This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages for false imprisonment where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that the defendant is a judge who is protected from liability for acts in his or her official capacity by the doctrine of judicial immunity.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c; see Paddleford v. Biscay (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 139, 99 Cal. Rptr. 220] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judicial Immunity

In Paddleford v. Biscay (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 139, 99 Cal. Rptr. 220 , the plaintiff brought an action for false imprisonment, assault and battery, and denial of bail against a municipal court judge who issued an invalid misdemeanor arrest warrant which improperly allowed night service in violation of the provisions of Penal Code § 840 then in effect. The trial court entered a summary judgment dismissing the complaint, concluding that, as a matter of law, the defendant judge was not liable in his judicial capacity for the acts described. After the state court judgment became final, a judgment of nonsuit was entered against the plaintiff in federal district court on a substantially similar cause of action under the federal Civil Rights Act. The court of appeal affirmed the state court summary judgment. The court held, first, that the federal judgment of nonsuit formed the basis of a collateral estoppel against the plaintiff, even though it was not final until after an appeal was taken from the state trial court judgment. Second, the court held that the arrest warrant was not in compliance with statutory requirements then in effect, in that it allowed night service of a misdemeanor arrest warrant without being personally indorsed by the judge [see Penal Code § 840]. However, the judge was not acting in the complete absence of jurisdiction, but only in excess of his jurisdiction, and was therefore protected from civil liability for false imprisonment by the doctrine of judicial immunity.

NOTE:
Penal Code § 840 now requires a showing of good cause before a judge may authorize night service of a misdemeanor arrest warrant.

[b] Error in Determination of Jurisdiction

In Taliaferro v. Contra Costa County (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 587, 6 Cal. Rptr. 231 , the plaintiff brought an action for damages for false imprisonment against Contra Costa County and against a judicial district court judge of that county. The action was based on the judge's issuance of an arrest warrant allegedly without jurisdiction and for motives of personal animosity and revenge. The trial court entered judgment for the judge after sustaining his demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. The plaintiff appealed from the judgment and the court of appeal affirmed. The plaintiff, a resident of Contra Costa County, had been arrested on a warrant issued by the judge on a criminal complaint charging him with a misdemeanor under Lab. Code § 93 for willfully ignoring a subpoena duces tecum requiring his appearance at a Labor Commissioner's hearing in Alameda County. He was convicted in a criminal proceeding in Contra Costa County, but the judgment of conviction was ultimately reversed by the superior court appellate department.

The court of appeal suggested that under the circumstances the defendant judge may not have had jurisdiction to issue the warrant. However, the court noted that although "failure to appear" at a hearing can only occur where the hearing is scheduled, "wilfully ignoring" a subpoena might have been interpreted as a personal act not confined to the forum of appearance. The allegation of the defendant's residence in Contra Costa County, and its geographical proximity to Oakland, furnished reasonable grounds for the defendant judge to believe that the criminal act denounced in the complaint had occurred in Contra Costa County and that the filing of the complaint demanded the exercise of the magisterial power. Given the fact that the judge had reasonable grounds for belief that jurisdiction to issue the warrant existed, he was immune from liability in connection with its issuance. Plaintiff's allegations of malice and corrupt motives were therefore treated as surplusage. The court held that a judge is immune from civil liability for every act performed within the general scope of his official duties, even though it is charged that the act was a malicious personal tort. An error of judgment as to jurisdiction does not expose the judge to civil liability as long as there were reasonable grounds to believe that jurisdiction existed (182 Cal. App. 2d 587, 593) .

NOTE:
Lab. Code § 93, the subpoena enforcement statute discussed in Taliaferro v. Contra Costa County (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 587, 6 Cal. Rptr. 231 , was subsequently held to be unenforceable as a violation of U.S. Const. amend. IV and Cal. Const. art. I, § 13, because it provides no judicial procedure to test the validity of the subpoena except by the subpoenaed party's refusing to comply and thereby committing a misdemeanor [California Restaurant Assn. v. Henning (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1069, 1074-1077, 219 Cal. Rptr. 630] .

[c] Issuance of Warrant of Insufficient Complaint

In Platz v. Marion (1917) 35 Cal. App 241, 169 P. 697 , the plaintiff, an attorney, sued a justice of the peace for damages for false imprisonment in connection with the issuance of an arrest warrant. Defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint was sustained, and a judgment was entered against the plaintiff. The arrest warrant was issued on a criminal complaint which attempted to charge the crime of common barratry (the persistent incitement of lawsuits). However, it appeared from the face of the complaint that it was wholly insufficient to charge the crime alleged and in fact accused the attorney of activities merely amounting to the exhaustion of available legal remedies in relieving his client of the effects of a judgment. The court of appeal nevertheless upheld the judgment in favor of the defendant. The court stated that the action of the defendant in issuing the arrest warrant based on an erroneous determination as to the sufficiency of the criminal complaint, in the absence of any claim that the justice of the peace was actuated by malice or corrupt motives, was protected from being the basis of civil liability by the doctrine of judicial immunity (35 Cal. App 241, 243) .

[d] Lack of Statutory Compliance

Paddleford v. Biscay (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 139, 99 Cal. Rptr. 220 , is discussed in § 103.90[3][a].

[e] Inferior Court Judges Immune

Taliaferro v. Contra Costa County (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 587, 6 Cal. Rptr. 231 , is discussed in § 103.90[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judicial Immunity

In Perry v. Meikle (1951) 102 Cal. App. 2d 602, 228 P.2d 17 , plaintiff sued several defendants for false imprisonment and conspiracy, including a superior court judge who had ordered her imprisoned for contempt. The trial court sustained demurrers of certain defendants without leave to amend and entered judgment for those defendants. The court of appeal affirmed. It stated that a judge is immune from liability for judicial acts, even when such acts are in excess of the judge's jurisdiction and are alleged to have been done maliciously and corruptly. It concluded that no liability could be imposed on the judge, or on the other defendants, in connection with an order made by a judge in a matter over which he had jurisdiction, and where the proceeding was regular in all respects.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.91

§ 103.91 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Detention of Juvenile--Juvenile Court Judge Immune From Liability for Detention of Minor

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE DEFENDANT JUVENILE COURT JUDGE IS IMMUNE FROM LIABILITY FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT FOR THE DETENTION OF A MINOR.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 103.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Immunity of Juvenile Court Judges. A judge of the juvenile court is protected by the doctrine of judicial immunity from liability for false imprisonment in connection with the detention of a minor, so long as he/she acts within the general scope of his/her powers and in an honest belief that his/her actions are legally warranted, even if he/she commits an error of judgment in acting as he/she does (Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 524-525, 305 P.2d 893).

[Optional] C. Effect of Procedural Irregularities. If a juvenile court judge acts within the scope of the general subject matter over which he/she has been given power, procedural irregularities in connection with the detention of a minor are not acts "without jurisdiction" so as to remove the protection of judicial immunity and subject the judge to liability for false imprisonment (Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 525, 305 P.2d 893).

[Optional] D. Effect of Habeas Corpus Release. A decision in a habeas corpus proceeding that a minor should be released from the custody of the juvenile court does not amount to a finding that the judge who ordered the minor's detention was acting without jurisdiction in the sense that it would take him/her out of the protection of the immunity rules and subject him/her to civil liability for false imprisonment (Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 525, 305 P.2d 893).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages for false imprisonment where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that the defendant is a juvenile court judge who is immune from liability for false imprisonment in connection with the detention of a minor.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for summary judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] in an action for damages for false imprisonment against a juvenile court judge in connection with the detention of a minor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity of Juvenile Court Judges

In Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 305 P.2d 893 , an eight-year-old child and her parents brought an action for false imprisonment against two juvenile court judges. The trial court ordered a dismissal of the action after sustaining the defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint. The plaintiffs appealed and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The amended complaint alleged that one judge ordered the child detained in juvenile hall without a prior hearing, and that a subsequent predetention hearing was held without proper citation on the child's parents. As to the other judge, it was alleged that he had ordered the child detained in juvenile hall pursuant to a written request of the district attorney at a time before any petition was filed to have the child declared a ward of the juvenile court. The district attorney requested that the child be detained as a material witness in a trial against her grandfather. It was feared that her parents, who did not wish the grandfather to be prosecuted, might try to influence or intimidate the child. The child was subsequently ordered released from custody of the juvenile court in a habeas corpus proceeding.

The court of appeal held that the juvenile court judges were protected from civil liability for their actions by the doctrine of judicial immunity. It stated that the test of immunity from civil suit for damages on the part of a judicial officer is not whether he or she committed an error of judgment in acting as he or she did, but whether the act in question was within the general scope of the officer's judicial powers and whether he or she acted in an honest belief that he or she was legally warranted in doing it. In this case, the judges were acting within the scope of the general subject matter over which they were given power. The plaintiff's allegations regarding procedural irregularities, namely the lack of timely filing of a petition and citation and the irregularity of the grounds on which the district attorney sought the detention, were not sufficient to characterize the action of the judges as being "without jurisdiction" so as to remove the protection of the immunity rules. Further, the child's release on habeas corpus did not constitute a prior finding that the judges had acted without jurisdiction so as to deprive them of judicial immunity in a civil suit.

[b] Effect of Procedural Irregularities

Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 305 P.2d 893 , is discussed in § 103.91[3][a].

[c] Effect of Habeas Corpus Release

Singer v. Bogen (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 515, 305 P.2d 893 , is discussed in § 103.91[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.92

§ 103.92 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Warrant--Private Citizen Not Liable for Providing Information in Good Faith Leading to Issuance of Arrest Warrant

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT A PRIVATE CITIZEN IS NOT LIABLE FOR PROVIDING INFORMATION IN GOOD FAITH LEADING TO THE ISSUANCE OF AN ARREST WARRANT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 103.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Immunity of Private Citizen. Where a private citizen reports the facts of an alleged offense to a magistrate, takes no active part in the arrest, but leaves the matter to the public officials, and no bad faith appears, he/she is not liable for false imprisonment merely because the facts he/she has stated to the magistrate do not constitute a public offense (Gogue v. MacDonald (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 482, 487, 218 P.2d 542).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to the complaint in an action for false imprisonment against a private citizen who gave facts to a magistrate resulting in the issuance of a warrant for the plaintiff's arrest where the demurrer asserts that the defendant is immune from liability for good faith presentation of facts to the magistrate, notwithstanding the fact that the information presented does not constitute a public offense.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that the defendant private citizen gave information to the police in good faith, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity of Private Citizen

In Gogue v. MacDonald (1950) 35 Cal. 2d 482, 218 P.2d 542 , the plaintiff brought an action for false imprisonment against his former landlord who had supplied information to a magistrate which resulted in the issuance of a warrant for his arrest and in his temporary detention. The trial court found that the complaint failed to state a cause of action, and entered judgment for the defendant. The complaint alleged that the defendant went before a justice of the peace and complained that the plaintiff had removed himself and his belongings from the defendant's cottage without paying rent due. The justice of the peace prepared a criminal complaint and issued an arrest warrant. The complaint and warrant were based on an alleged violation of Penal Code § 537 which at that time made it a crime to remove belongings without payment was of rent due for certain furnished accommodations, The plaintiff arrested, detained, and the charge was subsequently dismissed. Plaintiff further alleged that the facts alleged by the defendant and made the basis of the criminal complaint and the arrest warrant did not constitute the designated, or any, penal offense.

The Supreme Court sustained the judgment of the trial court. It held that a private citizen is protected from liability for false imprisonment where he or she does nothing more than state facts in good faith to the magistrate who then issues a warrant for arrest, even though the facts are insufficient to show that a crime has been committed. The Court reasoned that to hold the complainant liable on the basis of the magistrate's mistake in determining that a crime has been committed would be unjust (35 Cal. 2d 482, 487) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity of Private Citizen

Cummings v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 249 Cal. Rptr. 568 , involved an action against an insurance company for false imprisonment. The defendant had supplied police with information concerning a false claim filed by the plaintiff. The police arrested the plaintiff for filing the false claim, but the case was eventually dismissed. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment in the defendant's favor, stating that a private person does not become liable for false imprisonment when that person gives information, even mistaken information, in good faith to the proper authorities, even if the information is the principal cause of the plaintiff's imprisonment (202 Cal. App. 3d 1407, 1422) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.93

§ 103.93 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Warrant--Failure to Allege Facts Showing Warrant Invalid on Its Face

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING WARRANT INVALID ON ITS FACE.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 103.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Necessary Allegations Where Arrest Pursuant to Warrant. To state a cause of action for false imprisonment based on an arrest pursuant to warrant, the plaintiff must allege the unlawfulness of the arrest by pleading facts to show that the warrant was invalid on its face (Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 837, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633).

[Optional] C. Insufficient Allegations. Allegations such as that the warrant was "void," "illegal," "unauthorized," or "void on its face," are conclusions of law and do not fulfill plaintiff's burden of pleading facts to show the facial invalidity of the legal process (Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 837, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint in an action for false imprisonment where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that the arrest was pursuant to warrant and the complaint fails to show the unlawfulness of the arrest by alleging facts demonstrating that the warrant was void on its face.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Points and Authorities

For a memorandum of points and authorities which may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint on the ground that a police officer is immune from liability for false imprisonment based on the execution of a facially valid warrant of arrest, see § 103.94.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations Where Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][b].

[b] Insufficient Allegations

Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessary Allegations Where Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

Scannell v. County of Riverside (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 596, 199 Cal. Rptr. 644 , is discussed in § 103.20[4][a]. As an additional ground for upholding the trial court's sustaining of general demurrers to the plaintiff's causes of action for false imprisonment, the court held that the plaintiff had not alleged any facts showing the invalidity of his arrest pursuant to complaint and warrant. Therefore, there was no allegation that the plaintiff's imprisonment was without color of legal authority, an essential element necessary to state a cause of action for false imprisonment (152 Cal. App. 3d 596, 607-608, 615) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.94

§ 103.94 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Warrant--Peace Officer and Public Entity Employing Him/Her Immune From Liability for Execution of Facially Valid Arrest Warrant or Other Process [Civ. Code § 43.55; Code Civ. Proc. § 262.1]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE A PEACE OFFICER [AND THE PUBLIC] ENTITY EMPLOYING HIM/HER] IS/ARE IMMUNE FROM LIABILITY FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT IF THE OFFICER, WITHOUT MALICE, MAKES AN ARREST PURSUANT TO _____ [A FACIALLY VALID WARRANT OF ARREST or FACIALLY VALID PROCESS].

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 103.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Immunity of Peace Officer. A peace officer is immune from liability for false arrest and imprisonment if, without malice, he/she makes an arrest pursuant to process that is regular on its face (Civ. Code § 43.55(a); Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 153-154, 265 P.2d 907 ; Collins v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 676-678, 123 Cal. Rptr. 525).

C. Facial Regularity of Process. Process is regular on its face when it proceeds from a court, officer, or body having authority of law to issue process of that nature, and when it is legal in form and contains nothing to notify or fairly apprise anyone that it was issued without authority (Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 153-154, 265 P.2d 907 ; Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 837-838, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633).

D. Determination of Facial Regularity. Facial regularity of process is not to be determined on the basis of scrutiny by a trained legal mind nor to be judged in the light of facts outside its provisions that the officer may know. Unless there is a clear absence of jurisdiction on the part of the court or magistrate issuing the process, it is sufficient if on its face it appears to be valid in the judgment of an ordinarily intelligent and informed lay person (Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907 ; Lopez v. City of Oxnard (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10, 254 Cal. Rptr. 556).

[Optional] E. Defects in Issuance Proceeding. A peace officer is not liable for the execution of process which is valid on its face, irrespective of any defects in the proceedings leading up to its issuance (Code Civ. Proc. § 262.1; Barrier v. Alexander (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 497, 501, 224 P.2d 436).

[Optional] F. Knowledge of Officer. Knowledge, imputed or actual, on the part of the arresting officer, of facts outside the warrant is not sufficient ground for basing a cause of action for false imprisonment if the warrant is regular on its face (Lopez v. City of Oxnard (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10, 254 Cal. Rptr. 556 ; Herndon v. Marin County (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 933, 936, 102 Cal. Rptr. 221 , disapproved on other grounds, Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 722, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865).

[Optional] G. Determination of Invalidity on Habeas Corpus. A warrant may be facially valid for purposes of providing the arresting officer with immunity for its execution in a civil suit, notwithstanding the warrant was found invalid in a criminal habeas corpus proceeding in a higher court, if the warrant would have appeared valid to an ordinarily intelligent and informed lay person (Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 151, 154, 265 P.2d 907).

[Optional] H. Malice of Officer. An allegation that a peace officer executing an arrest warrant regular on its face knew that the warrant was improperly issued, but failed to contact the judge who issued the warrant[, although requested to do so by the person arrested], is not a sufficient allegation of malice to remove the immunity provided by Section 43.55 of the Civil Code, which exempts arresting officers from liability if the arrest warrant is regular on its face and he/she acts without malice (Herndon v. Marin County (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 933, 936-937, 102 Cal. Rptr. 221 , disapproved on other grounds, Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 722, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865).

[Optional] I. Jurisdiction of Person. It is not necessary that the process under which a sheriff acts should show jurisdiction of the person to afford him/her protection and justification for his/her acts in executing it (Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 154, 265 P.2d 907).

[Optional] J. Immunity of Public Entity. If a peace officer is immune from liability for false imprisonment based on an arrest pursuant to a facially valid warrant, the public entity employing him/her is likewise immune from liability (Gov. Code § 815.2(b); Collins v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 673-674, 123 Cal. Rptr. 525).

[Optional] K. Judicial Order Entered Into Automated Warrant System May Be "Regular On Its Face." A "warrant deemed regular on its face" encompasses not only a paper arrest warrant issued pursuant to a judicial order, but also a judicial order entered into an automated warrant system by law enforcement or court personnel authorized to make such entries at or near the time the judicial order is made (Civ. Code § 43.55(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to the complaint in an action against a peace officer and/or the public entity employing him or her for damages for false imprisonment where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because the peace officer is immune as a matter of law from liability for execution, without malice, of an arrest warrant or other process regular on its face.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for summary judgment in an action for damages for false imprisonment against a peace officer who arrested the plaintiff pursuant to a facially regular warrant or other process.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity of Peace Officer

Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 265 P.2d 907 , was an action for false imprisonment against a sheriff and his sureties based on the execution of an order of commitment for contempt for failure to pay child support. The trial court entered a judgment for the defendants after general demurrers to plaintiff's complaint were sustained without leave to amend. The Supreme Court affirmed. The complaint alleged that the contempt order was void on its face and that, therefore, in executing it, the sheriff acted unlawfully. In support of his theory that the contempt order was facially void, the plaintiff pointed out that in an independent habeas corpus proceeding he had been ordered released from custody because the contempt order did not meet the law's requirements in that it did not specify the amount of money which the plaintiff was required to pay to purge himself from contempt and secure his release. The Supreme Court held that the standards which were applied in determining the validity of the contempt order for the purpose of habeas corpus were not to be applied in determining whether the order was regular on its face, so as to shield the sheriff from civil liability in executing it. The Court held that process is fair on its face if it proceeds from a court having jurisdiction of the subject matter and contains nothing which ought reasonably to apprise the officer that it was issued without authority. It is not necessary that the process under which a sheriff acts should show jurisdiction of the person to afford him or her protection and justification for his or her acts in executing it. When a sheriff receives an order directing him or her to imprison a person for contempt, while obliged to use reasonable diligence to perform the duties of his or her office in a lawful manner, the sheriff is not bound at his or her peril to anticipate that a court higher than the one which made the order will not uphold its validity. The court further noted that it is the duty of a sheriff to execute the orders of the court unless they are patently irregular and void.

In Collins v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 123 Cal. Rptr. 525 , the plaintiff sued the City and County of San Francisco for damages for false arrest and imprisonment. The trial court granted a summary judgment in favor of the city and the court of appeal affirmed. The complaint alleged that the plaintiff had been arrested on three misdemeanor charges and that the municipal court dismissed two of the charges. Pursuant to Penal Code § 1387, the dismissal of the two charges barred further prosecution on them. Nevertheless, the arresting office refiled one of the dismissed charges, and a warrant was sworn out for the plaintiff's arrest. Later the plaintiff was arrested on the warrant by another officer, kept in custody overnight, and released. Subsequently, the charges were dismissed. The plaintiff sued the City and County of San Francisco, alleging that the city was liable to him in damages for false arrest and imprisonment based on the culpable conduct of the first arresting officer who refiled the barred charge and whose conduct thus resulted in plaintiff's subsequent arrest. The court of appeal held that the city's motion for summary judgment was properly granted. Under Gov. Code § 815.2, the city was liable only if its employee, the first arresting officer, was liable to the plaintiff. As a matter of law, the complaint showed that the arrest at issue was under due forms of law and under color of legal authority. Thus it could not form the basis of a cause of action for false arrest. The facts alleged in the complaint, namely the refiling of a complaint on a barred misdemeanor charge, which resulted in the issuance of a warrant and the subsequent arrest of the plaintiff, might have formed the basis of the cause of action for malicious prosecution. However, under Gov. Code § 821.6, public employees, including police officers, are immune from liability for malicious prosecution. The police officer being immune, the city, his public employer, was also immune, and thus the city's motion for summary judgment was properly granted.

NOTE:

Collins v. City & County of San Francisco must be distinguished from Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 715, 722, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865 [see § 103.113], in which the Supreme Court held that if county clerks fail to keep proper records indicating that a person has already served a sentence or to inform the judge of that fact, they may be liable for false imprisonment if the judge then issues a warrant based on the misinformation.

[b] Facial Regularity of Process

Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 265 P.2d 907 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][a].

In Muller v. Reagh (1963) 215 Cal. App. 2d 831, 30 Cal. Rptr. 633 , the plaintiff sued 63 defendants, including the City and County of San Francisco, the sheriff, various jail personnel, and his former wife's attorney (Reagh) for false imprisonment, based on his arrest on an allegedly invalid warrant of attachment issued after plaintiff failed to appear at a show cause hearing. The trial court sustained Regah's demurrer to plaintiff's amended complaint without leave to amend and entered judgment. The gist of plaintiff's allegations concerned the invalidity of the warrant under which he was arrested. He alleged, essentially, that the warrant was in mimeographed form, with the endorsement filled in by defendant Reach, and signed by the judge. In ordering the issuance of the bench warrant, the judge had made a minute order referring to the payment of bail in cash, surety bonds, or personal bonds. The endorsement on the warrant omitted reference to surety bonds. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court, basing its decision on the rule that where a cause of action for false imprisonment is based on an arrest pursuant to warrant, the complaint must allege facts which show that the warrant was invalid on its face. The court of appeal found that plaintiff's allegations of the invalidity of the warrant were insufficient to state a cause of action for false imprisonment. The court pointed out that allegations that the warrant was "void," "unlawful," "illegal," or "unauthorized," are mere conclusions of law and not allegations of act. The court went on to state that process is regular on its face when it proceeds from a court, officer, or body having authority of law to issue process of that nature, and when it is legal in form, and contains nothing to notify or fairly apprise anyone that it is issued without authority. A warrant prepared by the attorney and signed by the court is as much the order of the ourt as though the judge of the court had written it in its final form. The endorsement on the warrant regarding bail was in conformity with the statute governing bail in such cases [Code Civ. Proc. § 1215], which statute contained no reference to surety bonds. It was therefore immaterial that the surety bond provision contained in the minute order did not appear in the endorsement on the warrant.

[c] Determination of Facial Regularity

In Lopez v. City of Oxnard (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 254 Cal. Rptr. 556 , the plaintiff was arrested three times on the same warrant that listed plaintiff's name, birth date, address, and physical description. However, plaintiff was not the person wanted on the warrant. After the first arrest and release, the court gave the plaintiff a "disposition sheet" for him to carry and show stating that plaintiff was not the person named in the warrant. On the second arrest, plaintiff showed the disposition sheet but was held for three days before being released. Plaintiff was released several hours after the third arrest. Plaintiff sued various public entities and their employees for false imprisonment and other torts based on the arrests and the refusal of the arresting officers and jail personnel to verify the validity of the court order plaintiff showed them. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint and dismissed the action. The court of appeal affirmed.

The court stated that the defendants did not breach any duty in refusing to consider the disposition sheet shown to them (207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) . The court further stated that it is not the function of an arresting officer to investigate the procedure by which the warrant was issued, nor is it the officer's duty to consider the propriety of the issuance if the warrant is regular on its face (207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8) . Because the warrant accurately described the plaintiff and included his name and address and other identifying information, the arresting officers, sheriff, and jail personnel did not act without reasonable precaution and were entitled to rely on the orders, which were apparently valid (207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8-10) .

The factual background of Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 265 P.2d 907 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][a]. In that case, the Supreme Court held that the facial regularity of process is not to be determined on the basis of scrutiny by a trained legal mind, nor to be judged in the light of facts outside its provisions which the officer may know, and that unless there is a clear absence of jurisdiction on the part of the court or magistrate issuing the process, it is sufficient if upon its face it appears to be valid in the judgment of an ordinarily intelligent and informed lay person.

[d] Defects in Issuance Proceeding

In Barrier v. Alexander (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 497, 224 P.2d 436 , the plaintiff sued a highway patrol officer for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution based on the plaintiff's arrest pursuant to warrant for the offense of reckless driving [former Veh. Code § 505 (now see Veh. Code §§ 23103, 23104)]. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's second amended complaint without leave to amend and entered judgment in favor of the defendant. Plaintiff alleged that his arrest and imprisonment were unlawful and void based on alleged defects in the proceedings in which the arrest warrant was issued. It appeared that the plaintiff was not originally arrested, but had been notified to appear in court, did appear, and was subsequently released on his own recognizance because the complaint was defective. An amended complaint was thereafter filed, a warrant of arrest was issued, and the plaintiff was arrested.

Plaintiff alleged that his release on his own recognizance when the original complaint was dismissed deprived the court of jurisdiction to issue a warrant of arrest on the filing of the amended complaint. The court of appeal held that whatever may have been the defects in the proceedings leading up to the issuance of the warrant, these could not subject the defendant highway patrol officer to liability for false imprisonment for execution of the warrant, under the general rule that a peace officer is not liable for the service of a warrant which is valid on its face, irrespective of any defects in the proceedings leading up to its issuance. The court further held that the plaintiff's amended complaint did not contain facts sufficient to state a cause of action against the defendant for malicious prosecution, because it did not state that the proceedings upon which it was based had finally terminated in favor of the plaintiff, one of the essential elements of a complaint for malicious prosecution.

NOTE:

Although the offense for which the plaintiff in Barrier v. Alexander was arrested was a misdemeanor, under the provisions of former Penal Code § 1387, effective in 1950, dismissal of a misdemeanor charge for the purpose of amending a defective complaint did not bar further prosecution for the charge. Under present Penal Code § 1387, dismissal of a misdemeanor charge bars further prosecution for the charge.

[e] Knowledge of Officer

The factual background of Lopez v. City of Oxnard (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 254 Cal. Rptr. 556 is discussed in §

103.94[3][c]. The court held that although a sheriff may be liable for false imprisonment if he or she knows the imprisonment is unlawful or if he or she is put on official notice sufficient to require investigation of its validity, such liability generally applies only in a situation in which the sheriff is not acting pursuant to a warrant valid on its face. The court held that the sheriff in the case before it was not liable for simply refusing to look behind a paper handed to him by an arrestee. The sheriff had violated no statute, and the arrestee would not have languished in jail, but would have had to appear before a magistrate within two days of the arrest (207 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10-11) .

Herndon v. Marin County (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 933, 102 Cal. Rptr. 221 , was an action for false imprisonment against the County of Marin, the county sheriff, and a deputy sheriff following the plaintiff's arrest on a warrant. There was no allegation in the complaint that the warrant was irregular on its face. The trial court entered a judgment of dismissal following an order sustaining the defendant's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. The plaintiff had been cited for two traffic violations. On a nonjury trial, he was found not guilty of one and guilty of the other. He paid his fine. Subsequently, a new complaint was negligently filed, and a warrant was issued for the plaintiff's arrest on the same charges. Plaintiff was arrested by the deputy sheriff who had been a witness at the previous trial on the same charges. In his complaint, plaintiff alleged that the deputy sheriff was liable for false imprisonment, notwithstanding the fact that the warrant was regular on its face, because he knew that a final judicial determination of all aspects of the charge had been made and knew or should have known that the warrant was improperly issued.

The court of appeal sustained the judgment in favor of defendants. Civ. Code § 43.55 grants a peace officer immunity from liability for false imprisonment in connection with the execution of an arrest warrant regular on its face, provided he or she acts without malice and in the reasonable belief that the person arrested is the person named in the warrant. The court held that no cause of action for false imprisonment was stated based on the deputy's alleged knowledge of facts outside the record showing that the warrant was improperly issued. The court stated that it is not the duty of an arresting officer to investigate the procedure which led to the issuance of a facially regular warrant, nor is there any obligation on his or her part to pass judgment on the judicial act of issuing the warrant.

Plaintiff also alleged that the county was liable for false imprisonment based on its employee's negligence in giving faulty information to the judge who issued the arrest warrant. Although the court of appeal found that the county was immune from liability on this ground under the provisions of Gov. Code § 821.6 (public employee immunity for initiation of judicial proceeding) the Supreme Court subsequently disapproved this and similar holdings in the case of Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865 .

[f] Determination of Invalidity on Habeas Corpus

Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 265 P.2d 907 , is discussed in § 103.67[3][a].

[g] Malice of Officer

The factual background of Herndon v. Marin County (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 933 , 102 Cal. Rptr. 221 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][e]. The court of appeal held that an allegation that the peace officer executing an arrest warrant regular on its face knew that the warrant was improperly issued, but failed to contact the judge who issued the warrant although requested to do so by the person arrested, is not a sufficient allegation of malice to remove the immunity provided by Civ. Code § 43.55, which provides that an arresting officer is exempt from liability if the arrest warrant is regular on its face and he or she acts without malice. The court conceded, however, that there may be some acts, malicious and closely connected with an arrest itself, which would remove Civ. Code § 43.55 immunity, even if a warrant were valid on its face.

[h] Jurisdiction of Person

Vallindras v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 149, 265 P.2d 907 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that an order may be void as to the parties, and yet valid to protect ministerial officers who execute it, when the court issuing it had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and nothing appears on the face of the process to apprise the officer that the court did not also have jurisdiction of the person.

[i] Immunity of Public Entity

Collins v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 123 Cal. Rptr. 525 , is discussed in § 103.94[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity of Peace Officer

The factual and procedural background of Scannell v. County of Riverside (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 596, 199 Cal. Rptr. 644 , is discussed in § 103.20[4][a]. The court of appeal held that a county detective and the county was not liable for a claim of false imprisonment when the confinement was facially lawful, although such confinement violated prior immunity from prosecution given to the plaintiff.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.95

§ 103.95 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Warrant--Judicial Immunity Does Not Protect Judge Acting in Complete Absence of Jurisdiction to Issue Arrest Warrant

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

JUDICIAL IMMUNITY DOES NOT PROTECT A JUDGE FROM LIABILITY FOR DAMAGES FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT WHERE HE/SHE ISSUES AN ARREST WARRANT IN THE COMPLETE ABSENCE OF JURISDICTION TO DO SO.

A. Inapplicability of Judicial Immunity. A judge is not protected from liability for false arrest and imprisonment where he/she issues an arrest warrant in the complete absence of jurisdiction to issue the warrant. Issuance of an arrest warrant in the complete absence of subject matter jurisdiction to do so, as opposed to issuance of a warrant in excess of jurisdiction, subjects the judge to liability for damages for false imprisonment (De Courcey v. Cox (1892) 94 Cal. 665, 668-669, 30 P. 95).

[Optional] B. Arrest for Noncriminal Act. A judge acts in the complete absence of jurisdiction when he/she issues a warrant of arrest for an act which is not a crime (De Courcey v. Cox (1892) 94 Cal. 665, 668-669, 30 P. 95).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint seeking damages for false imprisonment from a judge issuing an arrest warrant without jurisdiction where the demurrer asserts that the judge is protected from liability by the doctrine of judicial immunity.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inapplicability of Judicial Immunity

In De Courcey v. Cox (1892) 94 Cal. 665, 30 P. 95 , the plaintiff brought an action for damages for false imprisonment against a justice of the peace who had issued a warrant for his arrest which had resulted in his incarceration in the county jail for three days. The trial court overruled the defendant's general demurrer, and then granted defendant's subsequent motion for judgment on the pleadings. The Supreme Court reversed. The justice of the peace had issued the arrest warrant after a complaint was made to him charging the plaintiff with refusing to return the sum of $20, allegedly overpaid to the plaintiff by mistake. The justice of the peace issued an arrest warrant, the plaintiff was arrested, brought before the defendant, and required to plead to the charge. The justice rendered a judgment that the plaintiff restore the $20 or be committed to the county jail for 20 days. Pursuant to the judgment, the defendant issued a commitment and placed it in the hands of an officer who executed it by imprisoning plaintiff in the county jail for a period of three days.

The Supreme Court held that the complaint stated a cause of action against the defendant for damages for false imprisonment. Not only did the justice exceed his jurisdiction in issuing the warrant of arrest, but he was completely without jurisdiction to do so. The complaint filed with the justice of the peace charged the plaintiff with an act which clearly did not constitute a crime. Therefore, the defendant justice never acquired any jurisdiction to proceed in the matter, and the judgment and commitment were facially void. The facts appearing in the complaint, coupled with the arrest and imprisonment of the plaintiff for an act clearly not a crime, constituted a cause of action, and the lower court erred in granting the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings. Because the justice of the peace was completely without jurisdiction to act, the doctrine of judicial immunity did not apply (94 Cal. 665, 668-669) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inapplicability of Judicial Immunity

In Paddleford v. Biscay (1971) 22 Cal. App. 3d 139, 99 Cal. Rptr. 220 , the plaintiff brought an action for false imprisonment, assault and battery, and denial of bail against a municipal court judge who issued an invalid misdemeanor arrest warrant which improperly allowed night service in violation of the provisions of Penal Code § 840 then in effect. The trial court entered a summary judgment dismissing the complaint, concluding that, as a matter of law, the defendant judge was not liable in his judicial capacity for the acts described. The court of appeal affirmed the summary judgment. The court acknowledged that the arrest warrant was not in compliance with statutory requirements then in effect, in that it allowed night service of a misdemeanor arrest warrant without being personally endorsed by the judge [see Penal Code § 840]. However, the judge was not acting in the complete absence of jurisdiction, but only in excess of his jurisdiction, and was therefore protected from civil liability for false imprisonment by the doctrine of judicial immunity. The court pointed out, however, that a distinction must be observed between actions merely in excess of jurisdiction and those which indicate a clear absence of all jurisdiction over the subject matter. In those cases, impliedly, the doctrine of judicial immunity does not apply to shield the judge in question from liability.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.96

§ 103.96 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e) for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Bench Warrant--Bench Warrant for Civil Contempt Not Regular on Its Face [Civ. Code § 43.55; Code Civ. Proc. § 1213]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

A BENCH WARRANT DIRECTING A BODY ATTACHMENT TO ANSWER A CHARGE OF CIVIL CONTEMPT IS NOT REGULAR ON ITS FACE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SECTION 43.55 OF THE CIVIL CODE IF IT FAILS TO SPECIFY THE NATURE OF THE CONTEMPT AND THE AMOUNT OF BAIL.

Civil Contempt Bench Warrant Not Regular on Its Face. A bench warrant directing a body attachment to answer a charge of civil contempt is not regular on its face if it fails to specify the nature of the contempt and the amount of bail. A complaint alleging the arrest of plaintiff pursuant to such a facially irregular bench warrant states a cause of action for false imprisonment (Civ. Code § 43.55; Code Civ. Proc. § 1213; Allison v. Ventura County (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 689, 702-704, 137 Cal. Rptr. 542).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment based on the arrest of the plaintiff pursuant to a bench warrant for civil contempt, where the demurrer asserts that the peace officer executing the warrant, or the public entity employing him or her, is immune from liability because the warrant was regular on its face, but where the warrant is in fact irregular because it fails to specify the nature of the contempt and the amount of bail.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Civil Contempt Bench Warrant Not Regular on Its Face

In Allison v. Ventura County (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 689, 137 Cal. Rptr. 542 , the plaintiff sued the County of Ventura for damages for false imprisonment based on her arrest pursuant to a bench warrant which had issued during the course of civil litigation between the plaintiff and her husband. The trial court sustained a demurrer to plaintiff's complaint without leave to amend, and plaintiff appealed from the subsequently entered judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the complaint stated a cause of action for false imprisonment. The bench warrant on which the plaintiff had been arrested was three years and three months old at the time of the arrest. Furthermore, although the bench warrant was issued in a civil action, it complied with the provisions of neither of the two statutory sources dealing with issuance of a civil arrest warrant that is, those dealing with the issuance of a warrant to compel the presence of one charged with civil contempt [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1209-1222] and those dealing with the issuance of a warrant for arrest of a nonappearing witness [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1993, 1994]. The court held that if it was intended to be a civil contempt bench warrant, it was facially irregular for failure to specify the nature of the contempt or the amount of the bail [Code Civ. Proc. § 1213]. If it was intended as a warrant to compel the attendance of the plaintiff as a witness, it was facially irregular because it failed to specify the cause of the commitment or to state the question, if any, which the plaintiff refused to answer [Code Civ. Proc. § 1994]. Therefore, because the bench warrant was facially irregular, the peace officer arresting the plaintiff was not immune from liability under the provisions of Civ. Code § 43.55, and the plaintiff's complaint stated a cause of action for false imprisonment (68 Cal. App. 3d 689, 702-704) .

Although a substantial period of time had elapsed between the time of issuance of the warrant and the arrest, the court of appeal declined to hold that, as a matter of law, all bench warrants dated over three years prior to their execution are irregular on their faces. The court did hold, however, the lack of timeliness of service or execution of a warrant of arrest may appropriately be considered where the malicious service or execution of a facially valid warrant is alleged [see Civ. Code § 43.55].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.97

§ 103.97 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Bench Warrant--Bench Warrant to Compel Attendance of Witness Not Regular on Its Face [Civ. Code § 43.55; Code Civ. Proc. § 1994]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

A BENCH WARRANT ISSUED TO COMPEL THE ATTENDANCE OF A WITNESS IN A CIVIL CASE IS NOT REGULAR ON ITS FACE WITHIN THE MEANING OF SECTION 43.55 OF THE CIVIL CODE IF IT FAILS TO SPECIFY THE CAUSE OF THE COMMITMENT, AND IF IT IS FOR REFUSING TO ANSWER A QUESTION, FAILS TO SET FORTH THE QUESTION.

Bench Warrant to Compel Attendance of Witness Not Regular on Its Face. A bench warrant issued to compel the attendance of a witness in a civil case is not regular on its face if it fails to specify the cause of the arrest, and, if it is for the refusal to answer a question, fails to set forth the question. A complaint alleging the arrest of plaintiff pursuant to such a facially irregular bench warrant states a cause of action for false imprisonment (Civ. Code § 43.55; Code Civ. Proc. § 1994; Allison v. Ventura County (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 689, 702-704, 137 Cal. Rptr. 542).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment based on the arrest of the plaintiff pursuant to a bench warrant to compel the plaintiff's attendance as a witness in a civil case, where the demurrer asserts that the peace officer executing the warrant, and/or the public entity employing him or her, is immune from liability because the warrant was regular on its face, but where the warrant is in fact irregular because it fails to specify the reason for the commitment and, if it is for refusing to answer a question, fails to set forth the question.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bench Warrant to Compel Attendance of Witness Not Regular on Its Face

Allison v. Ventura County (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 689, 137 Cal. Rptr. 542 is discussed in § 103.96[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.98

§ 103.98 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Arrest Pursuant to Warrant--Arrest Unlawful Where Peace Officer Failed to Use Reasonable Prudence to Determine That Person Arrested Was Person Named in Warrant or Acted With Malice [Civ. Code § 43.55]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

AN ARREST PURSUANT TO WARRANT IS UNLAWFUL IF THE ARRESTING OFFICER _____ [FAILED TO USE REASONABLE PRUDENCE AND DILIGENCE TO DETERMINE WHETHER THE PERSON ARRESTED WAS ACTUALLY THE PERSON NAMED IN THE WARRANT and/or ACTED WITH MALICE].

[EITHER]

A. Liability for Arrest of Wrong Person. An arrest pursuant to a warrant regular on its face is unlawful, and the arresting officer is liable for false arrest, if the officer arrests the wrong person, having failed to use reasonable prudence and diligence to determine whether the person arrested was actually the one named in the warrant (Civ. Code § 43.55(a); Robinson v. City & County of San Francisco (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 334, 336-338, 116 Cal. Rptr. 125 ; Smith v. Madruga (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 543, 546, 14 Cal. Rptr. 389).

[AND/OR]

B. Liability for Arrest Made With Malice. An arrest pursuant to a warrant is unlawful, and the arresting officer is liable for false arrest, if the arrest is made maliciously and without reasonable cause to believe that the one arrested was the one who committed the crime (Civ. Code § 43.55(a); Laible v. Superior Court (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 44, 47, 203

Cal. Rptr. 513).

C. Prima Facie Showing of Unlawfulness. A complaint makes a prima facie showing of the unlawfulness of an arrest pursuant to warrant where it alleges facts showing that the arresting officer did not use reasonable prudence and diligence to determine if the party arrested was the party named in the warrant or showing that the arresting officer maliciously and knowingly arrested the wrong person (Smith v. Madruga (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 543, 546-548, 14 Cal. Rptr. 389).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint seeking damages for false imprisonment from an arresting officer and/or his or her public employer when the demurrer asserts that there is no liability on the part of the officer (or derivative liability on the part of his or her public employer) because the warrant was regular on its face and the complaint did not sufficiently allege facts showing that the arrest pursuant to warrant was unlawful. The ground for opposition is that the officer acted without a reasonable belief that the one arrested was the person named in the warrant and/or acted maliciously [see Civ. Code § 43.55].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of allegation that defendant arrested plaintiff pursuant to warrant with no reasonable belief that plaintiff was the person named in the warrant, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Arrest of Wrong Person

In Robinson v. City & County of San Francisco (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 334, 116 Cal. Rptr. 125 , the plaintiff brought an action for false arrest against two police officers. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the two police officers. The charge on which the plaintiff was arrested was that of failing to pay the legal fare for hire of a public passenger vehicle. It appeared from the record that one Harold Cunningham, using the plaintiff's stage name of "Smokey Robinson," had hired a limousine and failed to pay for it. Plaintiff's real name was William Robinson, and evidence was presented at the trial on the criminal charge that the Harold Cunningham who had rented the car was a different person from the plaintiff. Plaintiff was acquitted of the criminal charge.

The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment and remanded the case for trial. The court pointed out that a police officer is immune from liability for false arrest if, while acting pursuant to a warrant, he or she effects the arrest without malice and in the reasonable belief that the person arrested was the one named in the warrant. Arresting a person without reasonable belief that he or she is the person named in the warrant, even if malice is not alleged, can subject the officer to liability for false arrest. In granting the motion for summary judgment, the trial court impliedly held that the police officers had reasonable cause as a matter of law to believe that plaintiff was the person named in the warrant, and that no triable issue of fact existed. In reversing the judgment of the trial court, the appeals court pointed out that plaintiff's declaration in opposition to summary judgment showed that the sole basis for the officers' belief was that plaintiff's stage name was the same as the alias of Harold Cunningham, the person named in the warrant. The declaration further showed that plaintiff offered to prove his identity to the officers when he was presented with the warrant, and that the police officers did not consider any of his proffered identification when making the arrest. The court held that, unlike the question of probable cause for a warrantless arrest or detention of an individual, both of which are questions of law, the question of reasonable belief that the person being arrested is the same person as the person named in the arrest warrant is a question of fact. The court further held that a jury might reasonably have concluded either that the officers belief was reasonable or that it was unreasonable. Thus, a triable issue of fact existed, and the granting of the motion for summary judgment was error (41 Cal. App. 3d 334, 336-338) .

[b] Liability for Arrest Made With Malice

In Laible v. Superior Court (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 44, 203 Cal. Rptr. 513 , the court of appeal issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to deny a motion for summary judgment in an action for false arrest and imprisonment. The trial court had acted under the belief that defendant had met the requisites of the immunity of Civ. Code § 43.55, which provides immunity for arrests made with a facially valid warrant and without malice (157 Cal. App. 3d 44, 48) . In reaching its decision, the appellate court found that a factual question concerning the officer's malice in making the arrest pursuant to a warrant had been raised by plaintiff, in that plaintiff had presented evidence that the officer possessed significant exculpatory evidence that he failed to investigate further and failed to present to the magistrate when seeking the arrest warrant (157 Cal. App. 3d 44, 53) .

[c] Prima Facie Showing of Unlawfulness

In Smith v. Madruga (1961) 193 Cal. App. 2d 543, 14 Cal. Rptr. 389 , plaintiff brought an action against a deputy sheriff, and others, for false arrest and imprisonment based on an arrest pursuant to warrant, and subsequent incarceration. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer and entered judgment for defendants. The plaintiff appealed from the judgment insofar as it dismissed his action against the deputy sheriff. The court of appeal reversed. The complaint alleged that the warrant under which plaintiff was arrested named Bennie Leon Smith, while plaintiff's name was Bennie Lee Smith. It further alleged that the person named in the warrant was already incarcerated in the state prison at the time of the arrest, and that this fact appeared in the records of the sheriff's department and was known to the deputy sheriff. The plaintiff also alleged that he continually protested that he was the wrong person during the arrest, booking, fingerprinting, and detention process, and that, although the defendants knew from fingerprint charts and records that the correct person was incarcerated in state prison, and that they had the wrong person, they refused to release the plaintiff. The court of appeal held that plaintiff's complaint stated a cause of action against the deputy sheriff. The court stated that an officer making an arrest pursuant to warrant is liable for damages for false imprisonment if he fails to use prudence and diligence to find out if the party arrested is the party described in the warrant. The complaint alleged sufficient facts which, if true, showed a failure to use reasonable prudence and diligence to ascertain that the right person was being arrested. The court rejected the defendant's argument that he had no discretion with regard to plaintiff's arrest and incarceration and that, therefore, he was relieved of liability for false imprisonment (193 Cal. App. 2d 543, 546-548) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability for Arrest of Wrong Person

In Bell v. State of California (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 919, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 541 , plaintiff, a well-dressed 43-year-old African-American who worked for the Los Angeles District Attorney's office, was mistakenly arrested in a public building by a team of state investigators and local police pursuant to a valid warrant. Despite immediate protestations by the plaintiff that he was not the person named in the warrant and an offer to show his driver's license, the arresting officers, using considerable force to restrain plaintiff in an uncomfortable and demeaning position, led plaintiff out of the building and to his car, from where the police obtained satisfactory identification of plaintiff, released him, and apologized for the mistake. At the time of the arrest, the officers had in their possession a picture of the person named in the warrant, which did not match plaintiff, and plaintiff was 12 years older than the person actually sought. In a suit brought against the investigators and officers, the city, and the State of California, for false imprisonment and other causes of action, the trial court refused a motion for directed verdict brought by the defendants, the jury returned a verdict for defendants, and a new trial was granted on the grounds of juror misconduct. The court of appeal affirmed the order for a new trial, and also held that the trial court did not err in refusing defendants' motion for directed verdict on the false imprisonment claim. In concluding that ample evidence showed that the state officers lacked a reasonable basis to conclude that plaintiff was the man sought, the court reviewed the careless manner in which the plaintiff was identified and arrested, including the failure to match the picture with the plaintiff. The court also considered and rejected the state investigator's argument that she had acted reasonably because the plaintiff had been the only African-American in the room, he was well-dressed, and he carried himself with dignity, characteristics that matched the profile of the man sought (63 Cal. App. 4th 919, 928) .

[b] Liability for Arrest Made With Malice

In Harden v. San Francisco Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist. (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 7, 263 Cal. Rptr. 549 , the defendant, a rapid transit district officer, reported falsely to local police that plaintiff, another rapid transit district officer who had a side business in typewriters, knowingly had possession of stolen typewriters. Defendant authorized another transit district officer to serve an arrest warrant on plaintiff after it was procured by local police. Eventually, the charges against plaintiff were dropped for lack of evidence. Plaintiff subsequently brought suit against defendant and others for false imprisonment. Defendant argued that he was immune from liability under Civ. Code § 43.55. The court of appeal upheld the judgment against the defendant, stating that Civ. Code § 43.55 does not provide immunity to an officer for service of a valid warrant if the arrest is made with malice. As the jury found that defendant acted with malice by knowingly or recklessly procuring plaintiff's arrest, no immunity could attach (215 Cal. App. 3d 7, 14-15) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
D. Arrest Pursuant to Warrant

10-103 California Points & Authorities §§ 103.99-103.109

[Reserved]

§§ 103.99[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
E. Detention After Arrest

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.110

§ 103.110 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Detention After Arrest--Failure to Allege Facts Showing Delay Unnecessary or Unreasonable [Penal Code §§ 825, 847, 849(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.20.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT THE PERIOD OF TIME BETWEEN PLAINTIFF'S ARREST AND PLAINTIFF'S BEING TAKEN BEFORE A MAGISTRATE WAS UNNECESSARY OR UNREASONABLE.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 103.20, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Allege Unnecessary Delay. A complaint for false imprisonment based on postarrest detention fails to state a cause of action where it fails to allege that defendant peace officer detained plaintiff other than for the length of time necessarily incident to the action of the peace officer in carrying out his/her statutory duty to _____ [receive or arrest] a person charged with a criminal offense and to hold such person for an appearance before a magistrate (Penal Code §§ 142, 825(a), 847, 849(a); Shakespeare v. City of Pasadena (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 387, 389, 40 Cal. Rptr. 871).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to the complaint in an action for false imprisonment based on postarrest detention where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it fails to allege facts showing that the period of time that the plaintiff was detained after arrest and before being taken to a magistrate was unnecessary or unreasonable.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for false imprisonment based on arrest followed by unreasonable delay in taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Unnecessary Delay

In Shakespeare v. City of Pasadena (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 387, 40 Cal. Rptr. 871 , the plaintiff sued the City of Pasadena and others for damages for false arrest, false imprisonment, and malicious prosecution. The complaint was based on an incident in which the plaintiff was arrested by a private citizen and her custody turned over to the police officers of the City of Pasadena. The trial court sustained the city's demurrer to the plaintiff's complaint without leave to amend and entered a judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of the trial court. Among other holdings, the court held that the complaint completely failed to state a cause of action based upon postarrest detention because it alleged no detention in connection with plaintiff's arrest other than that necessarily incident to the action of the arresting police officers in carrying out their statutory duty [Penal Code §§ 142, 847] to accept custody of one arrested by a citizen and hold that person for an appearance before a magistrate (230 Cal. App. 2d 387, 389) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
E. Detention After Arrest

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.111

§ 103.111 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant Peace Officer--In Action for False Imprisonment Based on Detention After Arrest--Delay in Taking Arrestee Before Magistrate Not Unreasonable Where Arrestee Assented to Delay [Penal Code §§ 825, 849(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.21.]

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER IN THAT THE DELAY IN TAKING PLAINTIFF BEFORE A MAGISTRATE AFTER ARREST WAS NOT UNREASONABLE BECAUSE PLAINTIFF ASSENTED TO THE DELAY.

A. Summary Judgment. [See § 103.21, Paragraph A.]

B. Delay Not Unreasonable Where Arrestee Assents. If the arrested person agrees to a delay in taking him/her before a magistrate following arrest, he/she cannot make such delay the basis of a cause of action for false imprisonment on the ground that the delay was unreasonable (Penal Code §§ 825, 849(a); Gorlack v. Ferrari (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 702, 710-711, 7 Cal. Rptr. 699).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment where the motion asserts that the plaintiff's cause of action for false imprisonment based on delay in taking him or her before a magistrate after arrest has no merit because the plaintiff assented to the delay.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of affirmative defense that the delay in taking the plaintiff before a magistrate was caused by the illness of the plaintiff, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Delay Not Unreasonable Where Arrestee Assents

In Gorlack v. Ferrari (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 702, 7 Cal. Rptr. 699 , the plaintiff brought an action for false arrest and false imprisonment against Mr. and Mrs. Ferrari and three police officers. After a nonjury trial, judgment was entered for the defendants and the plaintiff appealed. On information supplied to the police by Mrs. Ferrari regarding the alleged theft of Mrs. Ferrari's diamond ring by the plaintiff, the plaintiff was arrested, booked on a felony grand theft charge, detained in jail for two or three days, and then released without a complaint being filed. One of the plaintiff's theories of liability of the city policemen for false imprisonment was unreasonable delay in taking her before a magistrate after her warrantless arrest [see Penal Code § 849]. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in favor of the defendant policeman. There was substantial evidence presented at trial to support the finding of the trial court that the delay was not unreasonable. It appeared from the evidence that after the investigating officer's initial interview with the plaintiff, he had informed her that she could call an attorney and be released on bail, but that after some discussion he offered to complete the investigation of her case as speedily as possible and effect her release without filing a formal charge if he then determined that a charge should not be filed. The point of the offer was to save the plaintiff the cost of a bail bond and an attorney's fee. The plaintiff assented to this procedure, and could not, in a false imprisonment suit, take advantage of a delay in which she acquiesced and which was due to her own conduct.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
E. Detention After Arrest

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.112

§ 103.112 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Detention After Arrest--Delay in Taking Arrested Person Before Magistrate [Penal Code §§ 825, 849]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

A COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT WHERE IT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THAT DEFENDANT DELAYED AN UNREASONABLE TIME IN TAKING PLAINTIFF BEFORE A MAGISTRATE AFTER ARREST.

A. Cause of Action for Unreasonable Delay. A complaint for false imprisonment states a cause of action where it alleges that, following arrest, defendant unlawfully detained plaintiff for an unreasonable period of time and unnecessarily delayed taking him/her before a magistrate (Penal Code §§ 825, 849; Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 472, 289 P.2d 428).

[Optional] B. Lawful Arrest as Not Excusing Subsequent Unreasonable Detention. That fact that an arrest may have been lawful does not relieve defendant of liability for false imprisonment based on subsequent unreasonable delay in taking the arrested person before a magistrate (Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 472, 289 P.2d 428).

[Optional] C. Delay of Less Than Two Days Not Reasonable as Matter of Law. A delay of less than two days in taking an arrested person before a magistrate may be unreasonable. Section 825 of the Penal Code, which provides that an arrested person must be taken before a magistrate within two days, merely establishes the outer permissible time limits and does not mean that any delay of less than two days is reasonable as a matter of law [particularly if the arrest is without a warrant] (Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 473, 289 P.2d 428).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint in an action for false imprisonment where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action for false imprisonment because it fails to allege facts showing that the delay between arresting plaintiff and taking plaintiff before a magistrate was unnecessary or unreasonable.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for false imprisonment based on an unreasonable delay in taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action for Unreasonable Delay

In Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment on the pleadings in favor of three police officer defendants who were sued for false arrest and false imprisonment. The Supreme Court held that granting judgment on the pleadings was improper because the complaint stated a cause of action for false imprisonment based on either of two separate theories. First, it alleged an arrest without process, followed by imprisonment and damages, sufficient for a prima facie case of false imprisonment and to shift the burden onto the defendants to plead and prove justification for the arrest. Secondly, it alleged an unnecessary delay in taking the arrested plaintiff before a magistrate. With regard to the second theory, the Court pointed out that Penal Code § 849(a) requires that when a defendant is arrested without a warrant he or she must be taken before a magistrate without any unnecessary delay. Furthermore, Penal Code § 825 requires that any arrested person be taken before a magistrate not later than two days after his or her arrest. Therefore, a complaint for false imprisonment states a cause of action where it alleges facts showing that, following arrest, the defendant unlawfully detained the plaintiff for an unreasonable period of time before taking him or her before a magistrate.

Although the delay in bringing the plaintiff before a magistrate may have been less than two days, as pointed out by defendants, it was not reasonable as a matter of law, inasmuch as Penal Code § 825 merely establishes two days as the outer permissible time limit. A delay in bringing an arrestee before a magistrate may be unreasonable, even if less than two days, particularly if the arrest was without a warrant.

[b] Lawful Arrest as Not Excusing Subsequent Unreasonable Detention

The factual background of Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428 , is discussed in § 103.112[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that where an arrest is lawful, subsequent unreasonable delay in taking the person arrested before a magistrate will not affect the legality of the arrest, but it will subject the offending person to liability for so much of the imprisonment as occurs after the period of necessary or reasonable delay.

[c] Delay of Less Than Two Days Not Reasonable as Matter of Law

The factual background of Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428 , is discussed in § 103.112[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
E. Detention After Arrest

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.113

§ 103.113 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] for False Imprisonment--Action Based on Detention After Arrest--Cause of Action Stated Based on Failure of Public Entity to Perform Mandatory Duty [Gov. Code § 815.6]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.76.]

A COMPLAINT FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION WHERE IT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THAT A PUBLIC ENTITY FAILED TO PERFORM A MANDATORY DUTY RESULTING IN PLAINTIFF'S UNLAWFUL IMPRISONMENT.

A. Direct Liability of Public Entity. Where a public entity is under a mandatory duty imposed by an enactment that is designed to protect against the risk of a particular kind of injury, the public entity is liable for an injury of that kind proximately caused by its failure to discharge the duty, unless the public entity establishes that it exercised reasonable diligence to discharge the duty (Gov. Code § 815.6).

[EITHER]

B. Failure to Release After Dismissal of Criminal Charges. The failure of a public entity to release a prisoner after dismissal of all charges against him/her renders it directly liable for false imprisonment under Section 815.6 of the Government Code which imposes liability on a public entity for failure to perform a duty made mandatory by statute. In this case, the mandatory statutory duty is imposed by Section 1384 of the Penal Code which provides that a defendant must be released from custody if the court directs dismissal of the charges against him/her (Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 715, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865).

[OR]

B. Failure to Make Record Entries of Dismissal of Criminal Charges. Failure to discharge the mandatory duty imposed by Sections 11116.6 and 11117 of the Penal Code, by failing to make appropriate record entries of dismissal of criminal charges pursuant to Section 1203.4 of the Penal Code, renders the state directly liable to a person injured by such failure (Bradford v. California (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 16, 19-21, 111 Cal. Rptr. 852).

[OR]

B. Failure to Release on Posting of Bail. The failure of a public entity to discharge a prisoner on bail after the statutory conditions for bail have been met is a violation of the statutory duty imposed by Section 1295 of the Penal Code and renders the public entity directly liable for subsequent unlawful detention (Shakespeare v. City of Pasadena (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 375, 377, 40 Cal. Rptr. 863).

[Optional] C. Liability Not Barred by Section 844.6(a)(2) of Government Code. Section 844.6(a)(2) of the Government Code, which provides that a public entity is not liable for an injury to any prisoner, does not relieve a public entity from liability for failure to perform a mandatory duty, as provided in Section 815.6 of the Government Code, where the failure results in the wrongful incarceration or detention of a person (Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 716-717, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865).

[Optional] D. Liability Not Barred by Section 821.6 of Government Code. Section 821.6 of the Government Code, which provides that a public employee is not liable for injury caused by his/her instituting or prosecuting any judicial or administrative proceeding within the scope of his/her employment, does not immunize either the employee or the public entity employing him/her from liability for false imprisonment where the employee fails properly to record _____ [the dismissal of criminal charges against defendant or the fact that defendant had completed serving a sentence] which failure results in defendant's _____ [wrongful detention or subsequent arrest on the same charges] (Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 720-723, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment against a public entity where the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action because the public entity is immune from liability [see Ch. 196, Public Entities], but where the complaint states a cause of action based on the failure of the public entity to perform a mandatory duty [Gov. Code § 815.6] resulting in the wrongful incarceration or detention of the plaintiff.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for false imprisonment based on the failure to release the plaintiff on bail, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Release After Dismissal of Criminal Charges

In Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865 , the plaintiff sued the County of Los Angeles for false imprisonment as a result of his alleged confinement in the county jail several days beyond the termination of his sentence. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the governmental immunity provisions of the Tort Claims Act barred the suit. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment. Plaintiff had been charged with several Penal Code violations. He pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and began serving a sentence of 50 days in jail. Meanwhile, the other charges against him were consolidated and transferred to superior court. The superior court dismissed the two felony charges against the plaintiff but failed to issue a release order. A remaining misdemeanor charge against the plaintiff was returned to municipal court where it was dismissed and a release order issued. The plaintiff's 50-day jail term expired, but he was not released because of the failure of the superior court to issue the release order. After obtaining his release, the plaintiff brought an action against the county, based on the sheriff's failure to release him, when, in the exercise of reasonable care, the sheriff should have known that no charges were pending against the plaintiff. The Supreme Court held that the county's failure to release the plaintiff after dismissal of all charges against him, as mandated by Penal Code § 1384, rendered it directly liable under Gov. Code § 815.6 which provides that a public entity is liable for harm caused by its failure to perform a duty made mandatory by statute. Further, if the sheriff knew or should have known that all charges against the plaintiff had been dismissed, the county was derivatively liable under Gov. Code § 815.2 for the sheriff's wrongful failure to release him. Finally, the Supreme Court concluded that neither the sheriff, nor, derivatively, the county was immune from liability for false imprisonment under the provisions of Gov. Code § 821.6 which immunizes a public employee from liability for instituting or prosecuting a judicial proceeding. The Court found that the purpose of Gov. Code § 821.6 is to provide public immunity from malicious prosecution suits, but not from suits for false imprisonment (12 Cal. 3d 710, 715) .

