all, subsequently filed petitions for bankruptcy under Title 11 of the United States Code; the actions against only them were automatically stayed under 11 U.S.C. § 362. The trial court was aware of the pendency of the bankruptcy actions. In the meantime, plaintiff reasonably investigated whether relief from the stay could be obtained, but was advised by counsel that such relief would be unlikely. Within the five-year period, plaintiff moved to set specially for trial and to sever the nonbankruptcy defendants from the bankruptcy defendants. The trial court denied the motion, and instead on its own motion dismissed the actions pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a). The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court abused its discretion in its orders. Because the actions against the bankruptcy defendants were unquestionably stayed and it was legally impossible to proceed against them, it became legally impossible to proceed against any defendants when the court denied the motion to sever the nonbankruptcy defendants from the bankruptcy defendants (190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 468) . Further, even if the nonbankruptcy defendants had been severed, it would have been impracticable to proceed to trial during the pendency of the bankruptcies of the bankruptcy defendants, who were indispensable parties (190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 469) .

[b] Impossibility Defined

Rose Associates v. Coombe (1990) 225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 275 Cal. Rptr. 1 , involved a cross complaint for fraud and breach of contract arising out of the sale of a multimillion dollar hotel, in which judgment was for the plaintiff. The court of appeal, in slightly modifying the judgment and affirming it as modified, upheld the trial court's finding of impossibility or impracticability. After pointing out that a special reference does not toll the five-year statute as the trial judge had mistakenly believed, the court explained that that does not, however, mean the trial court erred in finding the excuse of impossibility or impracticability, and that it deferred to the trial court's finding absent an abuse of discretion. The trial court determines whether it is impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring a case to trial in light of all the circumstances in the individual case, including the acts and conduct of the parties and the nature of the proceedings themselves. The critical factor in applying the exceptions to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case (225 Cal. App. 3d 9, 17) .

[c] Extraordinary Delay

In Breacher v. Breacher (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 89, 190 Cal. Rptr. 112 , the action was originally set for trial within the five-year mandatory period, but was delayed because of court congestion and disqualification of two judges. Another delay was caused when defendant's counsel requested a continuance in order to avoid being on "beeper" call during the Christmas holiday. Shortly thereafter, defendants moved to dismiss the action for failure to prosecute within five years, and the trial court ordered the case dismissed. The court of appeal reversed the order, finding that each delay fell within well-established tolling periods or exceptions. The applicable exceptions included delay for court congestion, which the court held is not counted in calculating the mandatory five-year period (141 Cal. App. 3d 89, 91) . The court also found that defendants were estopped to seek dismissal by their request to delay the trial further during the holiday season (141 Cal. App. 3d 89, 92) .

[d] No Courtroom Available

In Rose v. Scott (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 537, 284 Cal. Rptr. 487 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's action for failure to bring it to trial withinfive years. Plaintiff argued that the five-year statute should have been tolled during two of three time periods because of continuances requested by defendants. The statute should also have been tolled on the grounds of impossibility because no courtroom was available. The appellate court agreed and reversed the judgment of dismissal. The court reiterated the rule that delay may be excused if it has been impossible or impracticable to proceed to trial, and that impossibility occurs when there is no courtroom available (233 Cal. App. 3d 537, 542) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.92

§ 90.92 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial or New Trial Tolled by Statutory Exclusion--Bringing Action to Trial Was Impracticable or Futile [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE TIME DURING WHICH IT WAS IMPRACTICABLE OR FUTILE FOR PLAINTIFF TO COMPLY WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE] SHOULD BE EXCLUDED FROM THE CALCULATION OF THE PERIOD(S) SPECIFIED IN THAT SECTION.

A. Failure to Comply Excused by Impracticability or Futility. The time during which it is impracticable or futile for plaintiff to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] is excluded from the calculation of any period specified in Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c); see Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 551-552, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 ; Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 532-533, 71 P.2d 205).

B. Impracticability and Futility Defined. It is impracticable and futile to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] when _____ [trial or a new trial] would involve excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense (Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 554, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553).

[Optional] C. Multiple Defendants. The time during which it is impossible or impracticable to proceed against a permissibly joined defendant is excluded from calculation of a period specified in Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] if it would involve excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense to sever the action and proceed separately against the other defendants (see Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 553-554, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553).

[Optional] D. When Severance Is Impracticable. In determining whether severance is impracticable, the court may consider all the circumstances of a particular case, including the expense, complexity, and quantity of evidentiary duplication that severance would entail, the potential problems that inconsistent judicial determinations would produce, and the degree of hardship or prejudice to the defendants occasioned by the delay (Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 554, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553).

[Optional] E. Appeal of Separate Action. The time during the pendency of an appeal of an action distinct from a plaintiff's action is excluded from calculation of a period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] when the appeal would resolve issues on which the plaintiff's cause of action is based (see Rose v. Knapp (1951) 38 Cal. 2d 114, 117-118, 237 P.2d 981 ; Stella v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 732, 738-739, 91 Cal. Rptr. 771).

[Optional] F. Pending Interlocutory Appeal. An interlocutory appeal may toll the running of the five-year statute, even if the trial court technically retains jurisdiction to try the matter, if it would be impracticable to proceed to trial pending resolution of the appeal (Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 532-533, 71 P.2d 205 ; Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67).

[Optional] G. Pending Successful Review by Writ of Trial Court's Summary Adjudication of Issues. It is impracticable within the meaning of section 583.340 of the Code of Civil Procedure to proceed to trial while a writ petition which successfully challenged the trial court's summary adjudication of issues was pending in a court of appeal, even though no stay was issued by the court of appeal (Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1479, 1482-1486, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67).

[Optional] H. Unsuccessful Writ Proceeding to Overturn Denial of Summary Judgment Motion. The five-year period in which to bring an action to trial is tolled during the pendency of a writ petitionseeking to overturn the denial of the defendant's summary judgment motion when it is impracticable within the meaning of Section 583.340(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure to proceed to trial while the writ petition is pending, even though the petition is subsequently denied (New West Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Superior Court (Weber) (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 1151-1156, 273 Cal. Rptr. 37).

[Optional] I. Time Needed for Consolidation. The time required to consolidate two cases for trial is excluded from calculation of a period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] when both actions involve identical evidence on complex factors and the plaintiff did not cause intentional delay (see General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 88, 96-97, 52 Cal. Rptr. 460, 416 P.2d 492).

[Optional] J. Pending Assignment of New Judge Following Successful Peremptory Challenge. The court, in considering a motion to dismiss pursuant to section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure, must disregard the period that the _____ [trial or new trial] is held in abeyance pending assignment of a new judge following a successful peremptory challenge under section 170.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure (see Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 768, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 ; Nail v. Osterholm (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 682, 686, 91 Cal. Rptr. 908).

[Optional] K. Time Between Death of Claimant and Appointment of Personal Representative. The time period after plaintiff dies and before the estate is opened or a personal representative is appointed to prosecute decedent's claims is considered a period of temporary impracticability and futility that is excluded from the calculation of time within which an action must be brought to trial under section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (Pham v. Wagner Litho Machinery Co. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 972-973, 218 Cal. Rptr. 476).

[Optional] L. Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel. The time during which plaintiff's counsel is gravely ill is excluded from the calculation of time within which an action must be brought to trial under section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] when it renders impractical the bringing of the case to trial within the statutory period and plaintiff has otherwise exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case (Him v. Superior Court (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39, 228 Cal. Rptr. 839).

M. Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining. The time within which an action must be brought to trial is tolled for the period of the excuse, regardless whether a reasonable time remained at the end of the period of the excuse to bring the action to trial (Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1486, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67).

[Optional] N. Tolling or Extension of Time Resulting in Less Than Six Months to Bring Action. [See § 90.87, Paragraph G.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the time during which it is impracticable or futile to bring the action to trial must be excluded when calculating the applicable time period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)], and that there has been no failure to bring the action to trial or new trial within the required time after taking this exclusion into account.

Optional Paragraphs C through L set forth particular situations that courts have held to constitute a period during which bringing the action to trial was impracticable or futile. Optional Paragraph N is for use when less than six months remained to bring the action to trial at the time the claimed period of impossibility ended.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.91, 90.93 -90.96].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80. The points and authorities set out in § 90.100 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in foregoing form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Before the 1984 enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c), which codified impracticability and futility as express exceptions to the dismissal statute's time requirements, a similar exception had been implied by the courts [see Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 551-552, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553] . Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impracticability or Futility

Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 , was an action brought in California on a contract for construction of a casino in Reno, Nevada. Plaintiff joined several parties who were involved in the construction project. The defending casino, in turn, sued plaintiff and one of the other defendants in a Nevada court. One week after it was resolved that trial would proceed in California, some defendants moved to dismiss the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years. They contended, apparently, that since it was possible for plaintiff to have proceeded against them by effecting a severance, the impossibility exception did not apply. The trial court granted the motion, dismissed the case, and plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded, holding that the impossibility exception could apply if, although technically possible, proceeding against a defendant might be impracticable and futile as a pragmatic matter (2 Cal. 3d 545, 553-554) . Impracticability and futility, as implied exceptions, are not equated with strict impossibility (2 Cal. 3d 545, 551-552) . They require a determination of excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense in light of all the circumstances of the particular case (2 Cal. 3d 545, 554) . When causes may be consolidated or severed, the determination of whether or not it would be impracticable and futile to proceed on only some of the actions requires consideration of a great variety of factors. These include the expense, complexity, and quantity of evidentiary duplication, the potential problems of inconsistent judicial determinations, the degree of hardship or prejudice to the defendants occasioned by the delay, and the diligence and good-faith efforts of the plaintiff (2 Cal. 3d 545, 554-555) . That a plaintiff can sever the causes of action and proceed separately against one codefendant does not lead inevitably to the conclusion that such a trial is not impracticable and futile (2 Cal. 3d 545, 553) .

Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 , is discussed in § 90.91[3][a].

[b] Impracticability and Futility Defined

Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 , is discussed under § 90.92[3][a].

[c] Multiple Defendants

The facts and procedural background of Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 , are discussed under § 90.92[3][a]. In Brunzell, the Supreme Court held that to require severance of causes of action against permissibly joined defendants whenever proceeding against one of them within the statutory periods for dismissal becomes impossible or impracticable would be to require unproductive duplication of effort, compel incurrence of excessive expense, and generally undermine the policies served by modern theories of consolidation in a substantial number of cases (2 Cal. 3d 545, 553-554) .

[d] When Severance Is Impracticable

Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 , is discussed under § 90.92[3][a] and [3][c].

[e] Appeal of Separate Action

Rose v. Knapp (1951) 38 Cal. 2d 114, 237 P.2d 981 , was an action to quiet title. The trial court dismissed the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years.

The Supreme Court reversed the dismissal on the ground that the trial court had not excluded the period during which an appeal was pending in a related decision that invalidated the sale on which plaintiff's title was predicated (38 Cal. 2d 114, 118) . While that judgment was outstanding and until it was reversed or set aside, it effectively barred prosecution of plaintiff's quiet title action and it would have been impracticable and futile for plaintiff to have attempted to bring the action to trial (38 Cal. 2d 114, 117-118) .

Stella v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 732, 91 Cal. Rptr. 771 , was an action for negligence in construction of plaintiffs' house. Plaintiffs were two of several homeowners who had purchased poorly designed homes. Several of the other homeowners also sued and consolidated their cases. Prior to trial of plaintiffs' case, the trial court in the consolidated cases granted defendant's motion for nonsuit. The court of appeal reversed, and subsequently the Supreme Court upheld the opinion of the court of appeal. During this period of appeals, plaintiffs' attorney did not bring the action to trial and did not file a trial setting memorandum until two days after the five-year statutory period had expired. The trial court granted defendant's motion for dismissal of plaintiffs' action.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the statutory period was tolled until final resolution of the consolidated cases. The nonsuit and subsequent appeal in the consolidated case created a time period during which it would have been impracticable and futile for plaintiffs to proceed to trial. The court reasoned that the substantive issues were the same in both cases, the question of the liability of the defendant as a loan company was unsettled, the litigation might have been meaningless if the issue had been settled in defendant's favor, and defendant was not prejudiced by the delay because, although evidence could be lost over time, that problem was no more acute here than in the consolidated case that then had to be tried (13 Cal. App. 3d 732, 738-739) .

[f] Pending Interlocutory Appeal

The procedural and factual background of Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 , is discussed in § 90.91[3][a]. In upholding the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to dismiss, the Court held that the five-year period was tolled for the time during which the venue appeal had been pending. The Court said that the purpose of the mandatory dismissal statute is plain, namely, to prevent avoidable delay for too long a period, and that it was not designed arbitrarily to close the proceeding at all events in five years (9 Cal. 2d 526, 532) . The Court said that modern cases recognize as a defense not only objective impossibility in the true sense, but also impracticability due to excessive and unreasonable difficulty or expense (9 Cal. 2d 526, 533) .

The procedural background of Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67 , is discussed under § 90.92[3][m]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court said that in Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 71 P.2d 205 (discussed above), the California Supreme Court established the rule that an interlocutory appeal may toll the running of the five-year statute, even if the trial court technically retains jurisdiction to try the matter, if it would be impracticable to proceed to trial pending resolution of the appeal (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1483) .

[g] Pending Successful Review by Writ of Trial Court's Summary Adjudication of Issues

The procedural background of Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67 , is discussed under § 90.92[3][m]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court said it was impracticable within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340 to proceed to trial while a writ petition which successfully challenged the trial court's summary adjudication of issues was pending in a court of appeal (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1479) . After remarking that the trial court had apparently been concerned that no stay had been issued by the court of appeal pending its resolution of the writ petition, the court said that while it could undoubtedly have been clearer in its handling of the issue in its writ opinion, the question of whether the five-year statute is tolled by some applicable exception is generally a question of law to be resolved after the fact rather than by means of a stay issued by the appellate court before anyone contends the five-year period has run. The court said that, because at the time plaintiffs filed their writ petition, the case had already been taken off calendar, there was nothing for the court of appeal to stay, and that the trial court should have drawn no inference from its failure to act on the plaintiffs' stay request (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1486) .

The court also rejected defendants' suggestion that plaintiffs could have tried the case and pursued their writ petition simultaneously, relying on the appellate court to resolve the writ issue before the close of evidence to enable them to present any additional evidence and argue the issue to the jury. The court did not believe that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340 required counsel to speculate on how quickly the court of appeal will decide a writ petition and whether it will issue a stay (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485) . However, the court noted that an attorney who decides not to proceed to trial in such a case may act at his or her peril in that if he or she is correctand the writ petition is ultimately deemed meritorious, the attorney's decision to forego trial effectively results in the same situation as if a stay had been issued to prevent trial, but, if the writ petition is denied, it may later be determined that it was not impracticable to proceed to trial because the remedy at law was adequate (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1485-1486 n.4).

[h] Unsuccessful Writ Proceeding to Overturn Denial of Summary Judgment Motion

New West Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Superior Court (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 273 Cal. Rptr. 37 , arose out of an action against a lender for damages for alleged wrongful acts in failing to comply with the terms of its agreement. The complaint was filed October 16, 1984, and plaintiffs' at-issue memorandum was filed January 27, 1989. Trial was set for July 31, 1989. Defendant's motion for summary judgment was heard June 29, 1989, and denied July 5, 1989. On July 20, 1989, defendant filed in the court of appeal a petition for writ of mandate and request for stay, seeking reversal of the denial of its summary judgment motion. The appellate court issued a stay on July 27, 1989. On August 1, 1989, the appellate court granted the writ and continued the stay in effect until the trial court entered an order complying with Code Civ. Proc. § 437c. On August 24, 1989, the superior court entered a new order, again denying the motion. This had the effect of dissolving the appellate court's stay order, which had been in effect for 28 days. On September 7, 1989, defendant filed another petition for writ of mandate seeking to overturn the trial court's second order, but did not seek a stay. On October 17, 1989, plaintiffs requested the appellate court to issue a stay. On October 27, 1989, the appellate court denied both the second petition and the stay request. The second petition had been pending in the appellate court for 50 days. On November 1, 1989, plaintiffs filed a motion to set specially a trial date, which was granted on November 28, 1989, and the case was set for trial on March 26, 1990. On February 27, 1990, defendant filed a motion to dismiss plaintiffs' suit for failure to bring the case to trial within the five-year period as extended pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350. The motion was heard on March 15, 1990, and denied on March 21, 1990. Relying on Kaye v.

Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67 , discussed under § 90.92[3][f] and [3][m], the trial court ruled that the trial date of March 26, 1990, did not exceed the statutory limitation, on the basis of its finding that a period of 50 days should be tolled because of the impracticability of bringing the case to trial while the second writ proceeding was pending. Defendant's petition for a writ of mandate to compel dismissal of the action was denied. The appellate court pointed out that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) must be interpreted liberally, consistent with the policy favoring trial on the merits (223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 1153) . Quoting Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229 , the court said that what is impossible, impracticable, or futile must be determined in light of all the circumstances in the individual case, including the acts and conduct of the parties and the nature of the proceedings themselves, and that the critical factor in applying these exceptions to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case (223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 1150) . The court, after discussing cases, said that there was ample precedent for the trial court to have found that the pendency of the second writ petition made it impracticable for plaintiffs to go to trial until it was resolved, and that, in addition to legal precedent, the record fully supported the trial court's ruling (223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 1152) .

[i] Time Needed for Consolidation

General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 88, 52 Cal. Rptr. 460, 416 P.2d 492 , began as an action for damages for personal injuries. After it was filed one of the plaintiffs died, and a remaining plaintiff joined a wrongful death action that was eventually consolidated with the first action. Defendant moved to dismiss the first cause of action for want of prosecution within five years, but the motion was denied. Defendant then petitioned for a writ of prohibition.

The Supreme Court denied the writ on the ground that the statutory period for bringing the action to trial had been tolled because it would have been futile for plaintiffs to have attempted to prosecute their actions in separate and successive trials (65 Cal. 2d 88, 96-97) . Both actions required the parties to present identical evidence on complex mechanical and technical factors. To insist that the relevant evidence be duplicated at two separate trials would exacerbate the already substantial burdens of litigation, and plaintiffs had not intentionally caused the delay (65 Cal. 2d 88, 96) .

[j] Pending Assignment of New Judge Following Successful Peremptory Challenge

Hartman v. Santamarina (1982) 30 Cal. 3d 762, 180 Cal. Rptr. 337, 639 P.2d 979 , was a medical malpractice action filed in 1974. After several continuances from the first assigned trial date, and vacation of one trial date because no judge was available, the case was assigned for trial in early 1978. However, defendant made a peremptory challenge of one judge under Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6, and plaintiff challenged the replacement. Since no other judge was available, the case was continued until January of 1979, 23 days before the fifth anniversary of the filing date. On the day set for trial, plaintiff's counsel was engaged in another trial that was taking longer than anticipated. In order to avoid the mandatory dismissal of plaintiff's action for failure to bring it to trial within five years, the parties selected a jury. The jury was sworn and the court granted plaintiff's motionfor a continuance over defendant's objection. The court then discharged the jury on its own initiative and continued the trial until August of 1979. In July of 1979, defendant filed a motion to dismiss. The court granted the motion, and plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. It held that the action was brought to trial within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] when the jury was impaneled (30 Cal. 3d 762, 765-767) . Furthermore, the Court held that dismissal was premature because the parties' challenges to the trial judges pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 resulted in an 11-month delay. The Court stated that the period that the trial is held in abeyance pending the assignment of another judge is to be disregarded in considering a subsequent motion to dismiss (30 Cal. 3d 762, 768) . Here, the motion to dismiss was granted six months after the five-year period had run. Thus, the Court stated that by any reckoning, the dismissal was premature (30 Cal. 3d 762, 768-769) .

Nail v. Osterholm (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 682, 91 Cal. Rptr. 908 , was a malpractice action filed in 1963. In 1967, a pretrial conference was held and a jury trial was set to commence a few months later. The trial judge was disqualified on the date for trial by a peremptory challenge pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6. Since no other judge was available, the trial judge told the parties that another judge had to be assigned by the Judicial Council. In May of 1968, plaintiff's counsel asked the court clerk why no new trial date had been assigned, and was informed that a memorandum to set was necessary. Counsel filed the memorandum two weeks later, but then moved, unsuccessfully, for a change of venue. In August of 1968, the presiding judge reset the case for trial in February of 1969. In October of 1968, plaintiff moved to advance the trial date because it had been set beyond the mandatory five-year dismissal period. Defendants moved to dismiss on the ground that the case had not been brought to trial within two years after filing. Both motions were denied. In December of 1968, defendants moved to dismiss on the ground that the action had not been brought to trial within the mandatory five-year period. The motion was granted and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, stating that the period during which trial is held in abeyance pending the assignment of another judge is to be disregarded in considering a subsequent motion to dismiss. There is an implied exception to the mandatory dismissal requirement of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] if a mechanical application would result in injustice. The Court has repeatedly stated that the time elapsing during periods in which it is impossible, impracticable, or futile to go to trial is to be disregarded in considering a motion to dismiss (13 Cal. App. 3d 682, 686) . Furthermore, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 is procedural, not jurisdictional, with a purpose to prevent avoidable delay, and must be reconciled with a litigant's basic right to disqualify a judge pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6. The court said that if it were to hold that the five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 is never tolled by the exercise of a challenge made pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6, it would unduly favor a procedural statute over one of substance and make it possible for a defendant to use the challenge to deprive plaintiff of his or her day in court. Therefore, the dismissal of plaintiff's action resulted in a miscarriage of justice (13 Cal. App. 3d 682, 686-687) .

[k] Time Between Death of Claimant and Appointment of Personal Representative

In Pham v. Wagner Litho Machinery Co. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 218 Cal. Rptr. 476 , plaintiff brought an action for personal injury on January 9, 1978 and defendants answered the complaint that year. In September, 1979, plaintiff was killed by her husband, who then committed suicide. An amended complaint was filed in November, 1982, naming the administrator of the deceased husband's estate as plaintiff. In February, 1983, defendants filed a motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring the action to trial within five years. The substituted administrator opposed the motion on the grounds that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f) tolled the five-year statute during any period in which the jurisdiction of the court was suspended, and that jurisdiction was suspended during the three-year period between plaintiff's death and the representative's substitution. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the period of time between plaintiff's death and the substitution of the personal representative in her place was not to be included in calculating the five-year period during which the action must be brought to trial. Since the authority of retained counsel generally does not survive the death of a client, plaintiff's death left no person or entity to prosecute her claim and any proceeding taken in the absence of a personal representative could have been set aside as void (172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 972-973) . The court, agreeing with plaintiff's argument that jurisdiction to try the action was suspended, noted in a footnote that the phrase "lack of jurisdiction" has been construed by the California Supreme Court in Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 288, 109 P.2d 942 to mean that although the court may have jurisdiction over the subject matter and the parties in the fundamental sense, it has no power to act except in a particular manner, or to give certain kinds of relief, or to act without the occurrence of certain procedural prerequisites (172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 971 fn 6).

[l] Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel

Him v. Superior Court (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 35, 228 Cal. Rptr. 839), was a mandate proceeding arising out of a personal injury action whichpetitioner had failed to bring to trial within the five-year period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. Real party's motion to dismiss the action was denied on the ground that the five-year period was tolled for 42 days because of the acute and serious illness of petitioner's counsel as well as for the additional period consumed by the motion to dismiss proceeding (calculated to be 61 days). Petitioner's subsequent motion to set the case specially for trial within the extended period was denied on the ground that there would be left insufficient time to give the 15-day notice of trial as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 594.

The court of appeal directed that a peremptory writ of mandate be issued, compelling the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion to set specially. The court held that because less than six months remained at the end of the tolling period within which the case could be brought to trial, the period was extended six months under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350. In rejecting real party's argument that the five-year statute, as a matter of law, could not be tolled because of the attorney's illness, the appellate court explained that (1) the existence of impracticability is determined in light of all the circumstances of the individual case, including the acts and conduct of the parties and the nature of the proceedings themselves; (2) the critical factor in applying the exception to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case; (3) the law, properly stated, is that delay attributable to sickness or death of counsel is not necessarily excusable; and (4) each case must be decided on its own peculiar features and facts (184 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39) . Evaluating the facts of the case by the reasonable diligence standard codified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340, the court concluded, under the facts of the case, that real party had failed to meet his burden of showing that the trial court had abused its discretion in ruling that the five-year period was tolled (184 Cal. App. 3d 35, 39) .

[m] Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining

Kaye v. Mount La Jolla Homeowners Assn. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 252 Cal. Rptr. 67 , was an action by the owners of a condominium against the condominium association, its directors, and its members for compensatory and punitive damages for failure to maintain and repair the common areas of the condominium, as required by the condominium's covenants, conditions, and restrictions, as a result of which plaintiffs' condominium sustained substantial damage. Defendants' motion for summary adjudication of issues seeking to eliminate plaintiffs' claims for punitive damages was granted. Plaintiffs petitioned the court of appeal for writ review, and a peremptory writ of mandate, reversing the summary adjudication of issues as to the association, was issued on the last business day before the end of the five-year statutory period for bringing the action to trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. The court's opinion provided that it was final immediately because the trial date had to be set by November 24, 1986, to avoid the running of the five-year statute. On November 25th, plaintiffs filed a motion in the superior court to set the case specially for trial, arguing that the five-year statute had been tolled on a variety of theories. Defendants responded that the five-year statute had run and no exceptions were applicable. The trial court agreed with defendants and dismissed the action.

The court of appeal reversed. After holding that the five-year period was tolled pending the successful writ review, the court, quoting the Law Revision Commission Comment to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340, held that the time within which an action must be brought to trial is tolled for the period of the excuse, regardless of whether a reasonable time remained at the end of the period of the excuse to bring the action to trial (204 Cal. App. 3d 1476, 1486) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply Excused by Impracticability or Futility

The facts and procedural background of Holland v. Dave Altman's R.V. Center (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 271 Cal. Rptr. 706 , are discussed in § 90.90[3][c]. In reversing the order dismissing the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years from the date the complaint was filed, the court of appeal pointed out that the evident purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340 is to exclude from the mandatory dismissal provision time periods during which the case could not be brought to trial. The court said that (1) the absence of trial court jurisdiction to try the case (the contingency covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)) is one reason; (2) a court order barring the trial by a stay or injunction (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(b)) is another; and (3) each of these is an example of impossibility, impracticability, or futility in bringing the case to trial. The court said that the final provision (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)) recognizes "any other reason" that it was impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring the case to trial, that what all of these provisions have in common is the practical inability of the parties to proceed to trial. Each prevents a trial, and each is recognized as a basis to toll the running of the statutory period. The court noted plaintiff's two options had she continued with the case pending the appeal: (1) dismiss the nonresident defendant driver as a party from the case, which would have effected an abandonment of her appeal; or (2) sever the action of the nonresident defendant driver from the action against the resident defendant owners, who were sued both on their vicarious liability and on the theory of negligent entrustment, which ran the risk of duplicative proceedings, with all the waste of time and resources (of the parties andthe court) that would have entailed, that, if plaintiff recovered judgment against the resident defendants and the order to quash were subsequently reversed, the result would be another trial involving the same issues against the nonresident defendant. The court concluded that neither alternative was viable, and added that a further reason making it impracticable and futile to bring the case to trial within the original five-year period was that the trial court had ordered otherwise; that on two occasions, the trial court had stated its view, in unambiguous terms, that the case was not to proceed to trial until the pending appeal had been decided, and that plaintiff could not be expected to fly in the face of such orders, and that she should not be penalized for not having done so (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 484) .

In Rim Forest Lumber Co. v. Woodside Construction Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 235 Cal. Rptr. 443 , complaints were filed against various defendants for money due and owing, foreclosure of mechanic's liens, and to enforce a stop notice. Some of the defendants, but not all, subsequently filed petitions for bankruptcy under Title 11 of the United States Code; the actions against only them were automatically stayed under 11 U.S.C. § 362. The trial court was aware of the pendency of the bankruptcy actions. In the meantime, plaintiff reasonably investigated whether relief from the stay could be obtained, but was advised by counsel that such relief would be unlikely. Within the five-year period, plaintiff moved to set specially for trial and to sever the nonbankruptcy defendants from the bankruptcy defendants. The trial court denied the motion, and instead on its own motion dismissed the actions pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)]. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court abused its discretion in its orders. Because the actions against the bankruptcy defendants were unquestionably stayed and it was legally impossible to proceed against them, it became legally impossible to proceed against any defendants when the court denied the motion to sever the nonbankruptcy defendants from the bankruptcy defendants (190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 468) . Further, even if the nonbankruptcy defendants had been severed, it would have been impracticable to proceed to trial during the pendency of the bankruptcies of the bankruptcy defendants, who were indispensable parties (190 Cal. App. 3d 454, 469) .

[b] Appeal of Separate Action

McRoberts v. Gorham (1971) 18 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 96 Cal. Rptr. 427 , involved separate state and federal actions against different defendants arising out of one vehicle collision. Plaintiffs obtained judgment in federal court, but their recovery was reversed on appeal. While the federal action was pending, plaintiffs' state action was dismissed pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failing to bring it to trial. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the state trial court had failed to determine whether proceeding to trial was impracticable in the light of factors described in Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Wagner (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 545, 554, 86 Cal. Rptr. 297, 468 P.2d 553 (discussed under § 90.91[3][a]). The court noted that the prosecution of two separate actions was inevitable because defendant in the federal action, the federal government, could not be joined in the state action and attempts to transfer the state action to the federal forum had proven unsuccessful. Moreover, plaintiffs were diligent in their prosecution of the federal action and apparently all of the parties preferred a final adjudication of the federal action before proceeding with the state trial (18 Cal. App. 3d 1040, 1044-1045) .

[c] Pending Assignment of New Judge Following Successful Peremptory Challenge

The facts and procedural background of Breacher v. Breacher (l983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 89, 190 Cal. Rptr. 112 , are discussed in § 90.91[4][c]. In discussing the applicable exceptions preventing dismissal for failure to prosecute, the court held that the period a trial is held in abeyance pending assignment of another judge pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 170.6 is to be disregarded in considering a subsequent motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] (141 Cal. App. 3d 89, 91) .

[d] Period of Excuse Excluded Regardless of Time Remaining

The facts and procedural background of New West Fed. Savings & Loan Assn. v. Superior Court (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 273 Cal. Rptr. 37 , are discussed in § 90.92[3][h]. In denying the petition for writ of mandate seeking to compel dismissal of the action for failure to bring it to trial within the five-year period, as extended, the court of appeal, after discussing the Law Revision Commission's comments to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340, said that it was clear that so long as the court may conclude that there was a period of impossibility, impracticability, or futility over which plaintiff had no control, the court was required to toll that period even if there was ample time after the period of impracticability within which to go to trial (223 Cal. App. 3d 1145, 1155) .

Holland v. Dave Altman's R. V. Center (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 271 Cal. Rptr. 706 , is discussed under § 90.92[4][a]. In reversing the order dismissing the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years from the date the complaint was filed, the court of appeal pointed out that the resident defendants had argued that nearly two and one-half months remained after the appellate court filed its opinion in the appeal of the orderto quash until the fifth anniversary of the filing of the complaint and that plaintiff could have taken steps to have the case specially set during this time but that, instead, she did not file a new at-issue memorandum and notice of motion to specially set until four months after the fifth year anniversary date and six and one-half months after the appellate opinion was filed. The court said there was a time when that argument would have had merit (citing cases), but that the 1984 revision of the dismissal statutes repudiates these holdings by stating the excuse without any such qualification, and that, hence, the time during which it was impracticable is excluded in all cases (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 484) . The court added that the Law Revision Commission (17 Cal. L. Revision Comm'n Rep. 919 (Jan. 1984)) explained that this is consistent with the treatment given other statutory excuses, it increases certainty and minimizes the need for a judicial hearing to ascertain whether or not the statutory period has run. The court added that it also is consistent with the general policy favoring trial over dismissal (222 Cal. App. 3d 477, 484) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.93

§ 90.93 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Defendant Is Estopped From Requesting Dismissal [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE TIME DURING WHICH PLAINTIFF REASONABLY RELIED ON DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT, CAUSING PLAINTIFF TO FORGO COMPLIANCE WITH THE REQUIREMENTS OF SECTION _____ [583.310 or 583.320 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE], SHOULD BE EXCLUDED FROM CALCULATION OF THE PERIOD(S) SPECIFIED IN THAT SECTION ON THE GROUND OF ESTOPPEL.

A. Estoppel. If a plaintiff reasonably relies on the defendant's acts or omissions to act and is thereby lulled into a false sense of security or caused to forbear doing something that otherwise would have been done to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial], the defendant is estopped from including the time of plaintiff's reliance in the calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140; Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 437-438, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 ; Griffis v. S.S. Kresge Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 500, 197 Cal. Rptr. 771).

[Optional] B. Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Request for Extension. If a defendant requests a continuance which postpones the _____ [trial or new trial] to a date after _____ [a or the] period specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure], and the request is shown by the trial court's minutes, the defendant is estopped from including the time of postponement in the calculation of such a period (see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330; Woley v. Turkus (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 402, 408-409, 334 P.2d 12).

[Optional] C. Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Defendant's Willingness to Go to Trial. If defendant files documents indicating a willingness to go to _____ [trial or a new trial], defendant is estopped from including the time of reliance on this willingness in the calculation of the periods specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure] (see City of Los Angeles v. Gleneagle Dev. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 564, 133 Cal. Rptr. 212 ; Mustalo v. Mustalo (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 580, 584-585, 112 Cal. Rptr. 594).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the defendant is estopped from including the time of plaintiff's reliance on defendant's acts or omissions when calculating the applicable time period [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140], and that there has been no failure to bring the action to trial or new trial within the required time after taking this exception into account.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.92, 90.95, 90.96].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The principles of waiver and estoppel apply equally to motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing a relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if plaintiff has relied on defendant's actions in postponing trial, plaintiff should state the actions defendant took and how plaintiff relied on them in not proceeding to trial [see, e.g., Woley v. Turkus (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 402, 408-409, 334 P.2d 12] .

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80. The points and authorities set out in §§ 90.102 and 90.104 may, in turn, be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in foregoing form.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel

The facts and procedural background of Tresway Aero, Inc. v. Superior Court (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 431, 96 Cal. Rptr. 571, 487 P.2d 1211 , are discussed in § 90.59[3][a]. In Tresway Aero, defendant corporation sought a writ of mandamus to compel dismissal of an action against it pursuant to the first paragraph of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210] because it had not been served with a summons. The Supreme Court denied the writ insofar as it sought dismissal. The Court determined that unless the doctrine of estoppel were recognized in cases concerning former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a, the statute could not be applied to serve rather than defeat the ends of substantial justice. Although the earlier precedents were in conflict, the Court's most recent decision in Woley v. Turkus (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 402, 408, 334 P.2d 12 (discussed under § 90.93[3][b]), upheld application of the doctrine of estoppel to dismissals for failure to bring an action to trial within five years pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (5 Cal. 3d 431, 438) .

Griffis v. S.S. Kresge Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 197 Cal. Rptr. 771 , was a tort action. During a February, 1982, mandatory settlement conference the court ordered the matter submitted to arbitration. Plaintiff's attorney expressed concern over the imminent expiration of the five-year period for bringing the matter to trial, but was assured that arbitration would not place it in danger of dismissal. Defendant's attorney was present at the conference, as well as at an earlier arbitration conference at which arbitration was not ordered. Plaintiff requested a trial de novo after an arbitration award was filed, and moved to advance the case for trial. At the motion hearing, plaintiff's newly associated attorney presented her calculations of the tolling period due to arbitration and the prospective expiration period for bringing the matter to trial. These were based on the improper assumption that arbitration had been ordered at the arbitration conference in September, 1981, instead of at the mandatory settlement conference. When asked by the court, defendant's attorney stated that he would not dispute the calculations of plaintiff's attorney. A trial date and a date for a mandatory settlement conference were scheduled. At this settlement conference, defendant moved to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for failure to bring the action to trial within five years, noting that the statute had not been tolled until February, 1982. The trial court dismissed the action, and plaintiff appealed on the ground that defendant was estopped from invoking the dismissal statute.

The court of appeal reversed the dismissal, holding that defendant's attorney was estopped from relying on the dismissal statute, being charged with the knowledge that the limitations period had not been tolled untilFebruary, 1982, and that plaintiff's attorney was unaware of the true facts regarding the tolling date. To invoke the doctrine of estoppel, the party estopped (1) must be apprised of the facts and must intend that his or her conduct shall be acted on, or must so act that the party asserting estoppel had a right to believe it was so intended, (2) must be ignorant of the true facts, and (3) must rely on the conduct to his or her injury. Defendant's attorney was under a duty to inform the court of all facts material to the inquiry regarding the limitations period, and since his response was under the compulsion of a legal duty to the court, plaintiff's attorney was entitled to rely on his statements. At best, the reply of defendant's attorney that he agreed with the calculations of plaintiff's attorney was negligence; at worst, an overtly false statement. To allow defendant to profit from this breach at plaintiff's expense by successfully invoking the five-year limitation imposed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) would be to subvert the concept of substantial justice. Therefore, defendant was estopped from relying on the dismissal statute and the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action (150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 499-500) .

[b] Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Request for Extension

In Woley v. Turkus (1958) 51 Cal. 2d 402, 334 P.2d 12 , the parties stipulated in writing to continue the case to a specified date beyond the period in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] for both a hearing on plaintiff's motion for summary judgment and trial. On the new date, defendant received additional time to present new defenses on the motion for summary judgment. Defendant subsequently submitted further evidence, and the motion for summary judgment was denied. The case was set once for trial, but postponed by the court. Defendant successfully moved to dismiss for lack of prosecution. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, partially on the ground that defendant was estopped from requesting a dismissal (51 Cal. 2d 402, 409) . Defendant's request at the hearing on the motion for summary judgment for a continuance to furnish additional evidence carried with it the implied request that the entire proceeding be postponed, and defendant's request was entered in the trial court's minute order for that hearing. In light of both parties' awareness of the problem posed by the five-year statutory period and plaintiff's readiness for trial, defendant's request for a time extension was comparable to entry of a stipulation in the court minutes, which, although not in literal compliance with former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, would estop defendant from subsequently moving to dismiss (51 Cal. 2d 402, 408-409) . The Court cited Govea v. Superior Court (1938) 26 Cal. App. 2d 27, 31, 78 P.2d 433 , in which defendant requested a continuance extending the case beyond the statutory period, and the trial court noted plaintiff's stipulation to the continuance in a minute order. The court of appeal held that the stipulation between the parties as shown by the court's minute order, while it did not comply literally with the requirements of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, would estop defendant from requesting a dismissal, since a party to an action cannot be allowed to play fast and loose with the court (51 Cal. 2d 402, 408) .

Woley can be used to support the broader principle that any extension of time sought by defendant and embodied in a writing can create an estoppel even though it is not as effective as a written stipulation. However, Woley should be contrasted with Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 974, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486 , discussed in § 90.99[4][b], in which the court of appeal held that defendant's presence at, and participation in, a trial-setting conference that set the date for trial beyond expiration of the five-year period was not sufficient to create an estoppel.

[c] Dismissal for Not Commencing Trial Estopped by Defendant's Willingness to Go to Trial

The facts and procedural background of City of Los Angeles v. Gleneagle Dev. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 133 Cal. Rptr. 212 , are discussed in § 90.98[4][c]. Plaintiff did not file an at-issue memorandum until 22 months remained in the five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b), but defendant did not then move to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420]. Instead, it filed its own at-issue memorandum and waited nearly 14 months before moving to dismiss. Thus, when it was most logical to protest, defendant did not raise the question of prejudice or claim surprise, lost witnesses, or dimming memories, and did not object to moving the case forward (62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 562) . In particular, the affirmative action which defendant took to indicate its willingness to go to trial by filing its own at-issue memorandum estopped defendant from relying on the previous period of delay, because thereafter, plaintiff properly relied on the processes of the trial court to assign a trial date (62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 564) .

In Mustalo v. Mustalo (1974) 37 Cal. App. 3d 580, 112 Cal. Rptr. 594 , plaintiff filed a divorce action, and within ten days the parties filed a stipulation citing agreement on temporary support and division of community property. Plaintiff, however, failed to proceed to a default or judgment, and approximately seven years later defendant filed a response to the complaint and a memorandum to set the case for trial. The trial court, however, dismissed the action on its own motion because plaintiff did not have judgment entered within three years. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, partially on the ground that dismissal could not be upheld under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. Defendant's action in filing a response to thecomplaint and in seeking to bring the case to trial on the important property issues involved amounted to an estoppel. Neither party consented to the dismissal and no public purpose was served by dismissal since the case could be filed again. In such a situation, the action of defendant in filing both the response and a motion to set for trial could be regarded as the equivalent of a written stipulation, which will avoid the operation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (37 Cal. App. 3d 580, 584-585) .

In both City of Los Angeles, discussed above, and Mustalo, defendant filed documents and affirmatively indicated a willingness to go to trial. The situation in these cases may be distinguished from Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486 , discussed in § 90.99[3][c]. In Singelyn, the court held, in part, that defendant's presence at and participation in the trial setting conference at which the action was set for trial on a date beyond the statutory period did not by itself estop the defendant from seeking a dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) (62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 974) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel

City of Los Angeles v. Gleneagle Dev. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 133 Cal. Rptr. 212 , is discussed under § 90.93[3][c].

In anderson v. Erwyn (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 503, 55 Cal. Rptr. 634 , plaintiff appealed the dismissal of his action for lack of prosecution in bringing it to trial within five years. Plaintiff partially contended that defendant waived the right to dismissal or was estopped from claiming it because he had previously requested that a scheduled pretrial conference be postponed, an event which occurred approximately three and one-half years prior to expiration of the statutory period. Although the court of appeal affirmed the decision of the trial court, it stated that estoppel would occur if there were sufficient requests for rescheduling proceedings or continuances for defendant's accommodation, or conduct by defendant which could possibly have deluded plaintiff into the belief that the matter would thereafter and forever remain unprosecuted, and that defendant would not invoke the provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583. A defendant has no duty to use diligence at every stage of the proceeding to expedite the case; the defendant only has to meet the plaintiff step by step. Generally, estoppel is based on the existence of a duty to act and a failure to act in accordance with the duty (247 Cal. App. 2d 503, 509) .

54 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.94

§ 90.94 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Court Is Estopped to Dismiss Action for Failure to Bring It to Trial Within Five Years [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE A GENERAL ORDER OF THIS COURT, ADOPTED ON _____ [date], FOUND THAT COURT CONGESTION MADE IT IMPRACTICABLE, FUTILE, OR IMPOSSIBLE FOR THE CASE TO BE ASSIGNED TO TRIAL BEFORE EXPIRATION OF THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD AND EXTENDED THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD TO A SPECIFIED DATE THAT HAS NOT YET ARRIVED; TO DISMISS THE ACTION AT THIS TIME ON THE GROUND IT WAS NOT IMPRACTICABLE, FUTILE, OR IMPOSSIBLE TO BRING THE CASE TO TRIAL WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD WOULD IN EFFECT VACATE THE GENERAL ORDER, ON WHICH PLAINTIFF WAS ENTITLED TO AND DID RELY, AND THIS THE COURT IS ESTOPPED TO DO.

A. Estoppel Applies to Motion to Dismiss. The equitable doctrine of estoppel applies fully to motions to dismiss on account of failure to bring an action to trial within five years of its filing (Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1590, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736).

B. Assertion of Estoppel Against Government. Estoppel may be asserted against the government where justice and right require it, and conflicting interests may set up a situation in which equitable estoppel might be applied against the judicial branch of government (Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1590, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736).

C. Applicable Principle. The principle that if a trial court encounters statements or conduct by a defendant that lulls the plaintiff into a false sense of security resulting in inaction, and there is reasonable reliance, estoppel must be available applies with no less force to statements and conduct by a court, on which a plaintiff surely should be able to rely (Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1592, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring it to trial or retrial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground of opposition is that the court is estopped to dismiss the action because the failure to bring the action to trial within the statutory period resulted from a court order, on which plaintiff was entitled to and did rely, that found that because of court congestion, it was impossible, impracticable, or futile to assign the case to trial within the statutory period and extended that period to a future date that has not yet arrived.

In an appropriate case, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the statutory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.93, 90.95, 90.96].

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. Principles of waiver and estoppel apply equally to motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.420(b)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing a relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel Applies to Motion to Dismiss

Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736 , was an action by a homeowner against her insurer, its adjuster, a contractor, and its employee for damages caused by a leaking roof. Plaintiff had until October 30, 1987, in which to bring her case to trial. At a trial-setting conference at which plaintiff was represented by local counsel, trial was set for December 11, 1987, which was 42 days beyond the October 30 deadline. Local counsel failed to object. However, on August 27, 1987, the court, on its own motion, in the person of one judge and after two hearings, adopted a general order, which established a civil jury trial calendar disposition program to which the court assigned 500 cases, including plaintiff's case. The order stated that with regard to the 500 cases, where the five-year limitation expired before December 18, 1987, it was impracticable, futile, or impossible [see

Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)] for these cases to be assigned to trial before that date, and that under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340, the court therefore concluded that the five-year statute should effectively be extended until March 18, 1988. The case was set for trial on March 14, 1988, and was continued one day to March 15. On the latter date, defendants moved to dismiss on the ground the case had not been brought to trial within five years. The hearing was before another judge, who concluded that plaintiff's failure to bring the matter to trial within the statutory period was not the result of impossibility, impracticability, or futility and granted the motion. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the case for trial setting. After pointing out that the order of dismissal in effect vacated the general order and its finding of fact and substituted the second judge's own order of dismissal and contrary finding of fact, which the second judge had no authority to do (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1588-1590) , the court said that the equitable doctrine of estoppel applies fully to motions to dismiss on account of failure to bring an action to trial within five years of its filing (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1590) . The court, quoting Strong v. County of Santa Cruz (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 720, 725, 125 Cal. Rptr. 896, 543 P.2d 264 , said (1) the doctrine of equitable estoppel is founded on concepts of equity and fair dealing; (2) it provides that a person may not deny the existence of a state of facts if he or she intentionally led another to believe a particular circumstance to be true and to rely on such belief to his or her detriment; and (3) the elements of the doctrine are as follows: (a) the party to be estopped must be apprised of the facts and must intend that his or her conduct shall be acted on, or must so act that the party asserting the estoppel has a right to believe it was so intended; and (b) the other party must be ignorant of the true state of facts and must rely on the conduct to his or her injury (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1590) .

[b] Assertion of Estoppel Against Government

The facts and procedural background of Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736 , are discussed under § 90.94[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal said (1) estoppel may be asserted against the government where justice and right require it; (2) the executive branch of government is not the only one of the three branches that may find its interest in conflict with the interest of a litigant, such that it might be estopped from pursuing that interest to the determent of that litigant; and (3) in the present case the trial court had an interest in expeditiously clearing its calendar of old cases, plaintiff had an interest in having a full trial on the merits, and these conflicting interests set up a situation in which equitable estoppel might be applied against the judicial branch of government (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1590) .

[c] Applicable Principle

The facts and procedural background of Greene v. State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 274 Cal. Rptr. 736 , are discussed under § 90.94[3][a]. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal pointed out that if a trial court encounters statements or conduct by a defendant that lulls the plaintiff into a false sense of security resulting in inaction, and there is reasonable reliance, estoppel must be available, and said that this principle applies with no less force to statements and conduct by a court on which a plaintiff surely should be able to rely. The court said that although plaintiff had no excuse for her July 31, 1987, failure to object to a trial date after October 30, 1987, her failure to take any steps to remedy the situation, after August 27, 1987, constituted an entirely reasonable reliance on the general order (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1592) . The court held that equitable estoppel applied. It said that the trial court apprised itself of the facts it believed were germane to the adoption of the general order; plaintiff had a right to believe the court's intent was as the order implicitly indicated to achieve efficiency by processing a selected 500 cases in a certain order during a certain time period, without regard to the possible applicability of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360 to those cases; in the absence of any objection from defendants, plaintiff had a right to rely on the court's conclusion in the general order regarding impossibility, impracticability, and futility, no matter what specialized knowledge of the facts she may have had; and that to punish exercise of these rights with a dismissal pursuant to the above-cited statutes was precisely the sort of unfairness that the doctrine of equitable estoppel is designed to prevent (224 Cal. App. 3d 1583, 1592) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.95

§ 90.95 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--No Failure to Bring Action to New Trial After Mistrial When No Order Declaring Mistrial Was Entered [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THE ABOVE-ENTITLED ACTION FOR FAILURE TO BRING AN ACTION TO A NEW TRIAL AFTER A MISTRIAL HAS BEEN DECLARED SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE HAS BEEN NO ORDER ENTERED DECLARING A MISTRIAL.

A. Statutory Requirements. If a trial is commenced in an action but no judgment is entered because of a mistrial or because a jury is unable to reach a decision, the action must be dismissed by the court on its own or the defendant's motion, after notice to the parties, if it is not brought again to trial within three years after the order declaring the mistrial or disagreement with the jury is entered (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(1), 583.360(a)).

B. Order Declaring Mistrial Required. Dismissal of an action under section 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure for failure to bring an action to a new trial within the time period provided in section 583.320(a)(1) of the Code of Civil Procedure after entry of an order by the court declaring a mistrial or disagreement by the jury is not proper if the court has not entered an order declaring a mistrial (see Rose v. Boydston (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 98-99, 175 Cal. Rptr. 836).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bringan action to retrial within the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(1) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that dismissal is not authorized because the court did not enter an order declaring a mistrial [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.320(a)(1)]..

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with additional points and authorities setting forth further grounds in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the mandatory period [see §§ 90.86 -90.93, 90.96].

The form may, in addition, be adapted for use in opposing a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.98]. The requirement of a court order declaring a mistrial applies also in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3)(A)].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Order Declaring Mistrial Required

The facts and procedural background of Rose v. Boydston (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 175 Cal. Rptr. 836 , are discussed in § 90.86[3][e]. In Rose, the court of appeal held that dismissal was not proper under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(1)] for failure to bring the case to trial within three years after entry of an order declaring a mistrial or disagreement by the jury. The court noted that the second trial judge indicated that he had considered declaring a mistrial but did not do so. Neither of his alternative orders, proposing further trial by the original judge or stipulation to original judge's interlocutory findings, would have been available if a mistrial had been declared. The later continuances occurred without objection or suggestion that the status of the case had changed since the hearing before the second judge. The court also noted that no one had ever moved for an order declaring a mistrial.

The court concluded that since the record did not contain a court order declaring a mistrial, as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(d), dismissal of the action was improper (122 Cal. App. 3d 92, 98-99) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.96

§ 90.96 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq.]--Time for Bringing Action to Trial Is Extended Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b)

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S ACTION WAS SUBMITTED TO JUDICIAL ARBITRATION AND, THEREFORE, THE TIME PERIOD(S) FROM _____ [THE DATE FOUR YEARS AND SIX MONTHS AFTER THE ACTION WAS FILED UNTIL THE DATE THE REQUEST FOR DE NOVO TRIAL WAS FILED and/or THE DATE THE ARBITRATION AWARD WAS FILED UNTIL PLAINTIFF'S NEW TRIAL DATE] MUST BE EXCLUDED IN CALCULATING THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD UNDER SECTION 583.310 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Exclusion Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17. If an action is or remains submitted to judicial arbitration more than four years and six months after plaintiff has filed the action, then the time beginning on the date four years and six months after the plaintiff has filed the action and ending on the date on which a request for a de novo trial is filed under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.20 shall not be included in computing the five-year period under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.310 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b); Gonzalez v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1129 ; Niesner v. Kusch (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 295-296, 230 Cal. Rptr. 613). The tolling commences on the four-year six-month date after the action was filed by plaintiff, not on the date the trial court orders the case to mediation (Gonzalez v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1129).

[Optional] B. Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17. The exclusion of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.17(b) operates to toll the mandatory five-year period regardless of the plaintiff's exercise of reasonable diligence during this period (Niesner v. Kusch (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297-298, 230 Cal. Rptr. 613).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used by a plaintiff to oppose a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring an action to trial within the five-year period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. The ground for opposition is that the action has been submitted to judicial arbitration and is or remains submitted to judicial arbitration more than four years and six months after plaintiff has filed the action. In that case, the time from that date until the date that a request for a de novo trial is filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 is excluded [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b)].

Although Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 is the exclusive ground for tolling as a result of "submission of an action to arbitration," circumstances relating to judicial arbitration may result in post-arbitration tolling. Post-arbitration tolling may be based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 [see Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 437-438, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469] . If the circumstances of the case indicate tolling under both Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 and Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20, the points and authorities set out in § 90.97 should be combined with this form. If there are other periods before or after the submission of the case to arbitration that should be excluded from the five-year period, or other any grounds for opposing the motion to dismiss, points and authorities relating to those grounds should also be combined with this form [see §§ 90.86 -90.95].

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should set forth the date of the filing of the action and the de novo trial request date and relate those dates to the statutory time periods for bringing an action to trial.

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.80.

[b] Actions Submitted to Civil Action Mediation

This form may be modified for use when an action has been submitted to civil action mediation under Code Civ. Proc. § 1775 et seq. Civil action mediation is a pilot project in effect in Los Angeles County and in any other county that elects to participate [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1775(e)]. It is an alternative to judicial arbitration [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.4].

The pilot project includes a provision, Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.7, that is parallel to Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17. The only difference is that tolling ends with the filing of a statement of nonagreement pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.9 rather than with the filing of a request for trial de novo pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20. Thus, this form may be used by changing references to judicial arbitration to civil action mediation, changing references to Section 1141.17 to Section 1775.7, and by changing references to a request for trial de novo to a statement of nonagreement.

In such circumstances, the time beginning on the date four years and six months after the plaintiff has filed the action and ending on the date on which a statement of nonagreement (indicating that the mediation did not resolve the matter) is filed is not be included in computing the five year period [Code. Civ. Proc. § 1775.7]. The tolling commences on the four-year six-month date after the action was filed by plaintiff, not on the date the trial court orders the case to mediation [Code. Civ. Proc. § 1775.7; see Gonzales v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1129, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 381] .

[c] Computation of Time Remaining to Bring Action to Trial

Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a) provides that submission of an action to arbitration shall not suspend the running of the time periods specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. (time to bring action to trial), except as provided in "this section" (that is, except as provided under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b)). As pointed out in the foregoing form, Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b) provides that, if an action is or remains submitted to arbitration more than four years and six months after the plaintiff has filed the action, the time beginning on the date four years and six months after the plaintiff has filed the action and ending on the date on which a request for a de novo trial is filed under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 is not included in computing the five-year period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. A request for a trial de novo must be filed within 30 days after the date the arbitrator files the award with the court or the arbitration award is final [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20(a)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350 sets out a similar rule, providing generally that if the time within which an action must be brought to trial is tolled or otherwise extended pursuant to statute with the result that at the end of the period of tolling or extension less than six months remains within which the action must be brought to trial, the action shall be dismissed if it is not brought to trial within six months after the period of tolling or extension.

Division Three of the Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District has held that, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a), a case that is or remains submitted to judicial arbitration more than four years and six months after the action was filed is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b), which is the exclusive means to suspend the running of the five-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310, that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350 does not apply, and that, under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(a), plaintiff has six months from the date the request for a trial de novo is filed to bring the action to trial [Drummond v. Murata (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48-49, 277 Cal. Rptr. 727] . Division Three of the Court of Appeal of the Fourth Appellate District reached the same result, but cited as its authority Code Civ. Proc. § 583.350 [Marchuk v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1276, 276 Cal. Rptr. 627] . In Marchuk, the court said once the request for trial de novo was filed, the original filing date lost any significance in the context of a mandatory dismissal for failure to bring the case to trial within five years and that if a case remains submitted to judicial arbitration more than four years and six months after it was commenced, the extended fifth anniversary is six months from the filing of the request for trial de novo [Marchuk v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1276 n.1, 276 Cal. Rptr. 627] .

[d] Reasonable Diligence

The tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b) applies whether or not a plaintiff is reasonably diligent in bringing the case to trial [Niesner v. Kusch (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297-298, 230 Cal. Rptr. 613] . Optional Paragraph B may be used to support this proposition. However, counsel should note that a defendant can successfully raise the issue of reasonable diligence in a motion for discretionary dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2). In a motion for discretionary dismissal, the court may consider the plaintiff's conduct prior to submission of the case to arbitration and during the time the case is submitted to arbitration [see D'Hondt v. Regents of University of California (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 723, 729-730, 200 Cal. Rptr. 628 , discussed in § 90.84[3][a]].

[e] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ.

Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[f] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

In Gonzales v. County of Los Angeles (2004) 122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 19 Cal. Rptr. 3d 381 , plaintiff was involved in a traffic accident with Los Angeles County Deputy Sheriff in 1997. On May 14, 1998, plaintiff filed this action against the County of Los Angeles, the sheriff's department, and the Deputy Sheriff, seeking to recover for personal injuries. Under the five-year statute, plaintiff had to bring the action to trial before May 14, 2003, absent tolling. The trial court set a trial date of March 14, 2003. On February 26, 2003, at the final status conference, the trial court ordered the case to mediation, with a completion date of April 18, 2003. At the conference, plaintiff's counsel erroneously stated that the five-year statute expired on December 15, 2003. The trial court vacated the March 14, 2003 trial date and assigned a new trial date of August 4, 2003. On April 17, 2003, the parties participated in a mediation. The case did not settle. Onthe same date, the mediator filed a "Statement of Nonagreement," indicating that the mediation did not resolve the matter. On May 19, 2003, the county and Deputy Sheriff filed a "Motion to Dismiss Plaintiff's Complaint for Failure to Bring the Case to Trial Within Five Years." The notice of motion stated: "The motion shall be brought on the grounds that the plaintiff failed to bring this case to trial within five years of the date of its commencement pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure §§ 583.310 and 583.360." In the motion, defendants argued that plaintiff had not brought the case to trial before the five-year deadline, which, they asserted, had expired on May 14, 2003.

The court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 1775.7 applied. The action was tolled from the date four years and six months after the filing of the action until the date on which the statement of nonagreement was filed because the case was sent to mediation during the last six months of the five-year period. The five-year statute was tolled beginning on the four-year six-month date, even though the trial court ordered the case to mediation three months later. In essence, a portion of the tolling was retroactive. Although the deadline stated by the driver's counsel at the final status conference was overly generous by two months, this misstatement did not provide a basis for reversal (122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1129) . The question of whether dismissal would have been appropriate under the three-year statute, Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a) was not one of pure law and thus could not be addressed for the first time on appeal (122 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1131) .

In Niesner v. Kusch (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 230 Cal. Rptr. 613 , a contract action filed on January 9, 1980, was ordered into judicial arbitration on March 23, 1983. After learning that the case might be exempted from judicial arbitration, plaintiff gave the arbitrator written notice of the exemption and filed with the court a written stipulation in which the parties agreed to restore the case to the civil active list. However, on October 31, 1984, more than four years and six months after the action was filed, the court removed the case from the arbitration list because it appeared no further action had been taken. On March 14, 1985, the trial court granted plaintiff's motion to restore the matter to the civil active list but then, on its own motion, dismissed the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360] for failure to bring the case to trial within five years. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, when an action remains submitted to arbitration more than four years and six months after it is filed, the time beginning on the date four year and six months after the action was filed and ending on the date on which a request for new trial was filed is not included in computing the five-year period. The case had remained in arbitration until October 31, 1984, 114 days beyond four years and six months from the date of filing. Therefore, the court held, the five-year period was extended by 114 days to approximately May 3, 1985 (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 296) . The court rejected the contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 did not apply when no arbitration in fact occurred, no arbitration award was ever made, and no request for a trial de novo was filed (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 296-297) . Under the plain meaning of the statute, the court reasoned, the tolling begins if the action 'is or remains submitted to arbitration" (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297) . Under the statute, the tolling continues until a request for trial de novo is filed but the tolling can also end sooner, as when the arbitration process is ended on motion of parties. Therefore, the court held, the tolling provision applies whenever an action is referred to arbitration or arbitration is pending during the six-month period preceding the five-year deadline (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297) .

[b] Reasonable Diligence Is Not Required Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

The factual and procedural background of Niesner v. Kusch (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 230 Cal. Rptr. 613 , is discussed under § 90.96[3][a]. In reversing an order of mandatory dismissal for delay in prosecution, the court held that plaintiff's failure to exercise reasonable diligence in prosecuting the action did not justify the trial court in dismissing the case because Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 deprives the court of the power to dismiss under the five-year mandatory dismissal statute while a case is pending in arbitration within six months of the statute's deadline, whether the plaintiff was diligent or not (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 297-298) .

Counsel should note that the Niesner court recognized that a defendant may raise the issue of reasonable diligence in a motion for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)], under which a court may consider the plaintiff's conduct prior to submission of the case to arbitration and during the time the case is submitted to arbitration (186 Cal. App. 3d 291, 298) . For points and authorities supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial based on unreasonable delay in the judicial arbitration proceeding, see § 90.84.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.97

§ 90.97 Opposing Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.10 et seq.]--Post-Arbitration Tolling Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.86.]

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION BECAUSE AFTER THE REQUEST FOR A TRIAL DE NOVO THE COURT FAILED TO RECALENDAR THE CASE FOR TRIAL WITHIN THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD EVEN THOUGH PLAINTIFF WAS ELIGIBLE FOR A TRIAL DATE WITHIN THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD PRIOR TO ARBITRATION AND PLAINTIFF INFORMED THE COURT OF THE FIVE-YEAR DEADLINE _____ [AT THE TIME OF or WITHIN _____ (specify time period, e.g., ONE WEEK) OF] THE REQUEST FOR TRIAL DE NOVO.

A. Calendaring Case After Judicial Arbitration to Avoid Penalizing Plaintiff. If a party elects trial de novo after judicial arbitration, the trial is to be calendared, insofar as possible, so that the trial shall be given the same place on the active list as it had prior to arbitration, or shall receive civil priority on the next setting calendar (Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20(b)). The evident purpose of Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.20 is to prevent plaintiffs from being penalized for having undergone the arbitration process (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).

B. Duty of Court to Calendar Case After Arbitration. Once a plaintiff has informed the court, during or shortly after a trial de novo request, of the five-year trial date, the court then has the duty under Code of Civil Procedure Section 1141.20 to schedule the case insofar as possible so that the trial shall be given the same place on the active list as it had prior to arbitration or to receive civil priority (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).

C. Post-Arbitration Tolling of Five-Year Period to Bring Case to Trial. If prior to arbitration a plaintiff is eligible to receive a trial date within the five-year statute, then the plaintiff is entitled to receive such a trial date on a timely post-arbitration request. If the trial court fails to correctly calendar or recalendar the case after having been properly notified, only then will the action be tolled pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. Section 1141.20 from the date of the trial de novo request until the date of the new trial (Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for mandatory dismissal of an action for failure to bring it to trial within the five-year period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Alternatively, they may be used to support a motion to specially set the action for trial to avoid the five-year deadline. If appropriate, these points and authorities may be combined with other forms supporting tolling of additional parts of the five-year period on other grounds that may exist in the case [see §§ 90.86 -90.96].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.80. The points and authorities set out in § 90.105 may, in turn be used in response to, or in anticipation of, the opposition set out in this form.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Calendaring Case After Judicial Arbitration to Avoid Penalizing Plaintiff

The sequence of events in Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , was as follows:

On September 21, 1991, a judicial arbitration award became final when the defendant failed to request trial de novo.

On October 1, the court entered judgment for plaintiff pursuant to the award.

On November 7, the defendant moved to vacate the judgment and to allow a request for trial de novo, based on defendant's attorney's statement of his own neglect (renewing a defective motion first made October 11 that was denied without prejudice).

On November 27, the court granted the motion, subject to payment of sanctions to plaintiff.

On December 4, the defendant requested trial de novo.

On December 31, defendant paid the sanctions.

On July 7, 1992, the court granted plaintiff an order shortening time so that plaintiff could schedule a motion to specially set the case for trial on July 10.

The court denied the motion to specially set, finding that the five years to bring the case to trial had already elapsed, requiring dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. Moreover, the court held that if, as plaintiff contended, 44 days remained within that period, plaintiff's lack of activity since the request for trial de novo made denial of the motion appropriate on discretionary grounds under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410. The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal on discretionary grounds.

The Supreme Court affirmed based on the trial court's discretionary power under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, but first held that the court erred in dismissing the case on mandatory grounds under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310.

The Court first discussed Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 , which held that because the court, after a de novo trial request, has a duty under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 to calendar a case in the same priority it had before arbitration, the time to bring a case to trial is automatically tolled under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 until a new trial date is set. The Court confirmed the view that the courts of appeal have adopted that some initial, reasonable diligence on plaintiff's part is required to benefit from Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 implied tolling and held that whatever the original viability of Moran's automatic tolling holding, it is now untenable given later amendments of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17. Those amendments make Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 the only basis for tolling as result of the submission of a case to arbitration. Section 1141.17 tolling ends with the request for a trial de novo, which is inconsistent with the Section 1141.20 tolling until a trial date is set (10 Cal. 4th 424, 432-434) .

The Court still found room for Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 to toll the period for bringing the case to trial. The Court reconciled the statutes by finding that automatic tolling due to submission of a case to arbitration is strictly based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 (i.e., during the last six months of the five-year period and only until trial de novo is requested), but that thereafter if the plaintiff informs the court, during or shortly after a trial de novo request, of the five-year trial date, post-arbitration tolling will arise if the court does not correctly calendar or recalendar the case (10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435) . This tolling does not result from submission to arbitration, but from the court's failure to fulfill its post-arbitration duties under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20. This decision was based in part on the evident purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 to prevent plaintiffs from being penalized for having undergone the arbitration process (10 Cal. 4th 424, 434) .