[b] Failure to Make Record Entries of Dismissal of Criminal Charges

In Bradford v. California (1973) 36 Cal. App. 3d 16, 111 Cal. Rptr. 852 , the plaintiff sued the State of California for damages from his arrest allegedly resulting from the negligent failure of state employees to make appropriate record entries of the dismissal of charges against him pursuant to Penal Code § 1203.4. The trial court sustained the defendant state's general demurrer. The plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. Plaintiff had been convicted of violating former Penal Code § 647a (now see Penal Code § 647.6) and was sentenced to two years on probation. He served his sentence and the court in which he had been convicted dismissed the proceeding pursuant to Penal Code § 1203.4. The plaintiff's original conviction obligated him to register as a sex offender pursuant to Penal Code § 290. However, this duty ceased when the proceeding was dismissed under Penal Code § 1203.4. The complaint alleged that the State of California failed to perform the mandatory duty of making record entries of the 1203.4 dismissal, as required by Penal Code §§ 11116.6 and 11117. As a result, the plaintiff was subsequently arrested for failing to register as a sex offender. The court went on to say that regardless of whether or not the negligent employee who failed to make the mandatory record entries was liable, the state was directly liable to the plaintiff under Gov. Code § 815.6, which imposes liability on a public entity for harm resulting from failure to perform a statutorily mandated duty (36 Cal. App. 3d 16, 19-21) .

[c] Failure to Release on Posting of Bail

In Shakespeare v. City of Pasadena (1964) 230 Cal. App. 2d 375, 40 Cal. Rptr. 863 , the plaintiff brought an action against defendant city for false arrest and imprisonment, and malicious prosecution. The trial court sustained the city's demurrer to plaintiff's second amended complaint and entered a judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal reversed the judgment in part and remanded with instructions to allow the plaintiff to amend his complaint to allege compliance with the then applicable claims provisions of the Pasadena City Charter and to allege an action for false imprisonment. Although finding the allegations of the second amended complaint inadequate as they stood, the court concluded that the plaintiff had alleged sufficient facts to indicate that he might have had a cause of action against the city for false imprisonment, based on the city's alleged failure to release him promptly after bail had been posted. The court stated that, if plaintiff was able to allege that bail had been duly fixed for his release, deposited as required by law, the proper certificate delivered to the jailer, and the jailer, knowing of these facts, intentionally failed to advise the plaintiff that he was entitled to release, a cause of action for false imprisonment would have been stated. The duty to release, if the statutory conditions for bail have been met, is mandatory [Penal Code § 1295], and detention thereafter is unlawful. The court went on to state that no provision of the Tort Claims Act [Gov. Code §§ 810-996.6] exempts public employees from liability for false imprisonment, and that, in addition, a city is directly liable under Section 815.6 of the Government Code for failure to perform the mandatory duty of releasing a prisoner on bail when the statutory conditions have been met.

[d] Liability Not Barred by Section 844.6(a)(2) of Government Code

The factual background of Sullivan v. County of Los Angeles (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865 , is discussed in § 103.113[3][a]. The county argued that it was immune from liability for false imprisonment for failure to release the plaintiff after his term of imprisonment expired under Gov. Code § 844.6(a)(2) which provides immunity to a public entity from liability for injury to any prisoner. The Supreme Court held that continued confinement after a jail term has expired does not make the wronged person a "prisoner" and that in the eyes of the law he is no longer a prisoner. Therefore, Gov. Code § 844.6(a)(2) which refers to "injury to any prisoner" does not apply to immunize a public entity from liability for false imprisonment.

[e] Liability Not Barred by Section 821.6 of Government Code

The factual background of Sullivan v. Los Angeles County (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 710, 117 Cal. Rptr. 241, 527 P.2d 865 is discussed in § 103.113[3][a]. The Supreme Court disapproved the holding of Watson v. Los Angeles County (1967) 254 Cal. App. 2d 361, 62 Cal. Rptr. 191 . In the Watson case, the plaintiff completed his jail sentence, but the county clerk failed to record that fact, and the plaintiff was rearrested and imprisoned again. The Watson court reasoned that the clerk's failure to record completion of sentence was the first step toward the plaintiff's subsequent arrest and incarceration, and therefore, could not be the basis of liability for false imprisonment because of Gov. Code § 821.6, which exempts a public employee from liability in connection with the institution or prosecution of judicial proceedings. In disapproving the Watson holding, the Supreme Court held in effect that failure to record the completion of sentence, or other negligent administrative record-keeping failure, which results in the unlawful incarceration of the plaintiff, cannot be compared to the act of filing charges or swearing out affidavits of criminal activity. Therefore, a record-keeping failure resulting in the unlawful detention of a person is not exempt from liability for false imprisonment under the provisions of Gov. Code § 821.6.

NOTE:

The holding in Sullivan v. Los Angeles County can be distinguished from the holding in Collins v. City & County of San Francisco (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 671, 123 Cal. Rptr. 525 , in which the court of appeal held that the action of a police officer in wrongfully swearing out a new warrant for misdemeanor charges that had already been dismissed against the arrestee could not be the basis of a cause of action for false imprisonment, but might, were it not for the immunity provisions of Gov. Code § 821.6, be the basis of a cause of action for malicious prosecution.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 103 FALSE IMPRISONMENT
PART II. FORMS
E. Detention After Arrest

10-103 California Points & Authorities § 103.114

§ 103.114 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]--By Defendant--In Action for False Imprisonment Based on Detention After Arrest--Unreasonableness of Delay in Taking Defendant Before Magistrate Is Question of Fact

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 103.42.]

THE QUESTION OF WHETHER OR NOT DEFENDANT DELAYED AN UNREASONABLE TIME IN TAKING PLAINTIFF BEFORE A MAGISTRATE AFTER ARREST IS A QUESTION OF FACT FOR THE TRIER OF FACT.

Unreasonableness of Delay as Question of Fact. The issue of whether or not an unreasonable time elapsed between the arrest of plaintiff and the time when he/she was taken before a magistrate is a question of fact. It would be improper for the trial court to determine that the delay was reasonable as a matter of law (Kaufman v. Brown (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 508, 513, 515, 209 P.2d 156 , disapproved on other grounds, Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment in an action for damages for false imprisonment based on the failure of the defendant promptly to take the plaintiff before a magistrate after arrest, where the motion asserts that there is no triable issue of fact because the delay involved was reasonable as a matter of law.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the memorandum [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint for false imprisonment based on an unreasonable delay in taking the plaintiff before a magistrate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 257, False Imprisonment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unreasonableness of Delay as Question of Fact

In Kaufman v. Brown (1949) 93 Cal. App. 2d 508, 209 P.2d 156 , the plaintiff sued a labor union, certain of its officers and agents, and two police officers for false imprisonment based on a warrantless arrest. Both general and special demurrers to plaintiff's original complaint, the amended, and the second amended complaints were sustained with leave to amend. Plaintiff declined to plead further. Judgment for the defendants was rendered and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the plaintiff's second amended complaint stated facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the defendants. Among other holdings, the court of appeal held that the complaint stated a cause of action based on the defendants' alleged failure to take the plaintiff before a magistrate during the nearly 24 hours that he was allegedly incarcerated. It was improper for the trial court to determine as a matter of law that the delay in taking the plaintiff before a magistrate was reasonable. The question of whether or not an unreasonable time elapsed after an arrest before taking the plaintiff to a magistrate is a factual question for the trier of fact.

NOTE:

The California Supreme Court has disapproved language in Kaufman v. Brown to the effect that, when there is an unreasonable delay in taking a person before a magistrate after a lawful arrest, the false imprisonment dates from the time of the arrest. The Supreme Court stated that the better rule is that where the arrest is lawful, subsequent unreasonable delay in taking a person before a magistrate will not affect the legality of the arrest, although it will subject the offending person to liability for so much of the imprisonment as occurs after the period of necessary or reasonable delay [Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 473, 289 P.2d 428] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)

10-104 California Points & Authorities 104.syn

§ 104.syn Synopsis to Chapter 104: FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)

§ 104.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 104.02 Governing Statutes

§ 104.03 Allegations in Pleading

§ 104.04 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

§ 104.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 104.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 104.07-104.19 [Reserved]

§ 104.20 Supporting Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Amended Complaint Does Not Relate Back When Not Based on Same General Set of Facts as Original Complaint

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Amended Complaint Does Not Relate Back If Based on Different Set of Facts

[c] No Relation Back If Accident and Instrumentality Are Different in Amended Complaint

§ 104.21 Supporting Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity and Defendant's Relationship to Plaintiff's Injuries

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Cannot Amend Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 If Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Is Not Available to Plaintiff Who Knew But Forgot Defendant's Identity When Identity Ascertainable From Readily Available Information

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Cannot Amend Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 If Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity

§ 104.22 Supporting Motion to Quash Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)]--Summons or Notice Does Not Comply With Fictitious Name Statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity for Compliance With Statutes

[b] Service of Summons Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Without Endorsement Is Insufficient to Give Court Jurisdiction

[c] Complaint Must Have Contained Fictitious Name Allegations Regarding Defendant

§ 104.23 Opposing Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Amended Complaint Relates Back When Based on Same Set of Facts as Original Complaint

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Complaint Relates Back to Time of Filing

[b] Amended Complaint May Rest on Different Legal Theory or State Different Cause of Action

[c] Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Should Be Liberally Construed to Allow Cases to Be Decided on Their Merits

§ 104.24 Opposing Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Plaintiff Did Not Have Actual Knowledge of Identity of Defendant and/or Facts Giving Rise to Cause of Action Against Defendant

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Relates Back in MICRA Case

[b] Standard for Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Test of Ignorance of True Identity of Defendant Is Whether Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge

[c] Ignorance of Party's Capacity

[d] Reasonably Diligent Effort to Discover Defendant's Name Not Required

[e] Change in Decisional Law May Be Basis for Relation Back to Original Complaint

[f] Amendment to Name Previously-Dismissed Party in New Capacity

[g] Forgetfulness of Defendant's Identity Does Not Precluded Plaintiff From Adding Defendant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 474

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standard for Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Test of Ignorance of True Identity of Defendant Is Whether Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge

[b] Reasonably Diligent Effort to Discover Defendant's Name Not Required

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.01

§ 104.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities relating to fictitiously named defendants. It includes points and authorities for use in supporting [see §§ 104.20, 104.21] and opposing [see §§ 104.23, 104.24] demurrers to complaints based on the bar of the statute of limitations in suits in which the plaintiff has sought to substitute a named defendant for a fictitious defendant, and supporting a motion to quash service of summons because the summons did not comply with the endorsement requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 [see § 104.22].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsMotions to DismissCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeService of ProcessSummonsContent & FormCivil ProceduresPartiesFictitious Names

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.02

§ 104.02 Governing Statutes

The right to name fictitious defendants in a pleading and to amend a pleading substituting named defendants for fictitious defendants charged in the original complaint is governed by Code Civ. Proc. § 474. Code Civ. Proc. § 474 provides in part that when a plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, that fact must be stated in the complaint, and the defendant may be designated by a fictitious name; when the defendant's true name is discovered, the pleading must be amended accordingly.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePartiesFictitious NamesCivil ProcedurePartiesSubstitutionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.03

§ 104.03 Allegations in Pleading

Under prior case law, the plaintiff was required not only to be ignorant of the true name of the defendant at the time the fictitious defendant was designated, but also to make a clear statement of that fact in the pleading [see Nissan v. Barton (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 76, 79, 84 Cal. Rptr. 36 ; Stephens v. Berry (1967) 249 Cal. App. 2d 474, 477, 57 Cal. Rptr. 505 (both cases requiring specific allegation)]. Although it is still required that plaintiff actually be ignorant of defendant's true name at the time of the pleading, the case law seems to have relaxed the requirement of an express allegation of that fact in the complaint. An allegation that the plaintiff sued the Doe defendants pursuant to the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 would now seem to suffice and prevents the exaltation of form over substance [Motor City Sales v. Superior Court (1973) 31 Cal. App. 3d 342, 346-347, 107 Cal. Rptr. 280 (specific allegation of ignorance not required)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProceduresPartiesFictitious Names

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.04

§ 104.04 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a supporting or opposing memorandum of points and authorities may not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages in the case of a memorandum supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. For further discussion of these page limitations, and of other basic format requirements governing memoranda of points and authorities, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.05

§ 104.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms to amend pleadings to substitute named defendants for fictitious defendants, see Ch. 21, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms of allegations for use in a complaint in which the plaintiff is ignorant of a defendant's name and wishes to designate a fictitious defendant, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , of California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For a form of introduction to an answer to a complaint when the defendant was sued under a fictitious name, and for forms of captions to complaints when fictitious names are used, see Ch. 26, Answers and Ch. 108, Captions and Introductions , respectively, of California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAnswersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProceduresPartiesSubstitutionsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.06

§ 104.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers on the ground of the bar of a statute of limitations, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions . For other points and authorities relating to the addition of new parties or causes of action after the statute of limitations has run, see Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsAmended PleadingsRelation BackCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsSupplemental PleadingsCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the PleadingsGovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsPleading & Proof

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-104 California Points & Authorities §§ 104.07-104.19

[Reserved]

§§ 104.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART II. FORMS

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.20

§ 104.20 Supporting Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Amended Complaint Does Not Relate Back When Not Based on Same General Set of Facts as Original Complaint

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF
_____ [name],	)	POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
Plaintiff,	)	IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____
	)

_____

THE DEMMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT THE AMENDMENT SUBSTITUTING DEFENDANT _____ [name of defendant] FOR A FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANT DOES NOT RELATE BACK TO THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT BECAUSE THE AMENDED COMPLAINT IS NOT BASED ON THE SAME GENERAL FACTS AS THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT, AND THE COMPLAINT IS THEREFORE BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object to the complaint by demurrer on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action when such ground appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.10(e), 430.30(a)).

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. The objection that an action is barred by a statute of limitations may be set up by demurrer (Baillargeon v. Department of Water & Power (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 670, 675, 138 Cal. Rptr. 338) and must be deemed to be included in the ground of demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

C. Amended Complaint Does Not Relate Back If Based on Different Set of Facts. An amended complaint that substitutes a named defendant for a fictitious defendant does not relate back to the original complaint, thus avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations, if it is based on a different set of facts than those alleged in the original complaint (Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366).

[Optional] D. No Relation Back If Accident and Instrumentality Are Different in Amended Complaint. When the accident and the offending instrumentality set forth in the amended complaint are different than those in the original complaint, the amendment is not based on the same set of facts and thus does not relate back to the original complaint (Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint when the plaintiff has attempted to amend the original complaint to include a newly named plaintiff after the statute of limitations has run. The ground of the demurrer supported by this form is that the action fails to state a cause of action in that, as appears from the face of the complaint or other matters of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, it is barred by the statute of limitations because the amendment cannot relate back to the original complaint if it is not based on the same set of facts that were set forth in the original complaint.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 104.23 may beused to oppose the demurrer supported by the foregoing points and authorities.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of fictitious name allegations to be used in complaints, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers on the ground of the bar of a statute of limitations, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

Baillargeon v. Department of Water & Power (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 670, 138 Cal. Rptr. 338 was an action for breach of contract, infliction of mental distress, and declaratory relief. Defendant's answer included the affirmative defense of the statute of limitations. After discovery, the trial court granted defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings, apparently on the basis that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. Although the court of appeal reversed the decision as to the cause of action for breach of contract, the court observed that the defense of the statute of limitations may be raised by demurrer and noted that since judgment on the pleadings is similar to a judgment following the sustaining of a demurrer, the standard of appellate review is the same (69 Cal. App. 3d 670, 675) .

Bell v. Bank of California (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the action was barred by a statute of limitations, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense or bar of a statute of limitations was apparently not at issue in the trial court or on appeal. The Supreme Court, however, noted that the bar of the statute of limitations is not specified in the Code of Civil Procedure as a ground of demurrer. That particular objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of lack of facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (153 Cal. 234, 245) .

[b] Amended Complaint Does Not Relate Back If Based on Different Set of Facts

Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366 was an action by the parents of a girl who was electrocuted while using a hair dryer. The original complaint was timely filed against Sunbeam Corporation and fictitious defendants, alleging that the girl was electrocuted because of a defective Sunbeam hair dryer. The complaint contained allegations that each of the defendants was legally responsible in some manner for the girl's injuries and that each had supplied component parts for the hair dryer. More than two years after the accident, plaintiffs amended the complaint and served Coronet Manufacturing Company, identifying Coronet as one of the original fictitious defendants. The amended complaint alleged that Coronet had manufactured and supplied component parts of the hair dryer and a table lamp with a socket and switch that was used with the hair dryer. Coronet demurred to the complaint. The trial court overruled the demurrer, and Coronet petitioned for a writ of mandate. The court of appeal initially denied the petition, but the Supreme Court directed it to grant a hearing and issue an alternative writ. The court of appeal issued the alternative writ and held that a peremptory writ should issue but that plaintiffs should be given an opportunity to amend their complaint. The court stated that the action should be barred by the statute of limitations unless the amendment could be shown to relate back to the original complaint. The court stated that the theory of the original complaint was different from the theory in the amended complaint. While the original complaint alleged that the hair dryer was the cause of the injuries, the amended complaint alleged that the table lamp with the socket and switch was the cause. The court further stated that the rule of relation back in California is liberal, and allows an amended complaint to relate back if the amended complaint rests on the same general set of facts as the original complaint and refers to the same action and the same injuries referred to in the original complaint (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345) . The court stated that the focus should be on whether the same accident and the same offending instrumentality is involved in both cases. The court compared the facts before it with the facts of the line of cases allowing relation back. The court concluded that in the case before it the offending instrumentality in the original complaint was the hair dryer and the accident was the use of the hair dryer, while in the amended complaint the instrumentality was the table lamp and the accident was the use of the lamp; thus, the same general set of facts did not exist in both cases (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347) . The court stated that if the plaintiffs could amend the complaint to show that the table was in the chain of causation of the originally pleaded complaint, it would be based on the same general set of facts and would relate back (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 348) .

[c] No Relation Back If Accident and Instrumentality Are Different in Amended Complaint

The factual and procedural background of Coronet Manufacturing Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 153 Cal. Rptr. 366 is discussed in § 104.20[3][b]. The court issued a peremptory writ of mandate ordering the trialcourt to vacate its order overruling the demurrer to the amended complaint, and ordering the trial court to sustain the demurrer with leave to amend. The court based its ruling on the fact that the amended complaint alleged a different accident and a different instrumentality than those alleged in the original complaint and thus could not relate back to the original complaint (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 345-347) . The court stated that the difference between being electrocuted by a hair dryer and being electrocuted by a table lamp is as great as being electrocuted by the hair dryer and being poisoned by some improperly processed food found on the kitchen shelf. Although they relate to a single death at a single location they are different accidents and involve different instrumentalities (90 Cal. App. 3d 342, 347) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART II. FORMS

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.21

§ 104.21 Supporting Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Is Barred by Statute of Limitations--Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity and Defendant's Relationship to Plaintiff's Injuries

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 104.20[1].]

THE DEMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S AMENDED COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT _____ [name of defendant] IN THAT PLAINTIFF'S SUBSTITUTION OF DEFENDANT FOR A FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANT IS IMPROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF KNEW OF THE IDENTITY OF DEFENDANT AND DEFENDANT'S RELATIONSHIP TO THE INJURIES TO PLAINTIFF AT THE TIME THE COMPLAINT WAS FILED; BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S SUBSTITUTION OF DEFENDANT WAS IMPROPER, THE AMENDMENT DOES NOT RELATE BACK TO THE DATE OF FILING OF THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT, AND THE COMPLAINT IS THEREFORE BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 104.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. [See § 104.20[1], Paragraph B.]

C. Plaintiff Cannot Amend Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 If Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity. A plaintiff may not amend a complaint for the purpose of substituting a named defendant for a fictitious defendant pursuant to Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure if at the time the original complaint was filed the plaintiff knew the identity of the defendant and the defendant's relationship to the injuries on which the action was based (Dover v. Sadowinski (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 113, 116, 194 Cal. Rptr. 866 ; Miller v. Thomas (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 440, 445, 175 Cal. Rptr. 327).

[Optional] D. Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Is Not Available to Plaintiff Who Knew But Forgot Defendant's Identity

When Identity Ascertainable From Readily Available Information. If a plaintiff knows the defendant's identity and then forgets it at the time the complaint is filed, in order to use the Code of Civil Procedure § 474 relation back doctrine to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations the plaintiff must have at least reviewed readily available information likely to refresh his or her memory. If the defendant can be identified from the readily available information then section 474 is not available (Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 179-180, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (Fourth Dist., Div. One)) . The Woo court refused to follow Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two) , in which the majority opinion considered forgetfulness with no effort to refresh memory to be negligent ignorance, and held that negligent ignorance of a defendant's identity does not preclude adding a defendant under Code of Civil Procedure section 474 after the statute of limitations expired. The Balon rule permits plaintiffs to assert they forgot the defendant's identity even though it is uncontested they knew the identity at an earlier time, and relieves them of any obligation to refresh their memory with readily available information. The result is to excise from section 474 the importance of actual ignorance of the defendant's name because by the assertion of memory loss a plaintiff would always be considered ignorant of the name of the defendant. The better rule is that announced above in Woo which retains meaning to the actual ignorance requirement of section 474 (Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 179-180, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint when the plaintiff has attempted to amend the original complaint to substitute a named defendant for a fictitious defendant after the statute of limitations has run. The ground of the demurrer supported by this form is that the action fails to state a cause of action in that, as appears from the face of the complaint or other matters of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, it is barred by the statute of limitations because the plaintiff did not namethe defendant in the original complaint even though at the time the original complaint was filed plaintiff knew of defendant's identity and defendant's relationship to the injuries involved.

This form can also be adapted for use in supporting a motion for summary judgment if the above ground does not appear on the face of the challenged pleading.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 104.24 may be used to oppose the demurrer supported by these points and authorities.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of fictitious name allegations to be used in complaints, see Ch. 20, Allegations Commonly Used , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers on the ground of the bar of a statute of limitations, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Cannot Amend Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 If Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity

Dover v. Sadowinski (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 113, 194 Cal. Rptr. 866 was an action against several named defendants and Doe defendants, alleging that the defendants' negligence caused the death of plaintiff's wife. The complaint did not name decedent's doctor, Sadowinski, as a defendant. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff served Sadowinski as Doe III and amended the complaint. Plaintiff's attorney declared that he had been ignorant of the true name of defendant Sadowinski at the time the original complaint was filed. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant on the ground that plaintiff had not been truly ignorant of the identity of Dr. Sadowinski at the time of filing the complaint and that plaintiff therefore was unable to come within the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 for the purpose of tardily bringing Sadowinski into the action as a named defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that for purposes of applying the requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 that the plaintiff be ignorant of the name of a defendant in order to name a fictitious defendant, the applicable standard is that plaintiff must have had no actual knowledge of the defendant's identity, and that that lack of knowledge must have been real and not feigned (147 Cal. App. 3d 113, 116) . The court stated that in applying the standard, as delineated in Munoz v. Purdy (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 947-948, 154 Cal. Rptr. 472 , the evidence clearly indicated that plaintiff was neither ignorant of the facts giving plaintiff a cause of action, nor of Dr. Sadowinski's name (147 Cal. App. 3d 113, 116) . The court pointed out that plaintiff's wife had been in the hospital for three weeks prior to her death, Dr. Sadowinski had been her attending physician throughout that period, plaintiff had spoken to Dr. Sadowinski on several occasions and at least once in person, and had been informed by Sadowinski that he was in charge of plaintiff's wife's care. Furthermore, the court stated that plaintiff's attorney's admission at the summary judgment hearing that he knew of Sadowinski's involvement but not the extent of the involvement was a crucial factor. The court stated that a plaintiff does not need to know every detail concerning a defendant's involvement, and that the evidence before the court clearly showed that plaintiff's lack of knowledge was feigned and not real (147 Cal. App. 3d 113, 117-118) .

Miller v. Thomas (1981) 121 Cal. App. 3d 440, 175 Cal. Rptr. 327 was an action for injuries incurred in an automobile accident. Plaintiff's automobile had been hit by Thomas, who identified himself to plaintiff as an undercover narcotics officer for the Los Angeles Police Department and stated that the vehicle he was driving was an unmarked police vehicle. Plaintiff sued the City of Los Angeles, the only named defendant, and Doe defendants for damages. The city's answer denied the agency allegations contained in the complaint and stated further that in setting forth its defenses the city neither admitted nor denied that Thomas was acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the accident. Thereafter, plaintiff substituted attorneys twice. Plaintiff's third attorney amended the complaint to substitute Thomas as Doe I more than three years after the accident, after finding out through the use of interrogatories that the city contended that Thomas had been outside the course and scope of his employment at the time of the accident. Thomas then moved for a summary judgment on the ground that the action against him was barred by the one-year statute of limitations. The trial court granted summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 474, authorizing the use of fictitious names when the plaintiff is ignorant of the defendant's name, has been liberally construed by the courts to explain the failure to name a person as a defendant until some time later. The court stated that even when a person's identity has been known to plaintiff when the action was filed, the use of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 has been upheld if the plaintiff was initially unaware of that person's true relationship to the injuries on which the action was based, or if a change in the law has indicated that persons not originally joined might be held liable (121 Cal. App. 3d 440, 444-445) . The court said thatin those cases there has always been some showing that at the time th original complaint was filed the plaintiff was ignorant of something having a bearing on the liability of the newly summoned party. However, the court said that in the case before it, the plaintiff conceded to knowing the identity of the driver of the vehicle that collided with hers within minutes of the accident. The court said that plaintiff's first attorney, who drafted and signed the complaint, knew Thomas's identity and knew he was legally responsible but made a tactical choice to proceed against the city only. The court further stated that the fact that the attorney stated in his declaration that he was not aware that the city would deny that the accident was within the course and scope of Thomas's employment was no excuse because the attorney should have been put on notice of that issue when the city answered the complaint, which occurred before the statute of limitations had run. The court said since none of plaintiff's attorneys learned anything about Thomas that was not known when the original complaint was drafted, Code Civ. Proc. § 474 could not be used; the statute of limitations had thus run long before Thomas was made a party to the action (121 Cal. App. 3d 440, 445-446) .

[b] Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Is Not Available to Plaintiff Who Knew But Forgot Defendant's Identity When Identity Ascertainable From Readily Available Information

In Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (Fourth Dist., Div. One) , a medical malpractice case, plaintiff filed a complaint on April 25, 1997, naming several defendants other than Woo, alleging, among other things, that one defendant doctor misinterpreted a mammogram in February, 1996, and inserted incorrectly a breast hookwire, the purpose of which was to identify for the surgeon, another named defendant, the portion of the breast from which to obtain a biopsy specimen. Plaintiff sought damages resulting from unnecessary multiple operations to obtain biopsy specimens. The defendant doctor who allegedly misinterpreted the mammogram served plaintiff with a request for production of documents. The responses included a reports showing that defendant not to have been involved in the February, 1996, procedure, and included reports from Woo relating to that procedure. Plaintiff filed a dismissal without prejudice of the action as to only that doctor. On February 3, 1998, plaintiff filed an amended complaint that named the same defendants except that Woo was added as a defendant in place of the dismissed defendant. In plaintiff's deposition, taken in July and August, 1998, plaintiff testified that in May, 1996, the surgeon told her and her husband that Woo misinterpreted plaintiff's February 1996 mammogram and incorrectly placed the hookwire. Woo moved for summary judgment asserting that plaintiff's action against Woo was barred by the one-year limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5. Plaintiff opposed the motion arguing that although the statute of limitations began to run in May, 1996, plaintiff's original complaint was filed on April 25, 1997, within the one-year limitation period and the amended complaint naming Woo related back to the time of filing the original complaint. The trial court treated the amended complaint as the functional equivalent of the substitution of a party for a fictitious Doe defendant, held that the time of filing the amended complaint related back to the date of filing the original complaint and denied Woo's motion for summary judgment. Woo filed a petition for writ of mandate challenging the trial court's denial of the motion (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 172-175) .

The court of appeal granted the writ directing the trial court to vacate its order denying the motion for summary judgment and to enter a new order granting the motion (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 180-181) . Initially the court noted that an amended complaint that adds a new defendant does not relate back to the date of filing the original complaint and the statute of limitations is applied as of the date the amended complaint is filed, not the date the original complaint is filed. A recognized exception to the general rule is the substitution under Code Civ. Proc. § 474 of a new defendant for a fictitious Doe defendant named in the original complaint as to whom a cause of action was stated in the original complaint. If the requirements of section 474 are satisfied, the amended complaint substituting a new defendant for a fictitious Doe defendant filed after the statute of limitations has expired is deemed filed as of the date the original complaint was filed. Among the requirements for application of the section 474 relation back doctrine is that the new defendant in an amended complaint be substituted for an existing fictitious Doe defendant named in the complaint (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 176) . After discussing plaintiff's failure to satisfy this procedural requirement, by not identifying Woo in the amended complaint as a substitute for a previously named fictitious defendant and not identifying Woo as such in the summons served, the court nevertheless concluded that these defects would not foreclose consideration of plaintiff's section 474 relation back contention. The court also noted, however, that in other cases the court may require strict compliance and advising counsel to follow the correct procedure for substituting a named defendant for a fictitious Doe defendant (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 176-177) .

The court next noted that a further and nonprocedural requirement for application of the Code Civ. Proc. § 474 relation back doctrine is that the plaintiff must have been genuinely ignorant of Woo's identity at the time plaintiff filed plaintiff's original complaint. The omission of the defendant's identity in the original complaint must be real and not merely a subterfuge for avoiding the requirements of section 474. Furthermore, if the identity ignorance requirement of section 474 is not met, a new defendant may not be added after the statute of limitations has expired even if the new defendant cannot establish prejudice resulting from the delay. If, however, the plaintiff is actually ignorant of the defendant's identity, the section 474 relation back doctrine applies even if that ignorance is the result of the plaintiff's negligence (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 177) . The court pointed out that plaintiff's deposition testimony established that in May,1996, plaintiff knew Woo's identity, but at the time of filing the complaint plaintiff averred that plaintiff was ignorant of Woo's identity. Plaintiff sought to avoid the import of her deposition testimony by asserting, among other things, that at the time plaintiff filed the complaint she forgot that the surgeon had discussed Woo's participation with plaintiff and her husband and that plaintiff remembered Woo's identity only when conferring with her attorney in November 1997 after reviewing medical records showing that Woo, and not the previously named defendant, was responsible for her injuries (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 177-178) . With regard to the issue of known but forgotten defendant identity under section 474, the court first discussed Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two) , in which the court equated forgetting a defendants's known identity with actual, good faith and nonfeigned ignorance of the defendant's identity, and denied the existence of an obligation to make any effort to obtain easily accessible information to refresh one' memory. The Balon court considered forgetfulness with no effort to refresh memory to be negligent ignorance, and held that negligent ignorance of a defendant's identity does not preclude adding a defendant under section 474 after the statute of limitations expired (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 178) . The court rejected the reasoning and holding in Balon agreeing with its dissenting opinion in which it was noted that a requirement of reviewing readily available information is not a significant burden, is not inconsistent with cases that impose no duty of inquiry on plaintiff's who never knew the defendant's identity, and assures the good faith of plaintiff's who seek to use the section 474 relation back doctrine. The court then noted that the Balon rule permits plaintiffs to assert they forgot the defendant's identity even though it is uncontested they knew the identity at an earlier time, and relieves them of any obligation to refresh their memory with readily available information. The result is to excise from Code Civ. Proc. § 474 the importance of actual ignorance of the defendant's name because by the assertion of memory loss a plaintiff would always be considered ignorant of the name of the defendant. The better rule is that if a plaintiff knows the defendant's identity and then forgets it at the time the complaint is filed, in order to use the section 474 relation back doctrine to avoid the bar of the statute of limitations the plaintiff must have at least reviewed readily available information likely to refresh his or her memory. If the defendant cannot be identified from readily available information then section 474 is available. If the defendant can be identified from the readily available information then section 474 is unavailable. Because plaintiff did not avail herself of readily available information to refresh her recollection of Woo's identity, plaintiff was not entitled to use section 474 to amend her complaint after the statute of limitations had run. Under these circumstances there was no good faith, bona fide ignorance as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474 (75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 179-180) .

For discussion of Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two) , see § 104.24[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Cannot Amend Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 If Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge of Defendant's Identity

In Snoke v. Bolen (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1427 , plaintiff filed a complaint for dental negligence against an oral surgeon and 20 Doe defendants alleging injury to bone and a tooth. At the time, plaintiff was also under the care of her dentist, respondent/defendant Bolen. After plaintiff learned it could not be determined whether the oral surgeon or Bolen caused the injury, plaintiff amended her complaint to substitute Bolen as Doe I. The trial court granted Bolen's motion for summary judgment on the ground the action against Bolen was barred by the statute of limitations (235 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1430) . The court of appeal affirmed, stating that plaintiff knew at the time the complaint was filed that both Bolen and the oral surgeon had performed dental work in and around the injured tooth, thus failing to demonstrate that she was ignorant at the time of filing the complaint of facts having a bearing on Bolen's liability (235 Cal. App. 3d 1427, 1432) .

Hazel v. Hewlett (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 247 Cal. Rptr. 723 was a medical malpractice action against two dentists arising from an alleged failure to prescribe antibiotics before, during, and after the extraction of 13 teeth over three visits. The first dentist extracted seven teeth and informed the plaintiff that the rest of the extractions would be performed by the other dentist, who was identified by name and described as an associate of the first dentist. Plaintiff's initial complaint alleged professional negligence against the first dentist and numerous Doe defendants. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff amended the complaint to substitute the name of the second dentist for a Doe. The trial court held that the action was barred against the second dentist by the statute of limitations, and the appellate court affirmed. The court held that while "ignorance" within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 was not to be interpreted literally and extended to ignorance of germane facts other than the defendant's name, the ignorance must be real and not feigned. Under the facts of the case, the plaintiff, as of the date on which the statute ran, knew all of the basic facts that constituted a cause of action for professional negligence against the second dentist (201 Cal. App. 3d 1458, 1464-1465) .

In Pabitzky v. Frager (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 401, 210 Cal. Rptr. 426 , plaintiffs sued an insurance agent who sold them an automobile insurance policy, and the insurer of that policy. The trial court sustained a demurrer to their amended complaint without leave to amend, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held, inter alia, that the cause of action against the insurer was barred by the statute of limitations. Plaintiffs initially named only the agent and fictitious defendants and later, after the statute of limitations had run, added their insurer byamendment, although they had from the beginning known what company had issued their policy. The court, in so holding, relied on the rule that a plaintiff cannot avoid the statute of limitations by naming a fictitious defendant in a timely complaint, and then, after the statute has run, adding by amendment a defendant whose identity and capacity were known from the outset (164 Cal. App. 3d 401, 403-404) .

Ingram v. Superior Court (1979) 98 Cal. App. 3d 483, 159 Cal. Rptr. 557 was an action for personal injuries incurred in an automobile accident in which plaintiff was a passenger in a pick-up truck that collided with another vehicle. The truck driver died as a result of the accident. In plaintiff's original complaint, he named the owner of the pick-up truck, the driver of the other vehicle, and fictitious defendants, but did not sue the estate of the driver of the vehicle in which he was a passenger. The complaint did allege that the truck driver was negligent. When the trial commenced, plaintiff learned that his recovery would be less if he did not sue the truck driver because the truck owner's insurance was limited in cases of derivative liability for injuries caused by a permissive user. Plaintiff then attempted to amend the complaint to name and bring in the truck driver's estate. The trial court granted a motion to strike the amended complaint. The court of appeal denied plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate, stating that the use of Doe defendants and substitution of them by amendment is allowed only if the plaintiff was ignorant of the identity of the defendant. The court said that the only factor that was unknown to plaintiff was the limitation on the insurance policy for liability arising out of permissive use. The court further stated that the effect of the proposed amendment would be to name a new party without justifiable cause after the statute had run (98 Cal. App. 3d 483, 491-492) . The court stated the rule that amendment after the statue of limitations has run will not be permitted when the result adds a party who was neither a named nor a fictitiously designated party to the proceeding before the time of the proposed amendment (98 Cal. App. 3d 483, 492) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART II. FORMS

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.22

§ 104.22 Supporting Motion to Quash Service of Summons [Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)]--Summons or Notice Does Not Comply With Fictitious Name Statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 474]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO QUASH SERVICE OF SUMMONS ON PERSON SERVED UNDER FICTITIOUS NAME STATUTE
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 418.10(a)(1), 474]
	)	Date: _____
		Time: _____
		Location: _____

_____

DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO QUASH SERVICE OF SUMMONS SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE _____ [SUMMONS or COMPLAINT] WAS FATALLY DEFECTIVE IN THAT IT DID NOT COMPLY WITH THE _____ [ENDORSEMENT or ALLEGATION] REQUIREMENT OF SECTION 474 OF THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE.

A. Motion to Quash. On or before the last day of defendant's time to plead, or within such additional time as the court may for good cause allow, defendant may serve and file a notice of motion to quash service of summons on the ground that the court lacks jurisdiction over him or her (Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)).

B. Necessity for Compliance With Statutes. A court does not obtain jurisdiction of a defendant when service of the summons is not made in compliance with statutory requirements (House v. State of California (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 873, 174 Cal. Rptr. 279 ; Eagle Electric Mfg. Co. v. Keener (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 246, 250, 55 Cal. Rptr. 444).

[Optional] C. Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Requires Endorsement on Summons. Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure provides in part that no default or default judgment shall be entered against a defendant designated as a fictitious defendant unless it appears that the copy of the summons or other process, or if there is no summons or process, the copy of the first pleading or notice served onthe defendant bore on the face of it a notice stating in substance: "To the person served: You are hereby served in the within action (or proceedings) as (or on behalf of) the person sued under the fictitious name of (designating it)." (see Code Civ. Proc. § 474).

[Optional] D. Service of Summons Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Without Endorsement Is Insufficient to Give Court Jurisdiction. The provision of Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure that requires an endorsement on the summons or notice stating that the defendant is being served as the designated fictitious defendant is mandatory, and failure to provide that endorsement deprives the court of the right to proceed against a defendant served with such a defective summons (Carol Gilbert, Inc. v. Haller (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 852, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 843 ; Fuss v. City of Los Angeles (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 643, 646, 328 P.2d 831 ; Armstrong v. Superior Court (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 420, 424, 301 P.2d 51).

[Optional] E. Complaint Must Have Contained Fictitious Name Allegations Regarding Defendant. Unless the requirement of Code of Civil Procedure Section 474 that plaintiff plead his or her ignorance of the true name of the defendant sued under the fictitious name is met, service of that defendant will be quashed (Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp. v. Superior Court (l984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 594, 597-601, 206 Cal. Rptr. 654).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion to quash service of summons when the summons did not contain an endorsement stating that defendant is served under a designated fictitious name, or when the complaint failed to allege that plaintiff was ignorant of the true name of the fictitiously named defendant. The ground of the motion is that, as indisputably appears from the papers submitted on the motion, the service of summons is defective and the court lacks jurisdiction over the defendant because the endorsement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474 is mandatory.

This form can also be adapted for use in supporting a motion to set aside a default judgment obtained in contravention of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 because the summons lacked the proper endorsement.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of a notice of motion to quash service of summons, a declaration in support of the motion, and an order quashing service, and for a form of petition for writ of mandate to compel a lower court to quash service of summons, see Ch. 518, Service of Summons and Papers , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms of memoranda of points and authorities supporting motions to quash service of summons, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity for Compliance With Statutes

House v. State of California (1981) 119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 174 Cal. Rptr. 279 was an action for false imprisonment against various police officers and their employing governmental agencies. In attempting to serve the State of California, plaintiff's attorney had served an employee of the State Board of Control. Plaintiffs contended that the employee had stated that she was authorized to accept service of process on behalf of the State, while the employee contended that she had told the attorney she could not accept service. One of the issues on appeal was the propriety of the trial court's quashing of service of the summons and complaint and dismissing plaintiffs' action against the State. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's actions, stating that substantial evidence supported the implied determinations that the board was not the State's ostensible agent for service and that equitable estoppel did not preclude assertion of the bar of former Code Civ. Proc. § 581a(a) (now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 583.210-583.250). The court stated that plaintiffs were required by Gov. Code § 955.4 to serve the summons on the Attorney General. The court stated that statutory service requirements are jurisdictional in nature and that noncompliance deprives the trial court of jurisdiction (119 Cal. App. 3d 861, 873) .

Eagle Electric Mfg. Co. v. Keener (1966) 247 Cal. App. 2d 246, 55 Cal. Rptr. 444 involved substituted service on the Secretary of State pursuant to a court order (void) based on a declaration which, on its face, was insufficient to give the court jurisdiction. In affirming a summary judgment in favor of plaintiff, by which a default and default judgment against plaintiff were vacated, the court of appeal stated that when jurisdiction is obtained by a prescribed form of constructive notice, the statutory conditions on which service depends must be strictlyconstrued; that there must be strict conformity with the mode prescribed in the statute; and that conformity with the statute is deemed jurisdictional so that the absence of conformity deprives the court in the particular action of the power to render a judgment (247 Cal. App. 2d 246, 250-251) .

[b] Service of Summons Pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Without Endorsement Is Insufficient to Give Court Jurisdiction

In Carol Gilbert, Inc. v. Haller (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 852, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 843 , a realtor filed a complaint naming a restaurant, an individual, and Does 1 through 25 as defendants. She alleged a single cause of action for breach of a contract signed by the individual defendant, engaging plaintiff as exclusive agent to locate a suitable property for a restaurant. Plaintiff alleged that she found numerous properties, which she repeatedly brought to his attention. The individual defendant later gave notice that he was terminating the contract. Although it was terminable only for cause, plaintiff agreed to its termination, reminding him of the properties she had already identified. In the complaint, she alleged that shortly after termination, defendants negotiated a lease for a property she had found for them. The complaint's only allegations concerning fictitiously named defendants were, "Plaintiff is ignorant of the true names and capacities, whether individual, corporate, associate, or otherwise, of Defendants sued herein as DOES 1 through 25, inclusive ('Does'), and therefore sues these Defendants by such fictitious names and will ask leave of the court to amend this Complaint to show their true names and capacities when the same are ascertained. Plaintiff is informed and believes, and on that basis alleges, that each of the Defendants designated by such fictitious name could or may assert interest [sic] in the subject matter of this litigation." It was alleged that each of the defendants was acting at all times as the agent and employee of each other defendant. Summons was served on the individual defendant, personally and on behalf of the restaurant. In the answer, defendant stated that in operating the restaurant, which had closed after five months, he had acted at all times as the agent of the restaurant's owners. He acknowledged that he was a partner in the restaurant or in one or both of two entities that owned it, but asserted that under the partnership agreement he was not liable for "guaranteed [liabilities] of the partnership," and therefore "should be exempt from this matter." He identified another person as one of seven "legal entities and individuals" that held an interest in the restaurant." He further asserted that in his first meeting with plaintiff, he informed her that another realtor had already shown him the property, among others, and he made numerous further assertions in derogation of plaintiff's claims. Plaintiff's attorney later declared that based on this pleading and ensuing conversations with defendant, he concluded that the other person was a principal of the restaurant, and likely the real party in interest in the case" On plaintiff's behalf, he filed an "Amendment Substituting True Name for Fictitious Name (C.C.P. § 474)," reciting that plaintiff had learned the true name of the defendant designated in the Complaint as Doe I, and substituted his true name for the fictitious name whenever it appeared in the complaint. A process server handed the person, at his home, copies of a summons, the complaint, and the Doe amendment, and plaintiff filed a declaration of service stating the name of the party as shown on documents served sued as DOE 1. However, the copy of the summons actually received and eventually filed with the court was left blank in the space designated to notify him that he was sued as a fictitiously named defendant. Consistent with this appearance, the second page of the declaration of service also stated that "The 'Notice to the Person Served' (on the summons) was completed" to show service "as an individual defendant" and did not claim to have shown service "as the person sued under the fictitious name of (specify)." At plaintiff's request, the clerk entered his default and subsequently entered the restaurant's default. The clerk refused to enter judgment, however, on the ground that, the individually-named defendant answered the complaint, so that any default judgment had to be entered by the court. Plaintiff thereafter caused the individually-named defendant to be dismissed from the action without prejudice. The clerk again refused to enter judgment on the ground that accrued interest could not be calculated from the face of the complaint. Plaintiff then submitted declarations in support of an application for a default judgment, in substance repeating the allegations of the complaint. She did not address the assertions in the individually-named defendant's answer that the property had been brought to his attention by another agent and expressly excluded from the contract. Her attorney filed a declaration to the effect that she had incurred attorney's fees. The court entered a judgment by default against the person served as the fictitiously named defendant and the restaurant. Plaintiff then served notice of entry of judgment. Nearly one year later, plaintiff's counsel caused an earnings withholding order to be served on the fictitiously-named person's employer. Some time thereafter, the person was served with a notice of creditor's examination. He filed a motion to vacate the judgment under Code Civ. Proc. § 473(d) and to set aside the default on the grounds that they were void by deficient service of process. He contended that he was not properly named as a defendant in substitution for Doe 1, nor was he properly served under Code Civ. Proc. § 474. In the supporting memorandum, he asserted that the judgment was deficient in numerous respects, including that the summons served on him did not comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 474, which requires that such a summons notify the recipient that he is sued as a fictitiously named defendant. The court denied the motion to vacate, finding that he had actual notice of the suit and that plaintiff had substantially complied with Code Civ. Proc. § 474 by filing an Amendment Substituting True Name for Fictitious Name (179 Cal. App. 4th 852, 855-858) .

The Court of Appeal reversed. The court found that the form of summons used in California is intended to facilitate compliance with the requirement in Code Civ. Proc. § 474 that the summons notify the recipient that he or she is sued as a fictitiously named defendant by providing a checkbox whereby the serving party can indicate that the recipient is being served as a person sued under a fictitious name, with the name to be written on the form at that point. The summons served here was not so marked. It was only marked to show service on defendant "as an individual defendant." There was nothing affirmatively misleading about checking that box; he was served as an individual defendant, rather than on behalf of a corporation or other entity. The problem lay in the failure to check the box and fill in the blank so as to state in substance that he was sued as the person named in the accompanying pleadings as Doe 1, and the complete absence of the required notice from the summons was a clear violation of Code Civ. Proc. § 474. The amendment identifying him as Doe 1 did not constitute "other process as used in § 474. The function of the phrase "or other process" in § 474 is to address situations where the defendant is served with an instrument, other than a summons, by which the court commands some action. Section § 474 embraces a third situation, where the paper served is neither a writ nor a summons, but the operation of that phrase is limited to situations in which "no summons or process" is served (Code Civ. Proc. § 474.) When a writ or summons is served, as it was here, the notice must appear in that document, and its appearance in some other document will not comply with the statute (179 Cal. App. 4th 852, 858-862) . Further, the papers served on the fictitiously named defendant were not sufficient to substantially comply with statutory requirements, because the complete failure to include the required notice precluded reliance on the doctrine of substantial compliance. Nothing in the summons hinted to the fictitiously named defendant, let alone "made clear" to him, that the summons was served on him as Doe 1. The summons made no reference to the statute governing such service. Nor does anything in his conduct show that he knew the summons did, or was intended to, hale him personally into court. His inaction suggested the opposite, i.e., that he did not understand the summons required him to answer on pain of an adverse judgment. At best the question of his understanding and belief was open to doubt and dispute. The court questioned in dicta whether service that does not comply with statutory requirements should ever be allowed to stand, over a defendant's challenge, as the basis for a default judgment, and opined that a distinction should be drawn between the sufficiency of service to support a default judgment, and the sufficiency of service for other purposes, including to avoid dismissal for want of prosecution. However, the court concluded that it did not need to decide whether a rule of substantial compliance should be flatly excluded in the default setting, because that rule, properly understood, did not permit the court to overlook the defects here. The court did find that a finding of substantial compliance requires three preconditions:

- There must have been some degree of compliance with the offended statutory requirements.

- The objective nature and circumstances of the attempted service must have made it highly probable that it would impart the same notice as full compliance.

- It must in fact have imparted such notice, or at least sufficient notice to put the defendant on the defense. It is not enough that the process inform the defendant of the fact of a lawsuit, or even of a lawsuit in which the defendant's name appeared. Due process required notice of "the duty to defend."

In this case, there was no compliance at all. Thus, the trial court erred by holding that the service on defendant was sufficient to confer jurisdiction for purposes of a default judgment (179 Cal. App. 4th 852, 862-866) .

Fuss v. City of Los Angeles (1958) 162 Cal. App. 2d 643, 328 P.2d 831 was a personal injury action that alleged that plaintiff's injuries were incurred because of the negligence of "J.A. Thompson, J.H. Thompson and their agents and employees, Doe V and Doe VI." The complaint did not allege negligence against J.A. Thompson and Son, a corporation. Thereafter, service was made on the corporation, but the summons did not contain the endorsement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474, stating that the corporation was served as a defendant sued under a designated fictitious name. The corporation appeared specially and moved to quash service. The trial court granted the corporation's motion, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that the failure of the summons to bear the endorsement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474 was a sufficient ground to uphold the trial court's action. The court also held that one who is not named either by his or her true name or by a fictitious name is not a proper party to an action and that service of summons on such a person should be quashed (162 Cal. App. 2d 643, 646) .

Armstrong v. Superior Court (1956) 144 Cal. App. 2d 420, 301 P.2d 51 was a mandate proceeding to compel the superior court to issue an order quashing the service of summons in a personal injury suit. In the underlying action, plaintiff brought suit for damages for injuries incurred in an automobile accident against certain named defendants and Doe defendants. Armstrong was not a named defendant. Armstrong was served by plaintiff, but the summons did not contain the endorsement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 474. Armstrong made a special appearance and moved to quash service of summons. The trial court denied the motion. In seeking the writ of mandate, Armstrong contended that the complaint was insufficient to make him a party to the action and that therefore the service of summons on him did not subject him to the personal jurisdiction of the court. The court of appeal held that the plaintiff had a right to allege that there were defendants, other than those named, whose true names were unknown to plaintiff and to thereafter amend the complaint to name those tortfeasors and serve them. However, the appellate court issued the writ, stating that a summons served pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 that does not contain the endorsement stating that the defendant was sued under a designated fictitious name is fatally defective. The court stated that the provision in Code Civ. Proc. § 474 requiring the endorsement is mandatory and not directory, and its effect is to deprive the court of the right to proceed against a defendant served with such a defective summons. The court stated that such defective service deprived the court of jurisdiction over the person of the defendant (144 Cal. App. 2d 420, 424) .

[c] Complaint Must Have Contained Fictitious Name Allegations Regarding Defendant

In Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp. v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 594, 206 Cal. Rptr. 654 , plaintiff had named Does and made fictitious name allegations with respect to them, but not with respect to defendant Trona Medical Clinic (TMC). Plaintiff served Kerr-McGee Chemical Corp "as the person sued under the fictitious name of Trona Medical Clinic." At the motion to quash summons, plaintiff submitted an amendment seeking to insert Kerr-McGee Chemical Corporation doing business as Trona Medical Clinic in place of TMC (Kerr-McGee could not then be served as a Doe, the three-year period of former Code Civ. Proc. 581a having expired). The trial court denied the motion to quash.

The court of appeal reversed, issuing a writ of mandate to quash service of the summons and complaint. In addition to citing Nissan v. Barton (1970) 4 Cal. App. 3d 76, 79, 84 Cal. Rptr. 36 , for the proposition that the failure to allege plaintiff's ignorance of defendant's true name is fatal, the court rejected the trial court's characterization of the situation as an attempt to correct plaintiff's mistake in the name of a party, and stated that this was actually an attempt to bring a new party into the litigation (160 Cal. App. 3d 594, 598-601) .

A vigorous dissent discussed the spectrum of cases involving similar situations, including Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817 (allowing amendment relating back despite lack of allegation that fictitious defendant was liable as surety), Garrett v. Crown Coach Corp. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 647, 66 Cal. Rptr. 590 (allowing amendment relating back despite lack of allegation that fictitious defendant was liable for negligent design), Mayberry v. Coca Cola Bottling Co. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 350, 53 Cal. Rptr. 317 (allowing substitution of partnership for similarly named corporation), and Henderson v. Superior Court (1915) 26 Cal. App. 437, 147 P. 216 (allowing plaintiff suing only in fictitious business name to amend on day of trial to state true name and capacity). The dissent also pointed out that Kerr-McGee had notice that it was the entity intended to be named as defendant, and opined that the majority opinion was a triumph of insubstantial technicalities over substantial legal rights (56 Cal. 2d 596, 601-603) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART II. FORMS

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.23

§ 104.23 Opposing Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Amended Complaint Relates Back When Based on Same Set of Facts as Original Complaint

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF
vs.	)	POINTS AND AUTHORITIES
_____ [name],	)	IN OPPOSITION TO Defendant.	)	DEMURRER
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]
	)

_____

DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD BE OVERRULED BECAUSE A COMPLAINT MAY BE AMENDED TO CHANGE THE NAME OF A FICTITIOUS DEFENDANT TO A NAMED DEFENDANT WHEN THE TRUE NAME BECOMES KNOWN, AND THE AMENDMENT RELATES BACK TO THE DATE THE COMPLAINT WAS FILED, AVOIDING THE BAR OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Amendment of Fictitious Name. When a plaintiff is ignorant of the name of a defendant, that fact must be stated in the complaint and that defendant may be designated in a pleading by a fictitious name that must be amended when the true name of the defendant is known (see Code Civ. Proc. § 474).

B. Amendment of Complaint Relates Back to Time of Filing. An amended complaint relates back to the filing of the original complaint and thus avoids the bar of the statute of limitations as long as recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 85, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 ; Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 934, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 ; Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 600, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 ; Winding Creek v. McGlashan (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 933, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236).

C. Amended Complaint May Rest on Different Legal Theory or State Different Cause of Action. An amendment substituting a named individual previously sued by a fictitious name relates back to the filing of the original complaint even if it sets out a different legal theory or states a different cause of action, if both pleadings rest on the same general set of facts (Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 85-86, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 ; Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 936, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 ; Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 600, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 ; Olson v. Volkswagen of America (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 1442-1443, 247 Cal. Rptr. 719).

D. Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Should Be Liberally Construed to Allow Cases to Be Decided on Their Merits. The purpose of Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure is to enable a plaintiff to bring suit before it is barred by the statute of limitations and thus allow the case to be decided on its merits. Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure should be liberally construed to fulfill that purpose; fulfillment of that purpose has long been recognized as not subjecting the defendant to undue hardship (Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 602, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 ; Wallis v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 782, 786, 132 Cal. Rptr. 631 ; see Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 939 fn. 1, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer by the defendant based on the defense that the plaintiff's amendment of the complaint by replacing a fictitious defendant with the named defendant is barred by the statute of limitations.

The ground for opposition is that when a complaint is amended to replace a fictitious defendant with a named defendant, the amendment relates back to the time of filing of the original complaint if the amended complaint is based on the same set of facts as the original complaint. This avoids the bar of the statute of limitations if the original complaint was filed within the statutory period.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the demurrer supported by the points and authorities set out in § 104.20.

This form can be adapted for use in opposing a motion for summary judgmentbased on the bar of the statute of limitations when a summary judgment motion brought because a demurrer is inappropriate in that the defect in the pleading did not appear on the face of the amended complaint.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment of Complaint Relates Back to Time of Filing

Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 was an action by plaintiff for wrongful death caused by an automobile accident. The decedent had been a passenger in Wadsworth's car. Plaintiff sued the driver of the other car and Doe defendants. More than one year after the accident, the Supreme Court held the guest statute (Veh. Code § 17158) unconstitutional, and plaintiff amended her complaint and served Wadsworth as a codefendant in place of Doe XI. Wadsworth demurred on the ground that any cause of action against her was barred by the statute of limitations. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and entered judgment for defendant. The Supreme Court reversed with directions to overrule the demurrer and allow time for defendant to answer. The Court held that the amendment substituting Wadsworth as a named defendant related back to the filing date of the original complaint, thereby defeating the bar of the statute of limitations. The Court stated that an amendment substituting a named individual sued by a fictitious name relates back to the original complaint when the recovery is for the same accident and injury, regardless of whether it sets out a different legal theory or states a different cause of action (21 Cal. 3d 82, 85-86) . The Court said that the case before it involved the same accident and the same injuries as were presented in the original complaint. The Court at page 86 cited Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 (discussed below), as being dispositive of the issue. Smeltzley had held that an amended complaint will be deemed filed as of the date of the original complaint provided recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts.

Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 was an action for injuries incurred by plaintiff at his place of employment. Plaintiff's original complaint alleged injuries caused by his employer's failure to provide a safe place to work. His amended complaint added a cause of action alleging that his injuries resulted from a defective machine manufactured by defendant Nicholson Manufacturing Company and substituted Nicholson for one of the Doe defendants. The amended complaint was filed after the statute of limitations had run. The trial court sustained Nicholson's demurrer and entered judgment for Nicholson. The Supreme Court reversed. The Court stated that the California courts have established the rule that an amended complaint relates back to the filing of the original complaint, avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations, so long as recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (18 Cal. 3d 932, 935-936) . The Court that is the modern rule, as enunciated in Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 (18 Cal. 3d 932, 935-936) (discussed below).

Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 was an action to recover securities and moneys. The original complaint against a securities corporation and some of its officers and fictitious defendants alleged that defendants acted as brokers and agents of plaintiffs and refused to deliver securities and money they had received on behalf of plaintiffs. The complaint also alleged that a surety bond had been filed by defendants. The amended complaint substituted Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Company (Massachusetts) for one of the fictitious defendants, alleging that Massachusetts executed the surety bond, and added allegations of fraud and negligence against some of the securities corporation officers. Massachusetts argued that the action against it was barred because the amended complaint, naming Massachusetts for the first time, was filed more than two years after plaintiffs' rights accrued. The trial court sustained Massachusetts' demurrer without leave to amend.

The Supreme Court reversed. The court held that when a complaint sets forth a cause of action against a defendant designated by fictitious name and the defendant's true name is thereafter discovered and substituted by amendment, that defendant is considered a party to the action from its commencement, so that the statute of limitations stops running as of the date of the earlier pleading (56 Cal. 2d 596, 599) . The Court stated that the modern rule is that when an amendment is sought after the statute of limitations has run, the amended complaint will be deemed filed as of the date of the original complaint if recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general set of facts (56 Cal. 2d 596, 600) .

Winding Creek v. McGlashan (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 933, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236 involved an action by limited partnerships against various attorney defendants, alleging attorney malpractice. The complaint included a standard fictitious defendant allegation. During a deposition in a related action, plaintiffs allegedly learned for the first time that a new group of attorneys had provided advice relating to the subject matter of the complaint. Over two years after the deposition, plaintiffs filed an amendment to their complaint, substituting the new attorney defendants for some of the fictitiously named defendants. The new attorney defendants demurred on the grounds that the claims against them were barred by the one-year statute of limitations for legal malpractice, and the trial court sustained the demurrer.

The court of appeal, however, held that the amended complaint related back to the filing date of the original complaint, thus defeating the statute of limitations (44 Cal. App. 4th 933, 940) . The court stated that the complaint's allegationsagainst fictitious defendants was sufficient to set forth a cause of action against the fictitiously named defendants. The court also noted that the trial court's ruling suggested that its decision was based in part on plaintiff's two-year delay between learning of the new defendant's alleged involvement and naming them as defendants. However, to preclude the doctrine of relation back on the basis of unreasonable delay, the opposing party must show prejudice. Here, the new defendants made no showing of prejudice, and in fact agreed that delay and prejudice were irrelevant to the action (44 Cal. App. 4th 933, 942) . Concluding that the amended complaint was not barred by the statute of limitations, the court reversed the trial court judgment and remanded with instructions to overrule the demurrer to the amended complaint.

[b] Amended Complaint May Rest on Different Legal Theory or State Different Cause of Action

The factual background of Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the amended complaint substituting the named defendant for a fictitious defendant related back to the original complaint, avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations. The Court stated that the amended complaint relates back to the original complaint when both are based on the same general set of facts (21 Cal. 3d 82, 86) . The Court further stated that the change in the legal theory in the amended complaint is permissible (21 Cal. 3d 82, 87) . The original complaint did not single out and specifically charge the driver of the vehicle in which the decedent was riding with negligence, while the amended complaint did so allege. The Court pointed out that changes in theory have been upheld in earlier cases in which the amended complaint was based on the same set of facts, and the Court upheld the amended pleading because both pleadings involved the identical collision and the identical injury (the death of decedent) (21 Cal. 3d 82, 86-87) .

The factual background of Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the plaintiff's amended complaint, substituting a named defendant for the fictitious defendant, related back to the time of filing of the original complaint (18 Cal. 3d 932, 934) . The Court held that so long as recovery was based on the same general set of facts (i.e., the same accident and injuries), it relates back despite the fact that the theory of recovery is different in the amended complaint. On pages 936-938, the Court discussed another case that presented a striking parallel to Smeltzley. In Garrett v. Crown Coach Corp. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 647, 66 Cal. Rptr. 590 , to a factual situation indistinguishable to that in Smeltzley. In Garrett, the plaintiff's original complaint asserted that the named defendants and Doe defendants had negligently maintained and operated a school bus, causing the bus to strike plaintiff's vehicle and injure plaintiff. In the amended complaint, filed after the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff substituted Crown Coach for a fictitious defendant and alleged that Crown Coach had negligently designed and manufactured the bus. The trial court had sustained Crown

Coach's demurrer without leave to amend, and the court of appeal reversed. The court in Garrett held that the amendment changing the obligation of the fictitious defendant from that of an operator to that of a manufacturer was no more drastic than the change of theory allowed in Austin.

In Smeltzley the Supreme Court said that in both Smeltzley and Garrett the plaintiffs had not originally based their allegations of defendants' liability on their duty as manufacturers, but in both cases the plaintiffs had sought to change defendant's obligation from operator to manufacturer in the amended complaints. The Court said that the important point was that in both cases the original complaints and the amended complaints referred to the same accident and the same injuries. Thus, the Court said that under the reasoning in Garrett, the amended complaint in Smeltzley related back to the original complaint because it was predicated on the same general set of facts as those in the original complaint (18 Cal. 3d 932, 937-938) .