The Court then found, however, that because the plaintiff did not inform the court of the impending five-year deadline or make any effort to have a trial date set immediately after defendant requested trial de novo, the five-year statute continued to run during the six months between the time of the request for trial de novo and the motion to specially set the case for trial (10 Cal. 4th 424, 435) . Ultimately, the Court held that the five-year period was tolled under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) for impossibility, impracticability, or futility, so that the period had not run and the trial court erred in basing dismissal on the mandatory provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 (10 Cal. 4th 424, 437-439) . For discussion of this aspect of the case, see § 90.91[3][d].

Ultimately, however, the Court held that the trial court had not abused its discretion in denying the motion to specially set the case for trial and dismissing the action on discretionary grounds under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 (10 Cal. 4th 424, 439-444) .

[b] Duty of Court to Calendar Case After Arbitration

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362, 895 P.2d 469 , are discussed under § 90.97[3][a]. In analyzing implied tolling of the five-year period to bring a case to trial under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20, the Court relied on the court's duty under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 to schedule the case insofar as possible so that the trial will have the same place on the active list as it had prior to arbitration or to give the case civil priority (10 Cal. 4th 424, 435) .

[c] Post-Arbitration Tolling of Five-Year Period to Bring Case to Trial

The facts and procedural background of Howard v. Thrifty Drug & Discount Stores (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 424, 434-435, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 362,895 P.2d 469 , are discussed under § 90.97[3][a]. The Court held that if the plaintiff makes a timely post-arbitration request and the trial court fails to correctly calendar or recalendar the case, the action is tolled pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 from the date of the trial de novo request until the date of the new trial (10 Cal. 4th 424, 435) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.98

§ 90.98 Opposing Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342]--General Form

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS ACTION
	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS THIS ACTION BECAUSE _____ [specify, e.g., THERE IS GOOD CAUSE FOR PLAINTIFF'S DELAY AND NO INJUSTICE WILL RESULT FROM DENYING DISMISSAL] AND, THEREFORE, DISMISSAL PURSUANT TO COURT'S DISCRETIONARY POWER UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.410 IS NOT APPROPRIATE UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES.

A. Statutory Grounds for Discretionary Dismissal. The court may not dismiss an action under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] unless the minimum period specified under _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., section 583.420(a)(2)(A)] of the Code of Civil Procedure has elapsed, and dismissal appears appropriate to the court under the circumstances (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a); see Roman v. Usary Tire & Service Center (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1430-1431, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 329).

B. Discretion Not Arbitrary. The discretion of the trial court to dismiss an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period specified underCode of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)] is not capricious or arbitrary but one controlled by legal principles that is to be exercised in accordance with the spirit of the law and with a view to serving rather than defeating the ends of justice (see United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 233-234, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761).

[Optional] C. Any Basis for Good Cause Is Sufficient. Dismissal pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period specified under Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)] is not proper if there is any basis for a showing of good cause by the plaintiff for the delay and no injustice will result from denying dismissal (see Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 563-564, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193).

[Optional] D. Plaintiff's Lack of Showing of Good Cause Not Controlling. Even if there is an entire absence of a showing of good cause by the plaintiff, the trial court has broad discretion not to dismiss the action on the basis of any factor enumerated in California Rules of Court, Rule 3.1342(e) (see United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 235-236, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761).

[Optional] E. Factors Relevant to Ruling on Motion. In ruling on a motion for dismissal pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for failure to bring an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period specified under Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)], the court must be guided by the policies set forth in Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.130. The court must also consider all matters relevant to a proper determination of the motion, including _____ [specify particular matters enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) that are relevant to the determination of the present motion, e.g., the nature and complexity of the case] (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e); Tannatt v. Joblin (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 1068, 182 Cal. Rptr. 112).

[Optional] F. Counsel's Workload Is Sufficient Excuse. Delay caused by pressure resulting from the workload of a plaintiff's counsel is sufficient to justify failure to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period specified under Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)] (see Woolfson v. Personal Travel Service, Inc. (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 909, 912 fn. 2, 912-913, 92 Cal. Rptr. 286, 479 P.2d 646 ; Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 564-565, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193).

[Optional] G. Conditional Denial of Discretionary Dismissal. In exercising its discretion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.410 for delay in prosecution caused by failure to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] within the period specified under Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)], the court may require as a condition of granting or denying dismissal that the parties comply with terms that appear proper to effectuate substantial justice (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.430(a); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(f)).

[Optional] H. Manner of Computing Time Period for Completing Service. The time period for bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] specified under Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [specify applicable time period, e.g., 583.420(a)(2)(A)] must be computed in the same manner that is provided for computing the comparable time period under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 583.310-583.360 (see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.240(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for discretionary dismissal based on plaintiff's failure to bring the action or new trial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) or (3). The ground for opposition is that dismissal is not appropriate under all the circumstances [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)].

Optional Paragraph C may be used when the plaintiff is seeking to show good cause justifying the delay.

Optional Paragraph D may be used when the plaintiff is seeking to emphasize that the lack of a showing of good cause is not necessarily controlling.

Optional Paragraph E may be used when the plaintiff wishes to emphasize particular factors that weigh in favor of denying the motion, particularly factors or considerations that are specifically enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e).

Optional Paragraph F may be used when the plaintiff wishes to rely on his or her counsel's work load as a factor justifying the delay.

Optional Paragraph G may be used to suggest that a particular condition be imposed on denial of the motion as a fair alternative to granting the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.430(a)].

Optional Paragraph H may be used when the plaintiff is seeking to show that service was, in fact, within the applicable period specified under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2) or (3), after taking into account factors that effectively excuse or extend this period. The basis for this particular ground of opposition is Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b), which provides that the period for completing service under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) is computed in the same manner as the comparable period for completing service in order to avoid mandatory dismissal. If Optional Paragraph H is used, counsel should add additional points and authorities relating to the particular excuse or extension that is sought to be applied. The points and authorities set out in §§ 90.86 -90.92 and 90.95 may be used for this purpose.

The principles of waiver and estoppel apply in ruling on a motion for discretionary dismissal as well as one for mandatory dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]. Thus, the points and authorities set out in § 90.93 may also be combined with these points and authorities in an appropriate case.

This memorandum opposes a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in opposition to a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ.

Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is alleged that the parties engaged in settlement negotiations, counsel should set forth the dates and the contents of those negotiations [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)].

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for discretionary dismissal supported by the general points and authorities set out in § 90.83.

[b] Absence of Actual Prejudice Not Determinative

Several courts of appeal, construing former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)], have ruled that discretionary dismissal is not proper absent some showing of actual prejudice to the defendant [see Luti v. Graco, Inc. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 228, 235-236, 215 Cal. Rptr. 902 ; Troupe v. Courtney (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 930, 934-935, 215 Cal. Rptr. 703 ; Hurtado v. Statewide Home Loan Co. (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1019, 1028-1032, 213 Cal. Rptr. 712] . However, it appears that these decisions have been impliedly disapproved by the Supreme Court in Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 [discussed in § 90.83[3][f]], which held that a showing of prejudice is not required [see Freedman v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 711, 242 Cal. Rptr. 8 ; Longshore v. Pine (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 731, 736, 222 Cal. Rptr. 364] . The rationale is that discretionary dismissal is not designed solely to remedy prejudice to the defendant, but is also designed to expedite the administration of justice by compelling every person who files an action to prosecute it with promptness and diligence [see Freedman v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 711, 242 Cal. Rptr. 8] .

While a showing of prejudice is no longer required to justify discretionary dismissal, it is still a factor to be considered [see Freedman v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 696, 711, 242 Cal. Rptr. 8] . For example, it may be proper to deny discretionary dismissal when defendant has not shown any prejudice and other factors weigh against the dismissal [see, e.g., Cubit v. Ridgecrest Community Hospital (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1552, 1569-1573, 240 Cal. Rptr. 346 (reversing grant of dismissal when there was no showing of prejudice and several indications of diligence on plaintiffs' part)]. It has been said that the rule implicit in Blank and later cases is that lack of prejudice to a defendant remains a valid consideration when the plaintiff has acted diligently from the outset, but no affirmative showing of actual prejudice is necessary to entitle the defendant to dismissal when the delay is unreasonable [Wong v. Davidian (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 264, 270, 253 Cal. Rptr. 675] . Counsel may therefore wish to argue, in an appropriate case, that a lack of any showing of prejudice by the defendant is one factor indicating that the interests of justice are best served by denying dismissal [see Paragraph E].

[c] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provision for discretionary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a), was repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Grounds for Discretionary Dismissal

In Roman v. Usary Tire & Service Center (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 35Cal. Rptr. 2d 329 , plaintiff's counsel failed to timely appear at the court-ordered arbitration, resulting in its cancellation. After counsel failed to timely reschedule the arbitration hearing pursuant to court order, the trial court issued an Order to Show Cause Re Dismissal/Sanctions. Although the order stated that appearance was mandatory, neither plaintiff nor his counsel appeared. The trial court dismissed the action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a) and filed and served its notice of ruling one year and eleven months after the complaint was filed (29 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1426) . The trial court then denied plaintiff's subsequent attempts to vacate the dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed. It initially stated that the order to show cause provided sufficient due process notice to plaintiff that the action would be subject to dismissal if counsel did not appear at the hearing. It then, however, held that the trial court lacked authority to dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410(a). That section prohibits discretionary dismissal for delay unless one of certain conditions has occurred, which includes the failure to bring the action to trial within three years, or within two years by rule adopted by the Judicial Council pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410. Former Cal. Rules of Ct. Rule 372 (now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340) allows the court on its own motion to dismiss an action for delay in prosecution if the action has not been brought to trial within two years after commencement. Since the trial court ordered the action dismissed prior to the two-year mark, it lacked authority and thus abused its discretion (29 Cal. App. 4th 1422, 1430-1431) .

[b] Discretion Not Arbitrary

United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 , was a suit between two unions. Defendants moved to dismiss the action under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] for failure to bring it to trial approximately 26 months after the complaint was filed. In opposition, plaintiffs' former and current counsel filed declarations describing changes of attorney, discovery delays because of ongoing discovery activities in related lawsuits and a very heavy caseload arising out of strike activity, and extensive files which had to be reviewed. They also rebutted defendants' claims of prejudice. The trial court dismissed the action.

The court of appeal reversed. The court emphasized that the discretion to be exercised in determining whether to dismiss the action is not a capricious or arbitrary discretion but one controlled by legal principles and exercised in accordance with the spirit of the law and with a view to serving rather than defeating the ends of justice (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 233-234) . Moreover, the policy underlying former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) must sometimes yield to the more powerful policy which seeks to dispose of litigation on the merits (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 232) .

It should be noted that United Farm Workers was criticized for its interpretation that a trial court may, but is not required to, dismiss an action even in the absence of a showing of good cause for delay, in Kunzler v. Karde (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 688-689, 167 Cal. Rptr. 425 [discussed in § 90.83[3][c].

[c] Any Basis for Good Cause Is Sufficient

The facts and procedural background of Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 , are discussed in § 90.98[3][c]. In Denham, the Supreme Court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying a dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420]. The Court stated that a writ of mandate should issue to compel dismissal of an action only if there is an entire absence of any showing constituting good cause for delay in prosecution presented to the trial court. If there is any basis on which the trial court's action can be sustained and it appears that no injustice will result from sustaining the trial court, the refusal to dismiss should be upheld (2 Cal. 3d 557, 564) .

Prior to Denham, several decisions held that the trial court lost its discretion to deny a motion to dismiss for failure to bring an action to trial within two years unless plaintiff made a specific showing of excusable delay [see, e.g., Black Bros. Co. v. Superior Court (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 501, 507, 71 Cal. Rptr. 344 ; Breckenridge v. Mason (1967) 256 Cal. App. 2d 121, 127, 64 Cal. Rptr. 201] . This rule and line of cases were explicitly disapproved in Denham, in which the Supreme Court stated that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 places no restrictions on the exercise of the trial court's discretion and, in particular, that there was no requirement that the motion to dismiss must be granted unless opposed by an adequate showing of diligence or excuse for delay (265 Cal. App. 2d 501) .

[d] Plaintiff's Lack of Showing of Good Cause Not Controlling

The facts and procedural background of United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 , are discussed under § 90.98[3][b]. In United Farm Workers, the trial court held that plaintiffs failed to make some showing of good cause for the delay in prosecution. Therefore, dismissal was required by Dunsmuir Masonic Temple v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 21, 90 Cal. Rptr. 405 , set out in § 90.83[4][b]. The court of appeal reversed on the ground that the trial court failed to apply the proper legal standard (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 236) . Dunsmuir requires the trial court to dismiss an action if plaintiff fails to make some showing of good cause for delay. However, the leading case interpreted by Dunsmuir, Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 563, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 [discussed under § 90.98[3][c]], did not reach this conclusion. The court in United Farm Workers stated that the Denham Court would allow dismissal of an action in this situation (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 235-236) . Moreover, former Cal.Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5 [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342] supports this interpretation of Denham because it gives the trial court broad discretion not to dismiss the action even though the plaintiff makes no affirmative showing of excuse for delay (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 235) . For example, it permits the trial court to review the pleadings and conclude that a grave injustice would result to plaintiff if the case were dismissed, and this would be an adequate ground, assuming that defendant has not made a strong showing of prejudice from the delay (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 235-236) . In United Farm Workers, it appeared the trial court concluded on the basis of Dunsmuir that once it had read the declarations it had no alternative but to dismiss (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 236) .

Additional support for the position taken in United Farm Workers is found in the leading case of Weeks v. Roberts (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 802, 69 Cal. Rptr. 305, 442 P.2d 361 , set out in § 90.80[3][d]. In Weeks, the Supreme Court emphasized that although dismissal after a lapse of two years was discretionary, the dismissal power should be used in view of the facts of the entire situation, taking into account any unusual circumstances and acting to promote substantial justice (87 Cal. App. 3d 225) .

However, at least two court of appeal cases have disagreed with the United Farm Workers holding that Denham gives a trial court discretion to deny a motion to dismiss in the absence of any showing of justification for the delay [see Kunzler v. Karde (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 683, 689, 167 Cal. Rptr. 425 (discussed in § 90.83[3][c]); Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 397-398, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 (discussed in § 90.51[3][a])].

[e] Factors Relevant to Ruling on Motion

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) is discussed in § 90.83[3][b].

The facts and procedural background of Tannatt v. Joblin (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 182 Cal. Rptr. 112 , are discussed in § 90.83[3][c]. In Tannatt, plaintiff brought an action in 1977 to recover money wrongfully obtained and received, and obtained judgment against one of the named defendants, who was the primary wrongdoer. Unable to execute on the judgment, plaintiff served the remaining nine defendants in 1980. The trial court granted defendants' motion to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420]. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court abused its discretion in dismissing the action, since plaintiff's forbearance from prosecuting the other defendants was neither capricious nor unreasonable. The court further held that plaintiff had proven an abuse of discretion by showing that the trial court had not carefully considered each factor of former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5 [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)], which would have shown that, at least impliedly, the reason advanced by plaintiff was good (130 Cal. App. 3d 1063, 1068) .

[f] Counsel's Workload Is Sufficient Excuse

In Woolfson v. Personal Travel Service, Inc. (1971) 3 Cal. 3d 909, 92 Cal. Rptr. 286, 479 P.2d 646 , plaintiff's counsel opposed defendant's motion for a dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] on the grounds that he was unable to consult with his client about litigation expenses because plaintiff had become his father's executor in England, and that as a sole practitioner he had been tied up in two trials. The trial court reluctantly dismissed on the theory that it had no discretion to deny the motion unless plaintiff showed excusable delay, and plaintiff's arguments fell short.

The Supreme Court reversed on the basis of Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 565, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 , discussed under § 90.98[3][c]. The Court in Denham decided that if the record does not reveal an entire absence of any showing constituting good cause, dismissal is not mandatory and the trial court may exercise its discretion in ruling on the motion. Its discretion will not be reversed except in cases of clear abuse (3 Cal. 3d 909, 912-913) .

It should be noted that some courts have held dismissal proper despite the existence of factors like those in Woolfson. For example, in Lopez v. Larson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 383, 399-400, 153 Cal. Rptr. 912 [discussed in § 90.51[3][a]], plaintiff offered workload as the sole justification of delay. The court of appeal in Lopez rejected this argument on the ground that in all of the cases, including Woolfson, the unusual press of business or a burdensome workload was only one of several factors justifying delay. The other argument offered in Woolfson, client unavailability to discuss litigation expenses, is somewhat analogous to plaintiff's being incapacitated and unable to communicate with counsel. Incapacitation has been held insufficient by itself to empower the trial court to exercise its discretion [see Dunsmuir Masonic Temple v. Superior Court (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 17, 21-22, 90 Cal. Rptr. 405 , discussed in § 90.83[4][b]].

The facts and procedural background of Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 , are discussed under § 90.98[3][c]. In Denham, the principal explanation for delay offered by plaintiff concerned changes in the law office of plaintiff's counsel with resulting increased workloads and the probability of error. The Supreme Court, in affirming the trial court's denial of the motion to dismiss, stated that frequent changes in plaintiffs' attorneys' law firm and the resultant pressure on the attorneys remaining in the office may be considered in determining whether plaintiffs have shown that the delay was excusable. The Court further noted that innumerable pleadings were filed by the parties. Although this fact by itself would not constitute sufficient excuse to avoid mandatory dismissal, it may be considered along with the attorneyworkload factors in a motion for discretionary dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (2 Cal. 3d 557, 565) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Discretion Not Arbitrary

In Cordova v. Vons Grocery Co. (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 242 Cal. Rptr. 605 , the court of appeal held that a trial court abused its discretion in dismissing an action on its own motion under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420 for delay in prosecution when plaintiff was not ready to proceed on the date set for trial. Defendant's counsel had been substituted into the case a month before the trial date, had asked plaintiff to stipulate to a continuance, and had assured plaintiff that he would arrange for the continuance. In finding that the trial court abused its discretion by dismissing the case on its own motion, the appellate court noted that plaintiff had prepared diligently for trial and had reasonably relied on defendant's assurances that he would arrange with the court for the continuance, and that defendant would suffer no prejudice from the delay in commencement of the trial. Under these circumstances, dismissal worked a miscarriage of justice and thus constituted an abuse of discretion (196 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1535-1536) .

[b] Any Basis for Good Cause Is Sufficient

In Pomona Federal Plaza, Ltd. v. Investment Concepts, Inc. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 217, 249 Cal. Rptr. 757 , plaintiff waited four years to bring an at-issue memorandum. Plaintiff had never initiated discovery, nor taken any action to bring the matter to trial before that time. However, during the first year after filing the action, plaintiff actively responded to discovery initiated by other parties. In the meantime, numerous cross complaints were filed, and extensive discovery was conducted amongst the defendants, cross complainants, and cross defendants; indeed, one cross complaint had not been answered by all cross defendants at the time the motion to dismiss for failure to prosecute was made. The real contest in the action was not in proving liability but in determining which party would pay for all the damages. The trial court ordered the action dismissed under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410(a), 583.420(a)(2)(A). The court of appeal reversed, holding that the dismissal was improper under the circumstances. The court of appeal explained that inherent in the dismissal statutes is the concept that parties should act reasonably in prosecuting their actions and that, when viewed in a practical sense, matters should be tried together to avoid unnecessary burden to the administration of justice. In this case, it would not have been realistic to sever the cross complaints, and defendants were not prejudiced by the delay (203 Cal. App. 3d 217, 222-224) .

In Cubit v. Ridgecrest Community Hospital (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 1552, 240 Cal. Rptr. 346 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's dismissal for delay in prosecution of an action for medical malpractice under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)] four and one-half years after the action was commenced on the ground plaintiffs had demonstrated excusable delay (plaintiffs had diligently conducted discovery and participated in and responded to extensive discovery instigated by the defendants, had learned of an additional ground of malpractice three years after the commencement of the case and immediately thereafter joined as additional defendants the parties responsible, and had vigorously responded to several demurrers and motions to strike) (194 Cal. App. 3d 1552, 1567-1569) , and defendants failed to demonstrate any prejudice resulting from the delay (194 Cal. App. 3d 1552, 1569-1573) .

[c] Counsel's Workload Is Sufficient Excuse

The facts and procedural background of United Farm Workers National Union v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 150 Cal. Rptr. 761 , are discussed in § 90.98[3][b]. In reversing the trial court's dismissal, the court of appeal noted that while the trial court may not have abused its discretion in dismissing on the basis of declarations of plaintiff's attorneys, had it also considered the other relevant factors, it could not say as a matter of law that there had been no showing of good cause (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 236-237) . A change in attorneys and the press of business of plaintiffs' counsel could support the trial judge's discretion in denying a motion to dismiss, under Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 565, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 [discussed in § 90.98[3][f]). Moreover, counsel's tactical decision to defer discovery until it was completed in two cases tangentially involving the same incident could constitute adequate cause for the delay (87 Cal. App. 3d 225, 236-237) .

In City of Los Angeles v. Gleneagle Dev. Co. (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 133 Cal. Rptr. 212 , the court of appeal reversed a dismissal granted under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420] in regard to one of the defendants in a breach of contract action. Defendant's conduct in filing its own at-issue memorandum to correct a trial-time estimate, in response to plaintiff's memorandum, estopped defendant from relying on plaintiff's previous four-year period of delay as a basis for dismissal (62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 564) . Plaintiff adequately explained the delay. The only period of inactivity in prosecuting the action prior to plaintiff's filing an at-issue memorandum was explained by the fact that the law office representing plaintiff was seriously understaffed, a number of attorneys handled the case, and the office otherwise had a heavy and demanding caseload (62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 562) . This excuse was no better or worse than that proffered in Denham v. Superior Court (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 557, 86 Cal. Rptr. 65, 468 P.2d 193 , and the Supreme Court's attitude indicates a trend toward more leniency than was apparent in older cases, in which neither the sickness or death of an attorney, the press of business, or a heavy trial schedule was considered an adequate excuse for delay (62 Cal. App. 3d 543, 564-565) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.99

§ 90.99 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Exclusion Based on Impossibility Does Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT
vs.	)	OF MOTION TO DISMISS
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM THAT IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO BRING THE ACTION TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL] IS NOT SUPPORTED BY HIS/HER SHOWING THAT THE PERIOD OF DELAY WAS CAUSED BY _____ [specify, e.g., EVENTS THAT ARE ORDINARILY INCIDENT TO COURT PROCEEDINGS].

[EITHER]

A. Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impossibility Exception. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the ordinary incidents of court proceedings and the normal time of waiting for a trial date are not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impossible, because the duty rests on a plaintiff at every stage of the proceedings to use due diligence to expedite the case to a final determination (see Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 548, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347 ; Moore v. Powell (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 583, 589, 138 Cal. Rptr. 914).

[AND/OR]

B. Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception When Failure to Bring to Trial Did Not Result From Illness. The period of illness of plaintiff's counsel is not to be excluded from computation of the five-year period for bringing an action to trial when there is no causal connection between the illness and the failure to satisfy the five-year requirement (Sierra Nevada Memorial Miners Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (Hudson) (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 473, 266 Cal. Rptr. 50).

[AND/OR]

C. Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by plaintiff's illness is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impossible (see Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 974-975, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486).

[AND/OR]

D. Plaintiff's Bankruptcy Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception. The Bankruptcy Act provides that the commencement or continuation of any legal proceeding against a debtor is automatically stayed by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, but this does not apply when it is the plaintiff who is a debtor and files for bankruptcy. Because prosecution of the action could have continued during the plaintiff's bankruptcy, either by the trustee in bankruptcy or, on an order of the bankruptcy court, by the plaintiff, it was not impossible to bring the action to trial within five years (Lauriton v. Carnation Co. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164-165, 263 Cal. Rptr. 476).

[AND/OR]

E. Death of Coplaintiff Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception. In an action involving real property that is brought by multiple plaintiffs as joint tenants of that property, a period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the death of one of the plaintiffs is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impossible (Ferk v. County of Lake (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 273-276, 252 Cal. Rptr. 196).

[AND/OR]

F. Plaintiff's Lack of Representation by Guardian Ad Litem Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to_____ [trial or a new trial] caused by plaintiff's lack of representation by a guardian ad litem is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction to try the action or that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impossible, impracticable, or futile (see White v. Renck (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 838-841, 166 Cal. Rptr. 701).

[AND/OR]

G. Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception. A period of delay caused by a plaintiff's inadvertence in selecting a date for _____ [trial or new trial] is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure on the ground of impossibility, because it is the plaintiff's duty to keep track of such crucial dates (see Cannon v. City of Novato (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222, 213 Cal. Rptr. 132).

[AND/OR]

H. Impossibility Exception Is Inapplicable When Setting of Trial Date Beyond Five-Year Period Resulted From Plaintiff's Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial. Plaintiff's failure to bring a civil action to trial as required by Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure is not excused on the ground of impossibility by the trial court clerk's having told plaintiff that no trial date was available within the statutory period when plaintiff failed to call the chronology of the case to the trial court's attention at the time the case was set for trial beyond the five-year period or to move to have trial specially set (Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382).

[AND/OR]

I. Impossibility Exception Does Not Apply Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] that are attributable to impossibility are not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure unless the plaintiff has otherwise shown that he or she used reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case (Lauriton v. Carnation Co. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164-165, 263 Cal. Rptr. 476 ; Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the applicable time period has not lapsed after excluding time during which it was impossible to bring the action to trial or new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c); see also § 90.91]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown acts or conduct that constitute impossibility within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c).

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of impossibility. Although there is no express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, supplemental memoranda are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is claimed that the action could not be brought to trial because of the usual time in waiting for a trial date, counsel should state that this reason is an ordinary incident of court proceedings and is not an excuse recognized by case law under the doctrine of impossibility [see, e.g., Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 548, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Before the 1984 enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c), which codified impossibility as an express exception to the dismissal statute's time requirements, a similar exception had been implied by the courts [see Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 530, 71 P.2d 205] . Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.91 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impossibility Exception

In Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347 , the defendant successfully sought a writ ofmandate in the Supreme Court to compel dismissal of an action that was not brought to trial within three years after the filing of the remittitur on a previous appeal. The Court rejected plaintiff's contention that it would have been impossible and futile to attempt to bring the case to trial within the statutory period (8 Cal. 3d 540, 546) . The implied exceptions to the running of the period do not contemplate that time consumed by the delay caused by ordinary incidents of proceedings like the disposition of a demurrer, amendment of pleadings, and the normal time of waiting for a place on the court's calendar or securing a jury trial is to be excluded from computation of the statutory period. The duty rests on a plaintiff at every stage of the proceedings to use due diligence to expedite the case to a final determination (8 Cal. 3d 540, 548) . Although plaintiff alleges a problem of court congestion, it is common knowledge that metropolitan courts are congested, and this delay is only part of the usual and ordinary incidents preliminary to trial, against which plaintiff could have sought protection by a motion to advance for trial (8 Cal. 3d 540, 549) .

In Moore v. Powell (1977) 70 Cal. App. 3d 583, 138 Cal. Rptr. 914 , the trial court dismissed the action because plaintiff had failed to bring it to trial within five years under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the five-year period was tolled by a change of venue, based on former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)], which excluded time during which the court's jurisdiction to try the action was suspended from computation of the statutory period.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court reasoned that former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f) merely codified the impossibility principle, and that time consumed by delay caused by ordinary incidents of proceedings is not excluded from the statutory period on the ground of impossibility. On the facts of this case, plaintiff should have foreseen the strong probability that defendants would move to change venue, and the normal time required for such a change can hardly be deemed an extraordinary or unavoidable delay (70 Cal. App. 3d 583, 589) .

[b] Illness of Plaintiff's Counsel Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception When Failure to Bring to Trial Did Not Result From Illness

In Sierra Nevada Memorial Miners Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (Hudson) (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 266 Cal. Rptr. 50 , plaintiffs failed to bring their action for medical malpractice to trial within five years. The failure was due to a computational error by plaintiffs' law firm in calendaring the case for timely action by mistakenly referring to the date posted on the office file label as the date the complaint was filed. In addition, the only experienced trial attorney in the office was disabled, because of three episodes of surgery and convalescence, for a total of 77 days during the five-year period. Defendant's motion to dismiss the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years was denied on the ground the 77 days of the attorney's illness were to be excluded from computation of the five-year period, and defendant petitioned the appellate court for a writ of mandate.

In issuing a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion to dismiss, and directing it to grant the motion, the court of appeal said that failure of plaintiffs' law firm to calendar the case in a timely manner had nothing to do with counsel's physical disabilities (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 467) , and that there was no basis under the governing statutes for tolling the five-year dismissal period on the ground of counsel's illness (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 469) . The court said that the text of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340 impelled the view that there must be a causal connection between the circumstance on which plaintiff relies and the failure to satisfy the five-year requirement, that bringing the action to trial must be impossible, impracticable, or futile for the reason proffered, and that a bare showing that counsel was ill does not warrant the attribution of such causation (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 473) . The court explained that plaintiff must do more than merely demonstrate that counsel was unable to attend trial or to attend to trial preparation during certain periods and thereby claim that the aggregate period was one of impossibility, impracticability, or futility warranting a tolling of the statute. In the course of five years it is reasonable to expect that counsel will suffer a number of days when illness will prevent attendance to his or her practice. Similarly, it is reasonable to expect that counsel will have to attend to other business, personal and professional, including days off and vacations. The five-year period contains an allowance for the time so consumed in the same manner as it allows for the usual and ordinary proceedings attendant to moving the case to trial (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 472) . The court said that it would render the statute utterly indeterminate, subjective, and unadministerable, and thus absurd, to read an open-ended sick leave program for counsel into the tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 472-473) .

[c] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impossibility Exeption

In Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486 , both parties participated in a trial-setting conference in which, without objection, the trial court inadvertently set a trial date that was one day beyond the expiration of the five-year period. On the day scheduled for trial, defendants unsuccessfully moved for dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360] and subsequently petitioned for a writ of mandate to vacate the trial court's order.

The court of appeal issued the writ, holding, in part, that illness of a plaintiff does not toll the statute and is not even a factor considered in that connection (62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 974-975) . It cited Beswick v. Palo Verde Hosp. Ass'n (1961) 188 Cal. App. 2d 254, 260-261, 10 Cal. Rptr. 314 , for the proposition that not even the death of plaintiff's attorney can be relied on to toll the statute (62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975) .

[d] Plaintiff's Bankruptcy Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

In Lauriton v. Carnation Co. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 263 Cal. Rptr. 476 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order of dismissal for plaintiff's failure to bring the action to trial within five years as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310. The complaint was filed December 8, 1983; plaintiff filed a voluntary petition for relief under Chapter 7 of the Bankruptcy Act on October 16, 1987, and received a discharge in bankruptcy on August 18, 1988. On September 30, 1988, he filed an at-issue memorandum, and trial was scheduled for February 27, 1989. However, on February 10, 1989, the case was dismissed because of plaintiff's failure to prosecute.

The court of appeal pointed out that (1) although generally all causes of action possessed by a bankrupt vest in the trustee and the plaintiff is not authorized to prosecute the action personally without authorization from the bankruptcy court, the bankruptcy itself does not divest the superior court of jurisdiction; (2) although the Bankruptcy Act provides that the commencement or continuation of any legal proceeding against the debtor is automatically stayed by the filing of a petition in bankruptcy, a debtor's cause of action is not tolled by the filing of a bankruptcy petition; and (3) what constitutes impossibility within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) must be determined in light of all the circumstances in the individual case, including the acts and conduct of the parties and the nature of the proceedings themselves (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164) . The court held that it was not impossible to bring the case to trial during plaintiff's bankruptcy, because (1) the trustee is not stayed from prosecuting actions and could have intervened in the action or moved to be substituted as party plaintiff (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164) , and (2) plaintiff could have sought relief from the bankruptcy court, such as an order permitting the trustee to maintain the action, an order compelling the trustee to maintain the action, an order authorizing plaintiff to prosecute the action on his own behalf, or a formal order of abandonment (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 165) .

[e] Death of Coplaintiff Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

Ferk v. County of Lake (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 252 Cal. Rptr. 196 , was an action, filed June 3, 1982, by a husband and wife, as joint tenants, for injunctive relief and damages for injury to real property. An amended complaint was filed April 13, 1983. On October 12, 1983, plaintiffs substituted themselves in pro per for their attorney. There was no further activity in the action until after the five-year period had expired, when, on June 4, 1987, plaintiff wife substituted a named attorney as her attorney. Plaintiff husband, following a lengthy illness, had died May 7, 1987.

Defendant moved to dismiss the action on the ground that it had not been brought to trial within five years after it was commenced. Prior to the hearing on the motion, plaintiff wife had undergone heart surgery and was confined to a hospital and unable to attend the hearing. However, in her declaration in opposition to the motion, she stated the following: (1) husband had been seriously ill for almost all the time since the action was filed until his death; (2) he had been hospitalized in the fall of 1981 for surgery; (3) since 1982, he had been hospitalized many times for illness; (4) when he was not hospitalized, wife had cared for him at home; (5) from August 1985 until 1987, he was confined in a convalescent hospital; (6) because of the seriousness of his illness, husband was physically incapable of proceeding with the action or handling his own affairs; (7) wife had been preoccupied with his health and welfare, and therefore did not proceed further with the action; and (8) no personal representative had been appointed for husband's estate. The motion to dismiss was granted, and plaintiff wife appealed.

The court of appeal concluded that the trial court acted within the limits of its discretion in dismissing the action and affirmed the judgment. The court rejected wife's contention that the illness and death of husband and wife's involvement in his care rendered it impossible or impracticable to bring the case to trial within five years. The court said that husband's continuing ill health did not prevent plaintiffs from commencing the lawsuit or thereafter filing an amended complaint, that it was only when plaintiffs substituted themselves in pro per for counsel that the action came to a standstill, that wife's understandable preoccupation with her husband's health during the five-year period cannot excuse her failure to obtain counsel or otherwise to act, and that her lack of attention is underscored by the fact she took no further action in the case even after 1985, when husband entered a rest home and, presumably, his physical care became less burdensome to her. The court also said that absolutely no showing had been made of diligence sufficient to require the trial court to apply the exception for impossibility, impracticability, or futility (205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 278) .

In addition, the court rejected plaintiff's contention that the five-year statute was tolled because the trial court's jurisdiction was suspended from the date husband died until a personal representative was appointed. The court said that on husband's death the property passed through right of survivorship to wife as the surviving joint tenant, that it was never apart of husband's estate, that the cause of action was a joint tenancy asset that also passed to wife on the death of husband, and that appointment of a personal representative to carry on the suit would have been inappropriate since the estate had no interest to pursue (205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 275-276) .

[f] Plaintiff's Lack of Representation by Guardian Ad Litem Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

In White v. Renck (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 166 Cal. Rptr. 701 , plaintiff, a minor, filed a medical malpractice action on February 5, 1973. Her father was appointed guardian ad litem on the same day. The father died on January 18, 1976. For undisclosed reasons a second guardian ad litem for plaintiff was not appointed until approximately 200 days later, when plaintiff's mother was appointed guardian ad litem. On March 20, 1978, defendants moved to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. The trial court granted the motion and dismissed the action with prejudice. Plaintiff appealed, contending that her action should not have been dismissed pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) because the 200-day hiatus when she was unrepresented by a guardian ad litem should not have been included in computing the five-year period under that section. Plaintiff based her contention, in part, on former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(a)], which provided that the time during which jurisdiction of the court to try the action is suspended shall not be included in computing any time period specified in former Code Civ. Proc. § 583.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, rejecting this contention. The court noted that failure to appoint a guardian ad litem did not result in a lack of jurisdiction in the fundamental sense of a lack of power to hear or determine the case. The failure to appoint a guardian ad litem may be waived, and a judgment rendered in the absence of a guardian ad litem is not void but is merely voidable (108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 839-840) . The court held that lack of jurisdiction, within the meaning of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f), refers to lack of jurisdiction in the fundamental sense (108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 840) . Since the trial court did not lack jurisdiction in the fundamental sense of power to try the case, the tolling provision of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(f) was inapplicable to the period during which plaintiff was unrepresented by a guardian ad litem. Therefore, dismissal of plaintiff's action was proper. The court also held that plaintiff's cause of action was not saved by implied exceptions to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, which arise from the fact that the party is unable, from causes beyond his or her control, to bring the case to trial. Plaintiff could not rely on such implied exceptions because she had made no showing that the absence of a guardian ad litem for 200 days made it impracticable for her to bring the action to trial within the five-year period (108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 841) .

Note that the court of appeal in Pham v. Wagner Litho Machinery Co. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 966, 971-972, 218 Cal. Rptr. 476 , disagreed with the holding in White v. Renck (1980) 108 Cal. App. 3d 835, 166 Cal. Rptr. 701 , on another ground.

[g] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception.

Cannon v. City of Novato (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 213 Cal. Rptr. 132 , was a personal injury action filed in 1976. Over a period of some three years plaintiffs sent interrogatories to defendants and responded to defendants' motions for summary judgment. However, during the succeeding 20 months plaintiffs were completely inactive. Approximately four and one-half years after the complaint was filed, plaintiffs filed an at-issue memorandum and took depositions. At a trial setting conference in February, 1981, the court ordered plaintiffs into judicial arbitration pursuant to the existing version of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.11. The arbitrator denied plaintiffs' claim. Plaintiffs rejected the arbitrator's award and moved to advance the case for trial, specifying that trial must be set before October 16, 1981. However, plaintiffs' attorney miscalculated the expiration date of the mandatory five-year period for bringing the matter to trial following the extension required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, which actually was August 23, 1981, 69 days after filing the arbitration award. The court clerk set a mandatory settlement conference for September 21, 1981, and trial for October 5, 1981. Plaintiff failed to submit a settlement conference statement within ten days of the conference and the court ordered the case off calendar. Plaintiffs again moved to advance the case for trial, and defendants moved to dismiss pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. The motion to dismiss was granted and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. The court rejected plaintiffs' claim that it was impossible and impracticable to bring the case to trial, holding that a party's inadvertence in selecting a trial date does not constitute impossibility or impracticability under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) because it is the party's duty to keep track of such crucial dates (167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222) . Former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) will not be applied if, due to circumstances beyond a party's control, it was impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring the case to trial during the applicable five-year period. However, courts look to the circumstances beyond the plaintiff's control that prevented trial within five years and whether the plaintiff pursued the suit diligently. Although case law provides a remedy for those plaintiffs who, despite their diligence, are unable to bring their cases to trial because the courts or other officials impeded the progress of their suits, plaintiffs' failure to bring this case to trial was due to plaintiffs' own miscalculations. Plaintiffs failed to show reliance on the performance ofan official duty to obtain a timely trial date. Moreover, if a plaintiff could have acted to bring the case to trial and failed to do so, relief will not be given even if the plaintiff claims to have relied on the performance of an official duty. The court had no duty to check plaintiffs' calculations for error. In addition, the court held that plaintiffs had not pursued the action diligently, based on an examination of the circumstances existing throughout the five-year period (167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 221-223) .

[h] Impossibility Exception Is Inapplicable When Setting of Trial Date Beyond Five-Year Period Resulted From Plaintiff's Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial

Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382 , an action for damages for false arrest, malicious prosecution, false imprisonment, and negligence, was filed on June 10, 1982. Defendants answered in July 1982. Plaintiff filed an at-issue memorandum on August 12, 1982. Discovery ensued. At the trial setting conference on July 10, 1986, trial was set for October 15, 1986, and plaintiff was prepared to go to trial on that date. On August 8, 1986, defendants moved to change venue from the court's Central District to its North Central District. The motion was granted on August 29, and the October 15 trial date was vacated. On October 31, 1986, the court in the North Central District scheduled a trial setting conference for March 19, 1987, and a mandatory settlement conference for June 24, 1987. At the trial setting conference, which the defendants did not attend, the court set the trial for August 17, 1987. Plaintiff requested a trial date in May, but the clerk stated no earlier date was available. Plaintiff did nothing further to obtain an earlier trial date. At the June 24 mandatory settlement conference, the court suspended proceedings on the ground that the five-year statute had run on June 10, 1987, leaving the court without jurisdiction. On July 30, 1987, defendants moved to dismiss. The motion was heard and granted on September 11, and plaintiff appealed.

In affirming the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal explained that the heart of plaintiff's case was his contention that he had pursued the matter diligently, but that bringing it to trial within five years was impossible or impracticable because his trial date was canceled and the court would not give him another within the five-year limit (206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133) . The appellate court said it was true that the trial court clerk had told plaintiff that no trial date was available within the statutory period, but that plaintiff had neglected to inform the court that he had a Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 problem, which was crucial. The court said that the plaintiff has a duty to call the chronology of his case to the court's attention, that all plaintiffs are under a continuing duty to correctly compute the statutory five years and to advise the court of the impending deadline, and that negligently keeping the date a secret from the court cannot excuse compliance (206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133) . The court concluded that plaintiff was not entitled to assume that a motion to set the case specially for trial would have been futile and that his failure to so move was fatal (206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133) .

[i] Impossibility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

The facts and procedural background of Lauriton v. Carnation Co. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 263 Cal. Rptr. 476 , are discussed under § 90.99[3][d]. In affirming the order of dismissal, the court of appeal said that the critical factor in applying the impossibility exception to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case. To establish reasonable diligence, the plaintiff must be able to demonstrate diligence in pursuit of his duty to expedite the resolution of the case at all stages of the proceeding, including the specific duty to use every reasonable effort to bring the matter to trial within the five-year period (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 164) . Further, plaintiff has the burden of proving it was impossible to bring the action to trial within that time (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 165) . The court pointed out that plaintiff's discharge in bankruptcy occurred more than three months before expiration of the five-year period and that, although plaintiff timely filed an at-issue memorandum, he made no motion to have the case specially set for trial (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 165) . The court said that when a plaintiff possesses the means to bring a matter to trial before the expiration of the five-year period by filing a motion to set the matter specially for trial, plaintiff's failure to bring such motion will preclude a later claim of impossibility or impracticability (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 165) . The court said the trial court was correct in not excluding the time plaintiff was in bankruptcy from the five-year period under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310 and 583.340, and concluded that since plaintiff did not use every reasonable effort to bring the action to trial, he did not exercise reasonable diligence in prosecuting his case (215 Cal. App. 3d 161, 165) .

In Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant for assault and battery. After two years of discovery, an at-issue memorandum was filed, followed by a mandatory settlement conference, at which the matter was referred to judicial arbitration. An arbitration award was entered for plaintiff, and defendant requested a trial de novo. At the time of the request for trial de novo, nine months and 17 days remained before the five-year period under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310] would run. Plaintiff filed a certificate of readiness about two weeks later, and then an at-issue memorandum about three months later. Approximately two and one-half months prior to the five-year time limit, plaintiff gave defendant notice of a second mandatory settlement conference and a new trialdate, both of which were scheduled beyond the five-year limit. After expiration of the five-year limit, defendant moved to dismiss and the court dismissed the action, but plaintiff subsequently succeeded in bringing the case to trial after moving for reconsideration of the motion to dismiss. Defendant appealed the judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed, concluding that plaintiff did not qualify for any exception affording relief from mandatory dismissal, including the exceptions for impossibility, impracticability, or futility. The court stated that the impossibility, impracticability, or futility exceptions to the five-year period did not apply because plaintiff had not demonstrated reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case, in that plaintiff had failed to notify the court of the time limit in the certificate of readiness or the at-issue memorandum and had acquiesced in the setting of the date after the five-year limit (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10) . The delay was not, in effect, due to circumstances beyond plaintiff's control, in that plaintiff could have cured the problem by a motion to advance the trial date (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 1) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impossibility Exception

The facts and procedural background of Sierra Nevada Memorial Miners Hospital, Inc. v. Superior Court (Hudson) (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 266 Cal. Rptr. 50 , are discussed under § 90.99[3][b]. In granting a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion to dismiss for plaintiffs' failure to bring the action to trial within five years, and to grant the motion to dismiss, the court of appeal said that ordinary and usual proceedings in the course of the prosecution of an action necessarily entail some periods during which the plaintiff cannot literally bring the matter to trial. Such periods are not within the reach of the "impossible, impracticable, or futile" standard (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 472) . On the contrary, even though a part of the five-year period must necessarily be consumed in service of process, disposition of demurrers, amendment of the pleadings, if necessary, usual and reasonable time consumed in waiting for a place on the court's calendar or in securing the attendance of a jury, and similar usual and necessary proceedings, Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) does not contemplate that time consumed in such ordinary proceedings is to be excluded from a computation of the five-year period (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 472) . The court said the purpose of the statute is to prevent avoidable delay for too long a period, and that those instances that constitute the impossibility, impracticability, or futility that come within the time impliedly excepted from the statutory period must be determined in the light of the purpose of the statute. As a consequence, every period of time during which the plaintiff does not have it within his or her power to bring the case to trial is not to be excluded in making the computation (217 Cal. App. 3d 464, 472) .

[b] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

In Ferk v. County of Lake (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 274-276, 252 Cal. Rptr. 196 , the action was based on damage to property owned in cotenancy. The trial court dismissed the action for failure to prosecute within five years. One cotenant had died during the five-year period, and the surviving cotenant argued that her cotenant's illness before his death made it impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring the action to trial. The court of appeal held that the illness of a cotenant did not excuse the lack of diligence in bringing the case to trial (205 Cal. App. 3d 268, 277-278) .

[c] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impossibility Exception

In Taylor v. Hayes (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 245 Cal. Rptr. 613 , plaintiff filed a personal injury suit on February 6, 1981. The case was ordered to arbitration on May 9, 1985. After the arbitrator rendered an award, plaintiff requested a trial de novo. On May 16, 1985, the county clerk notified plaintiff that her trial date was July 21, 1986. Shortly before the time set for trial, defendant moved to dismiss on the ground that more than five years had passed since the lawsuit was instituted. The trial court granted defendant's motion and dismissed the action. The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that the critical factor in applying the exceptions based on impossibility, impracticality, or futility is whether a plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case. The court concluded that the inadvertent selection of a trial date beyond the five-year mark does not constitute the type of impracticability, impossibility, or futility that tolls the five-year statute. It is the plaintiff's duty to keep track of the pertinent dates that are crucial to the maintenance of the lawsuit, and to see that the action is brought to trial within five years (199 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1410) . The court explained that plaintiff's affirmative duty to bring her case to trial within five years did not cease when she filed her request for a trial de novo. She remained responsible for keeping track of the crucial date when the five years would elapse, and for alerting the court that the limit was approaching. Plaintiff acquiesced in the erroneous trial date for more than a year and did nothing to diligently prosecute her lawsuit after filing her request for a trial de novo. Thus, the court concluded that the delay in going to trial was caused by plaintiff's own miscalculation rather than by circumstances beyond her control. The court also observed that plaintiff's suit was not tolled during the time it was in arbitration because there was a period of more than six months between the filing ofthe request for a trial de novo and the expiration of the five-year period (199 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1411) .

[d] Impossibility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

Wilcox v. Ford (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 254 Cal. Rptr. 138 , arose out of an automobile accident that occurred on May 9, 1981. The complaint was filed March 5, 1982. The matter was arbitrated, resulting in an award to plaintiff. Defendant moved for a trial de novo, and the case was set for trial on July 25, 1986. On that date, defendant's attorney appeared and, at plaintiff's behest, sought to continue the trial. The trial was continued to November 14, 1986. Defendant was to notify plaintiff of the new trial date, but neglected to do so. Neither party appeared for trial on the continued date, and the matter was dropped from the civil active list. On June 4, 1987, defendant moved for dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360. Plaintiff's opposition to the dismissal motion sought relief under former Code Civ. Proc. § 473, third paragraph, [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)] on the grounds of surprise, inadvertence, and excusable neglect, and on the grounds of estoppel and waiver [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]. Plaintiff also filed a separate motion for relief under former Code Civ. Proc. § 473, third paragraph [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]. The trial court granted the motion to dismiss on the grounds, among others, that Code Civ. Proc. § 473 did not apply to mandatory dismissals under the five-year statute. Plaintiff's motion for reconsideration was denied, and plaintiff appealed.

In affirming the judgment of dismissal, the appellate court said that the critical factor in applying the impossible, impractical, and futile standard to a given factual situation is whether the plaintiff exercised reasonable diligence in prosecuting his or her case, and that the reasonable diligence standard is an appropriate guideline for evaluating whether it was impossible, impracticable, or futile for the plaintiff to comply with the five-year statute due to causes beyond his or her control (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1175) . The court said that the exercise of reasonable diligence requires a plaintiff to keep track of the pertinent dates that are crucial to maintenance of the lawsuit, and to see that the action is brought to trial within the five-year period. The failure to monitor these dates does not constitute a cause beyond the plaintiff's control so as to trigger application of the impossible, impracticable, or futile exceptions (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1175) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.100

§ 90.100 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Exclusion Based on Impracticability or Futility Does Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM THAT IT WAS IMPRACTICABLE OR FUTILE TO BRING THE ACTION TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL] IS NOT SUPPORTED BY HIS/HER SHOWING THAT THE PERIOD OF DELAY WAS CAUSED BY _____ [specify, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S SEPARATE ACTION, WHICH PLAINTIFF FILED VOLUNTARILY].

[EITHER]

A. Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the ordinary incidents of court proceedings and the normal time of waiting for a trial date are not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] on the ground that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impracticable or futile, because the duty rests on a plaintiff at every stage of the proceedings to use due diligence to expedite the case to a final determination (see Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 548, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347).

[AND/OR]

B. Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the illness of the plaintiff is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] on the ground that going to _____ [trial or a new trial] was impracticable or futile (see Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 974-975, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486).

[AND/OR]

C. Pending Appeal of Related Action Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the pending appeal of an action that involved an issue affecting plaintiff's cause of action is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] on the ground that going to_____ [trial or a new trial] was impracticable or futile, if the facts to be tried are not complex and the legal issues may be resolved without resort to novel doctrine (see Reserve Insurance Co. v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 57, 61-64, 123 Cal. Rptr. 763).

[AND/OR]

D. Separate Action by Plaintiff Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the pendency of a separate action brought by the plaintiff on the same set of facts is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] on the ground of impracticability and futility when plaintiff chose to use two forums, the instant action could have been tried, and the effort involved in trial preparation would not have been wasted (see Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hospital (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1404, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521).

[AND/OR]

E. Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception. Periods of delay caused by a plaintiff's inadvertence in selecting a date for _____ [trial or new trial] are not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] on the ground of impracticability, because it is the plaintiff's duty to keep track of such crucial dates (see Cannon v. City of Novato (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222, 213 Cal. Rptr. 132).

[AND/OR]

F. Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial. When the case is set for trial beyond a five-year period, plaintiff's failure to bring a civil action to trial as required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.310 is not excused on the ground of impracticability by the trial court clerk's having told plaintiff that no trial date was available within the statutory period when plaintiff failed to call the chronology of the case to the trial court's attention or move to have trial specially set (Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382).

[AND/OR]

G. Plaintiff's Alleged Inability to Fulfill Requirements for Certificate of Merit Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception. A period of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the plaintiff's alleged inability to fulfill the requirements for the issuance of a certificate of merit pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 411.30 is not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] (see Adams v. Roses (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 504-505, 228 Cal. Rptr. 339).

[AND/OR]

H. Impracticability and Futility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] that are attributable to impracticability or futility are not excluded from the calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] unless the plaintiff has otherwise shown that he or she used reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case (Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905).

[AND/OR]

I. Impracticability or Futility Exception Not Available if Time Remains. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by the impracticability or futility of proceeding are not excluded from calculation of the period(s) specified in Code of Civil Procedure Section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] if adequate time remains after the period of inactivity ends to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] (see Sherberne & Associates v. Vector Mfg. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 68, 73, 69 Cal. Rptr. 284).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the applicable time period has not lapsed after excluding time during which it was impracticable or futile to bring the action to trial or new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c) and § 90.92]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown acts or conduct that constitute impracticability or futility within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c).

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of impracticability or futility. Although there is not express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion formandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if it is claimed that the action could not be brought to trial because of the usual time in waiting for a trial date, counsel should state that this reason is an ordinary incident of court proceedings and is not an excuse recognized by case law under the doctrine of impracticability or futility [see, e.g., Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 548, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Before the 1984 enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.340(c), which codified impracticability and futility as express exceptions to the dismissal statute's time requirements, a similar exception had been implied by the courts [see Christin v. Superior Court (1937) 9 Cal. 2d 526, 530, 71 P.2d 205] . Decisions interpreting former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.92 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Normal Delays in Court Proceedings Are No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

Crown Coach Corp. v. Superior Court (1972) 8 Cal. 3d 540, 105 Cal. Rptr. 339, 503 P.2d 1347 , is discussed in § 90.99[3][a].

[b] Plaintiff's Illness Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486 , is discussed in § 90.99[4][b].

[c] Pending Appeal of Related Action Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

In Reserve Insurance Co. v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 57, 123 Cal. Rptr. 763 , defendant filed a cross complaint against a codefendant and the trial court granted a summary judgment in the cross complainant's favor. Cross defendant appealed, and, after plaintiff did nothing to bring its action to trial before resolution of that appeal more than five years later, the trial court dismissed plaintiff's action pursuant to former Code

Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. Plaintiff appealed, contending that it would have been impracticable and futile to bring the action to trial during the pendency of the appeal on the cross complaint because a significant legal issue in plaintiff's case was also involved in the appeal.

The court of appeal disagreed and affirmed the order to dismiss. In contrast to Stella v. Great Western Sav. & Loan Assn. (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 732, 738-739, 91 Cal. Rptr. 771 (discussed in § 90.92[3][e]), proceeding to trial would not have involved substantial unnecessary monetary expense, evidentiary duplication, or legal complexity (13 Cal. App. 3d 732) . Plaintiff's case could be tried on the documents before the court and resolved without resort to novel legal doctrine. If plaintiff's argument prevailed, the trial of almost every case could be postponed as long as some issue necessary to decide it was pending before an appellate court (13 Cal. App. 3d 732) .

[d] Separate Action by Plaintiff Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

In Mitchell v. Frank R. Howard Memorial Hospital (1992) 6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 8 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 , plaintiff radiologist filed three actions in state court and one action in federal court against a hospital for breach of contract and other claims related to a dispute regarding plaintiff's employment at the hospital.Plaintiff filed the first state action, prosecuted it for about one year, then filed and pursued the federal action, including denial of certiorari by the U.S. Supreme Court, for approximately three years. While the federal action was pending, plaintiff filed but did not serve a second state action. After the second action was dismissed for failure to serve within two years, the first action was dismissed for failure to bring it to trial within five years, and plaintiff filed the third action, which was dismissed as time-barred (6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1399) . Plaintiff appealed all three cases.

On the consolidated appeal, plaintiff's primary justification for delay in prosecuting the first action and in serving the second action was his diligent prosecution of the federal action and exhaustion of all federal appellate remedies. The court of appeal rejected this argument, noting when a party makes a strategic decision to file identical actions in two forums, no judicial encouragement should be given to seeking a definitive ruling in one forum while allowing the case in the second forum to gather dust. Any ruling that it is "impracticable and futile" to prepare a case for trial because pertinent legal issues are being decided in another forum would sanction the indefinite postponement of preparing the dormant case for trial (6 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1404) .

[e] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is Not Basis for Impracticability Exception

Cannon v. City of Novato (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 213 Cal. Rptr. 132 , is discussed in § 90.99[3][g].

[f] Failure to Advise Trial Court of Chronology of Case or to Move to Set Case Specially for Trial

Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382 , is discussed in § 90.99[3][h].

[g] Plaintiff's Alleged Inability to Fulfill Requirements for Certificate of Merit Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception

In Adams v. Roses (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 228 Cal. Rptr. 339 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's malpractice complaint for failure to diligently prosecute the action within two years after filing of the initial complaint as required by former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)(B)]. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that the requirement of a certificate of merit in medical malpractice actions [see Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30 and Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings] tolls the two-year period while the plaintiff obtains the certificate. Plaintiff's attorney contended that, on contacting three physicians, he was unable to find a cooperative medical expert who would provide a consultation as required for the certificate by Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(1). Additionally, plaintiff's attorney noted that previous cases had tolled former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 when it had been impossible, impracticable, or futile for the plaintiff to proceed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30 is to require a plaintiff to obtain independent support of the merits of his or her action prior to serving the defendant. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(a), this is accomplished by requiring the plaintiff's attorney to consult with a medical expert. However, compliance with this requirement is postponed if the statute of limitations is near [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(2)] or excused if plaintiff encounters "a conspiracy of silence" from medical experts [Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(3)] (183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 504) . The court stated that if the Legislature had intended that the time during which a plaintiff attempts to obtain a certificate of merit be excluded from any limitations or dismissal period, it would not have provided Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(2), which postpones the filing of the certificate when plaintiff's action in those circumstances is threatened by dismissal (183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 504-505) . Moreover, although Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(2) excludes the limitations period embraced by former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a (the three-year period for service and return of summons), Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(2) does not include the two-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a). Had the Legislature meant to include former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) within Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(2), it would have done so. The court noted that plaintiff could have met the requirements for excuse under Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30(b)(3), since plaintiff's attorney had reportedly contacted several experts who were unwilling to provide a consultation (183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 505) . The court concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 411.30 could not be construed as tolling the two-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) (183 Cal. App. 3d 498, 504) .

[h] Impracticability and Futility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905 , is discussed in § 90.99[3][i].

[i] Impracticability or Futility Exception Not Available if Time Remains

In Sherberne & Associates v. Vector Mfg. Co. (1968) 263 Cal. App. 2d 68, 69 Cal. Rptr. 284 , the trial court dismissed the action for failure to bring it to trial within five years. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that the six months while plaintiff's right of discovery was suspended should be excluded from calculation of the statutory period on the ground of impracticability and futility.

The court of appeal, however, affirmed the dismissal. After the six-month suspension period, plaintiff still had over two years to complete discovery. An exception to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310,583.360] should not be made, even though the period of inactivity is excusable, if enough time is left to overcome the effect of such a period (263 Cal. App. 2d 68, 73) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Separate Action by Plaintiff Is No Basis for Impracticability or Futility Exception

In Manor Drug Stores v. Blue Chip Stamps (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 423, 139 Cal. Rptr. 483 , plaintiff's action was dismissed by the federal district court, after which plaintiff filed a class action on the same alleged facts in state court but did nothing to further the state action while appealing the federal dismissal. Four years later, the United States Supreme Court decided the federal action adversely to plaintiff, and after expiration of the five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360], the trial court dismissed plaintiff's state action for failure to prosecute.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that plaintiff's contention that a trial was impossible, impracticable, and futile until a final determination of its federal action, was untenable. Plaintiff chose to use two forums for essentially the same litigation. If it had attempted to proceed with the state litigation, it is possible the state court would have refused any attempts by defendant to abate the action. Trial preparation would not have been a waste of time so far as the federal action was concerned because both actions were based on the same set of facts (71 Cal. App. 3d 423, 426-427) .

[b] Plaintiff's Inadvertence in Selecting Trial Date Is No Basis for Impracticability Exception

Taylor v. Hayes (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 245 Cal. Rptr. 613 , is discussed in § 90.99[4][c].

[c] Impracticability and Futility Exception Not Applicable Absent Showing by Plaintiff of Due Diligence

Wilcox v. Ford (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 254 Cal. Rptr. 138 , is discussed in § 90.99[3][d].

In Tejada v. Blas (1987) 196 Cal. App. 3d 1335, 242 Cal. Rptr. 538 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's dismissal of an action for failure to bring the matter to trial within five years. The court held that it was not impossible, impracticable, or futile to bring the action to trial, since plaintiff did not exercise reasonable diligence in prosecuting the case at every stage of the proceeding, and did not use every reasonable effort to bring the matter to trial. Although defendant had failed to appear for her deposition and failed to appear for an arbitration hearing set one year prior to the expiration of the five-year period, these dilatory tactics did not preclude plaintiff from moving to set the matter specially for trial within the statutory time period (196 Cal. App. 3d 1335, 1340-1341) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.101

§ 90.101 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Delay Based on Factual Error by Plaintiff's Counsel Is Not Excused

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

A FACTUAL ERROR BY PLAINTIFF'S COUNSEL DOES NOT EXCUSE PLAINTIFF'S FAILURE TO BRING THE ACTION TO _____ [TRIAL WITHIN THE PERIOD SPECIFIED IN SECTION 583.310 or A NEW TRIAL WITHIN THE PERIOD SPECIFIED IN SECTION 583.320] OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

Factual Error by Counsel No Excuse. An error of fact by plaintiff's counsel that leads to expiration of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320] of the Code of Civil Procedure before the action is brought to _____ [trial or a new trial] does not excuse failure to comply with the statutory requirements (see Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 ; Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the delay in bringing the action to trial or new trial should be excused because it resulted from a factual error on the part of plaintiff's counsel. The ground for the response is that this is not an accepted basis for excusing or extending the applicable time period.

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of counsel's factual error. Although there is not express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles applicable in determining whether the discretionary period has lapsed are the same as those applicable in determining whether the mandatory period has lapsed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Factual Error by Counsel No Excuse

Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 , involved a medical malpractice action in which plaintiff was awarded $100,000 in damages. Defense counsel waived the dismissal provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a), but plaintiff's counsel mistakenly believed that this waiver also covered dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. Defendant moved to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b). Plaintiff then filed a motion for relief from an order taken against the plaintiff because of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473. The trial court granted the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion while denying the motion to dismiss. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court had erred in denying the motion to dismiss. A plaintiff has a duty to expedite the case for trial and any shirking of that duty is proscribed by former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 806) . Although there are recognized excuses for a delay in prosecution, these exceptions must be strictly construed (68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807) . Plaintiff's counsel claimed belief that a waiver made in exchange for plaintiff's dropping a trial date only 19 months after commencement of the action also waived the requirement that the action must be brought to trial within five years. The court stated that this claim led to the inescapable conclusion that the conduct of plaintiff's counsel was careless, negligent, and inexcusable (68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808-809) .

The facts and procedural background of Singelyn v. Superior Court (1976) 62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 133 Cal. Rptr. 486 , are discussed in § 90.99[3][c]. In Singelyn, the court held, in part, that inadvertence on the part of the court in selecting a trial date that was one day beyond the expiration of the five-year period did not constitute the type of impracticability, impossibility, or futility that tolls the statutory period. It is plaintiff's duty to keep track of pertinent dates and see that the action is brought to trial on time (62 Cal. App. 3d 972, 975) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Factual Error by Counsel No Excuse

In Cannon v. City of Novato (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 213 Cal. Rptr. 132 , the court of appeal rejected plaintiffs' claim that it was impossible and impracticable to bring their case to trial. The court held that a party's inadvertence in selecting a trial date does not constitute impossibility or impracticability under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360], because it is the party's duty to keep track of such crucial dates. Here, the inadvertence was caused by the miscalculation by plaintiffs' attorney of the period within which the action could be brought to trial (167 Cal. App. 3d 216, 222) .

In Griffis v. S.S. Kresge Co. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 197 Cal. Rptr. 771 , the court of appeal held that the neglect apparent in the failure of a plaintiff's attorney to keep an adequate record of pertinent actions by the court was not excusable and would not in itself suffice to avoid operation of the period for bringing an action to trial under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.360]. While it might have been difficult for plaintiff'snewly associated attorney to have discovered the true date for the trial period because of tolling due to judicial arbitration, it was not impossible, since another attorney was present at hearings in which arbitration was discussed and ordered who had a continuing awareness of the pertinent dates. In order to avoid the imputation of the attorney's neglect to plaintiff, the mistake or neglect must be excusable (150 Cal. App. 3d 491, 497) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.102

§ 90.102 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Estoppel When Sufficient Time Remains to Bring Action to Trial

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

PLAINTIFF CANNOT CLAIM THAT DEFENDANT IS ESTOPPED FROM MOVING FOR DISMISSAL PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.360 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE IF ADEQUATE TIME REMAINS TO BRING THE ACTION TO _____ [TRIAL or A NEW TRIAL] AFTER THE END OF PLAINTIFF'S RELIANCE ON DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT.

Estoppel Not Available if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains. Periods of delay in bringing an action to _____ [trial or a new trial] caused by plaintiff's reliance on defendant's acts or failures to act are not excluded from calculation of the period(s) specified in section _____ [583.310 or 583.320 of the Code of Civil Procedure], if adequate time remains to bring the action to _____ [trial or a new trial] after the end of plaintiff's reliance on defendant's conduct (see andre v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 842-843, 118 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; Smith v. El Centro Lodge No. 1325 (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 713, 716-717, 76 Cal. Rptr. 629).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the applicable period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or 583.320 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the defendant is estopped from seeking dismissal because plaintiff's delay resulted from reliance on defendant's conduct [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140 and § 90.93]. The ground for the response is that estoppel does not apply when, following the period during which plaintiff delayed in reliance on defendant's conduct, there still remained adequate time to bring the action to trial or new trial.

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of estoppel. Although there is not express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles of waiver and estoppel apply equally in motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if plaintiff contends that he or she relied on certain actions by defendant, counsel should state that the actions relied on ended within ample time for plaintiff to bring the action to trial [see, e.g., Smith v. El Centro Lodge No. 1325 (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 713, 717, 76 Cal. Rptr. 629] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.93 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel Not Available if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains

The facts and procedural background of Andre v. General Dynamics, Inc. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 118 Cal. Rptr. 95 , are discussed in § 90.83[3][d]. In Andre, the court of appeal noted that the trial court's willingness to grant plaintiff a continuance, even though the statutory period had already expired, did not estop the court from subsequently initiating its own motion to dismiss where several months had passed and the case still had not been brought to trial (43 Cal. App. 3d 839, 844) .

In Smith v. El Centro Lodge No. 1325 (1969) 271 Cal. App. 2d 713, 76 Cal. Rptr. 629 , an action was first set for trial approximately five months prior to expiration of the five-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. On the day of trial, it was placed off calendar because of illness of defendants' counsel. Ten days later, the trial was reset for a date three months beyond the statutory period. Subsequently, after expiration of the period for bringing the action to trial, the trial court granted defendants' motion to dismiss. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding, in part, that defendants were not estopped from asserting the dismissal provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 (271 Cal. App. 2d 713, 716-717) . Although the trial was first continued because of the illness of defendants' counsel, the plaintiff still had ample time to request a trial setting within the time limitation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583. Similarly, the deterioration of settlement negotiations, another cause of delay, could not be the basis for an estoppel because it occurred three years before the period expired and plaintiff could not rely on delay caused earlier in the proceedings that hardly could have misled plaintiff to his prejudice (271 Cal. App. 2d 713, 717) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.103

§ 90.103 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Waiver Based on Open Extension to File Responsive Pleading When Sufficient Time Remains to Bring Action to Trial

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

PLAINTIFF CANNOT CLAIM THAT DEFENDANT WAIVED DISMISSAL PURSUANT TO SECTION 583.360 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE ON THE BASIS OF DEFENDANT'S AGREEMENT TO AN OPEN EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE A RESPONSIVE PLEADING, BECAUSE THERE WAS ADEQUATE TIME FOR PLAINTIFF TO BRING THE CASE TO TRIAL AFTER DEFENDANT FILED THE PLEADING.

Time Limit Not Waived if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains After Defendant Has Filed Pleading. The statutory period provided by Section _____ 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure, within which plaintiff must bring the case to trial to avoid dismissal pursuant to Section _____ 583.360 of the Code of Civil Procedure, is not tolled or waived if a defendant, who had been granted an open extension of time to file a responsive pleading, files the pleading early enough in this period to allow the plaintiff adequate time to bring the case to trial before the period expires (see Gentry v. Nielsen (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 33).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the defendant waived his or her right to seek dismissal by agreeing to an open extension of time within which to file a responsive pleading [see Code Civ. Proc.§ 583.140]. The ground for the response is that there is no waiver when there is sufficient time to bring the action to trial after defendant filed the responsive pleading.

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of waiver. Although there is not express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles of waiver and estoppel apply equally in motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if plaintiff claims that he or she failed to bring the action to trial in reliance on an open extension of time given to defendant to file a responsive pleading, defendant should state the date on which he or she served and filed the responsive pleading, and that plaintiff had adequate time thereafter to bring the action to trial before expiration of the statutory period for bringing it to trial [see, e.g., Gentry v. Nielsen (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 33] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time Limit Not Waived if Time for Bringing Action to Trial Remains After Defendant Has Filed Pleading

The facts and procedural background of Gentry v. Nielsen (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 27 , are discussed in § 90.62[3][a]. In Gentry, the court of appeal affirmed dismissal under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [now see Code Civ. Proc. §

583.310] for failure to bring the case to trial within five years. The court held that the holdings in General Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 449, 455, 124 Cal. Rptr. 745, 541 P.2d 289 (discussed in § 90.52[3][a]), and Regan Distributors, Inc. v. Yurosek & Son, Inc. (1979) 88 Cal. App. 3d 924, 928, 152 Cal. Rptr. 127 (discussed in § 90.87[3][d]), do not extend to the facts of this case. A critical fact in General Ins. Co. was that the extension of time that plaintiff had granted defendant was still in effect when the statutory period expired because defendant had not answered. There, defendant's own conduct had precluded plaintiff from bringing the case to trial within the statutory period. Here, however, defendant had filed his answer, thus terminating the extension, two years before the end of the statutory period (123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 32-33) . Thus, the court in Gentry held that merely granting an open extension of time to answer, which is exercised within the statutory period, does not extend the period when the extension does not preclude plaintiff from bringing the case to trial within the prescribed time (123 Cal. App. 3d 27, 33) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.104

§ 90.104 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Principles of Waiver and Estoppel Do Not Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140]--No Estoppel or Waiver Based on Defendant's Failure to Attend Trial Setting Conference or to Notify Plaintiff of Continued Trial Date

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

A DEFENDANT'S FAILURE TO ATTEND A TRIAL SETTING CONFERENCE CONSTITUTES NEITHER A WAIVER OF THE RIGHT TO HAVE THE ACTION BROUGHT TO TRIAL WITHIN FIVE YEARS FROM THE DATE IT WAS COMMENCED NOR AN ESTOPPEL TO SEEK DISMISSAL OF THE ACTION BASED ON THE MANDATORY FIVE-YEAR STATUTE.

[EITHER]

A. Defendant's Failure to Attend Trial Setting Conference Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel. Defendant's failure to attend the trial settingconference does not constitute a waiver of the right to seek dismissal for plaintiff's failure to bring the action to trial within the period required by section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure, nor is the defendant estopped by such conduct from seeking dismissal on that ground (Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 132-133, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382).

[AND/OR]

B. Defendant's Failure to Notify Plaintiff of Continued Trial Date or to Appear at Continued Trial Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel. Neither the failure of the defendant to notify plaintiff's counsel of the continued trial date, secured by defendant at plaintiff's request, nor defendant's failure to appear for trial on the continued date, constitutes a waiver of the mandatory provisions of Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.310 or estops defendant to move for dismissal under Code of Civil Procedure section 583.360 for failure to bring the case to trial within five years (Wilcox v. Ford (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1179-1180, 254 Cal. Rptr. 138).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the defendant has waived the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 or is estopped from seeking dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.140 and § 90.93]. The ground for the response is that there is no waiver or estoppel based either on a defendant's failure to attend the trial setting conference or on a defendant's failure to notify plaintiff of a continued trial date secured at plaintiff's request.

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of waiver or estoppel. Although there is not express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing form may, in addition, be adapted for use in support of a motion for discretionary dismissal [see § 90.83]. The principles of waiver and estoppel apply equally in motions for discretionary dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.140, 583.420(b)].

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if defendant claims that there is no estoppel or waiver based on defendant's failure to give plaintiff notice of a continued trial date, defendant should show that plaintiff failed to determine whether the requested continuance had been granted [see Wilcox v. Ford (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1180, 254 Cal. Rptr. 138] .

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ.

Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.93 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Failure to Attend Trial Setting Conference Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel

Wale v. Rodriguez (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 253 Cal. Rptr. 382 , isdiscussed in § 90.99[3][b]. In affirming the judgment of dismissal, the court of appeal rejected plaintiff's argument that, by their failure to attend the trial setting conference, defendants had agreed to waive the five-year statute, since this amounted to an acquiescence by defendants in whatever trial date plaintiff obtained. The court held that the question was controlled by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330, setting forth the manners in which the parties may extend time [see § 90.87], and that missing a conference is neither a written stipulation nor an oral agreement made in open court, as required by that statute (206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 132) . The court similarly rejected plaintiff's estoppel arguments, holding that reliance on defendants' nonappearance at the trial setting conference was not reasonable, given the mandatory requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.330 (206 Cal. App. 3d 129, 133) .

[b] Defendant's Failure to Notify Plaintiff of Continued Trial Date or to Appear at Continued Trial Does Not Constitute Waiver or Estoppel

Wilcox v. Ford (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 254 Cal. Rptr. 138 , is discussed in § 90.99[4][d]. In affirming the judgment of dismissal, the appellate court rejected plaintiff's waiver-estoppel argument, pointing out that although Code Civ. Proc. § 473 enables a plaintiff who has failed to oppose a motion to dismiss, through mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect, to file a belated opposition to the motion, it does not provide additional grounds for relief from failure to bring an action to trial within five years (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1176) . The court said that plaintiff charges defendant with failing to notify him of the continued trial date and of failing to appear for trial, and that neither of these omissions constituted a waiver or estoppel in the case before it. The court said it could not infer from defendant's failure to notify plaintiff of the continued trial date a waiver of defendant's right to assert the five-year statute, nor could such a waiver be implied by his failure to appear for trial (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1179) . The court explained that in this situation, a waiver would only have occurred if defendant had in some manner consented to a trial date beyond the five-year mark, which defendant, clearly, did not do (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1179-1180) . The court further said that plaintiff could not plausibly claim to have been lulled into a false sense of security by either of defendant's omissions and that, while it was true that defendant neglected to give notice of the continued trial date, this did not obliterate the failure of plaintiff's counsel to determine whether the continuance that he requested had been granted, and that, under these circumstances, estoppel simply did not apply (206 Cal. App. 3d 1170, 1180) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.105

§ 90.105 Supplemental Memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)] Supporting Motion for Mandatory Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310, 583.320, 583.360]--Action Submitted to Judicial Arbitration [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.10-1141.31]--No Extension of Time Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20(b) Absent Showing of Reasonable Diligence

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

THE EXCLUSION OF TIME UNDER MORAN FROM THE FIVE-YEAR PERIOD IN WHICH AN ACTION MUST BE BROUGHT TO TRIAL TO AVOID MANDATORY DISMISSAL DOES NOT APPLY, BECAUSE PLAINTIFF FAILED [ACCURATELY] TO NOTIFY THE TRIAL COURT OF THE APPROACHING FIVE-YEAR DEADLINE.

Reasonable Diligence Is Required Under Moran. The rule of Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 242, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 , that a certain period of time shall be excluded from the calculation of the five-year period under Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure, based on the court's duty under Section 1141.20(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure to recalendar a case after a request has been made for a trial de novo following judicial arbitration, does not apply when the plaintiff, after the request for a trial de novo, fails to exercise reasonable diligence in accurately notifying the court of the approaching five-year limit, so that the court can set the case for trial (Messih v. Levine (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457-458, 278 Cal. Rptr. 825 ; Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033-1034, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 ; Sizemore v. Tri-City Lincoln Mercury, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 91-92, 235 Cal. Rptr. 243).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in a supplemental memorandum supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial within the period specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360]. Specifically, the foregoing supplemental points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claimthat the applicable time period has not lapsed after excluding time pursuant to the rule of Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 . This rule is applied when an action has been submitted to judicial arbitration under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1141.10-1141.31, and a timely request for trial de novo was filed following arbitration [see discussion under § 90.105[2][c][i]]. The ground for the response is that the opposing party has not adequately shown reasonable diligence in prosecuting the action after the request for a trial de novo was made, and therefore the exclusion under the rule of Moran does not apply.

As a practical matter, the foregoing points and authorities are best used in a supplemental memorandum, after the opposing party has raised the issue of exclusion under the rule of Moran. Although there is no express authorization for submitting supplemental memoranda in a motion for mandatory dismissal, they are so authorized in analogous motions for discretionary dismissal [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(c)]. Alternatively, the foregoing points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities generally supporting a motion for mandatory dismissal that are set out in § 90.80, when counsel wishes to anticipate known opposition.

The foregoing memorandum supports a defendant's motion for dismissal of the complaint, and should be modified as necessary when it is used in another context, such as in support of a motion for dismissal of a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (b), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, if defendant claims that the Moran rule does not apply, counsel should set forth facts showing that plaintiff did not exercise reasonable diligence in accurately notifying the court of the approaching five-year limit [see Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033-1034, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (discussed in § 90.105[3][a]].

[b] Effect of Authority Decided Under Former Dismissal Statutes

In 1984, the provisions for involuntary dismissal for delay in bringing an action to trial or new trial, former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b)-(d), were repealed and replaced by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.310-583.360. Decisions interpreting the former statute have been cited in the form as persuasive rather than controlling authority to the extent that the revised statutes codify former case law or continue former substantive principles.

[c] Exclusion Under Moran

[i] Statement of Rule

In Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 242, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 , the California Supreme Court held that, when a timely request for a trial de novo is filed after judicial arbitration, it is the court's duty to set a date for trial under Section 1141.20(b) of the Code of Civil Procedure. Consequently, the Court held, the time between the date the arbitration award is filed with the court and the date set for the new trial is excluded from calculation of the five-year period for mandatory dismissal under Section 583.310 of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[ii] Diligence Requirement

As set out in the foregoing points and authorities, a plaintiff must exercise reasonable diligence before the exclusion under Moran will apply, by accurately notifying the court of the approaching five-year limit, so that the court can properly set the case for trial, and continue to exercise reasonable diligence in bringing the case to trial prior to expiration of the five-year period [see, e.g., Messih v. Levine (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457, 278 Cal. Rptr. 825 ; Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1028, 1033-1034, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (both discussed in § 90.105[3][a]].

[iii] Former Split Among Courts of Appeal

Formerly the courts of appeal were split on the issue of whether a plaintiff must exercise "reasonable diligence" in bringing the case to trial during the period that is tolled under the rule of Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 (discussed under § 90.105[2][c][i]. The leading decision holding that the Moran rule applied without regard to a plaintiff's diligence, because of the sua sponte duty of the court to recalendar the case in the same place in relation to the end of the five-year period as the case had before arbitration, is Barna v. Passage 350 Canon (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 440, 446-448, 230 Cal. Rptr. 764 , decided by Division Seven of the Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District.

Another line of cases, most of which were decided by the other divisions of the Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District, held that a plaintiff must exercise "reasonable diligence" to bring the case to trial during the period that is tolled under the rule of Moran. Such cases include Berry v. Weitzman (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 351, 357, 249 Cal. Rptr. 816 ; Sizemore v. Tri-City Lincoln-Mercury, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 91-92, 235 Cal. Rptr. 243 (discussed in § 90.105[3][a]); and Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11-12, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905 (discussed in § 90.105[4][a]).

Attempting to reconcile the split in authority among the divisions of the Second District, Division Four of that court, in Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1028, 1033-1034, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (discussed in § 90.105[3][a]), ruled that Moran requires a plaintiff to exercise reasonable diligence relative to the five-year period to the extent of requesting the trial court to set a trial date within that period. The court explained that theunderpinnings of Moran's holding are (1) trial courts have a statutory duty and the exclusive power to actually set a preferential trial date, and (2) plaintiffs are thus entitled to presumeperformance of that duty (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033) , but that implicitly incorporated in this formulation are the circumstances before the Moran court of a plaintiff diligently performing her independent duty at all times to keep track of the five-year deadline and inform the trial court of that deadline.

Subsequently, without expressly overruling its decision in Barna but distinguishing it on its facts, the Seventh Division of the Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District retreated from its earlier ruling and for all practical purposes adopted the rule announced in Santa Monica to the effect that a plaintiff must exercise reasonable diligence at least to the extent of notifying the trial court of the approaching five-year limit and to request a trial date within that period [see Baccus v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1535-1536, 255 Cal. Rptr. 781 (discussed in § 90.105[4][a])]. The Court of Appeal of the Sixth Appellate District, in 1990, adopted the reasoning of Santa Monica and Baccus [see Serrano v. FMC Corp. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1027, 1031-1032, 271 Cal. Rptr. 41 ; Dresser v. Bindi (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1494-1495, 1498, 271 Cal. Rptr. 137 (both discussed in § 90.105[4][a])].

In 1991, reaffirming its position in Baccus, Division Seven of the Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District said that to obtain tolling benefits a plaintiff must do more than just request a trial de novo; the plaintiff must notify the trial court of the five-year deadline and continue to exercise reasonable diligence [Messih v. Levine (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457, 278 Cal. Rptr. 825 (discussed in § 90.105[3][a])]. The court added that its decision in Baccus ended the split in authority concerning Moran's second alternative holding, and that all courts which have addressed the issue now agree that a plaintiff, notwithstanding his or her request for a trial de novo, has an ongoing duty of reasonable diligence [Messih v. Levine (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458, 278 Cal. Rptr. 825 (discussed in § 90.105[3][a]); see also Marchuk v. Ralphs Grocery Co. (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 1273, 1277-1279, 276 Cal. Rptr. 627 (Fourth Appellate District, Division Three)] .

[d] Exclusion Under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17

Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b) provides for an exclusion of time that is also based on submission of an action to judicial arbitration, but which is distinct from the exclusion of time under the Moran rule. For further discussion of the exclusion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, see § 90.96.

[e] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[f] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.96 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Diligence Is Required Under Moran

In Messih v. Levine (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 278 Cal. Rptr. 825 , an action by a pharmacist for wrongful termination, the complaint, almost seven years after it had been filed, was dismissed pursuant to the mandatory five-year dismissal statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310). Plaintiff appealed, contending, inter alia, that the limitation period was automatically tolled by his postarbitration trial de novo request under the second alternative holding of Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 (discussed in § 90.105[2][c][i]). The court of appeal affirmed. It briefly noted that as to Moran's second alternative holding there had been a split in case authority and that in Baccus v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1535-1536, 255 Cal. Rptr. 781 (discussed in § 90.105[4][a]), it had held that to obtain the tolling benefits of Moran a plaintiff must do more than just request a trial de novo, he must notify the trial court of the five-year deadline and continue to exercise reasonable diligence (228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 457) . The court said that its decision in Baccus ended the split in authority and that all courts which have addressed the issue now agree that a plaintiff, notwithstanding his request for a trial de novo, has an ongoing duty of reasonable diligence, and that postarbitration tolling requires reasonable diligence on a plaintiff's part (228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458) . The court said that plaintiff failed to exercise such diligence: during the six-month period following his request for a trial de novo, he did not notify the court of the five-year deadline nor take any steps to bring the action to trial, that on September 12, 988, about a month before the five-year deadline, the trial court notified plaintiff of a November 2, 1988 status conference, and that plaintiff not only failed to inform the court that this date was beyond the five-year deadline but plaintiff failed to appear at the conference. The appellate court therefore concluded that the five-year statute was not tolled by plaintiff's postarbitration trial de novo request (228 Cal. App. 3d 454, 458) .

In Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 , an action for medical malpractice was in judicially ordered arbitration in the last six months before the five-year period expired. Plaintiff filed a timely request for trial de novo but never requested a special trial setting. More than six months after the request, and before the date set for trial, one defendant moved to dismiss the action for failure to bring the action to trial within the five-year period,as extended by the postarbitration tolling provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b) (discussed in § 90.96[3][a]). The trial court denied the motion, finding some diligence on plaintiff's part but reciting no facts showing an effort to meet the extended five-year period following the request for trial de novo. Defendant petitioned for a writ.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order and enter a new order granting the defendant's motion to dismiss (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1036) . There was no dispute that the five-year period was not tolled under the "impossible or impracticable" exception, which formed the basis for one of two independent holdings in Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 (discussed in § 90.105[2][c][i]), because the five-year statute expired due to plaintiff's own "lack of diligence in discovery and trial setting efforts prior to arbitration" (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1031) . The court went on to hold that, under the second independent holding in Moran, which was based on the trial court's sua sponte duty to recalendar a trial date so as to preserve plaintiff's position relative to the five-year statute, a plaintiff must exercise reasonable diligence to put trial courts on notice of the imminent five-year deadlines (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1031, 1034) . The court reasoned that the analytical underpinnings of the second independent holding in Moran are (1) that the trial courts have a statutory duty and the exclusive power to set a preferential trial date and (2) that plaintiffs are thus entitled to presume the performance of that duty (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033) . The court found that implicitly incorporated in this formulation were the circumstances that were before the Moran court, that is, a plaintiff who diligently performed the independent duty to keep track of the five-year deadline at all times and inform the trial court of that deadline. Therefore, the court held, a broad, generalized rule that absolved nondiligent plaintiffs of their continuous, salutary duty to advance their cases diligently to a timely trial was not necessary to the Moran decision (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1033-1034) . In addition, the court reasoned, it is unlikely that the court in Moran meant to abrogate totally the ongoing duty of plaintiffs to meet five-year deadlines by notifying trial courts of imminent five-year deadlines and requesting timely trial dates. Continuing that duty, in conjunction with requiring trial courts to set trials before known five-year deadlines, would better serve the fundamental public policy purpose of the mandatory dismissal statute (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1035) . Finally, the court reasoned, if the court in Moran had correctly construed Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 to create an unconditional and automatic tolling of the five-year period, until whatever date the trial court eventually set for trial, the Legislature's amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17(b), which extended the tolling period for some plaintiffs from the date the arbitration award is filed to the date the de novo trial request is filed, would have been a useless legislative act (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1035) .

In Sizemore v. Tri-City Lincoln Mercury, Inc. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 235 Cal. Rptr. 243 , a contract action was in judicially ordered arbitration in the last six months before the five-year period expired. Plaintiffs filed a timely request for trial de novo but the trial setting conference was removed from the calendar when plaintiffs failed to give notice to defendants. Plaintiffs then successfully moved to set the case specially for trial. However, due to their own miscalculation, plaintiffs obtained a trial date beyond the five-year limit, including the extension under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 (discussed in § 90.96[3][a]). Defendants filed a motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) [repealed, now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310]. The trial court dismissed the action and plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that plaintiffs failed to come under either prong of the Moran rule (190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 92) . The "impossibility" exception did not apply, the court held, because plaintiffs' failure to give notice of trial setting and subsequent miscalculation of the five-year deadline showed a lack of reasonable diligence (190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 89) . The court went on to hold that, under the Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 prong of Moran, the court's sua sponte duty to recalendar the case never arose (190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 92) . The court reasoned that the plaintiff in Moran notified the court of the approaching five-year limit (190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 91) . Thus, under the Moran rule plaintiffs are under a duty to notify the court prior to the running of the five-year statue that the limit is rapidly approaching. The court held that it is inherent in this requirement that plaintiff will exercise diligence and assume the responsibility of correctly computing the time and advising the court of the time frame of the case. Because plaintiffs' failure to get their case to trial was caused by their own neglect and miscalculations rather than circumstances beyond their control, their case was properly dismissed (190 Cal. App. 3d 84, 92) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable Diligence Is Required Under Moran

In Serrano v. FMC Corp. (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1027 , following judicial arbitration in which the arbitrator had ruled in favor of the defendant, plaintiff, on December 14, 1983, made a timely request for trial de novo. However, no further action was taken by plaintiff or by the court until November 1988, at which time plaintiff's counsel contacted the superior court clerk's office and was advised to file a new at-issue memorandum, which he did on December 2, 1988, with no indication that the five-year dismissal date was approaching. The clerk contacted plaintiff's attorney on December 6, 1988, and informed him that the case was no longer on the civil active list and that a motion to restore would be necessary. Plaintiff did not file the motion at that time and the five-year period expired on December 14, 1988. On February 28, 1989, defendant filed a motion for summary judgment seeking, inter alia, dismissal for plaintiff's failure to bring the action to trial within five years (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310). Plaintiff countered with a motion to restorethe case to the active list and had his motion set for hearing before defendant's motion. Neither plaintiff nor his counsel appeared at the hearing on the motion to restore, and the motion was denied. On March 28, 1989, the court dismissed the action on its own motion pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360. Plaintiff appealed, contending that under Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 , the period of limitation was tolled by his request for a trial de novo following arbitration and that he had no duty therefore to exercise diligence in prosecuting the matter.

After discussing Moran and the split of authority among the courts of appeal (discussed in § 90.105[2][c][iii]), the Court of Appeal of the Sixth Appellate District quoted Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1034, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (discussed under § 90.105[3][a]), holding that although a plaintiff is entitled to presume that a trial court will perform its duty to set a preferential trial date following a request for a trial de novo, plaintiff nonetheless must diligently perform his or her independent duty to keep track of the five-year deadline at all times and inform the trial court of that deadline (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1031) . The court found Santa Monica's reasoning persuasive and held that nowithstanding the sua sponte duty of the trial court to reset the matter for trial pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20, a plaintiff must continue to exercise reasonable diligence by monitoring the case calendar and alerting the court to the impending expiration of the statutory period (203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1031-1032) .

In Dresser v. Bindi (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 271 Cal. Rptr. 137 , the Court of Appeal of the Sixth Appellate district took the opportunity to add its voice to that of other appellate districts that have concluded that under the Supreme Court's decision in Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229, 197 Cal. Rptr. 546, 673 P.2d 216 , a civil plaintiff is required to exercise reasonable diligence in calculating the mandatory dismissal date under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.310, and to request a trial date within that period. The appellate court held that when a civil plaintiff fails to calculate the deadline, or to request a trial date within the time remaining, this duty has not been met (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1494-1495) . In this case, plaintiff's complaint was filed on June 14, 1983, and ordered to arbitration on April 30, 1987. In February 1988, plaintiff's counsel asked defendant's counsel for an extension of the five-year deadline, which the latter refused. On March 4, 1988, the arbitrator issued an award in favor of defendant. On March 18, 1988, plaintiff served a request for a trial de novo and filed the request on March 23, 1988. In May 1988, plaintiff filed a substitution of attorneys and proceeded in propria persona. On June 14, 1988, a status conference on the case was continued to September 13, 1988. On August 24, 1988, an attorney was substituted as counsel for plaintiff. Defendant's counsel phoned plaintiff's attorney and advised him that the five-year dismissal deadline was approaching and that he was not authorized to waive it. On September 18, 1988, in a letter to defendant's counsel, plaintiff's counsel stated his position that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 and Moran v. Superior Court (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 229 ,. 673 P.2d 216 , the five-year deadline was tolled until the date set for a trial de novo. At the status conference on September 13, 1988, despite admonitions from defendant's counsel that the five-year deadline was imminent, plaintiff's counsel again argued that under Moran, the five years would not expire until the new trial date. The trial court asked plaintiff if he was willing to take the chance that the statute would run before the new trial date. In response, plaintiff's counsel indicated his belief that the time between the request for a trial de novo and the date set for the trial was tolled, and then acquiesced to a trial date of January 3, 1989. On October 25, 1988, defendant filed a motion to dismiss pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360. Reluctantly, the trial court granted the motion. Plaintiff appealed, arguing that under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 and Moran, the time between the filing of the arbitration award and the date set by the court for a de novo trial is excluded in calculating the five-year deadline imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 583.360, and contended that his duty of due diligence, under Moran, is discharged once he makes a request for a trial de novo, and that it is then the duty of the trial court, sua sponte, to set the case for trial.

The court of appeal discussed the split of authority among the courts of appeal (discussed in § 90.105[2][c][iii]) (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1497-1498) and concluded that the rule announced by Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 1031-1033, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (discussed under § 90.105[3][a], and [4][a]), was the more persuasive (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1498) . The court held that although a plaintiff is entitled to presume a trial court will perform its duty to set a preferential trial date following a request for a trial de novo, he or she must nonetheless diligently perform his or her independent duty to keep track of the five-year deadline at all times and inform the trial court of that deadline (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1498) . After reviewing the legislative history of the 1983 amendment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17 (discussed in § 90.96), the court further rejected plaintiff's contention that the Legislature's failure to amend Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.20 following Moran indicated a legislative approval of the interpretation of this statute in Moran (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1498-1500) . The court concluded that counsel's complete failure to calculate the deadline under Code Civ. Proc. § 1141.17, his failure to request a trial date within the time remaining, and his acquiescence to a trial date more than three months after the deadline expired, all despite repeated reminders from opposing counsel and warnings from the court, persuaded it that plaintiff did not meet his duty of due diligence, and it affirmed the order of dismissal (221 Cal. App. 3d 1493, 1500-1501) .

Baccus v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 255 Cal. Rptr. 781 , was an action for personal injuries sustained in an automobileaccident. The action languished for nearly four years while plaintiffs went through a successive substitution of attorneys. Their third attorney had the case submitted to arbitration. After the arbitrator's award was entered, plaintiffs requested a trial de novo. The trial court set a trial date over a year later and 49 days after the expiration of the five-year limitation period. Neither at that time nor at any time prior to the trial date did plaintiffs alert the court to the fact that the trial had been set beyond the five-year period. When the matter came to trial, the trial court on its own motion moved to dismiss the action for failure to bring it to trial within the five-year period, but after a hearing denied its motion in the interest of justice.

The Court of Appeal of the Second Appellate District, Division Seven, issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to grant its motion to dismiss. The court acknowledged the split of case authority in the courts of appeal engendered by its own prior decision in Barna v. Passage 350 Canon (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 440, 230 Cal. Rptr. 764 . Although the court did not expressly overrule its decision in Barna, it did, however, distinguish Barna on its facts. The court noted that in Barna, the plaintiff had been diligent in attempting to bring the action to trial after arbitration. In the instant case, in which the plaintiffs had not been diligent, the court held that the analysis in Santa Monica Hospital Medical Center v. Superior Court (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 1026, 250 Cal. Rptr. 384 (discussed under § 90.105[3][a]), controlled (207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1535-1536) . The court reasoned that it did not believe that the Supreme Court in Moran had intended to construe Code Civ. Proc. 1141.20 (prior to its 1984 amendment) to effect a total abrogation of the ongoing duty of plaintiffs to meet five-year deadlines by notifying trial courts of imminent five-year deadlines and requesting timely trial dates. Continuing that duty, in conjunction with requiring trial courts to set trials before known five-year deadlines, would better serve the fundamental public purpose of the mandatory dismissal statute, which is to promote the trial of cases before evidence is lost or destroyed, or the memory of witnesses become dimmed, and to protect defendants from being subjected to the annoyance of an unmeritorious action remaining undecided for an indefinite period of time (207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1536). The court concluded accordingly that plaintiffs were not entitled to the tolling under the second Moran ground because they neither notified the court of the five-year deadline nor attempted to advance the trial date set beyond the deadline, and that the trial court abused its discretion in failing to dismiss the action (207 Cal. App. 3d 1526, 1536) .

The facts and procedural background of Hill v. Bingham (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 225 Cal. Rptr. 905 , are discussed in § 90.99[3][i]. In Hill, over nine months of the five-year period remained when defendant filed a timely postarbitration request for trial de novo. Plaintiff did not indicate, either in the certificate of readiness or in the at-issue memorandum, that the five-year deadline was approaching. The trial date was set beyond the five-year limit and plaintiff acquiesced to that trial date. After the trial setting, two and a half months remained before the five-year period ran but plaintiff did not move to have the case advanced. Defendant moved to dismiss and the trial court granted the motion. Plaintiff successfully moved for reconsideration and the trial court, following the rule in Moran, allowed the case to proceed to trial. Defendant appealed from the ensuing judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, holding that the plaintiff failed to act diligently and, therefore, neither of the Moran exceptions applied to take the case outside the five-year rule (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10, 13) . Under the second independent ground of the Moran decision, the court held, the trial court has a sua sponte duty to recalendar the matter in the same position it had prior to arbitration, but this duty does not excuse the plaintiff from exercising due diligence under the circumstances (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11) . The court reasoned that it is implicit that for the sua sponte duty to arise, not only must there be a timely request for trial de novo but the plaintiff also must bring to the trial court's attention the time frame of the case. A contrary conclusion, the court observed, could completely shift responsibility for keeping track of all applicable dates and for moving cases forward from plaintiffs to an already overburdened court system (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 11-12) . The court observed that the rationale of the second independent ground of the Moran decision is to protect plaintiffs during the period it is impossible for the plaintiff to cause the matter to be set for trial because some official duty was not done. Therefore, the court held, the plaintiff still has a duty to keep track of crucial dates, to call to the court's attention the chronology of the case, and to follow up after the passage of an amount of time sufficient to indicate to a reasonably knowledgeable attorney that the official duty was not going to be performed (181 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.106

§ 90.106 Reply Memorandum Supporting Motion for Discretionary Dismissal for Failure to Bring Action to Trial or New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410]--No Waiver or Estoppel Based on Open Extension to File Responsive Pleading When Extension Was for Plaintiff's Benefit

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 90.99.]

DEFENDANT HAS NOT WAIVED AND IS NOT ESTOPPED TO MOVE FOR DISMISSAL FOR FAILURE TO BRING THE ACTION TO TRIAL BY VIRTUE OF THE OPEN EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE A RESPONSIVE PLEADING BECAUSE THE EXTENSIONWAS FOR PLAINTIFF'S BENEFIT _____ [specify benefit derived by plaintiff, e.g., TO PREVENT THE FILING OF A DEMURRER AND PROVIDE TIME TO PREPARE AN AMENDED COMPLAINT].

Open Extension for Plaintiff's Benefit Does Not Act as Estoppel or Waiver of Dismissal. When an open extension of the time to plead is in reality for the plaintiff's benefit, the defendant is not necessarily precluded from seeking dismissal of the action for failure to prosecute (Marra v. Mission Foods Corp. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 728, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741). Although Meraia v. McCann (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 147 Cal. Rptr. 756 , "contains some broad language [citation] that appears to support plaintiff's position that an open-ended extension of time ... excuses a plaintiff from his obligation to prosecute during its term, Meraia properly read holds only that when and while a defendant obtains and enjoys an open-ended extension for his benefit and at his request, he may not complain that the plaintiff has not diligently prosecuted the action" (Marra v. Mission Foods Corp. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 728, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 , quoting Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , italics added).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in a reply memorandum supporting a motion for discretionary dismissal for failure to bring an action to trial or new trial within the time periods specified in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410]. Specifically, these reply points and authorities may be submitted in response to an opposing claim that the defendant waived his or her right to seek dismissal by agreeing to an open extension of time within which to file a responsive pleading. The ground for response is that there is no waiver or estoppel when the extension was for the plaintiff's benefit.

This memorandum may be submitted in response to the opposing memorandum set out in §§ 90.87 and 90.98.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Open Extension for Plaintiff's Benefit Does Not Act as Estoppel or Waiver of Dismissal

Plaintiff filed the action in Marra v. Mission Foods Corp. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 741 , in April, 1989. In July, 1989, defendant's counsel notified plaintiff's counsel of numerous deficiencies in the complaint and asked him to consider filing an amended complaint. Plaintiff's counsel then granted the defense an open extension of time to respond to the complaint, terminable on 30 days notice. Plaintiff's counsel did not pursue the case until March, 1991, at which time he indicated he was ready to amend the complaint, but suggested the defense contact him to pursue settlement discussions first. Defense counsel attempted to do so, but received no response. The next activity, in December, 1991, was the court's notice of intent to dismiss on its own motion for lack of prosecution; but it did not dismiss the action. In April, 1992, plaintiff filed an at-issue memorandum, but indicated that it was filed to pursue settlement, and pointed out that the defendant had not yet answered. The court informed the plaintiff that this was ineffective, because no answer was on file, and set a case management conference for June 19, 1992. Plaintiff filed a amended complaint on June 1, 1992, and a second amended complaint, without leave of court, on June 25. In July, defendant moved to dismiss for delay in prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 based on failure to bring the action to trial within two years of filing. The court dismissed the action and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The plaintiff claimed that the trial court erred because of the open extension of time to plead, maintaining that the doctrines of waiver and estoppel prevented dismissal because the defendant had contributed to any delay (19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 727) . The plaintiff relied on a line of cases, including Meraia v. McCann (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 147 Cal. Rptr. 756 , discussed in § 90.87[3][a], which have held that when a defendant has been granted an open extension of time to respond to the complaint, waiver and estoppel principles may prevent the defendant from relying on plaintiff's failure to prosecute during its term to obtains dismissal of the action. The court, however, distinguished Meraia as applying to situations in which the defendant obtains an extension for his or her own benefit, quoting Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 332, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 (19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 728) . In this case, the plaintiff, alerted by defendant to deficiencies in the complaint, granted defendant the openextension of time to respond so that plaintiff would have additional time to file an amended complaint. Plaintiff admitted the open extension was to prevent the filing of a Section _____ to the complaint. The extension being for plaintiff's, not defendant's, benefit, it did not estop the defendant from moving to dismiss, and did not relieve the plaintiff of the duty to move the case forward (19 Cal. App. 4th 724, 728-729) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Open Extension for Plaintiff's Benefit Does Not Act as Estoppel or Waiver of Dismissal

In Blank v. Kirwan (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 311, 216 Cal. Rptr. 718, 703 P.2d 58 , one issue the Supreme Court considered in affirming a judgment of dismissal was whether the trial court abused its discretion in granting a motion to dismiss under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)] for failure to prosecute. The Court noted that over nearly three and a half years the plaintiff did virtually nothing to prosecute the action and continually requested the defendants to agree to continue hearings on demurrers and finally obtained an agreement to take them off calendar indefinitely. The Court distinguished Meraia v. McCann (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 239, 147 Cal. Rptr. 756 , limiting it to situations in which the defendant obtains and enjoys the extension, and held that the plaintiff is not relieved of the obligation to prosecute if the defendant agrees to postponement for plaintiff's benefit and at plaintiff's request (39 Cal. 3d 311, 332) .

In Waxman v. Boren, Elperin, Howard & Sloan (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 519, 270 Cal. Rptr. 540 , cross complainants, who were embroiled in numerous civil actions, filed a cross complaint for professional malpractice against their former attorneys. The cross complainants' attorney discussed putting on "hold" any pleading or discovery to allow cross complainants to resolve some of the claims against them and better assess the extent of their potential liability. An unspoken purpose was to minimize cross complainants' litigation expenses because of the numerous claims pending against them. The court of appeal affirmed the eventual dismissal of the action for lack of prosecution under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(2)(A), finding that the open extension of time to answer was granted primarily for the cross complainant's benefit (221 Cal. App. 3d 519, 525-526) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
2. Dismissal For Failure To Bring Action To Trial Or New Trial

9-90 California Points & Authorities §§ 90.107-90.119

[Reserved]

§§ 90.107[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.120

§ 90.120 Supporting Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff,	)	DISMISS ACTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

DISCRETIONARY DISMISSAL OF AN ACTION FOR INEXCUSABLE DELAY IN PROSECUTION IS PROPER UNDER THE INHERENT POWER OF THE COURT _____ [IN ANY SITUATION NOT GOVERNED BY A DISMISSAL STATUTE or IN ANY SITUATION GOVERNED BY A MANDATORY DISMISSAL STATUTE IF THE PERIOD SPECIFIED IN THE STATUTE HAS NOT YET EXPIRED AND NO OTHER STATUTE APPLIES].

A. Inherent Power to Dismiss. A trial court has the inherent power, limited only by the court's sound discretion, to control its calendar without the aid of legislation by dismissing an action for lack of prosecution if delay in prosecution is inexcusable (Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 630-631, 147 P. 466 ; Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713).

B. Inherent Power Not Restricted by Dismissal Statutes. The statutes governing dismissal for delay in prosecution, Chapter 1.5 of Title VIII of Part II of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq.), do not limit or affect the court's authority to dismiss an action or impose other sanctions under a rule adopted by the court pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 575.1 or by the Judicial Council pursuant to statute or otherwise under inherent authority of the court (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.150).

[EITHER]

C. Power Applicable if Statute Absent. The inherent power to dismiss applies to situations that are not governed by a dismissal statute (Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 631, 147 P. 466 ; Karras v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 753, 757, 76 Cal. Rptr. 141).

[OR]

C. Power Applicable if Statutory Period Unexpired. The inherent power to dismiss applies to situations governed by a mandatory dismissal statute if the period specified in the statute has not yet expired (Witter v. Phelps (1912) 163 Cal. 655, 657, 126 P. 593 ; Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651).

[Add points and authorities, as necessary, to set forth alternative statutory grounds for the motion or to anticipate objections of the opposing party (see, e.g., §§ 90.80, 90.86 -90.92).]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be used in support of a motion to dismiss an action on nonstatutory grounds for delay in prosecution. A nonstatutory motion is appropriate if plaintiff has not prosecuted the action with diligence by, for example, causing an unreasonable delay in prosecution after trial has commenced, but in which Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq. do not apply [see, e.g., Karras v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 753, 757, 76 Cal. Rptr. 141 (seven-year delay following continuance to allow plaintiffs to prepare authorities in support of evidentiary objection)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 limits the court's independent power to dismiss an action for want of prosecution at any time. The court cannot exercise its discretionary powers of dismissal until the minimum periods of delay specified in the statute have elapsed [see Lyons v. Wickhorst (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 911, 915, 231 Cal. Rptr. 738, 727 P.2d 1019] . Therefore, the second alternative Paragraph C should be used only the after the periods provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420 have passed and before dismissal becomes mandatory under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 et seq. or 583.310 et seq. The Lyons court pointed out that although the discretionary power to dismiss with prejudice has been upheld in California, its use has been tightly circumscribed [see Lyons v. Wickhorst (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 911, 916, 231 Cal. Rptr. 738, 727 P.2d 1019] .

If the trial court has inherent discretionary power to dismiss in a particular case, it may employ the same discretionary considerations used to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 et seq., including those factors enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) [see Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651 for points and authorities relating to statutory discretionary dismissal, see §§ 90.51 and 90.83].

The foregoing form may be adapted in appropriate situations for use if a cross complainant, cross defendant, or other person commencing or defending an action, respectively, is the moving or opposing party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110(a), (d), (e)].

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, the moving party should state the nature of the delay caused by plaintiff and why that delay should result in the proceeding being dismissed, even if no statute requires dismissal [see, e.g., Karras v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 753, 757, 76 Cal. Rptr. 141] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice of motion for an order dismissing an action pursuant to the court's inherent dismissal power, see Ch. 212, Dismissal in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.124 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by the foregoing memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss

In Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 147 P. 466 , plaintiff appealed from the dismissal of his action for want of prosecution. Plaintiff contended that the dismissal statute then in effect, which permitted a discretionary dismissal if the action was not brought to trial within two years after the answer was filed,deprived the court of discretion to dismiss the action if it was not brought to trial prior to the filing of the answer.

The Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal. Rejecting plaintiff's contention, the Court held that a trial court has general discretionary power, without the aid of legislation, to dismiss an action for want of prosecution. The trial court has a statutory power to dismiss an action for lack of prosecution after the answer is filed. However, if an answer has not been filed, the court's power remains, as it was before the statute, limited only by sound discretion (169 Cal. 628, 631) . Here, the facts of record did not show an abuse of discretion (169 Cal. 628, 632) .

In Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706 , the court of appeal upheld the authority of the trial court to dismiss an action not brought to trial two years and seven months after declaration of a mistrial even though the mandatory dismissal provisions of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(d) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.320(a)(1)] did not apply until three years after the declaration of a mistrial (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713). A trial court has the power to dismiss an action if there has been inexcusable delay in bringing it to trial (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712) . The considerations set forth in former Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 203.5(e) [now see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e)] for deciding motions under former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(a) are those which properly may guide a trial court in the exercise of this inherent power to control its calendar (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713) . Here, the record showed that exercise of that power was amply warranted (71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 713) .

[b] Power Applicable if Statute Absent

The facts and procedural background of Overaa v. Keeney (1915) 169 Cal. 628, 147 P. 466 , are discussed under § 90.120[3][a].

In Karras v. Western Title Ins. Co. (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 753, 76 Cal. Rptr. 141 , the trial court dismissed an action for lack of prosecution after the trial had already begun.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. There is no statutory authority for dismissal of a case for lack of prosecution once trial has been commenced, but a court has inherent power in its discretion to do so. The court held the discretion was not abused in this case. The plaintiffs had a duty to act with reasonable diligence. The only explanation offered for delay was the illness and death of plaintiffs' counsel, but this excuse was not adequate to explain a delay of the length that occurred (270 Cal. App. 2d 753, 757-758) .

[c] Power Applicable if Statutory Period Unexpired

In Witter v. Phelps (1912) 163 Cal. 655, 126 P. 593 , the trial court dismissed an action for long and unnecessary delay in the service of summons, which was issued at once but not served until two years and three months after commencement of the action.

On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The former statute made dismissal mandatory if the summons was not issued within one year or served and returned within three years (163 Cal. 655, 656-657) . This statute, however, did not affect the court's discretionary power to dismiss for undue delay in issuing or serving summons, even though the delay had been for a shorter period than that named in the statute (163 Cal. 655, 657) . Here, the record did not support a finding that discretion was abused (163 Cal. 655, 657) . Note that Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1) now provides a discretionary period of two years for service and return of summons before dismissal is authorized under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 [compare Code Civ. Proc. § 583.210 (mandatory dismissal period); for further discussion, see § 90.120[2][a]].

Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Ass'n (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706 , is discussed under § 90.120[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Power Applicable if Statute Absent

In Pearlson v. Does 1 to 646 (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 787 , the trial court dismissed plaintiff's action and the court of appeal affirmed based on the trial court's inherent discretionary power to do so. In affirming, the court quoted Code Civ. Proc. § 583.150 (which in relevant part provides that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.110-583.430 do not limit or effect the court's authority to dismiss an action under the court's inherent authority). The court noted that absent express statutory authority, a trial court may invoke its limited, inherent discretionary power to dismiss claims with prejudice when (1) the plaintiff has failed to prosecute diligently; or (2) the complaint has been shown to be fictitious or sham so that plaintiff has no valid cause of action. The court of appeal concluded the trial court did not err in dismissing the action on the second ground. No defendants were named in the complaint, only fictitious defendants under Code Civ. Proc. § 474. While such pleading is legally permissible, the fact that plaintiff could not identify even one potential defendant in connection with allegations of nefarious conduct raised significant questions regarding the viability of the alleged claims, and plaintiff, by giving the court no specific information to demonstrate that his requested discovery to learn the identity of unnamed defendants was anything other than a fishing expedition, failed to demonstrate good cause to support the issuance of a discovery order under Code Civ. Proc. § 2025(b)(2) [see now Code Civ. Proc. § 2025.210 operative July 1, 2005] (76 Cal. App. 4th 1005, 1010-1012) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.121

§ 90.121 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Amend Complaint After Successful Demurrer or Motion to Strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), (4)]--Dismissal Required

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO Plaintiff,	)	DISMISS ACTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: None set

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DISMISS THIS ACTION PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 581(f) FOR FAILURE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT AFTER THE COURT _____ [SUSTAINED THE DEMURRER TO IT or GRANTED THE MOTION TO STRIKE IT] WITH LEAVE TO AMEND.

[EITHER, after successful demurrer]

A. Statutory Requirements. An action may be dismissed as to a defendant when, after a demurrer to the complaint is sustained with leave to amend, the plaintiff fails to amend it within the time allowed by the court and either party moves for dismissal (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2)). [The exception to this rule established by Code of Civil Procedure Sections 581(f)(2) and 597, for demurrers based on another action pending, does not apply to this case].

[OR, after successful motion to strike]

A. Statutory Requirements. An action may be dismissed as to a defendant when, after a motion to strike the whole of the complaint or a portion thereof is granted with leave to amend, the plaintiff fails to amend it within the time allowed by the court and either party moves for dismissal (Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(4)).

B. Dismissal Required. Dismissal of an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 581(f) for failure to amend a complaint within the time allowed by the court is required unless the plaintiff establishes an excuse for the failure to amend (see Dumm v. Pacific Valves (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 792, 795, 304 P.2d 738 (demurrer); Daniels v. Daniels (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228, 288 P.2d 910 (demurrer)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of a motion for dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) or (4) if plaintiff has failed to amend the complaint after a successful demurrer or motion to strike, and counsel desires to emphasize that despite the permissive language of the statute, dismissal is, in effect, mandatory. The form is not to be used when the only ground of the demurrer was that there is another action pending [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(c), 581(f)(2), 597].

Although the memorandum is drafted to support a motion by defendant, it may be modified to support a motion by plaintiff, since Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f) permits either party to move to dismiss.

The provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 581 set out in the form in both alternative Paragraphs A were amended in 1984 without substantive change [see 17 Cal. L. Rev. Comm. Reports 905 (1984)]. In 1986, they were relettered from former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(c) to former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f), which was, in addition, amended to provide that the court "shall" dismiss the complaint as to the defendant in the circumstances enumerated in that subdivision [see Stats. 1986, ch. 540]. In 1987, however, Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f) was amended to provide, as it did prior to the 1986 amendments, that the court "may" dismiss the complaint as to the defendant under the circumstances enumerated in that subdivision [Stats. 1987, ch. 1080]. It appears, therefore, that the decisions cited in the form under Paragraph B may still be cited as persuasive, if not controlling, authority for the circumstances under dismissal may be required following failure to amend.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The date the demurrer or motion to strike was granted along with the time period provided for amendment should be set forth [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)]. Facts that negate any purported excusein failing to timely amend should also be included.

[b] Motion to Strike Untimely Amended Pleading Required

If an amended pleading is filed after the time allowed, then an order striking the amended pleading must be obtained before the action may be dismissed. The order to strike must be obtained by noticed motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 1010 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(i); Gitmed v. General Motors (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 824, 828-829, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 625 ; Leader v. Health Indus. of Am. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 620, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489] .

[c] Ex Parte Motion

A motion to dismiss the entire action and for entry of judgment after expiration of the time to amend following the sustaining of a demurrer may be made by ex parte application to the court under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1320(h)].

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f), see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[e] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities set out in § 90.125 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for dismissal supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Requirements

Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) by its own terms does not apply when Code Civ. Proc. § 597 is applicable. Under Section 597 if a demurrer is sustained under Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(c) only, which relates to another action pending, an appealable interlocutory judgment is to be entered in favor of the defendant so pleading to the effect that no trial of other issues shall be had until the final determination of the other action [Code Civ. Proc. § 597]. First alternative Paragraph A includes an optional sentence which may be used to negative the existence of this exception.

[b] Dismissal Required

In Dumm v. Pacific Valves (1956) 146 Cal. App. 2d 792, 304 P.2d 738 , plaintiffs appealed from a judgment of dismissal granted after the court sustained a demurrer to plaintiffs' complaint. Plaintiffs contended that the court was without jurisdiction to grant the judgment.

The court of appeal rejected this argument, but reversed. The order sustaining the demurrer allowed ten days to amend, and plaintiffs failed to amend. This failure was in effect a refusal to amend, indicating that plaintiffs may have preferred to stand on the complaint as it was, or may have pleaded every fact they were prepared to prove. Their failure to amend leaves nothing to be done by the court except to make and enter the judgment (146 Cal. App. 2d 792, 795) . Nevertheless, the court reversed the judgment on the ground that the demurrer should not have been sustained (146 Cal. App. 2d 792, 799) .

In Daniels v. Daniels (1955) 136 Cal. App. 2d 224, 288 P.2d 910 , plaintiff appealed in part from the dismissal of her second amended complaint and the denial of her Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion to vacate the dismissal order.

The court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff had filed the second amended complaint after expiration of the period for amendment fixed by the court. On hearing the motion to dismiss, no showing of any kind was made about why an amended complaint was not filed in time. Under former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)], if a plaintiff fails to amend a complaint within the time specified, the plaintiff's right to do so ceases (136 Cal. App. 2d 224, 227-228) . Plaintiff's only remedy was a Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion for relief from default. But the court held that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in denying her later Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion (136 Cal. App. 2d 224, 228) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Dismissal Required

In Cano v. Glover (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 326, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 871 , the trial court dismissed defendant without prejudice after plaintiff failed to name defendant in his fourth amended complaint, following a demurrer sustained with leave to amend. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeals held that while a dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) is discretionary, it must be with prejudice. Dismissal without prejudice is expressly permitted by other subdivisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 581, but not by Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), which "gives the defendant the right to obtain a court order dismissing the action with prejudice once the court sustains a demurrer with leave to amend and the plaintiff has not amended within the time given" (143 Cal. App. 4th 326, 330 , quoting Parsons v. Umansky (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 867). A dismissal without prejudice would put defendant in "perpetual limbo," and plaintiff forfeited his right to dismiss without prejudice when he failed to name defendant in his amended complaint (143 Cal. App. 4th 326, 330) .

In Harding v. Collazo (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 1044, 223 Cal. Rptr. 329 , plaintiff brought an action for malicious prosecution, negligence, wrongful termination, defamation, invasion of privacy and civil rights, and intentional infliction of emotional distress. Defendants filed a demurrer and motion to strikeplaintiff's first amended complaint on the grounds that plaintiff failed to state a cause of action, and that the complaint was uncertain and ambiguous. The parties stipulated to take the hearings off calendar, and plaintiff agreed to file a second amended complaint within a certain date. Plaintiff did not do so, and defendants filed a motion to dismiss based on former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2)). The trial court granted the motion with prejudice. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the stipulation was subject to a motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), just as if the parties had stipulated that the demurrer was deemed to be sustained with leave to amend within the time specified and allowed by the stipulation (177 Cal. App. 3d 1044, 1053) .

In Leader v. Health Industries of America (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , plaintiff doctors originally sued a hospital for breach of contract and tortious interference with prospective business relationships in 1993. The trial court sustained demurrers to the original, first amended, and second amended complaints. After sustaining a demurrer to the third amended complaint, the court imposed a deadline for amendment. After that deadline had expired more than a month earlier, plaintiffs' moved for leave to file a fourth amended complaint. The hospital opposed and moved to strike the amended complaint and dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2). The trial court's decision was reviewed for abuse of discretion (89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 612) . The trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the dismissal where the action had been pending for nearly six years, plaintiffs did not even attempt to amend until one month after trial court's deadline had passed, and information the plaintiffs were unable to locate before the deadline did not appear to be critical to the ability to file an amended complaint (89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.122

§ 90.122 Supporting Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Prosecute Special Proceeding--Dismissal Statutes Apply [Code Civ. Proc. § 583.120]

[1] FORM

[The following should be combined with a memorandum supporting specific grounds for dismissing for lack of prosecution (see, e.g., §§ 90.50 et seq. and 90.80 et seq.)]

THE DISMISSAL STATUTES, CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 583.110 ET SEQ., APPLY TO _____ [specify special proceeding, e.g., PROCEEDINGS ON A PETITION FOR A WRIT OF ADMINISTRATIVE MANDATE].

A. Authority to Dismiss Special Proceeding for Delay in Prosecution. The statutes providing for dismissal of civil actions for delay in prosecution, Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.110 et seq., do not apply to special proceedings except to the extent incorporated by reference in the special proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.120(a)).

[EITHER, if special proceeding incorporates Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq.]

B. Incorporation by Reference. _____ [Set out special proceedings statute incorporating civil action procedure, e.g., Code of Civil Procedure Section 1109 provides that except as otherwise provided in Title I of Part Three of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 1067 et seq.), the provisions of Part Two of the Code of Civil Procedure (Code Civ. Proc. § 307 et seq.) are applicable to and constitute the rules of practice in the proceedings mentioned in Title I of Part Three of the Code of Civil Procedure, which governs proceedings for writs of review, mandate, and prohibition.] Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.110 et seq. is found in Part Two of the Code of Civil Procedure.

[OR, if special proceeding does not incorporate Code Civ. Proc. § 583.110 et seq.]

B. Court's Inherent Authority to Apply Dismissal Statutes to Special Proceedings. Notwithstanding Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.120(a), the court may, by rule or otherwise under inherent authority of the court, apply this chapter to a special proceeding or part of a special proceeding except to the extent such application would be inconsistent with the character of the special proceeding or the statute governing the special proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 583.1230(b)).

[CONTINUE]

[Optional] C. Administrative Mandate. There is no bar preventing the court from applying the dismissal statutes to administrative mandate proceedings unless, as Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.120(b) states, such application would be inconsistent with the character of that proceeding or the statute governing it (Binyon v. State of California (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 955, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673). This statutory limitation is intended to prevent application of the general dismissal statutes to special proceedings where their application would permit, rather than prevent, dilatory prosecution because of the longer time periods specified in the general dismissal statutes. No specific statute permits dismissal of an administrative mandate proceeding for failure to prosecute and, therefore, it would not be inconsistent to apply the general dismissal statute to these proceedings (Binyon v. State of California (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 955-956, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion to dismiss a special proceeding for delay in prosecution to make the point that the general dismissal statutes apply to the special proceeding [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.120]. These points and authorities should be combined with a general form of memorandum supporting a motion to dismiss for delay in prosecution [see, e.g., §§ 90.50, 90.51, 90.80, 90.83].

These points and authorities cannot be appropriately used to the extent a special proceeding has its own provisions regarding dismissal for delay [see Civ. Code § 3147 (action to foreclose mechanics' lien to be brought to trial within two years); see also Binyon v. State of California (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 956, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Administrative Mandate

In Binyon v. State of California (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 , the petitioner's employment with a state agency was terminated after a hearing before the State Personnel Board. On May 19, 1986, petitioner filed a petition for a writ of administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5 alleging that there was insufficient evidence to support his termination. The petitioner did not serve the petition on the board, and the superior court file was consigned to the court's archives. On May 28, 1991, the petitioner noticed the matter for hearing on the petition in July, 1991. On the date noticed for hearing in July, the court dismissed the case on its own motion for failure to bring it to trial within five years of filing. Petitioner appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting the petitioner's contention that the dismissal statutes do not apply to special proceedings for administrative mandate under Code Civ. Proc. § 1094.5. The court recognized that administrative mandate is a special proceeding, but did not find this dispositive. Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 583.120(b), the court found that the dismissal statutes and administrative mandate proceedings are not inconsistent, and that therefore, the dismissal statutes could be applied (17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 955-956) . In a footnote, the court noted that its decision was also supported by Code Civ. Proc. § 1109, incorporating the rules for civil actions generally in the title applicable to proceedings for administrative mandate (17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 956 n.2). The court also rejected petitioner's contention that the dismissal statutes did not apply because the proceedings would not require a factual hearing, but be determined on the record of the administrative hearing (17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 956-957). Finally, in affirming, the court found no excuse for the appalling lack of diligence present in the case (17 Cal. App. 4th 952, 957) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.123

§ 90.123 Opposing Motion for Dismissal Based on Court's Inherent Powers Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

ABSENT A STATUTORY BASIS FOR DISMISSAL, THE COURT LACKS INHERENT POWER TO DISMISS THE ACTION.

Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable. The concept of inherent judicial powers is confined to procedural actions essential to effective exercise of otherwise-granted jurisdiction or vindication of otherwise-established substantive rights or powers, and does not apply to the determination of a substantive principle (Topa Ins. Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1345, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion to dismiss pursuant to a trial court's inherent dismissal power.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief or in jury instructions.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss the nature of the underlying basis for dismissal, and argue that the proposed dismissal does not arise in a situation in which the dismissal is a procedural remedy to an otherwise established legal determination, but rather constitutes an initial determination which is not within the concept of inherent powers [see Topa Ins. Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516] .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice of motion to dismiss an action pursuant to the court's inherent dismissal power, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

In Topa Ins. Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th1331, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 516 , an excess insurer brought an action by way of cross-complaint against a primary insurer for a declaration that the excess insurer, if found liable to the insured in the underlying action, would be entitled to contribution from the primary insurer. In its answer, the primary insurer alleged its prior settlement with the insured as an affirmative defense. The primary insurer then moved for a determination that this settlement was in good faith, and for an order dismissing the excess insurer's cross-complaint. The trial court granted the motion on the basis of its inherent equitable power.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the trial court's order exceeded the scope of its inherent judicial powers. The court noted that although the concept of inherent powers relates primarily to procedural matters, it may also relate to situations in which the rights and powers of the parties have been established by substantive law, but workable means by which those rights may be enforced have not been granted by statute (39 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1344) . However, the court reasoned that the matter before it did not come within this concept because the case involved the initial determination of the substantive effect of the good faith determination. The court granted that if the substantive effect of such a determination had been otherwise established, then the trial court could use its inherent powers to devise a procedural remedy. However, the initial determination of that substantive effect is not within the concept of inherent powers (39 Cal. App. 4th 1331, 1345) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.124

§ 90.124 Opposing Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Delay in Prosecution--Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS ACTION
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Trial date: _____

_____

THE COURT LACKS INHERENT POWER TO DISMISS THE ACTION FOR DELAY IN PROSECUTION BECAUSE LESS THAN TWO YEARS HAVE PASSED SINCE THE _____ [COMPLAINT WAS FILED or MISTRIAL WAS DECLARED or JURY'S DISAGREEMENT WAS ENTERED or ORDER GRANTING NEW TRIAL WAS ENTERED or REMITTITUR AFTER APPEAL WAS FILED].

Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable. The minimum periods before which a court may not dismiss an action for lack of prosecution under Code of Civil Procedure Section 583.420 limit the court's independent power to dismiss an action for want of prosecution. Thus, a minimum delay of two years is required before a trial court can exercise its discretionary dismissal powers (Lyons v. Wickhorst (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 911, 915, 231 Cal. Rptr. 738, 727 P.2d 1019 ; see General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 88, 98, 52 Cal. Rptr. 460, 416 P.2d 492 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1), (2)(B), (3); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 1.340).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion to dismiss for lack of prosecution pursuant to a trial court's inherent dismissal power if at least two years have not passed since the complaint was filed against the defendant [see Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(1), (2)(B); Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1340]. It may also be used if the time periods of Code Civ. Proc. § 583.420(a)(3) (limiting when the court may discretionarily dismiss for failure to bring case to new trial) have not passed.

If the trial court has inherent discretionary power to dismiss, it may employ the same discretionary considerations used to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410-583.430, including those factors enumerated in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1342(e) [see Blue Chip Enterprises, Inc. v. Brentwood Sav. & Loan Assn. (1977) 71 Cal. App. 3d 706, 712-713, 139 Cal. Rptr. 651] .

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The date the action was commenced against defendant should be set forth, along with any facts explaining the delay in bringing the action to trial and the lack of any prejudice to defendant during the period of delay.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for dismissal pursuant to the inherent power of the court supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.120.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice of motion for a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to the court's inherent dismissal power, see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inherent Power to Dismiss Unavailable

The plaintiff in Lyons v. Wickhorst (1986) 42 Cal. 3d 911, 231 Cal. Rptr. 738, 727 P.2d 1019 , refused to introduce evidence in judicial arbitration proceedings. After the second attempt to arbitrate, the arbitrator entered an award in defendant's favor. Plaintiff requested trial de novo, but the court dismissed the action for failure to participate in mandatory arbitration procedures. The plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, finding dismissal too drastic a remedy for failure to participate in arbitration proceedings. In reviewing the law relating to the court's inherent power to dismiss actions, the court found that this power has generally been limited to two situations: (1) the failure to prosecute diligently and (2) the absence of a cause of action under a "fictitious or sham" complaint. The Court pointed out the codification of the discretion to dismiss in Code Civ.

Proc. § 583.410 and its two-year limitation in Section 583.420. The Court noted that this two-year statutory period limits the court's independent power to dismiss (42 Cal. 3d 911, 915) , and found no such delay in this case (42 Cal. 3d 911, 916) . The Court also noted that although the discretionary power to dismiss with prejudice has been upheld in California, its use has been tightly circumscribed (42 Cal. 3d 911, 916) .

The facts and procedural background of General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 88, 52 Cal. Rptr. 460, 416 P.2d 492 , are discussed in § 90.92[3][i]. In General Motors, the Supreme Court calculated the period during which it was impracticable to bring two consolidated cases to trial. As part of this calculation, it allowed at least two years for bringing one of the actions to trial because it was not within the discretionary power of the trial court to dismiss an action until two years after it had been filed. The provision of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)(B)], which gave the court discretion to dismiss an action if not brought to trial within two years, appeared to represent a legislative determination that at least in the typical case, a delay of two years should be deemed unavoidable. That is, a plaintiff may not be penalized for failing to bring even the least complicated case to trial during this period (65 Cal. 2d 88, 98) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.124A

§ 90.124A Opposing Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Failure to Appeal Telephonically

[1] FORM Opposing Motion for Nonstatutory Dismissal for Failure to Appear Telephonically

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS ACTION
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Trial date: None Set

_____

THE COURT NOT SHOULD DISMISS THIS ACTION FOR _____ [specify party failing to appear telephonically, e.g., PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT]'S FAILURE TO APPEAR TELEPHONICALLY AT _____ [specify proceeding at which party failed to appear, e.g., CASE MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE], BECAUSE _____ [specify party failing to appear telephonically, e.g., PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] WAS UNABLE TO APPEAR DUE TO _____ [specify reason for failure to appear, e.g., PLAINTIFF IS A PRISONER WHO DID NOT WILFULLY FAIL TO APPEAR, BUT, RATHER, WAS NOT ALLOWED TO DO SO].

A. Plaintiff Did Not Wilfully Fail to Appear Telephonically at Proceedings in the Case. Before a trial court may dismiss an action on the ground that an indigent prisoner has failed to appear telephonically at proceedings in the case, the trial court must find, based on facts in the record, that the prisoner has willfully failed to avail him- of herself of the right to appear telephonically (Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 678-684, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 345).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion to dismiss based on the opposing party's failure to appear telephonically at proceedings in the case.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Did Not Wilfully Fail to Appear Telephonically at Proceedings in the Case.

In Jameson v. Desta (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 345 , a prison inmate sued a physician, alleging numerous claims stemming from defendant's allegedly negligent medical treatment of plaintiff while plaintiff was incarcerated. The trial court issued an order authorizing plaintiff to appear at court hearings by telephone. The trial court later dismissed the action without prejudice on the ground that plaintiff failed to appear telephonically at a case management conference and at a subsequent hearing on an order to show cause (179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 677-678, 680-82) .

The Court of Appeal reversed, concluding that before a trial court may dismiss an action on the ground that an indigent prisoner has failed to appear telephonically at proceedings in the case, the trial court must find, based on facts in the record, that the prisoner has willfully failed to avail himself of the right to appear telephonically. The court then concluded that the trial court erred in dismissing the action on the ground that plaintiff failed to appear telephonically at the case management conference and subsequent hearing on an order to show cause, because the record clearly indicated that plaintiff notified the trial court on numerous occasions that prison personnel were not allowing him to communicate telephonically with the court, yet the record did not indicate that the trial court made any inquiry into plaintiff's contentions. Further, the record did not contain any facts demonstrating that his failure to appear telephonically at the hearings was willful. On the contrary, the record established that he repeatedly made clear his desire to participate in all court proceedings and informed the court that he was not being allowed to do so (179 Cal. App. 4th 672, 679-680, 682-684) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.125

§ 90.125 Opposing Motion for Dismissal for Failure to Amend Complaint After Successful Demurrer or Motion to Strike [Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2), (4)]--Amendment Filed Before Motion for Dismissal

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO DISMISS ACTION
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Trial Date: None Set

_____

THE COURT NOT SHOULD DISMISS THIS ACTION PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 581(f) FOR FAILURE TO AMEND THE COMPLAINT AFTER THE COURT _____ [SUSTAINED THE DEMURRER TO IT or GRANTED THE MOTION TO STRIKE IT] WITH LEAVE TO AMEND, BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED COMPLAINT, ALTHOUGH LATE, WAS FILED BEFORE DEFENDANT MOVED FOR DISMISSAL, AND THE LATE FILING IS EXCUSABLE.