The factual background of Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. The Court traced the changes in case law regarding relation back of an amended pleading to the original complaint. The Court stated that the early cases held that an amendment stating any new cause of action could not relate back to the original complaint and that a plaintiff could not amend the original complaint in a way that would change the legal theory of the action. Later cases held that a mere change in legal theory would not prevent an amendment from relating back but that an amendment that set forth a different cause of action or legal liability would not relate back. The Court stated that the modern rule is that an amendment relates back if it is based on the same general set of facts. The Court stated that if Massachusetts Bonding had been sued by its true name in the original complaint, the amendment changing the character of the obligation would have related back for purposes of the statute of limitations and that the fact that it was originally designated as a fictitious defendant should not warrant a different result (56 Cal. 2d 596, 602) .

Olson v. Volkswagen of America (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 247 Cal. Rptr. 719 was a personal injury action for damages arising from an automobile accident in which the plaintiff was injured on impact by contact with the steering wheel of her own vehicle. Plaintiff originally sued the driver of the other car and various entities involved in the chain of manufacture, sale, and delivery of the steering wheel, alleging malfunction of the steering wheel and defects in its manufacture and design. The complaint included the standard Doe allegations. After discovery, plaintiff filed amended complaints against entities involved in the chain of manufacture, sale, and delivery of plaintiff's vehicle itself, identifying theseentities as defendants sued as Does in the original complaint. The final amended complaint also added express allegations of negligence in the design and manufacture of the vehicle itself, in addition to the prior allegations concerning the steering wheel. The trial court granted demurrers as to the defendants originally sued as Does based on the running of the statute of limitations before the filing of the amended complaint.

The appellate court reversed. The court noted the general rule that an amendment sought after the statute of limitations has run is deemed filed as of the date of filing the original complaint if recovery is sought in both pleadings on the same general facts. An amendment that substitutes the true name of a defendant sued originally as a Doe relates back if the original complaint is against a driver of a vehicle and the amended complaint seeks to bring in the new defendant on warranty and product liability theories. The amendment is not barred by the statute of limitations because it involves the same accident and injury. Further, an amended complaint relates back if it seeks to bring in a defendant that is in the chain of causation of the originally pleaded cause of action. The court held that under the facts of the case, those involved in the design and manufacture of the vehicle were in the chain of causation of the originally pleaded cause of action regarding the steering wheel (201 Cal. App. 3d 1437, 1442-1443) .

[c] Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Should Be Liberally Construed to Allow Cases to Be Decided on Their Merits

The factual background of Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. In holding that the statute of limitations did not bar the amended complaint against the named defendant that was substituted for a fictitious defendant, the Court stated that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 is to enable a plaintiff who is ignorant of the true name of defendant to bring suit before it is barred by the statute of limitations. The Court said that it has long been recognized that this procedure does not subject the defendant to undue hardship. The Court further stated that a party sued by a fictitious name and later brought into the case by an amendment substituting defendant's true name is considered a party to the action from its commencement for purposes of the statute of limitations; a defendant is in no worse position if, in addition to substituting defendant's true name, the amendment makes other changes in the allegations on the basis of the same general set of facts (56 Cal. 2d 596, 602) .

Wallis v. Southern Pac. Transportation Co. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 782, 132 Cal. Rptr. 631 was an action for personal injuries that named as defendants Does One through Twenty. After the statute of limitations had run, plaintiff served Southern Pacific Transportation Company as Doe One. Southern Pacific moved to strike the complaint, contending that it could not be served as a Doe under Code Civ. Proc. § 474 because plaintiff knew of defendant's existence at the time the complaint was filed, and that the cause of action was barred by the statute of limitations. The trial court granted the motion to strike and dismissed the complaint. The court of appeal reversed. The court stated that the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 is to enable a plaintiff to commence an action before it has become barred by the statute of limitations due to plaintiff's ignorance of the identity of the defendant, and that the statute should be liberally construed to accomplish that purpose (61 Cal. App. 3d 782, 786) . The court explained that the phrase "ignorant of the name" of the defendant should not be interpreted literally, and that a plaintiff who knows the identity of a person but is ignorant of the facts giving rise to a cause of action against that person could be considered ignorant of the name of the defendant for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 474. The court stated that the ignorance must be real and not feigned, and that the question of whether plaintiff acted in good faith in using Code Civ. Proc. § 474 rests with the trial court. However, the court held that defendant's affidavit in support of the motion to strike contained no facts on which the trial court could have reasonably found that plaintiff actually knew or should have known whom his cause of action was against (61 Cal. App. 3d 782, 786) . The court further held that the complaint was filed and served within the statutory period (61 Cal. App. 3d 782, 787) .

The factual background of Smeltzley v. Nicholson Mfg. Co. (1977) 18 Cal. 3d 932, 136 Cal. Rptr. 269, 559 P.2d 624 is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. In holding that plaintiff could amend the complaint to substitute a named defendant for a fictitious defendant, the court cited Austin v. Massachusetts Bonding & Insurance Co. (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 596, 602, 15 Cal. Rptr. 817, 364 P.2d 681 , stating that it has long been the purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 to enable a plaintiff to bring suit before it is barred by the statute of limitations and that the procedure does not subject the defendant to undue hardship (18 Cal. 3d 932, 939 n.1).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 104 FICTITIOUSLY NAMED DEFENDANTS (DOES)
PART II. FORMS

10-104 California Points & Authorities § 104.24

§ 104.24 Opposing Demurrer to Amended Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]--Action Against Fictitious Defendant Not Barred by Statute of Limitations--Plaintiff Did Not Have Actual Knowledge of Identity of Defendant and/or Facts Giving Rise to Cause of Action Against Defendant

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 104.20[1].]

DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD BE OVERRULED IN THAT IT WAS PROPER FOR PLAINTIFF TO NAME A FICTITIOUS DEFENDANT IN THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT BECAUSE AT THAT TIME PLAINTIFF DID NOT HAVE ACTUAL KNOWLEDGE OF _____ [DEFENDANT'S IDENTITY and/or FACTS GIVING RISE TO A CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT], AND PLAINTIFF'S AMENDMENT SUBSTITUTING THE FICTITIOUS DEFENDANT WITH DEFENDANT'S TRUE NAMERELATES BACK TO THE TIME THE ORIGINAL COMPLAINT WAS FILED, THEREBY AVOIDING THE BAR OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Amendment of Fictitious Name. [See § 104.23[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Amendment of Complaint Relates Back to Time of Filing. [See § 104.23[1], Paragraph B.]

[Optional] C. Amendment Relates Back in MICRA Case. In an action under the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act of 1975 (MICRA), when the required Code of Civil Procedure Section 364(d) and (e) 90-days notice of intent to commence a medical malpractice action was given to only known potential defendants, and thereafter the action is commenced, the action may name "Does" as defendants and any amendment to the action thereafter to name any "Doe" defendant when the name becomes known relates back to the original complaint as in any other action (see Camarillo v. Vaage (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 552, 562-570, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26).

D. Standard for Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Test of Ignorance of True Identity of Defendant Is Whether Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge. The standard to be applied to determine whether plaintiff has met the requirement of Section 474 of the Code of Civil Procedure that a fictitious defendant be used only if plaintiff is ignorant of the name of the defendant is whether or not the plaintiff had actual knowledge of the true identity of the defendant at the time the complaint was filed. Although lack of knowledge of the true name of the defendant or the applicable facts giving plaintiff a cause of action must be real and not feigned, the plaintiff does not relinquish his or her rights under Code Civil Procedure Section 474 because he or she has a suspicion of wrongdoing arising from one or more facts he or she does know (General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 593-595, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 ; Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 488-490, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 ; Munoz v. Purdy (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 947, 154 Cal. Rptr. 472).

[Optional] E. Ignorance of Party's Capacity. Although the statute refers literally only to ignorance of the name of a defendant, it is well established that amendment is permitted, even though the plaintiff knew a defendant's name, if the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts giving rise to a cause of action against that defendant (General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 593-594, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 ; Parker v. Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 516, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347).

[Optional] F. Reasonably Diligent Effort to Discover Defendant's Name Not Required. In determining whether the plaintiff was ignorant of the identity of the defendant at the time the fictitious name was used, the fact that plaintiff's ignorance may have been due to misinformation or negligence is irrelevant, and plaintiff need not show reasonable diligence in attempting to learn defendant's name (General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 592, 596, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 ; Munoz v. Purdy (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 947, 154 Cal. Rptr. 472).

[Optional] G. Change in Decisional Law May Be Basis for Relation Back to Original Complaint. When a legal theory becomes available to plaintiff by virtue of a change in decisional law, a fictitious name in a complaint may be amended to include a defendant whose identity and name were always known to plaintiff (Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 88, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 ; Barnes v. Wilson (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 205, 114 Cal. Rptr. 839).

[Optional] H. Amendment to Name Previously-Dismissed Party in New Capacity. The fact that plaintiff, in ignorance of the true facts, actually named and then dismissed a party as a defendant should not make a difference, and the plaintiff may amend the complaint to substitute a party for a fictitious defendant even though the party has been previously dismissed from the action when named in a different capacity (Parker v. Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 518, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347).

[Optional] I. Forgetfulness of Defendant's Identity Does Not Precluded Plaintiff From Adding Defendant Under *Code Civ. Proc. § 474. Code of Civil Procedure Section 474 is restricted to the plaintiff's knowledge at the time the complaint is filed. The lack of knowledge of defendant's true name must be real and not feigned. Ignorance of the facts is the critical issue and it is irrelevant whether the ignorance is due to misinformation or negligence. Accordingly, under Section 474, a plaintiff has no duty before filing the complaint to exercise reasonable diligence to discover the defendant's identity. Because a defendant has no such duty and is under no obligation to discover readily ascertainable information, a defendant may act unreasonably in ascertaining a defendant's name and still claim the benefit of Section 474 (Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 487-490, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two)) . Although Balon was not followed in Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (Fourth Dist., Div. One) , the law as specified in Balon is applicable and should be applied.

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer by defendant based on the ground that plaintiff's amendment of the complaint by replacing a fictitious defendant with the named defendant is barred by the statute of limitations because plaintiff was not ignorant of the identity of the defendant or facts giving rise to a cause of action against defendant at the time the fictitious defendant was designated in the original complaint.

The ground for opposition is that plaintiff did not have actual knowledge of the true identity of the defendant at the time he or she designated a fictitious defendant in the original complaint. When a plaintiff designates a fictitious defendant pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 474 because he or she is ignorant of the true identity of the defendant, and the plaintiff later amends the complaint to substitute the true name of defendant, the amendment relates back to the time of filing of the original complaint, thus avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations.

This form can be adapted for use in opposing a motion for summary judgment based on the bar of the statute of limitations when a summary judgment motion is brought because a demurrer was inappropriate in that the defect in the pleading did not appear on the face of the amended complaint.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the motion for demurrer supported by the points and authorities set out in § 104.21.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Amendment Relates Back in MICRA Case

In Camarillo v. Vaage (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 552, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 26 , the plaintiff brought a legal malpractice suit against attorneys for failing to file a timely medical malpractice action against an unknown doctor. Summary judgment was granted because the attorneys had given notice of intent to file a malpractice action to the health center and hospital, pursuant to a provision under Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act of 1975 (MICRA), that of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d) and (e). The court of appeal upheld the summary judgment, holding that the giving of the 90 days notice of intent to commence the medical malpractice action to only known potential defendants nevertheless served to extend the statute of limitations for commencing an action against both the known defendants and unknown defendants designated in the action as "Does." In this regard, the court of appeal found that this aspect of the earlier case of Grimm v. Thayer (1987) 188 Cal. App. 3d 866, 233 Cal. Rptr. 687 has survived Woods v. Young (1991) 53 Cal. 3d 315, 320, 279 Cal. Rptr. 613, 807 P.2d 455 , even though Woods disapproved Grimm in other respects (105 Cal. App. 4th 552, 562-570) .

[b] Standard for Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Test of Ignorance of True Identity of Defendant Is Whether Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge

In General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 , within one year after an automobile accident, the plaintiff sued the driver of the other car, as well as 20 Doe defendants. Approximately two and one half years after the accident, after plaintiff's counsel associated with more experienced counsel, plaintiff substituted the manufacturer of her car for a Doe defendant, and thereafter filed a first amended complaint against the manufacturer, adding a products liability claim alleging that the seat belts were defective. The manufacturer moved to quash service of the first amended complaint on the ground that the plaintiff must have known she had a potential claim against the manufacturer when the original complaint was filed because "a seat belt either restrains a person or it does not and this fact is known immediately after" an automobile accident. In opposition to the manufacturer's motion, the plaintiff argued, among other things, that she first learned that her injury was most likely suffered as a result in the design of the seat belt when her new attorney explained it to her and identified the so-called comfort feature in the seat belt (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 585) . The trial court denied the manufacturer's motion, and the manufacturer filed for a writ of mandate (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 587) .

The court of appeal denied the petition. The court held that even though a plaintiff might know of the existence and actual identity of a defendant sued by a fictitious name, the plaintiff is "ignorant" within the meaning of the statute if the plaintiff lacks knowledge of that defendant's connection with the case or with the plaintiff's injuries (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 593-594) . Ignorance of the facts giving rise to a cause of action is the "ignorance" required under Code Civ. Proc. § 474, and the pivotal question is whether the plaintiff knew facts, and not whether the plaintiff knew or believed that he or she had a cause of action based on those facts (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 595) . To defeat a claim of ignorance, it must be shown that the plaintiff had actual knowledge of the basic facts (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 594) . Moreover, Code Civ. Proc. § 474 does not impose on the plaintiff a duty to search for facts the plaintiff does not actually have at the time the original complaint is filed (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 596) . All the statute requires is ignorance notwithstanding that it may be from misfortune or negligence (48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 592) .

In Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two) , plaintiff filed a complaint for injuries she received in a traffic collision naming the vehicle owner and unknown "Does" as defendants. The plaintiff retained an attorney shortly before the statute of limitations expired but could notrecall the identity of the driver although the driver had given her a piece of paper with her name and other information on it at the time of the accident. Approximately two weeks after the statute of limitations had expired, plaintiff's attorney obtained the accident report and discovered the name of the driver of the vehicle. The attorney then filed an amendment to the complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 474, naming the driver as a Doe defendant. The trial court granted the driver's motion to quash service of the summons and complaint and denied plaintiff's motion for reconsideration of its order.

The appellate court reversed and remanded for the driver's reinstatement as a party defendant. It stated that Section 474 is restricted to the plaintiff's knowledge at the time of the filing of the complaint. It noted that the plaintiff's ignorance of the facts is the critical issue and that the plaintiff bears no duty to exercise reasonable diligence prior to filing the complaint to discover the defendant's identity (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 488) .

The defendant relied on Schroeter v. Lowers (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 695, 67 Cal. Rptr. 270 , for the proposition that a plaintiff's ignorance of a defendant's true name must not be willful ignorance. The court of appeal rejected this authority as an incorrect statement of the law in light of the Supreme Court's pronouncement in Irving v. Carpentier (1886) 70 Cal. 23, 26, 11 P. 391 , that Section 474 imposes no duty of inquiry. It found that the trial court erroneously concluded that Section 474 did not apply because the plaintiff had acted negligently in failing to obtain the defendant's name. It further stated that the record did not support a finding that plaintiff acted willfully or intentionally in her use of Section 474, but rather, that she acted negligently in forgetting or failing to inquire as to the defendant's name. Furthermore, the fact that plaintiff amended the original complaint two weeks after filing it demonstrated that she had no design to use Section 474 beyond its intended purpose. Therefore, the court concluded that the plaintiff was ignorant of the defendant's name at the time of filing the complaint and the trial court erred in granting defendant's motion to quash service of the summons and complaint (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 488-490) .

With regard to the duty of a plaintiff to determine the identity of a defendant once known but forgotten by the plaintiff, the reasoning of Balon has been criticized in Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (Fourth Dist., Div. One) . For discussion of Woo, see § 104.21[3][b].

Munoz v. Purdy (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 154 Cal. Rptr. 472 was a medical malpractice action. Following foot surgery by Dr. Purdy, plaintiff was taken to the radiology department and asked to stand for an x-ray. Plaintiff fainted and then began suffering severe headaches. She consulted counsel shortly thereafter, at which time she believed she had been a victim of medical malpractice. When plaintiff filed her malpractice action, she did not specifically name Dr. Purdy as a defendant, but she substituted him for a fictitious defendant after the statute of limitations had run. Purdy moved for summary judgment on the ground that the statute of limitations barred plaintiff's suit. The trial court granted summary judgment, holding that plaintiff was charged not only with her actual knowledge at the time she filed suit, but with information that she could have obtained on exercising reasonable diligence, which would have enabled her to file suit against Dr. Purdy in a timely fashion.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the trial court had used an erroneous standard in applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474. The court stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 474 is to be applied when the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of the defendant and that plaintiff's lack of knowledge must be measured from the time plaintiff filed the complaint. The court said that the lack of knowledge must be real and not feigned, but if the ignorance really exists it is irrelevant whether it is due to misinformation or negligence. The court stated that no showing of reasonable diligence in attempting to discover the defendant's true name need be made so long as plaintiff's lack of knowledge is shown to have been real at the time the complaint was filed (91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 946) . The court further stated that a requirement that the plaintiff be charged not only with his or her actual knowledge, but with information that could have been obtained on exercising reasonable diligence, would be contrary to the statutory scheme (91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 946-947) .

[c] Ignorance of Party's Capacity

General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 is discussed in § 104.24[3][b].

In Parker v. Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 , plaintiff dismissed a named defendant, mistakenly believing defendant was merely a subcontractor on the construction project on which plaintiff was injured. Plaintiff later learned of the dismissed defendant's capacity as general contractor and moved to substitute the defendant for a Doe defendant. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend on statute of limitations grounds on the basis of defendant's prior dismissal from the action. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted the well-established rule that although Code Civ. Proc. § 474 refers only to ignorance of a defendant's name, amendment is permitted, even though the plaintiff knew a defendant's name, if the plaintiff was ignorant of the facts giving rise to a cause of action against that defendant (3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 516) . Plaintiff fell within this rule because, although he knew the defendant's name, he did not know of defendant's capacity as the general contractor (3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 517) . In light of this rule, the court rejected the defendant's argument that it was legally impossible for it to be a named defendant and a Doe in the original complaint, finding that fact thatplaintiff, in ignorance of the true facts, actually named and then dismissed a party as a defendant should not make a difference (3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 518) . Thus, the court reversed.

[d] Reasonably Diligent Effort to Discover Defendant's Name Not Required

General Motors Corp. v. Superior Court (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 580, 592, 596, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 and Munoz v. Purdy (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 942, 154 Cal. Rptr. 472 are discussed in § 104.24[3][b].

[e] Change in Decisional Law May Be Basis for Relation Back to Original Complaint

The factual background of Marasco v. Wadsworth (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 82, 145 Cal. Rptr. 843, 578 P.2d 90 is discussed in § 104.23[3][a]. The Supreme Court reversed a judgment entered after the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer to the amended complaint on the ground that the statute of limitations barred the action. The Court held that the amendment substituting the named defendant related back to the filing date of the original complaint, thereby defeating the bar of the statute of limitations (21 Cal. 3d 82, 85) . The Court held that the substitution and change of theory was permissible, based on the fact that the cause of action in the amended complaint did not exist at the time of the original complaint. The Court said that its previous decision invalidating the guest statute [see Brown v. Merlo (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 855, 859, 106 Cal. Rptr. 388, 506 P.2d 212] gave plaintiff a new cause of action based on a different legal theory but on the same set of facts--the accident and injuries (21 Cal. 3d 82, 86) . The Court cited with approval Barnes v. Wilson (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 114 Cal. Rptr. 839 (discussed infra), in which amendment of a complaint was held to relate back to the original complaint when the plaintiff amended the complaint based on the availability of a new cause of action against tavern owners due to a change in the law based on a Supreme Court decision (21 Cal. 3d 82, 86) .

Barnes v. Wilson (1974) 40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 114 Cal. Rptr. 839 , was a wrongful death action by the heirs of a victim of a stabbing against the owners of the tavern in which the stabbing occurred (Golden Gloves Tavern). That complaint stated that the owners of the Golden Gloves Tavern, their employee, and Doe defendants had negligently failed to warn patrons of the unreasonable risk created by the presence of the assailant and had negligently failed to provide protection for their patrons. Almost one year after the statute of limitations had run, plaintiffs amended their complaint to substitute the owners of another tavern, the Copper Door Tavern, for fictitious defendants, alleging that the death occurred as a proximate result of the Copper Door's owners' negligence in continuing to furnish intoxicating beverages to the assailant who was already drunk and brandishing a knife. Six months prior to plaintiffs' amendment, the California Supreme Court had rendered a decision holding that a vendor of alcoholic beverages could be held liable for furnishing such beverages to a customer, who, as a result of being intoxicated, injured a third person [see Vesely v. Sager (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 153, 157, 95 Cal. Rptr. 623, 486 P.2d 151] , thereby giving plaintiffs a cause of action against the tavern owners. The defendants demurred to the complaint. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and dismissed the complaint.

The court of appeal reversed. The issue on appeal was whether the amendment related back to the date of filing of the original complaint, thus avoiding the bar of the statute of limitations. The court held that the amendment did relate back because it was based on the same set of facts as the original complaint (40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 203) . The court stated that whether or not an amendment is based on the same general set of facts as the original complaint is often a close question, but that recent decisions had liberally construed plaintiffs' right to amend pleadings without incurring the bar of the statute of limitations so that cases could be decided on their merits (40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 204) . The court further stated that the requirement in Code Civ. Proc. § 474, that the plaintiff use fictitious names in the complaint only when the plaintiff is ignorant of the name of the defendant, should not be interpreted literally. Rather, the court said, the plaintiff is deemed ignorant of the name if the plaintiff knew the identity of the facts giving rise to a cause of action against the person, or knew the name and all the facts but was unaware that the law gave him or her a cause of action against the fictitiously named defendant, and discovered that right by reason of decisions rendered after commencement of the action (40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 205) . The court said that because plaintiffs had amended their complaint to substitute defendants six months after the decision giving them a right to sue defendants, they had not slept on their rights and were therefore able to assert their claim (40 Cal. App. 3d 199, 206) .

[f] Amendment to Name Previously-Dismissed Party in New Capacity

Parker v. Robert E. McKee, Inc. (1992) 3 Cal. App. 4th 512, 4 Cal. Rptr. 2d 347 is discussed in § 104.24[3][c].

[g] Forgetfulness of Defendant's Identity Does Not Precluded Plaintiff From Adding Defendant Under Code Civ. Proc. § 474

The factual background of Balon v. Drost (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 12 (First Dist., Div. Two) is discussed in § 104.24[3][b]. In reversing the trial court's judgment for defendant based on an order sustaining defendant's motion to quash service of the summons and complaint for failure to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 474, the court of appeal noted that the trial court erred when it concluded that plaintiff had a duty of inquiry and that plaintiff ignored the fact there was another party that plaintiff could have easily identified. The trial courtwas under an erroneous impression that plaintiff could not employ section 474 if plaintiff acted negligently (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 488) . Rather, section 474 is restricted to the plaintiff's knowledge at the time the complaint is filed. The lack of knowledge of defendant's true name must be real and not feigned. Ignorance of the facts is the critical issue and it is irrelevant whether the ignorance is due to misinformation or negligence. Accordingly, under section 474, a plaintiff has no duty before filing the complaint to exercise reasonable diligence to discover the defendant's identity. Because a defendant has no such duty a defendant may act unreasonably in ascertaining a defendant's name and still claim the benefit of section 474 (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 487-489) . Thus, the court could not agree with the dissenting justice's view that section 474 imposes on plaintiffs the obligation to discover readily accessible information (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 489) . Moreover, the court, after reviewing plaintiff's conduct, further noted that under the facts, plaintiff's conduct demonstrated carelessness, not willful misuse of section 474 (20 Cal. App. 4th 483, 489-490) .

The reasoning of Balon was criticized and rejected in Woo v. Superior Court (1999) 75 Cal. App. 4th 169, 89 Cal. Rptr. 2d 20 (Fourth Dist., Div. One) . For discussion of Woo, see § 104.21[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Standard for Applying Code Civ. Proc. § 474 Test of Ignorance of True Identity of Defendant Is Whether Plaintiff Had Actual Knowledge

In Streicher v. Tommy's Electric Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 876, 211 Cal. Rptr. 22 , the court of appeal held that a trial court abused its discretion in sustaining defendants' demurrer to a complaint for personal injuries, which plaintiff had amended after the statute of limitations had run to substitute defendants' names for fictitiously named defendants. In rejecting defendants' claim that plaintiff did not act in good faith in using the procedures provided in Code Civ. Proc. § 474, the court said that a plaintiff's ignorance of the true identity of a defendant must be tested at the time the complaint is filed. It was undisputed in this case that at the time of the filing of the original complaint plaintiff was ignorant of defendants' true identities or of their status as manufacturers and distributors of the allegedly defective product (164 Cal. App. 3d 876, 882-883) .

Barrows v. American Motors Corp. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 192 Cal. Rptr. 380 was a wrongful death action by the heirs of a man who was killed while riding as a passenger in a jeep that overturned. The original complaint was against the driver of the vehicle and Doe defendants. The plaintiffs settled with the named defendant, and later filed an amended complaint against the vehicle's manufacturers and distributor, as well as against various Doe defendants, alleging negligence, breach of warranty, and strict product liability. The defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground that the claim was barred by the statute of limitations because the complaint did not state that the defendants were the fictitious defendants in the original complaint.

The plaintiffs filed a motion for leave to amend the complaint to include an allegation that the defendants were the parties previously sued as Does in the original complaint, stating that the allegation had been omitted due to an oversight. Prior to the hearing on the demurrer and motion for leave to amend, the defendants submitted a declaration that the plaintiffs knew of the identity of the defendants and of the existence of facts supporting a suit against them well before the amended complaint was filed, and that the delay in filing the amended complaint was unreasonable. The basis of that contention was a questionnaire completed by one of the plaintiffs for the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, in which that plaintiff expressed his opinion that the jeep was defectively designed and manufactured.

The trial court denied the plaintiffs' motion for leave to amend, sustained the defendants' demurrer, and rendered judgment for the defendants. The court of appeal reversed. The court stated that Code Civ. Proc. § 474 permits a plaintiff who is ignorant of the identity of a defendant to use fictitious defendants in order to file the complaint before it is barred by the statute of limitations. The court stated that case law is clear that when fictitious defendant allegations are contained in the original complaint it is proper to amend to include other causes of action, and that the amendment will relate back to satisfy the statute of limitations (144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 7) . The court stated that the issue before it should be characterized not as a statute of limitations problem, since the amended complaint was filed within the statutory period, but as a question of laches or unreasonable delay in filing the amendment (144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 8) . The court found that the defendants had made no showing that they had suffered any specific prejudice from the delay, and that the delay was therefore not unreasonable (144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 9) . The court further stated that the questionnaire did not establish that the plaintiff had actual knowledge of the identity of all of the defendants or the facts showing their involvement in the injuries to the decedent. The court pointed out that in determining the propriety of a plaintiff's Doe allegations in the original complaint, the courts look only to the plaintiff's actual knowledge at that time. The plaintiff is not charged with knowledge of the defendant's true identity which could have been acquired by reasonable diligence (144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 10 n.4).

[b] Reasonably Diligent Effort to Discover Defendant's Name Not Required

In Streicher v. Tommy's Electric Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 876, 211 Cal. Rptr. 22 (discussed in § 104.24[4][a]), the court of appeal held that Code Civ.Proc. § 474 does not require a plaintiff to exercise reasonable diligence in discovering either the true identity of fictitious defendants or the facts giving rise to a cause of action against those persons after the complaint is filed and up to the expiration of the applicable limitations period. Plaintiff did not know the true identity of fictitiously designated defendants at the time he filed the complaint, and his use of Code Civ. Proc. § 474 was proper (164 Cal. App. 3d 876, 883) .

Barrows v. American Motors Corp. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 1, 192 Cal. Rptr. 380 is discussed in § 104.24[4][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT

10-105 California Points & Authorities 105.syn

§ 105.syn Synopsis to Chapter 105: FRAUD AND DECEIT

§ 105.01 Scope of Chapter

[1] Tort Actions for Fraud and Deceit

[2] Fraud as Defense to Breach of Contract Distinguished

§ 105.02 Governing Law

§ 105.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

§ 105.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 105.05-105.09 [Reserved]

§ 105.10 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Is Subject to Objection by Demurrer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Objection by Demurrer

[b] Statement of Facts

[c] Specific and Factual Allegations in Pleading Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Specific and Factual Allegations in Pleading Fraud

§ 105.11 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Alleges Mere Conclusions of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Conclusions of Law Insufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pleading Conclusions of Law Insufficient

§ 105.12 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Fails to Specifically Allege Corporate Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Fraud Against Corporations

§§ 105.13-105.19 [Reserved]

§ 105.20 Pleading Does Not Lack Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Elements Are Inferable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessarily Inferred Facts

[b] Incorporated Allegations Satisfy Specificity Requirement

§§ 105.21-105.29 [Reserved]

§ 105.30 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Intentional Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deceit Defined

[b] Deceit Must Be Pleaded

[c] Misrepresentation of Material Fact Required

[d] Test of Materiality

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deceit Must Be Pleaded

[b] Misrepresentation of Material Fact Required

[c] Test of Materiality

§ 105.31 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof That Representation Was False When Made

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation Was Not False When Made

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representation Was Not False When Made

§ 105.32 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof That Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deceit Defined

[b] Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

§ 105.33 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Statement of Opinion, Not Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statement of Opinion Is Not Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statement of Opinion Is Not Fraud

§ 105.34 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Seller's Statement of Opinion With Disclosure

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Seller's Statement of Opinion With Disclosure Is Not Fraud

§ 105.35 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Show Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

[b] Statement of Law Absent Confidential Relationship

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

[b] Statement of Law Absent Confidential Relationship

§ 105.36 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Speculation About Future Events

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Speculation Concerning Future Events

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Speculation Concerning Future Events

§§ 105.37-105.49 [Reserved]

§ 105.50 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows False Opinion Made to One Entitled to Rely

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False Belief in Opinion

[b] False Assertion of Opinion as Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] False Belief in Opinion

[b] False Assertion of Opinion as Fact

§ 105.51 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Statement of Opinion Coupled With False Representation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion Coupled With False Representation

§ 105.52 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Opinion Coupled With Special Relationship or Knowledge

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion of Person With Superior Knowledge or Occupying Position of Trust

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Opinion of Person With Superior Knowledge or Occupying Position of Trust

§ 105.53 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney Coupled With Special Relationship or Knowledge

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion by Person Who Is Not Attorney But Is in Position of Trust or Purports to Have Expert Knowledge

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion by Person Who Is Not Attorney But Is in Position of Trust or Purports to Have Expert Knowledge

§ 105.54 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Predictions Intended as Representations of Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prediction Intended as Representation of Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prediction Intended as Representation of Fact

§ 105.55 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Misrepresentation Implied by Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation May Be Implied by Conduct

§§ 105.56-105.69 [Reserved]

§ 105.70 Concealment Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Suppression of Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Allegation of Defendant's Duty to Disclose

[b] Silence in Absence of Duty to Speak Is Not Fraud

[c] No Allegation of Misleading Statement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Allegation of Defendant's Duty to Disclose

[b] Silence in Absence of Duty to Speak Is Not Fraud

§ 105.71 Concealment Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Facts Allegedly Suppressed Are Not Material

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not of Material Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not of Material Fact

§§ 105.72-105.79 [Reserved]

§ 105.80 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence in Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Confidential Relationship

§ 105.81 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Agent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Agency Relationship

§ 105.82 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Fiduciary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Fiduciary Relationship

[b] Oral Joint Venture Constitutes Fiduciary Relationship

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Fiduciary Relationship

§ 105.83 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence With Knowledge That Affected Value of Transaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Knowledge of Material Facts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Knowledge of Material Facts

§ 105.84 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Person With Statutory Duty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Statutory Obligation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Statutory Obligation

§ 105.85 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Concealment in Letter of Recommendation of Facts That Would Present Substantial Foreseeable Risk of Physical Injury to Third Persons

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Writer of Letter of Recommendation to Disclose Facts That Would Present Substantial Foreseeable Risk of Physical Injury to Third Persons

§§ 105.86-105.99 [Reserved]

§ 105.100 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Promise Without Intent to Perform

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Intent to Perform When Promise Made

[b] Facts Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absence of Intent to Perform When Promise Made

§ 105.101 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Promise Concerning Material Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise Concerning Material Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise Concerning Material Fact

§ 105.102 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Plaintiff's Expectation Is Insufficient to Establish Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Expectation Insufficient to Establish Misrepresentation

§ 105.103 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof of Failure to Perform

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promisor's Failure to Perform

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promisor's Failure to Perform

§§ 105.104-105.109 [Reserved]

§ 105.110 Promise Without Intent to Perform is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent Not to Perform by Inference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Inference of Lack of Intent to Perform Promise

[b] Intent May Be Established by Circumstantial Evidence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessary Inference of Lack of Intent to Perform Promise

[b] Intent May Be Established by Circumstantial Evidence

§§ 105.111-105.119 [Reserved]

§ 105.120 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Facts Fails to Show Defendant Participated in or Knowingly Accepted Proceeds of Fraudulent Acts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Based on Participation or Knowing Acceptance of Proceeds

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability Based on Participation or Knowing Acceptance of Proceeds

§ 105.121 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Innocent Principal Who Is Not Bound by Agent's Representations Beyond Terms of Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent's Representations Exceeding Contract Terms

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agent's Representations Exceeding Contract Terms

§ 105.122 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows No Liability for Conspiracy to Commit Constructive Fraud Because of Absence of Fiduciary Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability Based on Conspiracy for Constructive Fraud

§§ 105.123-105.129 [Reserved]

§ 105.130 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Principal's Liability for Agent's Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principal Liable for Fraud of Agent in Agency Business

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Principal Liable for Fraud of Agent in Agency Business

§ 105.131 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Innocent Principal Accepted Benefits

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Innocent Principal Who Accepts Benefits

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Innocent Principal Who Accepts Benefits

§ 105.132 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Innocent Joint Venturers Retained Benefits

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Innocent Joint Venturer

§ 105.133 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Need Not Show Benefit to Person Charged With Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Not Predicated on Profit

§ 105.134 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Agent Concealed Known Facts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Imputation of Agent's Knowledge

§ 105.135 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Agent's Fraud Resulted in Plaintiff's Failure to Read Contract Containing Exculpatory Clause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Read Exculpatory Clause

§ 105.136 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Is Entitled to Rescission for Fraudulent Act of Agent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Retaining Benefits of Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Retaining Benefits of Fraud

§ 105.137 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven-- Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Is Entitled to Rescission for Fraud on Agent Despite Exculpatory Clause in Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations as Grounds for Rescission

§§ 105.138-105.149 [Reserved]

§ 105.150 Misrepresentation by Employer in Employment Termination Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Employer's Misrepresentation Aimed at Employment Termination Is Not Actionable in Tort

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fraud Claim From Misrepresentation Aimed at Employment Termination

§§ 105.151-105.159 [Reserved]

§ 105.160 Misrepresentation Regarding Sexual Relations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Privacy and Public Policy Concerns Bar Action Based on Representations Regarding Sexual Relations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations Regarding Sexual Relations

[b] No Fraud in False Representations of Love or Sexual Desire

§§ 105.161-105.169 [Reserved]

§ 105.170 Misrepresentation Regarding Sexual Relations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Facts Consistent With Policy Favoring Prevention of Disease and Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contagious Disease or Serious Physical Harm

§§ 105.171-105.179 [Reserved]

§ 105.180 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

§ 105.181 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Show No Intent to Induce Because Representation Made to Stranger

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation to Stranger

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representation to Stranger

§ 105.182 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows No Intent to Induce Reliance of All Members of Public or Class Under Civil Code Section 1711

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations to Public or Class

§§ 105.183-105.189 [Reserved]

§ 105.190 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent By Inference

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance Inferable

§ 105.191 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent to Induce Reliance Because Representation Was Made to Public or Class

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations to Public or Class

§ 105.192 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant Had Reason to Expect Plaintiff's Reliance on Statement Not Made Directly to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reason to Expect Reliance by Plaintiff Sufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reason to Expect Reliance by Plaintiff Sufficient

§§ 105.193-105.199 [Reserved]

§ 105.200 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Actual and Justifiable Reliance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actual Reliance

[b] Justifiable Reliance

[c] Actual Reliance Requires Belief in Truth of Statements

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Actual Reliance

[b] Justifiable Reliance

§ 105.201 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

§ 105.202 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

§ 105.203 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

§ 105.204 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Statement of Opinion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Statement of Opinion

§ 105.205 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Preposterous Representations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Preposterous Representations

§ 105.206 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff's Reliance Is Precluded by Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Justifiable Reliance Precluded by Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Justifiable Reliance Precluded by Contract

§ 105.207 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff's Reliance on Legal Duty to Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Actions Mandated by Law

§ 105.208 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--"Fraud-on-Market" Is Inapplicable to Common Law Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Fraud-on-Market" Doctrine Does Not Apply to Common Law Fraud

§ 105.209 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Failed to Read Insurance Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Read Policy Precludes Reliance on Coverage Misrepresentation

§ 105.210 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Reliance on Corporate Misrepresentations Inducing Decision to Retain Stock in Corporation Must Be Pleaded With Specificity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Corporate Misrepresentations Inducing Decision Not to Sell Stock in Corporation Must Be Pleaded With Specificity

§§ 105.211-105.219 [Reserved]

§ 105.220 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Failure to Investigate That Will Not Bar Recovery

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Failure to Investigate Does Not Bar Recovery

[b] Defendant's Misrepresentation Was Intentional

[c] Right of Action Not Destroyed if Plaintiff Justifiably Relied

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Failure to Investigate Does Not Bar Recovery

[b] Defendant's Misrepresentation Was Intentional

[c] Right of Action Not Destroyed if Plaintiff Justifiably Relied

§ 105.221 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plausible Explanation Eliminated Duty to Investigate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plausible Explanation Precludes Investigation

§ 105.222 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Had Limited Capacity to Investigate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Precluded by Failure to Investigate

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Precluded by Failure to Investigate

§ 105.223 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Existence of Public Record of Which Plaintiff Had No Constructive Notice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constructive Notice of Public Record

§ 105.224 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Because Misrepresentation Was Substantial Factor in Inducement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations as Substantial Factor in Inducement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representations as Substantial Factor in Inducement

§ 105.225 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Exists Because Plaintiff Was "Brainwashed"

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff "Brainwashed" and Unable to Act on Truth

[b] Freedom of Religion Does Not Exempt Religious Organization

§ 105.226 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance on Facts Discovered After Agreement Signed But Before Escrow Closed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discovery After Purchase Agreement Signed But Before Escrow Closed

§ 105.227 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Contract Clause That May Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Clause Does Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Clause Does Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

§ 105.228 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Indirect Reliance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance May Be Indirect

[b] Computer Network Equivalent to Plaintiff's Agent

§ 105.229 Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Unnecessary When There Is Reasonable Reliance Shown by Third-Party Recipient of Defendant's Misrepresentations and Resulting Physical Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Reliance Is Necessary When There Was Reasonable Reliance by a Third-Party Recipient of Defendant's Misrepresentation and Resulting Physical Injury to Plaintiff

§§ 105.230-105.239 [Reserved]

§ 105.240 Causation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Misrepresentation Caused Resulting Harm

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Must Allege and Show Causal Connection

§§ 105.241-105.249 [Reserved]

§ 105.250 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Resulting From Fraud Must Be Alleged

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages Resulting From Fraud Must Be Alleged

§ 105.251 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Damages From Fraudulent Affirmative Defenses That Are Not Compensable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages From Fraudulent Defenses Are Not Compensable

§ 105.252 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Damages for Fraud in Property Sale That Exceed Damages Permitted by Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Measure of Damages Exclusive

[b] Out-of-Pocket Measure Appropriate Even in Action Involving Fraud by Fiduciary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Measure of Damages Exclusive

§ 105.253 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No "Cost of Repair" Recovery for Sale of Right of Way

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No "Cost of Repair" Recovery for Sale of Right of Way

§§ 105.254-105.259 [Reserved]

§ 105.260 Damages Are Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cases Not Involving Vendor and Vendee

[b] Fraud of Fiduciary

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages for Inducing Reliance Through Deceit

[b] Fraud in Sale of Goods

[c] Fraud of Fiduciary

§ 105.261 Damages Are Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Economic Loss Rule Inapplicable if Defendant's Intentional Fraud Exposed Plaintiff to Liability

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Economic Loss Rule Inapplicable

§§ 105.262-105.269 [Reserved]

§ 105.270 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Lack of Reasonable Ground to Believe Truth of Representation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Show No Reasonable Ground for Belief

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Show No Reasonable Ground for Belief

§ 105.271 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Positive Assertion

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Positive Assertion Required for Negligent Misrepresentation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Positive Assertion Required for Negligent Misrepresentation

§ 105.272 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Gratuitous Promise

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Gratuitous Promise Is Not Grounds for Negligent Misrepresentation

§ 105.273 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Opinion as to Future Fact

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion as to Future Fact Is Not Actionable as Negligent Misrepresentation

§§ 105.274-105.279 [Reserved]

§ 105.280 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Third Party Auditor's Misrepresentation in Audit Report

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Class of Persons Entitled to Recover

[b] Liability If Auditor Prepares Financial Records

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Class of Persons Entitled to Recover

§§ 105.281-105.289 [Reserved]

§ 105.290 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Three-Year Statute of Limitations for Fraud Applies

[1] Pleading or Proof Shows Three-Year Statute of Limitations for Fraud Applies

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Statute of Limitations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Application of Statute of Limitations

§ 105.291 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Two-Year Statute of Limitations for Breach of Real Estate Broker's Duty Applies

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Two-Year Period for Breach of Real Estate Broker's Duty

§ 105.292 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Complaint Fails to Allege Facts Excusing Failure to Detect Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Facts Excusing Failure to Detect Fraud

§ 105.293 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--General Demurrer by Law Includes Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bar of Statute Deemed Included in General Demurrer

§§ 105.294-105.299 [Reserved]

§ 105.300 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Late Discovery Excused By Absence of Reasonable Notice

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Fact of Available Means of Knowledge Is Insufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Fact of Available Means of Knowledge is Insufficient

§ 105.301 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

§ 105.302 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant Was Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship Existed

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship Existed

§ 105.303 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Delay of Discovery Explained by Plaintiff's Absence

§ 105.304 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant Fraudulently Concealed Facts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Fraudulently Concealed Facts

§ 105.305 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant's Continued Fraud Tolled Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Continued Fraud Tolled Statute

§§ 105.306-105.319 [Reserved]

§ 105.320 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Plaintiff Ratified Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Ratified Fraud

§ 105.321 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Waived Fraud Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Claim for Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Claim for Fraud

§§ 105.322-105.329 [Reserved]

§ 105.330 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Contract Cannot Waive Fraud Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

§ 105.331 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Contract Cannot Waive Claim of Negligent Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Fraud" Includes Negligent Misrepresentation

§ 105.332 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Continued Performance That Is Not Waiver

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Fraud Requires Relinquishment of Right

[b] Continued Performance Is Not Waiver

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Fraud

[b] Continued Performance Is Not Waiver

§ 105.333 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Request for Favor in Continuing Performance That Is Not Waiver

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Request for Favor in Continuing Performance Is Not Waiver

§ 105.334 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Modification of Contract That Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Modification of Contract Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Modification of Contract Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

§ 105.335 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows New Agreement That Is Not Waiver Because Original Agreement Not Superseded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] New Agreement Must Be With Defendant and Supersede Original Contract

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.01

§ 105.01 Scope of Chapter

[1] Tort Actions for Fraud and Deceit

This chapter contains forms of points and authorities relating to both actions for the intentional tort of deceit, commonly referred to as an action for fraud and deceit, and actions for negligent misrepresentation.

The forms in Part II of this chapter are set out as contentions, supporting or opposing specific issues relating to actions for fraud and deceit and negligent misrepresentation. They are designed to be combined with other points and authorities that relate to the specific motion or proceeding in which these issues are to be raised, for example, in a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment [see § 105.04[2] for references to related points and authorities, including the commonly relevant procedural contexts or other related substantive points and authorities].

The forms in Part II are organized as follows:

- Forms relating to the requirement that actions for fraud and deceit must be alleged specifically [see § 105.10 et seq.]. As these forms involve a pleading requirement, they are designed primarily to be combined with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer.

- Forms relating to the sufficiency in pleading or proving the initial element in an action for fraud and deceit: the misrepresentation, omission or concealment of material fact, or other deceitful act [see § 105.30 et seq.]. These may be combined with points and authorities supporting or opposing a demurrer or motion challenging the pleading, or supporting or opposing a motion challenging the evidence, such as a motion for summary judgment. These include forms relating to special, specific types of misrepresentations, including those in an employment context, those in the context of a consensual sexual relationship, and those made by a third party agent.

- Forms relating to the sufficiency in pleading or proving the other elements in an action for fraud and deceit: intent to induce reliance [see § 105.180 et seq.], actual and justifiable reliance [see § 105.200 et seq.], harm caused as a result [see § 105.240 et seq.], and measurable damages for the resulting harm [see § 105.250 et seq.].

- Forms relating to the sufficiency of pleading or proof of an action for negligent misrepresentation [see § 105.270 et seq.].

- Forms relating to affirmative defenses to an action for fraud and deceit [see § 105.290 et seq.].

[2] Fraud as Defense to Breach of Contract Distinguished

Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 1710, in codifying a common law tort action, use the term "deceit" to indicate conduct giving rise to a tort action for damages, which is grouped generally with other tortious conduct that, without any contractual obligation, results in injury to the person or property of another or actionable infringement on another's rights [see Civ. Code §§ 1708-1710].

On the other hand, Civ. Code §§ 1572, 1573 and other code provision use the term "fraud" to refer to conduct that in nullifies otherwise valid consent to a contract, and is thus a defense to an action for breach of contract.

Courts, however, commonly use the term "fraud" or "fraud and deceit" in referring to the tort cause of action [see, e.g., City Bank of San Diego v. Ramage (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 570, 588, 72 Cal. Rptr. 273] . Careful distinction is necessary, therefore, not so much between usage of the terms "fraud" and "deceit," but between the application and case law interpretation of the contract defense codified in Civ. Code § 1572 as distinguished from the application and case law interpretation of the tort action codified in Civ. Code § 1710 [see Bezaire v. Fidelity & Deposit Co. (1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 888, 892, 91 Cal. Rptr. 142] .

This distinction can be all the more confusing because the element in establishing both the contract defense and the tort action are very similar [South Tahoe Gas Co. v. Hofmann Land Improvement Co. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 750, 765, 102 Cal. Rptr. 286] .

For forms of points and authorities relating to the contractual defense of fraud under Civ. Code §§ 1572, 1573 and related provisions, see Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence and Mistake .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsRequirementsContracts LawDefensesFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudDefensesTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudElementsTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationNegligent MisrepresentationDefensesTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationNegligent MisrepresentationElements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.02

§ 105.02 Governing Law

The tort action of fraud and deceit is governed generally by Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710 (liability for damages based on deceit and actionable deceit or fraud defined) and interpretive case law.

Other related statutory provisions (and their interpretive decisional law) include:

- Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d) (three-year limitation period on action for relief for fraud, beginning on the date the aggrieved party discovers the facts constituting the fraud).

- Civ. Code §§ 3294, 3333 (punitive and compensatory tort damages generally).

- Civ. Code § 3343 (measure of compensatory damages for fraud in the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property).

- Civ. Code § 1710.1 (liability for fraudulent transfer of specified personal property from which serial numbers or similar identification has been removed).

- Civ. Code § 1710.2 (duty of disclosure, in transfer of real property, of fact that previous occupant had or died as a result of HIV/AIDS).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
GovernmentsLegislationStatutes of LimitationsTime LimitationsTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudDefensesTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudRemediesTortsProcedureStatutes of LimitationsAccrual of ActionsDiscovery Rule

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.03

§ 105.03 How to Use Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: supporting memoranda of points and authorities must not exceed 15 pages (or 20 pages in a summary adjudication proceeding). Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, or the proof of service, are not included in the page limitation. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d), (e)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.04.

[2] Using Forms to Build Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other points and authorities to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, §§ 1.03 -1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionMemoranda in OppositionCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.04

§ 105.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

See the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender), for detailed treatise discussion, pleading and practice forms, procedural checklists, and research guides relating to the forms in this chapter:

- Actions for fraud and deceit and negligent representation:
  - Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit.
- Pretrial proceeding in which the points and authorities in this chapter are most likely to be raised:
  - Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.
  - Ch. 375, Motions to Strike.
  - Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment.
  - Ch. 489, Relief From Judgments and Orders.
  - Ch. 537, Summary Judgment.
- Other procedural contexts in which the points and authorities in this chapter may be raised:
  - Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments.
  - Ch. 205, Defaults and Default Judgments.
  - Ch. 318, Judgments.

- Ch. 444, Probate: Will Contests,
- Ch. 482, Quieting Title.
- Ch. 488, Reformation of Instruments.
- Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution.

- Other related substantive and procedural subject areas:
  - Ch. 7, Accounting, Action for.
  - Ch. 8, Accounts Stated and Open Accounts.
  - Ch. 12, Adoptions: Nature and Effect.
  - Ch. 12A, Adoptions: Termination of Parental Rights.
  - Ch. 12B, Adoptions: Unmarried Minors.
  - Ch. 12C, Adoptions: Adults and Married Minors.
  - Ch. 12E, Adoptions: Attack on Decree.
  - Ch. 14, Advertising.
  - Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability.
  - Ch. 25, Annulment (Nullity) of Marriage and Related Spousal Rights.
  - Ch. 57, Art.
  - Ch. 77, Auctions and Auctioneers.
  - Ch. 95, Banks, Deposits, and Checks.
  - Ch. 103, Brokers.
  - Ch. 104, Building Contracts.
  - Ch. 121, Common Counts.
  - Ch. 122, Community Property.
  - Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans.
  - Ch. 140, Contracts.
  - Ch. 150, Conversion.

- Ch. 177, Damages.
- Ch. 184, Deeds.
- Ch. 215, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake.
- Ch. 307, Insolvency.
- Ch. 308, Insurance.
- Ch. 393, Oil and Gas.
- Ch. 401, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners and Partnership.
- Ch. 402, Partnerships: Actions Between General Partners or Partnership and Third Parties.
- Ch. 405, Partnerships: Actions Between Limited Partners or Partnerships and Third Parties.
- Ch. 460, Products Liability.
- Ch. 500, Sales: Sales Under the Commercial Code.
- Ch. 501, Sales: Retail Installment Sales.
- Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties.
- Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions.
- Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act.
- Ch. 505, Sales: Independent Wholesale Sales Representatives Contractual Relations Act.
- Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings.
- Ch. 560, Trusts: Constructive Trusts,
- Ch. 569, Vendor and Purchaser.

[2] Related Points and Authorities

- For forms of points and authorities relating to procedural contexts in which the forms in this chapter are most likely to be used, see:

  - Ch. 70, Defaults, Default Judgments, and Relief From Judgments and Orders.
  - Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.

- Ch. 160, Motions to Strike.
- Ch. 221, Summary Judgments.

- For other procedural contexts, see also:
  - Ch. 16, Amended and Supplemental Pleadings.
  - Ch. 20, Arbitration: Compelling.
  - Ch. 20A, Arbitration: Resisting.
  - Ch. 61, Cross Complaints.
  - Ch. 112, Homesteads.
  - Ch. 121, Interest.
  - Ch. 131, Judgments.
  - Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
  - Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
  - Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions.
  - Ch. 155, Motions After Trial.
  - Ch. 168, Parties.
  - Ch. 198, Quieting Title.

- For points of authorities in related substantive contexts, with which the forms in this chapter may be combined, see:
  - Ch. 12, Accounting.
  - Ch. 14, Advertising.
  - Ch. 30, Bankruptcy.
  - Ch. 31, Brokers and Salespersons.
  - Ch. 34, Checks and Banks.
  - Ch. 43, Common Counts and Bills of Particulars.
  - Ch. 50, Contracts.

- Ch. 51, Conversion.
- Ch. 64, Damages: Tort.
- Ch. 65, Damages: Contract.
- Ch. 92, Duress, Menace, Fraud, Undue Influence, and Mistake.
- Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Discipline.
- Ch. 100A, Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior.
- Ch. 114, Husband and Wife.
- Ch. 120, Insurance.
- Ch. 141, Landlord and Tenant.
- Ch. 142, Libel and Slander (Defamation).
- Ch. 170, Partnerships and Joint Ventures.
- Ch. 182, Principal and Agent.
- Ch. 186, Probate of Wills.
- Ch. 190, Products Liability.
- Ch. 196, Public Entities.
- Ch. 206, Sales.
- Ch. 214, Specific Performance.
- Ch. 222, Suretyship.
- Ch. 225, Trespass.
- Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationActual FraudGeneral OverviewTortsBusiness TortsFraud & MisrepresentationNegligent MisrepresentationGeneral Overview

69 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.05-105.09

[Reserved]

§§ 105.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.10

§ 105.10 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Is Subject to Objection by Demurrer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMPLAINT IS SUBJECT TO DEMURRER ON THE GROUND THAT IT FAILS TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT FAILS TO ALLEGE ALL ELEMENTS OF THE FRAUD COMPLAINED OF IN SPECIFIC TERMS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object to the complaint by demurrer on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action where such ground appears on the face of the complaint or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)).

B. Statement of Facts. A complaint must contain a statement of the facts constituting the cause of action in ordinary and concise language (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a)).

C. Specific and Factual Allegations in Pleading Fraud. It is fundamental that fraud is not presumed. Whenever it constitutes an element of a cause of action or is invoked as conferring a right, it must be alleged (Cooper v. Leslie Salt Co. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 627, 636, 75 Cal. Rptr. 766, 451 P.2d 406 ; Goldrich v. Natural Y Surgical Specialties, Inc. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 772, 782-783, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162). In pleading fraud, it is essential that the facts and circumstances constituting the fraud should be set out clearly, concisely, and with sufficient particularity to apprise the opposite party of what he or she is called on to answer and to enable the court to determine if, on the facts pleaded, there is any foundation, prima facie at least, for the charge of fraud (Hannon v. Madden (1931) 214 Cal. 251, 267-268, 5 P.2d 4 ; Scafidi v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 553, 165 P.2d 260).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint based on fraud and deceit when the pleading fails to allege all of the elements of the particular type of deceit involved specifically and factually. It should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.11 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of specific pleading with regard to particular elements of the cause of action for fraud and deceit.

This form may be modified depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a motion for summary challenging the sufficiency of the proof.

This form should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In this instance, involving a pleading requirement, counsel should argue that the facts alleged by the opposing party are not specific enough to constitute an actionable tort of fraud and deceit. In a demurrer, counsel may also request judicial notice, if appropriate, to show the insufficient specificity of the alleged facts [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.].

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 105.11 et seq., relating to inadequate specificity generally, and § 105.30 et seq., which pertains to the sufficiency of either pleading or proof of specific elements.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.20 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In addition, when appropriate, points and authorities which oppose contentions based on the sufficiency of pleading or proof of specific elements may be used to oppose the points and authorities in this form [see, e.g., § 105.50 et seq.].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Objection by Demurrer

Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e) sets out the provision applicable to a general demurrer, that is, a demurrer based on the ground that a complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a) , the provision applies to cross complaints as well as complaints.

[b] Statement of Facts

Code Civ. Proc. § 425.10(a) sets out the general requirement that a cause of action be pleaded by stating facts in ordinary and concise language that constitute that cause of action.

[c] Specific and Factual Allegations in Pleading Fraud

In Cooper v. Leslie Salt Co. (1969) 70 Cal. 2d 627 , the Supreme Court affirmed judgments of dismissal after general demurrers to a complaint were sustained without leave to amend in a case involving actions by taxpayers attacking the manner in which a municipal improvement district financed certain municipal improvements and services. The Court considered the possibility that the appellant-taxpayers intended to allege fraudulent misappropriations of district funds. The Court stated, however, that fraud is never presumed--facts constituting fraud must be specifically pleaded. The court must be able to determine from the complaint that a prima facie case is alleged. In this case, the complaint neglected to set forth any specific facts that would establish fraudulent acts. For example, the taxpayer did not allege that the work performed for the district was done poorly or not done at all, nor did he allege facts to show that the price paid was more than the contract called for or that the endorsements of the checks given in payment for the work were fraudulent (70 Cal. 2d 627, 636).

In Goldrich v. Natural Y Surgical Specialties, Inc. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 772, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162 , plaintiff suffered injuries as a result of defective silicone breast implants. She brought an action for, among other things, fraud against the surgeon who had inserted the implants and several breast implant manufacturers. She alleged in general terms that the defendants "had falsely and fraudulently represented" to her, her physicians, "and other members of the general public" that their product was "safe for use in breast surgery, that it posed no dangerous risks of injury, ... and that it would not require frequent removal from her body." The complaint provided no details regarding how and when the alleged misrepresentations were made or the exact nature of the misrepresentations. The court of appeal held that the trial court had correctly disposed of the fraud cause of action by demurrer and judgment on the pleadings. The court noted that fraud must be pleaded with specificity, to provide the defendants with the fullest possible details of the charge so that they can prepare a defense to this serious attack. To withstand a demurrer, the facts constituting every element of the fraud must be alleged with particularity, and the claim cannot be salvaged by references to the general policy favoring liberal construction of pleadings. The court stated that even in a case involving numerous oft-repeated misrepresentations, the plaintiff must, at a minimum, set out a representative sample of the alleged misrepresentations sufficient to permit the trial court to ascertain whether the statements were material and otherwise actionable. The court concluded that the pleading in this case did not come close to the required specificity (25 Cal. App. 4th 772, 782-783) .

In Hannon v. Madden (1931) 214 Cal. 251, 5 P.2d 4 , certain taxpayers had contested the validity of a street improvement assessment, alleging fraud among other matters. In reversing the trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs, the Supreme Court examined the complaint as amended, and concluded that its pleading of fraud was deficient. It is a cardinal rule of pleading, the Court noted, that fraud must be pleaded in specific language descriptive of the acts relied on to constitute fraud. It is not sufficient to allege it in general terms or in terms that are mere conclusions. Fraud, being a term that imputes venality and corruption to the person charged, should be proved clearly and established satisfactorily (214 Cal. 251, 267-268) .

In Scafidi v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 550 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the defendants in an action for money had and received which the plaintiffs characterized as essentially an action for fraud and deceit. If the action was for money had and received, the statute of limitations barred it, if it were characterized as one for fraud, the issue was whether or not the complaint stated a cause of action therefor. The court noted that in pleading a cause of action based on fraud or in pleading fraud in avoidance of the bar of the statute of limitations, it is essential that the facts and circumstances that constitute the fraud be set out clearly, concisely, and with sufficient particularity to apprise the opposite party of what he is called on to answer and to enable the court to determine if on the facts pleaded, there is any foundation, prima facie at least, for the charge of fraud. On analysis of the complaint, the court found it deficient for failure to allege (1) any false or fraudulent representations, which must be pleaded clearly and unequivocally; (2) defendants' ever having made any representation; or (3) defendants' having made a representation that (a) was false, (b) defendants knew to be false, (c) plaintiffs believed and relied on, or (d) defendants made with intent to deceive and defraud the plaintiffs. If the plaintiffs intended to allege defendants' fraud in making a promise without any intention to perform it, they failed to allege that defendants so promised or so promised with the intent to deceive or defraud the plaintiffs. Moreover, the facts that plaintiffs pleaded in alleging fraudulent concealment of their cause of action for money had and received were wholly insufficient to establish such a concealment (72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 553).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Specific and Factual Allegations in Pleading Fraud

In Stansfield v. Starkey(1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 59, 269 Cal. Rptr. 337 , several present and former members of a church brought an action against the church, alleging fraud and other causes of action, based on allegations, inter alia, that they were fraudulently induced to become members. The court of appeal affirmed the sustaining of a demurrer to the cause of action in fraud without leave to amend, holding that every element must be alleged in the proper manner, and the facts constituting the fraud must be alleged with sufficient specificity to allow defendant to understand fully the nature of the charge made. In the instant case, the court held that the alleged representations made by defendant, for example, that its founder was underpaid and a wounded war hero, allegedly made to induce plaintiffs to join the church, were inadequate to support a cause of action in fraud (220 Cal. App. 3d 59, 73-75) .

In Cooper v. Equity Gen. Ins. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1252 , the defendant insurer filed a cross complaint in an insurance bad-faith action brought by its insured. In the cross complaint, defendant alleged that the plaintiff and his attorneys committed conspiracy to commit fraud in connection with an underlying third-party claim; the pleadings claimed that the cross defendants' misrepresentations caused it to consult insurance coverage counsel, and to start an investigation, but failed to allege specifically how the misrepresentations or any other acts of the cross defendants caused it to be damaged. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's sustaining of the cross defendants' demurrer to the cross complaint without leave to amend, noting that defendant did not subsequently assert any supportive facts, and holding that every element of a cause of action for fraud must be alleged both factually and specifically, and the policy of liberal construction of pleadings will not be invoked to sustain a defective pleading (219 Cal. App. 3d 1252, 1262-1264).

In California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff which it entered after sustaining the plaintiff's general and special demurrers to the defendant's second amended answer and cross complaint without leave to amend. The defendant's theory was that the plaintiff had committed fraud in inducing contracts for the sale of certain property. However, the Court noted, whatever is essential to a cause of action must be distinctly averred. The necessary elements of fraud were not pleaded. The defendant charged in legal conclusions that fraud and misrepresentation had been perpetrated on him but set forth not a single false representation. Moreover, there was no allegation of either the plaintiff's knowledge of falsity or reliance on defendant's representations. The agreements involved were not pleaded and no statement was made about their terms or conditions. Thus, it could not be determined what right or title the agreements or their alleged fraudulent procurement conferred on the defendant, and it could not be determined how any right or title was conferred. Although an exhibit attached to the answer recited the false representations on which the defendant alleged his reliance, such inferential pleading is wholly insufficient. Matters of substance must be alleged in direct terms and not by recital or reference, much less by exhibits merely attached to the pleadings (15 Cal. 2d 268, 272-273).