A. Statutory Requirements. [See § 90.121, alternative Paragraph A.]

B. Amendment Filed Before Defendant's Motion. Dismissal of an action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 581(f) for failure to amend a complaint within the time allowed by the court is not proper if the plaintiff files an amended complaint after expiration of the time allowed but before the defendant moves for dismissal, and the defendant fails to overcome plaintiff's excuses for lateness (see Brown v. Brown (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57-58, 337 P.2d 140 (demurrer)).

[Optional] C. Motion to Strike Is Prerequisite. Once the plaintiff had filed an amended complaint, even though untimely, the defendant must move to strike the amended complaint before moving to dismiss it under Code of Civil Procedure Section 581(f)(2) (Gitmed v. General Motors (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 824, 828, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 625 ; Leader v. Health Indus. of Am. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion to dismiss pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) or (4) for failure to amend the complaint after a successful demurrer or motion to strike if plaintiff belatedly amended the complaint and defendant did not move for dismissal until after the amended complaint was filed.

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to an ex parte motion to dismiss [see § 90.121], if plaintiff is given advance notice of the motion [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1202-3.1207]. If plaintiff is given sufficient notice in time to appear when the ex parte motion is presented but not enough time to draft an opposing memorandum, plaintiff should request the court to grant time to prepare the memorandum and serve and file it.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The date by which amendment was to have occurred, as well as those dates on which the amended complaint and motion for dismissal were filed, should be set forth, together with any facts showing the reason for the delay in amendment and the lack of prejudice to defendant.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(c) supported by the points and authorities set out in § 90.121.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to dismiss an action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f), see Ch. 212, Dismissal , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Filed Before Defendant's Motion

In Brown v. Brown (1959) 169 Cal. App. 2d 54, 337 P.2d 140 , a demurrer to plaintiffs' first amended complaint was sustained with 10 days to amend. Plaintiffsdid not file an amended complaint for nine months. Forty-six days after that filing defendants moved to dismiss on the ground that the complaint was not timely filed, and their motion was granted.

The court of appeal reversed. Defendants did not attempt to enforce their right to dismiss until after the amended complaint was filed. By allowing this lapse of time, they lost their absolute right to obtain dismissal (169 Cal. App. 2d 54, 57) . Dismissal, at that point, is subject to the sound discretion of the court. If a plaintiff shows some excuse for lateness, the defendant must overcome this showing by affidavits or evidence. The absence of either is effectively the same as granting additional time for amendment. Here, defendants failed to make such a showing (169 Cal. App. 2d 54, 58) .

The court in Brown did not state explicitly whether plaintiffs had offered any excuses. Arguably, Brown stands for the principle that defendants' failure to move for dismissal until after plaintiff filed the amended complaint itself suffices to create an effective grant of time that the trial court must respect, unless defendant shows that dismissal is justified.

Former Code Civ. Proc. § 581(3), as interpreted by Brown, has since been amended to allow either party (rather than just the defendant) to move for dismissal, and to provide for dismissal when a motion to strike all or a portion of a complaint is granted with leave to amend and plaintiff fails to amend within the time allowed by the court [see Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)].

[b] Motion to Strike Is Prerequisite

In Gitmed v. General Motors (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 824, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 625 , the court sustained a demurrer to plaintiff's complaint with leave to amend. The plaintiff filed and served an amended complaint one day after the time to file expired. The defendant brought an ex parte motion to dismiss under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) ten days later. The court granted the motion, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the filing of the amended complaint, even though untimely, prevented the court from entertaining the motion to dismiss. The proper procedure would have been for the defendant to move to strike the amendment before moving to dismiss the complaint (26 Cal. App. 4th 824, 828) . Moreover, the court held that proceeding ex parte was improper when an amended complaint has been filed, distinguishing cases under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2) that did not require notice on the ground that they involved situations in which the plaintiff did not file an amended complaint at all (26 Cal. App. 4th 824, 828-829) .

In Leader v. Health Industries of America (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , plaintiff doctors originally sued a hospital for breach of contract and tortious interference with prospective business relationships in 1993. The trial court sustained demurrers to the original, first amended, and second amended complaints. After sustaining a demurrer to the third amended complaint, the court imposed a deadline for amendment. After that deadline had expired more than a month earlier, plaintiffs' moved for leave to file a fourth amended complaint. The hospital opposed and, recognizing that the court could allow the amended complaint to be filed, moved to strike the amended complaint and dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2). The court of appeal pointed out that the trial court expressly granted the motion to strike and then ordered the action dismissed which satisfied the procedural concerns of Gitmed v. General Motors. The court of appeal pointed out that there was no reason to require that additional time and expense be incurred in filing a separate motion to dismiss after the court has ordered the amended complaint stricken (89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.126

§ 90.126 Supporting Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Judgment of Dismissal--Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
vs.	)	SET ASIDE AND VACATE JUDGMENT OF DIS-
_____ [name],	)	MISSAL
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Trial Date: None

_____

THE COURT SHOULD VACATE THE JUDGMENT OF DISMISSAL ON THE GROUND OF _____ [MISTAKE and/or INADVERTENCE and/or SURPRISE and/or EXCUSABLE NEGLECT] PURSUANT TO CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 473.

A. Statutory Requirements. The court has authority to relieve, on any terms as may be just, a party or a party's legal representative from a judgment, dismissal, order, or other proceeding taken against the party because of the party's _____ [mistake and/or inadvertence and/or surprise and/or excusable neglect] (Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)).

B. Vacating Judgment of Dismissal Proper. It is proper to vacate a judgment of dismissal on the ground of _____ [mistake and/or inadvertence and/or surprise and/or excusable neglect] by a motion pursuant Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 if the motion has the necessary factual support (Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 807, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 ; Bergloff v. Reynolds (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355, 5 Cal. Rptr. 461).

[Optional] C. When Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Made. A motion to set aside a judgment of dismissal pursuant to Code of CivilProcedure Section 473 may be offered in opposition to a motion to dismiss, or made within the proper time after entry of the judgment (Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804 n.3, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 ; Bergloff v. Reynolds (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355, 5 Cal. Rptr. 461).

[Optional] D. Counsel's Neglect. Consistent and long-continued neglect by a plaintiff's counsel amounting to positive misconduct and resulting in dismissal of the plaintiff's action is the type of excusable neglect that requires setting aside the judgment of dismissal pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Section 473 (Daley v. County of Butte (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 391, 38 Cal. Rptr. 693).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing memorandum may be submitted in support of a motion to set aside and vacate a judgment of dismissal on the ground of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b).

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Facts specifically demonstrating how plaintiff was mistaken (factually or legally), how plaintiff's actions were inadvertent, how plaintiff was surprised, or why neglect was excusable should be included.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to set aside and vacate judgment of dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

For forms relating to motions for relief from judgments and orders based on Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

With appropriate modifications, the forms supporting and opposing a motion to set aside a default judgment found in Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders , Part I, may be used to support or oppose a motion to set aside a judgment of dismissal.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Vacating Judgment of Dismissal Proper

The facts and procedural background of Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 , are discussed in § 90.101[3][a]. In Martin, plaintiff countered defendant's motion for dismissal pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583(b) by filing a motion for relief pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473. The trial court granted the Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion while denying dismissal. On appeal, the court of appeal reversed because it could find no basis for Code Civ. Proc. § 473 relief (68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 809-810) . The court noted, however, that a Code Civ. Proc. § 473 proceeding in opposition to a motion to dismiss was proper and could be entertained contemporaneously with the dismissal motion (68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 804 n.3).

In Bergloff v. Reynolds (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 5 Cal. Rptr. 461 , the trial court granted a motion to dismiss the action pursuant to former Code Civ. Proc. § 583 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.410, 583.420(a)(2)] four years after the complaint was filed. Later, however, another judge granted plaintiff's motion for reconsideration and vacated the dismissal. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. An order dismissing a motion for lack of prosecution may be set aside pursuant to a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 if it is timely made and has the necessary factual support (181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 355) . The trial court's determination to grant the motion will not be disturbed on appeal unless the court is clearly shown to have abused its discretion. Here, the error of plaintiff's counsel about plaintiff's availability for trial, which resulted in his giving the court misinformation to plaintiff's detriment, was the type of mistake for which relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 is appropriate (181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 358) . Although plaintiff's motion did not specifically refer to mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect as the basis of the relief sought, defendant had sufficient notice of these grounds as the basis for relief from the points and authorities and affidavits which were filed (181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 356) .

[b] When Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Made

Martin v. Cook (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 799, 137 Cal. Rptr. 434 , and Bergloff v. Reynolds (1960) 181 Cal. App. 2d 349, 5 Cal. Rptr. 461 , are discussed under § 90.126[3][a].

[c] Counsel's Neglect

In Daley v. County of Butte (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 38 Cal. Rptr. 693 , the trial court granted defendant's motion to dismiss the action for failure to bring it to trial within the two-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 583, and subsequently denied plaintiff's Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion to set aside the dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed on the ground that it was an abuse of discretion to refuse to vacate the judgment (227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 396) . Despite the general rule that an attorney's neglect will be imputed to the client, there are exceptional cases in which a client, relatively free from personal neglect, will be relieved of a dismissal attributable to the inaction or procrastination of counsel. Here, the attorney's neglect, in the form of consistent and long-continued inaction, was so extreme that it amounted to positive misconduct, which effectively and unknowingly deprived plaintiff of representation (227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 391) . Unexplained examples of inaction included failure to serve process, to appear at pretrial conferences, to inform plaintiff about the motion to dismiss, or to cooperate in the substitution of attorneys (227 Cal. App. 2d 380, 386, 391-392) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 90 DISMISSAL
PART II. FORMS
B. Involuntary Dismissal
3. Dismissal On Other Grounds, General Points, and Review

9-90 California Points & Authorities § 90.127

§ 90.127 Opposing Motion to Set Aside and Vacate Judgment of Dismissal--Mistake, Inadvertence, Surprise, or Excusable Neglect [Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
vs.	)	TO SET ASIDE AND VACATE JUDGMENT OF
_____ [name],	)	DISMISSAL
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Trial Date: None

_____

THE COURT SHOULD DENY PLAINTIFF'S REQUEST TO VACATE THE JUDGMENT OF DISMISSAL UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 473 BECAUSE SECTION 473 ONLY ALLOWS RELIEF FROM HAVING FAILED TO OPPOSE THE MOTION FOR DISMISSAL, BUT PLAINTIFF SEEKS TO REARGUE THE GROUNDS ON WHICH THE DISMISSAL WAS BASED.

A. Relief Under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 Is Available Only From Failure to Oppose Dismissal Motion, Not to Reargue the Dismissal. The mandatory relief provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) were intended to apply only to those dismissals that occur through failure to oppose a dismissal motion (Leader v. Health Indus. of Am. (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 620, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 ; Peltier v. McCloud River R.R. Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1815, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; Graham v. Beers (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 1661, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 765 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b)). A motion for relief from dismissal may not be used to merely amplify or supplement the evidence and argument that were presented in opposition to a motion to dismiss (Peltier v. McCloud River R.R. Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1825, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 ; Graham v. Beers (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 1660, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 765).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in opposition to a motion to set aside and vacate a judgment of dismissal brought under the relief provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b) on the grounds of mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or excusable neglect. The basis of the opposition is that a Section 473(b) motion may only be used to obtain a hearing on the dismissal motion, not to reargue the dismissal itself.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The grounds for relief asserted in plaintiff's opposition to motion to dismiss should be specifically referenced to demonstrate that plaintiff is seeking to reargue the dismissal rather than to reopen the hearing on the dismissal.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion and order relating to a motion to set aside and vacate judgment of dismissal pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 212, Dismissal (Matthew Bender).

For forms relating to motions for relief from judgments and orders based on Code Civ. Proc. § 473, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

With appropriate modifications, the forms supporting and opposing a motion to set aside a default judgment found in Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders , Part I, may be used to support or oppose a motion to set aside a judgment of dismissal.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relief Under Code Civ. Proc. § 473 Available Only From Failure to Oppose Dismissal Motion

In Leader v. Health Industries of America (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , plaintiff doctors originally sued a hospital for breach of contract and tortious interference with prospective business relationships in 1993. The trial court sustained demurrers to the original, first amended, and second amended complaints. After sustaining a demurrer to the third amended complaint, the court imposed a deadline for amendment. After that deadline had expired more than a month earlier, plaintiffs' moved for leave to file a fourth amended complaint. The hospital opposed and moved to strike the amended complaint and dismiss the action under Code Civ. Proc. § 581(f)(2). The plaintiffs moved for relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(b). Agreeing with previous decisions holding that when the Legislature incorporated dismissals into Section 473(b) it intended to reach only those dismissals which occur through failure to oppose a dismissal motion, the court of appeal held that the mandatory relief provision inapplicable to dismissal based on the failure to file an amended complaint after a demurrer has been sustained with leave to amend (89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 620) . The court of appeal concluded that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting the dismissal where the action had been pending for nearly six years, plaintiffs did not even attempt to amend until one month after trial court's deadline had passed, and information the plaintiffs were unable to locate before the deadline did not appear to be critical to the ability to file an amended complaint (89 Cal. App. 4th 603, 614) .

In Peltier v. McCloud River R.R. Co. (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 182 , plaintiff sought damages for work-related injuries against a railroad company. Nearly three years after defendant answered the complaint, plaintiff filed an at-issue memorandum and a certificate of readiness for trial, but failed to file a pretrial conference statement, and the case was dropped from the court's calendar. Defendant subsequently moved to dismiss the case for failure to bring to trial within three years. Plaintiff opposed the motion, with plaintiff's counsel asserting that he had not moved the case forward faster because plaintiff's condition had deteriorated following his deposition two years prior and remained unstable for purposes of calculating damages. Following the court's order granting defendant's motion, plaintiff filed a motion for reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008, arguing that he was unable to retain an expert witness prior to filing his opposition to the motion to dismiss. The court denied the motion for reconsideration, plaintiff appealed that ruling, subsequently retained new counsel and moved to vacate the dismissal under Code Civ. Proc. § 473.

In his Code Civ. Proc. § 473 motion, plaintiff argued that the dismissal of the case stemmed from the mistake or neglect of counsel because his former attorney had allegedly failed to move the case forward due to a mistaken legal strategy. Plaintiff attached a declaration from his former counsel accepting full responsibility for the pace of the case. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion and plaintiff appealed (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1813-1814) .

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying plaintiff's motion to vacate the dismissal, finding first that the order denying plaintiff's motion was appealable (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1815) . The court then analyzed and harmonized the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 473 and Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410 et seq. In 1988, Code Civ. Proc. § 473 was amended to make relief from default judgments mandatory on a sufficient showing of an attorney's mistake, inadvertence, surprise, or neglect in order to protect parties who were defaulted because of an attorney's indiscretion rather than any fault of their own (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1819) . In 1992, the section was amended to grant plaintiffs mandatory relief if their case was dismissed as a result of their attorney's neglect, mistake, surprise or inadvertence (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1820) . The court noted that the Legislature did not mention any possible effect of the amendment on the discretionary dismissal statutes and found it incredible that the Judiciary Committee would have considered a proposal to abrogate the discretionary dismissal statutes as "noncontroversial," as the 1992 amendment was described.

The court rejected plaintiff's interpretation of Section 473 as providing relief from the dismissal as it would render the discretionary dismissal statutes a nullity, since almost every plaintiff whose case was dismissed could merely file a Section 473 motion for relief relying on the same facts and argument that previously resulted in the dismissal (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1822) . It relied on the courts' analyses in Graham v. Beers (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 1660, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 765 , discussed below, and Tustin Plaza Partnership v. Wehage (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1557, 1563, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 , which concluded that the Legislature intended to put plaintiffs whose cases are dismissed for failing to respond to a dismissal motion on the same footing with defendants who are defaulted for failing to respond to an action (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1824) . In affirming the dismissal, the court concluded that plaintiff's Section 473 motion merely restated the evidence and arguments offered in opposing dismissal and in seeking reconsideration of the dismissal order, and held that a motion for relief from dismissal may not be used to merely amplify or supplement the evidence and arguments presented in opposition to the original motion to dismiss (34 Cal. App. 4th 1809, 1825) .

In Graham v. Beers (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 765 , plaintiffs' personal injury action laid dormant for three and one-half years when the trial court issued and served an order to show cause regarding the dismissal on its own motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410. Plaintiffs, meanwhile, filed an at-issue memorandum, but failed to appear at the hearing on the court's motion. The trial court subsequently filed its order and judgment of dismissal, finding a lack of justification for the delay. It denied plaintiff's motion for reconsideration, ruling that no new or different facts had been presented and that plaintiffs' counsel assumed the matter would settle and made a conscious decision to put the case on the "back burner." Plaintiffs filed a motion for relief pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 473, which the court also denied, finding that the plaintiffs were merely rearguing their prior motion.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's denial of relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, rejecting plaintiffs' argument that they were entitled to mandatory relief under Section 473. The court noted that plaintiffs complied with the prerequisites for mandatory relief as the application was timely, in proper form and accompanied by a sworn declaration of counsel, stating that he failed to bring the case to trial within three years because of his erroneous belief that the matter would settle. However, it found the court's "forceful dicta" in Tustin Plaza Partnership v. Wehage (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1557, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366 that, although Section 473 deprives a court of discretion where a dismissal results from attorney neglect, the Legislature did not intend to undermine the court's discretion in making a determination under Code Civ. Proc. § 583.410, was applicable to these facts. It stated that although the seemingly contradictory language in Sections 473 and 583.410 was troubling, the Legislature could not have intended section 473 to be the "perfect escape hatch from the dismissal statutes" (30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 1661) , and that a motion for relief from dismissal may not be used to merely amplify or supplement the evidence and argument that were presented in opposition to the original motion to dismiss (30 Cal. App. 4th 1656, 1660) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 91 Reserved

9-91 California Points & Authorities 91.syn

§ 91.syn Synopsis to Chapter 91: Reserved

Scope

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 91 Reserved

9-91 California Points & Authorities

DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE AND RELATED PROCEEDINGS

The chapter DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE AND RELATED PROCEEDINGS has been discontinued in this set.

For arguments and authorities relating to family law that may be adapted for use in memoranda of points and authorities, or in trial or appellate briefs, see Denner, Rothschild & Johnson, California Family Law Trial Guide (Matthew Bender).

For a complete discussion of family law principles and procedure, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender), and California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 220, Dissolution of Marriage and Related Proceedings (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE

9-92 California Points & Authorities 92.syn

§ 92.syn Synopsis to Chapter 92: DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE

§ 92.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 92.02 Governing Statutes

§ 92.03 Duress and Menace Distinguished

§ 92.04 Presumption of Undue Influence Arising From Advantage Gained by Persons Holding Confidential Relationship

§ 92.05 Nonapplicability of Forms to Contracts With Public Entities

§ 92.06 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 92.07 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 92.08 Related Points And Authorities Chapters

§§ 92.09-92.19 [Reserved]

§ 92.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Exercise of Legal Right as Not Duress or Menace

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exercise of Valid Legal Right

[b] Refusal to Proceed With Contract

[c] Enforcement of Obligation by Suit

§ 92.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--No Unlawful Act or Threat

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Unlawful Act or Threat

[b] Unlawful Threat as More Than Statement Causing Fear of Prosecution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Unlawful Act or Threat

[b] Unlawful Threat as More Than Statement Causing Fear of Prosecution

§ 92.22 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Reasonable Alternative to Entering Into Contract Available

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Applicability of Authorities

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duress if Reasonable Alternative Available

§ 92.23 Supporting Contention That Contract Is Enforceable--Grief Over Death of Family Member Does Not Vitiate Cemetery Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grief Does Not Vitiate Cemetery Contract

§ 92.24 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Taking or Threatening to Take Legal Action With Knowledge of Falsity of Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure

[b] Duress and Menace Defined

[c] Duress as Not Limited to Threats Against Person

[d] Knowledge of Falsity of Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Duress and Menace Defined

[b] Duress Not Limited to Threats Against Person

§ 92.25 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Threat of Criminal Prosecution as Duress

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Threat of Criminal Prosecution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Threat of Criminal Prosecution

§ 92.26 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Duress or Menace by Third Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duress of Third Party Renders Contract Voidable

§§ 92.27-92.39 [Reserved]

§ 92.40 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Materiality of Fact Allegedly Misrepresented

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Actual Fraud

[b] Materiality of Fact Misrepresented

[c] Test of Materiality

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Materiality of Misrepresented Fact

§ 92.41 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Actual Reliance by Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Misrepresentation Required

§ 92.42 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Evidence Insufficient to Show Plaintiff's Reliance Was Justified

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance Must Be Justified

[b] Statement of Opinion

[c] Misrepresentations of Law

[d] Reliance Not Justified if Independent Investigation Made

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Justified if Independent Investigation Made

§ 92.43 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Injury Required

§ 92.44 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Constructive Fraud Based on Breach of Duty [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]--Failure to Show Existence of Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confidential Relationship Required

[b] Confidential Relationship Defined

[c] Employment Relationship Not Confidential

[d] Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential

[e] No Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Prospective Marriage Partners

[f] Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Confidential Relationship Required

[b] Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential

[c] Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship

§ 92.45 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--False Representation Made to Prospective Purchaser of Business Concerning Income or Profits of Business as Material

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient

[b] False Representation Concerning Income or Profits of Business as Material

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fraudulent Acts

[b] Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient

§ 92.46 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Expression of Opinion Not Honestly or Reasonably Entertained as Constituting Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Not Honestly Entertained as Constituting Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Not Honestly Entertained as Constituting Fraud

§ 92.47 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Expression of Opinion Asserted as Representation of Existing Fact as Actionable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Asserted as Representation of Existing Fact

§ 92.48 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Reliance on Statement of Opinion Justified if Defendant Has Expert Knowledge

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Statement of Opinion Justified if Defendant Has Expert Knowledge

§ 92.49 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Misrepresentation of Law as Actionable if Confidential Relationship Exists

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation of Law as Fraud

[b] Nature of a Confidential Relationship

§ 92.50 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Negligent Reliance on Intentional Misrepresentation as Not Barring Relief

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Negligent Reliance on Intentional Misrepresentation

§ 92.51 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--No Duty to Investigate Positive Statements of Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Availability of Means of Discovering Truth as Not Barring Relief

[b] No Duty to Investigate Truth of Positive Statements of Fact

[c] No Duty to Investigate Representations Concerning Income or Profits

§ 92.52 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Representations Concerning Matters Beyond Scope of Investigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Representations Concerning Matters Beyond Scope of Investigation

§ 92.53 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Misrepresentation When Falsity Not Apparent From Investigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Misrepresentation When Falsity Not Apparent From Investigation

§ 92.54 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Pecuniary Loss Not Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pecuniary Loss Not Required

[b] Rescission as Proper When Consideration Received Differs Substantially From That Which Plaintiff Was Led to Expect

[c] Placing Title in Joint Tenancy

§ 92.55 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Suppression of True Facts Constituting Acts Fitted to Deceive [Civ. Code § 1572(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suppression of True Facts as Constituting Actual Fraud Within the Meaning of Civ. Code § 1572(5)

§ 92.56 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Constructive Fraud Based on Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]--Evidence of Confidential Relationship Sufficient to Give Rise to Presumption of Constructive Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duties in Confidential Relationship

[b] Constructive Fraud Presumed

§§ 92.57-92.69 [Reserved]

§ 92.70 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Undue Influence Based on Taking Advantage of Another's Mental Weakness, Necessities, or Distress [Civ. Code § 1575(2), (3)]--Insufficiency of Evidence to Support Finding of No Undue Influence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Use

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undue Influence Defined

[b] Confidential Relationship Unnecessary Where Undue Influence Predicated on Unfair Advantage Taken of Mental Weakness

[c] Weakness of Mind Defined

[d] Elements Characteristic of Overpersuasion

[e] Old Age and Infirmity of Grantor as Raising Presumption of Undue Influence

§ 92.71 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1)]--Evidence Insufficient to Rebut Presumption of Undue Influence Arising From Advantage Gained by Fiduciary in Transaction With Beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 16004(c); former Civ. Code § 2235]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Use

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Weakness of Mind Not Necessary

[b] Presumption of Undue Influence

[c] Advantage Raising Presumption of Undue Influence Defined

[d] Presumption of Undue Influence Applicable to Attorney-Client Relationship

[e] Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Husband and Wife

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption of Undue Influence

§ 92.72 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Breach of Fiduciary Duty or Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1); Prob. Code § 16004(c)]--Presumption of Breach of Fiduciary Duty Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary [former Civ. Code § 2235; Prob. Code § 16004(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Cautionary Note

[c] Related Uses

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Violation of Trustee's Fiduciary Duties Is Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary

[b] Presumption of Undue Influence Not Applicable to Agreement Between Attorney and Client Relating to Fees

§ 92.73 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Breach of Fiduciary Duty or Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1)]--Presumption of Undue Influence [former Civ. Code § 2235] or Breach of Fiduciary

Duty [Prob. Code § 16004(c)] Not Applicable When Plaintiff Fails to Show Existence of Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Cautionary Note

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Showing of Confidential Relationship and Advantage Required

[b] Existence of Confidential Relationship as Question of Fact

§§ 92.74-92.89 [Reserved]

§ 92.90 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

[b] Assumed Risk of Unilateral Mistake Based on Insufficient Knowledge

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

§ 92.91 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--No Rescission if Mistake Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Rescission if Mistake Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty

[b] Failure to Make Reasonable Inquiry Concerning Meaning of Contract Terms as Neglect of Legal Duty

§ 92.92 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

§ 92.92A Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission of Life Annuity Contract Not Allowed for Buyer's Ignorance of Condition Causing Early Death

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§ 92.93 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--Mistake Not Material

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mistake Must Be Material

[b] Mistake Concerning Collateral Matter

[c] Mistake Not Material When Parties Learn True Facts Prior to Execution of Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mistake Must Be Material

§ 92.94 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Rescission for Mistake Unless Material Injury or Prejudice Shown

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Rescission for Mistake Unless Material Injury Shown

§ 92.95 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief From Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

§ 92.96 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

§ 92.97 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief for Error of Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Relief for Error in Judgment

§ 92.98 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6) in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted When Enforcement Would Be Unconscionable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake of Fact Permitted if Effect of Mistake is Such That Enforcement of Contract Would Be Unconscionable

§ 92.99 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

§ 92.100 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Ordinary Negligence as Not Neglect of Legal Duty Barring Relief From Mistake

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Carelessness Does Not Necessarily Constitute Neglect of Legal Duty

[b] Ordinary Negligence Is Not Neglect of Legal Duty; Gross Negligence Required

[c] Gross Negligence Defined

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Carelessness Does Not Necessarily Constitute Neglect of Legal Duty

[b] Ordinary Negligence Is Not Neglect of Legal Duty; Gross Negligence Required

§ 92.101 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Relief From Mistake Induced by Innocent Misrepresentation Is Not Precluded by Plaintiff's Negligence Unless Plaintiff's Conduct Is Preposterous or Irrational

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mistake Induced by Innocent Misrepresentation as Ground for Rescission

[b] Negligent Reliance on Unintentional Misrepresentation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.01

§ 92.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda dealing with the following:

- Supporting [see §§ 92.20 -92.22] and opposing [see §§ 92.24 -92.26] a defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract on the ground of duress or menace.

- Supporting [see §§ 92.40 -92.43] and opposing [see §§ 92.45 -92.56] defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract for actual fraud.

- Supporting defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract on the ground of constructive fraud [see § 92.44].

- Supporting [see §§ 92.70, 92.71] and opposing [see §§ 92.72, 92.73] plaintiff's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract on the ground of undue influence.

- Supporting [see §§ 92.90 -92.95] and opposing [see §§ 92.99 -92.101] defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract entered into under mistake.

Although the forms are arranged in the procedural context of a motion for new trial by a defendant against whom rescission was erroneously granted, the authority may be cited in any other appropriate procedural context, including a trial or appellate brief.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.02

§ 92.02 Governing Statutes

Consent to a contract is generally governed by Civ. Code §§ 1565-1590. Civ. Code § 1565 provides that the consent of parties to a contract must be free, mutual, and communicated by each to the other. Civ. Code § 1567 provides that an apparent consent is not real or free when obtained through duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake. Acts and omissions constituting duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, and mistake are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1569-1579.

Rescission of contracts generally is governed by Civ. Code §§ 1688-1693. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was given by mistake, or obtained through duress, menace, fraud, or undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he or she rescinds, or of any other party to the contract jointly interested with that party [Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)].

Voidness and invalidity of attempted transfers to fiduciaries, including attorneys, and conservators, are governed by Prob. Code § 21350 et seq.

Duress and menace, as grounds for rescission of a contract, are defined in Civ. Code §§ 1569 and 1570, respectively.

Fraud, as a ground for rescinding a contract, may be either actual or constructive [Civ. Code § 1571]. Actual fraud is defined in Civ. Code § 1572. Constructive fraud is defined in Civ. Code § 1573. Actions by real estate lenders for damages for fraudulent (as defined in Civ. Code § 1572) inducement to make a real estate loan are governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 726(f), (g) (in general), Fin. Code § 551 (banks), Fin. Code § 7460 (savings and loans), and Fin. Code § 15102 (credit unions). An action by a borrower for damages on account of a lender's failure to comply with the disclosure requirements for adjustable-rate residential mortgage loans is governed by Civ. Code § 1921(b).

Undue influence, as a ground for rescinding a contract, is defined in Civ. Code § 1575.

A mistake may be either of fact or of law [Civ. Code § 1576]. Mistake of fact is defined in Civ. Code §§ 1577, 1579. Mistake of law is defined in Civ. Code § 1578.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.03

§ 92.03 Duress and Menace Distinguished

Duress consists in the unlawful confinement of another's person, relatives, or property in order to obtain another's consent to a transaction [see Civ. Code § 1569]. Menace consists of a threat of duress or a threat of injury to the person, property, or character of another [see Civ. Code § 1570]. The courts have expanded these narrow statutory definitions, however, so that a contract, deed, or other obligation may be avoided on the ground of duress or menace if it is obtained by so oppressing a person, by threats regarding his or her safety, liberty, or property, or that of a family member, as to deprive the person of the free exercise of his or her will [see Lewis v. Fahn (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 95, 99, 247 P.2d 831 (discussed in § 92.24)].

Although there is a technical difference between the statutory definitions of duress and menace, the courts often use the two terms interchangeably [see Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 128, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533] . Thus, the holdings in cases involving contracts obtained through duress are applicable to cases involving contracts obtained through menace, and vice versa.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.04

§ 92.04 Presumption of Undue Influence Arising From Advantage Gained by Persons Holding Confidential Relationship

Decisional law addressing the presumption of undue influence that arises when one gains advantage from another with respect to whom he or she holds a position of trust adopted the presumption applicable to trustees [see former Civ. Code §§ 2219, 2235; Prob. Code § 16004(c)] and held it to apply to other relationships. The 1986 repeals and enactments of the Trust Law (Prob. Code § 15000 et seq.) were not intended to alter rules applied by courts to fiduciary and confidential relationships, except with regard to express trusts governed by the new Trust Law [Prob. Code § 15003(b)]. Nor were they intended to prevent application of all or part of the principles or procedures in the new Trust Law to an entity or relationship that is excluded from the definition of "trust" in Prob. Code § 82 if those principles are applied pursuant to statutory or common law principles by court order or rule, or by contract [Prob. Code § 15003(c)]. Nevertheless, it remains unclear whether, and to what extent, courts will adopt the principles and presumption of Prob. Code § 16004(c) as applicable to relationships other than trustee-beneficiary, especially in light of the fact that former Civ. Code § 2219, which specified that one who voluntarily assumes a relation of personal confidence with another is deemed a trustee, has been repealed as of July 1, 1987, and has not been restated in a comparable statute.

Forms within this part continue to be based in part on cases decided under the repealed statutes, primarily former Civ. Code §§ 2219, 2235, and thus should be reviewed and used with caution until the effect of the presumption of Prob. Code § 16004(c) on relationships other than trustee-beneficiary is fully clarified.

Former Civ. Code § 2235 provided that all transactions between a trustee and his or her beneficiary during the existence of the trust, or while the influence acquired by the trustee remains, by which he or she obtains any advantage from his or her beneficiary, are presumed to be entered into by the latter without sufficient consideration and under undue influence when referring to such persons.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.05

§ 92.05 Nonapplicability of Forms to Contracts With Public Entities

Counsel should note that Pub. Contract Code § 5100 et seq. establish the exclusive procedure for relieving a bidder from a mistake in a bid submitted to a public entity, as defined by Pub. Contract Code § 5100(a) [see A & A Elec., Inc. v. King (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 457, 464, 126 Cal. Rptr. 585] . Thus, the rules governing rescission for mistake set out in the cases cited in the forms contained in this part no longer apply to bids submitted to public entities. Those rules, however, have been applied in situations not involving public entities and in cases involving disputes between general contractors and subcontractors [see, e.g., Brunzell Constr. Co. v. G.J. Weisbrod, Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283-286, 285 P.2d 989 (applying law set forth in cases involving bid submitted to public entity to case involving bid between general contractor and subcontractor)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.06

§ 92.06 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits

Normally, no opening or responding memorandum may exceed 15 pages, except that for a summary judgment motion or summary adjudication motion, no opening or responding memorandum may exceed 20 pages. No reply or closing memorandum may exceed 10 pages. The page limit does not include exhibits, declarations, attachments, the table of contents, the table of authorities, or the proof of service [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A party may apply to the court for permission to file a longer memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms in this chapter are designed to be included with other points and authorities to form a complete memorandum. For detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.06. For a skeletal form for memorandum for use in creating a properly formatted outline in which to compile relevant forms from this publication, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.10.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.07

§ 92.07 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms relating to the defenses of duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, and mistake, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms pertaining to other contractual defenses, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 140, Contracts (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to rescission generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to the tort of fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender). For other discussion and forms relating to the contractual defenses of duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, and mistake, see the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 6, Accord and Satisfaction.
- Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts.
- Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments.
- Ch. 184, Deeds.
- Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments.
- Ch. 226, Dissolution of Marriage and Related Proceedings: Attorney Fees.
- Ch. 270, Fraudulent Conveyances.
- Ch. 278, Gifts.
- Ch. 385, Negotiable Instruments.

- Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests.
- Ch. 481, Public Works.
- Ch. 488, Reformation of Instruments.
- Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders.
- Ch. 560, Trusts: Express, Public, Charitable, and Totten Trusts.
- Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.08

§ 92.08 Related Points And Authorities Chapters

For memoranda relating to the tort of fraud and deceit which may also be useful in actions to rescind contracts on the ground of fraud, see Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit . For memoranda pertaining to other contractual defenses, see the following chapters:

- Ch. 11, Accord and Satisfaction.
- Ch. 50, Contracts.
- Ch. 118, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Capacity to Contract.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-92 California Points & Authorities §§ 92.09-92.19

[Reserved]

§§ 92.09[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.20

§ 92.20 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Exercise of Legal Right as Not Duress or Menace

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO._____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name],	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
Plaintiff, vs.	)	JUDGMENT
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THERE WAS NO DURESS OR MENACE IN THAT DEFENDANT MERELY _____ [THREATENED TO EXERCISE or EXERCISED] A LEGAL RIGHT.

A. Summary Judgment. Defendant may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that the action has no merit. Such motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c).

B. Exercise of Valid Legal Right. The exercise of a legal right or the threat to take legal action does not constitute duress or menace [unless the party making the threat knows the falsity of his/her claim] (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 128, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 ; Goldstone-Tobias Agency, Inc. v. Barboo Enterprises Prods., Inc. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724, 47 Cal. Rptr. 347).

[Optional] C. Refusal to Proceed With Contract. It is not duress or menace to refuse, in good faith, to proceed with a contract, even though such refusal might later be found to be wrong (London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 240, 44 Cal. Rptr. 262).

[Optional] D. Enforcement of Obligation by Suit. It is not duress or menace to threaten to or actually take advantage of the remedy of suit for enforcement of a debt or obligation (Del Carlo v. Sonoma County (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 36, 40, 53 Cal. Rptr. 771).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under duress or menace when defendant merely exercised a legal right.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[i] Related Uses

The points and authorities in this form may be modified to support a demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for duress or menace when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that defendant was merely exercising a legal right.

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication of the issues [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant has alleged that the contract is voidable because entered into under duress or menace.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for summary judgment generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 92.24 and 92.25 may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exercise of Valid Legal Right

Plaintiff in Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , sought to rescind his resignation as a teacher from defendant school district on the ground that his consent had not been real or free but had been obtained through duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake. The trial court entered judgment of dismissal after sustaining defendant's demurrer. Plaintiff had been employed as a teacher by defendant and had been under contract to continue teaching for another year. He was arrested on criminal charges and subsequently signed and delivered to defendant his written resignation as a teacher. The criminal charges were later dismissed and plaintiff sought to resume his employment with defendant, but the latter refused to reinstate him. Plaintiff asserted that his resignation was invalid because at the time he signed it he had just completed the process of arrest, questioning by the police, booking, and release on bail and had gone for 40 hours without sleep. He further alleged that while he was in this condition and unable to think clearly, the superintendent of the district and the principal of his school came to his apartment, told him they were trying to help him and had his best interests at heart, that he should take their advice and immediately resign. They stated that there was no time to consult an attorney, and that if he did not resign immediately the district would suspend and dismiss him and publicize the proceedings, but that if he resigned at once, the incident would not be publicized and would not jeopardize his chances of securing employment as a teacher elsewhere.

The court of appeal held, in part, that the complaint failed to state a cause of action for duress or menace. The court stated that to constitute duress or menace, the action or threat must be unlawful, and a threat to take legal action is not unlawful unless the party making the threat knows the falsity of his or her claim. Since the complaint shows that the school representatives announced their intention to initiate suspension and dismissal proceedings authorized under the Education Code at a time when the filing of these proceedings was not only their legal right but their positive duty as school officials, the complaint did not state a cause of action for duress or menace (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 128) .

In Goldstone-Tobias Agency, Inc. v. Barboo Enterprises Prods., Inc. (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 720, 47 Cal. Rptr. 347 , plaintiff brought an action to recover the balance due under an agreement settling a municipal court action and arbitration proceeding. Judgment was for plaintiff, and the court of appeal affirmed. On appeal, one of defendant's contentions was that plaintiff knew at the time the compromise agreement was signed that one of the other parties to the note, an actor, did not want to go to court on the promissory note or to arbitration because he was emerging from a slump and could not afford the bad publicity. Consequently, defendant argued that the settlement was entered into under the pressure of economic compulsion. The court of appeal held that plaintiff's only conduct was to press an apparently valid claim using the due process of the law to recover monies which it in good faith believed were owing. Plaintiff was not required to drop the legal proceedings it had instituted because of the other party's plight (237 Cal. App. 2d 720, 723-724) . The exercise of a legal right does not constitute unlawful duress or compulsion and, consequently, duress did not exist under the facts of the case (237 Cal. App. 2d 720, 724) .

[b] Refusal to Proceed With Contract

London Homes, Inc. v. Korn (1965) 234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 44 Cal. Rptr. 262 , was an action for damages arising out of the renegotiation of a contract for the sale of real property. Plaintiff claimed that it was forced to pay more per acre than it had originally agreed because of business compulsion or duress on the part of defendants. The trial court found in favor of defendants, determining that there was no duress or business compulsion, and the court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff had agreed to purchase the real property from defendants at a specified price, but defendants later refused to sell at that price since they had received a better offer. Defendants also contended that they were not bound by the original sale contract because plaintiff had not fulfilled some of the conditions thereto, although the court of appeal later found that the defendants' position was erroneous. Plaintiff needed the property because of work it had done toward building a subdivision on the land and, consequently, agreed to increase the amount it paid per acre.

According to the court of appeal, if plaintiff had sued defendants, it would almost certainly have won, but the subdivision would not have been completed on time. The court concluded, however, that there was no duress or business compulsion since plaintiff could have brought suit against defendant for damages but for what appeared to be good business reasons decided not to do so. Plaintiff was not required to enter into a second contract to pay more money for the land. It voluntarily chose to do so after considering all the elements then existing, including the pressure of time (234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 239-240) . The court pointed out that it is not duress to take a different view of contract rights, even though mistaken, from that of the other contracting party, and it is not duress to refuse, in good faith, to proceed with a contract, even though such refusal might later befound to be wrong (234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 240) . The court concluded that the trial court was correct in determining that plaintiff could not recover damages (234 Cal. App. 2d 233, 241-242) .

[c] Enforcement of Obligation by Suit

In Del Carlo v. Sonoma County (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 36, 53 Cal. Rptr. 771 , plaintiff brought an action to quiet title to real property. Plaintiff's former wife had conveyed the property to him by a grant deed that was not recorded for some time. Thereafter, the former wife became ill and was treated at a hospital operated by defendant county. Before the deed was recorded, plaintiff's former wife executed a lien on the property as security for payment of her account with defendant. The lien was recorded without defendant having knowledge of the unrecorded deed to plaintiff. After the death of plaintiff's wife, plaintiff met with defendant's hospital committee and orally agreed to pay his wife's account. The trial court denied plaintiff relief and decreed that defendant had a valid lien on the property for hospital services rendered to plaintiff's former wife.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that his promise to pay defendant was unenforceable since it was made under duress. The court of appeal held that the contention was entirely without merit. Since the services of defendant were rendered long after plaintiff's divorce from his wife, plaintiff was not personally liable for them. However, after consulting an attorney, he voluntarily agreed to pay the debt in exchange for defendant's forbearance in enforcing its lien. The court noted that it is not legal duress to threaten to or actually take advantage of the usual remedy by suit for enforcement of a debt or obligation and affirmed the trial court's decision (245 Cal. App. 2d 36, 40) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.21

§ 92.21 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--No Unlawful Act or Threat

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.20.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THERE WAS NO UNLAWFUL ACT OR THREAT BY DEFENDANT AND THEREFORE NO DURESS.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 92.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Requirement of Unlawful Act or Threat. Although a party to a contract may rescind the contract if his or her consent to the contract was obtained through the exercise of duress or menace (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)), duress and menace require an unlawful action or threat by defendant by which plaintiff's consent is obtained through fear (Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 450, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 ; Goldstein v. Enoch (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 894, 57 Cal. Rptr. 19).

[Optional] C. Unlawful Threat as More Than Statement Causing Fear of Prosecution. An unlawful threat, to constitute menace, must be more than some statement or act from which plaintiff becomes apprehensive of prosecution (Goldstein v. Enoch (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 894, 57 Cal. Rptr. 19).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under duress or menace when there was no unlawful act or threat by defendant.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations supporting the motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract on the ground of duress or menace when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that there was no unlawful act or threat by defendant.

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication of a cause of action or affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant has alleged that the contract is voidable because entered into under duress or menace.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgmentgenerally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Unlawful Act or Threat

In Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 , real party in interest, a police officer, resigned from his position after being charged with rape. The officer later appealed to the city civil service board, alleging that his resignation had been coerced and that, therefore, he had been unlawfully discharged. The board found that the officer had been coerced into resigning and ordered his reinstatement. The city manager then filed a petition for writ of mandate seeking to set aside the board's decision. The trial court found that there was no coercion or duress involved and that the officer had resigned voluntarily. It entered judgment granting the writ.

The court of appeal noted that when one seeks to rescind a resignation on the basis that it is coerced, he or she invokes Civ. Code §§ 1688 and 1689, providing for the extinguishment of a contract by rescission. He or she is in effect asserting that his or her consent had not been real or free within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1567, but that it had been obtained by duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake. The court then rejected the officer's contention that his resignation was obtained by duress. The court stated that duress envisions some unlawful action by a party by which one's consent is obtained through fear or threats. It concluded that there was no evidence in this case of any unlawful acts, confinement, or threats by the police department against the officer. The police proceeded along a wholly legal course of action in investigating an officer charged with rape and alleged to have conducted himself in a manner unbecoming a police officer. Accordingly, the court held, there was no evidence of duress as a ground for rescission ( 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 450) . The court held, however, that there was substantial evidence that the resignation was obtained through undue influence and reversed the judgment (11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451-452) .

The plaintiff in Goldstein v. Enoch (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 57 Cal. Rptr. 19 , sought to recover money allegedly lost by him due in part to duress. Defendant's general demurrer to the complaint was sustained, and the court of appeal affirmed. Plaintiff owned 20 percent of a corporation's stock, and defendant owned the other 80 percent. Defendant wanted to sell all the stock using a false financial statement prepared by plaintiff, but plaintiff refused to falsify the statement. Defendant then agreed to purchase plaintiff's shares but at a smaller sum than if plaintiff had agreed to furnish the false statement. Plaintiff claimed that he was induced to part with his stock at an inequitable price as a proximate result, in part, of duress and menace exerted by defendant and was therefore entitled to recover the difference between the sales price and the then fair market value of the stock.

According to the court of appeal, duress and menace arise by virtue of unlawful action, and menace requires that an unlawful threat, which is more than some statement or act from which the guilty party becomes apprehensive of prosecution, be made by the defendant. An action for duress and menace may not be sustained when the voluntary action of the apprehensive party is induced by his or her speculation on or anticipation of a future event suggested to him or her by the defendant but not threatened to induce his or her conduct (248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 894) . The court noted that the issue in each case is whether the defendant intentionally exerted an unlawful pressure on the injured party to deprive him of contractual volition and to induce him or her to act to his or her own detriment (248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 894-895) . Since, on the facts of the case, plaintiff was not induced to participate in a fraudulent scheme by unlawful pressure executed by defendant, and he was not compelled either to prepare a false financial statement or to part with his stock to defendant, the court held he could not recover any money from defendant on the grounds of duress and menace (248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 895) .

[b] Unlawful Threat as More Than Statement Causing Fear of Prosecution

Goldstein v. Enoch (1967) 248 Cal. App. 2d 891, 57 Cal. Rptr. 19 , is discussed in § 92.21[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Requirement of Unlawful Act or Threat

In Tarpy v. County of San Diego (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 267, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 607 , a dog owner brought an action against the county after his dog, which had been impounded by animal control and held at an animal shelter, died from complications from a spay procedure. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendants based on a written release of liability that the dog owner had signed prior to the operation. The owner appealed, claiming that he signed the release under duress. The court of appeal affirmed. It reiterated that a written release generally extinguishes any obligation covered by its terms, provided it has not been obtained by fraud, deception, misrepresentation, duress, or undue influence. Here, the defendants relied on the release as a defense. As the owner did not contest that his claims were within the scope of the release language, the defendants had met their burden to show that a complete defense to his claims existed. The dog owner, however, contended that summary judgment was not appropriate because he presented evidence supporting a triable issue of fact as to whether he agreed to neuter the dog as a result of the defendants' mental coercion through the lack of reasonable alternatives and their unlawful detention of the dog. He argued that the county failed to offer him fee payment options available under applicable county regulations, and that this rendered their retention of the dogunlawful. The court found that the regulations did not require the department to offer him alternatives, but only provided it with discretion to allow for deferred billing. The county's retention of the dog was not unlawful. For those reasons, it concluded that the owner failed to raise a triable issue of fact as to whether retention of the dog was unlawful so as to establish statutory duress, and thus the release was valid and enforceable (110 Cal. App. 4th 267, 276-279) .

Robison v. City of Manteca (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 452, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748 was an action by a refuse collector for writ of mandate directing defendant city to reinstate him to his position. Plaintiff claimed that after he tested positive for controlled stimulants in a random drug test, his employee-organization representative coerced him into executing a recovery agreement with defendant. The agreement required him to undertake a substance-abuse treatment plan and waived his right to appeal any discipline to defendant's personnel board. The city notified him by letter, in advance of its action, that it would be firing him for failure to comply with the recovery agreement. It then fired him and noted he had waived his right to appeal to the personnel board. Plaintiff sought a writ of mandate. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend and entered a judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal affirmed (78 Cal. App. 4th 452, 454-456) .

Plaintiff claimed that the circumstances under which he executed the recovery agreement constituted both "unconscionability" and "undue influence," citing Keithley v. Civil Service Bd (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 , discussed in § 92.21[3][a]. The court of appeal found a complete absence of any allegations coming within the Keithley criteria. Plaintiff passively alleged, in a conclusory fashion, that he "was coerced" into signing the agreement. The court found that in the absence of any additional factual allegations, this was inadequate to establish undue influence. Even accepting the truth of his declaration for purposes of assessing the denial of leave to amend, the facts would not establish circumstances approaching undue influence. On the day he was to execute the agreement, his representative "strongly advised" him to sign it or face immediate termination. The court found that rather than being any type of "coercion," this was no more than an accurate summation of plaintiff's situation (78 Cal. App. 4th 452, 457-458) .

[b] Unlawful Threat as More Than Statement Causing Fear of Prosecution

Brahs v. Katcher (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 657, 235 P.2d 619 , was an action to recover the value of cattle sold by plaintiffs to defendants. One of the defendants filed a counterclaim praying for the return of a sum of money alleged to have been paid under coercion and threats of criminal prosecution. The trial court denied recovery on defendant's counterclaim, and the court of appeal affirmed. Defendant had made several purchases of cattle from plaintiffs but the checks he gave in payment were dishonored. Plaintiff telephoned defendant from the office of a county district attorney telling him, in substance, that he could be prosecuted and put in prison for one to 14 years but that such a procedure would not collect the money plaintiff wanted since defendant could go through bankruptcy if he so desired, that plaintiff had played along with defendant for a long time but all he had received were promises, and that he had to have his money. After this conversation, the defendant paid a portion of amount thus owed plaintiff.

According to the court of appeal, to render a payment involuntary and recoverable, there must be an actual or threatened exercise of power possessed or supposed to be possessed by the party receiving payment. The threat must be clear and direct and not merely inferrable. To establish duress by threat of criminal prosecution requires a threat; a mere suggestion of payment affording a protection from criminal prosecution is not sufficient. The court held that the testimony of plaintiff showed that, at the most, a statement of power possessed, rather than a threatened exercise of that power, was made so that the trial court was justified in finding that the money was not paid under threat of criminal prosecution (106 Cal. App. 2d 657, 659) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.22

§ 92.22 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment by Defendant in Action to Rescind Contract on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Reasonable Alternative to Entering Into Contract Available

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.20.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THERE WAS NO DURESS OR MENACE IN THAT PLAINTIFF HAD A REASONABLE ALTERNATIVE TO ENTERING INTO THE CONTRACT.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 92.20, Paragraph A.]

B. No Duress if Reasonable Alternative Available. Although a party to a contract may rescind the contract if his or her consent to the contract was obtained by the exercise of duress or menace (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)), duress or menace is not established if the party entering into the contract had a reasonable alternative to doing so (see Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 204-205, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 ; Western Gulf Oil Co. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 257, 265, 206 P.2d 643).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment by defendant in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under duress or menace when plaintiff had a reasonable alternative to entering into the contract.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[B] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to support a demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for duress or menace when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that plaintiff had a reasonable alternative to entering into the contract.

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to support a motion for summary adjudication of a cause of action or affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] by plaintiff in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant has alleged that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under duress or menace.

[c] Applicability of Authorities

Counsel should note that although both Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 , and Western Gulf Oil Co. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 257, 206 P.2d 643 , which are cited in Paragraph B and discussed in § 92.22[3][a], involved actions to recover payments allegedly made under duress rather than actions to rescind contracts to which the plaintiff's consent was obtained by duress, the rules stated in those cases apparently are also applicable to contracts allegedly entered into under duress. Thus, a contract may not be rescinded on the ground of duress if plaintiff had a reasonable alternative to entering into the contract.

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for summary judgment generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duress if Reasonable Alternative Available

Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 , was an action by plaintiffs to recover money paid and property conveyed allegedly under duress. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint and entered judgment for defendants. The complaint alleged that plaintiff husband borrowed money from creditor, giving a promissory note and a mortgage on two ranch properties owned by plaintiff in two counties as security. Pursuant to a separate written agreement, the debt was fully discharged by applying fees earned by plaintiff husband in acting as creditor's attorney. Later, plaintiff wife executed a bond with another person but the bond was forfeited, after which the district attorney demanded payment by the wife, threatening to force an execution sale of her home if she did not pay. Plaintiff husband deeded his ranch properties to his wife in order to facilitate payment of the bond without sacrificing the home property. In the meantime, the husband's former creditor had died and the defendant representatives of his estate attempted to make plaintiffs husband and wife pay the debt a second time. These defendants filed an action to foreclose the mortgages on the ranch property, and notices of lis pendens were filed against the two properties. According to the complaint, these defendants knew at the time the action was filed that nothing was due on either the note or the mortgages securing it. Plaintiff wife was unable to sell one of the two ranch properties to a willing buyer to satisfy the bond debt unless she cleared the title of the false claim. As a result, she was forced to sell the other ranch to another defendant at a third of the actual value, allegedly due to the compulsion arising out of the defendant representatives, false claim, in order to pay off the bond.

In holding that the complaint stated a cause of action against the representatives of the estate of plaintiff husband's creditors, for recovery of money allegedly paid under duress, the Supreme Court noted that if the plaintiffs had a reasonable alternative to parting with the consideration to satisfy the false claim, then the payment was not made under duress (53 Cal. 2d 195, 204) . The Court, however, rejected defendant's contention that plaintiff wife should have permitted her house to be sold at the foreclosure sale as a reasonable alternative to making the payment to defendant. A reasonably prudent person would not take such a course and thus, the Court concluded, plaintiff had no reasonable alternative except to pay the false claim (53 Cal. 2d 195, 204-205) . The Court, therefore, reversed the judgment against plaintiff husband in favor of the defendant representatives of the creditor's estate, but affirmed the judgment against plaintiff wife on the ground that the statute of limitations had run against her (53 Cal. 2d 195, 217) .

In Western Gulf Oil Co. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 257, 206 P.2d 643 , plaintiff was lessee under an oil and gas lease which provided that the lessee must pay the defendant lessor a royalty equal to one-eighth of the valueof all oil removed from the leased property. After constructing a new plant on this property, plaintiff began deducting a proportionate part of the cost of cleaning the oil from defendant's royalty payments. Thereafter, defendant notified plaintiff that plaintiff's withholding of cleaning charges from the royalty payments was a breach of the lease and ordered plaintiff to cease doing so. Plaintiff then sent defendant a check for the amounts withheld, accompanied by a letter stating that the payment was being made solely to avoid a possible forfeiture of the lease and that plaintiff was not admitting thereby that defendant's royalty payments were not properly chargeable with the cost of cleaning its proportionate part of the oil. Plaintiff later brought a declaratory relief action to determine whether defendant was obligated to pay a proportionate share of the costs of cleaning the oil and whether plaintiff was entitled to recover the payment of the costs previously made to defendant. The trial court decreed that defendant was liable for a proportionate share of the cleaning costs, but that plaintiff's payment to defendant was voluntary and not recoverable. Both parties appealed from the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed. Addressing the issue of whether or not plaintiff could recover the payments, the court noted that payments of illegal claims enforced by duress, coercion, or compulsion are deemed to have been made involuntarily and may be recovered, but the payment must have been enforced by coercion and there must have been no other adequate means available to prevent the loss (92 Cal. App. 2d 257, 265) . In this case, the court observed, plaintiff could have immediately commenced an action for declaratory relief under Code Civ. Proc. § 1060, asking for temporary relief from forfeiture of the lease until the matter was finally determined. Instead, plaintiff chose to pay the disputed amount, thus removing the grounds for possible forfeiture of the lease, and delaying commencement of the action for 208 days. The court concluded that there was substantial evidence that the payment was voluntarily made to delay litigation and noted that payments voluntarily made, with knowledge of the facts, cannot be recovered (92 Cal. App. 2d 257, 265-266) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.23

§ 92.23 Supporting Contention That Contract Is Enforceable--Grief Over Death of Family Member Does Not Vitiate Cemetery Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE CEMETERY CONTRACT IS ENFORCEABLE EVEN THOUGH _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT] WAS GRIEVING AT THE TIME THE CONTRACT WAS NEGOTIATED.

Grief Does Not Vitiate Cemetery Contract. Grief arising from the death of a close relative does not vitiate a contract between a cemetery and the decedent's family (Sinai Memorial Chapel v. Dudler (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 199, 282 Cal. Rptr. 263 ; see also In re Terra (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 452, 462).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention that a cemetery contract is enforceable when the only duress alleged is the grief associated with decedent's death.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should allege facts showing that the contract terms were disucssed with the grieving relative.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Grief Does Not Vitiate Cemetery Contract

Sinai Memorial Chapel v. Dudler (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 282 Cal. Rptr. 263 , was an action for declaratory relief and injunction to determine whether plaintiff could enforce its rules, regulations, and the provision in a cemetery contract that prohibited portraits or images on gravestones. Although the rule is based on Jewish law, the custom or tradition of Jews from the Soviet Union is to have an image of the deceased engraved on the monument. The contract was negotiated by the son and son-in-law of the decedent, at which time the rule prohibiting etched pictures on monuments was specifially explained and pointed out to the son and son-in-law. The portrait of the decedent was placed on the monument by decedent's spouse, a recent emigre from the Soviet Union who did not read, speak, or write English. It was not disputed that the son and son-in-law were the surviving spouse's agents in negotiating the contract. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff based on its motion for summary judgment. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment for plaintiff. The son was alleged to have been emotionally and physically exhausted, bewildered, and distraught at the time he met with plaintiff's representatives to execute the contract. Plaintiff contended that triable issues of fact existed regarding whether the contract resulted from duress, mutual mistake, or deceit. The basis of this claim was that the son signed the contract while he was very upset due to the recent death of the father. However, the court of appeal held that grief arising from the death of a close relative does not vitiate contracts between cemeteries and the family of the decedent (231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 199) . Nor did any of the documents submitted indicate that defendant acted under a mistake, and unilateral mistake is not a defense to a contract action (231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 199) .

In re Terra (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 453, 244 P.2d 921 was a proceeding under Health & Safety Code § 7500 et seq. for the disinterment of three members of petitioner's family, including her deceased husband, based on breach of contract for perpetual care of the graves. The church that controlled the cemetary withheld its consent to the disinterment because petitioner wanted to comply with her deceased husband's wishes that he be creamated, and cremation was contrary to the tenets of the church. Although the graves were not originally cared for, they were being cared for when the petition was brought more than five years after the burial of petitioner's deceased spouse. The trial court approved the disinterment. The church appealed.

The court of appeal reversed based on Health & Safety Code § 7980, which provides that when burial is made in a religious cemetary, the rules, regulations, and discipline of the church control over the desires of the relatives (111 Cal. App. 2d 453, 461-463) . Petitioner told the cemetary or church representatives at the time of the burial that her husband wanted to be creamated. The court said that whatever lack of awareness of the restrictions or grief petitioner was subject to at the time the contract was negotiated, there was no undue influence on the part of the church (111 Cal. App. 2d 452, 462) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.24

§ 92.24 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Taking or Threatening to Take Legal Action With Knowledge of Falsity of Claim

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT _____ [DEFENDANT WAS MERELY EXERCISING A LEGAL RIGHT and/or THERE WAS NO UNLAWFUL ACT OR THREAT BY DEFENDANT] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE IS A TRIABLE ISSUE OF FACT AS TO WHETHER DEFENDANT OBTAINED PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT BY THREATENING TO TAKE LEGAL ACTION WITH KNOWLEDGE THAT THE ASSERTED CLAIM WAS FALSE.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. Granting a motion for summary judgment is proper only if the affidavits supporting the motion establish every element necessary to sustain a judgment in favor of the moving party, and the opposing party has not presented any facts which give rise to a triable issue. In ruling on the motion, the moving party's affidavits are strictly construed while the opposing party's are liberally construed, and doubts as to the propriety of granting the motion should be resolved in favor of the opposing party (Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Serv. Bureau, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 842, 851 fn. 6, 852, 94 Cal. Rptr. 785, 484 P.2d 953). The court may not properly grant summary judgment based on inferences reasonably deducible from the papers submitted, if these inferences are contradicted by other inferences which raise a triable issue offact (Hepp v. Lockheed-California Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 717-718, 150 Cal. Rptr. 408).

B. Contract Rescindable for Duress or Menace. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was obtained through duress or menace (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

C. Duress and Menace Defined. Duress consists of: (1) unlawful confinement of the person of the party, or of the husband or wife of that party, or of an ancestor, descendant, or adopted child of such party, husband, or wife; (2) unlawful detention of the property of any such person; or (3) confinement of such a person, lawful in form, but fraudulently obtained, or fraudulently made unjustly harassing or oppressive (Civ. Code § 1569). Menace consists of a threat of: (1) such duress as is specified in Subdivisions (1) and (3) of Civil Code Section 1569; (2) unlawful and violent injury to the person or property of any person specified in Civil Code Section 1569; or (3) injury to the character of any such person (Civ. Code § 1570). The courts have expanded the narrow statutory definitions of duress and menace under Civil Code Sections 1569 and 1570 so that, in general, a contract, deed, or other obligation, may be avoided on the ground of duress or menace if it is obtained by so oppressing a person by threats regarding his or her safety, liberty, or property, or the safety or liberty of a member of his or her family, as to deprive the person of the free exercise of his or her will (see Lewis v. Fahn (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 95, 99, 247 P.2d 831).

D. Duress Not Limited to Threats Against Person. Duress and menace are not limited to threats against the person; they may also consist of threats to business or property interests (Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 203, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12).

E. Knowledge of Falsity of Claim. The taking of legal action or a threat to take legal action, by a person with knowledge that the claim asserted is false, constitutes duress (Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 204, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under duress or menace when defendant has argued that summary judgment is proper, either because he or she was merely exercising a legal right or because there was no unlawful act or threat by defendant. The ground of opposition presented is that there is a triable issue of fact as to whether or not defendant threatened to take legal action against plaintiff with knowledge that the asserted legal claim was false.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be used in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 92.20 and 92.21.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including arguments showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

The points and authorities in this form may be modified to oppose a general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract on the ground of duress or menace.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be submitted by defendant in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication of the cause of action or affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because entered into under duress or menace.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgments generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure

Plaintiffs in Corwin v. Los Angeles Newspaper Serv. Bureau, Inc. (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 842, 94 Cal. Rptr. 785, 484 P.2d 953 , filed an action against defendants for violations of Bus. & Prof. Code §§ 16720, 16726 (prohibited restraints on trade under Cartwright Act). The trial court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and plaintiffs appealed from the judgment entered in favor of defendants. The Supreme Court concluded that the trial court had erroneously granted the summary judgment, and reversed the judgment. In reviewing the trialcourt's action, the Court commented that summary judgment is a drastic procedure to be used with caution so that it does not become a substitute for the open trial method of determining facts and repeated its previous summary of the rules governing summary judgment procedure set out in Paragraph A of this form (4 Cal. 3d 842, 851-852) .

Hepp v. Lockheed-California Co. (1978) 86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 150 Cal. Rptr. 408 , was an action for breach of contract and fraud. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal reviewed the rules for granting summary judgment. It relied on Code Civ. Proc. § 437c and 4 Witkin, California Procedure (2d ed), Proceedings Without Trial, in stating that summary judgment may not be granted on the basis of inferences which are contradicted by other inferences which raise a triable issue of fact (86 Cal. App. 3d 714, 717-718) .

[b] Duress and Menace Defined

In Lewis v. Fahn (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 95, 247 P.2d 831 , plaintiffs leased real property from defendants under a lease providing for a reduction in rent payments during the period while the premises were being remodeled. Plaintiffs alleged that notwithstanding this provision in the lease, defendants compelled plaintiffs to pay the full rental amount during this period by threatening to cancel the lease and evict plaintiffs if they did not pay the full amount. Plaintiffs brought an action to recover the amount of excess rent allegedly paid under duress. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint and entered judgment for defendants, from which plaintiffs appealed. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal noted that, by most modern authorities, a contract, deed, or any obligation may be avoided on the ground of duress if it is obtained by so oppressing a person through threats regarding his or her safety, liberty, or property, or the safety or liberty of a member of his or her family, as to deprive the person of the free exercise of his or her will and prevent the meeting of minds necessary to a valid contract. This is true, the court stated, whether the oppression causing the incompetence to act is produced by what was deemed duress at common law or by wrongful compulsion remediable by appeal to a court of equity (113 Cal. App. 2d 95, 99) . The court concluded that the complaint in this action stated a cause of action for the recovery of money paid under duress (113 Cal. App. 2d 95, 100) .

[c] Duress as Not Limited to Threats Against Person

The factual and procedural background of Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 , is discussed in § 92.22[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court held, inter alia, that plaintiffs had alleged a cause of action against the representatives of the estate of plaintiff husband's creditor for recovery of payments allegedly made under duress. The Court first noted that, under modern law, duress is not limited to threats against the person; it may also consist of threats to business or property interests. Thus, the Court stated, one who falsely clouds the title to real property and then seeks some consideration to remove the cloud is guilty of a wrongful act and may be compelled to restore the consideration recovered (53 Cal. 2d 195, 203) . The Court also rejected defendants' contention that no duress was involved because they were merely seeking to foreclose a mortgage, a legal remedy. The Court noted that although it is generally true that the taking of legal action or the threat to take action cannot constitute duress, the complaint in this case alleged more than a threat to take legal action. It alleged that defendants, in making these threats, knew that the claim asserted was false. The Court held that this constituted duress (53 Cal. 2d 195, 204) .

[d] Knowledge of Falsity of Claim

Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 , is discussed in § 92.24[3][c].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Duress and Menace Defined

In Alderson v. Alderson (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 450, 225 Cal. Rptr. 610 , the trial court invalidated several quitclaim deeds executed by plaintiff, on the grounds that they were signed under duress. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that threats of bodily harm made by the defendant, coupled with prior acts of violence by defendant against plaintiff, provided sufficient evidence to support a finding of duress (180 Cal. App. 3d 450, 464-465) .

[b] Duress Not Limited to Threats Against Person

In Crosstalk Productions Inc. v. Jacobson (1998) 65 Cal. App. 4th 631, 76 Cal. Rptr. 2d 615 , plaintiffs sued defendant for economic duress and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress, alleging that he demanded payments in connection with plaintiffs' prospective contract to provide video promotional spots to CBS, defendant's employer. The court discussed the doctrine of economic duress, stating that when a party pleads economic duress, that party must have had no "reasonable alternative" to the action it now seeks to avoid (generally, agreeing to a contract). Whether the party had a reasonable alternative is determined by examining whether a reasonably prudent person would follow an alternative course or might submit, and is a factual inquiry not susceptible to determination on demurrer (65 Cal. App. 4th 631, 644-645) . The court found that the complaint alleging extortion in "securing" a contract from CBS was ambiguous as to whether plaintiffs were admitting to paying commercial bribes to obtain a contract in violation of Penal Code § 641.3, and thus establishing the unclean hands defense, but could be amended to cure the ambiguity to clarify that "secure" meant simply safeguarding finalization of the contract. The court held thatbecause plaintiffs' complaint alleging economic duress was ambiguous but could be amended to cure the ambiguity, defendant was not entitled to a demurrer without leave to amend (65 Cal. App. 4th 631, 649) .

Although affirming the trial court's judgment that there was insufficient evidence of coercion or duress to set aside a settlement agreement and stipulated judgment, the court of appeal in Philippine Export & Foreign Loan Guarantee Corp. v. Chuidian (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 267 Cal. Rptr. 457 , discussed the doctrine of economic duress, saying that the issue is purely factual (218 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1082-1083) . Economic duress involves a wrongful act that is sufficiently coercive to cause a reasonably prudent person faced with no reasonable alternative to succumb to the perpetrator's pressure (218 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1078) . Economic duress may consist of threats of blackmail or bad-faith use of civil process, the assertion of a claim known to be false, or a bad-faith threat to breach a contract or to withhold a payment (218 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1077-1078) . Existence of duress is dependent on the particular circumstances and thus is not tested by the objective nature of threats, but by the state of mind induced in the victim. Evidentiary questions such as the victim's condition, age, sex, state of health, and mental characteristics are relevant (218 Cal. App. 3d 1058, 1078-1079) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.25

§ 92.25 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Threat of Criminal Prosecution as Duress

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.24.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT _____ [DEFENDANT WAS MERELY EXERCISING A LEGAL RIGHT or NO UNLAWFUL ACT OR THREAT BY DEFENDANT IS SHOWN] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE IS A TRIABLE ISSUE OF FACT AS TO WHETHER OR NOT DEFENDANT OBTAINED PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT TO THE CONTRACT BY THREATS OF CRIMINAL PROSECUTION.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 92.24, Paragraph A.]

B. Contract Rescindable for Duress or Menace. [See § 92.24, Paragraph B.]

C. Duress and Menace Defined. [See § 92.24, Paragraph C.]

D. Threat of Criminal Prosecution. An agreement obtained under threat of criminal prosecution may be rescinded since such a threat constitutes sufficient menace to negate the free consent required by Section 1565 of the Civil Code (Helmick v. Thomas (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 395, 397, 9 Cal. Rptr. 512 ; see Bridge v. Ruggles (1927) 202 Cal. 326, 331-332, 260 P. 553 ; Slocum v. Nelson (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37-38, 163 P.2d 888).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under duress or menace when defendant alleges that summary judgment is proper either because he or she was merely exercising a legal right or because there was no unlawful act or threat by defendant. The ground of opposition presented is that there is a triable issue of fact as to whether or not plaintiff's consent to the contract was obtained by defendant's threats to criminally prosecute plaintiff if he or she did not enter into the contract.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 92.20 and 92.21.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including arguments showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations that oppose the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract on the ground of duress or menace.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be submitted by defendant in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication of the cause of action or affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] inan action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because entered into under duress or menace.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgments, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Threat of Criminal Prosecution

Helmick v. Thomas (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 395, 9 Cal. Rptr. 512 , was an action to foreclose as mortgages two grant deeds given to secure a note. The jury brought in a special verdict, finding plaintiff guilty of fraud, menace, and undue influence in obtaining defendants' signatures on the note and deeds, as defendants had alleged in their answer and cross complaint. Plaintiff loaned money to defendants to use in their used car business, which plaintiff later discovered was in financial difficulty. Plaintiff suggested that defendants continue the business so all parties could get their money from it, but one of the defendants would not agree unless plaintiff left the business. Plaintiff agreed to do so if defendants gave him a note and security, including mortgages on their homes. Defendants declined to give the mortgages. Plaintiff accused defendants of being thieves and of stealing his money and threatened that they would go to jail if they did not sign the notes and mortgages. On appeal, the court of appeal noted that an agreement obtained under threat of criminal prosecution is not enforceable in that those threats constitute sufficient menace to negate the free consent required by Civ. Code § 1565 (187 Cal. App. 2d 395, 397) . The court found that there was abundant testimony that threats were made and consequently affirmed the trial court's judgment.

Bridge v. Ruggles (1927) 202 Cal. 326, 260 P. 553 , was an action by the payee against the maker and indorser of a promissory note. The maker defaulted, and the trial court found for plaintiff. On appeal, defendant indorser claimed, in part, that the indorsement of the note was obtained by duress. Defendant indorser had advanced to defendant maker a large sum of money. Defendant maker had been indebted to plaintiff for some time, and the note involved in the action was given to cover this amount. Defendant indorser claimed that she indorsed the note because the note's maker had told her that plaintiff would put the maker in jail if the note were not indorsed and that this would prevent the maker from working on property he had purchased with the money advanced by defendant indorser, resulting in a total loss.

On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that it is well settled that a threat of arrest on a criminal charge in aid of the collection of a debt constitutes menace which warrants rescission and may be set up as a defense to an action on the debt (202 Cal. 326, 331) . The defense is available even though the person threatened is, in fact, subject to a criminal charge since a threat of arrest is a gross perversion and abuse of criminal process, and no court will permit it to be used to enforce a settlement of a civil claim (202 Cal. 326, 331-332) . The Court noted, however, that the threat of arrest in the present case was directed to defendant maker and not defendant indorser. The Court held that, notwithstanding the maker's default and the consequent waiver by him of the defense of menace, and assuming that it would be competent for the indorser to allege and prove as a complete defense as to herself that the threatened arrest of the maker had rendered the note void, proof of the indorser's state of mind at the time of the indorsement would not be competent to prove menace practiced on the maker. Since defendant indorser's appeal was based on exclusion of evidence concerning her state of mind, the Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for plaintiff, stating that appellant's state of mind was not relevant to the issue, since no threat of arrest was made against her (202 Cal. 326, 332, 333) .

Slocum v. Nelson (1945) 72 Cal. App. 2d 33, 163 P.2d 888 , was an action on a promissory note. Defendant pleaded, as a defense, that he had been forced to sign the note as a compromise of a claim through coercion, intimidation, and threat of criminal prosecution. Plaintiff's motion for summary judgment was granted. The court of appeal reversed. Defendant, in his answer, alleged that plaintiff caused a criminal charge to be lodged against defendant, and that defendant had been arrested and was told by plaintiff and her representatives that if he signed the note, they would obtain a dismissal of the prosecution, but that otherwise it would continue. Defendant further alleged that the note was executed solely in order to avoid a continuance of the prosecution and that after the note was executed, the criminal charge was dismissed. On appeal, the court noted that where an instrument is executed or obtained through a clear threat of criminal prosecution, and particularly where this is carried to the extent of actually initiating a prosecution, the instrument so obtained is void and unenforceable (72 Cal. App. 2d 33, 37-38) . The court held that taking the allegations of defendant's affidavits as true, a clear triable issue of coercion and menace existed so that the trial court was incorrect in granting plaintiff's motion for summary judgment (72 Cal. App. 2d 33, 38-39) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Threat of Criminal Prosecution

The court of appeal in Bayscene Resident Negotiators v. Bayscene Mobilehome Park (1993) 15 Cal. App. 4th 119, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 , vacated an arbitration award because defendant mobilehome park owners signed the agreement to submit to arbitration under threat of criminal prosecution from the city attorney. There was a municipal ordinance, which the court found unconstitutional, thatrequired mobilehome rent rate disputes to be submitted to arbitration if they could not be resolved by negotiation. The court of appeal said that to form an enforceable contract, the parties' consent must be free [Civ. Code § 1565]. Apparent consent is not free when obtained, among other ways, through duress, menace, which includes threat of criminal prosecution, or fraud (15 Cal. App. 4th 119, 127, 129) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.26

§ 92.26 Opposing Defendant's Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Duress or Menace [Civ. Code §§ 1569, 1570]--Duress or Menace by Third Party

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.24.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT A THIRD PARTY, NOT DEFENDANT, WAS GUILTY OF THE ALLEGED DURESS OR MENACE SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAD REASON TO KNOW OF THE ALLEGED DURESS OR MENACE BEFORE HE OR SHE GAVE OR PROMISED IN GOOD FAITH SOMETHING OF VALUE IN THE TRANSACTION OR CHANGED HIS OR HER POSITION MATERIALLY BY REASON OF THE TRANSACTION.

A. Rules Governing Summary Judgment Procedure. [See § 92.24, Paragraph A.]

B. Duress of Third Party Renders Contract Voidable. Duress or menace of a third party renders a transaction voidable by a party induced thereby to enter into it if the other party has reason to know of the duress or menace before he or she has given or promised in good faith something of value in the transaction or has changed his or her position materially by reason of the transaction (see Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 206, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 ; Hall v. Department of Adoptions (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 898, 903, 121 Cal. Rptr. 223).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for summary judgment in an action to rescind a contract for duress or menace when defendant asserts that the alleged duress or menace was exerted by a third party and not by defendant. The ground of opposition presented is that defendant had reason to know of the duress or menace before he or she gave or promised in good faith something of value in the transaction or changed his or her position materially because of the transaction.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated, including arguments showing the insufficiency of the supporting affidavits or declarations, the existence of a triable issue of fact, or both. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract on the ground of duress or menace.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted by defendant in opposition to plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication of the cause of action or affirmative defense [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends the contract is voidable because entered into under duress, menace, or fraud, but plaintiff asserts that the alleged duress, menace, or fraud was exerted by a third person and not plaintiff.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to summary judgments, generally, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duress of Third Party Renders Contract Voidable

The factual and procedural background of Leeper v. Beltrami (1959) 53 Cal. 2d 195, 1 Cal. Rptr. 12, 347 P.2d 12 , is discussed in § 92.22[3][a]. Another issue addressed by the Supreme Court in that case was whether or not a cause of action was stated against the defendant who bought the property at one-third of its actual value. No active wrongdoing was alleged against this defendant, but he was alleged to have had knowledge of plaintiff wife's situation. The Court held that the wrongful acts of a third party constituting duress may be sufficient to allow rescission of a contract with a party, who, although not participating in those wrongful acts, had knowledge of the innocent party's position. The Court noted that Restatement of Contracts, §§ 476, 477, agreed with this statement. Consequently, the Court concluded that the allegations that defendant had knowledge of plaintiff wife's predicament were sufficient to give rise to the right of rescission,and the complaint, as far as substantive law was concerned, stated a cause of action against that defendant (53 Cal. 2d 195, 205-206) .

In Hall v. Department of Adoptions (1975) 47 Cal. App. 3d 898, 121 Cal. Rptr. 223 , plaintiff sought to set aside her relinquishment of her child to defendant county agency for the purpose of allowing the child to be placed for adoption. The trial court found for plaintiff. On appeal, defendant contended that the complaint failed to state a cause of action since it alleged that plaintiff was unaware of the consequences of her act of relinquishment because of emotional distress resulting from abuse by her husband and that plaintiff was induced to sign because of duress exerted by her husband. There were no allegations charging defendant with having engaged in any wrongful conduct towards plaintiff, with having participated in any wrongful conduct, or with having any knowledge that any wrongful conduct had been directed towards plaintiff to induce her to sign the relinquishment. In reversing, the court of appeal held that the complaint was insufficient to state a cause of action against defendant. The court noted that duress or fraud of a third party renders a transaction voidable by a party induced thereby to enter into it, if the other party has reason to know of the fraud or duress before he or she has given or promised in good faith something of value in the transaction or changed his or her position materially by reason of the transaction (47 Cal. App. 3d 898, 903) . The Court found, however, that since the complaint contained only a bare conclusion that defendant had committed fraud and did not allege specific facts showing knowledge of or participation in the husband's wrongful conduct, it was insufficient to state a cause of action against defendant (47 Cal. App. 3d 898, 903-905) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
A. Duress and Menace

9-92 California Points & Authorities §§ 92.27-92.39

[Reserved]

§§ 92.27[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.40

§ 92.40 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Materiality of Fact Allegedly Misrepresented

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE FACT(S) ALLEGEDLY MISREPRESENTED _____ [WAS or WERE] MATERIAL.

A. Motion for New Trial. On the application of the party aggrieved, the _____ [verdict or decision] may be vacated, in whole or in part, and a new trial may be granted, on all or some of the issues, on the ground that the evidence is insufficient to justify the _____ [verdict or decision], if substantial rights of the aggrieved party are materially affected thereby (Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)).

B. Elements of Actual Fraud. Actual fraud, as the basis for avoiding a contract, consists of (1) a false representation or concealment concerning a material fact (or in some cases, an opinion) that is susceptible of knowledge, (2) made with knowledge of its falsity or without sufficient knowledge on the subject to warrant a representation, (3) with the intent to induce the person to whom it is made to act on it, (4) actually causing that person to act in reliance on therepresentation, and (5) resulting in damage to that person (see South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 765, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286).

C. Materiality of Fact Misrepresented. To rescind a contract on the ground of fraud it must be shown that the alleged misrepresentation was of a material fact (Chalas v. Andersen (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 456, 13 Cal. Rptr. 257).

D. Test of Materiality. The fact misrepresented or suppressed is deemed material if it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose of the party deceived in entering into the contract (Thomas v. Hawkins (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 377, 379, 215 P.2d 495), or if it is such that the contract would not have been entered into without it (Chalas v. Andersen (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 456, 13 Cal. Rptr. 257).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when the evidence is insufficient to show that the fact allegedly misrepresented was material.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for fraud when plaintiff fails to allege facts showing the fact misrepresented was material.

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to support a motion by plaintiff for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant alleges that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 92.45 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for new trial supported by this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Actual Fraud

In South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286 , defendant sought to avoid liability on a contract entered into with plaintiff utility for the extension of a gas main into a tract defendant was developing. Defendant contended, in part, that the contract was not enforceable because the utility fraudulently represented that the charges provided for in the contract did not exceed the maximum allowable rate for such extensions as established by the Public Utilities Commission. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment and at page 765, stated that the elements of actual fraud, whether as the basis of the remedy in contract or tort, are: (1) a false representation or concealment of a material fact (or, in some cases, an opinion) susceptible of knowledge, (2) made with knowledge of its falsity or without sufficient knowledge on the subject to warrant a representation, (3) with the intent to induce the person to whom it is made to act on it, (4) causing that person to act in reliance on the representation, (5) to his or her damage. The court held that defendant was not entitled to relief from the contract because it had suffered no damage from plaintiff's alleged fraud (25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 765) .

[b] Materiality of Fact Misrepresented

In Chalas v. Andersen (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 13 Cal. Rptr. 257 , plaintiffs entered into a contract with defendants for the sale of a retail poultry business. At the time the sale was being negotiated, defendants represented to plaintiffs that the profits of the store were actually greater than the records indicated because defendants, who also owned a wholesale poultry business, had charged a premium per pound on chicken sold to the retail business in order to absorb a portion of the store's profits into the wholesale operation. After taking over operation of the business, plaintiffs became convinced that defendants had falsely represented the profit margin of the business and that the amount of the premium was less than represented by defendants. Thereafter, plaintiffs brought an action to rescind the contract, on the grounds of misrepresentation and fraud. Defendants admitted making the representations but alleged that they believed the statements to be true. They cross complained for the balance due on the contract of sale. The trial court entered judgment denying rescission and awardingdefendants the sum asked by the cross complaint.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment, noting that whether or not the difference between the amount of the premium represented and the amount actually charged constituted a material misrepresentation under the facts of the case was a question of fact for the trial court. The court noted that to make out a case of fraud, it must appear that the alleged false representation was of a material fact, and to be material, the misrepresentation must be such that the contract would not have been entered into without it (192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 456) . The court concluded that the trial court had sufficient evidence on which to base its finding that the misrepresentation was not material and that plaintiffs would still have purchased the store even had they known the true differential (192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 456) .

[c] Test of Materiality

In Thomas v. Hawkins (1950) 96 Cal. App. 2d 377, 215 P.2d 495 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant to partition certain real property, claiming that she owned an undivided one-half interest therein. Defendant filed an answer and cross complaint alleging, in part, that he had purchased the property and placed it in the joint names of the parties in reliance on plaintiff's representation that she was not married and would marry him. The cross complaint further alleged that this representation was false and was made with the intent to induce defendant to purchase the property and place it in their names as tenants in common. Defendant prayed that he be declared sole owner of the property. The trial court found substantially in accord with these allegations and rendered judgment for defendant. In affirming the judgment and holding that the evidence supported the trial court's findings with respect to the alleged fraud, the court of appeal noted that false representations, the willful suppression of material facts, and the making of a promise without any intention of performing it, if committed by a party to a contract with intent to deceive another party thereto or to induce him or her to enter the contract, constitute fraud. The court stated that the fact represented or suppressed, as the case may be, is deemed material if it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose of the party deceived in entering into the contract (96 Cal. App. 2d 377, 379) .

Chalas v. Andersen (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 452, 13 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in § 92.40[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Materiality of Misrepresented Fact

The court of appeal in Merced County Mut. Fire Ins. Co. v. State of California (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 284 Cal. Rptr. 680 , reversed a judgment entered by the trial court after it sustained an insured's demurrer without leave to amend. The insurer had sought to rescind an additional insured endorsement in favor of the State of California because it claimed the insured had misrepresented to it that the endorsement was necessary under the terms of its lease of property from the state. Both mistake and misrepresentation were relied on in the complaint as bases for rescission. In reversing, the court noted that the question of materiality of a mistake or representation is a question of law (233 Cal. App. 3d 765, 772) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentMotions for Summary JudgmentGeneral OverviewContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.41

§ 92.41 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Actual Reliance by Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY RELIED ON THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Elements of Actual Fraud. [See § 92.40, Paragraph B.]

C. Reliance on Misrepresentation Required. To justify rescission of a contract on the ground of misrepresentation of a material fact, it must be shown that the party seeking to rescind relied on the representation and that he or she would not have entered into the contract without it (Wood v. Kalbaugh (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 926, 932, 114 Cal. Rptr. 673).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by actual fraud, when the evidence is insufficient to show that plaintiff actually relied on the alleged misrepresentation.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing therelationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

The points and authorities in this form may be modified to support a demurrer to a complaint for rescission of a contract for fraud when plaintiff has failed to allege facts showing that he or she actually relied on the alleged misrepresentation [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)].

With appropriate modifications, this form may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when the defendant alleges that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Misrepresentation Required

In Wood v. Kalbaugh (1974) 39 Cal. App. 3d 926, 114 Cal. Rptr. 673 , respondents had brought an action for restitution of a down payment made pursuant to a contract for the sale of a house. Respondents asserted they were justified in unilaterally rescinding the contract because of a misrepresentation made to them by appellants' real estate agent. The agent had told respondents that everything in the house was in perfect shape. After respondents deposited the down payment into escrow, they discovered that the gas could not be turned on because of a dangerous leak in the gas line. When informed of the leak, appellants fixed the gas line, but respondents refused to make any further payments on the house and attempted to rescind the contract. The trial court entered judgment for respondents.

The court of appeal reversed, holding, inter alia, that the trial court had erroneously granted respondents restitution of their down payment without any evidence to support the implied finding that they actually relied on the representation that the house was in perfect shape when they agreed to buy it. The court noted that to justify the rescission of a contract on the ground that there was a misrepresentation of a material fact, it must be shown that the party seeking to rescind relied on the representation and that he would not have entered into the contract without it (39 Cal. App. 3d 926, 932) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud &

MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.42

§ 92.42 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Evidence Insufficient to Show Plaintiff's Reliance Was Justified

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF'S RELIANCE ON THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION WAS JUSTIFIED.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Elements of Actual Fraud. [See § 92.40, Paragraph B.]

C. Reliance Must Be Justified. To rescind a contract allegedly induced by a fraudulent misrepresentation, it must be shown not only that plaintiff acted in reliance on the misrepresentation, but that he or she was justified in his or her reliance (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

[Optional] D. Statement of Opinion. A statement of mere opinion may not be justifiably relied on as the basis for relief from a contract on the ground of fraud (Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 569, 203 P.2d 758 ; Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

[Optional] E. Misrepresentations of Law. In the absence of a relationship of trust and confidence between the parties, misrepresentations of law do not constitute fraud and do not furnish a ground for rescission of a contract (Haviland v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1916) 172 Cal. 601, 608, 158 P. 328).

[Optional] F. Reliance Not Justified if Independent Investigation Made. A party cannot justifiably rely on a misrepresentation if, prior to entering into the contract, he or she makes an independent investigation which, if performed with reasonable diligence, should disclose the true facts (Carroll v. Dungey (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254, 35 Cal. Rptr. 681 ; Teipel v. Southern Nev. Vending Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 671, 674, 268 P.2d 1081).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when the evidence was insufficient to show that plaintiff's reliance on the alleged misrepresentation was justified.

Optional Paragraph D may be included if the alleged misrepresentation was merely a statement of opinion. Optional Paragraph E may be inserted when the alleged misrepresentation was a misrepresentation of law. Optional Paragraph F may be included when plaintiff was precluded from justifiably relying on the alleged misrepresentation because he or she made an independent investigation which should have revealed the true facts.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for fraud when it appears on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice, that plaintiff's reliance on the alleged misrepresentation was not justified.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in §§ 92.46 -92.53 may be used in appropriate cases to oppose a motion for new trial supported by this memorandum.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance Must Be Justified

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , was an action in part to have a mortgage foreclosure sale set aside and for rescission of an oil lease. Defendants successfully moved for judgment on the pleadings. Plaintiffs' complaint alleged that they executed a note and mortgage on a lot and that seven years later, defendants secured a final judgment of foreclosure and asked plaintiffs to meet with them concerning the disposition of the property. At that meeting, defendants' attorney told plaintiffs that their land had been sold at an execution sale to two of the defendants. The complaint further alleged that plaintiffs believed this representation and, therefore, joined in executing an oil lease of the property to a third defendant and made no attempt to pay the mortgage debt or to exercise the equity of redemption after the foreclosure sale, although during this period many persons offered to lease the land from them with advances sufficient to cover the mortgage indebtedness. The complaint further alleged that no execution actually had been levied on the land and that defendants knew that the representation that the land had been sold to two of the defendants was false, and was made for the purpose of inducing plaintiffs to enter into the lease and to not pay off the mortgage indebtedness or exercise their right to redeem.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that plaintiffs' complaint sufficiently established the right to relief on the basis of a fraudulent misrepresentation. The Court noted the well-established rule that a person who has been induced by such a misrepresentation to enter into a contract or to make a conveyance may have the contract or conveyance set aside and secure a restitution of the benefits lost to him by the transaction. The Court stated, however, that it must appear not only that plaintiff acted in reliance on the misrepresentation, but that his or her reliance was justified, and that plaintiff may not justifiably rely on mere statements of opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true state of facts, unless the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of confidence and trust. If, however, the opinion or legal conclusion misrepresents the facts on which it is based or implies the existence of acts which are nonexistent, it constitutes an actionable misrepresentation (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414) . The Court concluded that plaintiffs' allegations were sufficient in that they alleged a misrepresentation made by defendants through their agent with knowledge that it was false and with the intention of inducing plaintiffs to rely on it and that plaintiffs did act in reliance thereon. The Court stated that the misrepresentation was not such that its falsity must have been so obvious to the plaintiffs as to preclude any justifiable reliance thereon by them (18 Cal. 2d 409, 415) . The representation that a levy of execution and sale of the property had occurred was a false statement of fact which was not rendered less actionable because it also contained legal conclusions (18 Cal. 2d 409, 416) .

[b] Statement of Opinion

In Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 203 P.2d 758 , plaintiff brought an action for damages based on three causes of action including, inter alia, fraud in connection with the sale of a truck. The alleged fraud was predicated, in part, on the alleged misrepresentation by defendant's agent that the truck should be in good shape because defendant had recently spent a large sum of money to have it repaired. In fact, the truck's motor was not in suitable operating condition. In affirming a judgment for the defendant as to the cause of action for fraud, the Supreme Court held that this particular representation was merely the agent'sopinion, based on the expenditure for repairs, and did not form the basis for a cause of action for fraud (33 Cal. 2d 564, 569) .

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , is discussed in § 92.42[3][a].

[c] Misrepresentations of Law

In Haviland v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1916) 172 Cal. 601, 158 P. 328 , plaintiff employee brought an action for personal injuries alleged to have been caused by defendant employer's negligence and recovered a judgment in his favor. On appeal, defendant contended, inter alia, that plaintiff had, for consideration, agreed to settle and release defendant from all claims and liabilities arising out of the injury. Plaintiff asserted that he was induced to sign the release by fraud on the part of an employee of defendant and that the release was thus without effect. Plaintiff alleged that the employee had falsely represented to plaintiff that the release was not binding on plaintiff, but was merely a matter of form which must be signed in order to get plaintiff back on defendant's payroll, and that plaintiff relied on these statements in signing the release. In reversing the judgment for plaintiff, the Supreme Court held that the representations did not constitute fraud in the legal sense. They were not statements of fact, but at most misrepresentations of law. The Court held that such misrepresentations do not amount to fraud and do not furnish a ground for rescission of a contract, at least when no relationship of trust and confidence exists between the parties (172 Cal. 601, 608) .

[d] Reliance Not Justified if Independent Investigation Made

In Carroll v. Dungey (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 35 Cal. Rptr. 681 , plaintiffs brought an action for rescission of a contract for purchase of a water company based, in part, on alleged misrepresentations by defendants concerning the newness of the pipes in the company's water system. The trial court found that plaintiffs were precluded, in part, from relying on the representations because they had made an independent investigation of Public Utilities Commission records, and entered judgment for defendants. On appeal, the court of appeal noted that a misrepresentation does not constitute actionable fraud unless plaintiff relied on it, and plaintiff cannot claim reliance if he or she makes an independent investigation which, if performed with reasonable diligence, should disclose the true facts (223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 254) . The court noted, however, that in this case the only documents on file with the Public Utilities Commission which would have indicated the falsity of the representations were not in existence when the plaintiffs made their investigation. The court held that an independent investigation does not preclude reliance when the falsity of the statement is not apparent from an inspection. Thus, the court concluded, plaintiffs could not be charged with knowledge inferrable from a document which was not in existence at the time they made their investigation (223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255-256) . Accordingly, the court reversed the judgment.

In Teipel v. Southern Nev. Vending Co. (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 671, 268 P.2d 1081 , plaintiffs sued to rescind a contract to purchase a slot machine, pinball game, and phonograph recording route business on the ground of fraud. Prior to purchasing the business, plaintiffs requested and were permitted to inspect all the books and records of the business. When the income from the business proved to be less than was represented by defendants, plaintiffs attempted to rescind. The trial court entered judgment for defendants. On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that when one undertakes an investigation and proceeds with it without hindrance, it will be assumed that he or she continued until acquiring all the knowledge desired, and was satisfied with what he or she learned. The person making the investigation may not then be heard to say that he or she relied on the representations of the other party. The court held that the evidence in this case amply supported the trial court's findings that plaintiffs had investigated defendants' records to their fullest satisfaction, that no effort was made to cover up any matter, and that defendants were not guilty of fraud (124 Cal. App. 2d 671, 674) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Justified if Independent Investigation Made

In Carpenter v. Hamilton (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 69, 62 P.2d 1397 , plaintiffs sued to recover damages for alleged fraud by which they were induced to purchase certain real property. The trial court denied defendant's motions for a directed verdict and for judgment notwithstanding the verdict and entered judgment for plaintiffs. On appeal, defendant contended that plaintiffs did not rely on and were not induced to purchase the property by defendant's representations concerning it, that plaintiffs had ample opportunity to inspect the property and did inspect it several times, and that plaintiffs purchased the property in reliance on their own inspection. The court of appeal reversed the judgment. It first noted that plaintiffs had a right to rely on the representations made to them concerning matters of fact which were unknown to them, without making any inquiry concerning the truth thereof, and had they done so, defendant could not have evaded the consequences of any fraudulent statement he might have made by showing that the means of ascertaining the truth were easily available to plaintiffs. However, the court held, the right to rely on representations does not exist where a purchaser chooses to inspect the property before purchase, and, in making the inspection, learns the true facts, for the obvious reason that he has not been defrauded unless he has been misled, and he has not been misled where he has acted with actual or imputed knowledge of the true facts (18 Cal. App. 2d 69, 71) . The court then examined the evidence and held that the evidence admitted onlythe conclusion that plaintiffs had relied not on defendant's representations but on their own inspection from which the falsity of the representations should have been apparent (18 Cal. App. 2d 69, 73-76) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.43

§ 92.43 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Insufficient Evidence of Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF WAS INJURED BY THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Elements of Actual Fraud. [See § 92.40, Paragraph B.]

C. Injury Required. A party may not be relieved from a contract induced by fraud unless he or she has been injured by the fraud (Norris v. Norris (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 726, 734, 123 P.2d 847).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when the evidence is insufficient to show that plaintiff was injured by the alleged fraud.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for fraud when plaintiff fails to allege facts showing that he or she was injured by the alleged fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be submitted in support of plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant asserts that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injury Required

Norris v. Norris (1942) 50 Cal. App. 2d 726, 123 P.2d 847 , was an appeal from a judgment awarding respondent a divorce from appellant on the ground of cruelty. Appellant contended, inter alia, that the trial court erred in concluding that a property settlement agreement entered into was fair and just and in assigning to respondent all of the community property not disposed of by the agreement. Appellant contended that the agreement was procured by fraud and undue influence. The court of appeal held that although it disagreed with the trial court's finding that the agreement was not obtained through undue influence and concealment, appellant was nevertheless not entitled to relief from the agreement. The court noted that one will not be relieved from a fraudulent contract unless he or she has been injured by it. The court concluded that the evidence did not show any material injury to appellant because the property received by appellant and the awards made by the decree were substantial payments and may well have exceeded whatever might have been awarded appellant had the community property been divided under the Civil Code instead of pursuant to the agreement. The court therefore affirmed the judgment (50 Cal. App. 2d 726, 734) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Injury Required

In South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286 , defendants contracted with plaintiff utility for extension of a gas main into a tract of land defendants were developing. Plaintiff brough an action to recover the balance due on the contract, and the trial court entered judgment in its favor. On appeal, defendants contended, inter alia, that plaintiff was precluded from recovering under the contract because defendants had been induced to enter into the contract by plaintiff's fraudulent representationsthat the amount charged for the gas main extension did not exceed the maximum rate permitted by the Public Utilities Commission. The evidence showed that when defendants discovered the overcharge, after the contract had been entered into and the work completed, plaintiff acquiesced in the lower rate, but defendants refused to pay plaintiff anything. The court of appeal noted that the trial court properly found no damages resulting from the alleged fraud because the utility was not receiving more than the legal rate. The court held that fraud without damage furnishes no ground for action, nor is fraud without damage a defense (25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 765) . Accordingly, the court affirmed the judgment.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.44

§ 92.44 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Constructive Fraud Based on Breach of Duty [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]--Failure to Show Existence of Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THE EXISTENCE OF A CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Confidential Relationship Required. Under Section 1573(1) of the Civil Code, plaintiff must show that there is a confidential relationship between the parties in order to rescind a contract for constructive fraud (Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 494, 36 Cal. Rptr. 806).

C. Confidential Relationship Defined. A confidential relationship exists whenever trust and confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another (Estate of Cover (1922) 188 Cal. 133, 143, 204 P. 583 ; O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 153, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245).

[Optional] D. Employment Relationship Not Confidential. No presumption of a confidential relationship arises from the fact that parties to a contract are employer and employee (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 129, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[Optional] E. Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential. The solitary fact of family relationship does not of itself establish the existence of a fiduciary or confidential relationship (Peters v. Papoulacos (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 794, 32 Cal. Rptr. 689).

[Optional] F. No Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Prospective Marriage Partners. No confidential relationship is presumed between prospective parties to a marriage (Fernandez v. Fernandez (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 782, 790, 15 Cal. Rptr. 374).

[Optional] G. Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship. Friendship, affection, or intimacy existing between two parties does not necessarily create a confidential relationship (Wilson v. Sampson (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 453, 459, 205 P.2d 753).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract on the ground of constructive fraud predicated on breach of a duty owed to plaintiff when the evidence is insufficient to show a confidential relationship between the parties.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract for constructive fraud when plaintiff has failed to allege facts showing the existence of a confidential relationship between the parties.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because plaintiff was guilty of constructive fraud in obtaining defendant's consent to the contract.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Confidential Relationship Required

The factual and procedural background of Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 36 Cal. Rptr. 806 , is discussed in § 92.101[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal rejected plaintiffs' contention that innocent misrepresentation is a form of constructive fraud and that plaintiffs were therefore entitled to prove innocent misrepresentation under the count of their complaint which alleged constructive fraud. The court noted that by the clear language of Civ. Code § 1573(1), there must be a breach of duty to give rise to constructive fraud and that the duty must be one created by a confidential relationship (224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 494) . Thus, the court held that innocent misrepresentation itself is not constructive fraud (224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 495) . The court held, however, that innocent misrepresentation was a type of mistake and thus supported rescission on that ground (224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 495-497) .

[b] Confidential Relationship Defined

Estate of Cover (1922) 188 Cal. 133, 204 P. 583 , is discussed in § 92.71[3][e].

O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245 , is discussed in § 92.71[4][a].

[c] Employment Relationship Not Confidential

The factual and procedural background of Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.20[3][a]. Plaintiff attempted to allege constructive fraud by asserting the existence of a confidential relationship between plaintiff teacher and the school superintendent and principal as agents of defendant, plaintiff's employer. The court of appeal stated that such a confidential relationship may exist whenever a person with justification places trust and confidence in the integrity and fidelity of another. However, plaintiff set forth no facts to support his conclusion of a confidential relationship other than the fact that the parties bore the relationship of employer and employee. The court held that no presumption of a confidential relationship arises from the bare fact that parties to a contract are employer and employee; additional ties must be brought out in order to create such a presumption. The court observed that the absence of a confidential relationship between employer and employee is especially apparent where, as in the factual situation involved in this case, the parties were negotiating to bring about a termination of their relationship, since each party is expected to look after his own interests, and a lack of confidentiality is implicit in the subject matter of their dealings. The court concluded that the complaint did not allege a cause of action for constructive fraud (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 129) .

[d] Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential

In Peters v. Papoulacos (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 32 Cal. Rptr. 689 , plaintiff brought an action to recover a sum of money from defendant. Defendant, the son of plaintiff's cousin, was a Greek citizen residing in the U.S. under a student visa. He had married a U.S. citizen and desired to go to Canada and reenter the U.S. on a basis of an entry other than that of a student. Plaintiff, who had sponsored defendant's previous immigration, sent defendant a sum of money. In his complaint, plaintiff alleged that the sum of money which he sought to recover was advanced to defendant as a loan so that defendant could demonstrate to immigration authorities that he had financial responsibility sufficient to permit reentry to the U.S. Defendant contended that the money was a wedding gift. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, finding that the transfer of the money was a gift.

On appeal, plaintiff contended, inter alia, that the evidence at trial showed a confidential relationship between the parties and, therefore, raised a presumption of undue influence by defendant which was not rebutted by him. In rejecting this contention and affirming the judgment, the court of appeal noted that the solitary fact of family relationship will not of itself establish the existence of a fiduciary or confidential relation raising a presumption of undue influence. Whether or not such a relation exists between members of the same family depends on all the facts and circumstances of the case, and unless one party actually dominates the other, so that the other depends on him for advice and guidance, a confidential relation does not exist, even though the parties are closely related by family (218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 794) .

The court concluded that the evidence in this case fell far short of constituting a substantial showing that any confidential relationship existed between the parties, on which could be rested a presumption that the transmission of the money was the result of undue influence exercised by defendant (218 Cal. App. 2d 791, 794-795) .

[e] No Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Prospective Marriage Partners

In Fernandez v. Fernandez (1961) 194 Cal. App. 2d 782, 15 Cal. Rptr. 374 , the trial court entered judgment granting plaintiff a divorce, but held, pursuant to an antenuptial agreement, that there was no community property. The parties had been married in Mexico, but had subsequently moved to California. At the time the parties were married, Mexican law required that prospective parties to a marriage enter into an agreement with respect to their property rights, declaring either that all their property be separate or that it be jointly owned by the spouses. The agreement entered into between plaintiff and defendant provided that the parties' marriage was to be contracted under the rule of absolute separate property. At the time the parties were married, plaintiff was 19 years old and defendant was 45 years old.

Plaintiff appealed from the portion of the judgment decreeing that there was no community property, contending, inter alia, that a confidential relationship existed between the parties at the time the premarital agreement was entered into and that defendant had breached his fiduciary duty to plaintiff. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this contention. The court held that her position was without merit because the parties were not yet married at the time the agreement was entered into, and neither the law of Mexico nor the law of California presumes the existence of a confidential relationship between prospective parties to a marriage (194 Cal. App. 2d 782, 790) .

[f] Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship

In Wilson v. Sampson (1949) 91 Cal. App. 2d 453, 205 P.2d 753 , plaintiff's guardian brought an action to quiet title to certain real and personal property. The complaint alleged, in part, that at the time plaintiff had transferred the property in question to defendant, she was of unsound mind and laboring under the false belief that she was being persecuted by gangsters and others, and that defendant induced plaintiff to transfer the property to him without consideration by representing that if she did so, he would keep such persons from persecuting her. The complaint also alleged that plaintiff reposed trust and confidence in defendant. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, finding, inter alia, that defendant had paid for the property transferred and that there was no confidential relationship between plaintiff and defendant.

On appeal, plaintiff attacked the trial court's findings as not supported by the evidence. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the findings were supported by substantial evidence. Addressing itself to the question of whether a confidential relationship existed, the court noted that even the evidence set forth in plaintiff's brief did not establish a confidential relationship. That evidence showed only that defendant roomed at plaintiff's rooming house and that they frequently sat together and "talked very friendly." Plaintiff also testified that defendant made love to her. The court held, however, that friendship, affection, and even intimacy existing between two parties does not constitute a confidential relationship (91 Cal. App. 2d 453, 459) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Confidential Relationship Required

The factual background of Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 124 Cal. Rptr. 577 , is discussed in § 92.94[3][a]. Plaintiffs contended, inter alia, that the complaint stated a cause of action for constructive fraud. The court of appeal held that the complaint failed to allege the statutory elements of constructive fraud. The breach of duty referred to in Civ. Code § 1573 (defining constructive fraud) must be one created by a confidential relationship (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 889) . The court found that the facts alleged by plaintiffs did not show the existence of a confidential relationship between plaintiffs and defendant.

[b] Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential

The factual and procedural background of Kudokas v. Balkus (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 103 Cal. Rptr. 318 , is discussed in § 92.73[3][b]. In holding that the trial court's finding of no confidential relationship was supported by the evidence, the court of appeal noted that a confidential relationship exists when one party gains the confidence of the other and purports to act or advise with the other's interests in mind, and that such a relationship is particularly likely to exist when there is a family relationship or one of friendship. The court observed, however, that although kinship or friendship are elements, they do not necessarily create a confidential relationship (26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 750) . The court then reviewed the evidence and concluded that although there was an association of kinship and friendship extending back to the parties' common origin in Lithuania, the trial court was nevertheless justified in viewing the sale as an arm's length transaction between the seller and self-reliant buyers (26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 750-751) .

In Townsend v. Wingler (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 64, 249 P.2d 613 , plaintiff brought an action against his daughter and her husband, alleging that he had conveyed two parcels of real property to her as collateral security for a loan which had subsequently been repaid. Plaintiff sought reconveyance of the property and an accounting. Defendants denied that the property was conveyed as collateral security for any loan, alleging that the property was conveyed to them for consideration pursuant to a written agreement between the parties whereby defendants agreed to provide funds to plaintiff to carry on certain litigation he was then engaged in and to pay plaintiff a certain sum for the rest of his life. Defendants further contended that they had complied with their obligations under the agreement and that plaintiff had received and accepted, and continued to accept, benefits under the agreement. The trial court rendered judgment for defendants.

On appeal, plaintiff sought for the first time to attack the transaction on the grounds of undue influence, fraud, and coercion. Plaintiff contended that there was a presumption that the deeds and the contract between him and his daughter were vitiated on these grounds and that the burden was on defendants to establish that they were free from such taint. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and rejected this contention. The court held that the relationship of parent and child, per se, does not create any inference of imposition, undue influence, or fraud (114 Cal. App. 2d 64, 67) . The burden was thus on plaintiff to show, as a fact, that the deeds he prepared and signed, were induced through fraud, undue influence, or coercion on the part of defendants. The court observed that plaintiff did not prove such facts, nor did he raise any such issue by his pleadings or during the trial. The court concluded that to permit plaintiff to change his theory of recovery on appealwould be manifestly unfair to defendants (114 Cal. App. 2d 64, 68) .

[c] Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship

Kudokas v. Balkus (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 103 Cal. Rptr. 318 , is discussed in § 92.44[4][b].

In Mead v. Smith (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 1, 234 P.2d 705 , plaintiff, as executor, sought to set aside a deed to real property executed by the decedent to defendants. Plaintiff alleged that a friendly, confidential, and/or fiduciary relationship existed between defendants and decedent; that decedent, who was 81 years old at the time, was mentally and physically feeble; and that defendants took advantage of their confidential relationship to gain unlawful benefits at the expense of decedent. The trial court found that defendants had been tenants of decedent, occupying an apartment on the rear of the property for several years prior to decedent's death; decedent had occupied an apartment on the front of the property. The trial court also found that decedent was not mentally incompetent, and that the deed was executed voluntarily and with a clear understanding of the material facts, and that while the property conveyed was reasonably worth more than the price paid by defendants, the consideration for decedent's executing the deed was not only the money, but also the affection that decedent had towards defendants for their kindness and helpfulness to him. The trial court entered judgment for defendants.

On appeal, plaintiff argued, inter alia, that friendly relations constitute confidential relations in equity and that, in such cases, there exists a presumption of undue influence which shifted to respondents the burden of proving that the transaction was fair, free from fraud or undue influence, and made by a person in full possession of his faculties. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this argument. The court held that the mere fact that friendly relations exist between the parties to a transaction did not necessarily carry with it the chain of results contended by plaintiff. The court noted that in this case the trial court had found, on substantial evidence, that defendants did not stand in the relationship of attorney in fact, agent, or employee with respect to decedent. The court concluded that although relations between the parties were friendly, such relations furnished a reasonable motive for decedent's actions rather than a ground for condemning the transaction as fraudulent (106 Cal. App. 2d 1, 4) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.45

§ 92.45 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--False Representation Made to Prospective Purchaser of Business Concerning Income or Profits of Business as Material

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION FOR NEW TRI-
vs.	)	AL
_____ [name],	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)]
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE FACT MISREPRESENTED WAS NOT MATERIAL SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE WAS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION CONCERNED THE INCOME OR PROFITS OF THE BUSINESS TO BE PURCHASED BY PLAINTIFF AND WAS THEREFORE A MISREPRESENTATION OF A MATERIAL

FACT.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. A new trial must not be granted on the ground of insufficiency of the evidence to justify the _____ [verdict or decision] unless, after weighing the evidence, the court is convinced from the entire record, including reasonable inferences therefrom, that the _____ [jury or court] clearly should have reached a different _____ [verdict or decision] (Code Civ. Proc. § 657).

B. Rescission for Fraud. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was obtained through fraud (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

C. Fraudulent Acts. Actual fraud, for purposes of the provisions governing rescission of a contract for fraud, may consist of any of the following acts committed by or with the connivance of a party to the contract, with intent to deceive another party to the contract or to induce him or her to enter into the contract: (1) the suggestion, as a fact, of that which is not true by one who does not believe it to be true; (2) the positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, although he or she believes it to be true; (3) the suppression of that which is true, by one having knowledge or belief of the fact; (4) a promise made without any intention of performing it; or (5) any other act fitted to deceive (Civ. Code § 1572).

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. One material false statement justifiably relied on by plaintiff is sufficient ground for rescission of a contract (Hefferan v. Freebairn (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 715, 721, 214 P.2d 386 ; Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 138, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845).

E. False Representation Concerning Income or Profits of Business as Material. A false representation to the prospective purchaser of a business concerning the income or profits from the business is a misrepresentation of a material fact which may be the basis for rescission of the contract (Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 295-296, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when defendant has asserted in the motion that the fact allegedly misrepresented (or concealed) was not material. The ground of opposition presented is that the misrepresentation concerned the income or profits of the business plaintiff was to purchase under the contract and therefore concerned a material fact.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.40.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)], in an action for damages for breach of contract, when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient

In Hefferan v. Freebairn (1950) 34 Cal. 2d 715, 214 P.2d 386 , plaintiff buyer brought an action to rescind a contract for the sale of a restaurant business, cancel a note and chattel mortgage, and obtain restitution of a cash payment on the ground that defendant induced plaintiff to enter into the contract by making numerous fraudulent misrepresentations concerning the profits of the business and other matters. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. After holding that there was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's findings that one of the representations was fraudulent and justifiably relied on by plaintiff, the Court noted that since there was one material misrepresentation, there was no necessity for a discussion of the other misrepresentations made by defendant (34 Cal. 2d 715, 721) .

In Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845 , plaintiffs, an elderly couple wishing to supplement their retirement income, entered into a contract with defendant for the purchase of coin-operated testing devices to be installed in various locations selected by defendant, relying on representations by defendant's agents that the machines would be a suitable source of supplemental income. After entering into the contract, plaintiffs discovered that they could not profitably operate the machines and thereafter sought to rescind the contract. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, from which plaintiffs appealed. In reversing the judgment for insufficiency of the evidence, the court of appeal noted that one material false statement is sufficient ground for rescission of a contract (257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 138) .

[b] False Representation Concerning Income or Profits of Business as Material

In Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269 , plaintiff brought an action for damages for breach of a contract for the purchase of a liquor license and for nonpayment under a lease of a restaurant. In its answer, defendant pleaded that the transaction had been induced by plaintiff's fraudulent misrepresentations concerning the daily gross income of the restaurant. The trial court found that plaintiff had, in fact, misrepresented the amount of income from the restaurant, but that defendant was put on inquiry as to the truth of the representations and that it was therefore not entitled to rely on them. Accordingly, it entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, the court of appeal reversed the portion of the judgment awarding plaintiff damages for breach of contract and nonpayment of rent. Addressing itself to the question of the materiality of the misrepresentations, the court noted that a false representation as to income or profits from a property or business is a material misrepresentation and a basis for rescission (203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 295-296) . The court stated that in the sale of a business such as a restaurant, sale negotiations frequently turn on the volume of business or daily receipts handled. Thus, the court held, a misrepresentation as to the gross volume of business handled is a material one (203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 296) . The court then held that defendant was entitled to rely on plaintiff's representations and was not bound to make an independent investigation of the facts (203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 296-299) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fraudulent Acts

In Campbell v. McClure (1986) 182 Cal. App. 3d 806, 227 Cal. Rptr. 450 , the court of appeal affirmed the judgment rescinding the sale of defendant's business to plaintiff. The court stated that the trial court's findings of intentional fraud and justifiable reliance were supported by evidence of defendant's signed escrow instructions guaranteeing the accuracy of his sales brochure, the admission by defendant that the brochure represented profits to be more than they actually were, expert testimony that defendant's records were misleading, plaintiff's assertion of reliance, and plaintiff's lack of experience in similar business (182 Cal. App. 3d 806, 811) .

[b] Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient

Friedberg v. Weissbuch (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 287 P.2d 785 , was an action for damages for the alleged breach of a written lease and purchase agreement involving real property, together with furniture, fixtures, medical equipment, the goodwill of a medical practice, and the use of a trade name. The trial court rendered a judgment for defendants lessees and purchasers on the ground that the agreement was void because of fraud and misrepresentations on the part of plaintiffs concerning the value of the property, and the income produced therefrom, which induced defendants to enter into the agreement. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal noted that a single material misrepresentation justifiably relied on is sufficient ground for rescission of a contract (135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.46

§ 92.46 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Expression of Opinion Not Honestly or Reasonably Entertained as Constituting Fraud

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION WAS MERELY A STATEMENT OF OPINION SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE WAS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT DEFENDANT DID NOT _____ [HONESTLY or REASONABLY] BELIEVE THE OPINION.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Expression of Opinion Not Honestly Entertained as Constituting Fraud. An expression of an opinion which is not honestly believed or which cannot reasonably be believed constitutes fraud if the other elements of fraud are present (Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 866, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724 ; Gillespie v. Ormsby (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 513, 527, 272 P.2d 949).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud, when defendant has contended in the motion that there was no fraud because the alleged misrepresentation was merely a statement of opinion on which plaintiff was not justified in relying. The ground of opposition set forth is that the evidence is sufficient to show that the opinion was not honestly entertained by defendant or could not honestly have been believed by him or her.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Not Honestly Entertained as Constituting Fraud

In Cooper v. Jevne (1976) 56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 128 Cal. Rptr. 724 , plaintiffs, purchasers of condominiums in a residential project, brought an action to rescind or affirm with damages their contracts for purchase of the units on the ground that defendants engaged in a fraudulent conspiracy among themselves to conceal from purchasers within the project the fact that the project was dangerously, defectively, and illegally constructed. The trial court sustained demurrers, without leave to amend, to the complaint as against defendant sales agents, architects, and county building inspectors. On appeal, the court of appeal reversed as to the sales agents.

In their complaint, plaintiffs had alleged that the sales agents had fraudulently misrepresented that condominiums were luxurious and had outstanding investment potential, whereas in fact the sales agents knew (but plaintiffs did not know) that the project was constructed in a substandard manner, and was hazardous to personal safety because of the possibility of structural failure of portions of the building and because of inadequate safeguards from fire. The court noted that the statements of the sales agents were clearly statements of opinion, which ordinarily cannot constitute actionable fraud or deceit (56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 865) . However, the court stated, if a person advances an opinion in which he does not honestly or cannot reasonably believe, then an action for affirmative fraud will lie if the remaining elements of the tort are present. In this case, if the sales agents knew of the alleged substantial structural defects in the condominiums, they could not honestly have held the opinion that these homes were luxurious or outstanding investments. Even if the agents stated their opinions sincerely, it was reckless and unreasonable to do so in light of their alleged knowledge. The court concluded that the complaint was sufficient to state a cause of action for misrepresentation by false opinion (56 Cal. App. 3d 860, 866) .

In Gillespie v. Ormsby (1954) 126 Cal. App. 2d 513, 272 P.2d 949 , plaintiff brought an action for damages for breach of a contract relating to the drilling of an oil well, alleging that defendant had failed to contribute his agreed share of the drilling costs. Defendant cross complained for damages for fraud and deceit or, in the alternative, rescission of the contract and return of the sums paid thereunder to plaintiff. The trial court found that plaintiff had fraudulently misrepresented to defendant, at the time the contract was entered into, that the well could be commercially productive at its present depth and that even more oil could be produced if the well was drilled deeper. In fact, plaintiff knew that the well had already been drilled beyond the represented depths and that it was not productive and could not be productive at that depth or at any other depth. The trial court entered judgment for defendant granting rescission of the contract.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. It rejected plaintiff's contention that the alleged misrepresentations constituted a statement of opinion on which fraud cannot be predicated. The court noted that while it is generally true that a statement of opinion cannot constitute fraud, this rule is subject to the exception that the opinion must in fact be honestly entertained. The court reviewed the evidence and concluded that the trial court was justified in finding that plaintiff had no honest belief in his representation and that it was fraudulent (126 Cal. App. 2d 513, 527) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Not Honestly Entertained as Constituting Fraud

In Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 496 P.2d574, plaintiff, an elderly single woman, brought an action against defendants seeking to recover the purchase price paid for certain interests in real property on several grounds, including fraud. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint without leave to amend and dismissed the action. On appeal, the court of appeal reversed. In her fraud counts, plaintiff alleged that the individual defendant had represented to plaintiff that the lands were potential oil lands, that defendant corporation was going to drill for oil on them or engage some other company to do so, and that the lands were potentially valuable. Plaintiff further alleged that because of her faith and confidence in the individual defendant, she relied on these statements, all of which were untrue and known by him to be untrue or not warranted by the information he possessed. The court rejected defendants' argument that the alleged misrepresentations were expressions of opinion and therefore not actionable. The court noted that there are two exceptions to the rule that expressions of opinion are not actionable. The first is that an expression of opinion is actionable if the party expressing it does not honestly entertain that opinion (132 Cal. App. 2d 496, 506) . The second arises when the party expressing the opinion has superior knowledge or special information (132 Cal. App. 2d 496, 506-507) . The court held that plaintiff had pleaded facts sufficient to place plaintiff within both exceptions.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud &

MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.47

§ 92.47 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Expression of Opinion Asserted as Representation of Existing Fact as Actionable

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THE GROUND THAT THE MISREPRESENTATION WAS MERELY A STATEMENT OF OPINION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE WAS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE OPINION WAS ASSERTED AS A REPRESENTATION OF AN EXISTING FACT.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Expression of Opinion Asserted as Representation of Existing Fact. A misrepresentation, concerning the subject matter of a transaction, that might ordinarily be only the expression of an opinion may constitute fraud if it is expressed in the form of a representation of existing fact that is material to the transaction and that has a tendency to induce one of the parties to consider and rely on the representation as a fact (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 489, 275 P.2d 15 ; Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 137, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when defendant has asserted in the motion that the alleged misrepresentation was merely a statement of opinion. The ground of opposition presented is that the statement is actionable because it was expressed not in the form of an opinion but as a representation of existing fact.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)], in an action for damages for breach of contract, when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Expression of Opinion Asserted as Representation of Existing Fact

In Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , plaintiff hired defendant to test the soil of a lot he was considering purchasing, in order to determine the amount of fill below the surface. In reliance on defendant's representation that there were only 12 to 16 inches of fill below the surface and that plaintiff need not worry about building on the lot, plaintiff purchased the lot. Later, when plaintiff began digging foundations for an apartment building to be constructed on the lot, he discovered that the lot contained three to six feet of fill in many places. This necessitated a deeper (and more expensive) foundation than defendant's report had led plaintiff to believe. Plaintiff brought an action against defendant for damages based, in part, on deceit. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, defendant contended, inter alia, that no cause of action for deceit had been established because his statement was not a misrepresentation of fact but only a statement of opinion. The Supreme Court rejected this contention, holding that defendant had not given his statement in the form of an opinion but as a representation of fact. His assertion, stated the Court, was not a casual expression of belief, but was a deliberate affirmation of the matters stated and was thus within Civ. Code § 1710(2) [see also Civ. Code § 1572(1), (2)], which requires only that he assert as a fact that which is not true (43 Cal. 2d 481, 489) . The Court held, however, that the trial court had used the incorrect measure of damages and, therefore, reversed the judgment.

Counsel should note that although Gagne involved a tort action for deceit under Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710, the statutory definition of deceit contained in Civ. Code § 1710, which was construed by the Court in Gagne, is very similar to the definition of actual fraud contained in Civ. Code § 1572. Thus, the holding in that case appears equally applicable to an action to rescind a contract for fraud.

The factual and procedural background of Wilke v. Coinway, Inc. (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 64 Cal. Rptr. 845 , is set forth in § 92.45[3][a]. The court of appeal, in reversing a judgment for defendant, rejected defendant's contention that its representations were merely predictions of future income and, therefore, could not be the basis for a rescission of the contract for fraud. The court noted that when a representation concerning the subject matter of a transaction which might ordinarily be only the expression of an opinion is asserted as an existing fact which is material to the transaction and which has a reasonable tendency to induce one of the parties to consider and rely on the representation as a fact, the statement becomes an assertion of an existing fact within the meaning of the general rule regarding fraudulent misrepresentations (257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 137) . The court held that the representation that the coin-operated machines were a profitable part-time source of income was a positive misstatement of fact by defendant's agents, who admittedly had no experience or basis for such a representation, and that the misrepresentation was unquestionably material in view of the uncontroverted evidence that plaintiffs were interested in a source of supplemental income during their retirement and were induced to sign the contract on that basis (257 Cal. App. 2d 126, 137-138) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.48

§ 92.48 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Reliance on Statement of Opinion Justified if Defendant Has Expert Knowledge

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE MISREPRESENTATION WAS MERELY A STATEMENT OF OPINION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF WAS ENTITLED TO RELY ON THE REPRESENTATION IN THAT DEFENDANT PURPORTED TO HAVE EXPERT KNOWLEDGE CONCERNING THE MATTER.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Reliance on Statement of Opinion Justified if Defendant Has Expert Knowledge. A person may justifiably rely on a statement of opinion if the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 489, 275 P.2d 15 ; Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977 ; Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 496, 506-507, 282 P.2d 574).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when defendant has asserted that the alleged misrepresentation was merely a statement of opinion. The ground of opposition set forth is that the evidence is sufficient to show that plaintiff was justified in relying on the statement because defendant purported to have expert knowledge concerning the matter.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for recission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Statement of Opinion Justified if Defendant Has Expert Knowledge

The facts and procedural background of Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , is set forth in § 92.47[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that even if defendant's statement was an opinion, plaintiffs justifiably relied thereon because defendant had held himself out as an expert, plaintiffs hired him to supply information concerning matters of which they were ignorant, and his unequivocal statement necessarily implied that he knew facts that justified his statement (43 Cal. 2d 481, 489) .

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , is discussed in § 92.42[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court noted that a plaintiff may not rely on mere statements of opinion, unless the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of trust and confidence (43 Cal. 2d 481) .

Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 496, 282 P.2d 574 , is discussed in § 92.46[4][a]. The court of appeal noted that an exception to the rule that expressions of opinion are not actionable as fraud arises when the party expressing the opinion has superior knowledge or special information (43 Cal. 2d 481) . The court held that plaintiff had pleaded facts sufficient to place her within the exception. It therefore reversed the judgment sustaining demurrers to the complaint.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.49

§ 92.49 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Misrepresentation of Law as Actionable if Confidential Relationship Exists

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE MISREPRESENTATION WAS MERELY A CONCLUSION OF LAW SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT A CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP EXISTED BETWEEN THE PARTIES, SO THAT PLAINTIFF WAS ENTITLED TO RELY ON DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATION OF LAW.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Misrepresentation of Law as Fraud. A misrepresentation of law may constitute fraud justifying rescission of a contract when the parties to the contract have a confidential or fiduciary relationship, particularly when one of the parties who has a superior means of information possesses a knowledge of the law and thereby gains an unconscionable advantage over another who is ignorant and uninformed (Ramos v. Pacheco (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 304, 308, 148 P.2d 704 ; Bank of America v. Sanchez (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 242, 38 P.2d 787 .

[Optional] F. Nature of a Confidential Relationship. For a party's misrepresentation of law to constitute fraud, it is unnecessary that there exist a confidential or fiduciary relationship in the strict legal sense of those terms; the relationship may be moral, social, domestic, or personal (Bank of America v. Sanchez (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 243, 38 P.2d 787).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial, in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant, when defendant has asserted in the motion that the alleged misrepresentation was merely a legal conclusion on which plaintiff was not entitled to rely. The ground of opposition set out is that the evidence is sufficient to show that plaintiff was entitled to rely on the representation because a confidential relationship existed between the parties.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)], in an action for damages for breach of contract, when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation of Law as Fraud

In Ramos v. Pacheco (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 304, 148 P.2d 704 , plaintiff and defendant, an unmarried couple, lived together and operated a grocery store as partners pursuant to an agreement whereby all profits from the operation of the store, in excess of living expenses, were to be invested in real property in joint tenancy. During this period, plaintiff's child was born. From the profits earned by the partnership, plaintiff and defendant purchased four parcels of improved realty. Because of defendant's violent treatment of plaintiff, plaintiff was forced to leave him. Thereafter, defendant undertook to induce plaintiff to enter into a contract, and to execute deeds conveying her one-half interest in the real properties to defendant, by representing to her that she was a common law wife who had no legal standing, that she had no right to anything, including the property, that by signing the contract he presented she would legitimize her child, that she could not claim the real properties because she held title to them under an assumed name, and that it was a crime to do so. Because of her eagerness to legitimize her child and her fear of defendant, plaintiff executed the contract and deeds. When plaintiff later learned that defendant's representations were false, she brought an action to rescind the contract, cancel the deeds, and recover her half interest in the profits of the grocery business. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment and rejected defendant's contention, inter alia, that the alleged misrepresentations concerned matters of law and were therefore not actionable. The court noted that where a confidential relationship exists between two parties, misrepresentations of law may constitute such a fraud as to enable parties to avoid contracts made between them, particularly when the oppressor has had superior means of information and thereby gains an unconscionable advantage over his victim who has not been in a situation to become informed. The court stated that this is especially so when the defrauded party is weakened by sickness and grief at the time advantage of her is taken (64 Cal. App. 2d 304, 308) .

In Bank of America v. Sanchez (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 38 P.2d 787 , plaintiff bank sued defendants, who were formerly husband and wife, to recover the deficiency on a note after sale under a deed of trust securing the note. The note was given to the bank on defendant husband's application for a loan. At the time the note was signed, defendants were living separately and apart and were shortly thereafter divorced. The trial court found that defendant wife had been induced to sign the note by false and fraudulent representations by plaintiff's officers that the wife's signature was necessary to make the loan valid because she was still legally married to defendant husband and that the wife would not be personally liable forthe indebtedness if she signed the note and trust deed. Accordingly, the court entered judgment reforming the note by striking defendant wife's name from it.

On appeal, plaintiff contended, inter alia, that the statements were misrepresentations of law and could not be the basis for fraud. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and rejected this contention. The court noted that the general rule is that deception as to matters of law does not amount to fraud and will not furnish a ground for rescission of a contract. However, the court observed that exceptions to the general rule arise when the parties to the contract occupy confidential or fiduciary relations or when one who has a superior means of information possesses a knowledge of the law and thereby gains an unconscionable advantage over another who is ignorant and has not been in a situation to become informed (3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 242) . The exceptions are not limited to cases in which there exist confidential or fiduciary relations in the strict legal sense of those terms, but have been extended to every possible case in which a fiduciary relationship exists as a fact.

The court noted that the relationship need not be legal; it may be moral, social, domestic, or merely personal. To entitle one to relief on the ground of fraud, it is sufficient to show the existence of such friendly relations during a period of several years between the parties as would entitle the injured person to place confidence in the integrity and honesty of the other party to the contract and in the truth of whatever representations the latter made with regard to the transaction between them (3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 243) . The court then examined the evidence and concluded that although it did not establish a technical fiduciary relationship, it nevertheless did show a sufficiently confidential relationship to bring defendant wife within the above-noted exceptions and that she had therefore established actual fraud, as defined in Civ. Code § 1572, as a defense to the action on the note (3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 243-244) .

[b] Nature of a Confidential Relationship

Bank of America v. Sanchez (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 38 P.2d 787 , is discussed in § 92.49[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

107 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.50

§ 92.50 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Negligent Reliance on Intentional Misrepresentation as Not Barring Relief

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S RELIANCE ON THE MISREPRESENTATION WAS NEGLIGENT AND THEREFORE NOT JUSTIFIABLE SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE MISREPRESENTATION WAS INTENTIONAL.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Negligent Reliance on Intentional Misrepresentation. Negligence on the part of plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of a statement is no defense to an action to rescind a contract for fraud when the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent [Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415, 115 P.2d 977 ; Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 296, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff's reliance on the alleged misrepresentation was negligent and thus not justifiable. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff's negligence in failing to discover the falsity of the representation is no defense when the misrepresentation is intentional.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for a new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to oppose a general demurrer[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Negligent Reliance on Intentional Misrepresentation

The factual and procedural background of Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , is set out in § 92.42[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court noted that negligence on the part of the plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of a statement is no defense when the misrepresentation is intentional rather than negligent, since, as a general rule, negligence of plaintiff is no defense to an intentional tort (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414) . The Court also held that the fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentation does not alone bar plaintiff's recovery and that he or she is not held to constructive notice of a public record which would reveal the true facts (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415) . A plaintiff is not held to the standard of precaution or minimum knowledge of a hypothetical reasonable person; exceptionally gullible or ignorant people have been permitted to recover from defendants who took advantage of them in circumstances where persons of normal intelligence would not have been misled. The Court concluded that the allegations of the plaintiffs' complaint, if true, were sufficient to establish the right to relief on the basis of a fraudulent misrepresentation, since the complaint alleged that the misrepresentation was made by defendants through their agent with the knowledge that it was false and with the intention of inducing plaintiffs to act in reliance on it, and that plaintiffs did act in reliance on it. The fact that an examination of the record would have revealed to plaintiffs the falsity of the representation or that they may have been negligent in failing to make further investigations did not bar their right to relief (18 Cal. 2d 409, 415) .