In Davis v. Rite-Lite Sales Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 675 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the defendant entered by the trial court after it had sustained the defendant's general and special demurrers to the second amended complaint without leave to amend. The complaint purported to state a cause of action for rescission of a contract for fraud in that the defendant had represented to plaintiff that it owned an interest in a patent, that the plaintiff had purchased stock in the defendant as a result, but that because a federal court order had been entered restraining the defendant from manufacturing the patented item, the stock was worthless. There was no allegation that defendant's representations were false when made or that the defendant knew the representations were false when made. In holding that the grounds for the demurrers were well taken, the Court stated that in an action for fraud and deceit, the allegations of fraud must be clear and unequivocal (8 Cal. 2d 675, 680-681) .

In La Vista Cemetery Assn. v. American Sav. & Loan Ass'n 1970) 12 Cal. App. 3d 365 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment sustaining, without leave to amend, the defendant's demurrer for failure to state a cause of action and for uncertainty in an action for recovery of money on deposit and for damages for fraud. The plaintiff based a constructive fraud charge on an allegation that the defendant had breached a supposed fiduciary relationship. The complaint contained general allegations of "connivance," "complicity," and "intent to aid and abet." The court stated that it is essential that the facts and circumstances constituting actual fraud be set forth with particularity to enable the court to determine if on the facts pleaded, the charge has any foundation. The general allegations did not meet that burden of particularity (12 Cal. App. 3d 365, 368-369).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.11

§ 105.11 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Alleges Mere Conclusions of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF ATTEMPTS TO ALLEGE FRAUD _____ [GENERAL TERMS or TERMS THAT ARE MERE CONCLUSIONS].

A. Pleading Conclusions of Law Insufficient. It is not sufficient to allege fraud in general terms or in terms that are mere conclusions. Every element of a cause of action for fraud must be alleged factually and specifically (Lesperance v. North Am. Aviation, Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 344, 31 Cal. Rptr. 873).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud because the pleadings attempt to allege fraud in general terms or in terms that are mere conclusions.

This form may be modified for use with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.10[2]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.10[2][b]].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see [see § 105.10, relating to inadequate specificity generally, and § 105.30 et seq., which pertains to the sufficiency of either pleading or proof of specific elements.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.20 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In addition, when appropriate, points and authorities which oppose contentions based on the sufficiency of pleading or proof of specific elements may be used to oppose the points and authorities in this form [see, e.g., § 105.50 et seq.].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Conclusions of Law Insufficient

In Lesperance v. North Am. Aviation, Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 31 Cal. Rptr. 873 , the background of which is discussed in § 105.10[4], the court of appeal noted that fraud actions are subject to strict requirements of particularity in pleading. The effect of the rule that fraud must be specifically pleaded is that general pleading of the legal conclusion of "fraud" is insufficient. In addition, the court noted, every element of the cause of action must be alleged factually and specifically. The policy of liberal construction of the pleadings will not ordinarily be invoked to sustain a pleading that is defective in any material respect (217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 344) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Pleading Conclusions of Law Insufficient

In Hannon v. Madden (1931) 214 Cal. 251, 5 P.2d 4 , discussed in § 105.10[3][d], the plaintiffs sought to invalidate a street improvement assessment on the ground alleged in the complaint that the board of trustees of the taxing entity had fraudulently, unlawfully, and arbitrarily overruled plaintiffs' protests concerning the quality of the street improvement work, knowing that the work was not performed according to the plans and specifications. In reversing the trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs, the Court pointed out that it is a cardinal rule of pleading that fraud must be pleaded in specific language descriptive of the acts relied on to constitute fraud. It is not sufficient, said the Court, to allege fraud in general terms or in terms that are mere conclusions (214 Cal. 251, 267) .

In Zumbrun v. University of S. Cal. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 1, 101 Cal. Rptr. 499 , a complaint for fraud was found deficient in that it did not allege a casual connection between defendants' averred wrongs and the damages claimed. The court of appeal stated that allegations of damages without allegations of fact to support them are but conclusions of law, which are not admitted by demurrer (25 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12) .

In Starbird v. Lane (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 21 Cal. Rptr. 280 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for some defendants after it sustained a general demurrer to a fifth amended complaint without leave to amend and an order dismissing the action as to the remaining defendants. The complaint sought the removal of a corporate director alleging fraud among other matters. The court observed that all the essential charges of fraud were stated in the form of "the most general conclusions" and concluded that the insufficiency of such allegations has long been recognized (203 Cal. App. 2d 247, 257) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.12

§ 105.12 Pleading Lacks Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Pleading Fails to Specifically Allege Corporate Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT, WHICH ASSERTS FRAUD AGAINST A CORPORATION, FAILS TO ALLEGE _____ [THE NAME OF THE PERSON WHO SPOKE and/or THE AUTHORITY OF THE PERSON WHO SPOKE and/or THE PERSON TO WHOM THE SPEECH WAS ADDRESSED and/or WHAT WAS SAID and/or WHEN THE STATEMENT WAS MADE].

Pleading Fraud Against Corporations. If the plaintiff seeks to charge a defendant corporation with making fraudulent misrepresentations, it is necessary for him or her to allege the name of the person who spoke, his of her authority to speak, the person to whom the speech was addressed, what was said, and when it was said. A complaint lacking in such allegations does not state facts sufficient to charge a corporate defendant with fraud (Mason v. Drug, Inc. (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703, 88 P.2d 929).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud against a corporation because the pleadings fail to allege such specific information as the person making the representation and to whom the representation was directed.

This form may be modified for use with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.10].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.10[2][b]].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see § 105.10, relating to inadequate specificity generally, and § 105.30 et seq., which pertains to the sufficiency of either pleading or proof of specific elements.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.20 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In addition, when appropriate, points and authorities which oppose contentions based on the sufficiency of pleading or proof of specific elements may be used to oppose the points and authorities in this form [see, e.g., § 105.50 et seq.].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Fraud Against Corporations

In Mason v. Drug, Inc. (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 697, 88 P.2d 929 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff which was entered after the trial court sustained general and special demurrers to the plaintiff's complaint filed by two of the defendants. The complaint alleged that the defendants had fraudulently conspired to cause certain shareholders of one of the corporate defendants to enter into certain stock transactions. With respect to the cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation by one of the corporate defendants, the court stated that since corporations can speak and act only through their agents and officers, it is material to state such persons' names, what they said and did which was material to the cause of action, when the event happened, and such facts and circumstances as the pleader relies on as proof of the fraud and deceit constituting his cause of action. Each party must allege every fact which he is required to prove and will be precluded from proving any fact not alleged. Fraud is never presumed. Thus, in this case, the court observed, if the plaintiff would charge the defendant corporation with making fraudulent misrepresentations plaintiff must allege the name of the person who spoke, his authority to speak, to whom he spoke, what he said or wrote, and when he said or wrote it. Since the amended complaint was wholly wanting in such allegations, it did not state facts sufficient to charge the corporate defendant (31 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.13-105.19

[Reserved]

§§ 105.13[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.20

§ 105.20 Pleading Does Not Lack Specificity Required for Fraud Action--Elements Are Inferable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE AN ALLEGED FAILURE TO PLEAD THAT _____ [identify element that defendant contends has not been alleged by separate allegation, e.g, PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY AND JUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON DEFENDANT'S MISREPRESENTATION] BECAUSE THAT ELEMENT IS NECESSARILY INFERRED FROM OTHER PLEADED FACTS.

A. Necessarily Inferred Facts. A general demurrer admits not only the facts expressly alleged but also facts essential to a cause of action which the facts alleged supply by implication or inference (McKay v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1899) 124 Cal. 270, 272-273, 56 P. 1112 ; Remus Films, Ltd. v. William Morris Agency, Inc. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 763, 768, 53 Cal. Rptr. 526).

[Optional] B. Incorporated Allegations Satisfy Specificity Requirement. The requirement that the elements of fraud be pled with specificity may be met by incorporated allegations showing a false misrepresentation and knowledge of falsity (Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1139, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the pleading states the facts sufficiently to infer all necessary elements of the cause of action without further specificity.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue, for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

In submitting these points and authorities, counsel should note that it is directly opposed to and appears irreconcilable with the general rule that fraud must be specifically and factually pleaded [see § 105.10 et seq.]. However, that rule is most strictly applied to allegations concerning the acts or statements of the defendant or cross defendant [see, e.g., § 105.30 et seq.]. If such facts are sufficiently pleaded, it is arguable that others may be inferred, particularly the defendant's or cross defendant's state of mind (intent, knowledge, belief, etc.). However, while such inference may save the pleading from a general demurrer, it may still be subject to a special demurrer for lack of certainty, if the pleading of any necessary element lacks sufficient detail [see Remus Films, Ltd. v. William Morris Agency, Inc. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 763, 768, 53 Cal. Rptr. 526] .

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit .

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In this instance, involving a pleading requirement, counsel should argue that the facts alleged by his or her client are specific enough to constitute an actionable tort of fraud and deceit, in that all the necessary elements may be inferred to the extent that they are not specifically pleaded. In opposing a demurrer, counsel may also request judicial notice, if appropriate, to show the sufficiency of the alleged facts [see Evid. Code § 450 et seq.].

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , and Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities opposing a contention that the complaint insufficiently pleads that a promisor made a promise without intent to perform, because the allegation of intent is inferable, see § 105.110.

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form, see points and authorities which oppose contentions based on the sufficiency of pleading or proof of specific elements [see, e.g., § 105.50 et seq.].

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessarily Inferred Facts

In McKay v. New York Life Ins. Co. (1899) 124 Cal. 270, 56 P. 1112 , the Supreme Court reversed a trial court's judgment after sustaining a general demurrer to a complaint for fraud, holding that the complaint alleged facts from which other essential facts were inferred. The complaint alleged that (1) the defendant life insurance company's agent had represented to the plaintiff that the company would issue a policy entitling him to $5,000 if he survived for 10 years; (2) the plaintiff believed the representations and in reliance thereon and also on the agent's assurances that the application was properly drawn and "all right," signed the application without reading it; (3) the agent then knew his representations to be false and fraudulent; and (4) when plaintiff received the policy found that the benefit was only $2,500. The Court conceded that against a special demurrer the complaint could not stand. But the Court noted that the demurrer was general and could not prevail when the essential facts substantially appeared, even though some of them were stated defectively. Thus, the Court found that the averment that the agent knew his promises to be false and fraudulent necessarily implied that they were in fact false and fraudulent and that he had no intention that they should be performed. The matters thus inferred are in the face of a general demurrer imputed to the complaint in the same manner as if they had been directly charged, the Court ruled (124 Cal. 270, 272-273) .

In Remus Films, Ltd. v. William Morris Agency, Inc. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 763 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's dismissing a complaint after sustaining the defendant's demurrer without leave to amend because the allegation in the complaint that the defendant knew of certain falsity necessarily implied falsity. The complaint alleged that the defendant (1) had represented that Stewart Granger and Jean Simmons were willing and anxious to act in a certain movie and would be available on a stated date; (2) made these representations with intent to deceive; and (3) knew at the time that Simmons would not be so available. The allegations of the complaint sufficed to plead an action for damages for deceit, at least against a general demurrer, said the court. Strictly speaking, the complaint omitted direct allegations of facts from which the falsity of the representations could be concluded. But the court ruled that the averments that the defendant knew of the falsity and intended to deceive carried the necessary implication of falsity, which suffice against a general demurrer (244 Cal. App. 2d 763, 768).

[b] Incorporated Allegations Satisfy Specificity Requirement

In Wilson v. Houston Funeral Home (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 169 , a decedent's family sued the funeral home which handled the services, bringing causes of action for breach of contract, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and fraud. The wording of the fraud allegation was that defendant falsely represented that it was capable of handling plaintiffs' insurance policy and would provide for a dignified and respectful service. Noting that the elements of a fraud cause of action must be pled with specificity, defendant contended that the complaint failed to allege any facts showing that it was not capable of "handling" plaintiffs' insurance policy, and that the representation that the service would be "dignified and respectful" was too general to serve as a basis for a fraud cause of action. The trial court agreed, and sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint.

The court of appeal stated that if the only allegations of misrepresentation were those specifically identified in the fraud portion of the complaint, then it would tend to agree that the fraud count had no merit. However, the court noted that the fraud cause of action incorporated by reference earlier allegations in the complaint regarding defendant's representations about payment. Those allegations included allegations about representations by defendant about payment, as well as subsequent conduct by defendant which demonstrated that those representations were false. The court concluded that these representations were sufficiently specific to satisfy the pleading requirements of a false representation and knowledge of falsity (42 Cal. App. 4th 1124, 1139) . The court thus reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal, and remanded the case with directions to overrule the demurrer.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
A. Specific Pleading Requirement

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.21-105.29

[Reserved]

§§ 105.21[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.30

§ 105.30 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Intentional Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THE CLAIMED FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATION OF A MATERIAL FACT.

A. Deceit Defined. A deceit is the suggestion as a fact of something that is not true by one who does not believe it to be true or the assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true (Civ. Code § 1710(1), (2)).

B. Deceit Must Be Pleaded. A claimed fraudulent representation must be pleaded to be relied on in a pleading based on fraud (Mayer v. Mayer (1929) 207 Cal. 685, 694, 279 P. 783).

C. Misrepresentation of Material Fact Required. A complaint setting forth fraud must show that the defendant made a false representation of a material fact (Hill v. Wrather (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 823-824, 323 P.2d 567).

D. Test of Materiality. A misrepresentation is not material unless either the plaintiff would not have acted as he or she did without it or it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose for which the plaintiff acted (Adkins v. Wyckoff (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 684, 689, 313 P.2d 592 ; Handley v. Handley (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 742, 746, 3 Cal. Rptr. 910).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed either to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of these points and authorities is that the pleadings fail to allege, or evidence fails to establish, the claimed fraudulent representation of a material fact.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or a motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or the proof.

These points and authorities may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief or to support a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in a case of objection by demurrer involving a pleading requirement, counsel should argue that the opposing party's conduct does not constitute an actionable deceit or misrepresentation because it is not a misrepresentation of material fact.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or other challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms relating to the most common proceedings for challenging the sufficiency of pleading or proof (demurrer or motion for summary judgment), see respectively California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch 269, Fraud and Deceit , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender). For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities to combine with this form see § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq.], which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms. For references to chapters relating to other potential procedural contexts, see § 105.04[1].

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deceit Defined

Civ. Code § 1710(1), (2) defines deceit as the suggestion as a fact of something that is not true by one who does not believe it to be true or the assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true.

[b] Deceit Must Be Pleaded

In Mayer v. Mayer (1929) 207 Cal. 685 , the Supreme Court reversed a decree annulling a marriage in a case in which the wife contended that she had been induced to marry by representations her spouse allegedly made before the marriage concerning his age and former military service. However, the Court observed that the complaint made no reference to fraudulent representations of age and military service as grounds for the annulment. On this issue, the Court concluded that it is the general rule that fraudulent representations must be pled to be relied on. Because the evidence, as a matter of law, impelled a finding that the defendant did not go through with the ceremony with the fraudulent intention of not consummating the marriage, the trial court's decree was reversed (207 Cal. 685, 694).

[c] Misrepresentation of Material Fact Required

In Hill v. Wrather (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 323 P.2d 567 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court judgment for the plaintiff after sustaining the plaintiffs' demurrer in a case in which the defendants' cross complaint was found to have failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The cross complaint pleaded fraud in that the defendants were induced to enter into two related transactions in reliance on the plaintiffs' alleged representations that they were not married to each other and that. by virtue of those representations and the concealment of plaintiffs' intimate relationship, the defendants thought they were dealing with two independent individuals whose relationship was purely a business one. The defendants alleged that if they had known the plaintiffs' true relationship, they would not have entered into the transactions involved. In ruling that the cross complaint did not state a cause of action because its allegations failed to establish detriment by the defendants, the court noted that a pleading alleging fraud must show, among others matter, a false representation of fact made by the representor. The plaintiffs' allegedly concealed and misrepresented relationship had to be regarded as wholly collateral and immaterial because it had no bearing on the value of what the defendants bargained for. A false representation that cannot possibly affect the intrinsic merits of a business transaction must necessarily be immaterial because reliance on it cannot produce injury in a legal sense (158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 823-824) .

[d] Test of Materiality

In Adkins v. Wyckoff (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 684 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment denying the plaintiff's claim for damages for fraud because the representations the plaintiff relied on did not concern a material fact. The plaintiff and the defendant had entered into a partnership for the purpose of carrying on an advertising business. The plaintiff asserted that prior to the formation of the partnership, the defendant had represented that his business was operating at a profit, but that, in fact, the net working assets of the business were actually worth substantially less than the amount represented by the defendant. However, it appeared that the plaintiff remained with the firm for eight or nine months following his investigation of the facts, accepted his salary, and made no complaint of fraud. It also appeared that the real basis for the plaintiff's dissatisfaction with the business was personality differences between the two partners. Even assuming that the defendant misrepresented the profits of the business, which the court found questionable, the plaintiff's conduct and testimony demonstrated that the representation was not a material inducement to his entering into the contract. To make out a cause of actionable fraud, it must appear that the alleged false representation was of a material fact, and to be material the representation must be such that the contract would not have been entered into without it (152 Cal. App. 2d 684, 689).

In Handley v. Handley (1960) 179 Cal. App. 2d 742, 3 Cal. Rptr. 910 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment granting the plaintiff an annulment of his marriage. The complaint alleged that the marriage was induced by the fraud of the defendant in that she secretly had no intention of adopting the plaintiff's name, residing with him, making known to friends or others the fact of the marriage, or providing the plaintiff with the usual companionship inherent in the marital state. On the issue of fraud as a ground for annulment, the court stated that the fraud must relate to a matter that the state deems vital to the marriage relationship. The fact represented or suppressed, the court ruled, is material if it relates to a matter of substance and directly affects the purpose of the party who was deceived in entering into the contract. The deceived party may be relieved from the contract on proof that the deceived party would not have entered into it if that party had known the facts and if performance of the contract would give that party substantially less than he or she bargained for (179 Cal. App. 2d 742, 746) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Deceit Must Be Pleaded

In Scafidi v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 165 P.2d 260 , discussed in § 105.10[4], the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the defendants in an action that was characterized as one based on fraud, finding that the complaint was deficient for failing to allege among other matters, that the defendants ever made any representation. It is a general rule, noted the court, that fraudulent representations must be pleaded to be relied on (72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 558) .

In Mason v. Drug, Inc. (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 697, 88 P.2d 929 , discussed in § 105.10[3][a], the court of appeal ruled that a complaint that failed to set forth, among other matters, the representations that the plaintiff claimed constituted fraudulent misrepresentations by agents of a corporate defendant failed to state facts sufficient to charge the corporate defendant (31 Cal. App. 2d 697, 703) .

[b] Misrepresentation of Material Fact Required

In Adkins v. Wyckoff (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 684, 313 P.2d 592 , discussed in § 105.30[3][d], the court of appeal noted that to make out a case of actionable fraud, it must appear that the alleged false representation was of a material fact (152 Cal. App. 2d 684, 689) .

[c] Test of Materiality

In Wennerholm v. Stanford Univ. Sch. of Med. (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 713, 128 P.2d 522 , the Supreme Court ruled that it is unnecessary for the representations relied on in an action for fraud to be the sole cause of the damage. If they are a substantial factor in inducing the plaintiff to act, even though the plaintiff also relies in part of the advice of others, reliance is sufficiently shown (20 Cal. 2d 713, 717) .

In Hill v. Wrather (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 323 P.2d 567 , discussed in § 105.30[3][c], the court of appeal ruled that the allegedly concealed and misrepresented relationship between the plaintiffs (cross defendants) was wholly collateral and immaterial because it had no bearing on the value of what the defendant (cross complainant) had bargained for. A false representation that cannot possibly affect the intrinsic merits of a business transaction must necessarily be immaterial because reliance on it cannot produce injury in a legal sense (158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 824) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.31

§ 105.31 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof That Representation Was False When Made

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT DEFENDANT MADE A REPRESENTATION THAT WAS FALSE AT THE TIME IT WAS MADE.

Representation Was Not False When Made. To establish an action for fraud and deceit, the plaintiff/cross complainant must allege or establish facts sufficient to show a representation that was false at the time it was made (Davis v. Rite-Lite Sales Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 675, 680-681, 67 P.2d 1039 ; Kerr v. Rose (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 265 Cal. Rptr. 597).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege or the evidence fails to establish that the representation was false when it was made.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation Was Not False When Made

In Davis v. Rite-Lite Sales Co. (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 675, 67 P.2d 1039 , discussed in § 105.10[4][b], the Supreme Court held that a complaint was defective and vulnerable to general and special demurrers because, among other matters, there was no allegation that the representations complained of were false when made. The complaint alleged that the plaintiff was induced to buy stock in the defendant's firm in August 1927, when the defendant represented to the plaintiff that his firm had been organized to handle the exclusive sale of a spotlight under an arrangement with a manufacturing firm that allegedly owned the patent to the spotlight. It was also alleged that in February 1929, a federal court order restrained the defendant from manufacturing or selling the spotlight. However, the Court found that from all that appeared in the complaint, the patent rights may have been the property of the manufacturing firm by arrangement with the firm that actually owned the patent and that the injunction might have been granted for reasons occurring after the sale of stock to the plaintiff (8 Cal. 2d 675, 679-681) .

In Kerr v. Rose (1990) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1551 , an employee had agreed to accept a layoff, subject to possible rehiring within two years, but the employee was not rehired within that period. The employee sued his former employer, alleging several causes of action, including fraud. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment against the plaintiff with respect to the cause of action in fraud because it was based on representations made to plaintiff before the layoff, stating that there were no comparable positions available prior to his layoff and that he was eligible for full reinstatement within two years, both of which representations were true at that time (216 Cal. App. 3d 1551, 1564-1565) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representation Was Not False When Made

In Magpali v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 55 Cal. Rptr. 2d 225 , plaintiff brought an action for fraud arising out of his tenure as an insurance agent for defendant. The complaint included several different allegations of fraud, including that defendant falsely represented that plaintiff would be permitted to run his office as he saw fit. The trial court ruled that the evidence did not establish that fraud had been perpetrated, and entered a defense motion for nonsuit. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that a promise of future conduct is actionable as fraud only if made without a present intent to perform. Evidence other than subsequent nonperformance is required to prove the defendant's intent not to perform the promise. If plaintiff provides no further evidence of fraudulent intent than proof of nonperformance, he will never reach a jury. Noting that the evidence was uncontroverted that for years after plaintiff became an agent defendant did not interfere with his operations in any way, the court concluded that there was no evidence to support the claim that the alleged promise was false when made (48 Cal. App. 4th 471, 481) .

Scafidi v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 165 P.2d 260 , is discussed in § 105.10[4][b].

In McDougall v. Roberts (1919) 43 Cal. App. 553 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendants after it denied permission to the plaintiff to file a third amended complaint for fraud on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. In the first count, the alleged misrepresentation was that if the plaintiff did not sell certain stock to the defendants, he would be subjected to criminal prosecution, but the complaint did not allege that this statement was untrue. In the second count, the alleged misrepresentation was that the defendants stated that it was in the plaintiff's best interest that he dispose of all his real property, but there was no allegation that this statement was untrue. The third count alleged a representation that the plaintiff was about to be indicted, but, again, it was not alleged that the statement was untrue. Assuming that the representations were actionable misrepresentations, rather than mere expressions of opinion, the court ruled that it is essential to a plea of false representation that it be alleged to be untrue. Accordingly, it was concluded that the three counts failed to state a cause of action (43 Cal. App. 553, 556-557).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.32

§ 105.32 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof That Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] KNOWLEDGE OR BELIEF ON THE PART OF THE DEFENDANT AS TO THE FALSITY OF THE DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATION.

A. Intentional Deceit Defined. [See § 105.30 et seq., Paragraph A].

B. Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity. A pleading alleging fraud that fails to state knowledge or belief on the part of the representer that the representation is false does not state sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action (California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268, 272, 101 P.2d 74 ; Hill v. Wrather (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 823, 323 P.2d 567).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege, or the evidence fails to establish, knowledge or belief on the part of the defendant as to the falsity of the defendant's representation.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Deceit Defined

Civ. Code § 1710(1), (2) defines deceit as the suggestion as a fact of something that is not true by one who does not believe it to be true or the assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true.

[b] Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

California Trust Co. v. Gustason (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 268, 101 P.2d 74 , is discussed in § 105.10[3][c].

In Hill v. Wrather (1958) 158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 323 P.2d 567 , discussed in § 105.30[3][c], the defendants' cross complaint failed to state a cause of action because the allegations of the cross complaint failed to establish that the defendants had suffered any detriment as a result of the claimed fraud. The court stated that a pleading alleging fraud, must show a false representation of fact made by the representer, knowledge or belief on the part of the representer that the representation is false, an intention to induce the representee to act or refrain from acting in reliance on the misrepresentation, reasonable reliance on the misrepresentation by the representee in taking action or refraining from it, and damage to the representee resulting from that reliance (158 Cal. App. 2d 818, 823) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant Lacked Knowledge or Belief of Falsity

In Padgett v. Phariss (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 373 , the court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment in favor of real estate agents who had failed to inform plaintiffs, the purchaser of residence in a planned unit development, of construction defects in the common area. Plaintiff's contended that the agents had a duty to ask the homeowner's association about such defects, and that the failure to disclose information about a pending construction defect lawsuit constituted misrepresentation. The agents made showings that they had no knowledge of the defects or of the pending litigation. The court agreed with the trial court conclusion that the agents had no duty to investigate beyond a diligent visual inspection. Since plaintiff failed to show that the agents had any further information, other than by speculating that they must have known more than they said, the trial court did not err in granting summary judgment (54 Cal. App. 4th 1270, 1284) .

In Morrell v. Clark (1951) 106 Cal. App. 2d 198, 234 P.2d 774 , the court of appeal held that the plaintiff's pleading of fraud was insufficient, although it upheld the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff on other grounds. The plaintiff had entered into an automobile dealership agreement with the defendant, who had secured the exclusive right to sell the automobiles involved within California. The complaint alleged that the defendant had represented to the plaintiff that the plaintiff could expect a demonstrator automobile within a stated time, that the plaintiff could expect more within a few months after that, and that the automobiles were sufficiently designed and tested to go into production. It was alleged that the representations were false, but it was not alleged that the defendant knew that they were false or that the defendant did not have reason to believe that they were true. Accordingly, the court ruled that the pleading of fraud was not sufficient (106 Cal. App. 2d 198, 201-202) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.33

§ 105.33 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Statement of Opinion, Not Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT WAS ONE OF MERE OPINION, NOT FACT.

Statement of Opinion Is Not Fraud. The statement of a mere opinion may not justifiably be relied on as the basis for a cause of action for fraud and deceit (Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 569, 203 P.2d 758 ; Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

[These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that a statement of opinion is not fraud in specific instances. See § 105.34 et seq.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or the evidence establishes, that the defendant's statement was one of mere opinion, not fact.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

They may also be combined with points and authorities contending that a statement of opinion is not fraud in specific instances [see § 105.34 et seq.].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statement of Opinion Is Not Fraud

In Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 203 P.2d 758 , the first cause of action charged that the defendant's agent fraudulently misrepresented that the truck the plaintiff had purchased was in good mechanical condition, whereas shortly after the plaintiff took possession of the truck, he learned that the motor was not suitable for the truck's operation. The alleged fraud was predicated on the contention, among others, that the agent made express representations about the truck's condition. In affirming the trial court's judgment, the Supreme Court observed that ample evidence was offered at the trial to support the judgment for the defendant on that cause of action. The only statement of the defendant's agent about the truck's condition was that "it should be in good condition" and apparently was made because the defendant had recently spent nearly $3,000 having it repaired. The Court stated that this statement was the agent's mere opinion, based on expenditures for repairs, and did not form a basis for a cause of action (33 Cal. 2d 564, 569) .

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977 , is discussed in § 105.200[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statement of Opinion Is Not Fraud

In Rendell v. Scott (1886) 70 Cal. 514, 11 P. 779 , the Supreme Court sustained a general demurrer to a cross complaint seeking to set aside a contract for the sale of certain farm land on the ground of fraud. The Court found that it the statement by the plaintiff and cross defendant--that the land involved was the best ranch in the valley, very rich and productive, capable of producing 50 bushels of wheat per acre, and enhanced by portions of both good alfalfa land and rich mineral deposits--was an opinion. Accordingly, the Court concluded that the cross complainant should have exercised his own judgment and was not entitled to relief (70 Cal. 514, 514-515) .

In Lease & Rental Mgmt. Corp. v. Arrowhead Cent. Credit Union (2005) 126 Cal. App. 4th 1052, 24 Cal. Rptr. 3d 483 , a lender sought credit references from a credit union before lending money to a business that was a member of the credit union. On three occasions, the lender sent a general, one-page questionnaire to the credit union seeking any information that the credit union could provide about the member's credit history. On these three occasions, different employees responded to the questionnaires and suggested that the member's credit history was "satisfactory." The lender loaned money to the business, which subsequently encountered financial trouble and filed for bankruptcy. The lender suffered $900,000 in losses and sued the credit union for fraud and negligence for suggesting that the business's credit history was satisfactory, even though the business had an extensive history of checking overdrafts. The court of appeal held that under the circumstances, the credit union was not liable for providing their opinion that the business's credit history was satisfactory. The court noted that the questionnaires provided by the lender were very general, couched in the form of a checklist, which credit union employees answered, and that the lender did not seek more specific information. Although the business did maintain almost constant overdrafts, these checks amounted to less than one percent of the checks processed on the account by the credit union, the business always covered those overdrafts, and the credit union was used to dealing with these overdrafts and considered the business's credit to be satisfactory when they responded to the lender's inquiries. Under these facts, given that the lender did not seek more specific information, the actions of the credit union did not constitute fraud or negligence (126 Cal. App. 4th 1052, 1061) .

In Pacesetter Homes, Inc. v. Brodkin (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 85 Cal. Rptr. 39 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment against a cross complainant on his claim for damages for alleged fraud in inducing his purchase of a duplex apartment house because the representations involved were neither representations of existing facts nor the type of opinion on which actionable fraud can be founded. The record disclosed that although the plaintiff's agents had told the cross complainant that the units would rent for specified amounts, they also stated that the building would be an excellent investment "if" he received the rents "as we contemplate." The court of appeal was justified in construing the fair meaning of the statements as those of opinion and not an unqualified representation of what those rentals would be. That construction, said the court of appeal, precluded the treatment of those statements as positive assertions within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1572(2) or as an assertion of fact within the meaning of Civ. Code § 1710, in the absence of exceptional circumstances that would result in the expression of opinion being treated as a misrepresentation. These exceptional circumstances include the following situations: (1) the one expressing the opinion does not in fact entertain it; (2) the opinion amplifies false representations of facts; (3) the opinion is expressed in a manner implying a factual basis that does not exist; (4) the opinion is expressed as a fact; or (5) one with superior knowledge expresses the opinion (5 Cal. App. 3d 206, 210-211) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.34

§ 105.34 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Seller's Statement of Opinion With Disclosure

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE DEFENDANT SELLER'S STATEMENTS WERE MERE OPINION, WERE MADE TO PLAINTIFF BUYER WHILE THE PARTIES WERE DEALING AT ARM'S LENGTH, AND WITH THE STATEMENTS OF OPINION DEFENDANT DISCLOSED THE INFORMATION ON WHICH THE STATEMENTS WERE BASED.

Seller's Statement of Opinion With Disclosure Is Not Fraud. A seller's statements of mere opinion to a buyer dealing at arm's length do not constitute fraud and deceit if the seller discloses the information on which those statements are based to the buyer along with the statements of opinion (Gleason v. McPherson (1917) 175 Cal. 594, 598, 166 P. 332).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or the evidence establishes, that the defendant seller's statements of opinion were made with a proper disclosure and therefore were not fraud.

This form of points and authorities should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that a statement of opinion is not fraud [see § 105.33].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Seller's Statement of Opinion With Disclosure Is Not Fraud

In Gleason v. McPherson (1917) 175 Cal. 594 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment granting the defendants' motion for nonsuit in an action for damages allegedly caused by the defendants' false representations regarding the purchase of certain bonds. The defendants' statements--that money invested in the bonds would be safe, that the bonds were "gilt-edged security," that they would command ready sale, that they were a good investment, and that the interest and principal would be duly paid--were all statements of the defendants' respective opinions. One of the defendants expressly stated to the plaintiff that he had investigated all the available sources of information about the bonds and that two letters, which were shown to the plaintiff, were the result of that investigation. This defendant did not profess to have other means of knowledge. The Court stated that expressions of mere opinions of this character by a seller to a buyer dealing at arm's length did not constitute fraud if the information on which the opinions are based is disclosed to the buyer along with the statement of the opinions (175 Cal. 594, 598).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.35

§ 105.35 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Show Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATION WAS MERELY THE STATEMENT OF A LEGAL OPINION BY A PERSON WHO IS NOT AN ATTORNEY.

A. Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney. A statement of legal opinion by a person who is not an attorney cannot constitute actionable fraud, and a pleading seeking relief on the ground of fraud as the result of such an opinion does not state a cause of action (Orange County Rock Prod. Co. v. Cook Bros. Equip. Co. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 698, 700-701, 55 Cal. Rptr. 265).

[Optional] B. Statement of Law Absent Confidential Relationship. A plaintiff may not recover in an action for fraud and deceit if the alleged misrepresentations by one who has no confidential relationship with the plaintiff are but expressions of opinion or statements of law based on facts known to both alike (Smith v. Brown (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 836, 838, 140 P.2d 86).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or the evidence establishes, that the defendant's representation was merely the statement of a legal opinion by a person who is not an attorney.

Optional Paragraph B may be added to contend that the opinion was expressed in the absence of any confidential relationship or position of trust.

This form of points and authorities should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that a statement of opinion is not fraud [see § 105.33].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In particular, § 105.53 contends that a person who is not an attorney, but who gives a legal opinion, may be liable for fraud if he or she is in a position of trust or purports to have knowledge.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

In Orange County Rock Prod. Co. v. Cook Bros. Equip Co. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 698 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the dependants in an action for damages based on an alleged fraudulent representation that charges plaintiffs paid under certain rental agreements would be deductible for state and federal income tax purposes. The court stated that standing alone, this representation would not be a basis for a fraud action because a legal opinion by a lay person cannot constitute the basis of recovery for fraud. Although the plaintiffs also claimed the existence of other facts that would justify their reliance on the defendants' statements and constitute a cause of action for fraud, any such action was barred by the statute of limitations (246 Cal. App. 2d 698, 700-701).

[b] Statement of Law Absent Confidential Relationship

In Smith v. Brown (1943) 59 Cal. App. 2d 836, 140 P.2d 86 , the court of appeal reversed judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for damages for fraudulent misrepresentations because the judgment had no evidentiary support. The complaint alleged, among other matters, that the defendant had represented, with respect to certain property being traded to the plaintiffs that it was free and clear of encumbrances and that there was no cloud on the title except for back taxes. The court of appeal noted that the property was encumbered, but that the defendant had exhibited both the note and the mortgage to the plaintiffs and informed them that she had legal advice that the lien of the mortgage had been lost because the statute of limitations had run on the note. The court also noted that the plaintiffs had then consulted the same attorney that the defendant had consulted. To recover for fraud, the representee must have relied on the representation. Recovery is not permitted if the representee makes his or her own investigation, discovers the true facts, and acts without reliance on the representations. Nor may the representee recover if the alleged misrepresentations by one occupying no confidential relationship toward the representee are but expressions of opinion or statements of law based on facts known to both alike (59 Cal. App. 2d 836, 838).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney

In Haviland v. Southern Cal. Edison Co. (1916) 172 Cal. 601 , the Supreme Court reversed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in a personal injury action because the plaintiff had executed a full release and because the statements made to induce him to do so were a nonactionable statements of law by someone who was not an attorney. The plaintiff had executed the release of his claim for damages for severe injuries in return for the payment of $42 following statements by the defendant's employee that the plaintiff had to sign the paper to stay on the payroll, but that the signature was not binding and merely a matter of form. The Supreme Court concluded that the statements were not statements of fact but were, at most, misrepresentations of law. It is well settled, the Court stated, that such misrepresentations, at least where there is no relationship of trust or confidence between the parties, do not amount to fraud. The Court observed that whether or not the rule's true basis is that everyone is presumed, or, rather, bound, to know the law or is that a representation regarding the law constitutes an expression of opinion on which the party to whom it is addressed has no right to rely, the rule itself is well settled (172 Cal. 601, 607-609) .

In Agnew v. Foell (1952) 113 Cal. App. 2d 575 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the defendants in an action for damages for misrepresentation. The plaintiff had sold certain property, but before escrow closed in that transaction she learned that the buyer had resold the property for a higher price. She sought the advice of her banker, one of the defendants, as to whether she could be released from the transaction. Her banker advised her that she would have to complete the sale and that if she tried to withdraw, she would be sued. The banker denied having advised her that she was legally bound to proceed with the sale. The court noted, however, that if such advice had been given, it would have been in accord with the law. Furthermore, the court ruled, a lay person's legal opinion cannot constitute the basis of recovery for fraud (113 Cal. App. 2d 575, 577).

[b] Statement of Law Absent Confidential Relationship

In Rheingans v. Smith (1911) 161 Cal. 362, 119 P. 494 , the Supreme Court reversed both the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff and its denial of the defendant's motion for a new trial in an action for rescission of a contract for fraud. It appeared from the evidence and the pleadings that the plaintiff had relied on the defendant's statement that a certain option agreement executed by the plaintiff had expired and that he was free to contract for the sale of his property with the defendant. The Court found that this statement was a mere opinion on a question of law based on facts known to both parties. Such an opinion by one occupying no confidential relationship toward the person to whom it is addressed does not justify the person's reliance on it and does not suffice to support a charge of fraudulent misrepresentation (161 Cal. 362, 365) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.36

§ 105.36 Misrepresentation of Omission Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Speculation About Future Events

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATION CONSISTED OF MERE SPECULATION OR PREDICTION REGARDING FUTURE EVENTS.

Speculation Concerning Future Events. A representation as to a future event is classified as a speculative observation and a statement of mere opinion, and, as such, does not constitute a basis for a complaint of fraud (Everts v. Matteson (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 437, 451, 132 P.2d 476).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or the evidence establishes, that the defendant's representation consisted of mere speculation or prediction regarding future events.

This form of points and authorities should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.30[2][a]].

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that a statement of opinion is not fraud [see § 105.33].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.30[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.50 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In particular, § 105.54 contends that the prediction regarding a future event was intended and accepted as a representation of fact and involves matters peculiarly within the speaker's knowledge.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Speculation Concerning Future Events

In Everts v. Matteson (1942) 21 Cal. 2d 437 , the Supreme Court reversed judgment for the plaintiff in an action to recover a deficiency resulting from a sale under a trust deed from the party obligated to pay the underlying debt, but it ruled that a misrepresentation alleged as a defense was a mere speculative observation that could not form a basis for a complaint of fraud or estoppel. The defendants had sold certain property to the other defendants, the appellants in this case. They deposited in escrow their deed reciting that the property was sold, and the note was assigned to the plaintiff, who sued the defendants and their purchaser, the appellants. As one of their defenses, the appellants claimed that the plaintiff, an officer of the lender, had induced them to execute the note and trust deed by telling them that they would never be liable to pay a deficiency judgment because the property would have to be bid at its appraised value, which would not be less than the balance due on the note. As to that representation, however, the Supreme Court ruled that a representation of what property will be worth at a date about two and one-half years in the future must be classified as a speculative observation and a statement of mere opinion, and, as such, does not constitute a basis for a complaint of fraud or estoppel (21 Cal. 2d 437, 451).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Speculation Concerning Future Events

In Ayers v. Southern P. R. Co. (1916) 173 Cal. 74, 159 P. 144 , the Supreme Court reversed a trial court's judgment against the defendant on a complaint stating causes of action for damages arising from the defendant's failure to prevent the sale of liquor in a town that the defendant developed. As part of the development publicity, the defendant had held out to the public that liquor would never be sold in the town. The Court noted that there was no allegation in the complaint that the statement was made as a promise or agreement. Literally, the allegation meant only that the defendant had made the statement as merely an opinion or prophecy. In neither case, said the Court, would such a statement constitute either a binding contract or warranty that future events would occur according to the prophecy or a basis for an action (173 Cal. 74, 79) .

In Lloyd v. Kehl (1901) 132 Cal. 107 , the Supreme Court affirmed a trial court's judgment for the defendant in an action based on fraudulent misrepresentation on the ground that the misrepresentations relied on were of matters of mere opinion or speculations as to what might be developed in the future. The defendant sought to sell water rights to the plaintiff and had represented that by building a new flume and ditch and using a new wheel and certain other new appliances, a certain amount of horsepower could be developed from the stream's water. This, said the Supreme Court, was a mere speculative opinion that was not actionable under the most extreme authorities (132 Cal. 107, 111-112) .

In Finch v. McKee (1936) 18 Cal. App. 2d 90, 62 P.2d 1380 , the court of appeal ruled that a real estate seller's representation that the building involved in the sale would withstand earthquake shock was a expression of mere opinion that did not furnish grounds for damages in a suit for fraud and deceit. The mere statement that the building in question was constructed to be earthquake proof, said the court, is a matter of pure speculation or prophecy on which no purchaser had a right to rely (18 Cal. App. 2d 90, 93-94) .

In Zeh v. Alameda Cmty. Hotel Corp. (1932) 122 Cal. App. 366, 10 P.2d 190 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant after sustaining a demurrer to the second amended complaint based on alleged fraudulent misrepresentations made in connection with a stock purchase subscription. The complaint alleged that the defendant represented that certain preferred stock provided for the payment of interest at a stated percentage and that if the plaintiff would invest a certain sum for this stock, the issuer would pay interest on that investment at a stated rate. The court of appeal noted that as a general rule, statements made to persons to induce them to subscribe for stock that relate to the stock's future earnings, expected profits, dividends, or the successful conduct of its business are matters of mere opinion, on which the subscribers have no right to rely. Moreover, even if they prove to have been false when made or made with no expectation of their ever being realized, they furnish no ground for rescission of the subscription contract, This rule, the court said, is based on the fundamental principle that predictions as to future events are ordinarily regarded as nonactionable expressions of opinion. The law does not prohibit prophesying the expression of sanguine business hopes and beliefs in events to come (122 Cal. App. 366, 368) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.37-105.49

[Reserved]

§§ 105.37[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.50

§ 105.50 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows False Opinion Made to One Entitled to Rely

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE RELIANCE ON AN ALLEGED STATEMENT OF OPINION, BECAUSE DEFENDANT MADE A FALSE STATEMENT TO ONE ENTITLED TO RELY ON IT.

A. False Belief in Opinion. Because an expression of an opinion, if honestly made, is an expression of what the speaker believes to be a fact, the speaker practices deceit by expressing a dishonest opinion to one entitled to rely on it, and an action lies for resulting injury and damages (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 430, 159 P.2d 958 ; Edward Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 573, 126 P. 351).

B. False Assertion of Opinion as Fact. A statement of opinion is actionable if it is (1) made as a positive affirmation of fact, (2) intended as such by the party making it, (3) false and known to be false by the person making it, and (4) relied on by the person to whom it is made (Willson v. Municipal Bond Co. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 144, 151, 59 P.2d 974).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant is liable for fraud despite the assertion that the representation was a statement of opinion, because the statement was not mere opinion, but was a false opinion. In other words, the defendant's statement was both false in fact and false in the sense that the defendant had no sincere or reasonable belief that it was true, and the plaintiff was entitled to rely on the statement.

An example of the fraud contended in this form would be a case in which (1) the plaintiff lacked an opportunity to inspect property, (2) the defendant made statements concerning the value of the property that were made as actual facts rather than matters of mere opinion, and (3) the plaintiff justifiable relied on those statements.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or to matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For related legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] False Belief in Opinion

In Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , the Supreme Court ruled that representations concerning the value of certain stock constituted actionable fraud despite the defendants' contention that the representations expressed opinion rather than fact. The Court reiterated that bearing in mind that an expression of an opinion, if honestly made, is an expression of what the speaker believes to be a fact, one practices deceit by expressing a dishonest opinion to one entitled to rely on it, injury may result, and an action will lie. To avoid an action for deceit, an expression of an opinion must be the expression of an opinion honestly entertained by the person making it. Citing Restatement Torts § 525, Comment b, the Court noted that a representation of the state of mind of the maker or of a third person is a misrepresentation if the state of mind in question is other than as represented. Thus, a statement that a particular person, whether the maker of the statement or a third person, is of a particular opinion is a misrepresentation if the person in question does not hold the opinion asserted (26 Cal. 2d 412, 430) .

In Edward Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 126 P. 351 , the Supreme Court reversed judgment for the defendant in an action for damages for fraud and deceit, following the sustaining of a general demurrer. The Court held that the complaint's allegation of fraud consisting of a false statement of opinion set forth facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The complaint alleged that the defendant had represented himself as a skilled architect and designer and had represented that the maximum cost of the building the plaintiff desired to build would not exceed a stated figure. The Court noted that the plaintiff employed the defendant because of the false representations of the defendant's skill and knowledge and was justified in relying on those representations. As to the statement regarding the maximum cost of the building, the Court noted that it is generally true that an action for deceit cannot be founded on the expression of mere opinion. However, the qualifications and modifications of this general rule are as important as the rule itself. Bearing in mind that an expression of an opinion, if honestly made, is an expression of what the speaker believes to be a fact, the expression of a dishonest opinion to one entitled to rely on it is deceit, injury may result, and an action will lie. Whenever a party states a matter that might otherwise be only an opinion and does not state it as the expression of his or her mere opinion, but affirms it as an existing fact material to the transaction so that the other party may reasonably treat it as a fact and rely and act on it as such, then the statement clearly becomes an affirmation of fact within the meaning of the general rule and may be a fraudulent misrepresentation. Therefore, the Court concluded, it is legally a matter of indifference whether the matters alleged are considered the expression of an opinion or the representation of a fact. If it were the expression of an opinion, the complaint showed that it was not the expression of an honest opinion but was dishonestly made with the defendant's knowledge of its falsity, and its influence in inducing the plaintiff to employ the defendant could not be denied (163 Cal. 561, 573) .

[b] False Assertion of Opinion as Fact

In Willson v. Municipal Bond Co. (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 144 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for fraud in connection with statements as to the value of certain bonds given in payment to the plaintiff for certain real property. The bonds had no market value and could not have been sold at any price, although they were represented as worth 100 cents on the dollar and having value sufficient to pay for the plaintiff's property. The defendants contended that the statements, even if false, were expressions of mere opinion and, as such, not actionable. The Court stated that the determination as to whether a particular statement is an expression of opinion or an affirmation of a fact is often difficult and frequently is dependent on the facts and circumstances existing when the statement is made. If a statement about value is made as a positive affirmation of a fact and is intended as such by the party making it, if that statement is false and is known to be false by the person making it, and if that statement is relied on by the person to whom it is made, then that false statement is actionable. The Court noted that although there might be doubt as to whether or not the representation that the bonds were worth 100 cents on the dollar, standing alone, constituted an affirmation of fact, all such doubt disappeared when this representation was considered in connection with a statement that a bank would lend over 30 percent of the face value of the bonds (a fraudulent statement) (7 Cal. 2d 144, 151).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] False Belief in Opinion

In Ogier v. Pacific Oil & Gas Dev. Corp. (1955) 132 Cal. App. 2d 496 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal on sustaining the defendant's general demurrers to a complaint, holding that the allegations of fraud consisting of false representations of opinion were actionable. The complaint alleged statements by the defendant that lands involved in the transaction were potential oil lands, a good buy, and worth the price asked. These statements were within an exception to the rule that expressions of opinion are not actionable. Under this exception, an expression of opinion is actionable if the party expressing it does not honestly entertain that opinion. In this case, the plaintiff alleged that the defendant did not believe his representation to be true, thus making his opinion a dishonest one (132 Cal. App. 2d 496, 506).

[b] False Assertion of Opinion as Fact

In Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , the plaintiff alleged that the defendant had misrepresented the depth of fill on certain real property after having drilled test holes and examined the soil. The defendant contended that even if his statement was erroneous, it was not a misrepresentation of fact, but only a statement of opinion that could not form the basis of an action for deceit. The Supreme Court pointed out that the defendant had not given the statement as an opinion but as a representation of fact. His assertion was not a casual expression of belief, but was a deliberate affirmation of the matters stated and was thus within Civ. Code § 1710(2) as an assertion "as a fact" of that which was not true (43 Cal. 2d 481, 487-489) .

In Neff v. Engler (1928) 205 Cal. 484 , the Supreme Court affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in a case based on fraudulent representation concerning the value of certain stock. The alleged misrepresentation was that the stock was worth a specified amount and that the defendants were receiving and had been paid specified dividends, whereas it appeared that the stock was practically worthless. The Court stated that matters that might otherwise be only expressions of opinion, if stated as accomplished facts by one of the parties to a contract and accepted and relied on by the other as such, may, and often do, become the basis of actions for fraudulent misrepresentation (205 Cal. 484, 489-490).

In Harris v. Miller (1925) 196 Cal. 8, 235 P. 981 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in a case involving allegations of fraud in the sale of an orange grove. The real estate agent's statement about the value of the crop of oranges still on the trees was a statement of fact in light of evidence that the plaintiff had no knowledge or experience in raising oranges. The Court noted that it is the general and well-settled rule that if a representation concerning the subject matter of a transaction that ordinarily might be only the expression of an opinion is asserted as an existing fact, material to the transaction, and has a reasonable tendency to induce one of the parties to the transaction to consider and rely on the representation as a fact, the statement then becomes an assertion of an existing fact (196 Cal. 8, 13) .

In Edward Barron Estate Co. v. Woodruff Co. (1912) 163 Cal. 561, 126 P. 351 , discussed in § 105.50[3][1], the Supreme Court ruled that a complaint that alleged fraud consisting of a false statement of an opinion set forth facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action. The Court added that whenever a party states a matter that might otherwise be only an opinion but affirms it as an existing fact material to the transaction so that the other party may reasonably treat it as a fact and rely and act on it as such, the statement clearly becomes an affirmation of fact and may be a fraudulent misrepresentation (163 Cal. 561, 573) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.51

§ 105.51 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Statement of Opinion Coupled With False Representation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE RELIANCE ON AN ALLEGED STATEMENT OF OPINION, BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT WAS COUPLED WITH A FALSE REPRESENTATION OF FACT.

Opinion Coupled With False Representation. If a statement, which by itself may be considered mere opinion that may not become the basis of a suit for fraud, is coupled with false representations of fact that give material support to this opinion, there is actionable fraud (Friedberg v. Weissbuch (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 755, 287 P.2d 785).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant's statement was coupled with a false representation of fact.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.50[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.50[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

This form sets forth one of the exceptions to the general rule that a statement of opinion is not actionable in fraud and deceit. For forms dealing with other exceptions, see §§ 105.50 and 105.52.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion Coupled With False Representation

In Friedberg v. Weissbuch (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 287 P.2d 785 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant on the ground that the agreements that the plaintiff sued on were void for fraud and misrepresentations by the plaintiff. The plaintiff made false material representations to the defendant about the value of the real property being sold, the value of the equipment and goodwill of the business sold to the defendant, the gross return of the business, the activities of an associate, and the state of health of another associate. The court noted that the statement of the owner of property respecting its value is usually considered the expression of a mere opinion that may not become the basis of a suit for damages for fraud on that account, but if the owner of property makes a positive statement of its value, coupled with other asserted facts or circumstances such as a false representation of past income from the property, the statement may constitute competent evidence of the alleged fraudulent representations that may support a judgment for damages. The court also noted authority to the effect that if opinions are given concomitantly with statements of fact that give material support to those opinions and are expressed to people who are ignorant of the true facts, there is actionable fraud (135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 755) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.52

§ 105.52 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Opinion Coupled With Special Relationship or Knowledge

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE RELIANCE ON AN ALLEGED STATEMENT OF OPINION BY DEFENDANT, BECAUSE _____ [DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT WAS ONE MADE WITH SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE or DEFENDANT OCCUPIED A POSITION OF TRUST].

Opinion of Person With Superior Knowledge or Occupying Position of Trust. One who has been induced to enter into a transaction by fraudulent misrepresentations may have relief if he or she acted in reliance on the misrepresentations and was justified therein. One may justifiably rely on statements of mere opinion if the person stating the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of confidence and trust (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant's alleged statement of opinion was made with special knowledge or the defendant occupied a position of trust and therefore the statement provides a basis for a cause of action for fraud and deceit.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.50[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.50[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

This form sets forth one of the exceptions to the general rule that a statement of opinion is not actionable in fraud and deceit. For forms dealing with other exceptions, see §§ 105.50, 105.51, and 105.53 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion of Person With Superior Knowledge or Occupying Position of Trust

In Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment on the pleadings in favor of the defendants in an action to have a mortgage foreclosure sale set aside and to obtain other relief, because the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to establish the right to relief on the basis of a fraudulent misrepresentation. The complaint alleged that the plaintiffs were induced through representations made by the defendants' attorney to execute an oil lease to one defendant and to make no attempt to pay a mortgage debt on the property in question or to exercise the equity of redemption after a subsequent foreclosure sale. The complaint further alleged that the attorney had told the plaintiffs that as an attorney he had superior knowledge of many facts concerning the land and that they could rely on all he had to say. The Court noted that one has been induced by fraudulent misrepresentations to enter into a contract or make a conveyance may have the contract or conveyance set aside and secure restitution of the benefits lost by the transaction, if one acted in reliance on the misrepresentation was justified in that reliance. One may not justifiably rely on mere statements of opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true state of facts, unless the person stating the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of confidence and trust (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Opinion of Person With Superior Knowledge or Occupying Position of Trust

In Cohen v. S & S Constr. Co. (1983) 151 Cal. App. 3d 941, 201 Cal. Rptr. 173 , the appellate court reversed the trial court's dismissal of homeowners' action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation against the land developer and its sales agent. The plaintiffs were charged premiums for view lots that the sales agent said were protected from interferences by a Declaration of Covenants of the homeowners' association. The defendants argued that the agent's representation could not support a cause of action because it was an opinion, which is not actionable as fraud. Although acknowledging this rule, the court noted that plaintiffs' allegations were sufficient to meet the requisites of the exceptions to the rule. Situations in which an opinion may be actionable as fraud include: a party holding himself or herself out to be specially qualified to another who is so situated that he or she reasonably may rely on that superior knowledge; an opinion by a fiduciary or other trusted person; and a party's stating the opinion as an existing fact or implying facts that justify a belief in the truth of the opinion (151 Cal. App. 3d 941, 946) .

In Union Flower Mkt., Ltd. v. Southern Cal. Flower Mkt., Inc. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 671 , the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment on the pleadings for the individual defendants in an action based on a promise made without any intention of performing it, holding that the defendants' representations, including a statement of opinion, were actionable. The parties included two flower market concerns and their respective officers. The officers of the corporate defendant officers promised the officers of the corporate plaintiff that they would exert their efforts to secure the consent of their members to a consolidation of the two concerns and their memberships, representing that there could be no doubt but that the corporate defendant would receive the members of the corporate plaintiff. The corporate plaintiff, acting in reliance, surrendered its leases and ceased to function as the corporate defendant's competitor. The complaint alleged that thereafter the individual defendants refused to carry out their promise and refused to permit the corporate plaintiff's members to become members of the corporate defendant, urging the corporate defendant's members not to consent to consolidation and to refuse membership to the corporate plaintiff's members. The Court ruled that the allegations as to the promises coupled with the representation that there could be no doubt that the corporate defendant would receive the corporate plaintiff's members constituted an averment of actionable fraud. This latter representation was in a sense a statement of opinion, but a false statement of opinion fraudulently made may form the basis of an action if the party making it possesses superior knowledge or special information regarding the representation's subject matter. The Court further noted that in this case, the individual defendants, as directors, officers, and holders of a large financial interest in the corporate defendant, had superior means of ascertaining and influencing the views of the corporation's members concerning the consolidation (10 Cal. 2d 671, 675-676).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.53

§ 105.53 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Legal Opinion of Person Who Is Not Attorney Coupled With Special Relationship or Knowledge

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE RELIANCE ON AN ALLEGED STATEMENT OF A LEGAL OPINION BY A PERSON WHO IS NOT AN ATTORNEY, BECAUSE THE STATEMENT WAS MADE BY A PERSON _____ [PURPORTING TO HAVE EXPERT KNOWLEDGE CONCERNING THE MATTER or WHO OCCUPIES A POSITION OF CONFIDENCE AND TRUST].

Legal Opinion by Person Who Is Not Attorney But Is in Position of Trust or Purports to Have Expert Knowledge. One may justifiably rely on statements of opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true state of facts, if the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of confidence and trust (Harazim v. Lynam (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 127, 133, 72 Cal. Rptr. 670).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff justifiably relied on legal conclusions drawn from a true state of facts, because the defendant either purported to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupied a position of confidence and trust.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq. In particular, this form may be used counter the contention in § 105.35, which asserts that the legal opinion of a person who is not an attorney is not fraud.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.50[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.50[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

This form sets forth one of the exceptions to the general rule that a statement of opinion is not actionable in fraud and deceit. For forms dealing with other exceptions, see §§ 105.50 -105.52 and 105.54.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion by Person Who Is Not Attorney But Is in Position of Trust or Purports to Have Expert Knowledge

In Harazim v. Lynam (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 127 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment of dismissal entered after the trial court sustained general and special demurrers to the plaintiff's fourth amended complaint, holding that it was possible that the plaintiff could amend his complaint to allege facts showing that his reliance on the defendant's legal opinion was justifiable. The complaint alleged various misrepresentations consisting of legal opinions or legal conclusions by persons who were not lawyers. Standing alone, the court noted, those allegations would not suffice as actionable misrepresentations because the representations relied on must ordinarily be affirmations of fact and misrepresentations of law or legal opinions by persons who were not lawyers were insufficient. However, misrepresentations of opinion are actionable if the person making them holds himself or herself out to be specially qualified. It must appear, the court said, not only that the plaintiff acted in reliance on the misrepresentations, but that the plaintiff's reliance was justified. A plaintiff may not justifiably rely on statements of mere opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true state of facts, unless the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of confidence and trust. The court concluded that if the plaintiff in this case could amend his pleadings to alleged that the defendants held themselves out as experts or persons with superior knowledge whose statements were made as material facts, the misrepresentations alleged in the complaint would constitute a sound basis for a cause of action in fraud (267 Cal. App. 2d 127, 133).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Legal Opinion by Person Who Is Not Attorney But Is in Position of Trust or Purports to Have Expert Knowledge

In Lynch v. Cruttenden & Co. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 802, the plaintiffs alleged fraud in connection with various securities transactions. The defendants moved to compel arbitration based on arbitration provisions contained in various documents signed by the plaintiffs in connection with the transactions. The plaintiffs opposed the motion to compel arbitration on the ground that they were induced to sign the documents on the basis of fraudulent misrepresentations by one of the defendants, who was a close friend of the plaintiffs and in whom the plaintiffs had placed trust and confidence, that the documents did not affect the plaintiffs' legal rights and that there was no need for them to read the documents. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's denial of defendant's motion to compel arbitration. The court noted that a person may be found to have reasonably relied on the opinion of another person who is not a lawyer if the recipient of the opinion is in a relationship of trust and confidence with the other person or if the recipient of the opinion reasonably believes that the person giving the opinion has special knowledge or skill pertaining to the subject matter, as compared to the recipient. The court found that the plaintiffs had alleged sufficient facts to bring them within either of those circumstances (18 Cal. App. 4th 802, 808) . The court also held that the plaintiffs' failure to discover the arbitration clause by reading the documents was excused by their reliance on the trust and confidence they placed in the defendant (18 Cal. App. 4th 802, 809) .

In Regus v. Schartkoff (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 382 , the court of appeal stated the general rule that one cannot justify relying on a representation of law that is made by a person who is not a lawyer and who does not occupy a confidential relationship toward the one to whom it is addressed, if the representation is based on facts equally known or accessible to both persons. One exception, said the court, applies if the party expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter. Another exception applies if the party expressing the opinion, having had superior means of information, possesses a knowledge of the law and thereby gains an unconscionable advantage over one who is ignorant and has not been in a situation to become informed. In either of these cases, said the court, the injured party is entitled to relief predicated on the same ground as if the misrepresentation of law were a matter of fact (156 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388-389).

In Bank of Am. v. Sanchez (1934) 3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 38 P.2d 787 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant, ruling that she was not liable on a note and was entitled to have the note reformed by striking her name from it because of the plaintiff's fraud in inducing her signature on the note. The trial court found that by means of misrepresentations of law by an officer of the plaintiff, the defendant was led into a misapprehension of the law and as a result was induced to sign her name to the note. The plaintiff contended that deception as to matters of law does not amount to fraud. However, the court observed that this rule has its exceptions. One most commonly known and recognized exception applies if the parties to a contract are in a confidential or fiduciary relationship. Another applies if one who has had superior means of information possesses a knowledge of the law and thereby gains an unconscionable advantage over another, who is ignorant and has not been in a situation to become informed. In either of these cases, the injured party is entitled to relief, and in the latter case, the right to relief is predicated on the same ground as if the misrepresentations of law were matters of fact (3 Cal. App. 2d 238, 242) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.54

§ 105.54 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Predictions Intended as Representations of Fact

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE RELIANCE ON AN ALLEGED STATEMENT OF OPINION REGARDING A FUTURE EVENT, BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S STATEMENT WAS INTENDED AND ACCEPTED AS A REPRESENTATION OF FACT AND INVOLVED MATTERS PECULIARLY WITHIN DEFENDANT'S KNOWLEDGE.