The factual and procedural background of Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269 , is set forth in § 92.45[3][b]. In addressing the question of whether defendant was entitled to rely on plaintiff seller's representations as to the daily receipts of the restaurant business which was the subject of the contract, the court of appeal noted that the trial court had found that plaintiff's representations were false, and known by plaintiff to be false. The court held that in such a situation where the seller knowingly and intentionally makes false representations, he cannot contend that the buyer was negligent and therefore not in a position to rely on the representation (18 Cal. 2d 409) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.51

§ 92.51 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--No Duty to Investigate Positive Statements of Fact

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF NEGLIGENTLY FAILED TO INVESTIGATE THE TRUTH OF THE REPRESENTATIONS AND THEREFORE COULD NOT JUSTIFIABLY RELY THEREON SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE WAS SUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH THAT THE REPRESENTATIONS WERE POSITIVE STATEMENTS OF FACT SO THAT PLAINTIFF, WHO WAS NOT AWARE OF ANY FACTS WHICH WOULD BRING THE STATEMENTS UNDER SUSPICION, HAD NO DUTY TO INVESTIGATE THE TRUTH OF SUCH STATEMENTS.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Single Material Misrepresentation as Sufficient. [See § 92.45, Paragraph D.]

E. Availability of Means of Discovering Truth as Not Barring Relief. If no duty is imposed by law on a person to make inquiry concerning the truth of representations and if under the circumstances a prudent person would not be put on inquiry, the mere fact that means of knowledge are open to the party deceived does not preclude him or her from relief on the ground of fraud when he or she thereafter discovers the truth (Lobdell v. Miller (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 338, 250 P.2d 357).

F. No Duty to Investigate Truth of Positive Statements of Fact. One who is induced to enter into a contract by positive representations of fact is under no duty to inquire as to the truth of the representations, unless he or she is made aware of facts which bring the representations under suspicion and which would induce a prudent person to make inquiry (Chamberlain v. Wakefield (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 280, 288, 213 P.2d 62).

[Optional] G. No Duty to Investigate Representations Concerning Income or Profits. When the representation concerns the volume of business, income, or profits of a business and the facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the seller, the buyer is entitled to rely on such statements and is not bound to make an independent investigation (Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 298, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff negligently failed to investigate the truth of the alleged misrepresentation and is therefore precluded from justifiably relying thereon. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff is under no duty to investigate the truth of positive statements of fact unless he or she is aware of facts which should bring the statements under suspicion.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Availability of Means of Discovering Truth as Not Barring Relief

In Lobdell v. Miller (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 250 P.2d 357 , plaintiffs brought an action to rescind a contract for purchase of a hotel on the ground that they were induced to enter into the contract by fraudulent misrepresentations made by defendants. The trial court found, inter alia, that defendants had falsely and fraudulently represented that there existed a water spring, well, and pumping plant on the premises with adequate and sufficient water for all the needs of the hotel business. There was some evidence that plaintiffs had made some partial independent investigation of this and other alleged misrepresentations before purchasing the property. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiffs.

On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed. The court held, inter alia, that plaintiffs' numerous visits to the property prior to the purchase did not absolutely preclude reliance on false representations made by the seller. In so holding, the court noted that when no duty is imposed by law on a person to make inquiry, and when under the circumstances a prudent man would not be put on inquiry, the mere fact that means of knowledge are open to plaintiff and he has not availed himself of them does not debar him from relief when thereafter he makes actual discovery of the truth (114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 338) .

[b] No Duty to Investigate Truth of Positive Statements of Fact

In Chamberlain v. Wakefield (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 280, 213 P.2d 62 , plaintiffs were lessees of a hotel and owners of the furniture therein. Plaintiffs entered into contract by which they assigned their interest in the lease and sold the furniture to defendants in exchange for which defendants made a cash down payment, transferred certain real property to plaintiffs, and executed a promissory note for the balance of the purchase price. Thereafter, when defendants refused to make any payments on the promissory note, plaintiffs brought an action to recover the amounts due. Defendants filed a cross complaint for rescission of the contract, or, in the alternative, for damages, on the ground that they were induced to enter into the contract by plaintiffs' false and fraudulent representations. The trial court found that plaintiffs had fraudulently misrepresented the amount of income derived from the hotel during the year preceding the sale, and entered judgment for defendants.

On appeal, plaintiffs asserted, inter alia, that defendants could not have relied on the alleged misrepresentations because one of defendants was a real estate broker familiar with buying, selling, and leasing property, and she had examined the premises and was in a position to know or ascertain the facts. The court of appeal rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment. The court noted that thetrial court had found that defendants had, in fact, relied on the misrepresentations and that this finding was supported by the evidence. The court observed that the evidence showed that plaintiffs made positive statements regarding the income and expenses of the hotel business. The court held that one who is induced to enter into a contract by positive representations of fact is under no duty to inquire as to the truth of the representations, unless he is made aware of facts which bring the representations under suspicion and which would induce a prudent man to make inquiry [quoting Mirich v. Underwriters at Lloyd's of London (1944) 64 Cal. App. 2d 522, 531, 149 P.2d 19] ; a person can act on the presumption that there exists no intention to defraud him (95 Cal. App. 2d 280, 288) . The court concluded that the circumstances here were not such that defendants were required to inquire as to the truth of plaintiffs' representations.

[c] No Duty to Investigate Representations Concerning Income or Profits

The factual and procedural background of Rogers v. Bill & Vince's, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 21 Cal. Rptr. 269 , is discussed in § 92.45[3][b]. In that case, the court of appeal concluded that defendant buyer was not put on inquiry and was not bound to make an independent investigation as to the gross volume of business being done at the restaurant which was the subject of the transaction. The court held that when the representation has to do with the volume of business, income, or profits, and the facts are peculiarly within the knowledge of the seller, the buyer is entitled to rely on such statements and is not bound to make an independent investigation (203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 298) . The court noted that although there may be cases where the buyer has no right to rely on the seller's representations, such as when the statements are in the form of an opinion or estimate as to income or profits, or when an experienced buyer makes his own investigation and relies thereon, such was not the case here because plaintiff's statements were direct representations as to material facts and the buyer did not make an independent investigation on which it relied (203 Cal. App. 2d 292, 298-299) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.52

§ 92.52 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Representations Concerning Matters Beyond Scope of Investigation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF MADE AN INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION OF THE FACTS AND THEREFORE COULD NOT JUSTIFIABLY RELY ON DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNED MATTERS TO WHICH PLAINTIFF'S INVESTIGATION DID NOT EXTEND.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Representations Concerning Matters Beyond Scope of Investigation. A party who makes an investigation of the facts prior to entering into a transaction is not absolutely precluded from relying on false representations made by the other party. He or she may still be entitled to rely on representations concerning matters to which the investigation does not extend (Lobdell v. Miller (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 338, 250 P.2d 357).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff made an independent investigation of the facts and is therefore precluded from justifiably relying on defendant's alleged misrepresentation. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff was not precluded from relying on the representations because they concerned matters to which plaintiff's investigation did not extend.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to oppose a general demurrer[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Representations Concerning Matters Beyond Scope of Investigation

The factual and procedural background of Lobdell v. Miller (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 250 P.2d 357 , is set forth in § 92.51[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for plaintiffs in an action to rescind a contract on the ground of fraud. The court concluded that plaintiffs' numerous visits to the property and partial investigation of defendants' representations did not bar plaintiffs from relief. The court noted that when one conducts an investigation, he or she may still be entitled to rely on certain representations concerning conditions as to which the investigation does not extend (114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 338) . The court held that evidence in this case did not conclusively show that plaintiffs completely relied on their own investigation (114 Cal. App. 2d 328, 339) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission &

RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.53

§ 92.53 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Misrepresentation When Falsity Not Apparent From Investigation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF MADE AN INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION OF THE FACTS AND THEREFORE COULD NOT JUSTIFIABLY RELY ON DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE FALSITY OF THE REPRESENTATIONS WAS NOT APPARENT FROM PLAINTIFF'S INVESTIGATION.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Misrepresentation When Falsity Not Apparent From Investigation. An independent investigation does not preclude reliance on a misrepresentation when the falsity of the statement is not apparent from the investigation (Carroll v. Dungey (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255-256, 35 Cal. Rptr. 681).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff made an independent investigation of the facts and is therefore precluded from justifiably relying on defendant's alleged misrepresentation. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff was not precluded from relying on the representation because its falsity was not apparent from plaintiff's investigation.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.42.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract for fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)], in an action for damages for breach of contract, when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trialgenerally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Investigation as Not Precluding Reliance on Misrepresentation When Falsity Not Apparent From Investigation

Carroll v. Dungey (1963) 223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 35 Cal. Rptr. 681 , is discussed in § 92.42[3][d]. In that case, the court of appeal held that an independent investigation does not preclude reliance when the falsity of the statement is not apparent from an inspection (223 Cal. App. 2d 247, 255-256) . The court concluded that plaintiffs were not precluded by their investigation from relying on defendants' representations because the document which would have indicated the falsity of the representations was not in existence at the time plaintiffs made their investigation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

111 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.54

§ 92.54 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Pecuniary Loss Not Required

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF HAS NOT BEEN DAMAGED BY THE ALLEGED FRAUD SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS NOT REQUIRED TO SHOW PECUNIARY LOSS AS LONG AS THE RECORD INDICATES SOME TYPE OF INJURY OR PREJUDICE RESULTING FROM THE FRAUD. THE RECORD SHOWS THAT PLAINTIFF HAS BEEN INJURED IN THAT _____ [specify nature of resulting injury, e.g., PLAINTIFF HAS RECEIVED SOMETHING SUBSTANTIALLY DIFFERENT FROM THAT WHICH HE WAS LED TO EXPECT].

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Pecuniary Loss Not Required. In an action for rescission of a contract for fraud, plaintiff is not required to plead or prove specific pecuniary loss so long as the record indicates injury or prejudice resulting from the fraud (Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 611, 226 P.2d 340 ; Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 728-729, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , disapproved on another ground in Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 30, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212).

[Optional] E. Rescission as Proper When Consideration Received Differs Substantially From That Which

Plaintiff Was Led to Expect. A person fraudulently induced to enter into a contract may rescind the contract when he or she obtains something substantially different from that which he or she was led to expect, even though that which was obtained may be more valuable than that which he or she expected to get (see Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 611, 612, 226 P.2d 340).

[Optional] F. Placing Title in Joint Tenancy. A party who is fraudulently induced to place title to property in joint tenancy is sufficiently damaged thereby so as to permit rescission of the transaction on the ground of fraud (Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 729, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , disapproved on another ground in Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 30, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly induced by fraud on the part of defendant when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff was not damaged thereby. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff need not show pecuniary loss as long as some type of injury or prejudice results from the fraud.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.43.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pecuniary Loss Not Required

In Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 226 P.2d 340 , Barbee and Earl went to a fur salon operated by Saks. A representative of Saks showed them a mink coat and told them that its price was $5,000. Barbee told the Saks representative that he would like to buy the coat as a gift for Earl but that he would pay no more than $4,000 for it. Saks rejected repeated offers by Barbee to purchase the coat for $4,000. Unknown to Barbee, Earl then asked Saks to pretend to sell the coat to Barbee for $4,000 and stated that she would pay the difference between $4,000 and the price of the coat. Saks agreed to this. It told Barbee that it would sell the coat to him for $3,981.25 and made out a sales slip for this amount, which Barbee signed in the belief that it was the full price of the coat. Saks then delivered the coat to Barbee, who in turn gave it to Earl. The next day Earl returned the coat to the store to be monogrammed and paid the balance of the purchase price. Later that day, Barbee told Saks that he had revoked the gift to Earl and that he would pay Saks the agreed price of $3,981.25 only if it would deliver the coat to him and not to Earl. Thereafter, Earl demanded that Saks deliver the coat to her, but Saks refused and attempted to return her money to her but she refused to accept it. Earl then sued Saks for conversion of the coat. Saks answered and cross complained against both Earl and Barbee, alleging that it was willing to deliver the coat to either of them providing that it received the full price of $5,000 from either or both of them. Saks also brought a separate complaint against Barbee for goods sold and delivered. Barbee answered the complaint, alleging that he was induced to make both the purchase and the gift by fraudulent misrepresentations by both Saks and Earl that the full price of the coat was $3,981.25. Barbee attempted to rescind both transactions. The trial court entered judgment against Earl on her complaint for conversio and in favor of Saks on its complaint against Barbee for goods sold and delivered. On Saks' cross complaint, the trial court decreed that Earl was the owner of and entitled to possession of the coat. Barbee appealed from the judgment.

The Supreme Court reversed. In holding that Barbee had been fraudulently induced to enter into the contract for the purchase of the coat, the Court rejected Saks' contention that Barbee could not rescind the contract because he had not been injured thereby. The Court noted that the "no injury, no rescission" formula is not very helpful because, in a sense, anyone who is fraudulently induced to enter into a contract is injured in that his or her interest in making a free choice and in exercising his or her own best judgment in making decisions with respect to economic transactions is interfered with. The Court also rejected the implication of some California cases [see, e.g., Spreckels v. Gorrill (1907) 152 Cal. 383, 388, 92 P. 1011] that in every case in which rescission is sought for fraud there must be pecuniary loss (36 Cal. 2d 602, 611) .

The Court observed that a representee can rescind a contract when he or she obtains something substantially different from that which he or she was led to expect. Thus, for example, if one is induced to buy a certain lot of land by misrepresentation that it contains a vineyard, he or she need not keep it when he or she learns that it contains an apple orchard instead; even though the lot of land is the identical lot of land, and although the orchard may be more valuable than the vineyard which he expected to get, it is obviously unfair to require a person to keep what he or she did not bargain for and did not want. The Court concluded that the undisputed evidence describing the sale in this case put it within this class of cases. The coat bargained for between Barbee and Saks, in Barbee's belief, as known by Saks, was a coat fully paid for by Barbee which Saks knew was intended to be used as a gift. Saks, however, intended to and did deliver something substantially different, that is, a coat on which Barbee was credited with only a down payment and for which his intended donee had secretly agreed to pay in a substantial sum (36 Cal. 2d 602, 612) . The Court concluded that the contracts of purchase and gift were voidable and were properly rescinded (36 Cal. 2d 602, 613) .

In Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , plaintiff sought to quiet title to real property conveyed by grant deed to plaintiff and defendant as joint tenants. Plaintiff alleged in the complaint that plaintiff had bought the property and caused title to be placed in the parties' names as joint tenants, in reliance on defendant's false representation that, if plaintiff did so, defendant would remarry him. One of defendant's purported affirmative defenses was that the complaint did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. After a trial without a jury, the court entered judgment decreeing that plaintiff was the owner of the property, quieting title in him, and enjoining defendant from asserting any claim to the property.

On appeal, defendant contended, inter alia, that there was no evidence to support the finding that plaintiff was damaged as a result of the fraud. The court of appeal noted that in an action to recover damages for fraud, plaintiff must allegeand prove the precise amount of his or her damages (22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 728) . However, the present action was not one to recover damages but was an equitable suit to quiet title, which is akin to an action for rescission on the ground of fraud. The court noted that in such an action, plaintiff need not plead or prove pecuniary loss so long as the record indicates injury or prejudice resulting from the fraud (22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 729) . The trial court found that plaintiff was damaged because he had been induced by defendant's fraud to place title to the property in joint tenancy, and the court of appeal concluded that there was substantial evidence to support the finding that plaintiff was damaged by defendant's fraud (22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 729) . The court reversed the trial court's decision on other grounds. Counsel should note that Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , was disapproved on another ground in Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 30, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212 .

[b] Rescission as Proper When Consideration Received Differs Substantially From That Which Plaintiff Was Led to Expect

Earl v. Saks & Co. (1951) 36 Cal. 2d 602, 226 P.2d 340 , is discussed in § 92.54[3][a].

[c] Placing Title in Joint Tenancy

The factual and procedural background of Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , is discussed in § 92.54[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal held that plaintiff was sufficiently damaged by the alleged fraud to obtain rescission of the transaction because he had been induced to place title to property in joint tenancy with defendant. The court noted that placing property in joint tenancy was prejudicial to plaintiff because if he predeceased defendant, who was not his wife, she would acquire title to the property to the exclusion of plaintiff's heirs or devisees, regardless of their relationship to plaintiff. Plaintiff was also damaged because although he alone maintained the property and made all of the required payments, he could sell or encumber only a portion of it and hence, for all practical purposes, could not sell or encumber it at all. The court concluded that there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding that plaintiff was damaged by defendant's fraud (22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 729) .

Counsel should note that Santoro v. Carbone (1972) 22 Cal. App. 3d 721, 99 Cal. Rptr. 488 , has been disapproved on another ground in Tenzer v. Superscope, Inc. (1985) 39 Cal. 3d 18, 30, 216 Cal. Rptr. 130, 702 P.2d 212 .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.55

§ 92.55 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Actual Fraud [Civ. Code § 1572]--Suppression of True Facts Constituting Acts Fitted to Deceive [Civ. Code § 1572(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT HIS/HER/ITS ACTIONS DID NOT AMOUNT TO ACTUAL FRAUD SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S KNOWLEDGE OF PLAINTIFF'S MISTAKE OF FACT AND SUPPRESSION OF THE TRUE FACTS CONSTITUTED ACTS FITTED TO DECEIVE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SUBDIVISION 5 OF SECTION 1572 OF THE CIVIL CODE.

A. New Trial Precluded unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Fraudulent Acts. [See § 92.45, Paragraph C.]

D. Suppression of True Facts as Constituting Actual Fraud Within the Meaning of Subdivision 5 of Section 1572 of the Civil Code. When a party, having solicited the other party's bid and knowing that the other party is a "babe in the woods" regarding the subject matter of the potential contract, that a third party has represented to the other party that the potential contract is profitable, and that the bid price submitted by the other party will result in a substantial loss, fails to disclose the true facts to the other party, that party's activities are fitted to deceive within the meaning of Subdivision 5 of Section 1572 of the Civil Code (Architects & Contractors Estimating Service, Inc. v. Smith (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1008-1009, 211 Cal. Rptr. 45).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessfuldefendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract, when defendant asserted in the motion that his or her actions did not amount to fraud. The ground of opposition is that defendant's actions did constitute actual fraud in the form of acts fitted to deceive within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1572(5).

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in §§ 92.99 -92.101.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly induced by fraud.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial in an action for damages for breach of contract, when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was induced by fraud on the part of plaintiff.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used in an appellate brief to support the contention that the contract at issue is voidable on account of the other party's fraud in the inducement.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Suppression of True Facts as Constituting Actual Fraud Within the Meaning of Civ. Code § 1572(5)

Architects & Contractors Estimating Service, Inc. v. Smith (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 211 Cal. Rptr. 45 , was an action by a contractor plaintiff against a subcontractor defendant for the difference between the $110,000 plaintiff had paid a third party to install a heating, ventilating, and air conditioning system (hereinafter HVAC) and the amount for which defendant had contracted to install the system ($86,500). Prior to defendant's learning of the job, plaintiff had discussed two bids for the HVAC submitted by other subcontractors: one for $86,500 and one for $94,000, both exclusive of a $16,000 chilled water system included in the plans. Berry, a third party who had worked up plaintiff's bid to the Navy on the primary contract and for whom two of defendant's sons worked, suggested to plaintiff that defendant might install the HVAC and told defendant that his $86,500 bid had a 20 percent profit margin. This contract represented defendants's first heavy commercial air conditioning work and his first contract in excess of $10,000. When plaintiff and defendant met to sign the contract, defendant related to plaintiff that Berry had assured him there was a profit in his bid and told plaintiff he had not done much examination of the plans or specifications. After defendant had examined the job site and the plans, he told plaintiff that $86,500 would not cover the HVAC with the chilled water system. Plaintiff responded that he would get another contractor and sue defendant for the difference, which he did. The trial court awarded judgment for defendant based on his material mistake of fact. Plaintiff appealed.

In affirming, the court of appeal reiterated the rule that unilateral mistake of fact is a ground for relief only when the mistake is due to the fault of the other party or the other party knows or had reason to know of the mistake. The court found that substantial evidence supported the conclusion that defendant did not know the contract included the chilled water system but that plaintiff knew it did and knew that defendant didn't know. The court characterized defendant's mistake of fact as caused only by his ordinary negligence, which did not amount to a neglect of legal duty (164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1007-1008) . The court of appeal then considered the fraud ground not relied on by the trial court. After reviewing the facts, including the fact that plaintiff had used $90,000 for the HVAC, exclusive of the chilled water system, in framing its own bid to the Navy, and the fact that plaintiff knew or should have known defendant was "a babe in the woods of commercial air conditioning," the court concluded that plaintiff had set defendant up and that plaintiff's activities constituted actual fraud because they were "fitted to deceive" within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1572(5) (164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1008-1009) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.56

§ 92.56 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Constructive Fraud Based on Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1573(1)]--Evidence of Confidential Relationship Sufficient to Give Rise to Presumption of Constructive Fraud

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL ON THE BASIS OF THE INSUFFICIENCY OF THE EVIDENCE TO ESTABLISH CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE OF THE PARTIES' RELATIONSHIP TO THE TRANSACTIONS INVOLVED AND THE CIRCUMSTANCES IN WHICH THEY TOOK PLACE GIVE RISE TO THE PRESUMPTION, WHICH DEFENDANT DID NOT REBUT, THAT CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD OCCURRED.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Fraud. [See § 92.45, Paragraph B.]

C. Constructive Fraud Defined. Constructive fraud consists (1) of any breachof duty which, without actual fraudulent intent, gains an advantage to the person at fault, or anyone claiming under him or her, by misleading another to his or her prejudice, or the prejudice of anyone claiming under him or her, or (2) of any act or omission which the law specially declares to be fraudulent, without respect to actual fraud (Civ. Code § 1573).

D. Confidential Relationship Required. [See § 92.44, Paragraph B.]

E. Confidential Relationship Defined. [See § 92.44, Paragraph C.]

F. Duties in Confidential Relationship. When there exists a relationship of trust and confidence, it is the duty of the one in whom the confidence is placed to make full and complete disclosure of all material facts within his or her knowledge relating to the transaction in question, and any concealment of material facts or material misrepresentation will amount to fraud sufficient to entitle the injured party to relief (Ford v. Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1020, 225 Cal. Rptr. 895).

G. Constructive Fraud Presumed. Constructive fraud is presumed from the relation of the parties to a transaction, or the circumstances under which it takes place. Constructive fraud often exists when parties to a contract have a special confidential or fiduciary relationship that affords the power and means to one party to take undue advantage of, or exercise undue influence over, another party (Ford v. Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1020, 225 Cal. Rptr. 895).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to defendant's motion for a new trial based on the alleged insufficiency of the evidence to support the finding of constructive fraud. The motion is based on the ground that the evidence is sufficient to give rise to a presumption of constructive fraud.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should specify the transactions sought to be rescinded and the relationship and circumstances of the parties at the time the transactions were entered into. Counsel may wish to contrast the relationship and facts at issue with those described in § 92.44.

Counsel may wish to include points and authorities from § 92.71 if undue influence is also involved.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duties in Confidential Relationship

Plaintiff in Ford v. Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 225 Cal. Rptr. 895 , was an heir to the Ford Motor Company fortune and sought counseling from one defendant while he was attending college. That defendant soon gave up his practice as a psychotherapist to become plaintiff's business advisor. Using the psychotherapist-patient relationship, defendant was able to secure plaintiff's complete trust and confidence for 14 years, during which time he supervised and controlled plaintiff's wealth and business affairs. That defendant enlisted the aid of another of his patients, an executive of defendant Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc., and others. They eventually gained control of nearly all of plaintiff's $25 million in assets and misappropriated, dissipated, or converted the bulk of those assets. Plaintiff filed suit against his former psychotherapist-business manager and the securities broker from Shearson Lehman for breach of fiduciary duty, conversion, and civil conspiracy to commit fraud, among other things. The broker moved to compel arbitration, based on arbitration agreements plaintiff had signed with the broker's predecessors in interest. The trial court denied the motion to compel arbitration, and the broker appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed on theories of fraud and undue influence. The court first stated that the Federal Arbitration Act (9 U.S.C. § 2) applied to the case because the agreements involved securities transactions in interstate commerce (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1017-1018) . The court stated that under federal law, an arbitration clause can be unenforceable if grounds for revocation exist at law or in equity for the revocation of any contract (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1024) . The court reviewed the law of constructive fraud and undue influence as it relates to confidential relationships. The court described the duty of disclosue involved in a confidential relationship as requiring the one in whom the confidence is placed to make full and complete disclosure of all material facts within his or her knowledge relating to the transaction in question, and said that any concealment of material facts or material misrepresentation will amount to fraud sufficient to entitle the injured party to relief (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1020) .

[b] Constructive Fraud Presumed

The facts and procedural background of Ford v. Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 225 Cal. Rptr. 895 , are discussed in*§ 92.56[3][a]*. The court, after discussing the duties of disclosure in confidential relationships, went on to state that constructive fraud is presumed from the relation of the parties to a transaction, or the circumstances under which it takes place. Constructive fraud often exists when parties to a contract have a special confidential or fiduciary relationship that affords the power and means to one party to take undue advantage of, or exercise undue influence over, another party (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1020) . The court then held that fraud permeated the agreements to the extent that the fraud vitiated the arbitration agreement, as well as the rest of the contract, under tort principles. Pursuant to contract principles, the agreement was void under Civ. Code § 1550 because it was not voluntarily entered into, but was signed only because plaintiff was told to do so by those who controlled his business affairs and were the other defendants in the fraud action (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1027-1028) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
B. Fraud

9-92 California Points & Authorities §§ 92.57-92.69

[Reserved]

§§ 92.57[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
C. Undue Influence

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.70

§ 92.70 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Undue Influence Based on Taking Advantage of Another's Mental Weakness, Necessities, or Distress [Civ. Code § 1575(2), (3)]--Insufficiency of Evidence to Support Finding of No Undue Influence

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SUPPORT THE _____ [VERDICT or FINDING] OF NO UNDUE INFLUENCE [if optional Paragraph G is included, add: IN THAT THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO REBUT THE PRESUMPTION OF UNDUE INFLUENCE ARISING FROM THE EXTREME AGE, INFIRMITY, AND SUSCEPTIBILITY TO IMPOSITION OF PLAINTIFF AND THE SLIGHT EVIDENCE OF CIRCUMSTANCES FROM WHICH COERCION BY DEFENDANT MAY BE INFERRED].

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Undue Influence. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him, was obtained through undue influence exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he rescinds, or of any party to the contract jointly interested with such party (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1))].

C. Undue Influence Defined. Undue influence consists: (1) in the use, by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over him, of such confidence or authority for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage over him; (2) in taking an unfair advantage of another's weakness of mind; or (3) in taking a grossly oppressive and unfair advantage of another's necessities or distress (Civ. Code § 1575). In essence, undue influence consists of the use of excessive pressure by a dominant person over a servient person resulting in the apparent will of the servient person being in fact the will of the dominant person (Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 ; Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

D. Confidential Relationship Unnecessary Where Undue Influence Predicated on Unfair Advantage Taken of Mental Weakness. In an action to rescind a transaction for undue influence predicated on the defendant's taking unfairadvantage of plaintiff's weakness of mind, it is not necessary to show that a confidential relationship existed between the parties (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 130, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 ; Wells Fargo Bank v. Brady (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 381, 398, 254 P.2d 71).

E. Weakness of Mind Defined. The weakness of mind which provides sufficient grounds to rescind a contract for undue influence need not be long lasting nor wholly incapacitating, but may be merely a lack of full vigor due to age, physical condition, emotional anguish, or a combination of such factors (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

F. Elements Characteristic of Overpersuasion. The overpersuasion which provides grounds for rescission of a contract for undue influence is generally accompanied by the following characteristic elements which, when simultaneously present in a significant number, characterize the persuasion as excessive: (1) discussion of the transaction at an unusual or inappropriate time, (2) consummation of the transaction in an unusual place, (3) insistent demand that the business be finished at once, (4) extreme emphasis on untoward consequences of delay, (5) the use of multiple persuaders by the dominant side against a single servient party, (6) absence of third-party advisers to the servient party, (7) statements that there is no time to consult financial advisers or attorneys (Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 452, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 ; Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 133, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[Optional] G. Old Age and Infirmity of Grantor as Raising Presumption of Undue Influence. The susceptibility to imposition, extreme age, and infirmity of a contracting party, together with slight evidence of circumstances from which it may be inferred that the transaction was the product of coercion, will suffice to shift the burden of proof and require the other party to show affirmatively that the transaction was fair and free from undue influence (see O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 155, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful plaintiff's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract when plaintiff's consent thereto was obtained through defendant's exercise of undue influence. The ground of the motion is the insufficiency of the evidence to support the verdict or decision. Optional Paragraph G may be included when the evidence is insufficient to overcome the presumption of undue influence arising from the susceptibility to imposition, extreme age, and infirmity of plaintiff and slight evidence that the transaction was the result of coercion by defendant.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Use

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support defendant's motion for a new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant asserts that the contract is voidable because defendant's consent thereto was obtained through the exercise of undue influence by plaintiff.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undue Influence Defined

The factual and procedural background of Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 , is discussed in § 92.21[3][a]. In that case, real party in interest, a police officer, resigned from his position after being charged with rape and thereafter brought an action to compel his reinstatement, alleging that his resignation had been coerced. The evidence at the hearing before the civil service board showed that prior to resigning, the officer had been called to police headquarters on three successive days, had been kept waiting for long periods of time, had been interrogated by a member of the homicide squad, and, on the third day, had been ordered to appear before the deputy chief of police, who, although already advised that the criminal charges against the officer had been dropped, proceeded to read statements to him regarding the charges and asked the officer what he was going to do, emphasizing simultaneously that the charges should not be made public, and suggesting that the officer was guilty of unofficer-like conduct. The officer was not given any time to consider what to do and was repeatedly asked what he intended to do about the situation. There was also evidence that at the time he signed his resignation, the officer was emotionally upset and that he was physically fatigued because he had not slept for 24 hours.

In reversing the trial court's judgment, which granted the city's petition for a writ of mandate to set aside the civil service board's decision reinstating the officer, the court of appeal held that there was substantial evidence in the record that the officer's resignation was the result of undue influence. The court noted that, in essence, undue influence consists of the use of excessive pressure by a dominent person over a servient person resulting in the apparent will of the servient person being in fact the will of the dominant person. Undue susceptiblity to such overpersuasive influence may be the product of physical or emotional exhaustion or anguish which results in one's inability to act with unencumbered volition (11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 451) . The court observed that overpersuasion is generally accompanied by certain characteristic elements which, when simultaneously present in a significant number, characterize the persuasion as excessive. The court then listed the seven elements set forth in Paragraph F. The court reviewed the evidence and held that the facts reasonably lent themselves to the inference that excessive pressure was used to persuade the officer, who was vulnerable to such pressure, by the deputy chief, a dominant person, so as to overcome the officer's will without convincing his judgment. The court concluded that there was substantial evidence of undue influence and accordingly the civil service board was entitled to conclude therefrom that the officer's resignation was coerced (11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 452) .

The factual and procedural background of Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.20[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal held that the complaint did set out a claim that plaintiff's consent to the transaction had been obtained through the use of undue influence. The court noted that the type of undue influence involved here is a shorthand legal phrase used to describe persuasion which tends to be coercive in nature and which overcomes the will without convincing the judgment. The hallmark of such persuasion is high pressure which works on mental, moral, or emotional weakness to such an extent that it approaches the boundaries of coercion. The court observed that while most reported cases of undue influence involve persons who bear a confidential relationship to one another, a confidential or authoritative relationship between the parties need not be present when the undue influence involves unfair advantage taken of another's weakness or distress (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 130) . In essence, the court stated, undue influence involves the use of excessive pressure to persuade one vulnerable to such pressure, that is, the application of pressure by a dominant subject to a servient object. In combination, the elements of undue susceptibility in the servient person and excessive pressure by the dominating person make the latter's influence undue, because it results in the apparent will of the servient person being in fact the will of the dominant person (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131) .

The court held that undue susceptibility may consist of total weakness of mind which leaves a person entirely without understanding, or a lesser weakness which destroys the capacity of a person to make a contract even though he or she is not totally incapacitated, or a still lesser weakness which provides grounds to rescind a contract for undue influence. This lesser weakness of mind need not be long lasting nor wholly incapacitating, but may be merely a lack of full vigor due to age, physical condition, emotional anguish, or a combination of such factors. The court held that plaintiff had pleaded such weakness of mind, since it is possible for exhaustion and emotional turmoil to wholly incapacitate a person from exercising his judgment (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131) .

The court then noted that the second aspect of undue influence involves an application of excessive strength by a dominant subject against a servient object (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 132) . Such overpersuasion, the court stated, is generally accompanied by certain characteristics which tend to create a pattern. The court then listed the seven elements set forth in Paragraph F. The court stated that if a number of these elements are simultaneously present, the persuasion may be characterized as excessive (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 133) . The court observed that under the allegations of plaintiff's complaint, the school board representatives had undertaken to achieve their objective by overpersuasion and imposition to secure plaintiff's signature, but not his consent, to the resignation through a high pressure carrot-and-stick technique. The court concluded that the complaint stated a cause of action for rescission of a transaction to which plaintiff's consent had been obtained through undue influence. Accordingly, it reversed the judgment of dismissal (246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 135) .

[b] Confidential Relationship Unnecessary Where Undue Influence Predicated on Unfair Advantage Taken of Mental Weakness

Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.70[3][a].

In Wells Fargo Bank v. Brady (1953) 116 Cal. App. 2d 381, 254 P.2d 71 , decedent, an elderly widow who was in poor health, had had a substantial amount of money on deposit with four banks. Shortly before her death, decedent, accompanied by defendants, who were decedent's niece and the niece's daughter, went to all four banks and transferred the amounts deposited therein from decedent's individual name into the names of herself and defendants as joint tenants. When decedent died, plaintiff was appointed administrator of her estate and brought an action to recover the amounts transferred, alleging, in part, that undue influence was exerted on decedent by defendants. The trial court entered judgment against defendants.

On appeal, defendant argued, inter alia, that the evidence was insufficient to support the trial court's finding of undue influence because plaintiff had neither pleaded nor proved that a confidential relationship existed between decedent and herself. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that the existence ofa confidential relationship was not a necessary element in this case because there was ample evidence in the record to support the finding of undue influence based alone on decedent's weakness of mind on the day the funds were transferred (116 Cal. App. 2d 381, 398-399) .

[c] Weakness of Mind Defined

Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.70[3][a].

[d] Elements Characteristic of Overpersuasion

Keithley v. Civil Serv. Bd. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 443, 89 Cal. Rptr. 809 , and Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , are discussed in § 92.70[3][a].

[e] Old Age and Infirmity of Grantor as Raising Presumption of Undue Influence

The factual and procedural background of O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245 , is discussed in § 92.71[4][a]. In that case, the court of appeal held that the trial court's finding of undue influence was sustainable not only on the ground that defendants had breached a confidential relationship existing between them and plaintiff, but also on the ground that defendants had taken an unfair advantage of respondent's weakness of mind, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1575(2) (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 153, 154) .

The court rejected defendants' contention that in order to prove undue influence, plaintiff had the burden of showing that her mind was overpowered and her volition was borne down by defendants at the time the deed was made, noting that the rule proposed by defendants was applicable only to will contest cases where the testamentary capacity and free will of a testator are questioned. The court stated that the law makes a clear distinction between the proof of the existence of undue influence necessary to set aside a will and that which is required to cancel a deed of gift or conveyance inter vivos. The court held that although no presumption of undue influence is indulged in a will contest unless confidential relations are first established, with respect to inter vivos gifts or conveyances, the susceptibility to imposition, extreme age, and infirmity of the grantor, together with slight evidence of circumstances from which it may be inferred that the instrument was the product of coercion, will suffice to shift the burden of proof and require the beneficiary to show affirmatively that the transaction was fair and free from influence (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 155) .

The court then observed that in the present case, it was established that plaintiff was susceptible to imposition because of her age and mental infirmity and the evidence in the record gave rise to an inference that the transaction complained of was not the product of plaintiff's free volition. Thus, under these circumstances, the burden of proof shifted to defendants, and it was incumbent on them to overcome the presumption of undue influence. The court stated that although defendants had produced evidence to show that the deed in question had been signed by plaintiff on her own volition after defendant's attorney had explained to her the difference between a will and a deed, this evidence was contradicted by plaintiff's evidence, and the resolution of the resulting conflict of evidence was the exclusive province of the trier of fact (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 155-156) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
C. Undue Influence

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.71

§ 92.71 Supporting Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1)]--Evidence Insufficient to Rebut Presumption of Undue Influence Arising From Advantage Gained by Fiduciary in Transaction With Beneficiary [see Prob. Code § 16004(c); former Civ. Code § 2235]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO REBUT THE PRESUMPTION OF UNDUE INFLUENCE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S OBTAINING AN ADVANTAGE IN THE TRANSACTION WITH PLAINTIFF, WITH WHOM DEFENDANT HAD A CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Undue Influence. [See § 92.70, Paragraph B.]

C. Definition of Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship. Undue influence consists of the use by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or by one who holds a real or apparent authority over another, of such confidence or authority for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage over the other (Civ. Code § 1575(1)).

D. Confidential Relationship Defined. [See § 92.44, Paragraph C.]

E. Weakness of Mind Not Necessary. Weakness of mind of the person imposed on is not a necessary element of undue influence in a case which arises out of a breach of a confidential relationship (Krug v. Meeham (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 279, 240 P.2d 732).

F. Presumption of Undue Influence. A transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary that occurs during the existence of the trust or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains, and by which the trustee obtains anadvantage from the beneficiary, is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties. This presumption is a presumption affecting the burden of proof (Prob. Code § 16004(c)); see Rebmann v. Major (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 684, 688, 85 Cal. Rptr. 399 (attorney-client); Krug v. Meeham (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 279, 240 P.2d 732 (unmarried cohabitants)).

G. Advantage Raising Presumption of Undue Influence Defined. A fiduciary obtains an advantage which raises the presumption of undue influence provided by former Section 2235 of the Civil Code (see Prob. Code § 16004(c) when he or she enters into a transaction with a beneficiary whereby the fiduciary's position is improved, or he or she obtains a favorable opportunity, or where he or she otherwise gains, benefits, or profits; it need not be shown that the advantage obtained was unfair, unjust, or inequitable (Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 152, 272 P.2d 11).

[Optional] H. Presumption of Undue Influence Applicable to Attorney-Client Relationship. Because of the strict fiduciary and confidential nature of the attorney-client relationship, the presumption of former Section 2235 of the Civil Code that any transaction between a trustee and his or her beneficiary by which the trustee obtains any advantage is entered into under undue influence applies to the relationship of attorney and client (Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 151, 272 P.2d 11 ; Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512).

[Optional] I. Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Husband and Wife. Each spouse is required to act with respect to the other spouse in the management and control of the community property in accordance with the general rules governing fiduciary relationships that control the actions of persons having relationships of personal confidence as specified in Section 721 (of the Family Code), until their community property has been divided by the parties or by a court. This duty includes the obligation to make full disclosure to the other spouse of all material facts and information regarding the existence, characterization, and valuation of all assets in which the community has or may have an interest and debts for which the community is or may be liable, and to provide equal access to all information, records, and books that pertain to the value and character of those assets and debts on request (Fam. Code § 1100(e); see, e.g., Estate of Cover (1922) 188 Cal. 133, 143, 204 P. 583).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful plaintiff's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract when plaintiff's consent thereto was obtained through defendant's exercise of undue influence. The ground of the motion is the insufficiency of the evidence to overcome the presumption of undue influence arising from (1) the existence of a confidential relationship between plaintiff and defendant and (2) the advantage obtained by defendant from the transaction with plaintiff.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

Most of the decisional authority used in this form was decided under former Civ. Code § 2235, which was repealed as of July 1, 1987, and replaced by Prob. Code § 16004(c) (Paragraph F). This change is discussed in § 92.04. As cases apply Prob. Code § 16004(c) to particular relationships, they will be added to the appropriate form, until then, the cases decided under the former Civ. Code § 2235 are retained but should be reviewed and used with caution until the effect of the presumption of Prob. Code § 16004(c) on relationships other than trustee-beneficiary is fully clarified. 1992 and 1993 legislation, effective January 1, 1994, specifies the extent to which the spousal relationship is invested with the same rights, duties, and standards of care as the trustee-beneficiary relationship [see Paragraph I].

[i] Related Use

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support defendant's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant asserts that the contract is voidable because defendant's consent thereto was obtained through the exercise of undue influence by plaintiff.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in §§ 92.72 and 92.73 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose a motion for new trial supported by this memorandum.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Weakness of Mind Not Necessary

Krug v. Meeham (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 240 P.2d 732 , was an action by plaintiff decedent's administrator, to set aside conveyances of realty. In his complaint, plaintiff alleged that decedent had purchased certain parcels of real property with his own money and placed title to them in the names of decedent and defendant in joint tenancy; that at the time of the purchases decedent and defendant, although not married, lived and resided together as husband and wife; that decedent reposed great trust and confidence in defendant and in her judgment and advice; that decedent consulted with defendant concerning his business affairs and followed her advice and instructions in managing them; and that by reason of the relationship between decedent and defendant and by taking advantage of the trust and confidence reposed in her by him, and by the exercise of undue influence over decedent, defendant acquired an influence over decedent's mind whereby his free will was overborne and her own substituted for it, and thus she was enabled to and did induce decedent to make the purchases and to name herself as joint tenant in the deeds. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint and dismissed the action.

On appeal, defendant argued in support of the judgment, inter alia, that the complaint was insufficient because it failed to allege that decedent was weak of mind. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this argument, holding that weakness of mind of the person imposed on is not a necessary element of undue influence in a case which arises out of a breach of a confidential relationship (109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 279) .

[b] Presumption of Undue Influence

Prob. Code § 16004(c) became operative July 1, 1991. As yet, few cases have emerged to specify whether, as specified by former Civ. Code § 2219, every person who voluntarily assumes a relationship of personal confidence with another is deemed a trustee, and thus bound by the same rights, duties, and standards of care that apply to trustee-beneficiary relationships [compare Prob. Code § 16004(c) and former Civ. Code § 2235, set forth below]. The cases used in Paragraph F were decided under the former Civil Code provisions and are illustrative of the types of relationships to which the former presumption was applied [see Prob. Code § 15003(b), (c) (intent of 1986 repeals and enactments as not to alter rules applied by courts to fiduciary and confidential relationships)].

Former Civil Code § 2235 provided that all transactions between a trustee and his or her beneficiary during the existence of the trust, or while the influence acquired by the trustee remains, by which he or she obtains any advantage from his or her beneficiary, are presumed to be entered into by the latter without sufficient consideration, and under undue influence.

In Rebmann v. Major (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 684, 85 Cal. Rptr. 399 , plaintiff held title to certain real property with his wife in joint tenancy. Defendant was an attorney who was next-door neighbor to plaintiff and his wife. Plaintiff's wife was godmother to both defendant's children. Defendant's husband was a surgeon. Shortly after defendant's husband discovered that plaintiff's wife had cancer and performed surgery on her, plaintiff's wife told defendant that she wanted her interest in the real property to go to defendant's children. Defendant testified that she told plaintiff's wife that the joint tenancy could be severed by executing deeds to the children and suggested that another attorney should handle the transfer. Plaintiff's wife requested, however, that defendant prepare the deeds. Defendant did so, and plaintiff's wife executed them in defendant's presence and gave them to defendant for safekeeping. Defendant did not record the deeds until the day before plaintiff's wife's death, four years later. During that period, defendant kept the existence of the deeds a secret from her children, her husband, and plaintiff. Thereafter, plaintiff brought an action to quiet title to the property. The trial court found that the deeds were induced by the undue influence of defendant and entered judgment for plaintiff.

The factual and procedural background of Krug v. Meeham (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 240 P.2d 732 , is discussed in § 92.71[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal reversed a judgment of dismissal entered after the trial court had sustained a demurrer to the complaint. The court held that the allegations of the complaint sufficiently alleged the ultimate fact that the conveyances were procured by the undue influence of defendant. The court noted that where a confidential relation exists between the parties, and the one in whom confidence is reposed actively participates in a transaction whereby he or she obtains a gift from, or advantage over, the other, a presumption of undue influence arises and casts on the party who has gained the gift or advantage the burden of rebutting it and showing fairness and good faith (109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 278-279) . The court then observed that the facts alleged in this case showed (1) that a relation of trust and confidence existed between decedent and defendant, and (2) that defendant actively participated in securing the conveyances whereby, without consideration, she received a joint tenancy interest in the properties (109 Cal. App. 2d 274, 279) .

On appeal, defendant attacked the trial court's finding of undue influence as not supported by the evidence. In particular, defendant contended that the trial court's determination that the statutory presumption of undue influence [see former Civ. Code § 2235] was not dispelled was erroneous. Defendant's contention was based on the premise that this presumption is only one which affects the burden of producing evidence, so that once defendant testified to the relevant circumstances, the presumption was dispelled and the trial judge was in error in finding on the basis of that presumption. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this contention. The court held that the presumption of undue influence set forth in former Civ. Code § 2235 is designed to implement the public policy in favorof the security of those who entrust themselves or their property to the administration of others and thus is a presumption affecting the burden of proof under Evid. Code § 605 (defining presumptions affecting burden of proof). The court noted that the effect of the presumption was to impose on defendant the burden of proof as to the nonexistence of the presumed undue influence and that it was for the trial judge to determine whether the evidence offered by appellants showed, by a preponderance of the evidence, that there was no undue influence (109 Cal. App. 2d 274) .

[c] Advantage Raising Presumption of Undue Influence Defined

Civ. Code §§ 2219 and 2235 were repealed as of July 1, 1987. There is no counterpart for former Civ. Code § 2219. The presumption of Civ. Code § 2235 is now set forth in Prob. Code § 16004(c) [see Paragraph F].

In Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 272 P.2d 11 , plaintiff entered into a contract with defendants by which plaintiff agreed to handle all business affairs for defendants in connection with the lease of certain real property owned by defendants for the drilling of oil wells. The contract also provided for plaintiff to prepare income tax returns and provide investment advice. In return for these services, defendants agreed to pay plaintiff a percentage of the income received by them from the oil company which was leasing the land. At the time the contract was executed, plaintiff was defendants' attorney. The contract provided that it would terminate on plaintiff's death. Several years after the contract was executed, defendants discharged plaintiff from his employment and notified him that they would make no further payments to him under the contract. Plaintiff then brought an action against defendants for money allegedly due under the contract. The trial court found that the contract was procured by undue influence and entered judgment for defendants.

On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court first noted that under former Civ. Code § 2235, all transactions between a trustee and his beneficiary during the existence of the trust, or while the influence acquired by the trustee remains, by which he obtains any advantage from his beneficiary, are presumed to be entered into by the latter without sufficient consideration and under undue influence, and that under former Civ. Code § 2219, everyone who voluntarily assumes a relation of personal confidence with another is deemed a trustee. The Court observed that former Civ. Code § 2235 applies to contractual dealings between attorney and client because it is recognized that this relationship is one of a strict fiduciary and confidential nature. To bring the presumptions of insufficient consideration and undue influence into operation, the Court stated, it is necessary to show that a confidential relationship existed and that this relationship was used by the fiduciary to gain an advantage (43 Cal. 2d 147, 151) .

The Court then rejected plaintiff's contention that the advantage gained by the fiduciary must be unfair before the presumptions of former Civ. Code § 2235 may be properly applied to the case. The Court noted that while certain cases apparently did require an unfair advantage [see, e.g., Patterson v. Davis (1953) 121 Cal. App. 2d 152, 159, 262 P.2d 601 ; Donovan v. Security-First Nat'l Bank (1945) 67 Cal. App. 2d 845, 853-854, 155 P.2d 856] , numerous other cases discussing virtually all types of fiduciary and confidential relationships properly required only an advantage [see, e.g., Weil v. Weil (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 770, 788, 236 P.2d 159 ; Johnson v. Clark (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 529, 534, 61 P.2d 767 ; Plxweve Aircraft Co. v. Greenwood (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 21, 24, 141 P.2d 933] , and these latter cases were in accord with the language of former Civ. Code § 2235 (43 Cal. 2d 147, 151-152) . The Court held that when a fiduciary enters into a transaction with a beneficiary whereby the fiduciary's position is improved, or he obtains a favorable opportunity, or where he otherwise gains, benefits, or profits, it may fairly be said that an advantage has been obtained. To declare that the advantage obtained must be unfair, unjust, or inequitable before the presumptions arise would result in the imposition of a condition which is not required by former Civ. Code § 2235 (43 Cal. 2d 147, 152) .

The Court held that there was evidence in the record from which the trial court could reasonably have concluded that plaintiff had obtained an advantage from defendants by the contract at the time it was made, and that the presumptions of undue influence and insufficient consideration specified in Civ. Code § 2235 were thus present in the case (43 Cal. 2d 147, 152-153) . The presumption of undue influence was evidence and sufficient to sustain the judgment even though there was direct evidence contrary to the presumption. The Court noted that although plaintiff presented some evidence tending to show that there was no undue influence, this evidence did not overcome the presumption of undue influence as a matter of law. Since the trial court resolved the conflicting evidence by finding that there was undue influence, and since the finding was supported by the evidence, the Court would not disturb the finding on appeal (43 Cal. 2d 147, 153-154) .

[d] Presumption of Undue Influence Applicable to Attorney-Client Relationship

Civ. Code § 2235 was repealed as of July 1, 1987. The presumption of Civ. Code § 2235 is now set forth in Prob. Code § 16004(c) [see Paragraph F].

Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 272 P.2d 11 , is discussed in § 92.71[3][c].

In Hicks v. Clayton (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 136 Cal. Rptr. 512 , plaintiffs brought an action to rescind a contract by which they agreed to sell certain real property to defendant and his wife. At the time the contract was entered into and for several years before then, defendant had been plaintiffs' attorney. Plaintiffs hadborrowed money from several different parties to finance the purchase of the land and the construction of a house thereon. These debts were secured by deeds of trust on the property. The holder of one of these trust deeds brought an action for foreclosure. Defendant represented plaintiffs in negotiations to settle this lawsuit. When these negotiations failed, defendant became interested in buying the property himself. The parties entered into a contract by which plaintiffs agreed to convey the property to defendant and his wife. Plaintiffs were to remain responsible for the debts secured by trust deeds other than the one which was the subject of the foreclosure suit. Defendant agreed to give his own personal note, secured by a deed of trust, to the holder of the latter trust deed and to obtain plaintiffs' release from their obligations thereunder. Defendant also agreed to reimburse plaintiffs for their payments on the debts secured by the other trust deeds and to give plaintiffs his personal unsecured promissory note for the total amount of these debts. Finally, he agreed to transfer to plaintiffs stock in a corporation, which he also represented and of which he was a substantial shareholder. Defendant failed to inform plaintiffs of financial and legal difficulties facing the corporation, although he had access to such information. Defendant did not suggest to plaintiffs that they obtain independent legal advice concerning the transaction, nor did plaintiffs obtain such advice. After taking possession of the property, defendant failed to perform virtually all of the terms of the contract. The corporation went into bankruptcy shortly afte the contract was entered into, and the stock became worthless. The trial court denied plaintiffs equitable relief from the contract (that is, restitution and rescission) and awarded them only a money judgment for damages for breach of contract, concluding that defendant had breached no duty to plaintiffs arising out of the attorney-client relationship.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that the finding of no breach of duty was not supported by the evidence, and also that the trial court had erred in not making any findings concerning the adequacy of the legal remedy. Addressing itself to the issue of breach of duty, the court of appeal first observed that the undisputed evidence showed that defendant was acting as plaintiffs' attorney at the time the contract was entered into. The court noted that former Civ. Code § 2235 provides that all transactions between a trustee and his beneficiary during the existence of the trust, or while the influence acquired by the trustee remains, by which he obtains any advantage from his beneficiary, are presumed to be entered into by the latter without sufficient consideration, and under undue influence, and that this code section applies to the relationship of attorney and client. Thus, the court held, where the attorney-client relationship exists, the rebuttable presumption of fraud or undue influence arises where the attorney profits from his dealing with the client, and this presumption can only be overcome by clear and satisfactory evidence that the transaction between the attorney and the client was fair and equitable and that the client was fully informed as to all matters relative to the transaction (67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262) . The court then examined the uncontroverted facts of the case and concluded that the contract in question was patently and grossly unfair to the client and that the presumptions of former Civ. Code § 2235 stood unrebutted (67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 262-263) . The court also held that the remedy of damages awarded to plaintiffs was not adequate under the circumstances of this case and remanded the case to the trial court for further proceedings to fashion a proper equitable remedy (67 Cal. App. 3d 251, 264-266) .

[e] Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Husband and Wife

Generally, in transactions between themselves, a husband and his wife are subject to the general rules governing fiduciary relationships which control the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other. This confidential relationship imposes a duty of the highest good faith and fair dealing on each spouse, and neither may take any unfair advantage of the other. This confidential relationship is a fiduciary relationship subject to the same rights and duties of nonmarital business partners, as provided in Corp. Code §§ 16403, 16404, and 16503, including, but not limited to, the following [Fam. Code § 721(b)]:

- Providing each spouse access at all times to any books kept regarding a transaction for the purposes of inspection and copying [see Corp. Code § 16403(b)];

- Rendering upon request, true and full information of all things affecting any transaction which concerns the community property (except that nothing in Fam. Code § 721 is intended to impose a duty for either spouse to keep detailed books and records of community property transactions); and

- Accounting to the spouse, and holding as a trustee, any benefit or profit derived from any transaction by one spouse without the consent of the other spouse which concerns the community property [see Corp. Code § 16404(b)(1)].

This fiduciary relationship rule is expressly subject to exceptions in the following provisions of the Probate Code [Fam. Code § 721(b)]:

- Prob. Code §§ 143, 144, and 146, concerning waivers of rights of inheritance.

- Prob. Code § 16040, concerning the trustee's standard of care in administering a trust.

- Prob. Code § 16047, concerning a trustee's duties under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act.

It is the intent of the legislature that Fam. Code § 721 provides that thefiduciary relationship between spouses includes all of the same rights and duties in the management of community property as the rights and duties of unmarried business partners managing partnership property, as provided in Corp. Code §§ 16403, 16404, and 16503, and to abrogate the ruling in In re Marriage of Duffy (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 923, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 160 , to the extent that it is in conflict with that intent [Stats. 2002, ch. 310, § 2].

In Estate of Cover (1922) 188 Cal. 133, 204 P. 583 , decedent's widow applied for and was granted letters of administration to administer the estate of her deceased husband. Thereafter, decedent's son filed a petition to revoke the widow's letters of administration and to substitute himself as administrator of the estate, alleging that under the terms of a marriage settlement agreement entered into between the deceased and his widow, the latter ceased to be an heir of the deceased and expressly waived all interest whatsoever in his estate. Under the terms of the agreement, the widow received about $14,000 from the property of the deceased. The estate was worth about $200,000. In her answer, the widow admitted signing the agreement and alleged, inter alia, that the agreement was the result of undue influence exerted on her by the deceased and others. The trial court, sitting in probate, entered judgment denying the petition.

On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that the evidence supported the finding of undue influence. The Court first noted that confidential and fiduciary relations are synonymous, and may be said to exist whenever trust and confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another. Confidential relations are presumed to exist between husband and wife. Thus, the Court stated, the husband, if he obtains an advantage over his wife in his dealings with her, must stand unimpeached of any abuse of the confidence presumptively reposed in him by the wife and resulting from the marital relation, and, failing in this, he must bear the burden of showing that the transaction was fair and just and fully understood by the party from whom the advantage was obtained (188 Cal. 133, 143) .

The Court observed that it is the rule in California that transactions between husband and wife are subject to the general rule which controls the actions of persons occupying confidential relations with each other, as provided in former Civ. Code § 2235, which means, when applied to the relation of husband and wife, that in every transaction between them by which the superior party obtains a possible benefit, equity raises a presumption against its validity and casts on that party the burden of proving affirmatively its compliance with equitable requisites and of thereby overcoming the presumption (188 Cal. 133, 143-144) . The Court held that the finding that the agreement was conceived and consummated in presumptive undue influence was sufficiently sustained by uncontradicted evidence in the record which showed that the widow executed the agreement in ignorance of her rights and without independent advice as to its meaning and effect, that she thereby released her expectancy to a substantial portion of a $200,000 estate in return for a consideration obviously inadequate, and that the agreement was drafted at the direction of the deceased and executed by the widow at his instigation, without any disclosure by him to her of the value and character of his estate or of the rights which she was called on to surrender by the agreement (188 Cal. 133, 145) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Presumption of Undue Influence

In Ford v. Shearson Lehman American Express, Inc. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 225 Cal. Rptr. 895 , the court of appeal discussed the presumption as applicable both to constructive fraud and to undue influence. The court stated that constructive fraud is presumed from the relation of the parties to a transaction, or the circumstances under which it takes place. Constructive fraud often exists when parties to a contract have a special confidential or fiduciary relationship that affords the power and means to one party to take undue advantage of, or exercise undue influence over, the other party, and under such circumstances undue influence will also be inferred or presumed (180 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1020) (quoting Main v. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Sminth, Inc. (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 19, 31-33, 136 Cal. Rptr. 378).

In O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245 , plaintiff sought to rescind a deed conveying real property owned by her to defendants, who were husband and wife, and herself in joint tenancy. Plaintiff, an elderly and lonely woman, and defendants had been close friends for many years. When plaintiff's sister, her only living relative, died, plaintiff went through considerable emotional strain. Thereafter, she became increasingly dependent on defendants and placed trust and confidence in them in conducting her affairs. Defendants suggested to plaintiff that she should find an attorney to draft her will so that she might, on her passing, reward some of those who had helped her during her lifetime. One of defendants enlisted the services of a friend, who was an attorney, to prepare a will leaving the property in question to defendants. The attorney, accompanied by her husband and one of defendants, went to plaintiff's home and after an interview, convinced plaintiff to sign not only the will but a deed giving defendants a two-thirds interest in the property in joint tenancy. Plaintiff signed the deed apparently believing that she had given nothing away and that the purpose was merely to avoid probate. Some time later, plaintiff discovered that defendants were actual owners of two-thirds of the property and requested an immediate reconveyance of the property. When defendants refused to comply, she brought an action to rescind the deed. The trial court found that defendants had procured the deed by means of undue influence and entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, defendants sought reversal primarily on the ground that the evidencewas insufficient to support the trial court's finding of undue influence. In affirming the judgment insofar as it ordered reconveyance of the property, the court of appeal rejected this contention, holding that the record sustained the finding of undue influence both on the basis that defendants breached the confidential relationship existing between the parties and that they took an unfair advantage of plaintiff's weakness of mind. In addressing the issue of breach of confidential relationship, the court noted that while the mere fact that a relationship is friendly and intimate does not necessarily amount to a confidential relationship, nevertheless, such a relationship may be said to exist whenever trust and confidence is reposed by one person in the integrity and fidelity of another (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 153) . The court held that the evidence in this case and reasonable inferences drawn therefrom amply supported the existence of a confidential relationship between defendants and plaintiff (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 153) . The court also noted that it was clear that due to defendants' activity the deed in dispute was prepared, executed, and recorded, and that the transaction resulted in a detriment to plaintiff who was thereby deprived of her primary asset providing her security and livelihood and yielded a substantial benefit to defendants. In this type of situation, the court stated, a presumption arises that the advantage obtained by the grantee was by reason of undue influence exerted on the grantor. This presumption was, by itself, sufficient to support the finding of undue influence (45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 153-154) .

In Ortiz v. Avila (1963) 222 Cal. App. 2d 786, 35 Cal. Rptr. 522 , plaintiff brought an action to recover money paid by him to defendants. Plaintiff, a person of subnormal intelligence, had gone to live with defendants, who had known plaintiff for many years, and who had promised to take care of plaintiff for the rest of his life and to give him a decent funeral when he died. Plaintiff alleged that he had reposed great trust and confidence in defendants, that he had delivered his paychecks to them, and that defendants had agreed to act as his agents, representing that they would open and maintain a bank account in his name into which these paychecks would be deposited in his name. Plaintiff further alleged that the representations were false and fraudulent and that defendants had appropriated the money delivered to them to their own use. Defendants' answer denied the confidential relationship, the agreement, the representations, and any misappropriation of money, alleging that all earnings of either plaintiff or defendants were to be placed in a common fund for the common support and welfare of plaintiff and defendants and that the funds were so used. The trial court entered judgment for defendants.

On appeal, plaintiff contended, inter alia, that the trial court had erroneously refused to make findings on the issue of whether a confidential relationship existed and that such refusal was prejudicial to plaintiff. The court of appeal agreed and reversed the judgment. The court noted the statutory presumption of Civ. Code § 2235, which provides that any transaction entered into between a trustee and his beneficiary by which the trustee obtains any advantage is entered into without sufficient consideration and under undue influence, and observed that when a fiduciary enters into a transaction with a beneficiary by which the fiduciary's position is improved, or he obtains a favorable opportunity, or where he otherwise gains, benefits, or profits, it may fairly be said that an advantage has been obtained. To declare that the advantage obtained must be shown to be unfair, unjust, or inequitable before the presumptions arise would result in the imposition of a condition which is not required by Civ. Code § 2235 [quoting Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 152, 272 P.2d 11 , discussed in § 92.71[3][c]] (222 Cal. App. 2d 786, 791) . The court held that under the evidence of this case, there was no doubt that plaintiff was a person of subnormal intelligence and that a fiduciary relationship existed between plaintiff and defendants. It was also clear that the arrangement by which plaintiff delivered almost his entire paycheck to defendants placed them in a position to gain an advantage (222 Cal. App. 2d 786, 791-792) . Thus, the court stated, the burden was on defendants to prove that no unfair advantage had been taken of plaintiff; however, because the trial court failed to make special findings on the issue of confidential relationship, it was impossible to tell whether the trial court, in weighing the evidence, had considered the presumption of Civ. Code § 2235 and determined that it had been overcome, or had just disregarded it (222 Cal. App. 2d 786, 792) .

In Bank of America v. Cox (1957) 153 Cal. App. 2d 651, 314 P.2d 993 , plaintiff, as guardian of the estate of an incompetent person, brought an action to recover on promissory notes executed by defendant to the ward, defendant's mother. In his answer, defendant alleged that his mother had executed a release from these notes shortly before she was adjudged incompetent. The record showed that the mother was 82 years old, that her vision was impaired to the point where she was unable to read, that she lacked mental vigor, that defendant, her son, had handled all her business affairs for 10 years, and that she had the fullest confidence in him. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, the parties argued the case on the theory that the trial court found the release to have been procured by undue influence. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that although the record did not show that the trial court had in fact decided the case on a theory of undue influence, the evidence did in fact support such a theory. The court noted that the evidence here was ample to sustain a finding of confidential relationship between defendant and his mother. The court then stated that where, as here, the party in whom the trust is reposed obtained an advantage, it is presumed that the transaction was the result of undue influence (153 Cal. App. 2d 651, 652) . Defendant's evidence created at most a conflict and there was ample support in the record for the view that defendant had failed to sustain his burden of showing that his mother freely and voluntarily executed the release (153 Cal. App. 2d 651, 652-653) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
C. Undue Influence

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.72

§ 92.72 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Breach of Fiduciary Duty or Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1); Prob. Code § 16004(c)]--Presumption of Breach of Fiduciary Duty Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary [former Civ. Code § 2235; Prob. Code § 16004(c)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE CONTRACT IN QUESTION RELATED TO THE _____ [HIRING or COMPENSATION] OF DEFENDANT. THE PRESUMPTION OF _____ [if parties are the trustee and beneficiary of an express trust: VIOLATION OF FIDUCIARY DUTIES ESTABLISHED BY PROBATE CODE SECTION 16004(c) or, if parties are fiduciaries other than the trustee and beneficiary of an express trust: UNDUE INFLUENCE AND/OR INSUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION] THEREFORE IS NOT APPLICABLE, AND THE EVIDENCE WAS OTHERWISE SUFFICIENT TO SUSTAIN THE _____ [VERDICT or DECISION].

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

[If parties to case are the trustee and beneficiary of an express trust, use the following:]

B. Presumption of Violation of Trustee's Fiduciary Duties Is Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary. The presumption that a transaction between the trustee and a beneficiary that occurs during the existence of the trust or while the trustee's influence with the beneficiary remains, and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary, is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties, does not apply to the provisions of an agreement between a trustee and a beneficiary relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee (Prob. Code § 16004(c)).

[Or, if parties to case are fiduciaries other than the trustee and beneficiary of an express trust, use the following after reading the Cautionary Note in the Comment:]

B. Presumption of Undue Influence and/or Insufficient Consideration Is Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary. Neither the presumptions of insufficient consideration and undue influence established under former Civil Code Section 2235 and case law, which remains applicable to the facts of this case (Probate Code Section 15003(b)), nor the presumption of violation of fiduciary duties under current Probate Code Section 16004(c), apply to the provisions of any agreement between a trustee and beneficiary relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee (Walton v. Broglio (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 403-404, 125 Cal. Rptr. 123 ; see former Civ. Code § 2235; Prob. Code § 16004(c); see also Prob. Code § 15003(c)).

[CONTINUE:]

[Optional] C. Presumption of Undue Influence Not Applicable to Agreement Between Attorney and Client Relating to Fees. The presumption that any transaction between an attorney and his client by which the attorney gains any advantage from his or her client is obtained by undue influence does not apply to any agreement relating to fees, even when there is a pre-existing attorney-client relationship (Walton v. Broglio (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 403-404, 125 Cal. Rptr. 123 ; see former Civ. Code 2235; Prob. Code § 16004(c)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a plaintiff's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract entered into between a "trustee" and a "beneficiary" during the existence of the trust and by which the trustee obtains an advantage from the beneficiary. Ordinarily, such a transaction is presumed to be a violation of the trustee's fiduciary duties [Prob. Code § 16004(c); see former Civ. Code § 2235]. However, this presumption does not apply to the provisions of an agreement between trustee and beneficiary relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee [Prob. Code § 16004(c); former Civ. Code § 2235]. Use of these points and authorities is appropriate when the underlying contract falls within the latter exception.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for a new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.71.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Cautionary Note

The language of current Prob. Code § 16004(c) was derived from former Civ. Code § 2235 (repealed by stats. 1986, ch. 820, operative July 1, 1987). Although the statutory language of former Civ. Code § 2235 referred to the "trustee" and "beneficiary," case law repeatedly referred to and often applied that statute in fiduciary situations other than those involving trustees and beneficiaries as those terms are ordinarily used. For example, former Civ. Code § 2235 was repeatedly applied to the attorney-client relationship [see Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 151, 272 P.2d 11] . The repeal of former Civ. Code § 2235 raised questions regarding whether and to what extent case law decided under that section applies to the successor section, Prob. Code § 16004(c), or remains valid independently of the successor section. The answer to that question is not entirely clear.

The Trust Law itself states that its enactment was not intended to alter the rules applied by courts to fiduciary and confidential relationships, other than with respect to express trusts specifically governed by the Trust Law [Prob. Code § 15003(b)]. Moreover, nothing in the Trust Law or in Prob. Code § 82 (which defines "trustee" for purposes of the Probate Code) is intended to prevent courts from applying the principles in the Trust Law to other types of entities or relationships when those principles or procedures are applied pursuant to statutory or common law principles [Prob. Code § 15003(c)]. However, the language of former Civ. Code § 2235 created a presumption of insufficient consideration and undue influence on the part of the trustee, whereas the current Probate Code provision instead creates a presumption of breach of fiduciary duty. In practice, the distinction between the language of the former and current statutes may be more a matter of semantics than of substance. Nevertheless, the change in the nature of the statutory presumption and the fact that the section has been moved from the Civil Code to the Probate Code suggest that practitioners should be cautious in relying on cases under former Civ. Code § 2235 in situations now expressly governed by the Trust Law.

Conversely, as to fiduciary relationships not expressly governed by the Trust Law, it is unclear whether the relevant fiduciary principles are governed by the case law that existed under former Civ. Code § 2235, the presumption as currently stated in Prob. Code § 16004(c), a combination of both, or neither. The safest course of action is probably to cite all the potentially applicable authorities. Thus, the second alternative Paragraph B of this form cites both case law that developed under former Civ. Code § 2235, relying on Prob. Code § 15003(b) for its continuing applicability, and the current law under Prob. Code § 16004(c), both of which support the position taken in this memo.

[c] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be submitted by a plaintiff in opposition to a motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] by an unsuccessful defendant in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant has alleged that the contract is voidable because his or her consent was obtained through undue influence on the part of plaintiff.

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Violation of Trustee's Fiduciary Duties Is Not Applicable to Contract Relating to Hiring or Compensation of Fiduciary

In Walton v. Broglio (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 125 Cal. Rptr. 123 , plaintiff attorney contracted to represent defendant, who was facing a criminal charge of extortion, for $15,000. As part of the fee agreement, plaintiff insisted that defendant sign a promissory note for $7,500. Plaintiff represented defendant in the criminal charge. When defendant defaulted on the note, plaintiff brought an action seeking recovery on the note. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, finding that at the time the note was executed, there was a preexisting attorney-client relationship between plaintiff and defendant which gave rise to a presumption of invalidity under former Civ. Code § 2235, and that plaintiff had failed to successfully rebut the presumption.

On appeal, plaintiff contended that the presumptions of insufficient consideration and undue influence codified by former Civ. Code § 2235 did not apply to the case. The court of appeal agreed with this contention and reversed the judgment. The court noted that the last sentence of former Civ. Code § 2235, which states that the presumptions established by that section do not apply to the provisions of an agreement between a trustee and his beneficiary relating to the hiring or compensation of the trustee, was added in 1963 and appears broadly to exclude all agreements relating to hiring or compensation, including those made after the fiduciary relationship is established (52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 403-404) . The court observed that prior law had created an exception to the presumptions only when there was no preexisting fiduciary relationship [see, e.g., Setzer v. Robinson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 213, 216, 18 Cal. Rptr. 524, 368 P.2d 124] and that no case since the amendment of former Civ. Code § 2235 had directly construed it. The court held that the amendment, properly construed, prevents the application of the presumption to any agreement relating to fees, even where there is a preexisting attorney-client relationship, and that the trial court thus erred in not trying the issues in the case without application of the presumption (52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 404) .

Although this case was decided under former Civ. Code § 2235, the presumption that formed the basis for the decision was continued under current Prob. Code § 16004(c). Since Prob. Code § 15003(b) provides that enactment of the Trust law was not intended to alter principles applicable to other types of fiduciary arrangements, and since Prob. Code § 15003(c) permits application of Trust Law principles to other types of entities and relationships, it is presumed that the rule stated in Walton v. Broglio remains applicable in situations other than those specifically subject to the Trust Law. For additional discussion, see Cautionary Note in the comment to this form.

[b] Presumption of Undue Influence Not Applicable to Agreement Between Attorney and Client Relating to Fees

The facts and holding in Walton v. Broglio (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 400, 125 Cal. Rptr. 123 , are discussed in § 92.72[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
C. Undue Influence

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.73

§ 92.73 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Breach of Fiduciary Duty or Undue Influence Based on Misuse of Confidential Relationship [Civ. Code § 1575(1)]--Presumption of Undue Influence [former Civ. Code § 2235] or Breach of Fiduciary Duty [Prob. Code § 16004(c)] Not Applicable When Plaintiff Fails to Show Existence of Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE FAILED TO ESTABLISH THE EXISTENCE OF A CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT, SO THAT THE PRESUMPTION OF BREACH OF FIDUCIARY DUTIES UNDER PROBATE CODE SECTION 16004(c) [if appropriate (see comment), add:, AND THE PRESUMPTIONS OF INSUFFICIENT CONSIDERATION AND UNDUE INFLUENCE UNDER CASE LAW DECIDED UNDER FORMER CIVIL CODE SECTION 2235], _____ [WAS or WERE] NOT APPLICABLE, AND THE EVIDENCE WAS OTHERWISE SUFFICIENT TO SUSTAIN THE _____ [VERDICT or DECISION].

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Showing of Confidential Relationship and Advantage Required. In order to bring into operation the presumption of breach of fiduciary duties under Probate Code Section 16004(c), or the presumptions of insufficient consideration and undue influence under case law decided under former Civil Code Section 2235, it is necessary to show that a confidential relationship existed and that this relationship was used by the fiduciary to gain an advantage (Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 151, 272 P.2d 11 (decided under former Civ. Code § 2235); see Prob. Code §§ 15003(b) (Trust Law did not alter law governing other types of fiduciary and confidential relationships), (c) (Trust Law principles may be applied to other types of fiduciary relationships pursuant to statutory or common law principles), 16004(c)).

C. Existence of Confidential Relationship as Question of Fact. The existence of a confidential or fiduciary relationship depends on the circumstances of each case and is a question of fact for the trier of fact (Kudokas v. Balkus (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 750, 103 Cal. Rptr. 318).

D. Confidential Relationship Defined. [See § 92.44, Paragraph C.]

[Optional] E. Employment Relationship Not Confidential. [See § 92.44, Paragraph D.]

[Optional] F. Family Relationship Not Necessarily Confidential. [See § 92.44, Paragraph E.]

[Optional] G. No Confidential Relationship Presumed Between Prospective Marriage Partners. [See § 92.44, Paragraph F.]

[Optional] H. Friendship, Affection, or Intimacy as Not Necessarily Creating Confidential Relationship. [See § 92.44, Paragraph G.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful plaintiff's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into as a result of undue influence on the part of defendant when plaintiff has contended in the motion that the evidence is insufficient to rebut the presumptions of insufficient consideration and undue influence under case law decided under former Civil Code Section 2235, and/or the presumption of breach of fiduciary duties under Probate Code Section 16004(c). The ground of opposition presentedis that these presumptions are not applicable because plaintiff failed to establish the existence of a confidential relationship between the parties.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.71.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Cautionary Note

The language of current Prob. Code § 16004(c) was derived from former Civ. Code § 2235 (repealed by stats. 1986 ch. 820, operative July 1, 1987). Although the statutory language of former Civ. Code § 2235 referred to the "trustee" and

"beneficiary," case law repeatedly referred to and often applied that statute in fiduciary situations other than those involving trustees and beneficiaries as those terms are ordinarily used. For example, former Civ. Code § 2235 was repeatedly applied to the attorney-client relationship [see Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal.2d 147, 151, 272 P.2d 11] .

The language of former Civ. Code § 2235 created a presumption of insufficient consideration and undue influence on the part of the trustee, whereas the current Probate Code provision instead creates a presumption of breach of fiduciary duty. In practice, the distinction between the language of the former and current statutes may be more a matter of semantics than of substance. Nevertheless, the repeal of former Civ. Code § 2235 raised questions regarding whether and to what extent case law decided under that section applies to the successor section, Prob. Code § 16004(c), or remains valid independently of the successor section.

The Trust Law itself states that its enactment was not intended to alter the rules applied by courts to fiduciary and confidential relationships, other than with respect to express trusts specifically governed by the Trust Law [Prob. Code § 15003(b)]. Moreover, nothing in the Trust Law or in Prob. Code § 82 (which defines "trustee" for purposes of the Probate Code) is intended to prevent courts from applying the principles in the Trust Law to other types of entities or relationships when those principles or procedures are applied pursuant to statutory or common law principles [Prob. Code § 15003(c)]. Nevertheless, the change in the nature of the statutory presumption and the fact that the section has been moved from the Civil Code to the Probate Code suggest that practitioners should be cautious in relying on cases under former Civ. Code § 2235 in situations now expressly governed by the Trust Law.

Conversely, as to fiduciary relationships not expressly governed by the Trust Law, it is unclear whether the relevant fiduciary principles are governed by the case law that existed under former Civ. Code § 2235, the presumption as currently stated in Prob. Code § 16004(c), a combination of both, or neither. The safest course of action is probably to cite all the potentially applicable authorities.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Showing of Confidential Relationship and Advantage Required

The factual and procedural background of Bradner v. Vasquez (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 147, 272 P.2d 11 , is discussed in § 92.71[3][c]. In holding that the presumptions of undue influence and insufficient consideration established by former Civ. Code § 2235 were applicable to the contract in that case, the Supreme Court noted that to bring those presumptions into operation, it is necessary to show that a confidential relationship existed and that this relationship was used by the fiduciary to gain an advantage (43 Cal. 2d 147, 151) .

[b] Existence of Confidential Relationship as Question of Fact

In Kudokas v. Balkus (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 103 Cal. Rptr. 318 , defendants contracted to buy a motel from plaintiff. After several years, defendants defaulted in their payments under the contract but refused to surrender possession of the motel. Plaintiff then filed an action to recover possession of and quiet title to the motel and its furnishings and equipment. Defendants cross complained on the ground of actual and constructive fraud. The trial court held that there was no fraud, and sustained plaintiff's claim of title.

On appeal, defendants contended that the trial court's finding of no confidential relationship between the parties was not supported by the evidence. In affirming the judgment insofar as it rejected defendants' allegations of fraud, the court of appeal rejected this contention. The court noted that existence of a confidential or fiduciary relationship depends on the circumstances of each case and is a question of fact for the fact trier (26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 750) . The court held that the trial court's finding of no confidential relationship was reasonably and fairly supported by the evidence (26 Cal. App. 3d 744, 750-751) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesDuress & Undue InfluenceGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
C. Undue Influence

9-92 California Points & Authorities §§ 92.74-92.89

[Reserved]

§§ 92.74[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.90

§ 92.90 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE ALLEGED MISTAKE WAS UNILATERAL ON THE PART OF PLAINTIFF[, AND THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT DEFENDANT WAS AWARE OF PLAINTIFF'S MISTAKE AT THE TIME THE CONTRACT WAS ENTERED INTO].

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake. A unilateral mistake may not invalidate a contract [without a showing that the other party to the contract was aware of the mistaken belief and unfairly utilized that mistaken belief in a manner enabling him to take advantage of the mistaken party] (In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 1241, 273 Cal. Rptr. 516 ; Meyer v. Benko (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 944, 127 Cal. Rptr. 846).

[Optional] C. Assumed Risk of Unilateral Mistake Based on Insufficient Knowledge. A party bears the risk of mistake when he or she is aware, at the time the contract is made, that he or she has only limited knowledge with respect to the fact to which the mistake relates but treats that knowledge as sufficient (In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 1241, 273 Cal. Rptr. 516 ; see Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 154(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when plaintiff made a unilateral mistake of which defendant was not aware at the time the contract was entered into. Paragraph B supports the general proposition that there is no relief for unilateral mistake. Optional Paragraph C addresses one particular type of unilateral mistake--going ahead with insufficient knowledge.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that the alleged mistake was unilateral on the part of plaintiff.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because defendant entered into it under a mistake of fact.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 92.99 may be used to oppose a motion for new trial supported by these points and authorities.

[d] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 273 Cal. Rptr. 516 , is discussed in § 92.90[3][b].

In Meyer v. Benko (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 127 Cal. Rptr. 846 , plaintiffs brought an action for specific performance of a contract for the sale of real property. The document executed by the parties provided that plaintiff buyers were to obtain an FHA-guaranteed loan to finance the purchase and that defendant sellers were to perform any necessary work at their expense. Following execution of the contract, plaintiffs procured such a loan. However, as a condition to guaranteeing the loan, the FHA required that a new roof be installed on theresidence. Both parties refused to pay for the cost of a new roof, and, as a result, the loan commitment lapsed. Defendants never conveyed possession of or title to the residence to plaintiffs. The trial court concluded that no contract existed between the parties and entered judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that there was an enforceable contract between the parties (55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 942-944) . On appeal, defendants also contended that a material mistake of fact (defendants' belief that they would not be obligated to install a new roof on the residence) prevented contract formation. The court held that a unilateral mistake may not invalidate a contract without a showing that the other party to the contract was aware of the mistaken belief and unfairly utilized that mistaken belief in a manner enabling him or her to take advantage of the other party (55 Cal. App. 3d 937, 944) . The court noted that defendants failed to present any evidence in support of either requirement.

[b] Assumed Risk of Unilateral Mistake Based on Insufficient Knowledge

The parties in In re Marriage of Hahn (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 273 Cal. Rptr. 516 , entered into an oral stipulation in open court on July 13, 1988, that the marital home was worth $179,000, based on an appraisal supplied by appellant. The appraiser used comparable sales occurring within seven months before the July 1988 trial. Later, appellant tried to reopen to present evidence that the home was worth $225,000. The new evidence would have been based on comparable sales that occurred on July 3, August 9, August 18, and in October. The trial court refused to allow the later evidence, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal said that the court could not be faulted for a party's failure to properly investigate or estimate the value of an asset. Appellant supplied the appraisal that was the basis of the stipulated value and assumed any risk that that appraisal might be faulty. It is hornbook law that one party's mistaken belief is insufficient to justify relieving that party from his or her obligations (224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 1241) . The court cited Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 154(b) for the proposition that a party bears the risk of mistake when he or she is aware, at the time the contract is made, that he or she has only limited knowledge with respect to the fact to which the mistake relates but treats that knowledge as sufficient. Thus, the trial court was well within its prerogative to deny appellant's motion to be relieved of the stipulation (224 Cal. App. 3d 1236, 1241) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unilateral Mistake of Fact Is Not Basis for Rescission if Other Party Is Unaware of Mistake

The court of appeal in Sinai Memorial Chapel v. Dudler (1991) 231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 282 Cal. Rptr. 263 , affirmed a judgment enforcing a cemetery contract. None of the documents submitted indicated that defendant acted under a mistake, and unilateral mistake is not a defense to a contract action (231 Cal. App. 3d 190, 199) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeUnilateral MistakeContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.91

§ 92.91 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--No Rescission if Mistake Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S ALLEGED MISTAKE WAS CAUSED BY HIS/HER NEGLECT OF A LEGAL DUTY.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. No Rescission if Mistake Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty. The mistakes for which relief from a contract may be granted are limited to those that are not caused by the neglect of a legal duty (Civ. Code § 1577; Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 765, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[Optional] C. Failure to Make Reasonable Inquiry Concerning Meaning of Contract Terms as Neglect of Legal Duty. When a party who has notice of sufficient facts to put him or her on inquiry as to the meaning of the terms of a contract fails to make reasonable inquiry concerning those terms, he or she is guilty of neglect of legal duty, which precludes rescission of the contract for mistake of fact (see Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 765-766, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when plaintiff's mistake was the result of his or her neglect of a legal duty.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that plaintiff's mistake resulted from his or her neglect of a legal duty.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [see Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because defendant entered into it under a mistake of fact.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 92.100 may be used to oppose a motion for new trial supported by the memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Rescission if Mistake Caused by Neglect of Legal Duty

In Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533 , defendants entered into a contract with plaintiffs' assignor for the sale of a large parcel of land. Under the terms of the contract, the unpaid balance of the purchase price was secured by a trust deed on the land. The trust deed contained a release clause which provided for the manner in which portions of the real property would be released from the lien of the trust deed as the payments were made on the principal. After the buyer assigned his interest in the contract to plaintiffs, but before escrow closed, a dispute concerning the release clause arose when defendants refused to release a certain parcel of property at plaintiffs' request. Thereafter, escrow closed and plaintiffs brought an action for specific performance of the trust deed release clause. Defendants then gave notice of rescission of the contract on several grounds, including mistake. The trial court entered judgment for defendants rescinding the agreement and ordering the grant deeds and trust deeds cancelled. Plaintiffs appealed.

In support of the judgment, defendants contended, inter alia, that the unilateral misunderstanding of defendants as to the meaning of the release clause justified rescission of the entire transaction based on unilateral mistake. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal noted that under Civ. Code § 1577, a mistake of fact is defined as "a mistake, not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake, and consisting in: [P] 1. An unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a fact, past or present, material to the contract; or, [P] 2. Belief in the present existence of a thing material to the contract, which does not exist, or in the past existence of such a thing, which has not existed." Thus, the court stated, the mistakes for which relief may be granted are limited to those that are not caused by the neglect of a legal duty (269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 765) . The court then noted that in the case at bench, the record reflected that three or four months prior to the scheduled close of escrow, defendants had expressed dissatisfaction with the release clause and had changed counsel, and that just prior to the close of escrow, defendants had again indicated their dissatisfaction with the terms of the release clause but had raised no objection to the close of escrow. The court concluded that defendants clearly had notice of sufficient facts to put them on inquiry as to the meaning of the release clause, but nevertheless had failed to make reasonable inquiry, or any inquiry at all. The court held that defendants were therefore guilty of neglect of a legal duty and that the mistake which defendants had entertained was not a mistake of fact within the meaning of the law (269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 765-766) .

[b] Failure to Make Reasonable Inquiry Concerning Meaning of Contract Terms as Neglect of Legal Duty

Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.91[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.92

§ 92.92 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE ALLEGED MISTAKE CONSISTED SOLELY OF PLAINTIFF'S UNILATERAL _____ [IGNORANCE or MISUNDERSTANDING] OF THE CONTRACT PROVISIONS.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions. A court will not set aside contractual obligations on the ground of mistake, particularly where they are embodied in written contracts, merely because one of the parties claims to have been ignorant of or misunderstood the provisions of thecontract (Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 765, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when the alleged mistake consists solely of plaintiff's ignorance or misunderstanding of the terms of the contract.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

This form may be modified to support a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when it appears from the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that the alleged mistake consisted solely of plaintiff's ignorance or misunderstanding of the terms of the contract.

With appropriate modifications, this form also may be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

Lawrence v. Shutt (1969) 269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 75 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed in § 92.91[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal reversed a judgment in favor of defendants rescinding a contract for the sale of land and rejected defendants' contention that their unilateral misunderstanding of the meaning of the release clause in the trust deed justified rescission of the entire transaction on the ground of mistake. The court noted that a court, under its equitable power, does have the right to rescind a contract for purely unilateral mistake of one contracting party. Nevertheless, the court stated that in the interest of preserving some reasonable stability in commercial transactions, courts will not set aside contractual obligations, particularly where they are embodied in written contracts, merely because one of the parties claims to have been ignorant of or misunderstood the provisions of the contract (269 Cal. App. 2d 749, 764-765) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission Not Granted for Misunderstanding of Contract Provisions

In Merced County Sheriff's Employee's Assn. v. County of Merced (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 233 Cal. Rptr. 519 , county firefighters' and sheriffs' associations sought enforcement of contracts between each association and the county in accordance with the associations' interpretations. The court of appeal reversed the trial court, upheld the sheriffs' contract as interpreted by the sheriffs' association, and held that no contract was formed between the county and the firefighters' association (188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 676-677) . In the case of the sheriffs' association contract, the court stated the principle that when contract language is ambiguous and susceptible to two different meanings, one understood by each party, the contract is properly upheld in accordance with the meaning attached by the party who manifested the meaning it attached if that party had no reason to know of a different meaning attached by the other party and the other party had reason to know of the meaning attached by the first party. Since the sheriffs' association's negotiating representative had made its interpretation clear and the county had not, the county was bound by the sheriffs' association's interpretation (188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 672-674) . In the case of the firefighters' agreement, the court applied the principle that mutual assent is lacking if the parties attach materially different meanings to the contract language and (1) neither party knows or has reason to know the meaning attached by the other party, or (2) each party knows or has reason to know the meaning attached by the other. Here, no contract was formed because both parties were at fault, one by misstating the reason for its proffered language, which produced irreconcilable ambiguity, and the other for failing to appreciate the import of that language (188 Cal. App. 3d 662, 675-676) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.92A

§ 92.92A Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission of Life Annuity Contract Not Allowed for Buyer's Ignorance of Condition Causing Early Death

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE RESCISSION OF A LIFE-ANNUITY CONTRACT MAY NOT BE BASED ON THE BUYER'S IGNORANCE OF A PRE-EXISTING MEDICAL CONDITION THAT CAUSES UNEXPECTEDLY EARLY DEATH.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission of Life Annuity Contract May Not Be Based on Buyer's Ignorance of Pre-Existing Fatal Condition. A life annuity contract may not be rescinded for the buyer's benefit on the ground of mistake of fact when the alleged mistake is that, at the time of making the contract, the buyer was ignorant of a pre-existing condition leading inexorably to an unexpectedly early death (Grenall v. United of Omaha Life Ins. Co. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 188, 193-196, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609).

Dated: _____.

Respectfully submitted,

_____[firm name, if any]

By:_____ [signature]

_____[typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a life annuity contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when the alleged mistake consists of the buyer's ignorance of a pre-existing condition that causes an unexpectedly early death.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

This form may be modified to support a general demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a life annuity contract entered into by mistake when it appears from the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that the alleged mistake consists of the buyer's ignorance of a pre-existing condition that causes an unexpectedly early death.

With appropriate modification, this memorandum may also be used to support defendant's motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] when the ground for relief does not appear on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

In Grenall v. United of Omaha Life Ins. Co. (2008) 165 Cal. App. 4th 188, 80 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 , a woman bought a single-premium life annuity contract from an insurance company, not knowing at the time that she had untreatable ovarian cancer, from which she died several weeks later. The personal representative of her estate sought a decree of rescission of the contract on the ground of mistake of fact. The trial court granted the insurance company's motion for summary judgment, and the personal representative appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Noting that no California case had dealt with the issue (although California cases on closely similar issues did exist), the court followed cases from other states in holding, as a matter of law, that a life annuity contract cannot be rescinded for the buyer's benefit on the ground of mistake of fact when the alleged mistake is that, at the time of making the contract, the buyer was ignorant of a pre-existing condition leading inexorably to an unexpectedly early death. The court concluded, "In light of these authorities, we hold that [the annuitant] bore the risk of the alleged mistake regarding her health and life expectancy at the time of the annuity contract." Because the plaintiff could not establish an essential element of its rescission claim--namely, that the party asserting mistake of fact did not bear the risk of the mistake--summary judgment was held to be proper (165 Cal. App. 4th 188, 193) .

124 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.93

§ 92.93 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--Mistake Not Material

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH THAT THE ALLEGED MISTAKE WAS MATERIAL TO THE CONTRACT.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. Mistake Must Be Material. A mistake may be urged as a ground for relief from a contract only if the mistake is material to the contract (Edwards v. Lang (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 5, 12, 18 Cal. Rptr. 60). The mistake, whether of fact or law, must affect the execution and essential elements of the contract and not merely some collateral matter (Bellwood Discount Corp. v. Empire Steel Bldgs. Co. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 435, 346 P.2d 467). The mistake must be such that it animated and controlled the conduct of the party; it must go to the essence of the object of the contract and not be merely incidental. It must be shown that but for the mistake the party would not have assumed the obligation from which he or she seeks to be relieved (Roller v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 149, 157, 206 P.2d 694).

[Optional] C. Mistake Concerning Collateral Matter. If a mistake pertains to a collateral matter, such as a quality or characteristic of the thing sold, rescission may not be granted unless the difference between the real and the supposed quality or nature of the thing is so extreme as to make it virtually a different thing (see Vickerson v. Frey (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 621, 628, 224 P.2d 126).

[Optional] D. Mistake as Not Material When Parties Learn True Facts Prior to Execution of Contract. Any representations and mistakes of fact made by the parties during the negotiations become immaterial when, prior to the execution of the contract, the parties learn the true facts (Coleman v. Edgar (1927) 83 Cal. App 720, 724, 257 P. 452).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract entered into under a mistake of fact or law when the alleged mistake was not material to the contract.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may also be modified to support a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when it appears from the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that the alleged mistake was not material to the contract.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact or law.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mistake Must Be Material

In Edwards v. Lang (1961) 198 Cal. App. 2d 5, 18 Cal. Rptr. 60 , plaintiff entered into a contract with defendants for the sale of a business. The business consisted of the manufacture of push button spice racks. In the course of negotiations for the sale of the business, plaintiff represented to defendants that he had a patent which "covered" the spice racks. Defendants entered into the contract believing that this patent covered the working mechanism of the spice rack, that is, the push button, and that the patent would protect them in the exclusive manufacture of the spice racks. In fact, the patent was merely a design patent which did not cover the functional aspects of the spice racks. After going into possession of the business, defendants found they were unable to produce the spice racks as cheaply as plaintiff had and were thus unable to deliver them at the price that their distributor was willing to pay for them. Thereafter, they ceased production and failed to meet their obligations on the promissory note which theyhad given to plaintiff to finance the purchase. Plaintiff brought an action to foreclose the chattel mortgage which secured the note and for a deficiency judgment in the event that the obligation on the note was not satisfied through foreclosure. Defendants cross complained for rescission of the contract on the ground of fraud. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, defendants changed their defensive theory, contending that the findings made by the trial court required a conclusion that they executed the note and chattel mortgage under a mistake of fact. In affirming, the court of appeal noted that a mistake of fact may be urged as a defense to an action on a contract only if the mistake is material to the contract (198 Cal. App. 2d 5, 12) . The court observed that in this case, even though the trial court found that plaintiff had innocently misrepresented that the patent owned by him covered the spice racks he manufactured, which might be the basis for a mistaken belief by defendants as to the fact represented, there was neither pleading, proof, nor finding that this mistake was material to the contract.

In Bellwood Discount Corp. v. Empire Steel Bldgs. Co. (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 346 P.2d 467 , plaintiff brought an action to rescind a contract that it had entered into with defendant and to recover its initial payment under the contract. The contract provided for defendant to furnish all labor and materials necessary to construct a tapered girder steel panel building on a parcel of land owned by plaintiff and to furnish necessary engineering of structural steel and concrete block walls and foundation drawings only. The contract explicitly excluded electrical work, plumbing, concrete work, reinforcing steel, painting, or interior partitions, and any other work not specifically mentioned. After the contract was signed, defendant prepared a set of plans for submission to the city building department covering the structural details of the contemplated building and the concrete walls and foundations. The building department returned the plans to plaintiff with a correction sheet specifying certain additional information which had to be furnished before a building permit could be issued. Included were certain items required by the fire prevention provisions of the building code relating to plaintiff's contemplated use of the structure as an automotive repair shop, which required either installation of automatic sprinklers or the division of the building into two parts by a proper fire resistant wall. A sprinkling system had not been discussed by the parties prior to making the contract and interior walls had been expressly excluded from the contract. After learning of the need for one or the other of these items, plaintiff attempted to rescind the contract on the ground of mistake. The trial court entered judgment for defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that mistake, either of law or fact, as grounds for rescission of a contract, must affect the execution and material elements of the contract and not merely some collateral matter (175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 435) . The court then reviewed the trial court's findings and observed that no provision for either a sprinkling system or a fire resistant interior wall was included in the contract and that defendant owed plaintiff no duty with respect thereto. The court concluded that these items were collateral to the agreement of the parties and that the trial court therefore correctly held that plaintiff had no right to rescind on the ground of mistake (175 Cal. App. 2d 432, 436) .

In Roller v. California Pac. Title Ins. Co. (1949) 92 Cal. App. 2d 149, 206 P.2d 694 , plaintiff brought an action for money had and received to recover the amount of a down payment paid into escrow pursuant to a contract for the purchase of real property. Plaintiff claimed the right to rescind the contract on the ground that it had been entered into by mistake. The property had formerly been owned by a third party who held a trust deed to the property, which had been given by defendant. The sale contract provided that plaintiff was to assume the mortgage and make payments thereunder to the third party. Defendant was to lease the property from plaintiff. The contract further provided that any failure to pay rent when due could, at plaintiff's option, be credited against plaintiff's obligation to pay the balance of the purchase price. However, as the court noted, because the outstanding encumbrance on the property was payable to the third party, who held the trust deed, and not to defendant, there was no balance against which plaintiff could offset any unpaid rent. Plaintiff contended that he had entered into the contract under the mistaken belief that defendant's obligation to pay rent would be secured by his right to offset unpaid rent against the unpaid balance of the purchase price. The trial court entered judgment for defendant, holding that the contract was valid and enforceable and that plaintiff had breached it.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. In addressing the question of the materiality of the provision for the security of the lease, the court stated that it was plaintiff's burden to prove that the mistake was material. The court noted that to warrant relief in equity, a mistake concerning a matter of fact, must be material, and the fact must be such that it animated and controlled the conduct of the party. It must go to the essence of the object in view, and not be merely incidental. The court must be satisfied that, but for the mistake, the complainant would not have assumed the obligation from which he seeks to be relieved (92 Cal. App. 2d 149, 157) . The court concluded that plaintiff did not sustain his burden in this respect.

[b] Mistake Concerning Collateral Matter

In Vickerson v. Frey (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 621, 224 P.2d 126 , plaintiff appealed from an adverse judgment in an action in which she sought to rescind a contract purchase of real property from defendants on several grounds, including mistake of law and fact. The property was a building which contained two apartments and an unfinished basement. Plaintiff and defendants entered into the contract believing that the basement could be converted into an apartment which could be rented for living quarters. None of the parties was aware at the time that the basement could not readily be converted because building regulations requiredan eight-foot clearance between the floor and ceiling and the unfinished basement had a clearance of only seven and one-half feet.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, holding that the mistake of the parties was not a mistake material to the contract as required for rescission of the contract under Civ. Code §§ 1577 and 1578 (100 Cal. App. 2d 621, 627) . The court noted that the mistake bore on the use of only a portion of the property under purchase and that this contemplated use, despite the mistake, was not impossible but only more costly and difficult (100 Cal. App. 2d 621, 627-628) . The mistake did not relate to the intrinsic nature of the bargain and did not vitally affect a fact on the basis of which the parties contracted. The court stated that the mistake pertained to a collateral matter, that is, a quality or characteristic of the thing sold. In such a case, the court held, the difference between the real and the supposed quality or nature of the thing must be so great as to make it virtually a different thing (100 Cal. App. 2d 621, 628) .

[c] Mistake Not Material When Parties Learn True Facts Prior to Execution of Contract

In Coleman v. Edgar (1927) 83 Cal. App 720, 257 P. 452 , plaintiff brought an action to recover the amount due on a contract for the sale of real property. The property in question lay along the banks of a river. Defendants alleged in their answer that plaintiff had represented that all of her land lay south of the south bank of the river and that both parties so believed and were mutually mistaken in that regard. They claimed that they were entitled to a reduction in the purchase price of the land because of the worthless character of the land which lay in the river and north thereof. The trial court found, however, that prior to the execution of the contract, the parties discovered that there was an overlapping boundary on the north end of plaintiff's land. From an examination of the overlapping deed, it was obvious that plaintiff's land could not have laid entirely to the south of the south river bank.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that any representations made in the beginning of the negotiations and any mistake of fact then made by the parties became immaterial when, prior to the execution of the contract, they learned the true facts (83 Cal. App. 720, 724) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mistake Must Be Material

In Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 , a client of defendant law firm brought a malpractice action against the firm and several individuals, alleging that they had prepared an irrevocable inter vivos trust in such a way that the trustees were exposed to personal liability for gift and estate taxes on distributions under the trust. The parties entered into settlement negotiations and told the court that with the exception of some additional drafting work, the matter had been resolved. However, defendants then sent the plaintiff a letter stating that they had just discovered an amendment to the Probate Code that would take effect shortly and that would eliminate the tax problem which had led to the malpractice suit. In light of the amendment, plaintiff would suffer no damage as a result of the way defendants prepared his trust, and therefore defendants were taking the settlement arrangement "off the table." Plaintiff amended his complaint to allege breach of an oral and written contract, and both sides moved for summary judgment. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment. Defendants moved for reconsideration, for vacation of the judgment and for new trial. The trial court denied all three motions, and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment for plaintiff, holding that defendants raised triable issues of fact as to their defense of rescission based on mutual mistake of law or fact. The mutual mistake was the parties' belief that the tax consequences of distributions from the trust would be governed by the applicable Probate Code section as it existed when the malpractice action was filed, rather than the amended version. The court found that this mutual mistake went to the very heart of the settlement agreement. If the amendment had the effect defendants claimed, then the trustees would suffer no adverse consequences and the settlement value of plaintiff's suit would be diminished. Defendants' evidence tended to show that they would not have entered into the settlement agreement had they known about the Probate Code amendment. Whether or not their interpretation of the amendment proved correct, they had enough confidence in their interpretation to rescind the agreement and risk a finding of liability at trial. Furthermore, any mistake on defendants' part resulting from their negligence would not preclude rescission. Freedom from negligence is not a requirement for rescission based on mistake of law, and ordinary negligence does not constitute neglect of a legal duty barring rescission for mistake of fact (95 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1338-1341) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.94

§ 92.94 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Rescission for Mistake Unless Material Injury or Prejudice Shown

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS INSUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT PLAINTIFFHAS SUFFERED ANY MATERIAL INJURY OR PREJUDICE BECAUSE OF THE MISTAKE.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. No Rescission for Mistake Unless Material Injury Shown. A contract is voidable for mistake only if enforcement would be materially harmful or more onerous to the party seeking avoidance than it would have been had the law or facts been as believed. The party seeking to rescind the contract must show that he or she has suffered material injury or prejudice although he or she need not show pecuniary loss (Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886, 124 Cal. Rptr. 577).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact or law when plaintiff has not suffered any material injury or prejudice from the mistake.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when plaintiff fails to allege facts showing that he or she has suffered material injury or prejudice because of the mistake.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact or law.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial in this set.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Rescission for Mistake Unless Material Injury Shown

Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 124 Cal. Rptr. 577 , arose out of the sale of a newspaper publishing company to defendant. Plaintiffs, former shareholders of the company, sought to rescind the transaction and recover profits allegedly realized by defendant on its subsequent resale of the company. The trial court sustained a demurrer to plaintiffs' complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed from the ensuing judgment of dismissal. The complaint alleged that plaintiffs and other shareholders had sold all of the stock of the company to defendant for $15,000,000 cash. Shortly after the sale, however, a U.S. District Court entered judgment decreeing that defendant's control of the company violated federal antitrust laws and this judgment was affirmed by the United States Supreme Court. Pursuant to the judgment, defendant sold the company to another publishing company. Plaintiffs further alleged that the parties had entered into the contract under a mutual mistaken belief that the contract for sale of the newspaper to defendant did not violate the antitrust laws.

On appeal, plaintiffs contended, inter alia, that they had alleged facts entitling them to relief on the ground of mutual mistake of law. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and rejected this contention. The court held that the complaint was fatally defective because it failed to set forth facts showing that plaintiffs were harmed or injured as a result of the claimed mistake. The court noted that a contract is voidable for mistake only if enforcement would be materially harmful or more onerous to the party seeking avoidance than it would have been had the law or the facts been as believed. This, stated the court, is a necessary corollary of the principle that the mistake, whether of law or fact, must materially affect an essential element of the contract. Thus, a party seeking to rescind a contract must show that he has suffered material injury or prejudice, although he need not show pecuniary loss (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886) . The court then observed that had the law been as the parties supposed, plaintiffs would have been no better off. The alleged mistake did not affect the consideration for which plaintiffs contracted; they received the $15,000,000 cash for which they had agreed to sell the newspaper. Nor did the federal antitrust suit render performance more onerous to plaintiffs or otherwise materially injure them. The court concluded that the alleged mistake concerning the legal consequences flowing from defendant's control of the company had no effect on the intrinsic merits of the contract insofar as plaintiffs were concerned; plaintiffs' interests therein were not injuriously affected by the alleged mistake of law (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886-887) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

126 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.95

§ 92.95 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief From Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE ALLEGED MISTAKE CONCERNED MATTERS WHICH THE PARTIES HAD IN MIND AS POSSIBILITIES AT THE TIME THE CONTRACT WAS ENTERED INTO AND AS TO THE EXISTENCE OF WHICH THE PARTIES ASSUMED THE RISK.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. No Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk. Where parties are aware at the time the contract is entered into that a doubt exists in regard to a certain matter and contract on that assumption, the risk of the existence of the doubtful matter is assumed as an element of the bargain; therefore, the kind of mistake which renders a contract voidable does not include mistakes as to matters which the contracting parties had in mind as possibilities and as to the existence of which they took the risk (Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 885, 124 Cal. Rptr. 577).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact or law when the alleged mistake concerned matters which the parties considered at the time the contract was entered into and as to the existence of which they assumed the risk.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to support a general demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake when it appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court must or may take judicial notice that the mistake concerned matters as to which the parties assumed the risk.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support plaintiff's motion for a new trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact or law.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

The factual and procedural background of Guthrie v. Times-Mirror Co. (1975) 51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 124 Cal. Rptr. 577 , is discussed in § 92.94[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment dismissing an action to rescind a contract on the ground of mutual mistake of law after sustaining a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. In support of the judgment, defendant contended, inter alia, that the complaint revealed that at the time they contracted, the parties were aware that defendant's acquisition and control of the newspaper company presented a possible or potential federal antitrust problem and that they therefore assumed the risk that their counsel's prophecy as to what the court in the antitrust suit would do might be wrong. The court of appeal noted that where parties are aware at the time the contract is entered into that doubt exists in regard to a certain matter and contract on that assumption, the risk of the existence of the doubtful matter is assumed as an element of the bargain. Thus, the court stated, the kind of mistake which renders a contract voidable does not include mistakes as to matters which the contracting parties had in mind as possibilities and as to the existence of which they took the risk (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 885) .

The court, however, concluded that it would be inappropriate at the demurrer stage to determine the validity of defendant's contention because the court could not infer solely from the facts alleged that the parties doubted the validity of the transaction and therefore assumed the risk that the contract might be found to be violative of the federal antitrust laws. The parties' doubts may have been laid to rest after their consultation with legal counsel. Thus, it was necessary to haveevidence concerning the nature of the legal advice on which the parties relied and their state of mind at the time they contracted in order to determine whether defendant's contention that the parties assumed the risk was correct (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 885-886) . The court held, however, that the complaint failed to state a cause of action for relief on the ground of mistake because it failed to allege facts showing that plaintiffs were harmed or injured as a result of the mistake (51 Cal. App. 3d 879, 886-889) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Mistake When Parties Assumed Risk

Spurgeon v. Drumheller (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 659, 220 Cal. Rptr. 195 , involved a situation in which one party was aware that there was some doubt and the other party apparently had not made his mistaken belief known. Although reversing on other grounds, the court of appeal agreed that there were no grounds for rescission based on mutual mistake. Defendant had agreed to purchase property subject to an existing deed of trust. He understood that to mean he could continue the existing financing without any involvement of the lenders. When one lender demanded financial information from the buyer, he refused to provide it or to consummate the transaction. The seller had been involved in many real estate transactions and had no basis for believing that credit information would or would not be requested. The court of appeal concluded that the evidence supported the trial court's finding that there was no showing that both parties contemplated at the time of the contract that no financial suitability information would be requested by any existing mortgagee (174 Cal. App. 3d 659, 663-664) .

In Glendale Fed. Sav. & Loan Ass'n v. Marina View Heights Dev. Co. (1977) 66 Cal. App. 3d 101, 135 Cal. Rptr. 802 , plaintiff entered into a contract with defendants whereby plaintiff agreed to lend defendants a sum of money to finance the purchase of land from plaintiff and to finance the development of this land and adjacent land owned by defendants. Under the agreement, defendants agreed to construct certain offsite improvements on the property within 18 months. Defendants subsequently defaulted on the loan payments and failed to construct the improvements. Plaintiff brought an action against defendants for damages for breach of the agreement and for fraud. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, defendants contended, inter alia, that they were excused from performance of the contract because of mistake. Defendants argued that the evidence showed that installation of the offsite improvements would be uneconomical without freeway access to the property and that the parties had contracted under the mistaken assumption that such access would soon be available. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this contention, noting that the trial court's findings sufficiently determined all issues of fact necessary to support the judgment and to overcome all pertinent theories of the defense. Defendants also contended that the trial court's finding that defendants intended to complete the offsite improvements but believed that completion within 18 months would be impracticable should have led to a finding of mistake. The court held that this argument was specious because that finding negated the defense of mistake. The court noted that the kind of mistake which renders a contract voidable does not include a mistake as to a matter which one of the contracting parties had in mind as a possibility and as to the existence of which he took the risk (66 Cal. App. 3d 101, 153) .

In Raddue v. LeSage (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 852, 292 P.2d 522 , plaintiff and defendants entered into a contract by which plaintiff agreed to purchase from defendants all merchantable timber on a certain tract of land and to pay defendants a total sum of $35,000 therefor. The contract provided that plaintiff was to pay defendants $10,000 on execution of the agreement and $16 per thousand board feet as the timber was harvested until $25,000 more had been paid. The contract also provided that if the harvesting operations failed to yield $35,000 in timber at $16 per thousand board feet, the total price was to be reduced pro rata. Thereafter, plaintiff brought an action to reform the contract, alleging that the total price specified in the contract was arrived at as a result of a mutually mistaken belief by the parties that the amount of timber on the property was 3.5 million board feet; the amount of timber actually on the land was less than one-third of the amount that the parties had believed there was; the parties had intended that plaintiff should pay at a rate of $10 per thousand board feet for the timber actually on the property; because of the mutual mistake, the contract did not express the intentions of the parties; and plaintiff had been damaged thereby in that he had paid more for the timber than the parties intended he should. The trial court entered judgment reforming the contract.

On appeal, the court of appeal reversed. The court reviewed the evidence and observed that the alleged basic assumption as to the quantity of timber on the property was necessarily an approximation and that the parties themselves had recognized this in their pleadings; exact certainty could not be determined by any means other than actually harvesting the timber. The court noted that where the parties to a contract know that there is doubt in regard to a certain matter and contract on that assumption, the contract is not rendered voidable because one is disappointed in the hope that the facts accord with his wishes. The risk of the existence of the doubtful fact is then assumed as one of the elements of the bargain [quoting Rest Contracts, § 502, comment f] (138 Cal. App. 2d 852, 855-856) . The court held that the case before it was brought within these rules by the presence in the contract of a provision which demonstrated that the parties considered that their assumption as to the quantity of merchantable timber on the land might be erroneous and provided for what their contractual relations should be in that event (138 Cal. App. 2d 852, 856) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.96

§ 92.96 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

RESCISSION CANNOT BE GRANTED FOR A MISTAKE REGARDING A FACT THAT CAME INTO EXISTENCE AFTER THE CONTRACT WAS FORMED.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation. In order to support rescission or provide a defense against an action for breach of contract, a mistake of fact must concern a present or past fact, not one that came into existence after the contract was formed (See Civ. Code § 1577; Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5, 263 Cal. Rptr. 373).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be used in support of a defendant's unsuccessful motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract. The ground for the motion is that rescission based on mistake of fact [see Civ. Code § 1577] is not available when the particular fact regarding which the other party was mistaken came into existence after formation of the contract. This form may be combined, in an appropriate case, with the points and authorities set out in § 92.97.

Although this form is arranged in the procedural context of a motion for new trial by a defendant against whom rescission was erroneously granted, it may be modified for use in another procedural context, including a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

Civ. Code § 1577 is set out in § 92.99, Paragraph D.

Plaintiff in Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 263 Cal. Rptr. 373 , once owned several Tahoe vacation properties with his brother, who formed defendant corporation to manage them and to hold the brother's interests. In 1982, the brother proposed that the corporation buy out plaintiff's interest in the properties. Plaintiff agreed, and the brother, in his capacity as chief executive officer of defendant, drafted the contract. It provided for a downpayment with the remainder to be paid with interest over five years. Beginning in 1985, property values at Lake Tahoe declined drastically. It was assumed for purposes of the case that the principal cause of the decline was the impending tax legislation, later enacted as the Tax Reform Act of 1986, which substantially eliminated tax benefits for secondary residences. Defendant stopped making payments under the contract, and plaintiff sued for breach of contract seeking the balance owing. Defendant cross complained for rescission claiming mistake of fact regarding the valuation of the properties and failure of consideration. Plaintiff moved for summary judgment. It was granted, the trial court finding, as a matter of law, that plaintiff was entitled to full performance of the contract. Judgment was entered for plaintiff. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Defendant contended that summary judgment was improper because there were three material issues of fact: (1) whether there was a mistake of fact regarding the valuation of the properties; (2) whether there was a basic assumption by the parties at the time they entered into the contract that the tax benefits generated by the properties would continue indefinitely; and (3) whether the parties intended to share the risk of any subsequent decline in value. Regarding Defendant's first contention, the court of appeal set forth Civ. Code § 1577, emphasizing the words "fact past or present," "present existence," "does not exist," "past existence," and "has not existed" (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5) . There was no evidence that the value of the properties was overstated in 1982 when the contract was formed. The entire thrust of defendant's argument was that subsequent events rendered the valuation mistaken. The court said that the emphasized words in Civ. Code § 1577 make clear that there is no legal authority for defendant's position. Without evidence that the future contingency was an assumption of the contract, the defense of mutual mistake of fact must be premised on past or present facts about which the parties are ignorant or mistaken (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) .

The court of appeal distinguished Smith v. Zimbalist (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 324, 38 P.2d. 170 , which involved a contract by a famous violinist to purchase twoviolins. Both the seller and the purchaser believed the violins were a "Guarnerius" and a "Stradivarius," and the contract price was reflected in that belief. The purchaser ceased making payment after discovering that the violins were not a "Guarnerius" and a "Stradivarius." In Smith, there was a mutual mistake regarding the identity of the violins, which were never what both parties believed them to be and never had the value attributed to them by the parties. Here, the properties did have the value the parties attributed to them at the time of contracting (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) .

The court concluded its consideration of this first contention by saying that adoption of defendant's argument would expose virtually any unprofitable contract to legal attack on the later occurrence of unforeseen adverse events (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Relief for Mistake Occurring After Contract Formation

In Habitat Trust for Wildlife, Inc. v. City of Rancho Cucamonga (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 1306, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 813 , the parties had made a contract, and achieving the contract's purpose depended on one party's obtaining a city's approval of that party's status as a qualified conservation entity, which that party failed to do. The other party claimed the right to rescind the contract on several grounds including mistake of fact, contending that the parties had made the contract on the assumption that the unapproved party was eligible for the city's approval as having the necessary status when in fact that was not true. The trial court concluded that both parties had been mistaken in that assumption and that rescission was justified on the ground of mistake of fact. The court of appeal concurred. The unapproved party, relying on Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp., contended on appeal that the only mistake involved the parties' assumption as to the occurrence of a future event, which was that the necessary approval would be obtained. The court of appeal was able to distinguish that case, however. " Unlike the Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App.3d 1 [263 Cal. Rptr. 373], case cited by Habitat/Sage, where the facts showed not that both parties were mistaken at the time of contracting, but that one party simply failed to consider the possibility of a future event (id. at p. 5), the parties here were mistaken, at the time they entered the Agreement, as to the present fact that Habitat would qualify as a QCE. This fact was an assumption of the Agreement, a circumstance that the Mosher court recognized would have altered its analysis of the risks in favor of finding mistake" (175 Cal. App. 4th 1306, 1343) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.97

§ 92.97 Supporting Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577] or Law [Civ. Code § 1578]--No Relief for Error of Judgment

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.40.]

RESCISSION CANNOT BE GRANTED FOR AN ERROR IN JUDGMENT.

A. Motion for New Trial. [See § 92.40, Paragraph A.]

B. No Relief for Error in Judgment. When a contract becomes unprofitable for one party, who knew its value could be significantly affected by a particular future event and yet made no provision in the contract with respect to that matter, there is no mistake of fact or failure of consideration, but only an error in judgment. The risk in such circumstances is borne only by that one party, who is not entitled to avoid, rescind, or reform the contract (Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5-6, 263 Cal. Rptr. 373).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be used in support of an unsuccessful defendant's motion for a new trial in an action to rescind a contract. The ground for the motion is that rescission based on mistake of fact [see Civ. Code § 1577] is not available when the purported mistake is merely an error in judgment regarding a risk that was assumed by the party seeking rescission. This form may be combined, in an appropriate case, with the points and authorities set out in § 92.95, § 92.96, or both.

Although this form is arranged in the procedural context of a motion for new trial by a defendant against whom rescission was erroneously granted, it may be modified for use in another procedural context, including a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Relief for Error in Judgment

The facts and procedural background of Mosher v. Mayacamas Corp. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 263 Cal. Rptr. 373 , are discussed in § 92.96[3][a]. After disposing of defendant's contention that there was a triable issue of fact as to whether there was a mistake of fact regarding the valuation of the properties, the court of appeal considered defendant's argument that it had raised triable issues of fact regarding whether the parties assumed a continuation of favorable tax treatment of the properties and resultant high valuation in entering into the contract and whether the parties intended to share the risk of any postsale economic adversity (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) . The court noted that there was no evidence of any such assumption or agreement. There was no language to that effect in the written agreement prepared by defendant, nor was there any evidence of an oral agreement or understanding (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6) . As a matter of law, defendant's predicament resulted from an error in judgment rather than a mistake of fact or failure of consideration. Defendant chose to enter into the contract knowing the tax benefits were a major aspect of the value of the properties and presumably knowing that the availability of those benefits could be affected by future legislation, yet it made no provision with respect to tax matters in the contract. Thus, defendant alone had to bear this risk and was not entitled to avoid, rescind, or reform the contract (215 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.98

§ 92.98 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6) in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted When Enforcement Would Be Unconscionable

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S MISTAKE WAS UNILATERAL SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE EFFECT OF THE MISTAKE IS SUCH THAT ENFORCEMENT OF THE CONTRACT WOULD BE UNCONSCIONABLE.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Mistake. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was given by mistake (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

C. Kinds of Mistake. Mistake may be either of fact or law (Civ. Code § 1576).

D. Mistake of Fact Defined. A mistake of fact is a mistake, not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake, and consisting in: (1) an unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a past or present fact which is material to the contract; or (2) belief in the present existence of a thing which is material to the contract and which does not exist, or in the past existence of such a thing which has not existed (Civ. Code § 1577).

E. Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted If Effect of Mistake Would Make Enforcement of Contract Unconscionable. Rescission is permitted when the effect of an unilateral mistake of fact is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable (Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 280-282, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when defendant has asserted in the motion that the claimed mistake was unilateral on the part of plaintiff. The ground of opposition presented is that the effect of the unilateral mistake of fact is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action [see Civ. Code §§ 430.10(c), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake.

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake of Fact Permitted if Effect of Mistake is Such That Enforcement of Contract Would Be Unconscionable

In Donovan v. RRL Corp. (2001) 26 Cal. 4th 261, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 807, 27 P.3d 702 , plaintiff noticed a newspaper advertisement placed by defendant car dealer which described a specific car for sale at a specific price. The name of the dealer was prominently displayed. When plaintiff attempted to purchase the car at the advertised price, the dealer's salesperson stated that the advertised price was a mistake and refused to sell the car to plaintiff at that price. Apparently the advertised price was a result of typographical and proofreading errors made by the newspaper staff. Defendant had not reviewed proof sheets of the ad before it was published, and was unaware of the mistake until plaintiff attempted to purchase the car. Plaintiff filed suit for breach of contract, fraud and negligence. The municipal court entered judgment for defendant, finding that there was no valid offer because defendant's unilateral mistake of fact vitiated or negated contractual intent. The court made factual findings that defendant's mistake regarding the advertisement was made in good faith, was not intended to deceive the public, and that plaintiff was unaware of the mistake before defendant's representatives disclosed it to him. Plaintiff appealed to the appellate department of the superiorcourt, which reversed the judgment for defendant. It concluded that the ad constituted an offer capable of acceptance by tender of the advertised price, and that defendant bore the risk of its mistake because plaintiff was unaware of the mistake. The court of appeal reversed the judgment of the municipal court and held that the ad constituted a contractual offer that invited acceptance, which plaintiff performed. It also found that defendant's failure to review the proof sheet for the newspaper ad constituted negligence that contributed to the placement of the erroneous advertisement.

The California Supreme Court reversed. It first found that the advertisement constituted an offer (26 Cal. 4th 261, 271-273) . It next held that defendant's printed name in the ad evidenced an intention to authenticate the advertisement as an offer and therefore constituted a signature, satisfying the statute of frauds (26 Cal. 4th 261, 276-278) . Finally, the court held that defendant could avoid enforcement of the contract on the ground of mistake. It initially found that defendant's lack of knowledge regarding the typographical error in the advertised price of the vehicle constituted a mistake of fact. The court noted that under the first Restatement of Contracts, unilateral mistake did not render a contract voidable unless the other party knew of or caused the mistake. The court noted that California case law does not adhere to the original Restatement's requirements for rescission based on unilateral mistake. The Restatement Second of Contracts, § 153(a), however, authorizes rescission for a unilateral mistake of fact where the effect of the mistake is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable. The court adopted that rule as California law (26 Cal. 4th 261, 278-282) . Having concluded that a contract properly may be rescinded on the ground of unilateral mistake of fact as set forth in section 153(a), the court next considered whether the requirements of that provision, construed in light of its previous decisions, were satisfied in the present case. The court stated that when the plaintiff has no reason to know of and does not cause the defendant's unilateral mistake of fact, the defendant must establish the following facts to obtain rescission of the contract: (1) the defendant made a mistake regarding a basic assumption upon which the defendant made the contract; (2) the mistake has a material effect upon the agreed exchange of performances that is adverse to the defendant; (3) the defendant does not bear the risk of the mistake; and (4) the effect of the mistake is such that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable (26 Cal. 4th 261, 282) . In this case, a significant error in the price term of the contract established the first factor. Because the error amounted to 32 percent of the price defendant intended, such a mistake was material. As for bearing the risk of mistake, the court reiterated that ordinary negligence does not constitute neglect of a legal duty under Civ. Code § 1577. Absent any evidence of bad faith, even the violation of any duty imposed by Veh. Code § 11713.1(e) (which states it is a violation of Vehicle Code for dealer to fail to sell vehicle at advertised price) would not constitute the neglect of a legal duty that precludes rescission for unilateral mistake of fact. In this instance, defendant's fault constituted of failure to review a newspaper proof sheet. Although it might constitute negligence, it was not a breach of defendant's good faith and fair dealing. Thus, defendant's conduct did not preclude rescission. Finally, the court held that enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable. Defendant would lose more than $9,000 of its original investment in the vehicle, while plaintiff would obtain a $12,000 windfall merely by paying the erroneous advertised price. Having determined that defendant satisfied the requirement for rescission of the contract on the ground of unilateral mistake of fact, the court concluded that the municipal court correctly entered judgment in defendant's favor (26 Cal. 4th 261, 294) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.99

§ 92.99 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S MISTAKE WAS UNILATERAL SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE IS SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT DEFENDANT KNEW OR HAD REASON TO KNOW THAT PLAINTIFF WAS ACTING UNDER A MISTAKE AT THE TIME THE CONTRACT WAS ENTERED INTO.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Mistake. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any party jointly contracting with him or her, was given by mistake (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

C. Kinds of Mistake. Mistake may be either of fact or law (Civ. Code § 1576).

D. Mistake of Fact Defined. A mistake of fact is a mistake, not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake, and consisting in: (1) an unconscious ignorance or forgetfulness of a past or present fact which is material to the contract; or (2) belief in the present existence of a thing which is material to the contract and which does not exist, or in the past existence of such a thing which has not existed (Civ. Code § 1577).

E. Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake. When one party to a contract knows or has reason to know thatthe other party is acting under a mistake, the contract may be rescinded by the mistaken party (M.F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 701, 235 P.2d 7).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when defendant has asserted in the motion that the claimed mistake was unilateral on the part of plaintiff. The ground of opposition presented is that defendant knew or had reason to know of plaintiff's unilateral mistake.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial which is supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.90.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action [see Civ. Code §§ 430.10(c), 430.30(a)] to a complaint for rescission of a contract entered into by mistake.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used by a defendant to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial [see Civ. Code § 657(6)] in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

In M.F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 235 P.2d 7 , defendant city published a notice inviting bids for the construction of a sewer project. The notice provided that each bid must be accompanied by a certified check or surety bond for an amount not less than 10 percent of the bid which was to be forfeited to the city if the city accepted the bid and the bidder failed or refused to execute a contract with the city. Plaintiff learned of the invitation for bids and proceeded to prepare a bid for submission to defendant. In the course of preparing the bid, an item estimated on a work sheet in the amount of $301,769 was inadvertently omitted from the final accumulation sheet and was overlooked in computing the total amount of the bid. The error was caused by the fact that the men preparing the bid were exhausted after working long hours under pressure. When the bids were opened, it was found that plaintiff's bid was $780,305 and the bids of the other three contractors were $1,049,592, $1,183,000, and $1,278,895. Plaintiff discovered its error several hours after the bids were opened and promptly notified defendant of its error. Defendant, however, passed a resolution accepting defendant's erroneous bid. Plaintiff refused to enter into a contract at that figure, and defendant demanded forfeiture of plaintiff's surety bond. Plaintiff then brought an action to rescind its bid and to obtain discharge of the bond. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

On appeal, defendant contended that a party is entitled to relief on the ground of mistake only where the mistake is mutual and that plaintiff's mistake in this case was wholly unilateral. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court rejected this contention. The Court noted that defendant had actual notice of the error in the estimates before it attempted to accept the bid, and knowledge by one party that the other is acting under mistake is treated as equivalent to mutual mistake for purposes of rescission. The Court observed that relief from mistaken bids is consistently allowed where one party knows or has reason to know of the other's error and the other requirements for rescission are fulfilled (37 Cal. 2d 696, 701) . The Court stated that rescission may be had for mistake of fact if the mistake is material to the contract and was not the result of neglect of a legal duty if enforcement of the contract would be unconscionable, and if the other party can be placed in status quo. In addition, the Court stated, the party seeking relief must give prompt notice of his election to rescind and must restore or offer to restore to the other party everything of value which he has received under the contract (37 Cal. 2d 696, 701) . The Court then held that plaintiff had met all the requirements for rescission (37 Cal. 2d 696, 702-703) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rescission for Unilateral Mistake Permitted if Other Party Has Knowledge of Mistake

In Brunzell Constr. Co. v. G.J. Weisbrod, Inc. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 278, 285 P.2d 989 , plaintiff, who was bidding for the general contract on a public school construction project, solicited bids from subcontractors for various phases of the work. One of the items for which bids were sought was the steel work on the project, which included the construction of some steel decking. Defendant submitted a bid for the steel work to plaintiff by telephone, quoting a price which expressly omitted the steel decking. After plaintiff successfully bid for the general contract, defendant sent plaintiff a letter confirming the bid on the subcontract. This letter erroneously failed to omit steel decking from the work covered by the bid. Plaintiff then prepared a written subcontract agreement which provided that defendant would perform the work previously quoted in its bid confirmation letter. Both parties signed this agreement. Several days later, defendant discovered that neither the bid confirmation nor the contract excluded steel decking. Defendant requested that plaintiff amend the written contract so as to exclude the decking, in accordance with defendant's verbal bid. Plaintiff declined to do so, and defendant then refused to perform under the contract as executed. Plaintiff awarded the subcontract to another bidder and brought an action against defendant for damages for breach of contract. The trial court entered judgment for defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court first reviewed the evidence and concluded that the trial court was justified in finding that defendant had made a mistake in its letter of confirmation, that plaintiff knew that such a mistake had been made, that it took unfair advantage of this mistake to incorporate decking into the contract though the bid price was made exclusive of decking, and that defendant assented to the contract under an honest misapprehension which plaintiff was trying to exploit. The court noted that on discovering the true facts a few days after the contract was signed and while it was still executory, defendant gave prompt notice of rescission and no offer of restoration was necessary because it had received nothing of value which it could restore. Thus, the court concluded, the trial court was justified in concluding that plaintiff could not enforce the contract as made. The court held that when a contract is still executory, and the parties can be put in status quo, one party to the contract will not be permitted to obtain an unconscionable advantage through enforcement of the contract where he or she knows of the other's mistake, where the mistake is material and not the result of neglect of a legal duty or an error in judgment, and the requirements for rescission are fulfilled (134 Cal. App. 2d 278, 286) .

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Bldg. Serv. Emp. Pension Tr. v. Amer. Bldg. Maint. (9th Cir. 1987) 828 F.2d 576, 578 , reversed a judgment entered against plaintiff based on accord and satisfaction. Although the pension issues were governed by federal law, the issue of the effect of plaintiff's attorney's miscalculation of interest in the demand letter was determined under California law. After defendant paid the amount demanded, plaintiff's attorney discovered the mistake. The court said that even if a unilateral mistake is not discovered until after the nonmistaken party has fully performed the accord, rescission would be required if the nonmistaken party should have known that the mistake was made. Thus summary judgment based on accord and satisfaction was error. A triable question of fact existed about whether defendant's attorney should have known from the demand letter that opposing counsel miscalculated the amount of interest claimed. If defense counsel should have spotted the mistake, the accord could be rescinded (828 F.2d 576, 578) .

Architects & Contractors Estimating Service, Inc. v. Smith (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 211 Cal. Rptr. 45 , involved a judgment for a nonperforming party who had asserted mistake as a defense. The decision was based in part on the ground that rescission for unilateral mistake is permitted only if the other party knew or had reason to know of the mistake (164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1007-1008) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.100

§ 92.100 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Ordinary Negligence as Not Neglect of Legal Duty Barring Relief From Mistake

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE MISTAKE WAS THE RESULT OF PLAINTIFF'S NEGLECT OF A LEGAL DUTY SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT, AT MOST, PLAINTIFF WAS GUILTY OF ONLY ORDINARY NEGLIGENCE WHICH DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A NEGLECT OF LEGAL DUTY PRECLUDING RELIEF FROM A CONTRACT ON THE GROUND OF MISTAKE.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Mistake. [See § 92.99, Paragraph B.]

C. Kinds of Mistake. [See § 92.99, Paragraph C.]

D. Mistake of Fact Defined. [See § 92.99, Paragraph D.]

E. Carelessness Does Not Necessarily Constitute Neglect of Legal Duty. The mere fact that a mistake is due to some carelessness on the part of the mistakenparty does not necessarily indicate a neglect of legal duty which will prevent rescission of the contract for mistake (M.F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 702, 235 P.2d 7).

F. Ordinary Negligence Is Not Neglect of Legal Duty; Gross Negligence Required. A plaintiff may not be denied rescission or reformation because of lack of care unless his or her conduct amounts to gross negligence or the neglect of a legal duty. Ordinary negligence does not constitute a neglect of a legal duty which will bar relief on the ground of mistake under Civil Code Section 1577 (Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 594, 595, 297 P.2d 644).

G. Gross Negligence Defined. Gross negligence is the want of even scant care or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct (Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 594, 297 P.2d 644).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when defendant has asserted in the motion that the mistake was the result of plaintiff's neglect of a legal duty. The ground of opposition presented is that plaintiff was guilty of, at most, ordinary negligence, which does not constitute neglect of a legal duty barring relief from the mistake.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.91.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly entered into by mistake.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose a plaintiff's motion for new trial in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Carelessness Does Not Necessarily Constitute Neglect of Legal Duty

The factual and procedural background of M.F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 235 P.2d 7 , is discussed in § 92.99[3][a]. In that case, defendant city claimed that plaintiff was barred from relief from its mistaken bid because it was negligent in preparing the cost estimates. In affirming the judgment, the Supreme Court rejected this contention. The Court noted that even if it was assumed that the error was due to some carelessness, it did not follow that plaintiff was without remedy. The Court observed that Civ. Code § 1577, which defines mistake of fact for which relief may be allowed, describes it as a mistake not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake and that not all carelessness constitutes a neglect of legal duty within the meaning of the section. The Court then held that the type of error involved in this case was one which sometimes occurs in the conduct of reasonable and cautious businesspersons, and, under the circumstances, it did not constitute a neglect of legal duty which would bar the right to equitable relief, as a matter of law (37 Cal. 2d 696, 702) .