Prediction Intended as Representation of Fact. The fact that predictions as to future events are ordinarily regarded as nonactionable expressions of opinion will not preclude relief on the ground of fraud if they were intended and accepted as representations of fact and involved matters peculiarly within the speaker's knowledge (Eade v. Reich (1932) 120 Cal. App. 32, 35, 7 P.2d 1043).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that despite the fact that predictions as to future events are ordinarily regarded as nonactionable expressions of opinion, a defendant may be liable for fraud if the predictions were intended and accepted as representations of fact and involved matters peculiarly within the defendant's knowledge.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.50[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary of judgment or summary adjudication, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether all of the elements of that cause of action are satisfied or whether plaintiff is in the class of persons entitled to recover.

See also § 105.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

This form sets forth one of the exceptions to the general rule that a statement of opinion is not actionable in fraud and deceit. For forms dealing with other exceptions, see §§ 105.50 -105.53.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prediction Intended as Representation of Fact

In Eade v. Reich (1932) 120 Cal. App. 32, 7 P.2d 1043 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of the defendants on their cross complaint alleging the plaintiff's fraud in connection with the sale of real property to the defendants. The cross complaint alleged that the plaintiff's agent induced the purchase by falsely representing himself to be employed by a major corporation and stating that if the defendants/cross complainants purchased the land, the corporation would lease a portion of it. In ruling for the defendants/cross complainants, the court noted that predictions as to future events are ordinarily regarded as nonactionable expressions of opinion. However, such statements will not preclude relief on the ground of fraud if they were intended and accepted as representations of fact and involved matters peculiarly within the speaker's knowledge. Thus, if one party possesses or assumes to possess superior knowledge regarding the subject matter of the representation, which knowledge is not equally open to the other party, what might otherwise be regarded as an expression of opinion may amount to an affirmation of fact (120 Cal. App. 32, 35) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prediction Intended as Representation of Fact

In Daniels v. Oldenburg (1950) 100 Cal. App. 2d 724 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the plaintiffs in an action to rescind a lease for fraud. The plaintiffs contended that the defendants had induced them to lease a motel by falsely representing to them that all the units were rented and that the plaintiffs would be able to keep them rented all the time. The representation that the plaintiffs could keep the motel rented all the time pertained to the future and could appear to be a expression of mere opinion. However, when coupled with the additional representation that all the units were rented, the statements could indicate that the defendants were renting all the units nightly to full capacity at the prices indicated and that the plaintiffs could do the same. Moreover, the court stated, the trial court could well have believed from the evidence produced that the defendants had not been and were not renting the units to capacity. This fact was known only to the defendants. Thus, the trial court had properly concluded that the representations were made not as a matter of opinion, but as fact (100 Cal. App. 2d 724, 728-729).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.55

§ 105.55 Misrepresentation or Omission Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Misrepresentation Implied by Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE THE ABSENCE OF A STATEMENT IN THE USUAL SENSE, BECAUSE THE ELEMENTS OF MISREPRESENTATION AND RELIANCE CAN BE ESTABLISHED THROUGH CONDUCT.

Misrepresentation May Be Implied by Conduct. A misrepresentation need not be oral, but may be implied by conduct (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1567, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that there may be recovery for fraud and deceit if a misrepresentation is implied by defendant's conduct.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.50[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.50[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities asserting that plaintiff may justifiably rely on a misrepresentation achieved through indirect means, such as through an agent or computer network, see § 105.228.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation May Be Implied by Conduct

In Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 , a long distance telephone carrier sued for fraud based on the use by the defendants' teenage sons of computer technology to "crack" the plaintiff's access and authorization codes and make long distance phone calls without paying for them. After a judgment was entered for the plaintiff, the defendants appealed on various grounds, including the contention that the computer machinations did not constitute a misrepresentation. Although it reversed the award of damages on the basis of a failure to mitigate, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court found that the boys' use of the confidential access codes was the legal equivalent of a misrepresentation that they were authorized users of the plaintiff's services. A misrepresentation need not be oral, but may be implied by conduct. Thus, the use of the access codes was an implied misrepresentation of authorization to use those codes (46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1567) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
1. Misrepresentation or Omission of Material Fact Generally

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.56-105.69

[Reserved]

§§ 105.56[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.70

§ 105.70 Concealment Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Suppression of Fact

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT MERELY ALLEGES THAT DEFENDANT FAILED TO DISCLOSE _____ [specify facts allegedly not disclosed], BUT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS ESTABLISHING A DUTY ON DEFENDANT'S PART TO DISCLOSE _____ [specify facts allegedly not disclosed] AND DOES NOT ALLEGE THAT DEFENDANT GAVE PLAINTIFF OTHER INFORMATION THAT WAS LIKELY TO MISLEAD PLAINTIFF BECAUSE OF THE FAILURE TO DISCLOSE _____ [specify facts allegedly not disclosed].

[EITHER]

A. No Allegation of Defendant's Duty to Disclose. A complaint for fraud and deceit based on suppression of fact is not sufficient to constitute a cause of action if it fails to allege that a fact was suppressed by one who is bound to disclose it (Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 738-739, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 (demurrer); see Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1156, 220 Cal. Rptr. 507 (summary adjudication)).

[Optional] B. Silence in Absence of Duty to Speak Is Not Fraud. In the absence of any showing that the defendant had a duty to speak, such as the existence of a confidential or fiduciary relationship between the parties, the defendant is not bound to volunteer information concerning the subject matter in dispute (Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 569, 203 P.2d 758 ; LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 336-337, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539).

[OR]

A. No Allegation of Misleading Statement. A complaint for fraud and deceit based on suppression of fact is not sufficient to constitute a cause of action if it does not allege that the other party gave information of other facts that were likely to mislead for want of the communication of the suppressed fact (see Rogers v. Warden (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 286, 289-290, 125 P.2d 7).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud because the pleading is based on fraud consisting of an alleged suppression of fact and fails to allege facts showing a duty on the part of the defendant to make the disclosure. This duty is present if: (1) one is bound to make the disclosure by reason of a fiduciary, agency, or similar relationship; or (2) one gives information of other facts that are likely to mislead for want of the communication of the suppressed fact. Accordingly, this form includes alternative points for either situation [see Alternative Paragraphs A].

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised or on any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or the sufficiency of the proof.

This form should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, when appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or other challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Allegation of Defendant's Duty to Disclose

In Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment for the defendant after sustaining a demurrer without leave to amend. The case involved a suit for damages for fraud by the buyer of real property against the sellers and their real estate broker. The complaint alleged that the property was in a state of disrepair, included illegal units, and was in a state of condemnation. It also alleged that the defendants knew these facts and fraudulently failed to reveal them. The court held that if a seller knows facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property that are known or accessible only to the seller and also knows that those facts are not known to, or within the reach of, the diligent attention and observation of the buyer, the seller is under a duty of disclose them to the buyer. If the real estate broker representing the seller possesses the requisite knowledge, he or she is also is under the same duty of disclosure. The elements of the cause of action include the defendant's nondisclosure of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the property and the defendant's knowledge of those facts coupled with the fact that they are unknown to, or beyond the reach of, the plaintiff. All of the allegations in this case concerning the nondisclosure were deficient either in form or substance, and the allegations concerning the defendants' knowledge were deficient because the complaint did not allege that the defendants knew that the facts were unknown to the plaintiff (213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 738-739) .

In Chicago Title Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 220 Cal. Rptr. 507 , plaintiff, a title insurance company, filed a complaint against defendant, a bank, alleging causes of action for fraud, conspiracy to defraud, breach of duty of good faith, wrongful dishonor of checks, and for money had and received. Regarding the fraud causes of action, the complaint alleged that plaintiff acted as an escrow agent in the transfer of funds from a corporate third party to an individual third party in transactions under which the corporate third party delivered to plaintiff checks drawn on the corporate party's trust and escrow accounts at defendant. Both third parties represented to plaintiff that the checks were for the financing and refinancing of loans by the corporate party to the individual party and that the loans were to be secured by trust deeds against properties owned by the individual party. The corporate party represented that it was delivering good and sufficient funds to plaintiff, and, in reliance on these representations, plaintiff issued to the individual party checks payable to that party equal to the amount of the corporate party's checks, less escrow charges.

The complaint alleged that these purported loan transactions were fraudulent shams designed to induce plaintiff to pay money to the individual party in exchange for the corporate party's checks drawn on nonexistent funds at defendant. During the five-month period in which the fraud operated, approximately $300 million in checks passed through the corporate party's accounts at defendant, and, in the process, both third parties siphoned off nearly $17 million for their private use. The complaint then alleged that defendant knew of unusual activity in the corporate party's accounts, that the accounts regularly appeared on defendant's "kite suspect" and overdraft lists, and that, after investigating the activity in the accounts, defendant's auditors concluded that a check kiting scheme was occurring with the accounts and recommended that the accounts be closed. Despite recognition of the improper use of the account, defendant did not close the accounts, but instead conspired with both third parties in perpetrating the fraud on plaintiff by improperly providing special treatment of the corporate party's checks drawn on nonexistent funds and by informing the corporate party on a daily basis of the amount needed to cover the checks. As a result of this assistance, defendant received in excess of $150,000 from the corporate party in overdraft charges. Finally, the complaint alleged that defendant at no point informed plaintiff of the kiting activity in the accounts. Moreover, during the operation of the scheme, plaintiff was unaware of the fraud and unaware that the representations on which plaintiff relied were false.

Defendant moved for summary judgment, summary adjudication of each cause of action, or judgment on the pleadings. The trial court denied the motion for summary judgment, judgment on the pleadings, and summary adjudication on the conspiracy and wrongful dishonor of checks causes of action, but granted the motion for summary adjudication on the causes of action for fraud, breach of the duty of good faith, and money had and received. Plaintiff then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of mandate, seeking vacation of the order granting summary adjudication of the specified causes of action.

The court of appeal consolidated the petition on the summary adjudication issue with an additional petition for a writ of mandate to review the trial court's order compelling discovery of plaintiff's in-house counsel. The court then discharged the summary adjudication alternative writ and denied the petition for a peremptory writ on that issue (174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1160) . The court held that the trial court was correct in its determination that defendant had made no representation to plaintiff relative to the sufficiency of funds in the corporate party's accounts and that, for purposes of Civ. Code § 1710(3), defendant owed neither a common law nor a statutory duty of disclosure to plaintiff (174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1159) . In so holding, the court first rejected plaintiff's argument that when defendant repeatedly honored the corporate party's checks, it was impliedly representing that that party had sufficient funds to cover the checks. Noting an apparent conflict between California and federal law over whether a check constitutes a representation, the court commented that the potential conflict was of no concern in this case because the corporate third party, rather than defendant, was responsible for whatever representations to plaintiff were presented through uttering checks (174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1156) .

The court then rejected plaintiff's arguments that former Com. Code § 1203 (now see Com. Code § 1304, providing that every contract or duty within the commercial code imposes an obligation of good faith in its performance or enforcement) and Com. Code § 4103 (providing that the effect of the commercial code provisions governing bank deposits and collections may be varied by agreement, except that no agreement can disclaim a bank's responsibility for its own lack of good faith or failure to exercise ordinary care or can limit the measure of damages for that lack or failure) imposed a duty of good faith and an obligation on the bank to stop the perpetration of a fraud. Com. Code §§ 1203 and 4103 both contemplate some type of contractor agreement between the parties, but no relationship of that type existed between plaintiff and defendant (174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1156-1157) .

Relying on case law from other jurisdictions and citing Burrows v. Superior Court (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 238, 243, 118 Cal. Rptr. 166, 529 P.2d 590 , the court noted that a bank customer's reasonable expectation is that, absent compulsion by legal process, the matters he or she reveals to the bank will be used by the bank only for internal banking purposes. Thus, a depositor may reasonably expect that a bank will maintain the confidentiality of both those papers that originate with the depositor in check form and the bank statements into which a record of those checks are transformed pursuant to internal bank practice. Therefore, if, as plaintiff suggested, banks had a duty to reveal suspicions about their customers, they would violate their customers' rights to privacy and be forced to act as guarantors of checks written by depositors. The court refused to recognize a duty by banks to inform on suspicious customers, thereby avoiding the loss of privacy, expense, and commercial havoc that would result from the imposition of that duty (174 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1159) .

[b] Silence in Absence of Duty to Speak Is Not Fraud

In Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 203 P.2d 758 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.202[3], the failure of the defendant's agent to inform the plaintiff that the truck the plaintiff was purchasing had been in a wreck was not fraud because in the absence of a fiduciary relationship, the defendant was not bound to volunteer that information. The Court cited Rest, Contracts, § 472 (33 Cal. 2d 564, 569) .

In LiMandri v. Judkins (1997) 52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 539 , plaintiff was an attorney representing a party in litigation arising out of environmental contamination of real property owned by the party. Plaintiff had entered into a written fee agreement with the party providing that plaintiff would be paid an hourly rate for his services in addition to 20 percent of any recovery the party might obtain. While the action was pending, plaintiff was contacted by counsel for a trust company that had extended a loan to the party. In that conversation counsel for the trust company asked plaintiff about the status and settlement value of the pending action and specifically asked about his fee arrangement with the party. However, counsel did not tell plaintiff that the party, in connection with the loan transaction, had granted the trust company a lien against their share of any judgment or settlement proceeds obtained in the action. Plaintiff filed an action against the counsel for the trust company alleging fraud and deceit based on an intentional and negligent failure to disclose facts. The trial court sustained defendant's general demurrer without leave to amend.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court properly dismissed plaintiff's nondisclosure causes of action on the ground that defendant owed plaintiff no duty to disclose his intention to assert the superiority of trust company's lien (52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 338) . The court began its analysis by listing the four circumstances in which nondisclosure would constitute actionable fraud: (1) when the defendant is in a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff; (2) when the defendant has exclusive knowledge of material facts not known to the plaintiff; (3) when the defendant actively conceals a material fact from the plaintiff; and (4) when the defendant makes partial representations but also suppresses some material facts. It then concluded that none of these circumstances applied in this case. The court found that there was no fiduciary relationship between plaintiff and defendant and there was no other relationship between plaintiff and defendant in which a duty to disclose arose. Plaintiff's complaint, according to the court, failed to allege any sort of transaction between the parties, or any existing or anticipated contractual relationship that would give rise to a duty to disclose. Moreover, the court found that the duty of disclosure plaintiff sought to impose on defendant was negated by defendant's attorney-client relationship with the trust company (52 Cal. App. 4th 326, 338) .

[c] No Allegation of Misleading Statement

In Rogers v. Warden (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 286, 125 P.2d 7 , the background of which is discussed in § 105.71, the Supreme Court reversed the lower court's judgment sustaining a general demurrer. The Court noted that the complaint alleged fraud in the form of the suppression of material facts, even though the record did not show any confidential or fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and the defendants. The rule is that although one may be under no duty to speak as to a matter, if one undertakes to do so, as alleged and shown in this case, one is bound not only to state truly what one tells, but also not to suppress or conceal any facts within one's knowledge that materially qualify those stated. If one speaks at all, one must make a full and fair disclosure. Thus, when the defendants undertook to tell the plaintiff why they wanted a deed from her, a matter alleged in the complaint, they were under a duty, even in the absence of a confidential relationship, to disclose the facts within their knowledge relating to her rights in the property involved and the true reason why they were seeking the deed. Because the allegations of the complaint contained all the elements of actionable fraud, the trial court erred in sustaining a general demurrer (20 Cal. 2d 286, 289-290) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Allegation of Defendant's Duty to Disclose

In Kovich v. Paseo Del Mar Homeowners' Assn. (1996) 41 Cal. App. 4th 863, 48 Cal. Rptr. 2d 758 , plaintiff, the purchaser of a townhouse, brought an action against both the seller and the homeowners association for fraudulent concealment based on the failure to inform him about construction defects and the existence of a civil action against the developer to repair the defects. The homeowners association demurred on the ground that it had no duty of care to plaintiff prior to the sale. The trial court agreed, sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend. The court of appeal began its analysis by stating the general rule that even if material facts are known to one party and not the other, failure to disclose those facts is not actionable fraud unless there is some fiduciary or confidential relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose. There are also some exceptions that make nondisclosure actionable without such a relationship--for example, if material facts are not otherwise accessible to a buyer of real property. With regard to the relationship between the parties, the court found that there were no facts alleged indicating that the homeowners association was a party to the sales contract or that it assumed a special relationship with plaintiff (41 Cal. App. 4th 863, 866) . With regard to the argument that everyone must abstain from conduct that unreasonably causes injury to another, the court noted that it was the duty of the seller to disclose information to plaintiff and that the homeowners association had no duty to monitor the seller's disclosures (41 Cal. App. 4th 863, 868-869) . Concluding that plaintiff failed to state a cause of action against the homeowners association, the court affirmed the judgment entered on the demurrer.

[b] Silence in Absence of Duty to Speak Is Not Fraud

In Jappe v. Mandt (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 426, 278 P.2d 940 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the defendant in an action for damages for fraud in which the plaintiff alleged that he had been induced as a result of suppression of fact on the part of the defendant to enter into a contract for the purchase of a rubbish route. The plaintiff's complaint alleged that the defendant knew that the city in which the route was located was contemplating the letting of a contract for the disposal of rubbish, but failed to disclose that fact to him. The evidence showed that prior to executing the contract, the plaintiff examined the defendant's books and had full opportunity to make whatever investigation he thought was necessary. However, the court of appeal noted that the parties were dealing at arm's length, that there was no fiduciary or other relationship of trust or confidence between them, and that the plaintiff had had full opportunity to investigate. Under these circumstances, the defendant was not legally bound to tell the plaintiff of any rumors or reports of possible actions by the city (130 Cal. App. 2d 426, 429) .

In Scafidi v. Western Loan & Bldg. Co. (1946) 72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 165 P.2d 260 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.10[3][d], the court of appeal stated that if mere silence and inaction on the part of the alleged concealer are relied on to establish the fraudulent concealment of a cause of action, it is almost universally held in all jurisdictions, including California, that mere silence or inaction or both are insufficient to establish fraudulent concealment, in the absence of a confidential relationship between the parties or a showing of some specially appearing circumstances that of themselves equitably estop a person from relying on this silence or inaction or suffice to create on the part of the nonrevealer a positive duty to speak or act (72 Cal. App. 2d 550, 562) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.71

§ 105.71 Concealment Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Facts Allegedly Suppressed Are Not Material

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION CONCERNED A MATERIAL FACT.

Misrepresentation Not of Material Fact. A pleading based on suppression of fact that does not allege that the party charged suppressed a material fact fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (see Rogers v. Warden (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 286, 290, 125 P.2d 7).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege, or the evidence fails to establish, that the alleged misrepresentation regarded a material fact.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.70[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.70[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting the contention that plaintiff has insufficiently pleaded or proved fraud and deceit generally, and the test for materiality in particular, see § 105.30[3][d].

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not of Material Fact

In Rogers v. Warden (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 286, 125 P.2d 7 , the Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the trial court with directions to the lower court to overrule a general demurrer to the plaintiff's complaint because the allegations of the complaint contained all the elements of actionable fraud. The complaint alleged that although she did not know it, the plaintiff owned certain mineral rights and that the defendants conspired to cheat and defraud her and secure her interest by representing that (1) the land was owned by another party, of little value, and clouded by outstanding taxes; (2) the plaintiff had no right in the property; and (3) their purpose in wanting her to sign a quitclaim deed to the property was to make the property marketable by removing a technicality in the claimed owner's title. The complaint further alleged that each of these representations was false, known by the defendants to be false when made, and made to induce the plaintiff to execute a conveyance of the mineral rights, thereby defrauding her of those rights. Thus, the Court stated, the complaint alleged fraud in the form of suppression of material facts (20 Cal. 2d 286, 290) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not of Material Fact

In La Jolla Village Homeowners' Assn. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1131 , a homeowners association sued subcontractors of the condominium complex alleging nondisclosure. The court of appeal denied the plaintiff's petition for a writ of mandate to overturn the trial court's striking of the cause of action. The court stated that the complaint failed to specifically allege that the defendants had made representations to the plaintiffs and did not disclose facts that either materially qualified those facts disclosed or rendered that disclosure likely to mislead the plaintiff to rely on it to the plaintiff's detriment. In addition, the complaint failed to show that the facts were known or accessible only to the defendants and that the defendants owed a duty to the plaintiff (212 Cal. App. 3d 1131, 1152).

93 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.72-105.79

[Reserved]

§§ 105.72[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.80

§ 105.80 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence in Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT BREACHED, BY HIS/HER/ITS SILENCE, A DUTY OF DISCLOSURE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S CONFIDENTIAL RELATIONSHIP WITH PLAINTIFF.

Breach of Duty Arising From Confidential Relationship. If any relationship of confidence and trust exists between the parties that demands that the information communicated respecting the subject of their dealings be full and complete, any concealment or misrepresentation is fraud sufficient to entitle the party injured by it to an action (Kruse v. Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659-660, 300 P.2d 855).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached a duty to disclose that arises from the defendant's confidential relationship with the plaintiff.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or to matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or other challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

For related legal background, research and procedural guides, and forms relating to the most common proceedings for challenging the sufficiency of pleading or proof--demurrer or motion for summary judgment--see respectively California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender). For references to chapters relating to other potential procedural contexts, see § 105.04[1].

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see § 105.81 et seq. This form may also be combined in an appropriate case with relevant points and authorities in § 105.20, focusing on the pleading requirement that elements for an action for fraud and deceit be pleaded in specific rather than general terms.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Confidential Relationship

In Kruse v. Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 300 P.2d 855 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for damages for the plaintiffs against the real estate broker who had represented them in the sale of property. The judgment was based on the agent's fraudulent concealment, which resulted in the sale's rescission. The plaintiffs had listed the undeveloped property with a real estate broker. The defendant, a second broker acting with the first broker's permission, showed the property to the buyers, who asked if the lot was filled. The defendant answered in the negative, and the sale was made. Subsequently, on discovering the lot's filled condition, the buyers successfully rescinded the sale. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs had not pleaded or proven a cause of action for fraud. However, there was evidence of the concealment, and the court of appeal concluded that the defendant had violated his duty to the plaintiffs, his principals, by not informing them of the representations he had made to the buyers that the lot was not filled, thereby perpetrating a fraud on the confidence the plaintiffs bestowed on him. The court stated that if any relationship of confidence and trust exists between the parties that demands that the information communicated respecting the subject of their dealings be full and complete, any concealment or misrepresentation will amount to fraud sufficient to entitle the injured party to an action. The court added that the contract between the parties in this action created the relationship of principal and agent. The agent therefore had the duty of informing his principals fully and correctly regarding all matters concerning the business transacted under his contract of agency (143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 659-660) .

In Roddenberry v. Roddenberry (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 634, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 907 , plaintiff, the first wife of the creator of the Star Trek television series, sued the loan-out corporation of her deceased ex-husband for fraud in connection with the company's handling of profit participation payments to her. At the time of her divorce, plaintiff agreed to a settlement allocating her a one-half interest, without deduction or offset, in all future profit participation income from Star Trek to which either or both were entitled. When the corporation began receiving profit participation payments for Star Trek syndications, it initially forwarded a full half to plaintiff. Sometime thereafter and unbeknownst to plaintiff, the amount was reduced to one-third. The trial court entered judgment on a jury verdict against defendant for fraud. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the facts supported a finding of liability for fraudulent concealment (44 Cal. App. 4th 634, 665) . The court found initially that defendant was under a duty to disclose because it was handling money belonging to plaintiff. In addition, the evidence amply supported the finding that defendant concealed the true facts in the hope that plaintiff would accept defendant's payments and never discover that she was receiving only a third (44 Cal. App. 4th 634, 666) . On appeal, defendant argued that evidence of reliance and damage was lacking. The court rejected this argument, holding that substantial evidence supported the conclusion that plaintiff was misled or at least confused and consequently delayed pressing for full payment. The court held that delay in receiving full payment can constitute actual damage (44 Cal. App. 4th 634, 666) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.81

§ 105.81 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Agent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE HE/SHE HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT BREACHED, BY HIS/HER/ITS SILENCE, A DUTY OF DISCLOSURE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S AGENCY RELATIONSHIP WITH PLAINTIFF.

Breach of Duty Arising From Agency Relationship. An agent has the duty of informing the agent's principal fully and correctly regarding all matters involved in the business being transacted under the agency contract (Kruse v. Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 660, 300 P.2d 855).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached the duty to disclose that arises from the defendant's confidential agency relationship with the plaintiff.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.80[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.80[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see §§ 105.80 and 105.82 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Agency Relationship

Kruse v. Miller (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 656, 300 P.2d 855 , is discussed in § 105.80[3][c].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.82

§ 105.82 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Fiduciary

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT BREACHED, BY HIS/HER/ITS SILENCE, A DUTY OF DISCLOSURE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP WITH PLAINTIFF.

A. Breach of Duty Arising From Fiduciary Relationship. The intentional failure to disclose a material fact is actionable fraud if there is a fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose it (Moe v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 289, 306, 98 Cal. Rptr. 547).

[Optional] B. Oral Joint Venture Constitutes Fiduciary Relationship. Joint venturers are fiduciaries with a duty of disclosure, and the existence of an oral joint venture agreement may be established by a preponderance of the evidence (Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 476, 482-486, 286 Cal. Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached the duty to disclose that arises from the defendant's fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff. Optional Paragraph B may be used if the defendant is in a joint venture with the plaintiff.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.80[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.80[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see §§ 105.80-105.81 or § 105.83 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Fiduciary Relationship

In Moe v. Transamerica Title Ins. Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 289, 98 Cal. Rptr. 547 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the plaintiffs for fraudulent concealment against the defendant, a title company that had omitted to mention a pending bankruptcy action connected with its assignment of a title insurance policy. An examination of the policy originally issued and subsequently assigned to the plaintiffs in a transaction involving an escrow showed that it omitted any reference to the pending bankruptcy proceeding. The evidence established that this omission was knowing and deliberate. A title insurance company is a trustee to all principals to an escrow, and it was obvious that the defendant had fulfilled none of these duties. The court held the defendant liable for actionable fraud because deceit may consist of a fact's suppression by one bound to disclose it [Civ. Code § 1710(3)], and the intentional failure to disclose a material fact is actionable fraud if there is a fiduciary relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose it (21 Cal. App. 3d 289, 306) .

[b] Oral Joint Venture Constitutes Fiduciary Relationship

In Weiner v. Fleischman (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 476, 286 Cal. Rptr. 40, 816 P.2d 892 , two persons entered into an oral agreement to arrange the sale and purchase of stock held by several stockholders. After the sale, one of the parties to the agreement brought an action against the other party, alleging that the other party had fraudulently concealed his participation in the stock sale as a buyer, in violation of the terms of an alleged oral joint venture agreement between them. The plaintiff, an attorney, represented a group of shareholders who wished to sell their stock in a certain corporation. She entered into the oral agreement with the defendant, another attorney, under which they would find a third-party buyer of the stock and equally share the finder's fee. The plaintiff alleged (and the defendant denied) that the parties also agreed to purchase the stock together if they were unable to find a third-party buyer. The defendant informed the plaintiff of a potential buyer for the stock, and the plaintiff's clients accepted the offer. The defendant proceeded to form a corporation for the prospective purchaser. Subsequently, a dissenting shareholder unsuccessfully attempted to prevent the sale, which caused the prospective purchaser to withdraw from the purchase to avoid litigation. Conflicting evidence was presented regarding when defendant informed the shareholders of the withdrawal and what the defendant revealed about the identity of the purchaser when the stock was finally sold. Shortly before the closing of the stock sale, the defendant introduced a third party, but a question remains whether he identified the person as an employee of the first prospective buyer or as his own business partner. Soon after the sale, the shares were reissued in the names of the defendant and the third party whom he had introduced shortly before the sale. Pursuant to their oral agreement, the plaintiff and the defendant each received their share of the finder's fee.

Some two years later, the plaintiff read a newspaper article that named the defendant as one of the owners of the corporation. She filed an action alleging that the defendant fraudulently concealed his participation in the stock sale as a buyer and hence violated their alleged oral agreement. The trial court ordered bifurcation of the alleged fraud from other issues. On conclusion of the trial testimony, the court instructed the jury to return a special verdict. The first question of the special verdict involved whether the plaintiff and the defendant had a relationship, contractual, fiduciary, or other, to acquire the shares if unable to find a buyer. The jury was given, at the defendant's request and over the plaintiff's objection, a modified BAJI No. 12.35 (regarding fraud and deceit based on concealment), presenting the five elements necessary for a fraudulent concealment cause of action, and another instruction that stated, "[a]s a threshold matter, you must find by clear and convincing evidence, first, that the plaintiff and the defendant did enter into an oral joint venture and, second, the essential terms of that joint venture." The instruction also repeated the second element of BAJI No. 12.35, that the defendant must have been under a duty to disclose the allegedly concealed fact to the plaintiff, with the following addition: "[a]s noted previously, the existence of the oral joint venture and its scope must be proved by clear and convincing evidence." On a vote of nine to three, the jury returned a special verdict finding no oral joint venture or other relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant. A motion for new trial was denied, and the plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed and remanded for a new trial, holding that the trial court erred in instructing the jury that the existence of the oral joint venture agreement had to be proved by clear and convincing evidence. The California Supreme Court granted the defendant's petition for review to determine the correct standard of proof for establishing an oral joint venture or partnership.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. The Court noted that a joint venture is an undertaking by two or more persons jointly to carry out a single business enterprise for profit. Like partners, joint venturers are fiduciaries with a duty of disclosure and liability to account for profits. The Court stated that the distinction between joint ventures and partnerships is not sharply drawn. A joint venture usually involves a single business transaction, whereas a partnership may involve a continuing business for an indefinite or fixed period of time. Yet a joint venture may be of longer duration and greater complexity than a partnership. From a legal standpoint, the Court stated, both relationships are virtually the same. Accordingly, the courts freely apply partnership law to joint ventures when appropriate. A joint venture or partnership may be formed orally or assumed to have been organized from a reasonable deduction from the acts and declarations of the parties. Before the issue of fraud by concealment can be raised, the plaintiff has to establish the existence of some type of legal relationship giving rise to a duty to disclose. Although material facts may be known to one party and not the other, failure to disclose them is ordinarily not actionable fraud unless there is some fiduciary relationship giving rise to that duty. Because the trial court did not determine the existence or nature of any relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant, but rather determined that the plaintiff had proceeded to trial solely on an oral agreement or oral joint venture theory, it left to the jury, by way of a response for a special verdict, the determination whether the oral joint venture agreement existed. The court instructed the jury to determine whether the plaintiff had proven by "clear and convincing" evidence that the relationship existed between the plaintiff and the defendant.

The Court discussed whether existing law requires a burden of proof higher than preponderance of the evidence to establish an oral joint venture or partnership. Under the general rule, issues of fact in civil cases are determined by a preponderance of testimony. Pursuant to Evid. Code § 115, three possible burdens of proof exist: preponderance of the evidence, clear and convincing evidence, or proof beyond a reasonable doubt. Except as otherwise provided by law, the burden of proof requires proof by a preponderance of the evidence. The Court therefore analyzed constitutional, statutory, and decisional law on this point, finding first that neither constitutional nor statutory law provided an answer. The Court conceded that certain appellate decisions have stated that proof of an oral joint venture or partnership agreement must be by clear and convincing evidence, but on a close examination of those cases, the Court concluded that their reasoning was unpersuasive and their reliance on prior cases unfounded. The Court concluded that decisional law does not justify or require a departure from the ordinary civil standard of preponderance of the evidence when a party seeks to establish the existence and scope of an oral joint venture or partnership agreement. The Court rejected the defendant's contention that the clear and convincing evidence standard is compelled based on the gravity of the consequences of establishing the existence of a joint venture or partnership agreement. The Court noted that proof by that standard is required if particularly important individual interests or rights are at stake, but concluded that areas of law to which courts have applied that standard involve historically disfavored subjects, such as an oral agreement to make a will (54 Cal. 3d 476, 487-489) . The Court found no reason why proof of a joint venture or partnership agreement should be subject to any higher standard of proof than any other ordinary oral contract in a civil dispute. Because of the closeness of the jury's vote on the special verdict, indications that the jury requested rereading of evidence related to the erroneous instruction, and other factors, the Court held that reversal was proper (54 Cal. 3d 476, 482-486, 491) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Fiduciary Relationship

In Day v. Rosenthal (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 1125 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff for damages for fraud. At trial, the court, sitting as the trier of fact, found that the defendant, while acting as the plaintiff's attorney and business manager, had defrauded the plaintiff in several business transactions. On appeal, the defendant argued that the plaintiff had not proven any actual concealment or misrepresentation. The court rejected this argument, holding that an intentional failure to disclose is an actionable fraud in the presence of a fiduciary duty to disclose and that the attorney-client relationship imposed such a fiduciary relationship (170 Cal. App. 3d 1125, 1159-1160).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.83

§ 105.83 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence With Knowledge That Affected Value of Transaction

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT BREACHED, BY DEFENDANT'S SILENCE, A DUTY OF DISCLOSURE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS MATERIALLY AFFECTING THE VALUE OR DESIRABILITY OF THE SUBJECT MATTER OF THE TRANSACTION.

Breach of Duty Arising From Knowledge of Material Facts. If one party knows of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the subject matter of the transaction, only that party knows or has access to those facts, and he or she also knows that the facts are not known to, or within the reach of, the other party's diligent attention and observation, he or she is under a duty to disclose them and the failure to fulfill that a duty constitutes fraud (Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735-736, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 ; see also Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 292-294, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached the duty to disclose that arises from the defendant's knowledge of facts materially affecting the value or desirability of the subject matter of the transaction.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.80[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.80[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see §§ 105.80 -105.82 or § 105.84.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Knowledge of Material Facts

In Vega v. Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 17 Cal. Rptr. 3d 26 , the plaintiff, a shareholder in a company acquired in a merger transaction, sued the attorneys for the acquiring company for fraud. As part of the merger, the plaintiff received stock in the acquiring company in exchange for his shares in the former company, which were valued at $3.45 million at the time of the merger. The plaintiff alleged that prior to the closing of the merger, the acquiring company secured $10 million in investment financing from a third party, and that as part of that transaction, the investors would receive stock issues that would seriously dilute the value of the stock held by other stockholders, including the plaintiff and the other shareholders in the company being acquired. However, although the attorneys for the acquiring company revealed that they were engaging in a third-party financing transaction, they concealed the facts about the stock issues from the plaintiff and the other shareholders involved in the proposed merger, knowing that full disclosure about the stock issues would kill the merger and result in the acquiring company going out of business. The attorneys went so far as to issue a separate disclosure statement on the investment transaction, prepared solely for the shareholders of the plaintiff's company, that omitted the stock issues completely. The trial court sustained a demurrer for the defendants, based in part on the defendants' claim that they could not be liable for failure to disclose if they owed no duty to disclose in the first instance. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that even if no duty to disclose otherwise exists, a party who volunteers or undertakes to provide information may be liable for fraud if that party intentionally conceals material facts (121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 292) . Although the defendants were counsel for the adverse party in a merger, once the attorneys revealed the third-party financing agreement, they were under a duty not to mislead the shareholders of the other company by leaving out information about the terms of the transactions that the attorneys knew would have a substantial effect on those shareholders and their decision to approve the merger or not. The defendants knew that the investment transaction was relevant to the parties to the proposed merger, including the plaintiff, that the plaintiff had no independent knowledge of the terms of the investment transaction, and that the plaintiff relied on the defendants and their client company to provide the material terms of the investment transaction once the transaction was disclosed. The defendants intentionally failed to do so. Therefore, the plaintiff properly pleaded a cause of action for fraud based on a failure to disclose, and the trial court erred in sustaining the defendants' demurrer on that cause of action (121 Cal. App. 4th 282, 292-295) .

Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 735-736, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 , is discussed in § 105.70[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Knowledge of Material Facts

In OCM Principal Opportunities Fund, L.P. v. CIBC World Markets Corp. (2007) 157 Cal. App. 4th 835, 68 Cal. Rptr. 3d 82 , an investment bank was sued by purchasers of securities after the bank drafted an offering memorandum for the securities that made numerous representations about the established success of the relevant company's business strategy and its strong prospects going forward. However, the offering memorandum failed to contain any information on the company's recent poor quarter and "channel stuffing" with product that enabled the company to inflate its financial estimates for the upcoming year, but deflated the company's prospects for survival, although the bank had knowledge of these poor financial conditions. The court of appeal concluded that the half-truths and material omissions in the offering memorandum were sufficient to support an action for negligent misrepresentation (157 Cal. App. 4th 835, 855) . In addition, on the plaintiffs' claim for intentional nondisclosure, the court held that the investment bank had a duty to disclose full and accurate financial information about the company whose securities the bank was selling. Although the bank sold only unregistered notes to qualified buyers in private transactions, the bank knew that these unregistered notes would soon be replaced with registered securities saleable through a public market, and in fact the bank actively advised potential purchasers of the publicly-traded securities. Because of this, the bank's duty to disclose ran to subsequent purchasers of those registered securities, even though the bank was not the seller of those securities (157 Cal. App. 4th 835, 859-860) .

In Persson v. Smart Inventions, Inc. (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 335 , the plaintiff sued a corporation and its president/shareholder for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty arising from the defendants' buyout of the plaintiff's 50 percent share of corporate stock. The corporation's president had undertaken to provide the plaintiff with all necessary financial information about their struggling company prior to reaching agreement on the terms of the buyout, but he did not tell the plaintiff about a new product that the company was about to release. This new product, which was unveiled immediately after the plaintiff signed the buyout agreement, made millions of dollars for the company. The plaintiff argued that the president had a duty to disclose the new product when he undertook to provide all relevant financial information about the company prior to the buyout. After a jury trial, judgment was entered for the plaintiff on the fraudulent concealment claim, and the court of appeal affirmed on this cause of action. The court held that even though the president had no duty to provide information to the plaintiff prior to the buyout, once he undertook to "paint ... the truest picture possible of where the company is right now," he had a duty to disclose all information that was material to the transaction. The court then held that there was sufficient evidence to support the jury's finding that the president intentionally concealed facts about the new product and that these facts were material to the transaction (125 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1164-1165) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.84

§ 105.84 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Silence By Person With Statutory Duty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT BREACHED, BY DEFENDANT'S SILENCE, A DUTY OF DISCLOSURE ARISING FROM DEFENDANT'S STATUTORY OBLIGATION.

Breach of Duty Arising From Statutory Obligation. If a statute imposes an obligation on a party to make a disclosure, the failure of that party to make the disclosure constitutes an actionable fraudulent concealment (Pastoria v. Nationwide Ins. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1499, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 ; Kimball v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 203, 217-218, 30 P.2d 39).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached the duty to disclose imposed by statute.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.80[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.80[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see §§ 105.80 -105.83.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Statutory Obligation

In Pastoria v. Nationwide Ins. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 148 , the plaintiffs brought an action against their health insurance company for unfair competition, fraud, and negligent failure to disclose. The plaintiffs claimed that the company failed to disclose to them before they purchased their policy that the company was about to make substantial changes to the policy line, including new deductibles, new and increased co-payments, reduced drug benefits, and increased premiums. The defendant demurred, arguing that compliance with Ins. Code § 10199.1, which requires insurers to give only 30 days notice before changing insurance benefits and premiums, precluded the action. The trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. The plaintiffs failed to amend the complaint, judgment was entered, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that the plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant had a duty to disclose the impending changes under Ins. Code §§ 330, 331, 332, 334, and 361, and the court concluded that the plaintiff's argument was not without merit under the literal language of those statutes. Therefore, based on the procedural posture of the case, it was error for the trial court to sustain the defendant's demurrer on the unfair competition claims (112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1496-1499) . In addition, because the plaintiffs had pleaded that the defendant had a duty to disclose under those statutes, the court held that it was also error to sustain the demurrer on the fraud cause of action, as well as on the cause of action for negligent failure to disclose (112 Cal. App. 4th 1490, 1499) .

In Kimball v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 203, 30 P.2d 39 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for the defendant's fraudulent concealment of facts that would toll the statute of limitations in a personal injury action. The plaintiff sought damages for personal injuries he suffered, while working for Pacific Gas & Electric Company (PG&E), as a result of the negligence of an employee of General Electric Company (GE). The complaint alleged that PG&E advised him that it was responsible for the accident although it knew that GE was responsible, that the two companies concealed an agreement to share the related costs, and that as a result of the fraudulent concealment he had no knowledge of his cause of action until discovery of the facts. The Supreme Court noted that under the Workers' Compensation Act, PG&E was entitled to recover from GE, but had brought no action, which would have disclosed to the plaintiff GE's connection with the instant action. The act also provides that no release or settlement is valid without written consent of both the employer and the employee. The Court held that when the two companies started negotiations for settlement of the claim, a positive duty existed on the part of PG&E to inform the plaintiff. The Court concluded that keeping the facts concealed from the plaintiff constituted fraud (220 Cal. 203, 217-220) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Breach of Duty Arising From Statutory Obligation

In Lovejoy v. AT & T Corp. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 151, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 117 , the plaintiff filed suit for fraudulent concealment against a phone company for obtaining the plaintiff's 800 number service from a different provider without the plaintiff's knowledge or consent. At the time of the switch, the defendant had also been providing the plaintiff with long distance phone service. After a disagreement over long-distance charges, the defendant canceled the plaintiff's long distance service and his 800 number. Because the plaintiff believed his 800 number was still being provided by another company, the plaintiff did not realize that his 800 number had been reassigned to another consumer, resulting in a serious loss of business to plaintiff. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant on the grounds that the plaintiff could not prove a cause of action for fraudulent concealment because the plaintiff's phone bill reflected that the defendant had taken over plaintiff's 800 number service. The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that Pub. Util. Code § 2889.5 imposes several steps of disclosure that a phone company must take, and the pre-approval that it must obtain, before it can change a consumer's telephone service provider, and that the defendant failed to comply with these requirements. The court held that this failure to comply with the statute can constitute fraudulent concealment and that triable issues existed as to whether the subsequent revelation of the change in the plaintiff's monthly phone bill satisfied the defendant's duty of disclosure and whether it was unreasonable for the plaintiff to fail to read the multi-page phone bill and discover the change (119 Cal. App. 4th 151, 158-162) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.85

§ 105.85 Concealment Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Concealment in Letter of Recommendation of Facts That Would Present Substantial Foreseeable Risk of Physical Injury to Third Persons

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT DEFENDANT, IN WRITING A LETTER OF RECOMMENDATION, BREACHED A DUTY TO DISCLOSE KNOWN INFORMATION ABOUT THE PERSON BEING RECOMMENDED THAT WOULD PRESENT A SUBSTANTIAL AND FORESEEABLE RISK OF PHYSICAL INJURY TO THIRD PERSONS.

Duty of Writer of Letter of Recommendation to Disclose Facts That Would Present Substantial Foreseeable Risk of Physical Injury to Third Persons. The writer of a letter of recommendation owes to third persons a duty not to misrepresent the facts in describing the qualifications and character of a former employee, if making the representations would present a substantial, foreseeable risk of physical injury to the third persons (Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant breached the duty to disclose that arises from the defendant's having undertaken to write a letter of recommendation about a person, omitting known facts that would present a substantial and foreseeable risk of harm not only to the recipient of the letter but to other third persons.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.70 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.80[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.80[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities setting forth other bases for alleging or establishing a duty of disclosure, see §§ 105.80 -105.84. For a form and discussion of the decision in Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 as it relates to the issue of a third party's actual reliance, see § 105.229.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Writer of Letter of Recommendation to Disclose Facts That Would Present Substantial Foreseeable Risk of Physical Injury to Third Persons

Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 , raised the issue of whether a person who intentionally or negligently provides false information to another owes a duty of care to a third person who neither received the information nor had any special relationship with the provider. Plaintiff, a 13-year old middle school student who had been sexually molested by a school vice principal, sought damages against the principal's former employers for failing to use reasonable care in recommending their former employee for employment without disclosing material information bearing on his fitness. Specifically, plaintiff claimed that (1) defendant school district officers unreservedly recommended the vice principal for employment without disclosing to prospective employers facts defendants knew regarding prior charges or complaints of sexual misconduct and impropriety leveled against the principal, and (2) that defendants' letters induced another school district to hire the principal, who later sexually assaulted plaintiff. Defendants demurred, arguing that the facts alleged failed to establish that defendants owed any duty to plaintiff. The trial court sustained the demurrers and entered judgment of dismissal with prejudice in favor of defendants. Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's ruling as to the negligent misrepresentation and fraud counts.

The Supreme Court held that defendants' letters of recommendation, containing unreserved and unconditional praise for their former employee despite defendants' alleged knowledge of complaints or charges of his sexual misconduct with students, constituted misleading statements that could form the basis for tort liability for fraud or negligent misrepresentation. The Court held that the writer of a letter of recommendation owes to third persons a duty not to misrepresent the facts in describing the qualifications and character of a former employee, if making these misrepresentations would present a substantial, foreseeable risk of physical injury to the third persons (14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1081) . However, this duty of care is limited to situations involving resulting physical injury or some special relationship between the parties. In determining the duty issue, the Court applied the factors enumerated in Rowland v. Christian (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 108, 70 Cal. Rptr. 97 and made the following findings: (1) while the chain of causation leading from defendants' statements and omissions to the vice principal's alleged assault on plaintiff was attenuated, the assault was reasonably foreseeable, (2) defendants' unreserved recommendations of the vice principal, together with their failure to disclose facts reasonably necessary to avoid or minimize the risk of further child molestations or abuse, were arguably morally blameworthy, and (3) defendants had alternative courses of conduct available to them to avoid tort liability, namely, writing a "full disclosure" letter revealing all relevant facts regarding the principal's background, or writing a "no comment" letter omitting any affirmative representations regarding his qualifications, and merely verifying basic employment dates and details (14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1078) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
2. Concealment of Material Fact

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.86-105.99

[Reserved]

§§ 105.86[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.100

§ 105.100 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Promise Without Intent to Perform

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BASED ON A PROMISE MADE WITHOUT THE INTENTION OF PERFORMING IT, BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THE PROMISOR HAD NO INTENT TO PERFORM WHEN THE PROMISE WAS MADE.

A. Absence of Intent to Perform When Promise Made. The allegation of facts showing the promisor's lack of intent at the time the promise was made to perform that promise is essential to the statement of a cause of action in fraud or deceit based on a promise made without any intention of performing it (Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494).

[Optional] B. Facts Required. In pleading the lack of intent to perform a promise, the complaint must set forth specific facts to show how, when, where, to whom, and by what means the representations were tendered or from what data the falsity of the defendant's intentions can be inferred (Hills Transp. Co. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 707, 72 Cal. Rptr. 441).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover because the plaintiff has failed to establish that when the defendant made the promise claimed as the basis of the fraud, the defendant did not intend to perform the promise.

This form may also be used to support a contention that the complaint lacks sufficient specificity to set forth a cause of action for fraud [see § 105.10 et seq.].

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or proof.

This form should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, when appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or other challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.110 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Intent to Perform When Promise Made

Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 , is discussed in § 105.101[3].

[b] Facts Required

In Hills Transp. Co. v. Southwest Forest Indus., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 702 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment of dismissal of an action for damages for breach of contract and fraud. The trial court sustained general and special demurrers to the second amended complaint without leave to amend because the fraud count failed to allege with specific facts that the defendant had made a promise without any intent to perform it. The pleading charged that the defendant had made a false promise to enter into a five-year contract without intent to perform. The court of appeal noted that no specific facts were pleaded to show how, when, where, to whom, and by what means the representations were tendered or from what data the falsity of the defendant's intentions could be inferred. It is well established, the court held, that the pleading of fraud and deceit must be specific. It is essential that the facts and circumstances that constitute the fraud be set out clearly, concisely, and with sufficient particularity to apprise the opposite party of what that party is called on to answer and to enable the court to determine if on the facts pleaded there is any foundation, prima facie at least, for the charge of fraud. A cause of action for a false promise, the court ruled, should plead facts to show the promisor's specific intentions. It is indispensable to set forth the falsity of the promisor's intent when the promise was tendered. The allegations necessary to show contemporaneous intention not to perform should be clear, specific, and unequivocal (266 Cal. App. 2d 702, 707).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Absence of Intent to Perform When Promise Made

In Maynes v. Angeles Mesa Land Co. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 587 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant in an action for declaratory relief and damages. The trial court considered only one theory of recovery--fraud that the defendant allegedly committed by purporting to lease certain real estate to the plaintiffs and failing to execute the lease. As the Court noted, the plaintiffs had attempted to plead a cause of action for fraud consisting of the making of a promise without any intention of performing it. The complaint alleged the defendant's representations that it would lease the premises to the plaintiffs. However, it did not allege that the promise was made with the intention of deceiving the plaintiffs or that the promise was made without the intention of performing it. The mere failure to carry out a promise is not a tort, and it is therefore essential in pleading fraud consisting of a false promise to allege the elements of fraud. Because it was perfectly consistent with the complaint's allegations to infer that the defendant made the alleged promise, the complaint was wholly insufficient with respect to the allegations required for pleading fraud. Moreover, said the Court, the plaintiffs failed to plead properly any damage resulting from the alleged fraud. Thus, even if fraud had been well pleaded in other respects, the complaint would still be fatally defective in its attempted pleading of damage, an essential element of the cause of action (10 Cal. 2d 587, 589-590).

In O'Mary v. Mitsubishi Elecs. Am., Inc. (1997) 59 Cal. App. 4th 563, 69 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 , a laid off employee sued his previous employer for fraud alleging that the employer breached its promise of lifetime employment. The trial court dismissed the action and the court of appeal affirmed. It stated that in order to support a claim for fraud based on the alleged failure to perform a promise, it must be shown that the promisor did not intend to perform at the time the promise was made. In this case, while plaintiff may have been promised lifetime employment in the tradition of Japanese companies at the time, at trial he offered no evidence to show that defendant had no intent to perform that promise at the time it was made (59 Cal. App. 4th 563, 579) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.101

§ 105.101 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Promise Concerning Material Fact

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT THE PROMISE CONCERNED A MATERIAL FACT.

A. Promise Concerning Material Fact. It is essential to the statement of a cause of action in fraud and deceit based on a promise made without any intention of performing it to allege facts showing that the promise made concerned a material fact (see Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 ; Regus v. Schartkoff (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 382, 388, 319 P.2d 721).

B. Determining Whether Pleaded Facts Are Material [see § 105.30[1], Paragraph D].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege the promise made without intention of performing it did not concern a material fact.

This form may also be used to support a contention that the complaint lacks sufficient specificity to set forth a cause of action for fraud [see § 105.10 et seq.].

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.100[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [§ 105.100[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.110 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promise Concerning Material Fact

In Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal, which it had entered after it sustained a general demurrer to a complaint that included a cause of action in deceit based on allegations that the defendant had made a promise without any intention of performing it. The complaint alleged, in substance, that the plaintiff had owned his own jewelry business, that the defendants induced him to close it pursuant to a promise that they would employ him as a manager, that when they made this promise, the defendants did not intend to perform it, and that instead they intended to remove the plaintiff as a competitor. The complaint further alleged that the defendants actually employed the plaintiff for about one month. The trial court sustained the general demurrer to the cause of action on the erroneous assumption that the employment contract was terminable at the will of the defendants. However, the court of appeal pointed out that the cause of action was predicated on a promise made without any intention of performing it. A complaint seeking to allege this cause of action must contain facts showing the following essential elements: a promise made regarding a material fact, the promisor's lack of intent when making the promise to perform it, the promisor's intent to induce the promisee to act, the promisee's justifiable reliance on the promise, the promisor's nonperformance of the promise, and injury and damage proximately resulting to the promisee. Gauging the complaint by these standards, the court concluded that the complaint stated a cause of action sounding in fraud (267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677).

In Regus v. Schartkoff (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 382, 319 P.2d 721 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment sustaining a general demurrer and dismissing a cause of action based on fraud consisting of a promise allegedly made without any intention of performing it. Count three of the complaint was based on allegations that an insurer had promised to pay certain damages claimed by the plaintiff, but that it had no intention of performing that promise. The court noted that the facts essential to the statement of a cause of action in fraud or deceit based on a promise made without any intention of performing it are: a promise made regarding a material fact without any intention of performing it, the existence of the intent of nonperformance at the time of making the promise, the making of the promise with intent to deceive or with intent to induce the party to whom it was made to enter into the transaction, reliance by the promisee, nonperformance by the promisor, and injury to the promisee. The complaint alleged all of those facts and, accordingly, the court held that it stated a cause of action against the insurer (156 Cal. App. 2d at 388).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promise Concerning Material Fact

In Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887 , an attorney was sued for legal malpractice by his former clients because of alleged negligence in conducting negotiations for the sale of their business. The plaintiffs had settled with the buyers of the business after being sued for understatement of liabilities contained in the balance sheet provided at the time of the sale. The attorney filed a cross complaint for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and equitable indemnity against the buyers' attorney, alleging that the buyers' attorney had promised, without intent to perform, that the buyers would accept the balance sheet as correct to the best of the sellers' knowledge, rather than relying on the strict warranty regarding the accuracy of the balance sheet contained in the proposed final agreement. The cross complaint further alleged that the promise was made for the purpose of inducing the attorney to rely on it and thereby to advise his clients to proceed with the sale and sign the final agreement. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the cross complaint and, on appeal, the court of appeal reversed. The court rejected the cross defendants' assertion that the alleged misrepresentation was one of law and therefore not actionable, because a statement of what the defendant intends to do relates to an existing state of mind and is a representation of fact (183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 203) .

In Berkey v. Halm (1950) 101 Cal. App. 2d 62 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment for the defendants pursuant to the trial court's order sustaining a demurrer to the third amended complaint. As to the cause of action for fraud based on a promise made with intention not to perform it, the court noted that the facts essential to the statement of this cause of action are: a promise made regarding a material fact without any intention of performing it, the existence of the intent of nonperformance at the time of making the promise, the intent to deceive the promisee or the intent to induce the promisee to enter into the transaction, the promisee's reliance, the promisor's nonperformance, and the promisee's injury. The defendants' contention that the complaint did not state a cause of action in fraud was without merit because it alleged all of these facts (101 Cal. App. 2d 62, 69).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.102

§ 105.102 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Plaintiff's Expectation Is Insufficient to Establish Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF UNJUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON PLAINTIFF'S UNDERSTANDING OR EXPECTATION THAT DEFENDANT WOULD PERFORM, AND THAT UNDERSTANDING OR EXPECTATION IS INSUFFICIENT TO ESTABLISH DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATION THAT DEFENDANT WOULD PERFORM.

Plaintiff's Expectation Insufficient to Establish Misrepresentation. A plaintiff's understanding or expectation that a defendant would perform is insufficient to establish the defendant's representation that defendant would perform (Conrad v. Bank of Am. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 133, 156, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that a plaintiff's understanding or expectation that a defendant would perform is insufficient to establish the defendant's representation that defendant would perform.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.100[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.100[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.110. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Expectation Insufficient to Establish Misrepresentation

In Conrad v. Bank of Am. (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 133, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 336 , the plaintiffs sued a bank, claiming that it falsely promised to make a loan to them. The plaintiffs had told the bank that they needed a loan. A bank officer agreed to process the loan application and said he would comply, which the plaintiffs understood to mean he would make the loan. The matter went to trial, and the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs. The trial court granted judgment notwithstanding the verdict, and the plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that there was insufficient evidence to support the misrepresentation element of the fraud action. The court found that the alleged promise was oral and that there were no witnesses and no documentary evidence to establish such a promise. The court concluded that the plaintiffs' evidence established nothing more than a willingness to consider future loan applications and did not establish a fraudulent promise to make the loan. The court ruled that the plaintiffs' understanding or expectation that the bank would extend a loan was not sufficient to establish an agreement to make a loan (45 Cal. App. 4th 133, 156).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.103

§ 105.103 Promise Without Intent to Perform Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Pleading or Proof of Failure to Perform

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THE PROMISOR FAILED TO PERFORM HIS/HER/ITS PROMISE.

Promisor's Failure to Perform. It is essential to the statement of a cause of action for deceit based on a promise made without any intention of performing it to allege facts showing that the promisor failed to perform his/her/its promise (Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 677, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff is not entitled to a recovery because regardless of the defendant's intent to perform the promise at the time the defendant made the promise, the defendant did in fact perform it.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.100[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.100[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.110 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Promisor's Failure to Perform

Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 , is discussed in § 105.101[3].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Promisor's Failure to Perform

Regus v. Schartkoff (1957) 156 Cal. App. 2d 382, 319 P.2d 721 , is discussed in § 105.101[3].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.104-105.109

[Reserved]

§§ 105.104[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.110

§ 105.110 Promise Without Intent to Perform is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent Not to Perform by Inference

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE A LACK OF SPECIFIC ALLEGATIONS THAT DEFENDANT DID NOT INTEND TO PERFORM THE PROMISE, BECAUSE THE PROMISE TO PERFORM IS ALLEGED WITH SUFFICIENT SPECIFICITY WITH OTHER FACTS THAT DEFENDANT'S INTENT NOT TO PERFORM IS NECESSARILY INFERRED FROM THOSE FACTS.

A. Promise Without Intent to Perform. A deceit is a promise made without any intention of performing it (Civ. Code § 1710(4)).

B. Necessary Inference of Lack of Intent to Perform Promise. It is not essential that a complaint should charge in so many words that there was no intent to fulfill the promise alleged when it was made. It suffices that this was the effect of the complaint's averments on the subject (Langley v. Rodriguez (1898) 122 Cal. 580, 582, 55 P. 406).

C. Intent May Be Established by Circumstantial Evidence. Fraudulent intent may be inferred from such circumstances as defendant's failure to attempt performance (Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the complaint need not specifically allege a promise without the intention of performing it if the intent not to perform is inferable from the facts alleged regarding the promise.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.100 et seq.

This form may also be used to oppose a contention that the complaint lacks sufficient specificity to set forth a cause of action for fraud [see § 105.10 et seq.].

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In this instance, involving a pleading requirement, counsel would argue that the facts alleged in the pleading are sufficient to infer, necessarily, that the defendant intended not to perform an alleged promise regarding a material fact.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessary Inference of Lack of Intent to Perform Promise

In Langley v. Rodriguez (1898) 122 Cal. 580, 55 P. 406 , the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment against the defendant, who had pleaded fraud in his answer as a defense to an action on a delivery contract for his raisin grapes. The defendant's answer alleged that to induce his signing of the contract, the agent of the plaintiff's assignor had made certain oral promises, including a promise to advance a portion of the price to enable him to pick and cure the grapes, that he would not have signed without this promise, and that when the agent made that promise, he did not know and was without reasonable ground to believe that the principal would make the promised advance. The Supreme Court observed that if, as alleged and as the evidence the defendant offered tended somewhat to show, the agent had no reasonable ground to believe that the principal would make the advance payment when the agent promised the advance payment, it was impossible to see how the promise could have been made in good faith--that is, with intent that it should be kept. Therefore, it was equivalent to a promise made without such intention and was fraudulent. The Court held that it was not essential that the answer should charge in so many words that there was no intention to fulfill the promise at the time it was made. It was sufficient that this was the effect of the averments on the subject (122 Cal. 580, 582) .

[b] Intent May Be Established by Circumstantial Evidence

In Locke v. Warner Bros., Inc. (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 921 , plaintiff filed an action against a film studio, alleging fraud in entering into a development contract with her. Plaintiff filed a declaration and deposition testimony of witnesses who had heard statements made two years after the contract, indicating that the studio did not intend to work with plaintiff. The trial court was not convinced by this evidence, stating that they were not sufficient to permit a jury to infer that the studio had intended to breach its obligations at the time of entering the contract. The trial court thus granted a summary judgment to the studio.

The court of appeal reversed, stating that fraudulent intent must often be established by circumstantial evidence, and may be inferred from such circum stances as defendant's failure to even attempt performance. The court concluded that plaintiff's evidence was sufficient to allow a trier of fact to infer that defendant never intended to give plaintiff's proposals a good faith evaluation (57 Cal. App. 4th 354, 368) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessary Inference of Lack of Intent to Perform Promise

In Wilson v. Rigali & Veselich (1934) 138 Cal. App. 760 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for rescission for fraud. The complaint involved the allegation of promises the defendants made without any intention of performing. However, the complaint did not expressly allege that the defendants had no intention of fulfilling the promises. The court of appeal ruled that the complaint was not deficient for this failure because the effect of the averments made on the subject was that there was no intention on the part of the defendants to fulfill the promises alleged (138 Cal. App. 760, 767).

[b] Intent May Be Established by Circumstantial Evidence

In Warren v. Merrill (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 96, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 122 , plaintiff brought an action to quiet title to a condominium and for damages for fraud and breach of fiduciary duty against the real estate broker who worked with plaintiff to purchase the property. After a bench trial, the court awarded plaintiff compensatory and punitive damages, and imposed a constructive trust on the property in plaintiff's name. The court of appeal affirmed. The appellate court held that substantial evidence supported the trial court's finding that the broker breached her fiduciary duties and procured the property through fraud. The evidence showed that the broker promised plaintiff that if he agreed to name the broker's daughter as a co-borrower on the mortgage loan application, her daughter would execute a quit claim deed after escrow closed, thus placing the property in plaintiff's name alone. The broker then submitted a loan application in the daughter's name alone, which falsely stated the daughter's business and financial assets as well as her current residence. The broker then convinced plaintiff to make several large payments that did not go directly into escrow, including payments to the broker's boyfriend and daughter, as down payment for the property. She also convinced plaintiff to sign a document renouncing any interest in the escrow property, ostensibly as a short-term measure to allow escrow to close. When escrow closed, however, the broker never transferred title in the property from her daughter to plaintiff. When plaintiff could not make the payments, she evicted him from the property, which she then rented out to a series of tenants. The court agreed that the evidence showed that the broker had fraudulently used the plaintiff to provide a down payment for the condominium, but never had any intention of transferring title in the property back to plaintiff as she had promised (143 Cal. App. 4th 96, 110-111) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
3. Promise of Performance Made Without Intent to Perform

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.111-105.119

[Reserved]

§§ 105.111[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.120

§ 105.120 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Facts Fails to Show Defendant Participated in or Knowingly Accepted Proceeds of Fraudulent Acts

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT DEFENDANT _____ [IN SOME WAY PARTICIPATED IN THE FRAUDULENT ACTS OR CONDUCT OF WHICH PLAINTIFF COMPLAINS or KNOWINGLY ACCEPTED THE PROCEEDS OF THE FRAUDULENT ACTS OR CONDUCT OF WHICH PLAINTIFF COMPLAINS].

Liability Based on Participation or Knowing Acceptance of Proceeds. Only those persons who in some way participate in the fraud complained of or who knowingly accept the fruits thereof can be held liable in damages therefor (Central Mut. Ins. Co. v. Schmidt (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 671, 673-674, 313 P.2d 132).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the defendant is not liable for the harm claimed by the plaintiff because the defendant is innocent of any participation in the alleged fraud and deceit and is innocent of any knowing acceptance of any of the proceeds from the alleged fraud.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or proof.

This form should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

If it appears that an agent's misrepresentations are in conflict with the limitations imposed on the agent by the terms of the written agreement between the principal and the complaining party, counsel should refer to § 105.121.

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, this memorandum of points and authorities may be opposed by the points and authorities in §§ 105.130-105.135, which indicate that an innocent principal is liable for fraud because either:

- The agent is acting within the agent's actual or apparent authority [§§ 105.130-105.133],
- The agent's knowledge of concealed facts may be imputed to the principal [§ 105.134],
- The other party has failed to read contract provisions limiting the agent's authority as a result of the agent's fraud [§ 105.135], or

- The principal has ratified the fraud of the agent [§ 105.131].

In addition, this form may be opposed by the points and authorities in §§ 105.133, 105.136, and 105.137 based on the principles that:

- A participant who receives no benefit from a fraudulent transaction may yet be liable therefor [§§ 105.133, 105.136, and 105.137],

- An innocent recipient cannot retain property acquired through a third party's fraud [§ 105.136], or

- Acts not within the agent's authority may be grounds for rescission [§ 105.137].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Based on Participation or Knowing Acceptance of Proceeds

In Central Mut. Ins. Co. v. Schmidt (1957) 152 Cal. App. 2d 671, 313 P.2d 132 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for fraud in connection with the sale of real property. The individual defendant had contracted to sell land to a corporation. which had sold a portion of that land to the plaintiff. The individual defendant had retained title to the land so that existing loan arrangements would not be disturbed. The individual defendant had promised to convey individual lots as they were sold, which he had done in this case. The contract between the defendant and the corporation provided that all sales would be deemed to be made by and on behalf of the corporation and that it was entitled to all proceeds of those sales. The plaintiff charged that the lot consisted of fill, which caused subsidence of the soil and damage to the house he built on the lot, and that neither the individual defendant nor the corporation's real estate agent had informed him of the soil's nature. The defendant contended that the corporation, not he, was the vendor and that the mere fact that he executed the conveyance did not make him the vendor. The court ruled that only those persons who in some way participate in a fraud or who knowingly accept the fruits of that fraud can be held liable in damages for the fraud. The individual defendant had not personally profited from the transaction, and the cause was remanded for determination of the question as to whether or not the individual defendant participated in the fraud.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability Based on Participation or Knowing Acceptance of Proceeds

In Thomsen v. Culver City Motor Co., Inc. (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 639, 41 P.2d 597 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment for the plaintiff in a case in which two officers and directors of a corporation had been held liable for damages for fraud involved in the corporation's sale of certain automobiles. The court noted that it is true that directors and officers of a corporation are liable for the corporation's torts in which they participate, but that it is equally true that they are not liable, if they do not participate in those torts and if they are guilty of no culpable negligence in allowing the commission of the wrongful acts. On a review of the evidence, the court concluded that it fell far short of showing a liability on the part of the directors, even if it were assumed that the corporation made the sales involved and received the proceeds. The case was distinguished from cases in which corporate directors were held liable on the principle that directors are presumed to know of corporate transactions. In those cases, they in fact had actual knowledge of the facts. In this case, the defendants did not have knowledge of and did not participate in any wrongful act, nor was either of them at fault in the performance of his duties as director or officer (4 Cal. App. 2d 639, 644-645) .

In Montgomery v. Meyerstein (1921) 186 Cal. 459, 199 P. 800 , the Supreme Court ruled that the trial court had properly refused to enter judgment against certain innocent defendants merely because they were parties to a real estate purchase agreement. The facts clearly showed that the defendants involved had no interest in the purchase other than that they held the encumbrance on the property by virtue of a deed of trust and the obligation of the seller. The plaintiff had requested them to sign the agreement to protect herself against the contingency that the encumbrances might not be paid out of payments made to the seller. Neither defendant had any knowledge whatever of the fraud perpetrated by the seller in procuring the agreement. They were innocent participants in the agreement and were entitled to the money due under the seller's preexisting obligation to them. Although the agreement on its face appeared to be the agreement of the seller and the other two defendants as parties of the first part, it was obvious from the facts that the other two parties had no interest in the transaction except so far as they had a lien on the property to be satisfied out of the purchase money. Thus, the Court concluded that there was no personal obligation on their part for the return of the money paid on the price or expended on the property by the plaintiff as a result of the seller's fraud. The plaintiff's only recourse, the Court observed, was against the seller alone (186 Cal. 459, 463) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.121

§ 105.121 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Innocent Principal Who Is Not Bound by Agent's Representations Beyond Terms of Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT or ACTION] SEEKS TO IMPOSE LIABILITY ON THE PRINCIPAL FOR REPRESENTATIONS MADE BY AN AGENT BEYOND THE LIMITED AUTHORITY SET FORTH IN THE WRITTEN CONTRACT.

Agent's Representations Exceeding Contract Terms. In an action for damages for deceit, a principal is bound only by the representations embodied in a written contract if the contract notifies the other contracting party that the agent's authority goes no further (Speck v. Wylie (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 625, 627, 36 P.2d 618 ; Gridley v. Tilson (1927) 202 Cal. 748, 751, 262 P. 322).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that an innocent principal is not liable in damages for an agent's fraud if the agent's representations exceeded the terms of the contract with the principal and if this contract provided that the agent's authority went no further than what was expressed in the contract.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue

is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.120[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.120[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.130 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent's Representations Exceeding Contract Terms

In Speck v. Wylie (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 625 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs in a suit for rescission by the purchasers of real property under an installment contract. The purchase was induced by material misrepresentations fraudulently made by the sellers' agent. The contract between the seller and the buyer contained an exculpatory clause to the effect that the contract contained all matters agreed on by the parties, that no agent had authority to alter its terms, that the parties were not bound by representations not in conformity with the contract, that the property was purchased based on the buyer's inspection of the property and not as a result of representations by the sellers' agent, and that the buyer waived all claims for damages or for cancellation of the contract by reason of any selling agent's representation other than as contained in the contract. The Court reiterated the rule that a principal is bound only by the representations embodied in the written contract if a provision in the contract notified the prospective purchaser that the agent's authority went no further. However, although an action for deceit would not be allowed, the principal, although innocent, should not be allowed to retain a consideration with which the purchaser has parted by reason of fraud, if the defrauded party rescinds promptly and the parties can be restored without substantial injury to their former status (1 Cal. 2d 625, 627).

In Gridley v. Tilson (1927) 202 Cal. 748, 262 P. 322 , an action, on behalf of the issuer of shares pursuant to a subscription agreement, on a promissory note given by the defendant for the purchase of the shares involved, the Supreme Court ruled that the trial court should not have received evidence concerning certain false statements and representations made to the defendant by the plaintiff's agents because the subscription contract limited the authority of the agents to make such representations. The defendant's answer alleged that the notes were given in reliance on certain false and fraudulent statements and representations made by the plaintiff's agents in connection with the subscription. The subscription contract included a copy of the securities sales permit issued by the Commissioner of Corporations. That document included authority to sell the shares for $1, but the agent had represented that the stock would subsequently be sold for $1.50 per share. The Court noted that although the statute [Civ. Code § 1625] provides that a written contract supersedes all negotiations and stipulations concerning the matter between the parties, fraud in the inducement of a contract may be shown. However, a well-settled exception is the case in which the party seeking to rely on fraudulent representations of an agent had notice of the limitation on the agent's authority to make representations. Therefore, concluded the Court, a principal is bound only by the representations embodied in the written contract if a provision in the contract notified the prospective purchaser that the agent's authority went no further (202 Cal. 748, 751) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agent's Representations Exceeding Contract Terms

In Weiner v. Roof (1937) 10 Cal. 2d 450 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment for damages, but affirmed a judgment for rescission against the defendant, a bank, in a case in which a developer had acted as the sales agent for land whose title the defendant held as trustee. The plaintiff and the developer had entered into a contract with the trustee under which a lot was sold to the plaintiff. On discovering the falsity of certain representations the developer made prior to and at the time of the contract's execution, the plaintiff rescinded. The trial court entered judgment decreeing rescission and awarding damages from both the developer and the defendant. However, the Supreme Court stated that an innocent principal is bound only by the representations embodied in a written contract, if that contract provides that the agent's authority goes no further. Innocent principals that contract in this way thus may relieve themselves of liability in deceit for the fraud of their agents. The Court added, however, that innocent principals are nevertheless subject to rescission on the part of the defrauded party on the theory that innocent principals so contracting may not be permitted to enrich themselves by reason of their agents' fraud and that any property received by those principals is held by them as constructive trustees for the person defrauded (10 Cal. 2d 450, 452-453).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.122

§ 105.122 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows No Liability for Conspiracy to Commit Constructive Fraud Because of Absence of Fiduciary Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE A PARTY WHO IS NOT IN A FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP WITH THE PLAINTIFF CANNOT BE HELD LIABLE FOR CONSPIRACY TO COMMIT CONSTRUCTIVE FRAUD.

No Liability Based on Conspiracy for Constructive Fraud. A party who is not in a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff cannot be held liable for conspiracy to commit constructive, as opposed to actual, fraud (Kidron v. Movie Acquisition Corp. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1598, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 752).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that a party who is not in a fiduciary relationship with the plaintiff cannot be held liable for conspiracy to commit constructive fraud.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.120[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.120[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.130 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability Based on Conspiracy for Constructive Fraud

Kidron v. Movie Acquisition Corp. (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1598, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 752 stemmed from a dispute between partners in a joint venture to produce a failed television series. The plaintiff, the originator of the concept, sued his producers and a distributor for conspiracy to commit fraud in removing the plaintiff from the venture. The plaintiff contended that the distributor had either breached a direct fiduciary duty or had conspired with the producers to breach a duty owed to the plaintiff by the producers. At the conclusion of the plaintiff's case, the trial court granted a motion by the distributor for nonsuit, dismissing the distributor.

The court of appeal affirmed, noting initially that the plaintiff had been unable to produce evidence of a direct breach of fiduciary duty by the distributor. There was no evidence that the distributor had intended to agree to defraud or had intended to defraud the plaintiff. As for the claim of conspiracy to breach a duty owed to the plaintiff by the producers, the court ruled that a person who is not a fiduciary cannot conspire to breach a duty owed only by a fiduciary. The court stated that both a fiduciary and a person who is not a fiduciary owe a duty not to engage in actual fraud, but only a fiduciary owes a duty not to engage in constructive fraud (40 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1597) . Because the plaintiff did not suggest that the distributor owed him a fiduciary duty, the distributor could not be subject to liability for conspiracy to commit constructive fraud (40 Cal. App. 4th 1571, 1598) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.123-105.129

[Reserved]

§§ 105.123[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.130

§ 105.130 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Principal's Liability for Agent's Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF DEFENDANT, AS PRINCIPAL, IS INNOCENT OF PERSONAL PARTICIPATION IN THE FRAUD, BECAUSE DEFENDANT IS JOINTLY LIABLE WITH DEFENDANT'S AGENT FOR DAMAGES INCURRED BY THE AGENT'S PROCUREMENT OF THE TRANSACTION BY MEANS OF FRAUD WHILE THE AGENT WAS ACTING WITHIN THE AGENT'S ACTUAL OR APPARENT AUTHORITY.

Principal Liable for Fraud of Agent in Agency Business. A principal is responsible to third persons for the negligence of the principal's agent in the transaction of the business of the agency, including wrongful acts committed by the agent in and as a part of the transaction of that business, and for the agent's willful omission to fulfill the obligations of the principal, unless the principal is required or authorized by law to employ that agent (Civ. Code § 2338).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant or cross defendant, albeit an innocent principal [see § 105.120 et seq.] was jointly liable with the defendant's or cross defendant's agent, who was acting within the scope of his or her actual or apparent authority or in the course of the business of the agency when the agent procured a transaction by means of fraud.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or other challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principal Liable for Fraud of Agent in Agency Business

Civ. Code § 2338 provides that unless a principal is required by law to employ a particular agent, a principal is responsible to third persons for the negligence of the principal's agent in the transaction of agency business, including wrongful acts committed by the agent in and as a part of the transaction of agency business, and for the agent's willful omission to fulfill the principal's obligation.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Principal Liable for Fraud of Agent in Agency Business

In Seymour v. Summa Vista Cinema, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 809 F.2d 1385 , the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed an award of compensatory and punitive damages against a stock brokerage firm whose employee had defrauded clients.

The court (citing Alhino v. Starr (1980) 112 Cal. App. 3d 158, 174, 169 Cal. Rptr. 136) said that the brokerage firm was liable for the employee's fraud in inducing securities purchases under federal law, for failure to provide reasonable supervision and training, and under California law, for acts of its agent performed within the scope of the agent's authority (809 F.2d 1385, 1388) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.131

§ 105.131 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Innocent Principal Accepted Benefits

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF DEFENDANT, AS PRINCIPAL, IS INNOCENT OF PERSONAL PARTICIPATION IN THE FRAUD, BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACCEPTED AND RETAINED THE BENEFITS THAT ACCRUED FROM THE TRANSACTION, WHICH WAS PROCURED BY MEANS OF THE FRAUD OF DEFENDANT'S AGENT.

Innocent Principal Who Accepts Benefits. If an agent acting within the agent's actual or apparent authority procures a transaction by means of fraud, the principal is jointly liable with the agent for damages incurred thereby, even though the principal is innocent of personally participating in the fraud, if the principal accepts and retains the benefits that accrue from the transaction (Crawford v. Nastos (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 659, 667, 6 Cal. Rptr. 425).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant accepted and retained the benefits that accrued from the transaction, which was procured by means of the fraud of the defendant's agent.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether all of the elements of that cause of action are satisfied or whether the plaintiff is in the class of persons entitled to recover [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Innocent Principal Who Accepts Benefits

In Crawford v. Nastos (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 659 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment in favor of an innocent principal in an action for fraud arising out of the sale of real property through an agent. The agent, a real estate broker, told the plaintiff, the purchaser of the property, that the property contained an adequate water supply, which was a misrepresentation. The plaintiff sued the seller, her two sons, and the broker. As to the two sons, the court of appeal agreed with the trial court that there could be no liability because neither participated in the fraud and neither profited from the transaction. However, the seller had authorized and directed the agent to sell the property, ratified the sale, executed the deed, accepted the purchase price, and retained the fruits of the sale. Accordingly, the court held that the trial court had ignored the legal basis of the seller's liability, namely, that if an agent acting within the agent's actual or apparent authority procures a sale of property by means of fraud and if the principal accepts and retains the benefits that accrue from the sale, the principal is jointly liable with the agent for damages incurred due to the fraud, even though the principal is innocent of personally participating in the fraud (182 Cal. App. 2d 659, 667).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Innocent Principal Who Accepts Benefits

In Ach v. Finkelstein (1968) 264 Cal. App. 2d 667, 70 Cal. Rptr. 472 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs for fraud in an apartment house sale. Four parties owned the property, one of whom was unaware of the fraud involved and two of whom acted as the agents of the others in effecting the transaction. The fraud consisted of a failure to disclose to the buyers that rental concessions had been given to the tenants. In upholding judgment against all four defendants, the court ruled that if an agent acting within the agent's actual or apparent authority fraudulently procures a sale of property and if the principal accepts and retains the benefits that accrue from the transaction, the principal is jointly liable with the agent for damages incurred due to the fraud, even though the principal is innocent of personally participating in the fraud (264 Cal. App. 2d 667, 677) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.132

§ 105.132 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Innocent Joint Venturers Retained Benefits

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF DEFENDANT JOINT VENTURER IS INNOCENT OF PERSONAL PARTICIPATION IN THE FRAUD, BECAUSE DEFENDANT ACCEPTED AND RETAINED THE BENEFITS THAT ACCRUED FROM THE TRANSACTION PROCURED BY MEANS OF THE FRAUD OF ANOTHER JOINT VENTURER, WHO WAS ACTING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE JOINT VENTURE AND IN FURTHERANCE OF ITS AGREED PURPOSES.

Innocent Joint Venturer. If one joint venturer, acting within the scope of the joint venture and in furtherance of its agreed purposes, is guilty of fraud in procuring benefits that the joint venturers retain, all joint venturers are liable for the fraud (Grant v. Weatherholt (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 34, 45, 266 P.2d 185).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant was a joint venturer who accepted and retained the benefits that accrued from a transaction procured by means of another joint venturer's fraud.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Innocent Joint Venturer

In Grant v. Weatherholt (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 34, 266 P.2d 185 , the court of appeal ruled that if one joint venturer, acting within the scope of the joint venture and in furtherance of its agreed purposes, is guilty of fraud in procuring benefits that the joint venturers retain, all joint venturers are liable for the fraud. In this case, one of two joint venturers had purchased certain real property, encumbering it with a recorded trust deed. The two then formed a corporation and issued stock to themselves and their wives. The owner of the property then sought and obtained a loan from the plaintiff for the purpose of developing the property, representing that the property was free of encumbrance. The joint venturers later ran out of money, and the owner of the trust deed, the wife of the owner of the property, foreclosed. The court noted that the representations to the plaintiff that the property was unencumbered were made during the existence of the joint venture and in the interest and scope of the joint venture. The property that was exchanged for stock in the corporation was improved through the use of money the plaintiff advanced, and the joint venturers both received and retained benefits that came to them as joint venturers and stockholders through the improvement of the property at the plaintiff's expense. Under these circumstances, the fraud of one partner imposes liability on his copartners. Although the distinctions between the two types of entities (partnerships versus joint ventures) are distinctions of substance, the court held that insofar as the relations of joint venturers as between themselves and as to third parties are identical with those of partners, settled principles applicable to partnerships should control (123 Cal. App. 2d 34, 45) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.133

§ 105.133 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Need Not Show Benefit to Person Charged With Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF DEFENDANT DID NOT BENEFIT FROM THE FRAUD, BECAUSE LIABILITY FOR FRAUD IS PREDICATED ON THE FACT THAT PLAINTIFF HAS BEEN MISLED TO PLAINTIFF'S PREJUDICE, NOT THAT DEFENDANT HAS PROFITED BY DEFENDANT'S WRONG.

Liability Not Predicated on Profit. Liability for fraud is predicated on the fact that the plaintiff has been misled to plaintiff's prejudice, not that the defendant has profited by defendant's wrong. It is not essential to liability that the person charged with fraud should have received any benefit from the fraud (Taormina v. Antelope Mining Corp. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320, 242 P.2d 665 ; Swasey v. de L'Etanche (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 713, 718, 62 P.2d 753).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that it is not essential to liability that the person charged with fraud should have received any benefit therefrom.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Not Predicated on Profit

In Taormina v. Antelope Mining Corp. (1952) 110 Cal. App. 2d 314, 242 P.2d 665 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment against a corporation and two of its directors in an action for damages for fraud in connection with the sale of capital stock of the corporation. The complaint alleged that the corporation had been granted a permit to issue capital stock with the proviso that the certificates be held in escrow and not issued without the consent of the Commissioner of Corporations. It further alleged that the plaintiffs and the defendants entered into an agreement for the purchase and sale of a portion of that stock, the Commissioner had not consented to the sale, and the defendants had defrauded the plaintiffs by falsely representing that they had authority to issue stock. The court noted that a person who sells a security impliedly represents that a permit for the sale has been secured, because the law requires one for such a sale. If this implied representation is false, then it is a negligent misrepresentation that is an actionable fraud. If, as in this case, the action is for damages for fraud, the plaintiff may recover against all persons participating in the fraud, whether or not they received a portion of the money (110 Cal. App. 2d 314, 320) .

In Swasey v. de L'Etanche (1936) 17 Cal. App. 2d 713 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment by the trial court for the defendants after it sustained a general and special demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend, holding that although a special demurrer to the allegation concerning the liability of the two the defendants did not lie, the special demurrer was good in one particular and, accordingly, the order sustaining it was not reversible. The complaint alleged that one defendant, acting for himself and as agent for his wife, also a defendant, made fraudulent representations as to the property sold to the plaintiffs. It also alleged that the property was the defendant's community property. The defendant demurred for uncertainty, in that it could not be ascertained if the wife was one of the owners. The court of appeal concluded that although the additional facts sought by the demurrer would more accurately have defined the wife's interest, the absence of those facts did not create any uncertainty and that a demurrer for uncertainty will not lie as to immaterial matter. To establish materiality, the defendants argued that the amount of damages that could be awarded against the wife would vary according to whether or not she was an owner of the property. However, said the court, each defendant connected with a fraud is liable for the full amount of the damages. It is not essential to liability that the person charged with fraud should have received any benefit from the fraud. It is also not essential, if the misrepresentations concern property, that the person charged with fraud be the owner of the property. Liability is predicated on the fact that the plaintiff has been misled to the plaintiff's prejudice and not that the defendant has profited by the defendant's wrong (17 Cal. App. 2d 713, 718).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.134

§ 105.134 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Agent Concealed Known Facts

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE DEFENDANT AS A PRINCIPAL IS CHARGED WITH THE KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS KNOWN BY DEFENDANT'S AGENT WHILE THE AGENT WAS ACTING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE AGENT'S AUTHORITY, AND THE DEFENDANT'S FAILURE TO DISCLOSE THE FACTS CONCEALED BY THE AGENT CONSTITUTES FRAUD ON THE PART OF THE DEFENDANT.

Imputation of Agent's Knowledge of Concealed Facts. The knowledge of an agent, which the agent is under a duty to disclose to the agent's principal, is imputed to the principal so that the principal is charged with the agent's knowledge. Under these circumstances, the principal has a duty to reveal the hidden and material facts concealed by the agent and of which the principal has knowledge, and the principal's failure to disclose them constitutes fraud (Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349, 353, 164 P.2d 8).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that a principle is liable for fraud on the ground that a principal is charged with the knowledge of facts known by his or her agent, who is acting within the scope of his or her authority, and the principal fails to disclose such facts when they are concealed by the agent.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Imputation of Agent's Knowledge

In Herzog v. Capital Co. (1945) 27 Cal. 2d 349 , the Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the plaintiff in an action against the sellers of a house for damages for fraud perpetrated by their agent in the sale, holding that the acts of the agent were imputed to the sellers. The defendants, acting through their agent, sold the plaintiff a house, representing that it was in sound condition and perfectly intact. When the house began to leak during rainstorms, the plaintiff sued for damages, alleging in his complaint that when he inspected the house he found that it had been freshly painted, which concealed the defective condition. It was clear that the agent had prior knowledge of the defects and that he had made the representations either with actual knowledge of their falsity or in a manner not warranted by the information he possessed. The Court noted that the sales agreement provided that there were no promises or representations other than those contained in it and that this type of provision ordinarily relieves an honest seller from liability for damages arising from the fraud of the seller's agent. However, it held that this rule does not exempt the principal from liability for the principal's own conduct. In this case, although the contract notified the plaintiff that the agent had no authority to make representations, the agent knew of the defects and was acting within the scope of his authority when he caused the house to be painted, thereby concealing the defects. The knowledge of an agent, which the agent is under a duty to disclose to the agent's principal, is imputed to the principal, and, accordingly, the defendants were charged with the agent's knowledge. Under these circumstances, the Court held, the defendants, as principals, had a duty to reveal the hidden and material facts concealed by their agent and known to them, and their failure to disclose them constituted fraud. As to this positive duty of disclosure, the plaintiff could rely on the agent's actual and ostensible authority; the exculpatory provision in the contract related only to the exclusion of liability for representations and verbal understandings. A principal under a positive duty to make a disclosure cannot escape liability for failure to do so by relying on this type of contract provision (27 Cal. 2d 349, 353).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.135

§ 105.135 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Agent's Fraud Resulted in Plaintiff's Failure to Read Contract Containing Exculpatory Clause

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE EXCULPATORY PROVISIONS LIMITING AN AGENT'S AUTHORITY AS TO REPRESENTATIONS OTHER THAN THOSE SET FORTH IN THE AGREEMENT DO NOT RELIEVE THE PRINCIPAL OF LIABILITY FOR THE AGENT'S FRAUD IF THE OTHER PARTY FAILS TO READ THE AGREEMENT AS A RESULT OF THE PRINCIPAL'S OR THE AGENT'S FRAUD OR TRICKERY.

Failure to Read Exculpatory Clause. The rule that a principal cannot be bound except by representations contained in a contract providing that the agent has no authority to make any other or different representations does not apply if the other party's failure to read the contract is the result of the fraud or trickery of the principal or the agent (Humphrey v. Harry H. Culver & Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 765, 766, 32 P.2d 630).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that an innocent principal is bound only by the terms of the contract if the agent's representations exceed the contract terms [see § 105.121], unless the complaining party's failure to read the agreement results from the principal's or the agent's fraud or trickery.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.90 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Read Exculpatory Clause

In Humphrey v. Harry H Culver & Co. (1934) 220 Cal. 765 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for fraud based on alleged fraudulent representations in connection with the sale of real property. The trial court found that the defendant's agent had made false and fraudulent representations to the plaintiff. The complaint alleged, and the trial court found, that when the plaintiff signed the sales agreement, the agent would not allow the plaintiff to read the agreement. Instead, the agent falsely and fraudulently represented to the plaintiff that each clause in the agreement was favorable to the plaintiff. The agreement provided that the principals would not be bound except by the written representations and provisions contained in the agreement and that the agent had no authority to make any other or different representations. The Court held that the rule that a principal cannot be bound except by representations contained in a contract that includes this type of exculpatory provision does not apply if the other party's failure to read the contract is the result of the fraud or trickery of the principal or the agent (220 Cal. 765, 766).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.136

§ 105.136 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Is Entitled to Rescission for Fraudulent Act of Agent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR RESCISSION OF THE CONTRACT BASED ON FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE A DONEE CANNOT RETAIN AN ADVANTAGE OBTAINED FROM ANOTHER AS THE RESULT OF A THIRD PARTY'S FRAUD, EVEN IF THE DONEE NEITHER KNEW NOR HAD REASON TO KNOW OF THE FRAUD.

A. Rescission of Contract. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding, or of any other party jointly contracting with that party, was obtained through fraud exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he/she/it rescinds, or of any other party to the contract jointly interested with that party (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

B. Retaining Benefits of Fraud. A donee cannot conscientiously retain an advantage obtained from another because of a third person's misconduct, even if the donee neither knew nor had reason to know if the misconduct (Nunes v. De Faria (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 794, 798, 238 P.2d 106).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that one who obtains property as a result of a third party's fraud cannot retain it, even if he or she neither knew nor had reason to know of it.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.90 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Retaining Benefits of Fraud

In Nunes v. De Faria (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 794, 238 P.2d 106 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the plaintiff in an action to quiet title to real property and cancel a joint tenancy deed even as to the joint tenant who had not participated in the fraud. The plaintiff was persuaded to deed certain real property to the three defendants after one of the defendants falsely represented that doing so would not interfere with the plaintiff's right to sell the property. One of the other defendants contended that the misrepresentation was not binding on her. However, the court noted that as between the original parties to a transaction induced by the fraud or material representations of a third person, the injured party has power of avoidance, unless the other party is not only ignorant of the fraud or misrepresentation when entering into the transaction, but has either parted with value or has changed position materially in reliance on the transaction. A donee cannot conscientiously retain an advantage obtained from another because of a third person's conduct, even if the donee neither knew nor had reason to know of it. Accordingly, the court concluded that the misrepresentation was binding on the nonparticipating defendant (107 Cal. App. 2d 794, 798) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Retaining Benefits of Fraud

In Deasy v. Taylor (1918) 39 Cal. App. 235, 178 P. 538 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment voiding certain agreements and transfers the plaintiff executed in favor of the defendants. Two of the defendants had procured the plaintiff's signature to the documents through fraud. On appeal, the other defendants contended that the defendants who had exercised the fraud had not acted as their agents, that they had not confederated or conspired with them, and therefore that the plaintiff was not entitled to rescission against them. However, under Civ. Code § 1689, rescission may be had if the rescinding party gave consent because of the fraud exercised by the party as to whom he or she rescinds or by any other party jointly interested in the contract (39 Cal. App. 235, 239-240) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.137

§ 105.137 Misrepresentation by Agent Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven-- Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Is Entitled to Rescission for Fraud on Agent Despite Exculpatory Clause in Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE A CONTRACT OBTAINED BY AN AGENT THROUGH FRAUDULENT MISREPRESENTATION OF FACTS MAY BE RESCINDED BY THE OTHER PARTY EVEN THOUGH IT PROVIDES THAT IT WILL NOT BE AFFECTED BY REPRESENTATIONS NOT CONTAINED THEREIN.

Representations as Grounds for Rescission. A contract obtained by an agent through fraudulent misrepresentation of facts may be rescinded by the other party even though it provides that it will not be affected by representations not contained in the contract, if rescission is prompt and the parties can be restored without substantial injury to their former status (Speck v. Wylie (1937) 1 Cal. 2d 625, 628, 36 P.2d 618).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that even though the contract on which the suit is based contains exculpatory language to the effect that it will not be affected by representations not contained in the contract, the plaintiff or cross complainant is entitled to bring suit for rescission, if the contract was obtained by an agent through fraud, the rescission is prompt, and the parties can be restored to their pre-contract status without substantial injury.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.120 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.130[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.130[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations as Grounds for Rescission

Speck v. Wylie (1934) 1 Cal. 2d 625, 36 P.2d 618 , is discussed in § 105.121[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
4. Misrepresentation by Agent or Other Third Party

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.138-105.149

[Reserved]

§§ 105.138[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.150

§ 105.150 Misrepresentation by Employer in Employment Termination Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Employer's Misrepresentation Aimed at Employment Termination Is Not Actionable in Tort

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT DISCLOSES THAT THE BASIS OF THE ACTION IS AN ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION AIMED AT TERMINATING PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYMENT, WHICH IS NOT ACTIONABLE IN TORT.

No Fraud Claim From Misrepresentation Aimed at Employment Termination. Although termination of employment may be actionable if it breaches a contract or violates fundamental public policy, no independent tort cause of action for fraud can arise from an employer's misrepresentation aimed at terminating an employee's employment (Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1178, 1184-1185, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88); but see Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or the evidence establishes, that the alleged misrepresentation was aimed at terminating the plaintiff's employment, which is not actionable in tort.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or the proof.

This form should be combined, when appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show how the facts alleged in the complaint indicate that any alleged misrepresentation was made as part of the process of terminating the plaintiff's employment and is therefore not separately actionable from the termination itself.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender)

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For other points and authorities pertaining to actions for wrongful termination of employment, see Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Dicipline , Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior , and Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine , Employer and Employee.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fraud Claim From Misrepresentation Aimed at Employment Termination

The plaintiff in Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 , brought an action for wrongful termination against his employer, alleging breach of contract and various tort causes of action, including fraud. At trial, there was a conflict in the evidence regarding the circumstances surrounding the plaintiff's termination, but the plaintiff testified that his supervisor had told him in a meeting that the company had decided to eliminate his position and that he would be terminated if he did not resign. The plaintiff asked for work in a lesser position within the company, but his supervisor refused to offer him any such position. The plaintiff therefore resigned. The supervisor's testimony related different details regarding the plaintiff's termination, but the supervisor conceded that no corporate decision had been made to eliminate the plaintiff's position. The jury returned a verdict of $120,000 for the plaintiff, of which $38,013 represented damages for breach of contract, and the remainder represented damages for fraudulent misrepresentation. The trial court entered judgment for $120,000, and the court of appeal affirmed.

On review, the Supreme Court reversed the judgment and ordered it reduced to $38.013, the amount of the contractual damages. The Court held that wrongful termination of employment ordinarily does not give rise to a cause of action for fraud or deceit, even if some misrepresentation is made in the course of the employee's dismissal (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1178) . The Court relied in part on its previous decision in Foley v. Interactive Data Corp. (1988) 47 Cal. 3d 654, 696, 699, 254 Cal. Rptr. 211, 765 P.2d 373 , in which the Court had held that breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in an employment contract gives rise to contract damages only and not tort damages. The Court noted that underlying the Foley decision was concern about how extending tort recovery would affect economic policy and stability, the traditional separation of tort and contract law, and the existence of other protections against improper termination of employment (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1181-1182) . The Court observed that the misrepresentation alleged in this case transformed what would have been a resignation into a constructive termination. The employer simply employed a falsehood to accomplish indirectly what it could have accomplished directly--termination of the plaintiff's employment (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1184) . The Court concluded that such misrepresentations cannot serve as a predicate for tort damages that would otherwise be unavailable under Foley. The Court stated that recognition of a fraud cause of action in the context of wrongful termination of employment not only would contravene the logic of Foley, but would also cause adverse consequences for industry in general. The Court reasoned that fraud is easily pleaded and that, if such a cause of action were permitted, it would likely be pleaded in most wrongful termination complaints. These claims are difficult to resolve at the summary judgment or demurrer stage of litigation, and the resultant costs and inhibition of employment decision-making were precisely the sort of consequences that had supported the Court's decision in Foley (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1185) .

The Court noted that if the termination itself is wrongful, either because it breaches the employment contract or violates a well-established public policy articulated in a statute or constitutional provision, then the employee is entitled to recover damages sounding in contract or tort, respectively. However, the Court held that no independent fraud claim arises from a misrepresentation aimed at termination of employment (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1185) .

The Court noted in dicta, however, that a misrepresentation not aimed at effecting termination of employment, but instead designed to induce the employee to alter his or her position detrimentally in some other respect, might be the basis for a valid fraud claim. The Court cited as an example the case of Miller v. Fairchild Indus., Inc. (9th Cir. 1989) 885 F.2d 498, 509-510 , in which the plaintiffs signed settlement agreements giving up their right to sue under federal employment discrimination laws in return for the employer's promise to provide training opportunities. Shortly after the settlement, the plaintiffs were laid off and did not receive the promised training. The Court suggested that this sort of conduct might constitute actionable fraud because the allegedly fraudulent settlement agreement was collateral to the defendant's termination of the employment contract itself (6 Cal. 4th 1174, 1185-1186) .

Lazar v. Superior Court (1996) 12 Cal. 4th 631, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 377, 909 P.2d 981 , which is discussed in Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Wrongful Termination and Dicipline , Ch. 100, Employer and Employee: Respondeat Superior , and Ch. 239, Workers' Compensation Exclusive Remedy Doctrine , Employer and Employee Hunter v. Up-Right, Inc. (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 1174, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 8, 864 P.2d 88 . The Court held that Hunter does not preclude tort recovery in every case involving a termination. The rationale in Hunter supports tort recovery only with respect to a misrepresentation that is separate from the termination of the employment contract. This does not mean that effecting a termination in conjunction with fraudulent conduct will insulate an employer from an otherwise properly pled fraud claim. Fraud recovery is precluded only if the result of the employer's misrepresentation is indistinguishable from an ordinary constructive wrongful termination (12 Cal. 4th 631, 643) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.151-105.159

[Reserved]

§§ 105.151[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.160

§ 105.160 Misrepresentation Regarding Sexual Relations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Privacy and Public Policy Concerns Bar Action Based on Representations Regarding Sexual Relations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM IS BASED ON PROMISES OR REPRESENTATIONS MADE BY CONSENTING ADULTS REGARDING THEIR SEXUAL RELATIONSHIP AND THEREFORE IS BARRED BY PRIVACY AND PUBLIC POLICY REASONS.

A. Representations Regarding Sexual Relations. For reasons of privacy and public policy, and in recognition of the highly intimate nature of sexual relations, courts should not supervise or adjudicate the promises or representations made by consenting adults regarding their sexual relationships (Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 18-21, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402 ; Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 643-645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618).

[Optional] B. No Fraud in False Representations of Love or Sexual Desire. The public policy behind Civil Code Section 43.4 precludes a plaintiff from bringing an action for fraud and deceit based on inducement to marry and transfer property as a result of allegedly false or fraudulent representations of love, passion, or sexual desire (Askew v. Askew (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 952-957, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284).

[Optional] C. False Promise to Marry or Cohabit. A fraudulent promise to marry or to cohabit after marriage does not give rise to a cause of action for damages (Civ. Code § 43.4).

[Optional] D. Seduction. No cause of action arises for (a) alienation of affection, (b) criminal conversation, (c) seduction of a person over the age of legal consent, or (d) breach of promise to marry (Civ. Code § 43.5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff may not recover for fraud and deceit if the action is based on a fraudulent breach of promise or misrepresentation regarding the sexual relationship of the parties [see Civ. Code § 43.5].

Paragraphs B through D should be included, if applicable, if the claim involves, respectively, fraudulent misrepresentations of sexual desire that induced the plaintiff to marry the defendant or to transfer property to the defendant after marriage, a false promise to marry or to cohabit after marriage, or false representations of love or seduction [see Civ. Code §§ 43.4, 43.5; Askew v. Askew (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 952-957, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284] .

These points and authorities should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or the proof.

This form should be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Counsel may wish to point out that the case involves no competing or overriding public policy interests, such as those involved in Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 and Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 , which are discussed in § 105.170.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.170 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations Regarding Sexual Relations

In Perry v. Atkinson (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 240 Cal. Rptr. 402 , the plaintiff had been engaged in an intimate relationship with the defendant, a married man, for more than a year when the plaintiff became pregnant with the defendant's child. The defendant told the plaintiff that he would like her to have his child, but that he wanted to postpone doing so for a year. The defendant promised the plaintiff that if she would terminate the pregnancy, he would conceive a child with her in a year and that even if they were not together in a year, he would do so by artificial insemination. After the plaintiff terminated her pregnancy, she learned that the defendant never intended to keep his promise of another baby. The plaintiff became depressed, required psychiatric treatment, incurred extensive medical bills, and lost six months' earnings. The plaintiff sued the defendant for fraud and deceit and for intentional infliction of emotional distress. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer to the fraud and deceit cause of action in the second amended complaint. The parties settled the emotional distress cause of action for $250,000, reserving to the plaintiff her right to appeal the dismissal of the fraud and deceit cause of action.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of the fraud and deceit cause of action. The court quoted at length from Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 643-645, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 , finding the reasoning in that case persuasive as applied to the facts in the case before it (195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 18-19) . Although the defendant in this case may have lied deliberately to induce the plaintiff to have an abortion, the procreative decisions of the parties were so intensely private that the court declined to intervene. Tort liability, the court said, cannot apply to the choice, however motivated, of whether to conceive or bear a child. The court referred to Civ. Code § 43.4 and Civ. Code § 43.5 as evidencing a public policy recognized by the legislature that certain sexual conduct and interpersonal decisions are outside the realm of tort liability. The court reasoned that if there is no tort cause of action for promises to fulfill the obligations of a marriage relationship, logically there can be no cause of action for a fraudulent promise by a married man to impregnate a woman who is not his wife (195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 19) .

Relying on Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 , and Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 (discussed in § 105.170[3][a]), the plaintiff argued that the defendant's privacy rights must give way to her right to protection from and compensation for physical harm and to the government's interest in protecting the health and welfare of its citizens. Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 , involved a representation by a woman that she was taking birth control pills. Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 , involved a representation by a man that he was infertile. However, the court, ruling that those cases could not readily be reconciled, chose to follow the reasoning of Stephen K. (195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 20) . The court said that Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996 , involving tortious transmission of a contagious disease, was distinguishable in that it involved public policy considerations beyond the sexual conduct and procreative decisions of the two consenting adults (195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 21).

The court concluded that courts should not undertake to adjudicate promises and representations made by consenting adults regarding their sexual relationship. Once courts attempt to do so, they will be required to set standards for making and performing those promises. The court stated that Stephen K. and the legislature in Civ. Code §§ 43.4 and 43.5 have wisely counseled against such folly (195 Cal. App. 3d 14, 21) .

Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 , involved a father's cross complaint for fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and negligence filed in response to the mother's paternity action. The cross defendant had falsely represented to the cross plaintiff that she was taking birth control pills. The cross defendant moved for judgment on the pleadings on the grounds of public policy and the cross plaintiff's failure to establish damages. The trial court treated the motion as a general demurrer and ordered the cross action dismissed. The cross plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first narrowed the issue, noting that the cross plaintiff's claim was personal and did not involve any issue of either parent's obligation to support the child. Thus, the state had a minimal interest, if any, in this otherwise entirely private matter. Although the cross defendant had lied and betrayed the cross plaintiff, the court concluded that the circumstances and highly intimate nature of the relationship in which the false representations occurred precluded the court's intervention (105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 643) . Such intervention would amount to nothing more than the court's supervising promises made between consenting adults regarding the circumstances of their private sexual conduct and would encourage unwarranted governmental intrusion into matters affecting the individual's right to privacy (105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 644-645) . The court noted that matters of sex and birth control have long been within the scope of an individual's right to privacy. The practice of birth control, if any, is best left to the individuals involved. Furthermore, the court noted that birth control pills are not 100 percent effective and that the cross plaintiff himself could have taken precautionary measures (105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 645) .

[b] No Fraud in False Representations of Love or Sexual Desire

In Askew v. Askew (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 284 , the defendant had filed for dissolution of her 13-year marriage to the plaintiff. Five months after the dissolution proceeding was filed, the plaintiff sued the defendant for fraud, alleging that the defendant had falsely represented to the plaintiff that she loved the plaintiff and was sexually attracted to him. Allegedly in reliance on these representations, the plaintiff was induced to marry the defendant and to transfer some of his separate property into joint tenancy with the defendant. The defendant demurred to the complaint, but the demurrer was overruled. The civil action proceeded to trial before the dissolution proceeding, and the trial court entered a judgment on a jury verdict for the plaintiff. The defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal observed that although the plaintiff had attempted to recharacterize it, the essence of the plaintiff's case was that had the defendant not misrepresented her feelings concerning love and sexual desire, the plaintiff would never have married her and placed property into joint tenancy. The court stated that the substance of the plaintiff's case as actually pled and presented to the jury was nothing more than a latter-day incarnation of a breach-of-promise suit (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 953) . The court noted that California's "antiheartbalm" statute (Civ. Code § 43.5), enacted in 1939, prohibits causes of action for alienation of affection, "criminal conversation," seduction of a person over the legal age of consent, and breach of promise of marriage (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 954) . Although the statute clearly prohibited lawsuits for breach of contract, the California Supreme Court had held in Langley v. Schumacker (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 601, 603, 297 P.2d 977 , that the statute did not bar tort causes of action based on fraudulent promises to marry or to consummate the marriage (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 954-955) . The court noted that the legislature responded to the Langley decision in 1959 by enacting Civ. Code § 43.4, which provides that a fraudulent promise to marry or to cohabit after marriage does not give rise to a cause of action for damages (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 955) .

Citing subsequent cases construing Civ. Code § 43.4, the court stated that if anything is clear from the swift reaction to Langley, it is that the fact of false representations, even fraudulent representations, is not enough to avoid California's "antiheartbalm" statutes. The court held that in most cases, love and sexual desire are part of the "bundle of expectations" associated with marriage and that the defendant's false statements that she loved and sexually desired the plaintiff clearly come within the legal category of a fraudulent promise to "cohabit" after marriage. The court reasoned that the "antiheartbalm" statutes not only preclude "old fashioned" causes of action, but also embody a basic reluctance on the part of the legislature and the judiciary to allow recovery for promises of love (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 957) . The reluctance stems in part from "the sheer unseemliness of litigating tender matters of romantic or sexual emotion in courts of law" (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 957-958) . Citing concerns for privacy, the court concluded that words of love, passion, and sexual desire are unsuited to the cumbersome strictures of common law fraud and deceit and that courts should not be in the business of probing a suitor's state of mind (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 959) . The court further noted that to permit such fraud actions would allow circumvention of California's statutory scheme of no-fault divorce (22 Cal. App. 4th 942, 959-960) .

124 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.161-105.169

[Reserved]

§§ 105.161[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.170

§ 105.170 Misrepresentation Regarding Sexual Relations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof of Facts Consistent With Policy Favoring Prevention of Disease and Injury

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE PUBLIC INTEREST IN PREVENTING _____ [CONTAGIOUS DISEASES and/or SERIOUS PHYSICAL INJURY] OVERRIDES PRIVACY OR PUBLIC POLICY CONSIDERATIONS.

Contagious Disease or Serious Physical Harm. Although the right to privacy normally shields sexual relations from judicial scrutiny, it does not go so far as to insulate from liability one sexual partner who by intentionally tortious conduct causes physical injury to the other (Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996-997, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 ; Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381, 385, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the public interest in preventing contagious diseases or serious physical injury overrides privacy or public policy considerations.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.160.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue, for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether all of the elements of that cause of action are satisfied or whether the plaintiff is in the class of persons entitled to recover.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contagious Disease or Serious Physical Harm

The plaintiff in Kathleen K. v. Robert B. (1984) 150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 198 Cal. Rptr. 273 , sought damages for fraud, negligence, battery, and intentional infliction of emotional distress for having contracted genital herpes through sexual intercourse with the defendant. The trial court granted judgment on the pleadings in reliance on Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 [see § 105.160[3][a]], in which a man was held to have no cause of action based on a woman's allegedly false representations that she was taking birth control pills. The plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court discussed both Stephen K. and Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 , and noted that in this case, as in Barbara A., there was no child involved (150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 994-996) . The court said the crux of the matter was the constitutional right of privacy, which has long been recognized in matters relating to marriage, family, and sex, and which has caused courts to frown on unwarranted governmental intrusions into private matters. The key word, the court said, is "unwarranted." The right of privacy is not absolute and sometimes must give way to other public concerns, such as health, welfare, and safety. The court quoted Barbara A. for the proposition that the right of privacy is not absolute and does not insulate a person from all judicial inquiry into his or her sexual conduct and that exceptions to the right to privacy impose liability on one sexual partner who by intentionally tortious conduct causes physical injury to the other (150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996) . The court said that this was precisely the type of conduct alleged in this case--that the plaintiff has suffered severe injury based on the defendant's misrepresentation that he was disease-free or on his negligent failure to inform the plaintiff that he had a sexually transmitted disease. The court mentioned the out-of-state cases cited in Barbara A. and disagreed with the defendant's argument that that line of reasoning should only apply to marital relations because of the degree of trust and confidence. A certain amount of trust and confidence exists in any intimate relationship. The basic premise underlying those cases--that consent to sexual intercourse is vitiated by one partner's fraudulent concealment of the risk of infection with a sexually transmitted disease--is equally applicable today, whether or not the partners are married to each other (150 Cal. App. 3d 992, 996-997) .

Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 , involved a woman's cross complaint for fraud, misrepresentation, legal malpractice, battery, negligence, and intentional infliction of emotional distress, which she filed in response to an attorney's action for fees. The cross defendant had falsely represented to the cross plaintiff that he was infertile. The cross plaintiff suffered an ectopic (tubal) pregnancy and was required to undergo surgery to save her life that left her sterile. She suffered physical, emotional, and financial injuries as a result of the pregnancy. Demurrers were sustained to the emotional distress counts, the legal malpractice counts were dismissed, and demurrers were overruled as to the assault and misrepresentation counts. After the Second District filed its opinion in Stephen K. v. Roni L. (1980) 105 Cal. App. 3d 640, 164 Cal. Rptr. 618 [see § 105.160[3][a]], the cross defendant moved for, and was granted, judgment on the pleadings, and the cross plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court addressed Civ. Code § 43.5(c), which bars a cause of action for seduction of a person over the age of legal consent and found that this section did not apply in this case because the gravamen of seduction is the loss of virtue or reputation, or humiliation, while the gravamen of this case was the ectopic pregnancy (145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 377) . The court held that Stephen K., which arose from a woman's representation that she was taking birth control pills, was distinguishable because a child was involved in Stephen K. and no child was involved here. One parent's suit against the other would be strong evidence of parental rejection, which would be detrimental to the child and would be contrary to the public policy in favor of reducing acrimony between parents. Although the court agreed with the result in Stephen K., it did not agree with the reasoning behind it (145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 379) .

The court next discussed criminal and other statutes, which show that the right of privacy is not absolute and does not insulate a person from all judicial inquiry into his or her sexual conduct. The court concluded that the right to privacy should not go so far as to insulate from liability one sexual partner who, by intentionally tortious conduct, causes physical injury to the other (145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380-381) . The court found support for this view in Texas, North Carolina, and Delaware cases holding that a person is liable to a sexual partner for fraudulent concealment of disease or vermin (lice) (145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 381-382) . The court concluded that the cause of action for battery and deceit was not barred by Civ. Code § 43.5, by the holding in Stephen K., or by the public policy underlying that decision. Although the right to privacy normally shields sexual relations from judicial scrutiny, it does not so do if the right of privacy is used as a shield from liability at the expense of the other party (145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 385) .

126 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
B. Deceit: Misrepresentation, Omission, Concealment, or False Promise
5. Contentions in Specific Factual Situations

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.171-105.179

[Reserved]

§§ 105.171[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.180

§ 105.180 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE SPECIFIC FACTS or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT DEFENDANT INTENDED TO INDUCE PLAINTIFF TO RELY ON THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION.

Intent to Induce Action in Reliance. To be an actionable deceit, a misrepresentation must be made with intent to induce the recipient to alter the recipient's position to the recipient's injury or risk (Civ. Code § 1709; Vandervort v. Farmers & Merchs. Nat'l Bank (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 28, 30-31, 59 P.2d 1028).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff has not alleged or established that the defendant intended to induce the plaintiff to rely on the misrepresentation.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised or on any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary judgment challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or the proof.

This form should be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declarations, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.190 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

In Vandervort v. Farmers & Merchs. Nat'l Bank (1936) 7 Cal. 2d 28, 30-31 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant, a bank, on the sustaining of a demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. In a cause of action for fraud, the complaint alleged a transaction to create a trust in real property with the defendant as trustee. There were a number of allegations of fraud by other parties to the transaction who were not parties to the suit. However, there was no sufficient allegation of fraudulent conduct by the defendant or its trust officer. Among other insufficiencies, the complaint alleged neither the defendant's intent to induce the plaintiff to act nor facts and circumstances from which that intent could necessarily be inferred. The Court ruled that there must be an allegation that the false representations were made with intent to induce the representee to enter into the transaction (7 Cal. 2d 30-31).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance

In Harding v. Robinson (1917) 175 Cal. 534 , the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in a case in which the plaintiff had alleged fraud by the sellers of the land that he had purchased. The plaintiff alleged that he had agreed to purchase the land on the seller's representation that it contained 15 acres, but he discovered after title was passed that there were only 131/2 acres. The trial court, in effect, ordered the land purchase contract reformed for fraud. However, the Supreme Court pointed out that no fraud whatsoever was charged in the complaint. The complaint did not allege that the representation as to acreage was made in a manner not warranted by the information the sellers had at the time they made it or that the plaintiff was entitled to rely on that representation. Also, the complaint omitted the vital allegation, essential to a charge of fraud, that the sellers made their representation with the intent to induce plaintiff to enter into the contract (175 Cal. 534, 538-539).

Bondi v. Jewels by Edwar, Ltd. (1968) 267 Cal. App. 2d 672, 73 Cal. Rptr. 494 , is discussed in § 105.101[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.181

§ 105.181 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Show No Intent to Induce Because Representation Made to Stranger

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT IF DEFENDANT UTTERED ANY MISREPRESEN TATION, DEFENDANT UTTERED IT TO A THIRD PARTY WHO IS A STRANGER TO PLAINTIFF AND WITHOUT INTENT TO INDUCE PLAINTIFF TO RELY ON THE STATEMENT.

Representation to Strangers. A person who utters a misrepresentation is liable only to those in whom he or she intended to induce reliance and who do rely in the manner intended, even if the misrepresentation was also made to the plaintiff but without the requisite intent (Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 484, 300 P.2d 14).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the alleged misrepresentation was uttered to a third party and without intent to induce plaintiff to rely on the statement.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.180[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.180[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.190 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation to Stranger

In Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment of dismissal of a complaint alleging fraudulent suppression of fact by a remote seller of real property after sustaining a demurrer to the plaintiffs' third amended complaint without leave to amend. The complaint against the remote seller alleged that the plaintiffs were the purchasers of a nonconforming apartment house for which the authorities had cited them for violations of the Health and Safety Code, that the defendant had added the nonconforming portions of the building, that he had sold the building to a third party without disclosing the improprieties, and that the third party had sold the building to the plaintiffs without such disclosure. The court noted that the elements of actionable deceit are a false representation of a material fact made either with knowledge of its falsity or recklessness or without reasonable grounds for believing its truth and with intent to induce reliance on it and on which the plaintiff justifiably relies to the plaintiff's injury. The court pointed out that although the complaint might satisfactorily allege the defendant's commission of fraud on the third party, the plaintiffs were strangers to that transaction. A person uttering misrepresentations is liable only to those in whom that person intends to induce reliance and who do rely in the manner intended. Even if a defendant makes misrepresentations directly to a plaintiff, if the facts clearly indicate that the defendant, when making such misstatements, had no intention of inducing the plaintiff's reliance, there is no actionable fraud even though the plaintiff relied to the plaintiff's detriment. However, the court added that if the circumstances do not negate a speaker's intent to induce reliance, the law will supply that intent. On the other hand, even if the misrepresentations are not made directly to and in the presence of the plaintiff, it suffices that the defendant intended those statements to reach the ears of the plaintiff and that the defendant intended the plaintiff to rely on those statements (143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 484).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representation to Stranger

In Hesse v. Vinatieri (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 448, 302 P.2d 699 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment of dismissal on sustaining a demurrer to the plaintiff's second amended complaint because the alleged misrepresentations were not made to the plaintiff. The complaint was for personal injuries against a defendant who allegedly had made certain fraudulent statements to the police in connection with his report of an accident. The court held that the existence of a duty to tell the truth to the plaintiff is an essential basic element of any valid claim of fraud and deceit. No cause of action arises unless the defendant intended that the plaintiff rely and act on the defendant's representation or unless the plaintiff belongs to a class to whom the representation is made. Therefore, because the defendant in this case was under no duty to inform the plaintiff of the allegedly false facts he reported to the police and had not voluntarily undertaken to do so, he was not liable to the plaintiff (145 Cal. App. 2d 448, 452-453) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.182

§ 105.182 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows No Intent to Induce Reliance of All Members of Public or Class Under Civil Code Section 1711

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF MAY NOT RELY ON CIVIL CODE SECTION 1711 TO DEEM THAT DEFENDANT INTENDED TO DEFRAUD EVERY MEMBER OF A CLASS BECAUSE THAT STATUTE ONLY GRANTS RELIEF TO THOSE WHO RELY ON STATEMENTS COMMUNICATED THROUGH THE MASS MEDIA.

Representations to Public or Class. Civil Code Section 1711, under which a person is deemed to have intended to defraud all members of a class through the practice of a deceit with intent to defraud the public, only grants relief to those who rely on statements communicated through the mass media (Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 486, 300 P.2d 14).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that Civ. Code § 1711, under which a person is deemed to have intended to defraud all members of a class through the practice of a deceit with intent to defraud the public, only grants relief to those who rely on statements communicated through the mass media [see Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 486, 300 P.2d 14 , discussed in § 105.182[3]].

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.180[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.180[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.191 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations to Public or Class

In Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 300 P.2d 14 , discussed in § 105.181[3][a], the plaintiffs contended that they were entitled to recover under Civ. Code § 1711 on the ground that they belonged to a defrauded class. However, the court held that the legislature intended that statute to grant relief merely to those relying on statements in advertisements or in other mass media--in other words, statements that the speaker or writer intends to reach a considerable number of persons and to cause reliance by a class or by the public (143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 486) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.183-105.189

[Reserved]

§§ 105.183[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.190

§ 105.190 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent By Inference

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE AN ALLEGED FAILURE TO INVESTIGATE, BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S INTENT TO INDUCE PLAINTIFF TO ALTER PLAINTIFF'S POSITION MAY BE INFERRED FROM THE FACT THAT DEFENDANT MADE REPRESENTATIONS WITH KNOWLEDGE THAT PLAINTIFF WOULD ACT IN RELIANCE ON THEM.

Intent to Induce Action in Reliance Inferable. The defendant's intent to induce the plaintiff to alter the plaintiff's position can be inferred from the fact that the defendant made the representation knowing that the plaintiff would act in reliance on that representation (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 488, 275 P.2d 15).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant's intent to induce the plaintiff's reliance may be inferred from the fact that the defendant knew that the plaintiff would rely on the defendant's representation, even if the defendant's intent is not specifically shown or alleged.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.180 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intent to Induce Action in Reliance Inferable

In Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.270[3], the Supreme Court ruled that to be an actionable deceit, a representation need only be an assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true, which is made with intent to induce the recipient to alter the recipient's position to the recipient's injury or risk (43 Cal. 2d 481, 487) . In this case, the defendant's intent to induce the plaintiffs to alter their position could be inferred from the fact that he made the representation knowing that the plaintiffs would act in reliance on it. Because the evidence disclosed that the defendant's statement was erroneous and that he negligently performed the test on which he based his statement, the Court concluded that he made the statement without reasonable ground for believing it to be true. The evidence further disclosed that the plaintiffs justifiably relied on the defendant's statement in buying real property and contracting for the construction of a building on that property (43 Cal. 2d 481, 488) . Accordingly, the Court concluded that the plaintiffs had established a cause of action for deceit.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.191

§ 105.191 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Intent to Induce Reliance Because Representation Was Made to Public or Class

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, BECAUSE DEFENDANT, BY MEANS OF MASS MEDIA COMMUNICATIONS, PRACTICED A DECEIT WITH INTENT TO DEFRAUD _____ [THE PUBLIC or A PARTICULAR CLASS OF PERSONS, THAT IS, _____ (identify class alleged to have been defrauded)], PLAINTIFF WAS A MEMBER OF THAT CLASS OF PERSONS, AND PLAINTIFF WAS ACTUALLY MISLED BY THE DEFENDANT'S DECEIT. HENCE, UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 1711, DEFENDANT IS BY LAW DEEMED TO HAVE INTENDED TO MISLEAD PLAINTIFF BY DEFENDANT'S DECEIT.

B. Representations to Public or Class. One who, by means of mass media communications, practices a deceit with intent to defraud the public or a particular class of persons is deemed to have intended to defraud every individual in that class who is actually misled by the deceit (Civ. Code § 1711; Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 486, 300 P.2d 14).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that one who, by means of mass media communications, practices a deceit with intent to defraud the public or a particular class of persons is deemed to have intended to defraud every individual in that class who is actually misled by the deceit.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.182.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.190[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.190[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations to Public or Class

Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 300 P.2d 14 , is discussed in § 105.182[3].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.192

§ 105.192 Intent to Induce Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant Had Reason to Expect Plaintiff's Reliance on Statement Not Made Directly to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN THOUGH THE DEFENDANT DID NOT MAKE THE MISREPRESENTATION DIRECTLY TO PLAINTIFF, BECAUSE DEFENDANT INTENDED OR HAD REASON TO EXPECT THAT THE PLAINTIFF OR THE CLASS OF PERSONS OF WHICH PLAINTIFF IS A MEMBER WOULD RELY ON THE MISREPRESENTATION AND BECAUSE PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY DID RELY ON THE MISREPRESENTATION.