[b] Ordinary Negligence Is Not Neglect of Legal Duty; Gross Negligence Required

In Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 297 P.2d 644 , defendants contracted with a city to construct a dam and remove brush and trees from the reservoir basin. Thereafter, defendants entered into a subcontract with plaintiff for clearance of the basin, representing to him that the area to be cleared had been marked with flags. Plaintiff later discovered that the flagged area covered only a part of the reservoir basin, and he notified defendants that unless some adjustment was made, he would not proceed with the work. The parties agreed that plaintiff should clear the entire basin without prejudice to his rights under the subcontract. On completion of the work, plaintiff brought an action seeking, in separate counts, a declaration of rights, reformation of the subcontract, recovery of the reasonable value of services performed, and damages for false representations. The trial court found that the misrepresentations made to plaintiff were not willful and since plaintiff did not use reasonable care in ascertaining the extent ofthe work to be performed under the subcontract, he was entitled to no relief. The trial court also concluded that these findings were determinative of all the issues involved in the action and that it was therefore unnecessary to make further findings of fact.

On appeal, defendants contended that their conduct, although characterized by Civ. Code § 1572(2) as fraudulent, was merely negligent and that, by analogy to the rule in tort cases, plaintiff's contributory negligence was a complete defense as a matter of law. The Supreme Court rejected this contention, noting that there is an element of carelessness in nearly every case of mistake, and that an unqualified application of the principle urged by defendants would result in the virtual destruction of the equitable remedies for relief from mistake. The Court observed that it is settled that, even in the absence of any misrepresentation, the negligent failure of a party to know or discover facts as to which both parties are under a mistake does not preclude rescission or reformation because of the mistake and that a plaintiff will not be denied rescission or reformation because of lack of care unless his conduct amounts to gross negligence or the neglect of a legal duty. The Court stated that although the theory of degrees of negligence has been criticized by legal writers, a distinction has been made in California between ordinary and gross negligence. Gross negligence means the want of even scant care or an extreme departure from the ordinary standard of conduct (46 Cal. 2d 588, 594) . The Court held that although a breach of legal duty may consist of either ordinary or gross negligence, ordinary negligence does not constitute the neglect of legal duty as that term is used in Civ. Code § 1577 (governing relief from a contact for mistake of fact) (46 Cal. 2d 588, 595) . The Court observed that the trial court had not determined that plaintiff's conduct was preposterous or irrational or that it amounted to gross negligence or the neglect of a legal duty and stated that any such determination could not have been supported in view of the findings that were made. The Court concluded that the trial court's determination that plaintiff wasprecluded from obtaining any relief by his own negligence was erroneous. The Court reversed the judgment and remanded the case to the trial court for further findings of fact (46 Cal. 2d 588, 595-596) .

[c] Gross Negligence Defined

Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 297 P.2d 644 , is discussed in § 92.100[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Carelessness Does Not Necessarily Constitute Neglect of Legal Duty

Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 297 P.2d 644 , is discussed in § 92.100[3][b].

In Williams v. Puccinelli (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 512, 46 Cal. Rptr. 285 , plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract for the lease of a portion of a two-story building owned by defendant. The parties mutually comtemplated that plaintiff would install and operate a restaurant and bar on the second floor of the building. Unknown to both parties, substantial alterations in the building, including portions not leased by plaintiff, were required by law in order to allow the second floor to be used for a restaurant and bar. The structural weaknesses in the building were not discovered by plaintiff until after the lease had been signed and plans and specifications were being prepared for the construction and installation of the restaurant and bar. Defendant refused to make any structural corrections to the part of the building not leased by plaintiff. After giving notice of rescission to defendant, plaintiff brought an action for rescission of the lease and restitution of the money which plaintiff had paid under the lease. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff, finding that there was a material, mutual mistake of fact which had induced plaintiff to enter into the lease.

On appeal, defendant contended, inter alia, that plaintiff was precluded from relying on mistake as a ground for rescission because of the provision in Civ. Code § 1577 that such a mistake must be one not caused by the neglect of a legal duty on the part of the person making the mistake. Defendant argued that plaintiff was negligent in not ascertaining the structural defects in the building before entering into the lease. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal rejected this contention. The court observed that in this case, plaintiff's son, who had acted for plaintiff in the entire transaction, had no training or previous experience which would or should have raised any question in his mind as to the structural capacity of the building, and that the engineer who was hired by plaintiff's architect to help prepare the plans and specifications for the restaurant and bar testified that a nonexpert could not tell from physical observation of the building that substantial structural work would have to be done to it before a restaurant and bar could lawfully be installed and operated on the second floor (236 Cal. App. 2d 512, 518-519) . The court noted that the Supreme Court had held that not all carelessness constitutes a neglect of legal duty within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1577 [see M.F. Kemper Constr. Co. v. Los Angeles (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 696, 702, 235 P.2d 7] . The court concluded that the circumstances of this case did not require a holding that plaintiff's failure to discover the defects until after the lease was signed constituted such a neglect of legal duty as would bar recovery as a matter of law (236 Cal. App. 2d 512, 519) .

[b] Ordinary Negligence Is Not Neglect of Legal Duty; Gross Negligence Required

In Sun'n Sand, Inc. v. United Cal. Bank (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 671, 148 Cal. Rptr. 329, 582 P.2d 920 , plaintiff brought an action to recover amounts paid to defendant bank. In its complaint, plaintiff alleged that an employee of plaintiffhad, in the course of her employment, obtained the signature of an officer of plaintiff to several corporate checks made payable to defendant bank. The officer had signed the checks believing that they represented small amounts which his company owed defendant. In fact, no such debts were owed. After obtaining the officer's signature to the checks, the employee altered them, increasing the amount in each case to several thousand dollars, and presented them to defendant. Defendant caused or permitted the proceeds of the checks to be deposited in a personal account maintained by the employee at defendant bank. Plaintiff's complaint was based on six alternative theories, one of which was mistake of fact. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend and dismissed the action.

On appeal, defendant argued, in support of the judgment, that plaintiff was barred from relief on the ground of mistake of fact because plaintiff's mistake was caused by neglect of its legal duty under former Com. Code § 4406(1) (now see Com. Code § 4406(c)) to examine its bank statements and returned checks for alterations and forgeries. The Supreme Court observed, however, that it does not follow that breach of this duty by failure to exercise reasonable care in discharging it constitutes the neglect of a legal duty such that a cause of action for mistake must be barred (21 Cal. 3d 671, 700) . The Court noted that ordinary negligence does not constitute the neglect of a legal duty as that term is used in Civ. Code § 1577 (defining mistake of fact) and that this rule reflected a determination that the neglect of a legal duty qualification derives content from equitable considerations and principles, and that it would be inequitable to bar relief for mistake because of the breach of a duty of care when the party from whom recovery is sought suffers no loss. The Court concluded that the fact that plaintiff may have failed to exercise care in examining its bank statements was not a sufficient basis for denying it equitable relief for mistake (21 Cal. 3d 671, 701) . The Court held, however, that the cause of action for mistake was barred by the statute of limitations and therefore affirmed the judgment insofar as it dismissed the cause of action based on mistake (21 Cal. 3d 671, 701-702) .

The factual and procedural background of Harris v. Rudin, Richman & Appel (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 552 , is discussed in § 92.93[4][a]. In that case, the parties had failed to discover a proposed amendment to a section of the Probate Code until after they had agreed to settle a malpractice case involving that section. The amendment arguably would have eliminated the tax problem which had led to the malpractice suit. The court noted that with respect to a mistake of fact, ordinary negligence does not constitute neglect of a legal duty as that term is used in Civ. Code § 1577. To bar rescission, the party seeking to rescind must be guilty of gross negligence (citing Van Meter v. Bent Construction Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 594, 297 P.2d 644 , discussed above). The court found that plaintiff had cited no authority for the proposition that a party to a lawsuit (even if a lawyer) has a duty to monitor all the bills introduced in the Legislature during the pendency of the suit, lest one of them affect the merits of the claim or defense. Even assuming such a radical duty could be established, its breach would be no more than ordinary negligence. The negligent failure of a party to know or discover facts as to which both parties are under a mistake does not preclude rescission or reformation because of the mistake (95 Cal. App. 4th 1332, 1341-1342) .

Architects & Contractors Estimating Service, Inc. v. Smith (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 211 Cal. Rptr. 45 , involved a judgment for a nonperforming party who had asserted his unilateral mistake as a defense. The decision was based in part on the ground that defendant's mistake had been caused only by his ordinary negligence, which was not neglect of a legal duty (164 Cal. App. 3d 1001, 1007-1008) .

See Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Producers Credit Assn. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 635, 262 Cal. Rptr. 862 , discussed in § 92.101[3][b].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 92 DURESS, MENACE, FRAUD, UNDUE INFLUENCE, AND MISTAKE
PART II. FORMS
D. Mistake

9-92 California Points & Authorities § 92.101

§ 92.101 Opposing Defendant's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)] in Action to Rescind Contract [Civ. Code §§ 1689, 1692] on Ground of Mistake of Fact [Civ. Code § 1577]--Relief From Mistake Induced by Innocent Misrepresentation Is Not Precluded by Plaintiff's Negligence Unless Plaintiff's Conduct Is Preposterous or Irrational

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 92.45.]

DEFENDANT'S MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL ON THE GROUND THAT THE MISTAKE WAS CAUSED BY PLAINTIFF'S NEGLECT OF A LEGAL DUTY SHOULD NOT BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE MISTAKE WAS INDUCED BY PLAINTIFF'S RELIANCE ON DEFENDANT'S MISREPRESENTATIONS OF A MATERIAL FACT AND PLAINTIFF'S CONDUCT IN SO RELYING WAS NOT PREPOSTEROUS OR IRRATIONAL.

A. New Trial Precluded Unless Court Convinced That Court or Jury Clearly Should Have Reached Different Result. [See § 92.45, Paragraph A.]

B. Rescission for Mistake. [See § 92.99, Paragraph B.]

C. Kinds of Mistake. [See § 92.99, Paragraph C.]

D. Mistake of Fact Defined. [See § 92.99, Paragraph D.]

E. Mistake Induced by Innocent Misrepresentation as Ground for Rescission. A contract entered into as a result of an innocent misrepresentation of a material fact may be rescinded on the ground of mutual mistake (Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 495-497, 36 Cal. Rptr. 806).

F. Negligent Reliance on Unintentional Misrepresentation. When a mistake is due in part to plaintiff's good faith reliance on false statements of fact by defendant, defendant may not assert that the reliance was negligent in an equitable action to rescind the contract, unless plaintiff's conduct, in light of his intelligence and information, is preposterous or irrational, even though the statements were not made with an intent to deceive (see Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 595, 297 P.2d 644).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an unsuccessful defendant's motion for new trial in an action to rescind a contract allegedly entered into under a mistake of fact when defendant has asserted in the motion that plaintiff is precluded from relief because the mistake was caused by plaintiff's neglect of a legal duty. The ground of opposition presented is that the mistake was caused by plaintiff's reliance on defendant's misrepresentation of a material fact and that defendant may not assert that such reliance was negligent unless plaintiff's conduct was preposterous or irrational.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to a motion for new trial supported by the points and authorities set out in § 92.91.

If appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

These points and authorities may be modified to oppose a general demurrer for failure to state a cause of action to a complaint for rescission of a contract allegedly entered into by mistake.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may also be used to oppose plaintiff's motion for new trial in an action for damages for breach of contract when defendant contends that the contract is voidable because it was entered into under a mistake of fact.

[b] Related Memoranda

For memoranda of points and authorities relating to motions for new trial generally, see Ch. 155, Motions After Trial .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mistake Induced by Innocent Misrepresentation as Ground for Rescission

In Crocker-Anglo Nat'l Bank v. Kuchman (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 36 Cal. Rptr. 806 , plaintiffs brought an action to rescind a contract for the purchase of corporate stock, alleging that they had been induced to purchase the stock by misrepresentations on the part of defendants concerning the value of the stock as reflected by the corporation's assets, business, prospects, and goodwill. The complaint contained one count based on actual fraud, one count based on constructive fraud, and one common count for money had and received. After making his opening statement to the jury, plaintiffs' counsel requested permission from the trial court to amend the second count of the complaint to allege innocent misrepresentation and mutual mistake of fact. The trial court denied this request in language which made it clear that any attempt by plaintiffs to introduce evidence of innocent misrepresentation or mistake under the common count would be futile (224 Cal. App. 3d 478) . Plaintiffs refused to proceed with the case, and the trial court granted defendants' motion for nonsuit.

On appeal, the court of appeal reversed. The court held that the trial court had committed reversible error in not allowing plaintiffs to introduce evidence on innocent misrepresentation because innocent misrepresentation is a ground for permitting rescission of contracts. The court held that although innocent misrepresentation is not specifically enumerated in Civ. Code § 1689 as a ground for rescission, it is a type of mistake, which is enumerated in Civ. Code § 1689, and hence supports rescission (224 Cal. App. 3d 478) . The court concluded that such a mistake was alleged in the complaint in this case. According to their pleading, plaintiffs believed the stock to be worth $30,000 when, according to the complaint, it was without substantial value. Because of defendants' representations, plaintiffs were mistaken as to the stock's value. Thus, the court concluded, plaintiffs' consent to the contract of purchase was given by mistake and they had a cause of action for rescission of the contract under Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1) (224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 496) . The court stated that the rule is founded in justice because it would be unjust to allow one who has made false representations, even innocently, to retain the fruits of a bargain induced by such representations. The court then held that plaintiffs were entitled to change their theory of recovery under the common count from fraud to innocent misrepresentation since the latter theory was fully supported by the specific facts pleaded in the other two counts (224 Cal. App. 2d 490, 497) .

[b] Negligent Reliance on Unintentional Misrepresentation

The factual and procedural background of Van Meter v. Bent Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 588, 297 P.2d 644 , is discussed in § 92.100[3][b]. In holding that plaintiff was not barred from relief on the ground of mistake because of his negligence in failing to ascertain the extent of the work required by the subcontract, the Supreme Court stated that there is even more reason for not barring a plaintiff from equitable relief when his negligence is due in part to his reliance in good faith on the false representations of a defendant, although the statements were not made with intent to deceive. The Court held that a defendant who misrepresents facts and induces plaintiff to rely on his statements may not be heard in an equitable action to assert that the reliance was negligent unless plaintiff's conduct, in light of his intelligence and information, is preposterous or irrational (46 Cal. 2d 588, 595) . The Court then observed that in this case, the trial court did not determine that plaintiff's conduct was preposterous or irrational or that it amounted to gross negligence or the neglect of a legal duty and that any such determination could not have been supported in view of the findings made.

The court of appeal in Balistreri v. Nevada Livestock Producers Credit Assn. (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 635, 262 Cal. Rptr. 862 , reversed a judgment for defendant in an action in which plaintiff trustors sought to cancel a deed of trust on their residence in Petaluma. Plaintiffs intended to execute a deed of trust on their son's residence in Sebastopol, which they owned jointly with their son, in order to provide security for a loan defendant made to the son. The deed of trust they signed, however, described the Petaluma property. Plaintiffs did not read the deed of trust before they signed it but relied on the cover letter from defendant's loan agent that asked plaintiffs to execute a deed of trust on "your Sebastopol residence for your son." In reversing, two of the three judges agreed there was mutual mistake in that defendant intended the Petaluma property would be encumbered and plaintiffs intended the Sebastopol property would be encumbered (214 Cal. App. 3d 635, 640-642) . In addition, the court considered defendant's contention that relief was barred by plaintiffs' failure to read the deed of trust before signing it. Although generally a party is bound by a contract, the general principle did not apply in this case because plaintiffs reasonably relied on mistaken representations by defendant concerning the subject matter of the contract (214 Cal. App. 3d 635, 642) . The court implied that failure to read a contract before signing it is only ordinary negligence, not neglect of a legal duty sufficient to bar relief, and unanimously agreed that in view of the unilateral mistake induced by action of the other party, relief should not be barred (214 Cal. App. 3d 635, 643-644) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions for New TrialsContracts LawDefensesAmbiguity & MistakeGeneral OverviewContracts LawRemediesRescission & RedhibitionGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
Chapters 93through 94 RESERVED

9-93 California Points & Authorities Chapters 93through 94

RESERVED

Chapters 93RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN

9-95 California Points & Authorities 95.syn

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.syn Synopsis to Chapter 95: EMINENT DOMAIN

§ 95.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 95.02 Governing Statutes

§ 95.03 Objection to Right to Take

§ 95.04 Inverse Condemnation

[1] In General

[2] Exemption From Claims Requirements

§ 95.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 95.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§ 95.07 Related Jury Instructions

§§ 95.08-95.19 [Reserved]

§ 95.20 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Plaintiff Not Authorized by Statute to Exercise Power of Eminent Domain for Purpose Stated [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Authority as Ground for Objection

§ 95.21 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Insubstantial Impairment of Access

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation

[b] Insubstantial Impairment of Access Is Not Compensable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insubstantial Impairment of Access Is Not Compensable

§ 95.22 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Taking or Damaging Occurred in Proper Exercise of Police Power

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Taking in Exercise of Police Power Is Not Compensable

[b] Traffic Regulation as Exercise of Police Power

[c] Damage to Property by Law Enforcement Officers

[d] Damage to Property Resulting from Flood Control Activities

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Taking in Exercise of Police Power Is Not Compensable

[b] Traffic Regulation as Exercise of Police Power

§ 95.23 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Lapse of Statute of Limitations on Action Challenging Adoption or Application of Subdivision Ordinance [Gov. Code § 66499.37]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation

[b] Inverse Condemnation Actions Challenging Adoption or Application of Ordinance Enacted Pursuant to Subdivision Map Act Must Be Filed and Served Within 90 Days of Challenged Decision

§§ 95.24-95.39 [Reserved]

§ 95.40 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Taking or Damaging Did Not Occur During Emergency Exercise of Police Power

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Emergency Exercise of Police Power Must Be in Response to Immediate Peril

[b] Allegation of Nonemergency

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Emergency Exercise of Police Power Must Be in Response to Immediate Peril

§ 95.41 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Substantial Impairment of Access

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Concept of "Taking" Does Not Require a Physical Seizure

[b] Substantial Impairment of Right of Access

[c] Allegation of Substantial Impairment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compensation for Taking

[b] Allegation of Substantial Impairment

§ 95.42 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Intangible Intrusion Resulted in Damage That Is Direct, Substantial, and Peculiar to Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Concept of "Taking" Does Not Require Physical Damage to Property

[b] Intangible Intrusion That Burdens Property in Direct, Substantial, and Peculiar Manner

[c] Allegation of Direct, Substantial, and Peculiar Impairment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intangible Intrusion That Burdens Property in Direct, Substantial, and Peculiar Manner

§ 95.43 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Public Entity Does Not Need Statutory Power to Condemn by Eminent Domain

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Need to Show Eminent Domain Power of Defendant

§ 95.44 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Use of Power of Eminent Domain Without Compensation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Against Eminent Domain Without Compensation

[b] Preliminary Injunction to Prevent Taking of Property

[c] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Injunction Against Eminent Domain Without Compensation

[b] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

§§ 95.45-95.59 [Reserved]

§ 95.60 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Stated Purpose Is Not Public Use [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Practice Rules Applicable in Eminent Domain Proceeding

[b] Nonpublic Use as Ground for Objection

[c] Public Use

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nonpublic Use as Ground for Objection

[b] Public Use

§ 95.61 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Property Not Subject to Acquisition by Eminent Domain for Stated Purpose [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Exempt From Condemnation for Certain Purposes

§ 95.62 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Failure to Meet Requirements for Excess Condemnation [Code Civ. Proc. § 1240.410], Condemnation for Compatible Use [Code Civ. Proc. § 1240.510], or Condemnation for More Necessary Public Use [Code Civ. Proc. § 1240.610] [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(f)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirements for Excess Condemnation

[b] Requirements for Condemnation for Compatible Use

[c] Requirements for Condemnation for More Necessary Public Use

[d] Nonauthorized Taking of Remnant

§ 95.63 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Resolution of Necessity Fails to Satisfy Requirements [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.370(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Adopt Resolution of Necessity as Prescribed as Ground for Objection

[b] Contents of Resolution Insufficient

[c] Failure to Provide Notice and Opportunity to Be Heard

[d] Lack of Two-Thirds Vote of All Members of Governing Body

[e] Resolution Procured by Bribery

§ 95.64 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Lack of Public Necessity [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.370(b)-(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Project Not Required by Public Interest and Necessity as Ground for Objection

[b] Project Not Planned or Located to Be Most Compatible With Greatest Public Good and Least Private Injury as Ground for Objection

[c] Property Not Necessary to Project as Ground for Objection

§ 95.65 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Defendant--Plaintiff's Failure to Satisfy Requirements for Resolution of Consent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.370(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Meet Requirements for Resolution of Consent as Ground for Objection

[b] No Resolution of Consent

[c] Contents of Resolution Insufficient

[d] Failure to Hold Hearing and Inadequate Notice of Hearing

[e] Lack of Two-Thirds Vote of All Members of Legislative Body

§ 95.66 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in Inverse Condemnation Action

[Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--By Defendant--Legally Erroneous Decision Resulting in Delay in Development Approval Does Not Constitute Compensable Taking

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Error During Development Approval Process Does Not Amount to Temporary Taking

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Error During Development Approval Process Does Not Amount to Temporary Taking

§§ 95.67-95.79 [Reserved]

§ 95.80 Supporting Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 659] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--By Plaintiff--Excessive Damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] and Insufficiency of Evidence to Justify Decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)]--Severance Damages Awarded When Property Taken Was Not Part of Larger Parcel [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.410(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[c] Related Jury Instructions

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Consideration of Sufficiency of Evidence

[b] Court Not Bound by Prior Rulings

[c] Duty to Grant New Trial When Jury Verdict Clearly Wrong

[d] Severance Damages

[e] Requisites for Unity of Property

[f] Lack of Unity of Title

[g] Prospective Use as Insufficient to Overcome Lack of Contiguity

[h] Separation With No Access Rights as Defeating Contiguity

[i] Lack of Unity of Use

[j] Prospective Use as Insufficient

§ 95.81 Supporting Motion for New Trial in Eminent Domain Action--By Plaintiff--Benefits Not Deducted From Damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.410(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[c] Related Jury Instructions

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Compensation After Offsetting Benefit

[b] Offset of All Reasonably Certain, Immediate, and Nonspeculative Benefits

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Severance Damages

§§ 95.82-95.99 [Reserved]

§ 95.100 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 659] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--Excessive Damages [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(5)] and Insufficiency of Evidence to Justify Decision [Code Civ. Proc. § 657(6)]--Property Taken Was Part of Larger Parcel [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.410(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[c] Related Jury Instructions

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constructive Contiguity as Sufficient

[b] Factors in Determining Constructive Contiguity

[c] Separation by Easement With Free Access as Not Defeating Contiguity

[d] Failure to Use as Not Defeating Unity of Use

[e] Subdivision Plan as Not Defeating Unity of Property

[f] Unity of Property Exists When All Contiguous Lots Will Be Available for Development or Use as Integrated Economic Unit

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Separation by Easement With Free Access as Not Defeating Contiguity

§ 95.101 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial in Eminent Domain Action--Benefits to Remainder Were Not Reasonably Certain, Immediate, and Nonspeculative

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memorandum

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deductible Benefits Must Be Reasonably Certain, Immediate, and Nonspeculative

§ 95.102 Opposing Plaintiff's Motion for New Trial in Eminent Domain Action--Capitalization of Excess Income Is Proper Measure of Damages for Loss of Goodwill [Code Civ. Proc. § 1263.510]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Capitalization of Excess Income Based on Lost Profits Is Proper Measure of Damages

[b] Fair Market Value Capitalization of Excess Income Proper Measure of Damages

§§ 95.103-95.119 [Reserved]

§ 95.120 Supporting Motion to Strike Irrelevant Matter in Answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 436] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]--Allegations Attacking Resolution of Necessity [Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.250(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Resolution of Necessity as Conclusive

§ 95.121 Supporting Motion for Increase of Deposit of Probable Amount of Compensation [Code Civ. Proc. § 1255.030]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determination Before Possession Is Taken

[b] Determination After Possession Is Taken

[c] Trial Court Has Jurisdiction to Order Increase in Deposit After Filing of Notice of Appeal

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion for Determination of Probable Amount of Compensation

§ 95.122 Supporting Motion for Order for Possession [Code Civ. Proc. § 1255.410]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion for Order Authorizing Possession

[b] The Plaintiff Is Authorized to Take the Property by Eminent Domain

[c] The Plaintiff Has Deposited an Amount That Satisfies the Requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1255.010 et seq.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion for Order Authorizing Possession

§ 95.123 Supporting Motion to Set Aside Abandonment of Eminent Domain Proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1268.510(b)]--By Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Set Aside Abandonment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motion to Set Aside Abandonment

§ 95.124 Supporting Motion for Dismissal of Abandoned Eminent Domain Proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 1268.510(c)] and Award of Litigation Expenses [Code Civ. Proc. § 1268.610]--By Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motion to Dismiss

[b] Award of Litigation Expenses

[c] Litigation Expenses Defined

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Award of Litigation Expenses

Jeffrey S. Rosen n*

FOOTNOTES:
(n8)Footnote *. Jeffrey S. Rosen is an attorney with offices in San Francisco and Berkeley. His civil litigation practice emphasizes real estate and commercial litigation matters.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.01

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use in eminent domain and inverse condemnation actions. Included are memoranda (1) supporting [see §§ 95.20 -95.23] and opposing [see §§ 95.40 -95.43] demurrers to complaints; (2) supporting motions for summary judgment based on Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1250.360 and 1250.370 [see §§ 95.60 -95.65]; (3) supporting [see §§ 95.80, 95.81] and opposing [see §§ 95.100 -95.102] motions for new trials based on allegedly excessive severance damages; (4) supporting motions to strike irrelevant matter in an answer attacking a resolution of necessity [see § 95.120]; (5) supporting motions to increase the deposit of the probable amount of compensation [see § 95.121]; (6) supporting motions for orders for possession [see § 95.122]; (7) supporting motions to set aside abandonment of a proceeding [see § 95.123]; and (8) supporting motions to dismiss an abandoned proceeding [see § 95.124].

For comprehensive coverage of eminent domain and inverse condemnation, see California Real Estate Law & Practice, Chs. 500-513 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.02

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.02 Governing Statutes

Eminent domain proceedings are governed by the Eminent Domain Law [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1230.010-1273.050]. Except as specifically provided in the Law, the rules of practice that govern civil actions generally are the rules of practice for eminent domain proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 1230.040]. These general rules of practice mainly are found in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 307-1062.10.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.03

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.03 Objection to Right to Take

A defendant may object to the plaintiff's right to take by demurrer or answer as provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30, on any ground authorized by Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360 or § 1250.370. The demurrer or answer must state the specific ground on which the objection is taken and, if the objection is taken by answer, the specific facts on which the objection is based. An objection may be taken on more than one ground and the grounds may be inconsistent [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsPleadingsAnswersReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsDefenses

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.04

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.04 Inverse Condemnation

[1] In General

An inverse condemnation action is an eminent domain proceeding initiated by the property owner rather than by the condemnor. The principles that affect the parties' rights in an inverse condemnation suit are the same as those in an eminent domain action [Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 663 n.1, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719] .

[2] Exemption From Claims Requirements

No claim need be filed pursuant to Gov. Code §§ 900-915.4 to maintain an action against a public entity for the taking of, or damage to, private property pursuant to Cal. Const., art. I, § 19 (governing the power of eminent domain and the right to compensation) [Gov. Code § 905.1; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260(b) (presentation of claim unnecessary to maintain inverse condemnation action against public entity under Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260(a))].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.05

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussions and forms of complaints, summons, notices of motion, declarations, applications, and orders involving eminent domain and inverse condemnation, see Ch. 247, Eminent Domain and Inverse Condemnation , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

For discussions and forms for use in particular cases involving eminent domain and inverse condemnation, see in that set the following chapters:

Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners;

Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions;

Ch. 277, Gas and Electricity;

Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters; and

Ch. 511, Sanitation and Sewerage Districts.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.06

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda that may be useful in particular cases when eminent domain or inverse condemnation is involved may be found in the following chapters in this set:

Ch. 61, Cross Complaints; and

Ch. 225, Trespass.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.07

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.07 Related Jury Instructions

For jury instructions on eminent domain, including special verdict forms, see Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions (CACI), 3500 Series (LexisNexis Matthew Bender, Official Publisher), also available in LexisNexis Automated Judicial Council of California Civil Jury Instructions.

For a set of jury instructions on inverse condemnation, see California Forms of Jury Instruction, Ch. 35A, Matthew Bender Inverse Condemnation Instructions (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureTrialsJury TrialsJury InstructionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART I. INTRODUCTION

9-95 California Points & Authorities §§ 95.08-95.19

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

[Reserved]

§§ 95.08[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
A. Supporting Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.20

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.20 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Eminent Domain Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Plaintiff Not Authorized by Statute to Exercise Power of Eminent Domain for Purpose Stated [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
_____ [name],	)	TO COMPLAINT
	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept: _____
	)	Trial Date: None Set

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT PLAINTIFF IS AUTHORIZED BY STATUTE TO EXERCISE THE POWER OF EMINENT DOMAIN FOR THE PURPOSE STATED IN THE COMPLAINT.

A. Objection to Right to Take. A defendant may object to the plaintiff's right to take under eminent domain by demurrer or answer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30 (Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350).

B. Objection by Demurrer. A defendant in an eminent domain action may demur to the plaintiff's complaint, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to the complaint appears on the face thereof, the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

C. Lack of Authority as Ground for Objection. A defendant may object tothe plaintiff's right to take on the ground that the plaintiff is not authorized by statute to exercise the power of eminent domain for the purpose stated in the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(a)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer (that is, a demurrer on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action) to a complaint in eminent domain when the plaintiff has failed to plead that it is authorized by statute to exercise the power of eminent domain for the purpose stated in the complaint. This objection may be raised regardless of whether the plaintiff has adopted a resolution of necessity that satisfies the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1245.210-1245.270.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

As a practical matter, if the plaintiff is a public entity and the only defect in its complaint is the failure to plead that it is authorized by statute to exercise the power of eminent domain, a demurrer may be sustained with leave to amend. Defendant's counsel may thus choose to avoid the time and expense associated with preparing and filing a demurrer and request in writing that plaintiff file and serve an amended complaint prior to the date a responsive pleading is due.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Authority as Ground for Objection

Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.360(a) is based on Code Civ. Proc. § 1240.020, which provides that the power of eminent domain may be exercised to acquire property for a particular use only by a person authorized by statute to exercise the power to acquire the property for that use. This codification continues the prior law that there is no inherent power of eminent domain and that a public entity can exercise the power of eminent domain only when expressly so authorized by law [see, e.g., City & County of San Francisco v. Ross (1955) 44 Cal. 2d 52, 55, 279 P.2d 529 ; People v. Superior Court (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 288, 295-296, 73 P.2d 1221 ; see also Gov. Code § 37350.5 (expressly conferring power of eminent domain on cities); Unocal California Pipeline Co. v. Conway (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 331, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 429 (holding that pipeline corporation that had as its only customer its parent company was public utility and thus had power of eminent domain; determinative issue is not number or type of customers, but whether property has been dedicated to public use)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsPleadingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
A. Supporting Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.21

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.21 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Insubstantial Impairment of Access

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 95.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT THE IMPAIRMENT OF ACCESS IS INSUBSTANTIAL.

A. Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation. The principles that affect the parties' rights in an inverse condemnation suit are the same as those in an eminent domain action (Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 663 n.1, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719).

B. Objection by Demurrer. A defendant in an inverse condemnation action may demur to the plaintiff's complaint, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to the complaint appears on the face thereof, the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

C. Insubstantial Impairment of Access is Not Compensable. Damages claimed for impairment of access in an inverse condemnation proceeding are not compensable unless the impairment is substantial and will cause substantial loss (Brumer v. Metropolitan Transp. Authority (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 1746-1748, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314 ; Rosenthal v. City of Los Angeles (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 29, 33-34, 13 Cal. Rptr. 824).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint in inverse condemnation when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint that the impairment of access is insubstantial.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Memorandum

In an appropriate case, contentions set out in § 95.41 may be used to oppose the motion supported by this points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation

The facts and procedural background of Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 , are discussed in § 95.41[3][b] and [c]. In holding that a showing of a substantial impairment of the property owner's right of access to the system of public streets established a compensable right, the Supreme Court compared inverse condemnation with eminent domain. It found that the difference rested in the initiation of the action by the property owner rather than the condemnor, and that the principles affecting the parties' rights in each proceeding were the same (61 Cal. 2d 659, 663 n.1).

[b] Insubstantial Impairment of Access Is Not Compensable

In Brumer v. Metropolitan Transp. Authority (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314 , owners of commercial property brought an action for inverse condemnation against the public transportation agency that installed rail lines directly in front of their property. Plaintiffs' complaint alleged that their easement to the street had been substantially impaired by construction of the transit line. Among other things, the construction work (1) separated their property from vehicular traffic by a metal guard rail, two sets of rail lines, and a raised concrete divider, (2) made curbside traffic and parking no longer available, (3) converted the two-way street in front of their property into a one-way street, and (4) made the future construction of a driveway onto the plaintiffs' property impossible. Plaintiffs asserted that they previously had access to the street from their property, but had been denied all vehicular access to and from their property by the foregoing improvements. The trial found no substantial impairment of access, and denied plaintiffs relief.

The court of appeal affirmed. It stated that an inverse condemnation claim must rest on a property owner's showing of substantial impairment of his or her right of access to the general system of public streets. An abutting owner does not have the right to insist that a street be left in its original condition. Thus, substantial impairment will be found when construction built directly on a portion of a road cuts off a direct access from an abutting property; or when a major change in the grade of the road, such as construction of highway underpasses, overpasses, and freeway offramps, prevent direct access to a property abutting the new construction. The court held that the redesignation of an entire street as one-way and the deprivation of parking rights are noncompensable police regulations, and that the plaintiffs did not demonstrate a substantial impairment of vehicular access from the other facts of their case, including the installation of pedestrian guard rails and raised concrete traffic separators that made future construction of a driveway onto the plaintiffs' property impossible (36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 1747-1749) . For discussion of a case with a similar factual situation, see § 95.21[4][a].

In Rosenthal v. City of Los Angeles (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 29, 13 Cal. Rptr. 824 , plaintiffs brought an inverse condemnation action alleging damages to their industrially zoned property. Their action followed construction of a through street that bypassed their property and caused traffic approaching from the east to follow a slightly different route to get to their property. The construction did not affect two north-south streets that provided access to plaintiff's property. The plaintiffs contended that the construction constituted an actionable interference with their easement of access. The trial court sustained a demurrer without leave to amend.

The court of appeal affirmed. The fact that traffic was permitted to travel around the plaintiffs' property to the south did not make their asserted damages compensable. The case merely presented a situation in which their property could formerly be reached by traveling on any one of three streets, and after the construction could be reached only by the two north-south streets. Those who would formerly have sought access to the property from the east could still reach the property by taking the next east-west street to the north and then traveling south on either of the two streets that continued to provide access to the property. This was a minor inconvenience and did not constitute a "substantial impairment" of the right of access (193 Cal. App. 2d 29, 34) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insubstantial Impairment of Access Is Not Compensable

In San Diego Metro. Transit v. Price Co. (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 705 , a transit line was constructed in the center of the street on which plaintiff's property was located, and concrete berms were placed adjacent andparallel to the rail line. As a result, plaintiff's property no longer had direct access from and to the southbound lanes of the street, but did have indirect access from and to these lanes. The trial court considered evidence that the access impairment only increased the distance of travel from and to one side of one adjacent street, and that the property could be used for the same purposes before and after the impairment. It held that no compensable severance damages resulted from the impairment of access. The court of appeal affirmed, noting that compensable access impairment exists if there is a substantial impairment of access to the abutting street and from there to the general system of public streets. To determine that issue, the trial court must compare the access available to the particular property before and after the impairment and then decide if the impairment is substantial. Because of the factual nature of the inquiry, which is unique to each property, the trial court's determination of substantial impairment is a determination to be sustained if supported by substantial evidence. The court of appeal found that the evidence was substantial and supported the determination of the trial court that there was no compensable impairment of access (37 Cal. App. 4th 1541, 1547-1549) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsPleadingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsProcedure

145 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
A. Supporting Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.22

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.22 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Taking or Damaging Occurred in Proper Exercise of Police Power

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 95.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT THE _____ [either TAKING or DAMAGES] OCCURRED IN THE PROPER EXERCISE OF THE POLICE POWER.

A. Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation. [See § 95.21, Paragraph A.]

B. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 95.21, Paragraph B.]

C. Taking in Exercise of Police Power Is Not Compensable. Under the police power, the state or its subdivision may take or damage private property without compensating the property owner if the action is essential to public health, safety, or morals (Customer Co. v. City of Sacramento (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 368, 384-385, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658, 895 P.2d 900 ; Archer v. City of Los Angeles (1941) 19 Cal. 2d 19, 23, 119 P.2d 1).

[Optional] D. Traffic Regulation as Exercise of Police Power. The modification of streets and highways is an exercise of the police power to regulate and control traffic, and a property owner's access rights may be taken or damaged by this activity without any compensation due to the property owner (People v. Ayon (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 217, 224, 5 Cal. Rptr. 151, 352 P.2d 519 ; Friends of H Street v. City of Sacramento (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 167, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607).

[Optional] E. Damage to Property by Law Enforcement Officers. Recovery under a theory of inverse condemnation is not available for damage to private property resulting from efforts of law enforcement officers in response to emergency situations that endanger public safety (Customer Co. v. City of Sacramento (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 368, 384-385, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 658, 895 P.2d 900).

[Optional] F. Damage to Property Resulting from Flood Control Activities. Recovery under a theory of inverse condemnation is not available for damage to private property resulting from the cutting of a breach in a levee in response to emergency flooding that endangers public safety (Thousand Trails, Inc. v. California Reclamation Dist. Number 17 (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 465, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint in inverse condemnation when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because it appears on the face of the complaint that the taking or damage occurred in the proper exercise of the police power.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, contentions set out in § 95.40 may be used to oppose the motion supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Taking in Exercise of Police Power Is Not Compensable

Customer Co. v. City of Sacramento (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 368 , is discussed in § 95.22[3][c].

Archer v. City of Los Angeles (1941) 19 Cal. 2d 19, 119 P.2d 1 , was an action for damages resulting from flooding of plaintiffs' lands caused by defendants' construction of a drainage system with an inadequate outlet. Defendants improved the drainage in an area that was becoming urbanized, resulting in a greater flow of water into the lagoon on which plaintiffs' property was situated. The outlet from the lagoon into the ocean, however, was not improved to accommodate the increased flow of water. A heavy rainstorm caused the lagoon to overflow onto plaintiff's property to a depth of six to eight feet for about four days. At the conclusion of plaintiffs' evidence, the trial court entered judgments of nonsuit in favor of defendants, and plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the state or its subdivisions may take or damage private property without compensation if such action is essential to safeguard public health, safety, or morals (19 Cal. 2d 19, 23). The Court noted that in certain circumstances the taking or damaging of private property under the police power is not prompted by so great a necessity as to be justified without proper compensation to the property owner. The question is whether the taking or damaging is so essential to the general welfare as to be sanctioned under the police power (19 Cal. 2d 19, 24).

[b] Traffic Regulation as Exercise of Police Power

In People v. Ayon (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 217, 5 Cal. Rptr. 151, 352 P.2d 519 , defendants received an award of $5,800 (the amount to which the parties had stipulated was the market value of the property actually taken in eminent domain plus the damage to the remainder as a result of the severance). In the stipulation, defendants reserved the right to introduce evidence of additional damage resulting from loss of business, customers, and goodwill. The trial court held that they had suffered no compensable damage not included in the stipulation and rejected an offer of proof relating to the claimed impairment of their right of access to the street on which their property abutted.

On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court stated that in the proper exercise of its police power in the regulation of traffic, a state or county may do many things that are not compensable to an abutting property owner, such as constructing a traffic island, placing permanent dividing strips that deprive an abutter of direct access to the opposite side of the highway, painting double white lines on the highway, or designating the entire street as a one-way street (54 Cal. 2d 217, 224) .

Ayon was cited with approval in Friends of H Street v. City of Sacramento (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 167, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 607 , a case in which an unincorporated association comprised principally of residents living near H Street in Sacramento filed a complaint for nuisance and sought injunctions to force the City to reduce the traffic speed and volume on H Street. The trial court sustained the City's demurrer without leave to amend, stating that the routing of traffic is a legislative function and that no cause of action for nuisance could be asserted. The Court of Appeal affirmed the ruling on the nuisance cause of action and held that the trial court had not erred in denying plaintiffs an opportunity to amend their complaint and plead an inverse condemnation cause of action. The court cited Ayon for the proposition that the right of ingress and egress is not absolute and that there is no constitutional right to compensation simply because abutting streets are improved so as to affect traffic flow. The court concluded that plaintiffs' allegations involved ordinary changes in traffic flow and were insufficient to state a cause of action for inverse condemnation. Plaintiffs' claim that a cause of action for inverse condemnation based on damage from noise and fumes was also rejected because plaintiffs did not allege unique, special, or peculiar damages not common to all property in the neighborhood (20 Cal. App. 4th 152, 167) [see Harding v. State of California ex rel. Dep't of Transp. (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 359] .

[c] Damage to Property by Law Enforcement Officers

In Customer Co. v. City of Sacramento (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 368, 41 Cal. Rptr. 658, 895 P.2d 900 , the police caused extensive damage to plaintiffs' store when they fired tear gas canisters into the store in an attempt to apprehend a suspected felon. Plaintiff sued the city and county, alleging inverse condemnation and negligence causes of action, among others. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings for defendants, ruling that defendants were immune from liability for negligence under the Government Tort Claims Act [Gov. Code § 810 et seq.], and that the actions of the law enforcement officers was a proper exercise of the police power to protect the public health, safety, and welfare. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

Plaintiff sought review of the inverse condemnation issue. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that recovery under a theory of inverse condemnation is generally not available for damage to property resulting from efforts of law enforcement officers to enforce the criminal laws (10 Cal. 4th 368, 384-385). The Court reasoned that law enforcement officers must be permitted to respond to emergency situations that endanger public safety without the specter of constitutionally mandated liability for resulting damage to private property (10 Cal. 4th 368, 384-385). The Court also stated that an inverse condemnation claim would not lie because the efforts of the law enforcement officers to apprehend the suspect could not be likened to an exercise of a power of eminent domain. However, the Court stated that unusual situations, such as when law enforcement officers commandeer a citizen's automobile to chase a fleeing suspect or appropriate ammunition from a gun shop, might constitute an exercise of eminent domain, because private property would be taken for public use (10 Cal. 4th 368, 388-389) .

[d] Damage to Property Resulting from Flood Control Activities

In Thousand Trails, Inc. v. California Reclamation Dist. Number 17 (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196 , the court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment for defendant reclamation district, holding that the district's action in cutting a levee to prevent potentially massive flooding was a legitimate exercise of police power (124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 464) . The reclamation district cut the breaches in a levee in an effort to prevent the failure of the levee system during torrential rains, resulting in the flooding of the plaintiffs' property. The police power exception applied because the district had no prior knowledge that the levee system might fail, and there was no evidence that actions taken by the district before the flooding caused the failure (124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 463-464) . Furthermore, all the evidence pointed to an extraordinary event: massive flooding up and down the Central Valley caused by torrential rains (124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 463) . The facts in Thousand Trails are distinguishable from Odello Brothers v. County of Monterey (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 778, 791, 73 Cal. Rptr. 2d 903 , which held that the police power exception was inapplicable when the county breached a levee during flooding, because the county in Odello had prior knowledge of the flood threat and failed to take action (124 Cal. App. 4th 450, 463-464) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Taking in Exercise of Police Power Is Not Compensable

While Archer may still be good law for its general statements regarding taking or damaging of property as a result of the exercise of the police power, its so-called "natural watercourse rule" is no longer valid. Locklin v. City of Lafayette (1994) 7 Cal. 4th 327, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613, 867 P.2d 724 , was an action for damages resulting from extensive landslide damage to plaintiffs' property caused by defendants' storm drainage system. Plaintiffs sought to recover damages on several theories, including inverse condemnation. The trial court granted defendants' motion for judgment on plaintiffs' inverse condemnation cause of action. The trial court ruled, inter alia, that the natural watercourse rule set forth in Archer shielded defendants from liability for damages caused by their collection of natural surface water drainage and discharge of that water into a natural channel even if the volume and velocity of the water caused the damage. While plaintiffs' appeal was directed principally to the disposition of their inverse condemnation claim, they argued that the trial court had erred in applying the Archer natural watercourse rule and that defendants should not be absolutely immune from liability on the inverse condemnation (and tort) claims. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court in all respects (7 Cal. 4th 327, 361) .

The Supreme Court concluded that the court of appeal erred in holding that the natural watercourse rule insulated defendants from inverse condemnation and tort liability, but nonetheless affirmed its judgment. In addressing whether a public entity could be liable in tort or inverse condemnation for damage to downstream riparian property caused by the discharge of surface waters into a natural watercourse abutting its property, the Supreme Court held, inter alia, that a governmental entity will be liable under the principles of inverse condemnation for downstream damage caused by an increased volume or velocity of surface waters discharged into a natural watercourse from improvements on publicly owned land if it fails to use reasonably available, less injurious alternatives, or if it has incorporated the watercourse into a public drainage system or otherwise converted the watercourse into a public work (7 Cal. 4th 327, 362-367) .

[b] Traffic Regulation as Exercise of Police Power

The facts and procedural background of Brumer v. Metropolitan Transp. Authority (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 314 , are discussed in § 95.21[3][b]. Citing People v. Ayon (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 217, 5 Cal. Rptr. 151 (discussed in § 95.22[3][b] and [4][b]), the court of appeal in Brumer held that the redesignation of an entire street as one-way is a noncompensable police regulation (36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 1748) . Similarly, even if the loss of a single parking space constitutes an impairment of vehicular access, the deprivation of parking rights on abutting streets constitutes a noncompensable exercise of the municipality's police power (36 Cal. App. 4th 1738, 1748) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsPleadingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationProcedure

146 of 174 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
A. Supporting Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.23

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.23 Supporting General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Lapse of Statute of Limitations on Action Challenging Adoption or Application of Subdivision Ordinance [Gov. Code § 66499.37]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 95.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN INVERSE CONDEMNATION BECAUSE IT WAS NOT FILED AND SERVED WITHIN THE 90-DAY PERIOD PRESCRIBED BY GOVERNMENT CODE SECTION 66499.37.

A. Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation. The principles that affect the parties' rights in an inverse condemnation suit are the same as those in an eminent domain action (Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 663 n.1, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719).

B. Objection By Demurrer. A defendant in an inverse condemnation actionmay demur to the plaintiff's complaint, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, on the ground that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to the complaint appears on the face thereof, the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

C. Ninety-Day Statute of Limitations. Any action or proceeding to attack, review, set aside, void, or annul the decision of an advisory agency, appeal board, or legislative body concerning a subdivision, or of any of the proceedings, acts, or determinations taken, done, or made prior to such a decision, or to determine the reasonableness, legality, or validity of any condition attached thereto, shall not be maintained by any person unless the action or proceeding is commenced and service of summons effected within 90 days after the date of the decision. Thereafter all persons are barred from any such action or proceeding or any defense of invalidity or unreasonableness of the decision or of the proceedings, acts, or determinations (Gov. Code § 66499.37).

D. Applicability of Limitations Period to Inverse Condemnation Action Challenging Subdivision Ordinance. An action in inverse condemnation challenging a local ordinance adopted pursuant to the Subdivision Map Act (Gov. Code § 66410 et seq.) or the application of such an ordinance to the plaintiff's property must be filed and served within the 90-day limitation period prescribed by Government Code Section 66499.37 unless it alleges the existence of a final judgment establishing that there has been a compensable taking of the plaintiff's land (Hensler v. City of Glendale (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 1, 7 ; Maginn v. City of Glendale (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1108, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint in inverse condemnation when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint that the plaintiff's inverse condemnation action challenging a local ordinance filed pursuant to the Subdivision Map Act, or challenging the application of such an ordinance to the plaintiff's property, was not filed within 90 days of the local government decision from which the action allegedly arose.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should refer to the lack of allegations in the complaint establishing that the plaintiff brought the action within the 90-day limitations period. Counsel can then argue that the complaint is subject to demurrer based on the authorities set forth above and discussed below.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation

For discussion of Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 , see § 95.21[3][a].

[b] Inverse Condemnation Actions Challenging Adoption or Application of Ordinance Enacted Pursuant to Subdivision Map Act Must Be Filed and Served Within 90 Days of Challenged Decision

In Hensler v. City of Glendale (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 1, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 247, 876 P.2d 1046 , the complaint alleged that plaintiff purchased a 300-acre tract of land zoned for single-family residential use in 1978. In 1981, defendant City of Glendale adopted an ordinance that prohibited construction on major ridge lines within the city. The ordinance was enacted pursuant to authority granted by the Subdivision Map Act. Plaintiff was advised by city representatives that development would not be permitted on ridge lines on his property. A plan for the construction of 588 residential units on the property was approved on April 1, 1986, but that approval rejected all proposed use of, and any encroachment within, on, or over, the major ridge lines within the tract. Claiming that the ordinance on which this action was based precluded development of 40 percent of the tract, plaintiff initiated an action in inverse condemnation in September 1989. Glendale demurred, asserting the 90-day limitations period of Gov. Code § 66499.37. It also argued that plaintiff's failure to challenge the conditions placed on development of his land barred the inverse condemnation action. The trial court sustained the demurrer and entered judgment dismissing the action.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of dismissal. The court held that the longer limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338(j), and Code Civ. Proc. §§ 318 and 319, which govern actions for damage to and taking of property, were notapplicable to actions based on a decision made pursuant to an ordinance enacted under the authority of the Subdivision Map Act.

The Supreme Court affirmed the Court of Appeal, concluding that an action in inverse condemnation challenging such an ordinance or its application to the plaintiff's property, is governed by Gov. Code § 66499.37 unless it alleges the existence of a final judgment establishing that there has been a compensable taking of plaintiff's land. The Court noted that Section 66499.37 was enacted to ensure that any challenge to local legislative or administrative acts or decisions taken pursuant to ordinances enacted under the authority of the Subdivision Map Act will be brought promptly. The Court held that a complaint in inverse condemnation, even one that does not expressly attack the validity of the ordinance or its application, and seeks only compensation for an alleged taking, must be deemed a challenge to the local action because the constitutional validity of the governmental action if uncompensated must be determined in the course of ruling on the claim that compensation is owed. Moreover, the validity of the action must be determined to afford the local entity the opportunity to rescind its action rather than pay compensation for a taking. A landowner may not, by seeking only compensation, force a governmental agency to condemn the property. Therefore, the Court held, unless the complaint alleges that the existence of a taking has already been judicially established, the complaint necessarily states a cause of action that requires judicial review of a decision of the local legislative body concerning a subdivision or of the reasonableness, legality, or validity of any condition attached to a permit decision within the meaning of Gov. Code § 66499.37. An action that requires that review is governed by Section 66499.37 regardless of the plaintiff's characterization of the cause of action (8 Cal. 4th 1, 7) .

In Maginn v. City of Glendale (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1702, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 639 , plaintiffs sued the City of Glendale for, among other things, inverse condemnation after the city council denied plaintiffs' application for a tentative parcel map to subdivide real property for the purpose of building a home on the proposed second lot. Plaintiffs' complaint was filed on the 90th day following the city's decision, but the summons was not served until three days later. The trial court dismissed the case after sustaining a demurrer on statute of limitations grounds.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that Gov. Code § 66499.37, which imposes a 90-day limitation period on actions challenging local government decisions that apply the requirements of the Subdivision Map Act, expressly requires not only that the action be commenced within 90 days, but also that service of summons be effected within the same 90 days (72 Cal. App. 4th 1102, 1108) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
A. Supporting Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities §§ 95.24-95.39

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

[Reserved]

§§ 95.24[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
B. Opposing Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.40

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.40 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Taking or Damaging Did Not Occur During Emergency Exercise of Police Power

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO DEMUR-Plaintiff,	)	RER TO COMPLAINT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT ALLEGING _____ [A TAKING OF or SERIOUS DAMAGE TO] HIS/HER PROPERTY STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INVERSE CONDEMNATION BECAUSE IT APPEARS ON THE FACE OF THE COMPLAINT THAT THE _____ [TAKING or DAMAGE] DID NOT OCCUR IN RESPONSE TO AN IMMEDIATE PERIL PRESENTING AN IMMINENT AND SUBSTANTIAL THREAT TO THE PUBLIC HEALTH, SAFETY, OR WELFARE.

A. Eminent Domain Principles Applicable to Inverse Condemnation. [See § 95.21, Paragraph A.]

B. Emergency Exercise of Police Power Must Be in Response to Immediate Peril. The state or its subdivision may take or damage private property under an emergency exercise of the police power without compensating the property owner only if the action is in response to a situation of grave character and serious moment evidenced by an imminent and substantial threat to public health, safety, or welfare (Holtz v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 296, 305, 90 Cal. Rptr. 345, 475 P.2d 441 ; Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30Cal. App. 4th 1670, 1681 , 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 758).

C. Allegation of Nonemergency. An allegation that defendant's action was not in response to an imminent and serious threat to public health, safety, or welfare, with allegations of the substantial impact of defendant's actions on plaintiff's property, pleads a cause of action sufficient to withstand a general demurrer (House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control District (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 384, 388-389, 153 P.2d 950).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint in inverse condemnation when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because it appears on the face of the complaint that the taking or damage occurred in the proper exercise of the police power.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities set out in § 95.22.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Emergency Exercise of Police Power Must Be in Response to Immediate Peril

In Holtz v. Superior Court (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 296, 305, 90 Cal. Rptr. 345, 475 P.2d 441 , plaintiffs brought an inverse condemnation action against the San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit District (BART) and the City and County of San Francisco for physical damage to plaintiffs' land and buildings caused by excavations undertaken by BART. The trial court struck from the complaint certain allegations relating to plaintiffs' contention that defendants were strictly liable on a theory of inverse condemnation. The court apparently concluded that defendants could not be held liable without a showing of negligence. Plaintiffs sought a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to reinstate the stricken allegations.

The California Supreme Court granted a peremptory writ of mandate to compel reinstatement of the stricken allegations. The Court found that defendants could be liable on an inverse condemnation theory for the damage allegedly caused by the excavation without a showing of negligence. In making this determination, the Court found that the case clearly did not fall within the "police power" exception to inverse condemnation liability. The Court stated that this doctrine of noncompensable loss comes into play in connection with the taking or damaging of property only under "emergency" conditions, i.e., when damage to private property is inflicted by government "under the pressure of public necessity and to avert impending peril" (3 Cal. 3d 296, 305) . Because a broad interpretation of this doctrine would completely vitiate the constitutional requirement of just compensation, the courts have narrowly circumscribed the types of emergency that will exempt the public entity from liability. The Court noted that "[i]nstances of this character are the demolition of all or parts of buildings to prevent the spread of conflagration, or the destruction of diseased animals, or rotten fruit, or infected trees where life or health is jeopardized" (3 Cal. 3d 296, 305 , citing House v. Los Angeles Flood Control Dist. (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 384, 391, 153 P.2d 950).

In Los Osos Valley Associates v. City of San Luis Obispo (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 1670, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 758 , plaintiff brought an action for inverse condemnation against the city, alleging that the city's groundwater extraction program had caused subsidence, resulting in damage to plaintiff's property. The trial court rejected the city's affirmative defense that it was immune from liability for inverse condemnation under its police powers due to an emergency created by a drought. The trial court granted judgment for plaintiff, and the city appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the city's removal of subjacent support worked a physical taking for which compensation was required (30 Cal. App. 4th 1670, 1680) . In so holding, the court found that the exception to compensation for damages inflicted pursuant to the proper exercise of the emergency police power was inapplicable (30 Cal. App. 4th 1670, 1681) . The court explained that "emergency" means an unforeseen situation calling for immediate action. Urgency must be present, and the magnitude of the exigency must be a factor. "Emergency" is not synonymous with expediency, convenience, or best interests, and it imports more than merely a general public need. Rather, "emergency" comprehends a situation of grave character and serious moment, and is evidenced by an imminent and substantial threat to public health or safety (30 Cal. App. 4th 1670, 1681 , citing Sonoma County Organization etc. Employees v. County of Sonoma (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 267, 276-277, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 850). The court found that the city had chosen to use a combination of mild conservation measures and the damaging groundwater pumping over a period of years. Further, the city never declared an emergency under the Emergency Services Act, nor did it require more stringent conservation measures of its citizens. The court thereforeconcluded that the city's choice of action did not constitute an emergency (30 Cal. App. 4th 1670, 1681-1682) .

[b] Allegation of Nonemergency

In House v. Los Angeles County Flood Control District (1944) 25 Cal. 2d 384, 153 P.2d 950 , the plaintiff alleged that defendant's negligent planning, construction, and maintenance of a flood control channel caused her property to flood and resulted in a physical taking. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed. It held that the trial court erred in concluding that defendant could not be held liable for a taking based on negligent construction and maintenance of the flood control project (25 Cal. 2d 384, 390) . The Court further held that the emergency exception to takings liability was inapplicable under the facts alleged (25 Cal. 2d 384, 391-392) . The Court noted that under the pressure of public necessity and to avert impending peril, a legitimate exercise of the police power often works not only avoidable damage but destruction of property without calling for compensation (25 Cal. 2d 384, 391) . However, it concluded that the situation at issue was not one of such emergency character as would preclude the defendant from being held liable for unnecessary damage resulting from its allegedly inadequate and negligent planning, construction, and maintenance of the flood channel project. According to the plaintiff's pleading, the defendant had had the time to exercise a deliberate choice of action in the manner of its installation of the river improvements (25 Cal. 2d 384, 391-392). The Court stated that in view of the organic rights to acquire, possess, and protect property and to due process and equal protection of the laws, the principles of nonliability and damnum absque injuria are not applicable when, in the exercise of the police power, private, personal, and property rights are interfered with, injured, or impaired in a manner that is not reasonably necessary to serve a public purpose for the general welfare (25 Cal. 2d 384, 392).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Emergency Exercise of Police Power Must Be in Response to Immediate Peril

In Smith v. County of Los Angeles (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 266, 262 Cal. Rptr. 754 , several hillside homes were destroyed due to a landslide caused by the county's removal of debris alongside roads it had built, and by a waterworks district's discharge of water into the hillside. These activities removed lateral and subjacent support from the homes, resulting in their destruction. Plaintiff landowners obtained a judgment against the county on causes of action for inverse condemnation, dangerous condition of public property, and nuisance. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the inverse condemnation cause of action, the court held that the county's decision to remove debris from roads rather than to close them constituted a choice, rather than an exercise of the police power under emergency conditions. The court stated that removing slide debris in order to keep a road open to traffic, when alternate routes are available, is not among the narrowly circumscribed types of emergency that can justify the taking of private property without compensation (214 Cal. App. 3d 266, 287) .

In Rose v. City of Coalinga (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1627, 236 Cal.Rptr. 124 , plaintiffs brought an inverse condemnation action based on the city's demolition of plaintiff's building following the Coalinga earthquake of 1983. The trial court granted the city summary judgment on the ground plaintiff's building had been demolished in an emergency exercise of the police power. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that a triable question of fact existed as to whether there was "a true emergency" caused by the plaintiff's damaged building, in light of evidence that the building was not a hazard, the property was enclosed by a fence, and the city had waited 57 days before destroying the building (190 Cal. App. 3d 1627, 1635) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawEminent Domain ProceedingsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationGeneral OverviewReal Property LawInverse CondemnationProcedure

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 9 Chapters 90-99 DISMISSAL---to---EMINENT DOMAIN
CHAPTER 95 EMINENT DOMAIN
PART II. FORMS
B. Opposing Demurrer to Complaint

9-95 California Points & Authorities § 95.41

AUTHOR: Jeffrey S. Rosen

§ 95.41 Opposing General Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] in Inverse Condemnation Action [Code Civ. Proc. § 1250.350]--Substantial Impairment of Access

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 95.40.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT ALLEGING SERIOUS DAMAGE TO HIS/HER PROPERTY RESULTING FROM SUBSTANTIAL IMPAIRMENT OF THE RIGHT OF ACCESS TO PUBLIC STREETS STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INVERSE CONDEMNATION.

A. Compensation for Taking. Private property may be taken or damaged for public use only when just compensation has first been paid to, or into court for, the owner (Cal. Const. art. I, § 19).

B. The Concept of "Taking" Does Not Require a Physical Seizure. Under the California Constitution, article I, section 19, the concept of "taking" does not require a physical seizure of land, and extends to a diminution of the owner's rights and attributes of ownership (Tilem v. City of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 694, 702, 191 Cal. Rptr. 229).

C. Substantial Impairment of Right of Access. Substantial impairment of a property owner's right of access to the system of public streets establishes a compensable right (Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 661, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719).

D. Allegation of Substantial Impairment. An allegation that defendant's action has substantially lessened and seriously impaired the free and full use by plaintiff of his or her property with allegations of the serious impact of this loss of access on the plaintiff's property pleads a cause of action sufficient to withstand a general demurrer (Breidert

v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 667, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to an inverse condemnation complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint that the impairment of access is insubstantial.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

In an appropriate case, this form may be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities set out in § 95.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Concept of "Taking" Does Not Require a Physical Seizure

In Tilem v. City of Los Angeles (1983) 142 Cal. App. 3d 694, 191 Cal. Rptr. 229 , the city filed an action in eminent domain as to a portion of two contiguous parcels owned by the plaintiff. One parcel contained two apartment buildings and the other was undeveloped. The plaintiff filed an action for inverse condemnation, and the two actions were consolidated. A month before trial, the city abandoned its action and the matter was tried on the plaintiff's complaint. The trial court awarded the plaintiff damages for loss of the use of the undeveloped parcel but denied any recovery for the other parcel. Both sides appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the award of damages for the undeveloped parcel but reversed the denial of damages for the developed parcel. The court noted that the concept of "taking" has changed from the notion of a physical seizure to that of a diminution of the owner's rights and attributes of ownership. Thus, the rule has developed that a cause of action for inverse condemnation arises from a governmental invasion or appropriation of a valuable property right that directly and specifically affects the landowner to his or her injury. Damages may be recovered for a public agency's unreasonable conduct during precondemnation and postcondemnation activities if it can be established that the governmental entity acted improperly, either by unreasonably delaying the institution of an eminent domain action following an announcement of intent to condemn or by other unreasonable precondemnation conduct, and that as a result of this action the property suffered a diminution in market value (142 Cal. App. 3d 694, 702) .

The court of appeal then found that the trial court properly determined that the city was liable to the owner for damages resulting from the city's precondemnation conduct. Among other things, the city prevented the plaintiff from developing the vacant property for almost three years, the proposed taking (in conjunction with a setback requirement) rendered the real estate virtually useless, the city's offer of compensation was inadequate and directly affected the plaintiff's ability to obtain the fair market value of his property, the city refused to consider severance damages, and the city violated the six-month time limit imposed by Code Civ. Proc. § 1245.260(a) by waiting 10 months after the passage of the resolution of necessity before filing and serving the condemnation action (142 Cal. App. 3d 694, 703-705) . Finally, the court found that the trial court erred when it concluded that a lease-option contract for the developed parcel did not constitute a "sale" of the parcel for purposes of determining damages.

[b] Substantial Impairment of Right of Access

Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 , was an inverse condemnation action for damages to private property resulting from impairment of the easement of access to the system of public streets. The plaintiffs' property fronted on Vaughn Street, which crossed a railroad right-of-way and intersected with San Fernando Road. The plaintiffs used the Vaughn Street crossing as a means of access to and from San Fernando Road. The defendants barricaded Vaughn Street and closed the crossing. This deprived the plaintiffs of access to the next intersecting street in one direction. Plaintiffs initiated an inverse condemnation action for damages. The trial court sustained the defendants' general demurrer to the plaintiffs' amended complaint and entered judgments of dismissal as to the defendants. The plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The Court held that the easement of access is a property right of the urban landowner, and that this easement consists of the right to get into the street on which the landowner's property abuts and from there, in a reasonable manner, to the general system of public streets. A substantial impairment of the right of access to the general system of public streets entitles the property owner to compensation.

[c] Allegation of Substantial Impairment

The fact situation in Breidert v. Southern Pac. Co. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 659, 39 Cal. Rptr. 903, 394 P.2d 719 , is discussed in § 95.41[3][b]. The Court noted that Bacich v. Board of Control (1943) 23 Cal. 2d 343, 349, 144 P.2d 818 held that the easement of access includes a right to pass to the next intersecting streets. The recognition that the easement includes the right to reach the general system of public streets over either of the next intersecting streets in two directions, however, does not mean that in every case an allegation of impaired access to the next intersecting street in one direction will establish a compensable right. Loss of access to the next intersecting street in one direction is a significant factor in finding an impairment of the right of access, and obstruction of access to the next intersecting street serves as one element of the impairment. Not every cul-de-sac case is compensable, however. The complaint must allege that the loss of access has substantially lessened and seriously impaired the free and full use by plaintiffs of their property and that this loss of access has had a serious impact on the plaintiffs' real property. The claimed damage to property owners from loss of access to the next intersecting street and to the general system of streets must be more than formal in order to be compensable. It must be a true, substantial loss.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Compensation for Taking

It is well established that section 19 of article I of the California Constitution, which states in pertinent part that "[p]rivate property may be taken or damaged for public use only when just compensation, ascertained by a jury unless waived, has first been paid to, or into court for, the owner," provides the authority for prosecution of an inverse condemnation proceeding [Holtz v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 648, 652, 131 Cal. Rptr. 646, 552 P.2d 430] .

[b] Allegation of Substantial Impairment

Valenta v. County of Los Angeles (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 669, 39 Cal. Rptr. 909, 394 P.2d 725 , involved an inverse