Reason to Expect Reliance by Plaintiff Sufficient. A maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation may be subject to liability to a person who acts in reliance on it even though the statement was not made directly to the injured party, if the maker intended or had reason to expect that the injured party or the class of persons of which that party is a member would rely on the misrepresentation (Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 601, 605-606, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may be held liable for fraudulent misrepresentation, even though the defendant did not make them directly to the plaintiff, because the defendant intended or had reason to expect that the plaintiff or the class of persons of which the plaintiff is a member would rely on the misrepresentation and because the plaintiff actually did rely on the misrepresentation.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.180 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.190[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.190[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reason to Expect Reliance by Plaintiff Sufficient

In Geernaert v. Mitchell (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 601, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 483 , the plaintiffs, owners of a single-family home, sued the former owners of the home for fraudulent misrepresentation and concealment regarding structural and foundation problems with the property. The plaintiffs alleged that when the defendants sold the house to earlier purchasers, they made false representations of fact regarding the foundation of the building and they intended these misrepresentations to be repeated to subsequent purchasers of the residence. The defendants filed general demurrers to the complaint. The demurrers were sustained by the trial court on the ground that these defendants made no statements to and did not withhold information from the plaintiffs, that the plaintiffs did not rely on any of the defendants' statements or concealments, and that the plaintiffs were not a class of persons that the defendants intended to deceive. The trial court then dismissed the case.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment with directions to the trial court to overrule the demurrers. The court noted that it has traditionally been the law in California that a defendant is not liable for actionable fraud unless the defendant intends a particular person to rely on the defendant's representation. The court also noted that the trial court's ruling appeared to be based on Cohen v. Citizens Nat'l Trust & Sav. Bank (1956) 143 Cal. App. 2d 480, 300 P.2d 14 [see § 105.182[3]], which held that a person who sold a building was not liable to a subsequent purchaser for a nondisclosure to the seller's immediate successor because the seller had no interest in subsequent purchasers. However, the court considered the rule stated in Restatement (Second) of Torts § 533, published 20 years after Cohen, that the maker of a fraudulent misrepresentation is subject to liability for loss to another who acts in reliance on it if the misrepresentation, although not made directly to the other person, is made to a third person and the maker intends or expects that it will be communicated to the other person. The court stated that Cohen would not have been decided the same way under § 533 (31 Cal. App. 4th 601, 606) . The court concluded that the plaintiffs had stated facts that would support causes of action for fraud and concealment by alleging that each defendant either misrepresented or failed to disclose known material facts regarding structural problems with the house when selling it to the earlier purchasers and that each the defendant either intended or expected that the misrepresentations would be repeated, or the nondisclosures would be transmitted, to the plaintiffs (31 Cal. App. 4th 601, 608) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reason to Expect Reliance by Plaintiff Sufficient

In Murphy v. BDO Seidman (2003) 113 Cal. App. 4th 687, 6 Cal. Rptr. 3d 770 , the plaintiffs were stockholders who brought suit against two accounting firms for negligent and intentional misrepresentations in vastly inflating the value of the corporation's assets and value in financial statements prepared in anticipation of a merger with another corporation. In reliance on the misrepresentations, the plaintiffs bought or retained stock in the corporation and approved the merger, only to lose their investments after the merger when the corporation went into bankruptcy. The trial court sustained demurrers for the defendants, but the court of appeal reversed in part. The court concluded that the operative complaint stated causes of action for both negligent and intentional misrepresentations. The court held that the defendants owed a duty that extended to the plaintiffs because the defendants knew that investors would rely on statements of value from the corporations in anticipation of the pending merger. The defendants owed a duty to the investors because the defendants could foresee with substantial certainty that their statements would be relied on by potential investors, and because the defendants could reasonably foresee that stockholders would rely on the misrepresentations in those statements (113 Cal. App. 4th 687, 695-697) . In addition, it was sufficient that some plaintiffs did not read the financial statements directly, but instead relied on third-party communications that conveyed the content of the statements (113 Cal. App. 4th 687, 702-703) .

In Anderson v. Deloitte & Touche (1997) 56 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 512 , the plaintiffs, who were purchasers of limited partnership interests who subsequently lost their investments, alleged that defendant, an accounting firm which prepared financial statements regarding the property, negligently represented the financial status of the partnership. The court of appeal reversed a summary judgment in favor of the defendant. The court stated that although the accounting reports were prepared for a research company, rather than for plaintiffs, defendant knew that its reports would be included in a confidential offering memorandum, and thus communicated to potential investors. Furthermore, the forecast and underlying assumptions in the reports were designed for the specific purpose of attracting investors (56 Cal. App. 4th 1468, 1478) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
C. Intent to Induce Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.193-105.199

[Reserved]

§§ 105.193[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.200

§ 105.200 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No Sufficient Pleading or Proof of Actual and Justifiable Reliance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY AND JUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON STATEMENTS THAT DEFENDANT MADE.

A. Actual Reliance. To state a cause of action for deceit based on a misrepresentation, a plaintiff must plead that the plaintiff actually relied on the misrepresentation (Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1088, 1091-1093, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 ; Maxon-Nowlin Co. v. Norswing (1913) 166 Cal. 509, 511, 137 P. 240).

B. Justifiable Reliance. To state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action based on fraud, a complaint must set forth facts showing that the plaintiff's action in reliance on the deceit was consistent with normal prudence and reasonableness under the circumstances (see Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 739 n.6, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201).

[Optional] C. Actual Reliance Requires Belief in Truth of Statements. Actual reliance is present only when the plaintiff acts based on belief in the truth of defendant's representations, and a plaintiff who suspects that defendant's claims are false and acts based on that suspicion with the intent to sue for fraud if plaintiff's suspicions turn out to be true cannot show actual reliance (Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 808, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of these points and authorities is that the plaintiff or cross complainant party has failed to allege or establish actual and justifiable reliance.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary judgment challenging the sufficiency of, respectively, the pleading or the proof.

This form may be combined with points and authorities setting forth particular ways in which the plaintiff failed to actually and justifiably rely on the defendant's representations [see § 105.201 et seq.].

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq, which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms. For points and authorities supporting a general demurrer implying expiration of statute of limitations, see § 105.203.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, when counsel has demurred based on a failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for fraud and deceit, he or she would refer to omission of allegations showing actual and justifiable reliance. If appropriate, counsel should refer to the specific page and line number of the pleading that discloses the defect.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Actual Reliance

In Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 , the plaintiffs were shareholders who brought an action for deceit against a corporation and some of its officers, directors, and accountants, as well as the securities brokers who underwrote public offerings of the corporation's stock. The corporation had appeared profitable at the time of the initial stock offerings, but later suffered large losses. As a result, the corporation's stock dropped from a high of $28.50 per share to a low of $1.50 per share during a two-year period. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants made numerous misrepresentations about the corporation's prospects and financial status in prospectuses for the initial public offerings, in documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), and in other public communications. The plaintiffs further alleged that these misrepresentations inflated the price of the corporation's stock during that period. In their first amended complaint, the plaintiffs alleged that they had purchased their shares "in reliance [on those] misrepresentations." Defendants demurred to this complaint on the ground that it did not sufficiently allege actual reliance on the alleged misrepresentations. Because the plaintiffs conceded that they could not allege that they had actually read or heard the alleged misrepresentations before buying their stock, the trial court sustained the demurrer with leave to amend. In their second amended complaint, the plaintiffs alleged that they had purchased their shares "[i]n reliance [on] the integrity of the securities market and the securities offering process, and the fidelity, integrity, and superior knowledge of the defendants. ... " Once again finding the plaintiffs' pleading of actual reliance insufficient, the trial court sustained the defendants' demurrers without leave to amend and dismissed the complaint (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1087-1088) . The court of appeal affirmed. The California Supreme Court granted review and affirmed the judgment.

The Court observed that it is well established that a plaintiff does not state a cause of action for deceit based on a misrepresentation unless the plaintiff pleads actual reliance on the misrepresentation (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1088) . The Court rejected the plaintiffs' arguments that actual reliance is not required because the relevant statutes (Civ. Code §§ 1709, 1710) do not expressly mention actual reliance. The Court noted that, like much of the law in California, the law of deceit is not purely statutory, but is a mixture of statutory and common law. Under Civ. Code § 5, provisions of the Civil Code that are substantially the same as the common law, such as the provisions that codify common law torts, must be construed as continuations of the common law and not as new enactments (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1091) . The Court stated that Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 1710 have been recognized as continuations of the common law, and thus it is consistent with those statutes that California courts have always required the plaintiffs in actions for deceit to plead and prove actual reliance (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1091-1092) . The Court also rejected the plaintiffs' argument that actual reliance was not required because Civ. Code § 1711 provides that if a deceit is directed at the public or a particular class of persons, any person who is actually deceived may bring an action. The Court pointed out that this statute merely indicates that a person who acts with fraudulent intent need not have any particular victim in mind. Litigants who rely on this statute still must plead and prove actual reliance (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1092) . The Court also rejected the plaintiffs' reliance on Civ. Code § 3343, which provides additional damages (beyond the difference between the value of the property received and the price paid) to a plaintiff who enters into a transaction in reliance on the fraud and in anticipation of profits from the subsequent use or sale on the property. The Court stated that this statute could not plausibly be read as eliminating the element of reliance from the tort of deceit (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1092-1093) .

The Court also rejected the plaintiffs' arguments that previous case law involving class actions had eliminated the requirement of actual reliance. The plaintiffs had relied on Vasquez v. Superior Court (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 800, 94 Cal. Rptr. 796, 484 P.2d 964 , and Occidental Land, Inc. v. Superior Court (1976) 18 Cal. 3d 355, 134 Cal. Rptr. 388, 556 P.2d 750 , in which the Court had held that reliance by each member of a class could appropriately be inferred. However, the Court pointed out that in both Vasquez and Occidental Land, the same misrepresentation had been communicated to each member of the class and that it was appropriate to infer that each member had actually relied on the misrepresentation, but neither case could be read as permitting an inference of actual reliance by persons who had never read or heard the misrepresentation, as was true in this case (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1094-1095) . The Court also rejected the plaintiffs' argument that the so-called "indirect communication" cases, which allowed the plaintiffs who had heard the misrepresentations indirectly through third persons to sue for fraud, had eliminated the need to plead and prove actual reliance on the misrepresentation (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1095-1099) .

In Maxon-Nowlin Co. v. Norswing (1913) 166 Cal. 509 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the defendant in an action for damages for alleged fraudulent misrepresentations in connection with an exchange of real property. The complaint alleged that the defendant had misrepresented the frontage dimensions of the real property involved. There was evidence, however, that before any agreement was made between the parties, the manager of the plaintiff, a corporation, had inspected the property and that the defendant had handed him a map showing in plain figures the actual frontages. The trial court found that the plaintiff's agent had examined the map and learned from it what the frontages in fact were. The Court ruled that the findings of the trial court were conclusive in favor of the judgment. To entitle a person to relief because of a false representation, it is not enough to show merely that the representation was material, known to be false and made with intent to deceive. One must also show that it actually did mislead and deceive--in other words, that the person relied on it (166 Cal. 509, 511).

[b] Justifiable Reliance

In Lingsch v. Savage (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 29 Cal. Rptr. 201 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.70[3], the court of appeal noted that one element of a cause of action for fraud based on nondisclosure is inducement of the plaintiff to act by reason of the nondisclosure. In this case, this element of causation was pleaded in terms of reliance. The plaintiffs had alleged that they purchased the property at issue "justifiably relying" on the defendants' nondisclosure. The court stated that the word "justifiably" added nothing to the allegation in the absence of allegations of facts showing that the actual inducement of the plaintiffs to enter into the sale was justifiable or reasonable. The court added that a general allegation of inducement or reliance would seem to suffice provided that the complaint also sets forth enough facts to show that the plaintiff's conduct was consistent with normal prudence and reasonableness under the circumstances (213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 739). Because there was a reasonable possibility that amendment could cure the complaint's deficiencies, the defendant's demurrer should not have been sustained without leave to amend (213 Cal. App. 2d 729, 739-740).

[c] Actual Reliance Requires Belief in Truth of Statements

In Buckland v. Threshold Enterprises, Ltd. (2007) 155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 66 Cal. Rptr. 3d 543 , plaintiff was the executive director of a women's law center who purchased skin creams and lotions made by defendants that contained chemicals regulated by the Food and Drug Administration. By her own admission, plaintiff purchased these products because of suspicions that the manufacturers had improperly suppressed the fact that the products contained potentially unsafe chemicals and otherwise marketed the products as safe and healthful. When satisfied that her suspicions were well-founded, she brought suit against the manufacturers for fraud and related statutory causes of action. She admitted that she purchased the products with the intent to sue and that her only actual damages were the costs she paid for the products. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. With respect to the fraud cause of action, the court held that plaintiff could not prove that she actually relied on any representations or omissions made by a defendant. The court noted that the element of actual reliance requires that the plaintiff have relied on confidence in the truth of a defendant's statements, not the perceived falsity of those statements. In the case of fraud by omission, the court concluded that actual reliance requires a plaintiff to act on confidence in the material completeness of the defendant's representations. Because plaintiff did not purchase the products in reliance on the truth or completeness of defendant's representations, but rather purchased the products solely in anticipation of litigation, she could not prove the element of actual reliance (155 Cal. App. 4th 798, 808-809) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Actual Reliance

In The MEGA Life & Health Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 399, plaintiff filed a suit for fraud on behalf of his deceased wife, as well as on his own behalf, against a health insurance company for alleged misrepresentations made about the scope of coverage when selling a policy to plaintiff's spouse. The trial court denied summary adjudication to defendant on the fraud cause of action brought on behalf of plaintiff in his individual capacity. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to grant summary adjudication in favor of defendant on that cause of action. While recognizing that plaintiff could seek to recover any damages to which his wife would be entitled, the court held that the insurance company owed no duty to plaintiff not to misrepresent the terms of the policy, even if the alleged misrepresentations were made to him and even if the policy premium was paid with community property funds. In reaching this decision, the court noted that plaintiff was a stranger to the insurance contract, and as such, there was no possibility that he detrimentally changed his position in reliance on defendant's representations. Absent such reliance, plaintiff in his individual capacity could not prevail on a fraud action against the insurer (172 Cal. App. 4th 1522, 1530-1532).

In Cadlo v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (2004) 125 Cal. App. 4th 513, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , the plaintiff had been exposed to asbestos while in the Navy in the mid-1960s and was diagnosed with mesothelioma in 2002. The plaintiff sued the company that had originally designed and manufactured the asbestos-containing insulation, Kaylo, to which the plaintiff had been exposed. However, the defendant had sold its Kaylo manufacturing enterprise in 1958 to another corporation that continued manufacturing and marketing the product, and it was undisputed that the plaintiff had not been exposed to Kaylo manufactured before the sale in 1958. Nevertheless, the plaintiff argued that the original manufacturer could be liable on the theory that it originally designed the product, hid its dangerous nature, and failed to disclose those dangers while the successor corporation continued marketing and selling the product. The trial court granted summary judgment and sustained a demurrer for the original manufacturer, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that as to the fraud cause of action against the original manufacturer, the plaintiff could not plead and prove actual reliance. The defendant had sold its entire Kaylo manufacturing enterprise to a successor corporation years before the manufacture of the Kaylo to which the plaintiff had been exposed. The plaintiff had not alleged that he had been aware of or relied on any representations made by the defendant when he was exposed to a product made by a different company, nor could he amend the complaint to allege such reliance. Because the plaintiff could not allege that the defendant made representations about the product to which he was actually exposed, judgment for the defendant was proper (125 Cal. App. 4th 513, 519-521) .

In Gawara v. United States Brass Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1341, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 663 , plaintiff homeowners and developer were awarded compensatory and punitive damages at trial in an action alleging fraud and other theories of recovery against the manufacturers and sellers of defective plumbing pipes and system components. The court of appeal reversed the judgments entered on the fraud actions, agreeing with the defendants that under Mirkin v.

Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 [see § 105.200[3][a]], plaintiffs had to prove actual reliance in order to recover for fraud. The court held that misrepresentations made by the defendants when marketing the products were insufficient to prove actual reliance, since the evidence did not prove that these plaintiffs actually heard and relied on those misrepresentations, either directly or indirectly through a third party. When marketing the products, one defendant had made a sales presentation to the plumbing subcontractor used on the development project at issue, but there was no evidence that plaintiff developer heard or relied on those communications. The developer was also unable to provide evidence that he indirectly relied on any misrepresentations made by the defendants to the city prior to city approval of the plumbing components, in the absence of evidence that actual misrepresentations were made by the defendants to anyone in the city responsible for granting such approval. The fraud claims brought by the homeowners were reversed based on the lack of evidence that anyone had made any representations about the plumbing systems in the homes to the homeowners prior to their purchase, precluding any finding of actual reliance (63 Cal. App. 4th 1341, 1348-1359) .

In Bay Summit Cmty. Ass'n v. Shell Oil Co. (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 762, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 322 , plaintiff was awarded damages by a jury verdict which found that defendant committed fraud and was strictly liable for damages caused by defective fittings in a plumbing system. On appeal, defendant contended that the fraud verdict was improper because plaintiff did not establish reliance. Plaintiff conceded that it could not prove reliance, and that they were required to prove reliance under Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101 [see § 105.200[3][a]]. Based on this concession, the court of appeal reversed the judgment with regard to the fraud claim (51 Cal. App. 4th 762, 767) .

In Suarez v. Life Ins. Co. of N. Am. (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1396, 254 Cal. Rptr. 377 , the plaintiff sued an insurer for fraud, claiming that an advertisement for the insurance misrepresented the coverage by representing that the policy covered the loss of the use of limbs due to injuries sustained in a freeway accident, when in fact the policy covered only severance of limbs. The court of appeal upheld the trial court's granting of the insurer's motion for summary judgment, holding that the plaintiff's cause of action did not meet all of the elements of fraud, including reliance. Although the plaintiff's father had seen the advertisement before he had purchased the policy for the plaintiff, the plaintiff had not read the advertisement until after his accident and thus, as a matter of law, could not have relied on it (206 Cal. App. 3d 1396, 1408) .

[b] Justifiable Reliance

In B.L.M. v. Sabo & Deitsch (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 823, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 335 , the plaintiff, a housing developer, alleged that attorneys, who where appointed a city council as special counsel to a housing project, negligently represented one of the requirements of the project. The court of appeal upheld a summary judgment in favor of the attorneys, holding that plaintiff failed to allege facts sufficient to support a claim of justifiable reliance. The court reasoned that it would be inappropriate to hold an attorney liable to a third party for a legal opinion which the third party could not have contracted to obtain. Thus, any reliance by plaintiff on the attorneys' legal opinion was not justifiable (55 Cal. App. 4th 823, 835) .

In In re Daisy Systems Corp. (9th Cir. 1996) 97 F.3d 1171 , a Chapter 11 Trustee appealed the district court's grant of summary judgment in favor of an investment banker in an action for negligent misrepresentation the trustee brought on behalf of a Chapter 11 debtor that had hired the investment bank to advise it in connection with an attempted acquisition. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal affirmed the district court's grant of summary judgment on the negligent misrepresentation claim. The trustee based the negligent misrepresentation claim on two acts committed by the bank: the issuance of letters containing representations to debtor that the market would support the proposed acquisition, and an alleged oral commitment to provide financing for the transaction. The court interpreted the letters as expressions of confidence that financing could be obtained under certain specified conditions, but the letters did not constitute guarantees that the deal could be financed regardless of the successive permutations it might take. Therefore, any reliance on them as being indicative of a general availability of financing was unreasonable. Similarly, the court interpreted the banker's oral representations of a loan commitment as merely implying the possibility of debtor securing long-term financing. Accordingly, the representation, as well as the terms of any implied loan agreement were so vague as to render unjustifiable any reliance on them (97 F.3d 1171, 1181) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.201

§ 105.201 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF RELIED ON PLAINTIFF'S OWN JUDGMENT, RATHER THAN ON ANY REPRESENTATION OF DEFENDANT.

Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment. If a party does not rely on the other party's statements, but instead relies on the party's own judgment, experience, and information, there is no actionable fraud (Hallidie v. First Fed. Trust Co. (1918) 177 Cal. 600, 603-604, 171 P. 431 ; see McLaughlin v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1132, 1148, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 559).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff relied on the plaintiff's own judgment, rather than on any representation of the defendant.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to evidence such as deposition testimony, citing the specific page and line number of the transcript, that discloses that the plaintiff relied on the plaintiff's own judgment, rather than on any representation of the defendant [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

In Hallidie v. First Fed. Trust Co. (1918) 177 Cal. 600, 171 P. 431 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the defendant in an action for fraud, because the plaintiff did not rely on the defendant's alleged misrepresentations. The evidence presented showed that the plaintiff had relied on his own judgment, experience, and information. The complaint alleged that in inducing the sale to the plaintiff of 50 shares of a corporation's stock, the corporation's majority shareholder and general manager represented to the plaintiff, a minority shareholder, that the corporation was not profitable. The trial court found that the plaintiff did not rely on these statements. Such reliance is, the Court observed, a necessary element in an action based on fraud and deceit. In this case, the finding of nonreliance was amply sustained by the evidence. The plaintiff was a man of long experience in the manufacture and sale of the very class of articles that the corporation made and sold, the corporation was formed to take over the business of manufacturing and selling these items, the plaintiff became a director and president of the corporation and continued in those capacities until the sale of the shares, the plaintiff was not optimistic about the corporation's ability to realize profits and acted on the offer three or four months after it was made. Thus, the Court concluded, the trial court was warranted in concluding that the plaintiff relied on his own judgment, experience, and information in acting on the offer (177 Cal. 600, 603-604) .

In McLaughlin v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1132, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 559 , the plaintiffs, as assignees, sued the defendant, an insurer, for fraud based on the defendant's alleged misrepresentations concerning coverage under an insurance policy. The court of appeal reversed judgment for the plaintiffs on the fraud cause of action. The court noted that the absence of detrimental reliance on the alleged misrepresentations is fatal to recovery for fraud and that the plaintiff must have been deceived or misled by the falsity. In this case, the plaintiffs' assignors had disputed the defendant's position on coverage and had never acted in reliance on its purported truth. Instead, they had litigated the coverage issues and had demanded that the defendant offer the full limits under the policy in settlement of their claims. The court held that, as a matter of law, these actions defeated a finding of reliance (23 Cal. App. 4th 1132, 1148) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Own Judgment

In Podlasky v. Price (1948) 87 Cal. App. 2d 151, 196 P.2d 608 , the court of appeal reversed judgment for the plaintiff with instructions to enter judgment for the defendant in an action based on fraud for rescission of a contract for the purchase of an apartment house. The trial court found that the seller had falsely represented the rental on one of the apartments and that the buyer relied on the seller's representation that no false statement had been made and entered into a compromise settlement. Conceding for the sake of argument that a deliberate fraud had been perpetrated on the plaintiff, the court of appeal noted that the plaintiff had settled all her claims against the seller for damages or rescission. During three weeks of discussion, investigation, and consideration, she and her counsel had abundant opportunity to appraise her bargain and the building and to ascertain the facts. The court ruled that if a vendee is suspicious of the vendor's representations, proceeds to make inquiries, is unhampered in this investigation, is aided by his or her own attorney, and acts on his or her own judgment, then the purchase may not be canceled because of misstatements made by the vendor as an inducement. Also, because the plaintiff employed both a veteran broker and a seasoned lawyer who advised her throughout the negotiations for the compromise, she did not rely on anything the defendants told her and, therefore, could not enforce the rescission (87 Cal. App. 2d 151, 162-163) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.202

§ 105.202 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF RELIED ON AN INDEPENDENT EXAMINATION, RATHER THAN ON ANY REPRESENTATION OF DEFENDANT.

Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation. If a party does not rely on the other party's statements of fact or opinion, but instead makes an independent examination that satisfies the party, no actionable fraud is shown (Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 570, 203 P.2d 758).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff or cross complainant relied on an independent investigation.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to evidence such as the deposition testimony of the plaintiff's expert witness that discloses that the plaintiff relied on the expert's investigation, rather than on any representation of the defendant [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

In Carter v. Seaboard Fin. Co. (1949) 33 Cal. 2d 564, 203 P.2d 758 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant on a cause of action for fraud because there was no evidence that the plaintiff had relied on any of the defendant's representations. The plaintiff had purchased two trucks from the defendant on an installment basis, but later notified the defendant that he could no longer make the payments. After receiving notice that the defendant would repossess and sell the trucks in the absence of immediate full payment, the plaintiff brought suit alleging that the defendant fraudulently misrepresented that one of the trucks was in good mechanical condition, but that he learned, after he took possession of the truck, that its motor was not suitable. The plaintiff contended that the defendant also fraudulently concealed from him the fact that the truck had been in an accident a short time before and that the motor's serial number had been changed to make it appear to be a later model. The defendant told the plaintiff that the defendant had recently spent nearly $3,000 to repair it. In view of this statement, the defendant's representation that the truck "should be in good condition" was merely an opinion based on the expenditures and did not form a basis for a cause of action. The defendant's failure to disclose the recent accident was likewise not a basis for a cause of action, because the defendant was not bound to volunteer this information and the repair bill should have put the plaintiff on inquiry as to the reason. No evidence was offered to show that the defendant knew of the change of the serial number or that the plaintiff relied on it in deciding to purchase. There was no evidence of reliance on any of the defendant's representations. Before buying, the plaintiff inspected the truck several times, drove it for about half an hour, and called in a mechanic who had worked on the motor and who advised him that it was all right. The Court concluded that because the plaintiff did not rely on the defendant's statements of fact or opinion, but instead made an independent examination that satisfied him, the plaintiff had not shown actionable fraud (33 Cal. 2d 564, 570) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Independent Investigation

In Blackman v. Howes (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 275 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment of nonsuit in an action for fraud and deceit involving the sale of a filled lot, because there was no showing that the plaintiff had investigated the facts at issue. The defendant, the lot's seller, knew it was filled and told his real estate agent so. The only way to ascertain that it was filled was to make borings. When asked by the plaintiff's agent whether the lot was fill or solid, the defendant's agent replied that it was not filled. The court of appeal held that if a buyer has only a suspicion of fraud and the seller lulls the buyer into inaction by a false representation, the seller will not be permitted to assert that the buyer lost the right to bring an action by accepting the seller's assurance that there was no fraud. However, a plaintiff is precluding from asserting reliance on the defendant's representations if the plaintiff has the means at hand for determining its truth or falsehood, and resorts to those means without the defendant's interference, and learns after investigation that the representations were false. In this situation, the plaintiff's investigation and ascertainment of the facts exclude the idea that the plaintiff relied on the defendant's falsehood. The law presumes instead that the plaintiff relied on the plaintiff's own investigation and not on the representations of the defendant. A buyer's right to rely on a seller's representations does not exist if the buyer chooses to inspect the property and learns the true facts, for the obvious reason that the buyer has not been defrauded unless the buyer has been mislead and the buyer has not been mislead if the buyer has acted with actual or imputed knowledge of the true facts (82 Cal. App. 2d 275, 279, 280).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.203

§ 105.203 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF RELIED ON THE ADVICE OF A THIRD PARTY, RATHER THAN ON ANY REPRESENTATION OF DEFENDANT.

Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice. If a party does not rely on the other party's statements, but instead relies on the advice of third parties in the matter, there is no actionable fraud (Colton v. Stanford (1890) 82 Cal. 351, 379, 23 P. 16).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff relied on the advice of a third party.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to evidence such as the deposition testimony of the plaintiff's expert witness that discloses that the plaintiff relied on the expert's advice, rather than on any representation of the defendant [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

In Colton v. Stanford (1890) 82 Cal. 351 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the defendant in an action for fraud and deceit based on allegations of fraud, holding that the plaintiff had undertaken to investigate the matters at issue for herself and had called in and relied on the advice of experts. The plaintiff was the widow of one of the principal shareholders in the Central Pacific and the Southern Pacific railroad companies, and others became suspicious of the activities of her husband's former associates respecting negotiations leading up to the settlement of the estate's interest. On discovering errors in the calculations on which a settlement agreement had been based, she sought rescission on the ground that the agreement had been procured by fraud. The trial record showed, however, that she had relied on full and complete investigation and advice given her by expert third parties she had called in to assist her. Furthermore, the fundamental principle on which rescission is granted is the consideration that confidence has been reposed and abused. No such claim can in reason be made if the party seeking the rescission--being of competent age and understanding and acting in her own interest--has undertaken to investigate for herself, called in experts, been given free and fair means of ascertaining the truth, acted on her own judgment and the advice of others and repudiated any confidence in or reliance on the parties with whom she was dealing (82 Cal. 351, 379).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Third Party's Advice

In Hackleman v. Lyman (1920) 50 Cal. App. 323, 195 P. 263 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action to recover damages for the defendant's allegedly fraudulent representations, because the plaintiff did not rely on those representations, but instead made an independent investigation and relied on the advice of a third party. The complaint alleged and the trial court found that for the purpose of inducing the plaintiff to purchase certain farmland, the defendant represented that the land had water on it and could be irrigated. After the representations were made, the plaintiff secured the services of an expert, and both the plaintiff and the expert went to the land and inspected it. The court observed that the plaintiff had resided in the area for more than 10 years, had engaged in farming in that area for four years, and was familiar with the conditions and requirements for irrigation. Thus, it appeared that instead of relying on the defendant's representations, the plaintiff, with the aid of the person he had employed for his experience and fitness, had made an independent examination, on which he was presumed to have acted, rather than on the defendant's representations. Thus, the court concluded, the plaintiff could not claim that the defendant's false representations deceived him (50 Cal. App. 323, 326-328) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.204

§ 105.204 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Statement of Opinion

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF UNJUSTIFIABLY RELIED ON STATEMENTS OF OPINION, RATHER THAN ANY REPRESENTATION OF DEFENDANT.

Plaintiff Relied on Statement of Opinion. A plaintiff may not justifiably rely on statements of opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true statement of facts, unless the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter or occupies a position of trust and confidence (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff unjustifiably relied on statements of opinion.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to evidence such as testimony of the plaintiff at deposition that discloses that the plaintiff unjustifiably relied on a statement of opinion, rather than on any representation of the defendant [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Statement of Opinion

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment on the pleadings for the defendants because the complaint was sufficient to establish the right of the plaintiffs to relief on the basis of a fraudulent misrepresentation. In discussing justifiable reliance, the Supreme Court stated that a plaintiff may not justifiably rely on statements of mere opinion, including legal conclusions drawn from a true statement of facts, unless the person expressing the opinion purports to have expert knowledge concerning the matter of occupies a position of trust and confidence (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.205

§ 105.205 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Relied on Preposterous Representations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF PUT FAITH IN REPRESENTATIONS THAT ARE _____ [PREPOSTEROUS or SHOWN BY FACTS WITHIN PLAINTIFF'S OBSERVATION TO BE PATENTLY AND OBVIOUSLY FALSE].

Plaintiff Relied on Preposterous Representations. A plaintiff may not put faith in representations that are preposterous or shown by facts within the plaintiff's observation to be patently and obviously false. If the plaintiff's conduct in light of the plaintiff's own intelligence and information was manifestly unreasonable, recovery will be denied (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 415, 115 P.2d 977).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege or evidence establishes that the plaintiff unjustifiably relied on preposterous and obviously false statements.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to evidence, such as declarations and deposition transcripts, that reveals that the plaintiff unjustifiably relied on preposterous and obviously false statements [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Relied on Preposterous Representations

The facts and procedural background of Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , are discussed in § 105.204[3][a]. In holding that a plaintiff's reliance must be justifiable, the Court observed that if the plaintiff's conduct, in light of the plaintiff's own intelligence and information, was manifestly unreasonable, the plaintiff will be denied recovery. That is, the plaintiff may not put faith in representations that are preposterous or that are shown by facts within the plaintiff's observation to be so patently and obviously false that the plaintiff must have closed his or her eyes to avoid discovery of the truth (18 Cal. 2d 409, 415) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.206

§ 105.206 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff's Reliance Is Precluded by Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF EXPRESSLY AGREED IN THE CONTRACT WITH DEFENDANT THAT PLAINTIFF WOULD INDEPENDENTLY INVESTIGATE THE FACTS AND MAKE PLAINTIFF'S DECISIONS REGARDING THE CONTRACT INDEPENDENTLY AND WITHOUT ANY RELIANCE ON DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS.

Justifiable Reliance Precluded by Contract. A contracting party may not justifiably rely on the other contracting party's representations or conduct if the first party has expressly agreed in the contract with the other party that the first party will independently investigate the facts and that the first party will make decisions regarding the contract independently and without any reliance on the other party's representations (Bank of W. v. Valley Nat'l Bank of Ariz. (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 471, 477-478 (applying California law)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff expressly agreed in the contract between the parties that the plaintiff would independently investigate the facts and make decisions regarding the contract independently and without any reliance on the defendant's representations.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Therefore, for example, in the case of a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is no triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to the specific provisions of the contract that manifest the intent of the parties as stated in this form [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. generally may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form. In particular, § 105.227 contends that a contract clause does not preclude reliance on fraudulent representations made outside of the written agreement.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Justifiable Reliance Precluded by Contract

In Bank of W. v. Valley Nat'l Bank of Ariz. (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 471 , the plaintiff was a bank that had loaned money to a corporation. As the corporation's line of credit grew, the plaintiff needed another bank to participate in the loans to avoid exceeding the plaintiff's lending limits. The plaintiff entered into a loan participation agreement with the defendant, under which the defendant agreed to provide 50 percent of the loan funds and 50 percent of any "extraordinary expenses" in connection with the loan. The plaintiff was to manage the loan and deal directly with the corporation. The agreement provided that the defendant was to make its own decisions about the corporation's creditworthiness and would not rely on the plaintiff for determining the corporation's creditworthiness.

After the banks had lent over $10 million to the corporation, the plaintiff learned that the corporation was having financial difficulties and that its creditworthiness was suspect. The plaintiff informed the defendant of this fact, and both banks stopped lending money to the corporation. The plaintiff later learned that the corporation's financial situation was even worse than it had first realized, but did not disclose this to the defendant for a period of six months. However, although it was unaware of this new information, the defendant did not advance any further money to the corporation. The defendant later agreed to advance funds to the plaintiff to bring its loan participation up to the agreed-on 50 percent level, but by this time the plaintiff had informed the defendant about what the plaintiff knew about the corporation's financial situation. Eventually, the corporation filed for bankruptcy, and its failure led to numerous lawsuits involving the banks. After settling these lawsuits and expending attorney's fees to defend them, the plaintiff was left with a net expense of about $6 million. The plaintiff sued the defendant for 50 percent of this amount under the "extraordinary expenses" provisions of the loan participation agreement. The defendant denied that the expenses were covered by the agreement and counterclaimed for fraud, based on the plaintiff's concealment of information about the corporation's financial circumstances. After trial, the jury gave a verdict for the defendant on its fraud counterclaim, but the district court granted the plaintiff a judgment notwithstanding the verdict.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the district court's judgment as to the fraud counterclaim. The court noted that to prevail on its fraud claim under California law, the defendant was required to prove five elements: (1) misrepresentation (a false representation, concealment, or nondisclosure); (2) knowledge of falsity (or "scienter"); (3) intent to defraud (intent to induce reliance); (4) justifiable reliance; and (5) resulting damage. The appellate court found that the district court had properly granted the plaintiff a judgment notwithstanding the verdict because the justifiable reliance element was entirely absent. The defendant claimed that, regardless of the contractual terms, it did in fact rely on the plaintiff for important information concerning the corporation. The court stated, however, that this reliance in fact did not change the parties' agreement that the defendant would make its own judgment about the corporation's creditworthiness, without relying on the plaintiff. The court observed that extrinsic evidence of custom can only be used to prove an interpretation to which the contract is reasonably susceptible. In this case, the court held, the clear and explicit language of the contract prevented justifiable reliance (41 F.3d 471, 477) . The court stated that the most favorable characterization of the defendant's conduct allowed by the evidence was that the defendant promised not to rely on the plaintiff, but then did in fact rely on the plaintiff. The court held that this necessarily implies that, to the extent that the defendant did rely on the plaintiff, its reliance was not justifiable. In essence, the court said, the defendant had sold to the plaintiff any right it otherwise might have to rely on the plaintiff's credit evaluations and judgment, by promising away that right in the loan participation agreement (41 F.3d 471, 478) .

NOTE:

One California court of appeal, in a case involving somewhat different facts, reached an opposite result, concluding that a contractual provision stating that the parties did not rely on any representations not contained in the contract did not preclude the plaintiff from claiming justifiable reliance on such representations [Ron Greenspan Volkswagen, Inc. v. Ford Motor Land Dev. Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783 ; see also § 105.227[3][a]].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Justifiable Reliance Precluded by Contract

In Hinesley v. Oakshade Town Ctr. (2005) 135 Cal. App. 4th 289, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 364 , the plaintiff was a tenant of a shopping mall who sued the mall owner for fraud and rescission of the commercial lease. The plaintiff alleged that while negotiating the lease, the defendant's representative told him that certain suites around the plaintiff's suite would be occupied by certain well-known chain stores and a regional restaurant chain. However, it was several years before the restaurant opened in the mall, and the other two chains never leased space. The plaintiff argued that he relied on those representations when agreeing to the lease, and that the foot traffic around his store was not what it would have been if those tenants had moved in as represented. Summary judgment was granted for the defendant, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that although there was a triable issue as to what representations were actually made to the plaintiff, the plaintiff could not prove justifiable reliance on any such representations because the lease had an explicit provision specifying that the tenant was not relying on representations about other potential tenants in the shopping mall, nor was the lessor making any such representations. The plaintiff admitted that he read the entire lease before signing, had his attorney review it to look for "obvious improprieties," and in fact suggested several changes to the lease before signing. However, the plaintiff never asked about the cotenant representation clause, never mentioned any concern about it to his attorney, and never sought any clarification from the defendant or the defendant's representative before signing. In light of the lease clause, given the importance that the plaintiff allegedly was placing on oral representations about cotenants before signing, the court held that the plaintiff could not reasonably have relied on those representations without at least seeking further clarification (135 Cal. App. 4th 289, 302-303) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.207

§ 105.207 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff's Reliance on Legal Duty to Act

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF'S ACTIONS IN RESPONSE TO DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS WERE MANDATED BY LAW, AND AS SUCH, PLAINTIFF'S ACTIONS WERE NOT TAKEN IN RELIANCE ON DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS.

Plaintiff's Actions Mandated by Law. If misrepresentations trigger actions that are mandated by law on the part of the person to whom the representations are made, then these actions are not taken in reliance on the misrepresentations (Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1525, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 139).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff's actions in response to the defendant's representations were actions that were mandated by law, and by acting as required by law, the plaintiff did not act in reliance on the representations themselves.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Therefore, for example, counsel should indicate the actions by the plaintiff on which the plaintiff relies to allegedly show reliance, and then indicate the legal authorities that imposed on the plaintiff the legal duty to take those actions [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. generally may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Actions Mandated by Law

In Leegin Creative Leather Prods., Inc. v. Diaz (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 139 , the plaintiff was the defendant's employer. The defendant had filed a workers' compensation claim with her employer for an alleged work-related injury to her arms. The plaintiff forwarded this claim on to its workers' compensation insurance carrier. The plaintiff eventually became aware that the defendant had been tape recorded performing physical tasks inconsistent with her claimed injury. Although the workers' compensation claim was still pending, the plaintiff sued the defendant for fraudulently filing a false claim. The defendant filed a motion to strike the complaint under Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16, the anti-SLAPP statute. The trial court granted the motion to strike, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that the plaintiff could not establish a probability of success on the merits of the fraud claim. The plaintiff alleged that it reasonably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations by forwarding the workers' compensation claim on to the insurance carrier. However, the court held that this did not constitute detrimental reliance as a matter of law. The plaintiff was required, as an employer, by law and by its workers' compensation insurance policy to report any claims to its insurance carrier. Because of this legal requirement, the plaintiff had no choice but to report the claim to the insurance carrier and could not demonstrate reliance on the allegedly fraudulent claim filed by the defendant (131 Cal. App. 4th 1517, 1524-1525) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.208

§ 105.208 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--"Fraud-on-Market" Is Inapplicable to Common Law Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT THE BASIS OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM IS THE "FRAUD-ON-THE-MARKET" DOCTRINE, WHICH DOES NOT APPLY TO ACTIONS FOR COMMON LAW FRAUD OR DECEIT UNDER CALIFORNIA LAW.

"Fraud-on-Market" Doctrine Does Not Apply to Common Law Fraud. The "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine used in actions under federal and state securities laws, which allows a purchaser of securities to sue persons who have engaged in securities fraud that affects the price of the securities without showing actual reliance on the fraud, does not apply to actions for common law deceit under California law (Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1089-1091, 1108, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101, 858 P.2d 568).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the ground of the plaintiff's claim is the "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine, which does not apply to actions for common law deceit under California law.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq., generally, may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Fraud-on-Market" Doctrine Does Not Apply to Common Law Fraud

The facts and procedural background of Mirkin v. Wasserman (1993) 5 Cal. 4th 1082, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 101, 858 P.2d 568 , are discussed in § 105.200[3][a]. In reaffirming that a plaintiff must plead actual reliance on the alleged misrepresentation to state a cause of action for deceit, the Supreme Court rejected the plaintiffs' argument that the Court should apply the "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine to common law actions for fraud. That doctrine, which applies in actions brought under Rule 10b-5 of the Securities and Exchange Commission and in actions under Corp. Code §§ 25400 and 25500, allows a plaintiff who purchased or sold a security at a price that was affected by false or misleading representations to sue the person who engaged in the fraud without pleading and proving that the plaintiff actually relied on the misrepresentations. The Court rejected the plaintiffs' assertion that incorporation of the "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine in the tort of deceit was necessary to provide a remedy for victimized investors. The Court observed that defrauded investors already have remedies under the federal and state securities laws, which do not require pleading and proof of actual reliance (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1100-1103). Although allowing the plaintiffs to sue under a tort cause of action for deceit would give them certain advantages that they would not have in a suit based on the securities laws, such as a longer limitations period and the possibility of recovering punitive damages, these advantages appeared to conflict with several legislative policy choices that Congress and the California legislature had made in enacting the securities laws. The Court therefore declined to upset these policy choices by incorporating the "fraud-on-the-market" doctrine into the common law tort of deceit (5 Cal. 4th 1082, 1104-1108).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.209

§ 105.209 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Failed to Read Insurance Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF ACCEPTED THE INSURANCE POLICY AND THAT PLAINTIFF COULD HAVE ASCERTAINED THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATIONS REGARDING COVERAGE BY READING THE EXPRESS TERMS OF THE POLICY.

Failure to Read Policy Precludes Reliance on Coverage Misrepresentation. An insured who receives and accepts an insurance policy is bound by its terms and cannot thereafter complain that he or she did not read the policy or know its terms. Therefore, an insured cannot claim justifiable reliance on a broker's or agent's misrepresentations regarding coverage if the insured could have ascertained the truth by reading the express terms of the policy (Hadland v. NN Investors Life Ins. Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1586-1589, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 ; Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1111-1112, 234 Cal. Rptr. 853).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff accepted an insurance policy and could have ascertained the truth of any alleged misrepresentations by the defendant by reading the policy.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Read Policy Precludes Reliance on Coverage Misrepresentation

In Hadland v. NN Investors Life Ins. Co. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 88 , the plaintiffs were notified of a large premium increase for their health insurance policy and contacted the defendant, a different insurance company, to inquire about obtaining alternative coverage. The defendant's agent made a presentation to the plaintiffs at which he stated that the defendant's policy provided coverage that was "as good if not better" than the coverage under their existing policy, at half the premium cost of their existing policy. Following this presentation, the plaintiffs applied for coverage under the defendant's policy. Although the defendant's policy did cost half as much as the plaintiffs' previous coverage, the coverage was in fact much more limited. The plaintiffs subsequently received an insurance policy describing the coverage benefits, which the plaintiffs did not read. One of the plaintiffs was hospitalized for a surgical procedure, incurring substantial medical and hospital expenses. In accordance with the terms of the policy, the defendant paid less than half of these expenses. The plaintiffs sued the defendant for fraud based on the defendant's agent's misrepresentations about the level of coverage. The trial court granted the defendant a nonsuit on the fraud cause of action, but entered judgment in their favor on another cause of action. Both the defendant and the plaintiffs appealed.

On appeal, the court of appeal reversed the judgment in the plaintiffs' favor on the other cause of action and held that the trial court had correctly granted a nonsuit on the fraud cause of action. The court noted that to take their fraud cause of action to the jury, the plaintiffs had to prove not only the defendant's false representation, but their own justifiable reliance. In this case, the plaintiffs had admitted that they did not read the insurance policy. The court noted that the receipt of a policy and its acceptance by the insured without an objection binds the insured as well as the insurer and that the insured cannot thereafter complain that he or she did not read the policy or know its terms (24 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1586). In this case, a comparison of the defendant's stated coverage, as in the policy, with that offered by the plaintiffs' former health insurance policy would have revealed that the defendant's policy offered less protection (24 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1588). Thus, the court concluded, any representations by the defendant's agent of "full protection" under the defendant's policy or coverage that was "as good or better" than the old policy were patently at odds with the express provisions of the written contract. If the plaintiffs had read the policy, they would have discovered its coverage limitations, rejected it, and continued to pay the higher premium for the increased security of the former policy's more comprehensive coverage. An insured is bound by clear and conspicuous provisions in the policy even if the insured did not read or understand them. The court held that the plaintiffs, having failed to read the policy and having accepted it, could not complain that it was not what they expected. The court therefore concluded that the plaintiffs' reliance on representations about what they were getting for their money was unjustified as a matter of law (24 Cal. App. 4th 1578, 1589) .

In Hackethal v. National Cas. Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 234 Cal. Rptr. 853 , the defendant sold the plaintiff, a physician, an insurance policy called "Defendants Reimbursement Policy," which provided for payment to the insured of $200 per day, up to a specified maximum, for each day that the insured was required to attend the trial of a civil suit against the insured for damages alleged to have been caused by the insured's professional malpractice or by an automobile accident. Eight years later, the Board of Medical Quality Assurance (BMQA) brought professional disciplinary proceedings against the plaintiff, seeking to revoke his license to practice medicine. These proceedings did not seek damages or compensation. The plaintiff was required to attend administrative hearings on 39 different dates. Thereafter, the plaintiff submitted a claim under the policy for the time he was required to spend away from his practice to attend the hearings. The defendant denied the claim on the ground that the policy did not cover administrative proceedings. The plaintiff then sued the insurer and the brokerage firm that sold him the policy for deceit and the insurer only for bad faith failure to pay benefits. The deceit cause of action was based on alleged misrepresentations about coverage contained in the advertising brochure for the policy, as well as alleged misstatements made by one of the brokerage firm's agents. The jury entered a verdict for the plaintiff for benefits, emotional distress damages, and punitive damages, but the trial court granted judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the emotional distress damages and a new trial on the other damages unless the plaintiff agreed to a reduction in the amount of the award. The plaintiff refused to remit any portion of the award, and both parties appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on the verdict as to both the defendants. The court first held as a matter of law that the policy clearly excluded coverage of the plaintiff's administrative hearings before the BMQA (189 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1108-1110) . Turning to the fraud cause of action, the court first noted that the brochure contained no misrepresentations. Although the representations in the brochure were succinct, they were not in conflict with, nor were they misleading with regard to, the actual terms of the policy. Regarding the agent's statements, the court noted that the plaintiff had admitted that the agent never told him that the policy provided coverage for administrative hearings such as those before the BMQA, and therefore the court did not see how anything the agent had said could have led the plaintiff to believe that the policy covered such hearings. Furthermore, even if the plaintiff did rely on statements of the agent in forming such a belief and for that reason renewed the policy, his reliance was unjustifiable as a matter of law (189 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1111) . The court observed that the brochure that the plaintiff had received had put him on notice that the policy controlled the extent of the coverage and advised in bold letters "PLEASE READ YOUR POLICY." The plaintiff testified that he had read the policy but had not "analyzed" it. The court stated that the plaintiff should have done so and had a duty to do so. Receipt of a policy and its acceptance by the insured without objection binds both the insured and the insurer and the insured cannot thereafter complain that he or she did not read the policy or know its terms. The court therefore concluded that the trial court erred in denying the defendants' motions for direct verdicts on the fraud causes of action (189 Cal. App. 3d 1102, 1112) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.210

§ 105.210 Actual and Justifiable Reliance on Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Reliance on Corporate Misrepresentations Inducing Decision to Retain Stock in Corporation Must Be Pleaded With Specificity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO PLEAD WITH SPECIFICITY THE FACTS DEMONSTRATING THAT PLAINTIFF ACTUALLY RELIED ON CORPORATE MISREPRESENTATIONS WHEN DECIDING NOT TO SELL STOCK IN THE CORPORATION.

Reliance on Corporate Misrepresentations Inducing Decision Not to Sell Stock in Corporation Must Be Pleaded With Specificity. Although stock investors may bring a common law action for fraud or negligent misrepresentation if false statements or reports issued by corporate directors induce the holders of that company's stock to decide not to sell the stock, a plaintiff in such a suit must plead actual reliance with specificity to state a cause of action (Small v. Fritz Cos., Inc. (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 167, 171, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490, 65 P.3d 1255).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a plaintiff in an action against a corporation for fraud that induces the plaintiff to decide not to sell stock in the corporation that the plaintiff already owns must plead actual reliance with specificity to state a cause of action. Allegations supporting a finding of actual reliance could include allegations stating that if plaintiff had read a truthful account of the corporation's financial status, the plaintiff would have sold a specified amount of stock on a specified date [Small v. Fritz Cos., Inc. (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 167, 184, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490, 65 P.3d 1255 ; Kouri v. Superior Court (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 460, 471, 55

Cal. Rptr. 3d 777] .

Federal law preempts class action suits alleging fraud or misrepresentation in connection with the sale or purchase of securities, including actionable conduct that induces a decision to hold already-purchased securities, if those suits are brought in the name of 50 or more class members [Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner Smith, Inc. v. Dabit (2006) 547 U.S. 71, 126 S. Ct. 1503, 164 L. Ed. 2d 179, 193 (preemption based on Securities Litigation Uniform Standards Act of 1998, codified at 15 U.S.C.S. § 78bb(f)(1)(A))].

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.200[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel could point to the failure of the plaintiff to allege with specificity that if plaintiff had read a truthful account of the corporation's financial status, the plaintiff would have sold a specified amount of stock on a specified date [see § 105.200[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.220 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance on Corporate Misrepresentations Inducing Decision Not to Sell Stock in Corporation Must Be Pleaded With Specificity

In Small v. Fritz Cos., Inc. (2003) 30 Cal. 4th 167, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 490, 65 P.3d 1255 , the plaintiff was a stockholder who retained stock in a corporation, rather than selling it, based on a fraudulent quarterly statement issued by the corporation that grossly overreported earnings and profits. Once the fraudulent report was revealed, the price of the stock fell more than 55 percent in one day. The plaintiff then brought an action for common law fraud and negligent misrepresentation against the corporation and its officers. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer on the grounds that the complaint failed to allege facts constituting actual reliance with the requisite specificity. The plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeals reversed. The defendants then appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeals. The Court first held that because California common law recognizes the right to bring an action for fraud that induces a plaintiff to forebear from doing something, a plaintiff may bring an action if fraud or negligent misrepresentation induces the plaintiff to refrain from selling stock that the plaintiff already owns. Recognizing that California has a legitimate and compelling interest in preserving a business climate free of fraud and deceptive corporate practices, the Court rejected policy arguments made by the defendants seeking to justify a blanket rule prohibiting such an action (30 Cal. 4th 167, 173-183) . However, the Court also recognized that the risk of encouraging nonmeritorious suits in this context justified imposing a requirement that the plaintiff plead with specificity facts showing actual reliance on the misrepresentations. In this case, the Court concluded that the plaintiff's bare assertion that he relied on the corporation's quarterly report failed to meet this pleading requirement. The Court then remanded the case to allow the plaintiff to amend his pleadings to attempt to meet the requirement (30 Cal. 4th 167, 183-185) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.211-105.219

[Reserved]

§§ 105.211[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.220

§ 105.220 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Failure to Investigate That Will Not Bar Recovery

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE AN ALLEGED FAILURE TO INVESTIGATE, BECAUSE A MERE FAILURE TO INVESTIGATE DOES NOT BY ITSELF BAR RECOVERY.

A. Mere Failure to Investigate Does Not Bar Recovery. The fact that an investigation would have revealed the misrepresentation's falsity will not by itself bar the plaintiff's recovery (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415, 115 P.2d 977).

B. Defendant's Misrepresentation Was Intentional. The plaintiff's negligence in failing to discover a statement's falsity is no defense if the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent. As a general rule, the plaintiff's negligence is no defense to an intentional tort (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 414, 115 P.2d 977).

C. Right of Action Not Destroyed if Plaintiff Justifiably Relied. If one is justified in relying, and in fact does rely, on false representations, one's right of action is not destroyed because the means of knowledge were open to one. In such a case, one has no duty in law to employ that means of knowledge (Howell v. Courtesy Chevrolet, Inc. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 391, 403, 94 Cal. Rptr. 33).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations, because the plaintiff has failed to investigate the representations. The basis of this form is that the mere fact that the plaintiff did not investigate does not bar the plaintiff from recovery. Thus, this form may be used if the pleadings and affidavits of record clearly show that even though the plaintiff could have investigated and discovered the falsity of the defendant's representations, the plaintiff did not do so.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a motion for summary judgment. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the misrepresentation was intentional and that the plaintiff justifiably relied on the misrepresentation.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Failure to Investigate Does Not Bar Recovery

In Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.204, the plaintiffs had executed an oil lease on their property. Subsequently, they took action to prevent an impending mortgage foreclosure or to exercise their equity of redemption because of the defendant's misrepresentations.

The Supreme Court ruled that the fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentations will not by itself bar recovery. It is well established, said the Court, that the plaintiff is not held to have constructive notice of a public record that would reveal the true facts. The purpose of the recording acts is to afford protection not to those who make fraudulent misrepresentations, but to bona fide purchasers for value. A plaintiff is not held to the standard of precaution or minimum knowledge of a hypothetical reasonable person. Exceptionally gullible or ignorant people have been permitted to recover from the defendants who took advantage of them in circumstances in which persons of normal intelligence would not have been misled. A plaintiff's negligence in failing to discover the falsity of a statement is no defense if the misrepresentation was intentional rather than negligent because, as a general rule, the plaintiff's negligence is no defense to an intentional tort. However, the Court added that if the conduct of the plaintiff in the light of the plaintiff's own intelligence and information was manifestly unreasonable, the plaintiff cannot recover. The plaintiff may not put faith in representations that are preposterous, or shown by facts within the plaintiff's observation to be so patently and obviously false that the plaintiff must have closed his or her eyes to avoid discovery of the truth (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415) .

[b] Defendant's Misrepresentation Was Intentional

Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , is discussed in § 105.220[3][a].

[c] Right of Action Not Destroyed if Plaintiff Justifiably Relied

In Howell v. Courtesy Chevrolet, Inc. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 391, 94 Cal. Rptr. 33 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment in favor of the plaintiffs in an action for rescission of a contract on the grounds of fraud. The plaintiff, a financier, had relied on an invoice the defendant prepared that included the cost of three trash collection trucks with three specially fabricated bodies and had made payment for the trucks. The bodies were never installed, and the plaintiff sued for rescission. The trial court found that the plaintiff had justifiably relied on the representation made on the invoice as to the bodies and that the representation was made negligently and with intent to induce the payment. Not until the plaintiff had received notice that the user of the trucks under a lease agreement had failed to make payments and was in bankruptcy did it repossess the trucks and discover that two of the trucks had no trash bodies and one had an old damaged body. The defendant contended on appeal that the trial court should have found negligence or contributory negligence on the plaintiff's part, citing personal injury cases as authority. However, those cases were not authority for the right to assert the plaintiff's contributory negligence as a defense to an action for fraud and deceit. The court of appeal ruled that the issue in this case was whether or not the plaintiff was justified in relying on the defendant's representation. The court found that the trial court's finding that the plaintiff had justifiably relied was proper. If the plaintiff was justified in relying, and in fact did rely, on the defendant's false representations, the plaintiff's right of action was not destroyed because the means of knowledge were open to the plaintiff. In such a case, the plaintiff had no duty in law to employ such means of knowledge (16 Cal. App. 3d 391, 403) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Failure to Investigate Does Not Bar Recovery

In Rogers v. Warden (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 286, 125 P.2d 7 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.71[3], the Supreme Court noted that the alleged false representation, that the plaintiff had no right in the property in question, was actionable. The representation was alleged to have been made with knowledge of its falsity and with the intention of inducing the plaintiff to rely on it, and the plaintiff did indeed rely on it. The Court ruled that it could not be said that the plaintiff, a widow unaccustomed to handling business matters and with no knowledge that she possessed any interest at all in the property, was not justified in relying on the alleged representations without making an independent investigation. The fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentation would not by itself bar recovery (20 Cal. 2d 286, 289) .

In Meyer v. Ford Motor Co. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 90, 79 Cal. Rptr. 816 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for fraud and for breach of contract. The evidence, uncontested on appeal, showed that the defendant's agents made certain willfully fraudulent representations to the plaintiff at a meeting after the defendant exercised its right to terminate the plaintiff's franchise, including a promise that the plaintiff would not be hurt financially on the sale of his interest. Despite the fact that one of the subordinate agents told the plaintiff after the meeting that he would not be allowed to sell for the price necessary to avoid being hurt financially, the plaintiff relied on the promises by forgoing certain contractual rights to contest the termination. On appeal, the defendant contended that because of the subordinate agent's statement after the meeting, the plaintiff had no right to rely on the statements made at the meeting. However, the court ruled that in view of the superior positions of the other agents, it could not be said as a matter of law that it was unreasonable for the plaintiff to assume that the subordinate was merely speaking for himself and that, in keeping with their promises, the other agents would overrule that statement. The law does not require that a person to assume that everyone with whom that person has a business transaction is a rogue and act accordingly. The fact that an investigation would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentation will not by itself bar recovery (275 Cal. App. 2d 90, 105) .

[b] Defendant's Misrepresentation Was Intentional

In Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59 , plaintiffs bought a plot of land with the intent to subdivide the plot and build two houses. Prior to making an offer to buy, the brokers for the sellers represented in their listing that the county had stated that the plot could be split and allegedly told the buyers' broker that the plot had already been approved for a split. However, the sales contract gave the buyers the right to investigate the laws limiting development on the property and strongly advised the buyers to do so, and also contained an integration clause stating that all understandings between the parties were contained in the written contract. After closing, plaintiffs discovered that the property was too small to be subdivided under applicable zoning laws. The trial court granted summary judgment for the brokers on plaintiffs' intentional misrepresentation claims after concluding that the plaintiffs could not prove justifiable reliance. The court of appeal reversed. Addressing the brokers' claims that the buyers were negligent in failing to completely investigate the zoning restrictions before purchase, the court of appeal noted the established rule that, in an action for fraud or deceit, negligence on the part of the plaintiff in failing to discover the falsity of the defendant's statement is no defense if the defendant's misrepresentation was intentional (146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1502) .

Howell v. Courtesy Chevrolet, Inc. (1971) 16 Cal. App. 3d 391, 94 Cal. Rptr. 33 , is discussed in § 105.220[3][c].

[c] Right of Action Not Destroyed if Plaintiff Justifiably Relied

In London v. Guberman (1963) 214 Cal. App. 2d 215 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for fraud in the sale of an advertising business. During the purchase negotiations, the defendant's agent gave the plaintiff a written profit and loss statement indicating that the business was operating profitably. The court of appeal ruled that the trial court was justified in drawing the inference that the statement emanated from the defendant personally and that he personally had made the representations knowing that they were false. The court held that even if contracting parties are adverse to each other, either party has the right to rely on the other's express statement of an existing fact the truth of which is known to the other and unknown to the relying party. Furthermore, ruled the court, if one is justified in relying, and does in fact rely, on false representations, one's right of action is not destroyed merely because opportunities for examination or means of knowledge were open to one because, in this situation, one has no legal duty to employ such opportunities for examination or means of knowledge (214 Cal. App. 2d 215, 219-220).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.221

§ 105.221 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plausible Explanation Eliminated Duty to Investigate

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE AN ALLEGED FAILURE TO INVESTIGATE, BECAUSE DEFENDANT MADE A PLAUSIBLE EXPLANATION OF FACT.

Plausible Explanation Precludes Investigation. If the defendant makes a plausible explanation of fact, the plaintiff is not required to investigate further (Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 966, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations, because the plaintiff has failed to investigate the representations. The basis of this form is that the mere fact that the plaintiff did not investigate does not bar the plaintiff from recovery, because the defendant made a plausible explanation of fact.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, counsel may refer to the defendant's deposition testimony that discloses a plausible explanation of fact on which the plaintiff reasonably relied to support the argument that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plausible Explanation Precludes Investigation

In Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in an action for fraud in the inducement of the execution of franchise contracts. The court of appeal noted that the defendants deflected the plaintiffs' suspicions by plausible assertions of fact. As an example, the court cited the fact that when some of the plaintiffs noticed that the defendants were signing agreements, not with the nominal contracting party but with corporations having different names, the defendants' agent told them that these companies were the nominal contracting party's western branches. The court then held that if a defendant makes a plausible explanation of fact, the plaintiff is not required to investigate further (266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 966) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.222

§ 105.222 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Had Limited Capacity to Investigate

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE PLAINTIFF'S INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION, BECAUSE AN INDEPENDENT INVESTIGATION DOES NOT BAR RECOVERY IF IT IS ALSO _____ [SHOWN or ALLEGED] THAT _____ [THE REPRESENTATION'S FALSITY WAS NOT APPARENT FROM AN INSPECTION or THE PERSON MAKING THE REPRESENTATIONS HAD A SUPERIOR KNOWLEDGE or THE PARTY RELYING ON THE REPRESENTATION WAS NOT COMPETENT TO JUDGE THE FACTS WITHOUT EXPERT ASSISTANCE].

Reliance Not Precluded by Investigation. A plaintiff's independent investigation or examination does not preclude the plaintiff's reliance on representations if the representations' falsity was not apparent from the inspection, if the person making the representations had a superior knowledge, or if the plaintiff was not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance (Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 748, 192 P.2d 935).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations, because the plaintiff conducted an independent investigation. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff's independent investigation does not bar recovery because the representation's falsity was not apparent from an inspection, the person making the representation had a superior knowledge, or the party relying on the representations was not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that the representations' falsity were not apparent from an inspection, the person making the representations had a superior knowledge, or the party relying on the representations was not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance [see § 105.220[2][b]]

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Precluded by Failure to Investigate

The facts and procedural background of Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 192 P.2d 935 , are discussed in § 105.332[3][b]. The Supreme Court held in favor of the defendants and cross complainants on their cause of action for damages for fraud. The plaintiff had listed certain farm property for sale and furnished data concerning crop yield and value to a real estate agent. There was no question that the representations were material, false, and made to induce the purchase. However, the plaintiff contended that the buyers did not rely on the representations, because one of the buyers had visited the farm several times and inspected the crops. That party was experienced in growing other crops, but knew nothing about the crops in question, and he testified that he relied on the plaintiff's representations.

The Court noted that there was no evidence requiring a finding that the falsity of the representations as to value or yield was discoverable from the buyer's inspection, considering the time of the year when he made the inspection and his lack of experience. In addition, although the buyer was advised by a bank appraiser that "it wasn't a very good ranch" and that the grape yield would be less than half the amount represented, the Court observed that the trial court could properly find that the buyers believed the seller's estimate to be more nearly correct and that they were justified in their continued reliance on the seller's statements as to records of past production, as well as the representations concerning current crops. An independent investigation or an examination of property does not preclude reliance on representations if the representations' falsity is not apparent from an inspection, the person making the representations has a superior knowledge, or the party relying on the representations is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance (31 Cal. 2d 744, 748) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reliance Not Precluded by Failure to Investigate

The facts and background of Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , are discussed in § 105.290[3][a]. In this case, the defendants contended that the evidence showed that investigations into the value of the worth of the stock in question were made on the plaintiff's behalf and that one who has conducted an independent investigation must be deemed to have relied on the investigation rather than on any representations made to that person. However, the Court ruled that a defrauded person is not barred from maintaining an action merely because the person commenced an investigation, if that investigation was incomplete or abandoned before discovery of the falsity, particularly if the defendant has a superior knowledge of the facts, if it is difficult for the plaintiff to ascertain all the facts, or if the plaintiff is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance. In this respect, the Court noted that expert witnesses had testified that determining the stock's value would have required a complete examination of all of the company's assets, which were extensive. The evidence also showed that it was difficult to secure the information needed to form an accurate estimate of the value, that one of the defendants had superior knowledge concerning these facts, and that the plaintiff was not competent without expert assistance to determine the stock's worth. The evidence did not establish that those who attempted the investigation were qualified to give that assistance. Moreover, there was evidence that the plaintiff did not make a complete investigation because of his reliance on the defendant's representations (26 Cal. 2d 412, 434-435) .

In Hartong v. Partake, Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 72 Cal. Rptr. 722 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for fraud in the inducement of the execution of franchise contracts. The defendants contended that the plaintiffs were barred from recovery because they had conducted independent investigations. However, the court of appeal ruled that if a plaintiff commences an investigation, the plaintiff's failure to discover the truth may be excused by the defendant's superior knowledge of the facts, the difficulty in ascertaining all of the facts, or the plaintiff's incompetence to judge the facts without expert assistance. Thus, the fact that some of the plaintiffs checked one of the defendants with the Better Business Bureau was no bar to recovery. The fact that this agency had no specific information about another of the defendants was consistent with the defendants' representations that this other defendant was the first defendant's new western branch (266 Cal. App. 2d 942, 966) .

In Snelson v. Ondulando Highlands Corp. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 243 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff with directions to the trial court to take such action as was necessary to conform to the decision on appeal. The plaintiffs had negotiated for the purchase of a residence and asked the sales manager if there was fill on the lot. The defendants provided the plaintiffs with maps and reports showing the lot to be cut rather than fill. A rainstorm later caused a landslide on the lot, and experts indicated that the landslide would not have occurred if the property had been cut. The court ruled that affirmative representation that land is cut when it is on a fill constitutes actionable fraud and that the plaintiffs had relied on the representations. The court noted that surface observations would not have revealed if the land was cut or fill and held that an independent investigation or an examination of property does not preclude reliance on representations if the representations' falsity is not apparent from an inspection, if the person making the representations has a superior knowledge, or if the party relying on the representations is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance. Accordingly, the court concluded that the evidence was adequate to support the trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs granting rescission of the purchase on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation (5 Cal. App. 3d 243, 251-252).

In Balfour, Guthrie & Co. v. Hansen (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 173, 38 Cal. Rptr. 525 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for damages for fraudulent misrepresentation in connection with a contract for the construction of grain silos. The defendant represented that the contract was completed according to specifications. There was reasonable reliance, the court concluded, because the owner made payment for the work believing that the work was done according to the plans and specifications and because the owner had no one competent to determine the quality of construction. The owner's agent who was on the job site daily had not been hired to make a constant investigation of whether or not the plans and specifications were being adequately followed. His main duty was to execute certificates concerning concrete incorporated into the job so that the owner could be paid by the entity financing the construction. Moreover, the court observed, it was not obvious that the concrete or reinforcing steel was being improperly placed. The agent's visits did not suffice to give him an adequate opportunity to detect failures in complying with the plans and specifications and would not have sufficed unless he had planned to spend 24 hours a day on the job. The court ruled that an independent investigation or an examination of property does not preclude reliance on representations if the representations' falsity is not apparent from an inspection, if the person making the representations has a superior knowledge, or if the party relying on the representations is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance (227 Cal. App. 2d 173, 193-196) .

In Curran v. Heslop (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 476 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in an action based on fraudulent suppression of fact in negotiations for the purchase of real property. The complaint alleged that the defendants had concealed facts concerning building code violations. The defendants argued that the plaintiff did not rely on the presence or absence of those violations in making the purchase and was not induced to purchase as a result of the alleged fraud because she made an independent examination of the property before consummating the transaction. An independent investigation or an examination of property does not preclude reliance on representations if the representations' falsity is not apparent from an inspection, if the person making the representations has a superior knowledge, or if the party relying on the representations is not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance. The evidence in this case supported the inference that the violations were not apparent, that the defendants had a superior knowledge, and that the plaintiff was not competent to judge the facts without expert assistance (115 Cal. App. 2d 476, 481-482).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.223

§ 105.223 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Existence of Public Record of Which Plaintiff Had No Constructive Notice

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE THE EXISTENCE OF PUBLIC RECORDS THAT MIGHT HAVE ENABLED PLAINTIFF TO ASCERTAIN THE FALSITY OF DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS, BECAUSE A PLAINTIFF IS NOT HELD TO CONSTRUCTIVE NOTICE OF THOSE RECORDS.

Constructive Notice of Public Record. A plaintiff is not held to constructive notice of a public record that would reveal the true facts (Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 415, 115 P.2d 977).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations, because the plaintiff examine existing public records that might have revealed the falsity of the defendant's representations. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff is not held to have constructive notice of those public records.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constructive Notice of Public Record

The facts and procedural background of Seeger v. Odell (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 409, 115 P.2d 977 , are discussed in § 105.204. The Supreme Court ruled that the fact that an investigation of public records would have revealed the falsity of the misrepresentation will not by itself bar the plaintiff's recovery. It is well established that the plaintiff is not held to constructive notice of a public record that would reveal the true facts (18 Cal. 2d 409, 414-415) .

151 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.224

§ 105.224 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Because Misrepresentation Was Substantial Factor in Inducement

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF PLAINTIFF RELIED IN PART ON THE ADVICE OF OTHERS, BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS WERE A SUBSTANTIAL FACTOR IN INDUCING PLAINTIFF TO ACT.

Representations as Substantial Factor in Inducement. In actions for fraud, it is not necessary that a defendant's representations be the sole cause of the damage. If they are a substantial factor in inducing the plaintiff to act, reliance is sufficiently shown, even though the plaintiff also relied in part on the advice of others (Wennerholm v. Stanford Univ. Sch. of Medicine (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 713, 717, 128 P.2d 522).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations. The basis of this form is that it is not necessary that a defendant's representations be the sole cause of the plaintiff's damage, if they are a substantial factor in inducing the plaintiff to act.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that the defendant's representations were a substantial factor in inducing the plaintiff to act [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representations as Substantial Factor in Inducement

In Wennerholm v. Stanford Univ. Sch. of Medicine (1942) 20 Cal. 2d 713 , the Supreme Court reversed a trial court's judgment for the defendants following the sustaining of demurrers to the plaintiff's fifth amended complaint without leave to amend. The complaint charged the defendants with fraud, alleging that the defendants had falsely represented to the public that a drug they manufactured would relieve obesity and was harmless when they knew the drug was dangerous and liable to cause blindness. The complaint further alleged that the plaintiff read, believed, and relied on the false representations and that, in reliance on them, she purchased and consumed the drug. The Court held that, even if allegations that the plaintiff took the drug on her physician's advice, which were contained in prior versions of the complaint but omitted from the complaint at issue, could be read into the complaint at issue, the complaint at issue sufficiently alleged the plaintiff's reliance on the defendants' representations. In actions for fraud, said the Court, it is not required that a defendant's representations be the sole cause of the damage. If they are a substantial factor in inducing the plaintiff to act, even though the plaintiff also relies in part on the advice of others, reliance is sufficiently shown (20 Cal. 2d 713, 717).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Representations as Substantial Factor in Inducement

The facts and background of Sanfran Co. v. Rees Blow Pipe Mfg. Co. (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 191, 335 P.2d 995 , are discussed in § 105.71[3]. The court of appeal held that a cause of action for fraud and deceit would be stated if the evidence showed that the fraudulent concealment involved was an inducement to the plaintiff's purchase without showing that it was the sole inducement (168 Cal. App. 2d 191, 205) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.225

§ 105.225 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Exists Because Plaintiff Was "Brainwashed"

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, EVEN IF PLAINTIFF WAS INFORMED THAT DEFENDANT'S STATEMENTS WERE MISREPRESENTATIONS, BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S DECEIT LED PLAINTIFF INTO A SETTING IN WHICH PLAINTIFF WAS RENDERED INCAPABLE OF DECIDING NOT TO ACT ON DEFENDANT'S INITIAL MISREPRESENTATIONS.

A. Plaintiff "Brainwashed" and Unable to Act on Truth. In an action for fraud, the plaintiff's reliance on the defendant's misrepresentations will not be negated by the defendant's later informing the plaintiff of the truth, if the defendant's deceit had led plaintiff into a setting in which the plaintiff could be "brainwashed" and rendered incapable of deciding not to act on the defendant's initial misrepresentations (Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108-1110, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46).

[Optional] B. Freedom of Religion Does Not Exempt Religious Organization. A religious organization can be held liable on a traditional cause of action in fraud for inducing nonmembers, by misrepresentation and concealment of its identity, into unknowingly entering an atmosphere in which they were then subjected to coercive persuasion (Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1110-1120, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations. The basis of this form is that the defendant's deceit had led the plaintiff into a setting in which the plaintiff could be "brainwashed" and rendered incapable of deciding not to act on the defendant's initial misrepresentations.

The optional paragraph is for use if the defendant is a religious organization that alleges liability for tort would be an interference with its right to exercise its religious beliefs.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that the defendant's deceit had led the plaintiff into a setting in which the plaintiff could be "brainwashed" and rendered incapable of deciding not to act on the defendant's initial misrepresentations [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff "Brainwashed" and Unable to Act on Truth

In Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 , the plaintiffs, former members of the defendant's Unification Church, had initially been recruited by specific members of the defendant through invitations to socialize and then to visit a farm for relaxation. Both the plaintiffs repeatedly asked whether the group had any religious affiliation and were told that it did not. While at the farm, the plaintiffs led strictly regimented and isolated lives and were strongly discouraged from leaving. After some time, the plaintiffs were informed that the group was part of the defendant's church. The plaintiffs remained with the group and became members of the defendant's church. Later, the plaintiffs were on separate occasions forcibly abducted from a public street by third parties and deprogrammed. The plaintiffs then filed an action against the defendant, alleging they had been fraudulently induced to join the defendant's church through a variety of deceptive tactics on the part of some of its members. Each plaintiff asserted causes of action for fraud and deceit, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and false imprisonment. The defendant cross complained against the deprogrammers and one of the plaintiffs, alleging that the deprogramming violated the defendant's civil rights. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendant on all causes of action and dismissed its cross complaint. The plaintiffs and the defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the summary judgment, but reversed the dismissal of the cross complaint. The plaintiffs and cross the defendant petitioned the Supreme Court for review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the summary judgment for false imprisonment, reversed the summary judgment for fraud and intentional infliction of emotional distress, and affirmed the reversal of the dismissal of the cross complaint. The plaintiffs contended that members of the defendant's church knowingly misrepresented its identity, with the intent to induce them to associate with and ultimately join the defendant's church, that they justifiably relied on those misrepresentations in unknowingly agreeing to participate in the defendant's activities, and that they suffered psychological and financial damages as a result of their involvement and membership. They claimed they would not have chosen to associate with the defendant had they known its true identity. The defendant contended that the facts negated justifiable reliance, a necessary element of an action for fraud. The Court noted that justifiable reliance exists if the misrepresentation or nondisclosure was an immediate cause of the plaintiff's conduct that alters the plaintiff's legal relations and if the plaintiff would not, in all reasonable probability, have entered into the transaction without that misrepresentation or nondisclosure. The defendant contended that because the plaintiffs learned of its true identity prior to becoming formal members, the misrepresentations were "cured" and the plaintiffs could not have justifiably relied on them in deciding to join the defendant's church (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108) . The plaintiffs contended that by the time the defendant disclosed its true identity, its agents had rendered them incapable of deciding not to join the defendant's church, by subjecting them, without their knowledge or consent, to an intense program of coercive persuasion or mind control. In other words, the plaintiffs' claim was that the defendant's deceit led them into a setting in which they could be "brainwashed" and that the defendant's deception could not be cured by telling the plaintiffs the truth after their involuntary indoctrination was accomplished (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1108-1109) . The Court defined "brainwashing" as a forcible indoctrination to induce someone to give up basic political, social, or religious beliefs and attitudes and to accept contrasting regimented ideas. The Court reviewed the concept, highlighting the differing opinions concerning it in the scientific community and concluded that the existence of such differing views compelled the conclusion that the plaintiffs' theory raised a factual question, which, if not prohibited by other considerations, precluded a grant of summary judgment for the defendant (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1109-1110) .

[b] Freedom of Religion Does Not Exempt Religious Organization

The facts and procedural background of Molko v. Holy Spirit Assn. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 1092, 252 Cal. Rptr. 122, 762 P.2d 46 , are discussed in § 105.225[3][a]. The Court explained that U.S. Const. Amend. I and Cal. Const. Art. I, § 4 provide two types of religious freedom: the establishment clause guarantees that the government will not impose religion on the people, and the free exercise clause guarantees that the government will not prevent the people from freely pursuing any religion they choose. The Court pointed out that although religious belief is absolutely protected from governmental interference, religiously motivated conduct is not, and such conduct remains subject to regulation for the protection of society. Government action burdening religious conduct is subject to a balancing test, in which the importance of the state's interest is weighed against the severity of the burden imposed on religion. The greater the burden imposed on religion, the more compelling must be the government interest at stake (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1112-1113) .

A government action that passes the balancing test must also meet the further requirements that (1) no action imposing a lesser burden on religion would satisfy the government's interest and (2) the action does not discriminate between religions or between religion and nonreligion (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1112-1113) . The Court observed that although judicial sanctioning of tort recovery constitutes state action sufficient to invoke constitutional protections, religious groups are not immune from all tort liability, and courts have recognized tort liability even for acts that are religiously motivated (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1114) . The defendant's alleged deceptions, although secular on the surface, are clearly rooted in religious belief. The Court held that this does not mean that those representations are immune from government regulations, but means that any such regulation must survive constitutional scrutiny (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1115) .

The Court methodically subjected the imposition of tort liability to the constitutionally required balancing test. Initially, the Court analyzed whether liability implicated religious belief or religiously motivated conduct. It found that liability would not burden anyone's right to believe or to remain part of a religious community and would not subject anyone to involuntary deprogramming. Instead, it would only burden the defendant's efforts to recruit new members by deceptive means. The Court said that the challenge was not to whether anyone's faith was real, but to the defendant's practice of misrepresenting or concealing its identity to bring unsuspecting outsiders into its highly structured environment. That practice is not itself belief; it is conduct subject to regulation for the protection of society (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1116-1117) .

The Court then addressed whether the state's interest in allowing tort liability is important enough to outweigh any burden that liability would impose on the defendant's religious conduct. Tort liability for fraudulent recruitment practices would discourage the defendant from putting its belief in recruiting through deception into practice by subjecting it to possible monetary loss for doing so. Furthermore, liability presumably would impair the defendant's ability to convert nonbelievers, because some potential members who would have been recruited by deception will choose not to associate with the defendant when they are told its true identity. The Court noted that while these burdens are real, they are not substantial. Being subject to liability for fraud would not in any way or degree prevent or inhibit the defendant's members from operating their religious communities, worshiping as they see fit, freely associating with one another, selling or distributing literature, proselytizing on the street, soliciting funds, or generally spreading their message. It would not compel them to perform acts at odds with fundamental tenets of their religious beliefs (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1117) .

The Court then considered whether a compelling state interest justified the marginal burden liability imposes on the defendant's free exercise rights. It found such an interest in the substantial threat to public safety, peace, and order posed by the defendant's allegedly fraudulent conduct. The Court observed that although some persons subjected to coercive persuasion without their knowledge or consent may emerge unscathed, many others develop serious and sometimes irreversible physical and psychiatric disorders, such as schizophrenia, self-mutilation, and suicide. The state clearly has a compelling interest in preventing its citizens from being deceived into submitting unknowingly to such a potentially dangerous process. The state has an equally compelling interest in protecting the family institution. Because the family almost invariably suffers great stress and sometimes incurs significant financial loss when one of its members is unknowingly subjected to coercive persuasion, the state has a compelling interest in protecting families from suffering such impairments as a result of fraud and deception. The Court concluded that although liability for deceptive recruitment practices imposes a marginal burden on the defendant's free exercise of religion, the burden is justified by the compelling state interest (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1117-1118) . The Court then analyzed whether any action imposing a lesser burden on religion would satisfy that compelling state interest, and after careful consideration, the Court concluded that no less restrictive alternative was available (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1118) .

Finally, the Court considered whether allowing liability would (1) have the purpose and effect of advancing the state's secular goals and (2) not discriminate between religions or between religion and nonreligion. It found that judicial sanctioning of traditional tort liability for fraudulent recruitment satisfies these standards. First, its purpose and effect is plainly to advance the legitimate secular goal of protecting persons from being harmed by fraud. Second, it is nondiscriminatory: all organizations, religious or otherwise, may be held liable for damages caused by their fraudulent acts. It concluded that neither the federal nor the state Constitution barred the plaintiffs from bringing traditional fraud actions against the defendant for allegedly inducing them, by misrepresentation and concealment of its identity, into unknowingly entering an atmosphere in which they were then subjected to coercive persuasion (46 Cal. 3d 1092, 1119-1120) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.226

§ 105.226 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance on Facts Discovered After Agreement Signed But Before Escrow Closed

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S DISCOVERY OF THE FALSITY OF DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS AFTER SIGNING THE PURCHASE AGREEMENT, BUT BEFORE CLOSE OF ESCROW, DOES NOT PRECLUDE A FINDING OF JUSTIFIABLE RELIANCE BY PLAINTIFF ON FALSE REPRESENTATIONS MADE BY DEFENDANT BEFORE THE AGREEMENT WAS SIGNED AND THEREFORE DOES NOT PRECLUDE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BASED ON THOSE REPRESENTATIONS.

Discovery After Purchase Agreement Signed But Before Escrow Closed. The plaintiff's discovery of the true facts after signing a real property purchase agreement, but before the close of escrow does not preclude a finding of reliance with respect to false representations made by the defendant before the purchase agreement was signed. The plaintiff's reliance at the inception of the agreement is sufficient to support recovery for fraud (Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 313, 316-319, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish actual and justifiable reliance on the defendant's representations. They may also be submitted if the defendant contends that the plaintiff waived the fraud claim by not rescinding and withdrawing from the transaction after learning the true facts before the close of escrow.

The basis of this form is that the plaintiff was induced to enter into the purchase agreement by alleged false representations made before the agreement was signed, but that the plaintiff did not learn of their falsity until after the agreement was signed and before the close of escrow.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities asserting that the plaintiff's continued performance does not waive the plaintiff's claim for damages [see § 105.220[2][a]].

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, to support the argument that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether the plaintiff justifiably relied on the defendant's misrepresentations, counsel should point to uncontradicted evidence in the record establishing that the alleged misrepresentations were made before the agreement was signed, but the plaintiff did not discovery the falsity of those representations until after the agreement was signed [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discovery After Purchase Agreement Signed But Before Escrow Closed

In Jue v. Smiser (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 28 Cal. Rptr. 2d 242 , the plaintiffs were induced to sign an agreement to buy a house by the defendants' false representations that the house was "authenticated" as having been designed by a famous architect. After signing the agreement, but before close of escrow, the plaintiffs learned that it was impossible to confirm whether or not that architect had actually designed the house. Nevertheless, instead of canceling the agreement, the plaintiffs proceeded with the sale and then sued the defendants for fraud. The trial court granted summary judgment for the defendants, but the court of appeal reversed.

The defendants argued that the plaintiffs' discovery of the true facts before the close of escrow, when the plaintiffs could still have withdrawn from the sale, precluded a finding of justifiable reliance on the defendants' representations (23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 316) . The court of appeal rejected this argument. Relying on Storage Servs. v. Oosterbaan (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 498, 511, 262 Cal. Rptr. 689 , the court held that the plaintiffs' reliance on the defendants' misrepresentations at the inception of the transaction was sufficient to support recovery for fraud and that the plaintiffs need not establish continuing reliance on the misrepresentation until the contract was fully executed (23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 317) . The court reasoned that its conclusion was supported by the public policy favoring full disclosure in real estate transactions (23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 318) . The court further reasoned that if it adopted the defendants' argument, a real property buyer who learns of a misrepresentation or potential misrepresentation after a purchase contract is entered into, but before escrow closes, would be forced to choose between (1) consummating the purchase and waiving any claim for damages, or (2) rescinding the deal and facing the consequences, which could include problems in securing the return of money deposited with the escrow holder, the loss of money spent to secure a loan and meet other costs of acquisition, and the risk of being sued by the seller. The court ruled that one who is or may be the victim of another's fraud should not be forced to make such a choice (23 Cal. App. 4th 312, 319) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.227

§ 105.227 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Contract Clause That May Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT DESPITE A CONTRACT CLAUSE STATING THAT THE PARTIES RELIED ONLY ON REPRESENTATIONS CONTAINED IN THE CONTRACT, BECAUSE THE CLAUSE MAY NOT, AS A MATTER OF LAW, PRECLUDE PLAINTIFF FROM PROVING FRAUD.

Contract Clause Does Not Preclude Proof of Reliance. A contract provision stating that no representations were made by the parties except as in the agreement does not preclude the plaintiffs from proving fraud (Ron Greenspan Volkswagen, Inc. v. Ford Motor Land Dev. Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the existence of a contract clause stating that the parties relied only on representations contained in the contract may not preclude the plaintiff from proving fraud.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.206.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should discuss evidence of a fraudulent misrepresentation made prior to execution of the contract that induced execution of the contract [see Ron Greenspan Volkswagen, Inc. v. Ford Motor Land Dev. Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783 ; see § 105.220[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Clause Does Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

In Ron Greenspan Volkswagen, Inc. v. Ford Motor Land Dev. Corp. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 783 , the plaintiff, which operated an automobile dealership, sued several related defendants for fraud with regard to a real property exchange between the plaintiff and one of the defendants. The parties eventually entered into a "Purchase and Sale and Exchange Agreement" providing for an exchange of property and appropriate payments. The agreement contained a provision stating that "this Agreement constitutes the sole agreement among the parties, and supersedes any and all prior oral or written agreements or understandings among them, pertaining to the transactions contemplated in this Agreement." The agreement was conditioned on one of the defendants obtaining financing and was subsequently terminated because that defendant did not obtain the financing. A dealership agreement between the plaintiff and one of the other defendants was then terminated, the plaintiff went out of business, and the bank foreclosed on the plaintiff's real property. In causes of action charging the defendants with fraud, the plaintiff alleged that the defendants made several false representations regarding the value of the defendant's property and the existence of potential purchasers of the property. The defendants moved for summary judgment on the fraud claims, and the trial court granted the motion on the ground that the provision in the contract providing that no representations were made except as in the agreement made any reliance by the plaintiff on alleged misrepresentation unjustifiable as a matter of law.

The court of appeal reversed the summary judgment as to the fraud claims, stating that the only authority relied on by the trial court was a prior appellate court decision (Fisher v. Pennsylvania Life Co. (1977) 69 Cal. App. 3d 506, 138 Cal. Rptr. 181) that was not binding on the court of appeal, which it declined to follow (32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996) . The court noted initially that Fisher claimed that two earlier cases supported the rule that a party cannot base a fraud claim on at an oral representation if there is a contract clause providing that all representations are included in the contract. However, the court concluded that neither of the cases actually supported this proposition (32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 991) . The court then pointed out that Fisher ignored a line of California authority holding that a contract provision stating that all representations are contained in the contract does not bar an action for fraud (32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 992). Furthermore, the court stated that Fisher has been ignored by California courts and commentators that continue to embrace the rule that a contract clause like the one in this case does not bar an action for fraud (32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 994). Thus, refusing to follow Fisher, the court concluded that the contract provision did not establish as a matter of law that the plaintiff's reliance on misrepresentations not contained in the contract was unreasonable (32 Cal. App. 4th 985, 996) .

NOTE:

One Ninth Circuit panel, applying California law to somewhat different facts, reached an opposite conclusion concerning the effect of a contractual provision on the plaintiff's ability to claim justifiable reliance [see Bank of W. v. Valley Nat'l Bank of Ariz. (9th Cir. 1994) 41 F.3d 471, 477-478 , discussed at § 105.206].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contract Clause Does Not Preclude Proof of Reliance

In Broberg v. The Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 912, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 225 , plaintiff sued a life insurance company and a selling agent for the agent's alleged misrepresentations when selling a policy. Plaintiff alleged that the agent specifically told him through a sales demonstration that included a three-page document printed just for him that after the eleventh year, no out-of-pocket premium payments would be required because the policy would generate sufficient income to pay the premiums by itself. As it turned out, however, due to subsequent changes to the policy's dividend rate, out-of-pocket premiums were required after the eleventh year. Defendants defended on the grounds that the third page of the sales document contained a disclaimer stating that the number of years of required cash outlays depended on continuation of the company's current dividend scale. The trial court granted defendants' demurrer, concluding that the disclaimer both triggered the running of the statute of limitations and prevented plaintiff from proving justifiable reliance. The court of appeals reversed. The court held that a triable issue of fact remained on whether the disclaimer in the sales demonstration materials was sufficient to put plaintiff on notice that the agent's assertions that out-of-pocket premium payments would not be required after the eleventh year might be false. The court noted that the disclaimers were buried in 39 lines worth of same-sized, capitalized print, and that the first page of the document, on which the agent indicated that out-of-pocket premium payments would "vanish," lacked any cautionary language (171 Cal. App. 4th 912, 922) .

In McClain v. Octagon Plaza, LLC (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 784, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 885 , a commercial tenant in a shopping mall sued the landlord based on allegations that the landlord, when negotiating the lease, overstated the size of the rental space by 7.6 percent and understated the size of the shopping mall by 8.1 percent, resulting in plaintiff paying $90,000 more in rent over the course of the lease than she would have had the actual sizes been revealed. The trial court sustained defendant's demurrer without leave to amend based on a lease provision stating that the parties agreed that the sizes were "reasonable approximations" and payments based on these sizes were not subject to revision. The court of appeal reversed, concluding that the lease did not preclude plaintiff's cause of action for intentional or negligent misrepresentations. Noting that California courts had in the past concluded that contract terms neither bar fraud claims nor establish as a matter of law that reliance on a defendant's representations is unreasonable, the court of appeal held that the lease provision did not preclude plaintiff from supporting a cause of action by showing that the sizes were materially and unreasonably inaccurate (159 Cal. App. 4th 784, 794-797) .

In Manderville v. PCG&S Group, Inc. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 59 , plaintiffs bought a plot of land with the intent to subdivide the plot and build two houses. Prior to making an offer to buy, the brokers for the sellers represented in their listing that the county had stated that the plot could be split and allegedly told the buyers' broker that the plot had already been approved for a split. However, the sales contract gave the buyers the right to investigate the laws limiting development on the property and strongly advised the buyers to do so, and also contained an integration clause stating that all understandings between the parties were contained in the written contract. After closing, plaintiffs discovered that the property was too small to be subdivided under applicable zoning laws. The trial court granted summary judgment for the brokers on plaintiffs' intentional misrepresentation claims after concluding that the plaintiffs could not prove justifiable reliance. The court of appeal reversed. The court held that, pursuant to Civ. Code § 1668, defendants could not rely on the contractual clauses to relieve them of liability for intentional misrepresentations. As such, the trial court erred in concluding that the buyers could not make a prima facie showing that they justifiably relied on the brokers' alleged intentional misrepresentations (146 Cal. App. 4th 1486, 1500-1502) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.228

§ 105.228 Actual and Justifiable Reliance Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Indirect Reliance

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT EVEN THOUGH NO HUMAN BEING RECEIVED OR ACTED ON DEFENDANT'S MISREPRESENTATION, BECAUSE THE RELIANCE MAY OCCUR INDIRECTLY [AND MAY BE ACHIEVED THROUGH AN AGENT(, SUCH AS A COMPUTER NETWORK)].

A. Reliance May Be Indirect. California courts have recognized indirect reliance, and reliance by an agent may be imputed to the principal even though the misrepresentation is not communicated to the principal (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1568, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468).

[Optional] B. Computer Network Equivalent to Plaintiff's Agent. A computerized network may act as the legal equivalent of an agent for the plaintiff (Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1568, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff may justifiably rely on a misrepresentation achieved through indirect means, such as through an agent or a computer network.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities contending that there may be recovery for fraud and deceit when the misrepresentation is implied by the defendant's conduct, see § 105.55.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reliance May Be Indirect

The facts and procedural status of Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 , are discussed in § 105.55[3]. The defendants contended that the element of reliance was not present because no human being received or acted on a misrepresentation made through computer codes. However, the court of appeal noted that California courts had already recognized indirect reliance, and reliance by an agent may be imputed to the principal even though the misrepresentation is not communicated to the principal. The court then found that the plaintiff's computerized network acted as the legal equivalent of an agent for the plaintiff (46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 1568) .

[b] Computer Network Equivalent to Plaintiff's Agent

Thrifty-Tel, Inc. v. Bezenek (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1559, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 468 is discussed in § 105.228[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.229

§ 105.229 Pleading or Proof Shows Reliance Unnecessary When There Is Reasonable Reliance Shown by Third-Party Recipient of Defendant's Misrepresentations and Resulting Physical Injury to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief]

PLAINTIFF NEED NOT ACTUALLY RELY ON DEFENDANT'S MISREPRESENTATIONS WHEN HE/SHE HAS SUFFICIENTLY _____ [ALLEGED or ESTABLISHED] THAT A THIRD PARTY REASONABLY RELIED ON DEFENDANT'S MISREPRESENTATIONS RESULTING IN PHYSICAL INJURY TO PLAINTIFF.

No Reliance Is Necessary When There Was Reasonable Reliance by a Third-Party Recipient of Defendant's Misrepresentation and Resulting Physical Injury to Plaintiff. In an action for fraud and deceit resulting in physical injury to the plaintiff, it is unnecessary for plaintiff to plead his or her own reliance on defendants' misrepresentation, if plaintiff's injury resulted from action that the recipient of defendants' misrepresentation took in reliance on that misrepresentation (Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1085, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff need not show reliance on the defendant's misrepresentation when a third party took action in reasonable reliance on that misrepresentation, resulting in physical injury to the plaintiff.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.200 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.220[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.220[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For a form and discussion of the decision in Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 , as it relates to the issue of defendant's duty to disclose known facts to a third party, when the defendant sends a letter of recommendation to that third party and the known facts present a substantial and foreseeable risk of physical injury to persons not limited to the third-party recipient of the letter, see § 105.85.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Reliance Is Necessary When There Was Reasonable Reliance by a Third-Party Recipient of Defendant's Misrepresentation and Resulting Physical Injury to Plaintiff

In Randi W. v. Muroc Joint Unified Sch. Dist. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 1066, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263 , plaintiff, a 13-year-old middle school student who had been sexually molested by a school vice principal, sought damages against the principal's former employers for failing to use reasonable care in recommending their former employee for employment without disclosing material information bearing on his fitness. Plaintiff claimed that defendants unreservedly recommended the vice principal for employment without disclosing known facts regarding prior charges or complaints of sexual misconduct and impropriety. Plaintiff further alleged that defendants' letters induced plaintiff's school district to hire the vice principal, and the vice principal later sexually assaulted plaintiff. Plaintiff's complaint alleged that the vice principal's current employer relied on defendants' letters of recommendation, in hiring him, but the complaint was silent regarding plaintiff's own reliance on those letters. The court of appeal ruled that, even though defendants made no misrepresentations directly to plaintiff, who probably never knew of, nor relied on, their statements, she was nonetheless entitled to protection in accordance with Sections 310 and 312 of the Restatement Second of Torts. Section 310 provides that an actor who makes a misrepresentation is subject to liability for physical harm which results from an act done by a third person in reliance upon the truth of the representation, if the actor intends his statement to induce action by the third person which involves an unreasonable risk of physical harm to the other, and knows that the statement is false. Section 312 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts, provides that one who negligently gives false information to another is subject to liability for physical harm caused by action taken by the other in reasonable reliance upon such information, where such harm results to such third persons as the actor should expect to be put in peril by the action taken. Such negligence may consist of failure to exercise reasonable care in ascertaining the accuracy of the information or in the manner in which it is communicated.

The Supreme Court ruled that under Sections 310 and 312 of the Restatement (Second) of Torts, it was unnecessary for plaintiff to plead her own reliance on defendants' misrepresentations. Plaintiff needed only to allege that her injury resulted from action that the recipient of defendants' misrepresentations took in reliance on them (14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1085) .

The Court agreed with the court of appeal conclusions that the authors of the Restatement intended Section 310 to apply to cases in which third persons are endangered by the misrepresentation as well as Section 312. Thus, it was unnecessary for plaintiff to plead her own reliance on defendants' misrepresentations, as long as the recipient of those misrepresentations reasonably relied on them in hiring the vice principal (14 Cal. 4th 1066, 1085) .

157 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
D. Actual and Justifiable Reliance

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.230-105.239

[Reserved]

§§ 105.230[Reserved]

158 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
E. Causation of Resulting Harm

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.240

§ 105.240 Causation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Misrepresentation Caused Resulting Harm

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THERE IS A CAUSE AND EFFECT RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE ALLEGED FRAUD AND THE ALLEGED DAMAGE.

Plaintiff Must Allege and Show Causal Connection. The plaintiff's asserted injury or damages must not only be directly alleged, but its causal connection with the plaintiff's reliance on the defendant's representations must be shown. That is, it must be shown in the pleading that the damages claimed were sustained by reason of the fraud and that the fraud and the damages have a cause and effect relationship (Lesperance v. North Am. Aviation, Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 345, 31 Cal. Rptr. 873 ; see Maynes v. Angeles Mesa Land Co. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 587, 589-590, 76 P.2d 109).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff either has failed to allege or establish that the defendant's alleged fraud caused the plaintiff's alleged damage.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary judgment challenging, respectively, the sufficiency of the pleading or proof.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms. For points and authorities supporting a general demurrer implying expiration of statute of limitations, see § 105.293.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by demurrer, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the allegations of the complaint and point out the omission of any allegation connecting the plaintiff's alleged damage to the defendant's alleged misrepresentations.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Must Allege and Show Causal Connection

The facts and procedural background of Maynes v. Angeles Mesa Land Co. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 587, 76 P.2d 109 , are discussed in § 105.100[3][a]. The complaint was deemed fatally defective in its attempted pleading of damages, an essential element of the cause of action. There was no allegation in the complaint to show how any of the defendant's acts interfered with the plaintiffs' business or caused the expenditures in question (10 Cal. 2d 587, 589-590) .

The facts and procedural background of Lesperance v. North Am. Aviation, Inc. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 31 Cal. Rptr. 873 , are discussed in § 105.10[3][d]. The court of appeal found the statement of cause of action for fraud deficient because the plaintiff had failed to allege facts showing the existence of each of the elements of a cause of action for damages for fraud and deceit. The court noted that the plaintiff had failed to allege how the allegedly false terms of the employment termination statement sent to him had damaged him. The plaintiff's asserted injury or damages must not only be directly alleged, but its causal connection with the plaintiff's reliance on the defendant's representations must be shown. That is, the pleading must show that the damages claimed were sustained by reason of the fraud and that the fraud and the damages have a cause and effect relationship. Accordingly, it appeared that the count in fraud failed to state a sufficient basis for any relief against the defendant on a theory of fraud and deceit (217 Cal. App. 2d 336, 344) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
E. Causation of Resulting Harm

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.241-105.249

[Reserved]

§§ 105.241[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.250

§ 105.250 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THE ALLEGED FRAUD DAMAGED PLAINTIFF.

A. Damages for Deceit. One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce the other party to alter the other party's position to the other party's injury or risk is liable for any damages that the other party thereby suffers (Civ. Code § 1709).

B. Damages Resulting From Fraud Must Be Alleged. A complaint that does not allege facts showing that the alleged fraud has damaged the plaintiff does not state a cause of action based on fraud (Maynes v. Angeles Mesa Land Co. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 587, 589-590, 76 P.2d 109 ; Fraker v. Sentry Life Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 276, 285, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege or evidence fails to establish that the alleged fraud has damaged the plaintiff.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment challenging the sufficiency of, respectively, the pleading or the proof.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is being used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms. These points and authorities may also be combined with those in § 105.251 that support a defendant's contention that the plaintiff is barred from recovering damages allegedly sustained as a result of fraudulently asserted affirmative defenses.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief or to support a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by demurrer, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the allegations of the complaint and point out the omission of any allegation that the alleged fraud has damaged the plaintiff.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities dealing with the measure of damages applicable in fraud and deceit, see §§ 105.252 and 105.253.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.260 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages Resulting From Fraud Must Be Alleged

The facts and procedural background of Maynes v. Angeles Mesa Land Co. (1938) 10 Cal. 2d 587, 76 P.2d 109 , are discussed in § 105.100[3][a]. The plaintiffs had attempted to plead a cause of action for fraud consisting of the making of a promise without any intention of performing it. The complaint was fatally defective in its attempted pleading of damages, an essential element of the cause of action. The complaint alleged the defendant's misrepresentations that it would lease certain premises to the plaintiffs without alleging the intent to deceive or the lack of intent to perform the promise. The complaint did show that the plaintiffs spent money to establish a business, but there was no showing that the alleged fraud deprived the plaintiffs of that business. The plaintiffs were not evicted from the premises, but remained in possession when they brought their suit. There was no allegation in the complaint to show how any of the defendant's acts interfered with their business or caused the expenditures in question (10 Cal. 2d 587, 589-590) .

In Fraker v. Sentry Life Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 276, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 372 , the court of appeal upheld the trial court's order granting the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings regarding the plaintiff's alleged cause of action for fraud. The plaintiff had purchased a group health insurance policy from the defendant. Subsequently, the plaintiff sustained an injury to his eye and received medical insurance benefits under the policy. The plaintiff was later given six weeks' advance notice that the group policy was being canceled and was given the option to convert the policy from group coverage to individual coverage. The plaintiff declined to exercise this option and brought an action for declaratory relief and for damages for fraud. The plaintiff's complaint alleged that the defendant had fraudulently represented when he purchased the policy that he would receive "lifetime" health benefits. The court of appeal noted that the essential allegations for a fraud action include, among other things, resulting damages. The court held that the plaintiff's complaint failed to state any facts connecting the alleged misrepresentation to his claimed damages because the plaintiff had not alleged any facts showing that his reliance on the misrepresentations affected his ability to obtain future insurance (19 Cal. App. 4th 276, 285) . Moreover, the plaintiff was given ample notice of the group policy's termination and an opportunity to purchase individual coverage from the defendant, which was all the defendant was required to do under the group policy (19 Cal. App. 4th 276, 285-286) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages Resulting From Fraud Must Be Alleged

In GN Mortgage Co. v. Fidelity Nat'l Title Ins. Co. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 1802, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 47 , the plaintiff alleged that the defendants and others had conspired fraudulently to induce the plaintiff to finance a fictitious sale of real property at an inflated price. Relying on false loan documents, the plaintiff issued a promissory note secured by a trust deed on the property. Later, the note went into default, and the plaintiff initiated nonjudicial foreclosure proceedings. At the foreclosure sale, the plaintiff acquired the property by entering a bid equal to the full amount of the outstanding indebtedness, plus fees and expenses of foreclosure. Eventually, the plaintiff sold the property at a substantial loss. The plaintiff sued the defendants for breach of contract, fraud, and other tort causes of action. The trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that in a tort action, there must be a causal relationship between the misconduct alleged and the damages sought (21 Cal. App. 4th 1802, 1807) . The court observed that the primary measure of damages for tortious acts against a secured lender is the extent of the impairment of security--that is, the amount by which the indebtedness exceeds the actual value of the security. A foreclosure sale establishes the actual value of the security. Thus, if the secured property is sold at auction for an amount sufficient to satisfy the indebtedness, there is no impairment of security, and the secured party is not damaged. Any damages suffered thereafter are not a proximate result of the fraudulent transaction (21 Cal. App. 4th 1802, 1808) . In this case, once the plaintiff purchased the property, it obtained an asset presumably valued at the amount of the indebtedness plus accrued expenses. At that point, the plaintiff had not been damaged, and any losses incurred thereafter were not proximately caused by the defendants' tortious conduct, but by the plaintiff's business decisions in disposing of the property (21 Cal. App. 4th 1802, 1809) .

In Wallis v. Farmers Group, Inc. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 269 Cal. Rptr. 299 , an insurance agent sued an insurance company, stating several causes of action based on the company's refusal to allow the agent's relative to assign his agency contract to her and the termination of her agency after she nevertheless contracted with the relative to purchase his agency and received his insurance files. The court of appeal reversed judgment for the plaintiff on the cause of action in fraud, holding that in an action for fraud, damages are an essential element. Because the plaintiff's compelled release of her relative's files was in compliance with the insurer's contract with the relative, it therefore was a legal obligation, which cannot constitute a legal injury (220 Cal. App. 3d 718, 734) .

In Commonwealth Mortgage Assurance Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 508, 259 Cal. Rptr. 425 , the court of appeal affirmed a dismissal of the plaintiff's fraud cause of action. The plaintiff was a mortgage guaranty insurer that had paid a claim of the defendants' lender after the defendants defaulted on the loans (the defendants had executed an indemnity agreement with the guaranty insurer). The property was sold by the lender at a foreclosure sale, but the lender obtained the property by making a successful full-credit bid, which meant that it did not lose any money on the default. The plaintiff insurer paid the lender's claim under the guaranty agreement anyway. The court of appeal held that because the lender suffered no damage, the plaintiff's voluntary payment could not satisfy the requisite showing that damages resulted from the defendants' alleged fraud (211 Cal. App. 3d 508, 520-521) .

The facts and procedural background of Kruse v. Bank of Am. (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 248 Cal. Rptr. 217 , are discussed in §105.200[3][b]. Regarding the individual plaintiff's claims, the court of appeal said that the individual shareholder could not state a cause of action for denial of the corporation's loan request. The court also stated that the plaintiff's transfer of her controlling shares, at the defendant's request, to the cross complainant was not the proximate cause of the corporation's inability to arrange financing elsewhere, which in turn led to failure of the business, because the transfer could have been rescinded after the defendant denied the company's loan application (202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 62-65) .

Regarding the cross complainant's lack of proof on the issue of causation, the court of appeal first noted that in 1976 and 1977, the corporation repaid the advances made to it by the plaintiff. Thus, to that extent, the defendant's failure to disclose its lack of confidence in the corporate applicant to the cross complainant was the not proximate cause of the cross complainant's losses (202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 53-54) . The general rule is that no liability attaches for fraud if the only damages suffered by the plaintiff were inevitable or resulted from unrelated causes. The defendant's failure to promptly pay the proceeds of its collateral to the cross complainant's other creditors was not actionable because the cross complainant's loss was self-created indebtedness (202 Cal. App. 3d 38, 60-62) .

In Zumbrun v. University of S. Cal. (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 1, 101 Cal. Rptr. 499 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's judgment of dismissal entered after a general demurrer to the plaintiff's cause of action for fraud was sustained without leave to amend. The cause was remanded with directions to overrule the general demurrer as to all but one individual defendant and to grant the plaintiff leave to file an amended complaint. The complaint alleged that the defendants had warranted that a sociology course would be a full and complete course, but that the failure of a professor to finish teaching the course fraudulently deprived the plaintiff of her education and caused her mental and financial strain and distress, the waste of tuition and other fees, and loss of income. The court omitted detailed allegations concerning the alleged fraud because the vulnerability of the complaint went to the allegations concerning damages. There was, the court observed, no allegation that informed the defendants of the causal connection between the defendant's averred actions and the damages claimed. Allegations of damages without allegations of fact to support them are but conclusions of law, which are not admitted by demurrer. In fraud, the pleading must show a cause and effect relationship between the fraud and the damages sought; otherwise, no cause of action is stated (25 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.251

§ 105.251 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Damages From Fraudulent Affirmative Defenses That Are Not Compensable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT THE ALLEGED FRAUD DAMAGED PLAINTIFF, IN THAT DAMAGES ARISING FROM FRAUDULENT AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSES ARE NOT COMPENSABLE.

Damages From Fraudulent Defenses Are Not Compensable. A plaintiff may not, in the same action, assert independent causes of action for fraud against the defendant and the defendant's attorneys for asserting false defenses to the plaintiff's main claim. Damages arising from a false defense, such as additional attorney's fees incurred by the plaintiff, are not normally compensable (MacCharles v. Bilson (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 954, 957-958, 231 Cal. Rptr. 155).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege or evidence fails to establish that the alleged fraud damaged the plaintiff, because damages arising from fraudulent affirmative defenses are not compensable.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.250[2][a]].

This form may also be combined with points and authorities asserting the plaintiff's failure to allege damages generally [see § 105.250].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.250[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities dealing with the measure of damages applicable in fraud and deceit, see §§ 105.252 and 105.253.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.260 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages From Fraudulent Defenses Are Not Compensable

In MacCharles v. Bilson (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 954, 231 Cal. Rptr. 155 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment of dismissal after demurrers to the plaintiff's causes of action for fraud and negligent representation were sustained. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants, who were attorneys for a party against whom the plaintiff had a personal injury claim, fraudulently procured a release of that claim. The plaintiff contended that he was entitled to damages because he would be forced to litigate the invalidity of the release in the trial of the personal injury action, which would cause a delay in recovery of judgment, extra litigation expense, attorney's fees, and mental and emotional distress. The plaintiff amended his original complaint for personal injuries to include additional causes of action for fraud and negligent misrepresentation.

Rejecting the plaintiff's arguments, the court of appeal held that a plaintiff may not, in the very same action, assert independent causes of action against the defendant and the defendant's attorneys for asserting false defenses to the plaintiff's claim. The court noted that there was a danger of confusion and prejudice of the issues, as well as a conflict of interest between attorney and client requiring retention of separate counsel and a risk that parties may deterred from asserting bona fide claims (186 Cal. App. 3d 954, 957) . Noting that the plaintiff could meet the defendants' defense in the trial of the personal injury action, the court concluded that the plaintiff suffered no compensable damages in reliance on the attorneys' alleged fraud (186 Cal. App. 3d 954, 958) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.252

§ 105.252 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Damages for Fraud in Property Sale That Exceed Damages Permitted by Statute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO ESTABLISH DAMAGES RESULTING FROM THE ALLEGED FRAUD AND DECEIT OF DEFENDANT BECAUSE THE DAMAGES CLAIMED IN CONNECTION WITH THE SALE AND EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY EXCEED THE DAMAGES PERMITTED BY CIVIL CODE SECTION 3343.

A. Statutory Measure of Damages. One defrauded in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of the property with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of what the defrauded person received, together with any additional damages arising from the particular transaction, including (1) amounts actually and reasonably expended in reliance on the fraud, (2) compensation for loss of use and enjoyment of the property to the extent that the loss was caused by fraud, (3) profits or other gains that might reasonably have been earned by use of the property had the defrauded person retained it, and (4) any loss of profits or other gains that were reasonably anticipated and would have been earned from the use or sale of the property had it possessed the characteristics fraudulently attributed to it. However, lost profits from the use or sale of the property are recoverable only if and to the extent that (1) the defrauded party acquired the property for the purpose of using or reselling it for profit, (2) the defrauded party reasonably relied on the fraud in entering into the transaction and in anticipating profits from the subsequent use or sale of the property, and (3) any loss of profits for which damages are sought has been proximately caused by the fraud and the defrauded party's reliance on the fraud (Civ. Code § 3343(a)).

B. Statutory Limitation on Damages. The statute providing for damages for fraud in the sale or exchange of property does not permit the defrauded person to recover any amount measured by the difference between the value of the property as represented and the actual value of the property (Civ. Code § 3343(b)(1)).

C. Statutory Measure of Damages Exclusive. The provisions of Civil Code Section 3343 were enacted to provide a uniform rule for all fraud cases involving the sale or exchange of property and provide the exclusive measure of damages in those cases (Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 759-762, 192 P.2d 935 ; Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 592, 599, 225 Cal. Rptr. 628).

D. Out-of-Pocket Measure Appropriate Even in Action Involving Fraud by Fiduciary. The out-of-pocket measure of damages described in Civ. Code § 3343 applies even if the action involves fraud by a fiduciary (Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1085-1086, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or evidence establishes, that the measure of damages sought by the plaintiff are not in accordance with the provisions of Civ. Code § 3343, which sets forth the measure of damages applicable when one is defrauded in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.250[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.250[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Measure of Damages Exclusive

In Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 192 P.2d 935 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.332[3][b], the Supreme Court ruled that Civ. Code § 3343, which provides for the measure of damages to be applied when one is defrauded in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property, and which is referred to as the "out of pocket loss rule," was enacted to provide a "uniform rule for all fraud cases." The Court added that it could see no reason for refusing to follow the decisions that had applied the rule as the exclusive measure of damages (31 Cal. 2d 744, 762) . The provisions of the statute--that the defrauded person may also recover any additional damages arising from the particular transaction and that nothing in the statute will be deemed to deny such a person any legal or equitable remedies to which the defrauded person may be entitled--do not indicate that any other measure of damages may be applied. The right to recover additional damages does not refer to the measure of damages, but, rather, to such matters as expenses or other consequential injury resulting from the fraud. The Court added that the statute does not preclude the allowance of exemplary damages (31 Cal. 2d 744, 762-763) .

In Cory v. Villa Props. (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 592, 225 Cal. Rptr. 628 , the plaintiffs purchased residential property from the defendants. The defendants and their brokers misrepresented the size of the property to the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs sued the defendants and their brokers for fraud and for intentional and negligent misrepresentation. The trial court granted the defendants' motion for summary judgment, finding that the plaintiffs suffered no measurable damages.

The court of appeal affirmed in part. The court held that Civ. Code § 3343 provides the exclusive measure of damages for fraud (180 Cal. App. 3d 592, 599) . It noted that Civ. Code § 3343 follows the "out of pocket rule," which awards the difference between what the defrauded party has expended and what the defrauded party has received in value, plus additional damages arising from the transaction (180 Cal. App. 3d 592, 600) . Thus, because the value of the property when the plaintiffs purchased it was equal to or greater than the price they paid for it, there was no "out of pocket" loss (180 Cal. App. 3d 592, 601) .

[b] Out-of-Pocket Measure Appropriate Even in Action Involving Fraud by Fiduciary

In Hensley v. McSweeney (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 109 Cal. Rptr. 2d 489 , the plaintiff entered into an agreement to purchase property, with the defendant acting as escrow holder in connection with the transaction. Prior to completion of the transaction, the holder of a first deed of trust foreclosed on the property. When the plaintiff decided not to buy the property, he sought the return of money he had paid and that the defendant had been holding in escrow. After the defendant purchased the property at a foreclosure sale, she offered to sell it to the plaintiff, but he declined. However, the defendant did not return the money being held in escrow, because the original sellers had not signed a release enabling her to do so. The plaintiff then filed suit against the defendant. The case was submitted to the jury on the theories of breach of fiduciary duty, fraud by nondisclosure, fraud by intentional misrepresentation, and false promise. The jury returned special verdicts for the plaintiff, and the trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff for $130,000 and costs. The plaintiff appealed the trial court's calculation of damages based on the special verdicts returned by the jury. The defendant cross-appealed on the grounds, among others, that the trial court committed reversible error in instructing the jury on both the out-of-pocket and benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages and allowing the jury to decide which measure to apply.

The court of appeals reversed the judgment, concluding that the trial court erred in allowing the jury to consider the benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages. The court noted that in fraud cases involving the purchase, sale, or exchange of property, the out-of-pocket measure of damages as in Civ. Code § 3343 applies. The court also noted that at least two published court of appeal opinions had already held that the measure of damages for fraud by a fiduciary remains out-of-pocket damages, not the benefit-of-the-bargain measure normally applied to contract causes of action. In one of those cases, Overgaard v. Johnson (1977) 68 Cal. App. 3d 821, 137 Cal. Rptr. 412 , the court had specifically questioned the applicability of BAJI No. 12.57, which defines the benefit-of-the-bargain rule, to instances in which the defrauding party stands in a fiduciary relationship with the defrauded party, because the cases cited in the Use Note for this jury instruction do not support the proposition. Recognizing that a split of authority existed at the court of appeal level, the court agreed with the position of the court in Overgaard and concluded that the appropriate measure of damages in fiduciary tort actions is the out-of-pocket measure (90 Cal. App. 4th 1081, 1085-1086) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Measure of Damages Exclusive

In Stout v. Turney (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 718, 150 Cal. Rptr. 637, 586 P.2d 1228 , the Supreme Court held that Civ. Code § 3343 does not require a plaintiff to show "out-of-pocket" loss--that the consideration paid exceeded the value of property received--to be entitled to recover any of the "additional damage arising from the particular transaction" referred to in that code section (22 Cal. 3d 718, 729) .

In Saunders v. Taylor (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 395 , the plaintiffs sued for fraud when they discovered that the house they had purchased had an improvement that had been made without a necessary permit. The defendants had signed a real estate disclosure form stating that they were not aware of any alterations without necessary permits. The defendants moved for nonsuit on the grounds that the plaintiffs did not show that they had suffered any damages as a result of the alleged misrepresentation, because the plaintiffs offered no evidence of what the market value of the house would have been had the true facts been known regarding the lack of permits. The trial court granted the motion for nonsuit and entered judgment for the defendants. The court of appeal agreed, noting that under Civ. Code § 3343(a) one defrauded in the purchase of real property is entitled to recover the difference between the actual value of the property with which the defrauded person parted and the actual value of what the defrauded person received (42 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1542) . The plaintiffs contended that Civ. Code § 3343 was not the correct measure of damages, citing Civ. Code § 1102.13, which provides that any person who violates the real estate disclosure provisions is liable for actual damages suffered by the transferee. However, the court held that actual damages as stated in Civ. Code § 1102.13 means compensatory damages as measured by Civ. Code § 3343 (42 Cal. App. 4th 1538, 1545) .

In Croeni v. Goldstein (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 754, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 412 , the plaintiffs sued the defendant for alleged fraudulent misrepresentations that induced them to sell their label printing business to another company, of which the defendant was an officer. The plaintiffs did not seek to rescind the contract, nor did they seek "out-of-pocket" loss damages (the difference between the value of the company sold and the amount they received), but instead sought lost profits that they would have earned had they not sold their business. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment on the ground that there were no cognizable compensatory damages for fraud that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. The court of appeal noted that Civ. Code § 3343(a)(3) authorizes the recovery by a defrauded seller of lost profits in certain circumstances (21 Cal. App. 4th 754, 759) . However, the court also noted that the statute did not repeal, amend, or affect the doctrine of election of remedies or authorize a double recovery. Thus, because the plaintiffs sought to enforce the sale and obtain the sale price to which they agreed, they cannot recover profits they would have earned had they kept the business. This would amount to a double recovery because the amount of the profit earned by the business is one of the factors taken into account in establishing its value and is therefore reflected in the sale price. Lost profits would be recoverable if the plaintiffs were seeking rescission (21 Cal. App. 4th 754, 759-760) .

The court noted, however, that Civ. Code § 3343(b)(2) does not require the denial to parties of any legal or equitable remedies to which they may be entitled. The court observed that because the defendant was not a party to the agreement, he could not be sued for its breach or for rescission, but he is liable for any other legal or equitable remedies to which the plaintiffs may be entitled. The court concluded, therefore, that, consistent with Civ. Code § 3343, the plaintiffs were entitled to proceed against the defendant for lost profits as though they were rescinding the contract, in which case the defendant would be entitled to a credit against any amount that the plaintiffs collected against the company that bought their business (21 Cal. App. 4th 754, 760) .

In Kenly v. Ukegawa (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 49, 19 Cal. Rptr. 2d 771 , the plaintiff brought an action for fraud against an individual and two partnerships, alleging that the defendants induced him to buy a note secured by a farm to stave off an impending foreclosure. The defendants promised to sell the farm to him, but the plaintiff learned that the defendants were trying to sell the farm to third parties. The plaintiff filed his fraud action, and the defendants eventually paid the plaintiff the full amount due on the note. The court of appeal held that the language of Civ. Code § 3343(a)(4) clearly contemplates that a party cannot recover lost anticipated profits unless the party has actually acquired the property in question. Thus, because the only property acquired by a plaintiff was a note, it was improper for the trial court to award profits based on a farm that was to be acquired in the future (16 Cal. App. 4th 49, 55) .

In re Marriage of McNeill (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 548, 206 Cal. Rptr. 641 was a dissolution action consolidated with the husband's action for fraud, for cancellation of a deed, and to quiet title. The trial court awarded the husband rescission of the deed and damages based on fraud, including $30,000 for emotional distress (160 Cal. App. 3d 548, 558) . Citing O'Neil v. Spillane (1975) 45 Cal. App. 3d 147, 159, 119 Cal. Rptr. 245 , the court of appeal reversed the award, stating that regardless of whether they were based on Civ. Code § 1692 (rescission) or Civ. Code § 3343 (damages for fraud in the purchase, sale, or exchange of property), the award of damages for emotional distress as an element of consequential damages could not be upheld (160 Cal. App. 3d 548, 559) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.253

§ 105.253 Damages Are Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--No "Cost of Repair" Recovery for Sale of Right of Way

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO ESTABLISH DAMAGES RESULTING FROM THE ALLEGED FRAUD AND DECEIT OF DEFENDANT BECAUSE THE DAMAGES CLAIMED IN CONNECTION WITH THE SALE AND EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY EXCEED THE DAMAGES PERMITTED BY CIVIL CODE SECTION 3343, IN THAT THERE CAN BE NO "COST OF REPAIR" RECOVERY FOR AN ALLEGED FRAUDULENT SALE OF RIGHT OF WAY.

No "Cost of Repair" Recovery for Sale of Right of Way. A landowner who is fraudulently induced to grant a right of way over his or her land by misrepresentations concerning the effect of the right of way on the land is limited by Civil Code Section 3343 to recovery of the difference between the amount the landowner received and the value of the land that the landowner parted with. The landowner may not recover the "cost of repair," that is, the cost of restoring the land to the condition it would have been in had the effect of the right of way been as represented (Housley v. City of Poway (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 801, 812-813, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff is seeking an impermissible measure of damages because there can be no "cost of repair" recovery for an alleged fraudulent sale of a right of way.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.250[2][a]]. They may also be combined with the points and authorities in § 105.252 asserting generally that an incorrect measure of damages for fraud in a property sale may be stricken.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.250[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.260 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No "Cost of Repair" Recovery for Sale of Right of Way

In Housley v. City of Poway (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 801, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 554 , the city required the developer of a business park to widen a road. The developer contacted the plaintiff, who owned land adjoining the road, about obtaining a right-of-way, with necessary easements, to allow widening of the road. In negotiating with the plaintiff, the developer initially had requested an easement for a slope on the plaintiff's land, which would be necessary to support the widened road. Eventually, the parties agreed that the widening would be accomplished without any slope, and the final grant deed for the right-of-way signed by the plaintiff made no mention of a slope. The amount paid for the right-of-way reflected this limitation. However, when the widened road was actually constructed, the developer placed a huge slope on the plaintiff's property that, at its widest point, extended 42 feet onto the property and covered over 10,000 square feet. The plaintiff sued the city for inverse condemnation and the developer for fraud. At trial, the plaintiff introduced no evidence regarding the fair market value of the land covered by the slope, but instead introduced evidence regarding the "cost of repair"--that is, the cost of removing the slope and replacing it with a retaining wall to provide lateral support for the road. The jury was instructed that it could award "all damages legally caused by the misrepresentation" and returned a verdict against the developer for an amount based on the cost of repairing the property, on which the trial court entered judgment. The developer appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court noted that under Civ. Code § 3343, damages for fraud in connection with the sale of property are measured by the difference between the value with which the victim parted and the value the victim received (the so-called "out-of-pocket losses"), together with certain additional damages. However, the trial court had rejected an instruction based on this statute and instead gave the instruction discussed above. The court observed that under the "out-of-pocket" measure, the plaintiff would be entitled to recover damages measured not by what he could have reaped had the promise to preserve the land been true, but by what he lost because of his reliance on the false promise (20 Cal. App. 4th 801, 812). In this case, the court stated, the fraud caused the plaintiff to part with the right-of-way and the area covered by the slope, yet receive payment only for the right-of-way. Under the "out-of-pocket" standard, the difference between that with which the plaintiff parted and what the plaintiff received was the value of the land buried by the slope (20 Cal. App. 4th 801, 812-813). The court noted that it was cited to no relevant authority in which either "cost of repair" or "benefit-of-the-bargain" damages were awarded for fraud occurring in an arm's length transaction. The cases cited by the plaintiff in which a "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure was awarded either involved fraud by a fiduciary or recovery based on a theory other than fraud. The court therefore concluded that "cost of repair" is not relevant in a case in which a property owner is induced by fraud to part with land and that damages are limited to those permitted by Civ. Code § 3343 (20 Cal. App. 4th 801, 813) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.254-105.259

[Reserved]

§§ 105.254[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.260

§ 105.260 Damages Are Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF IS NOT LIMITED TO THE "OUT-OF-POCKET LOSS" MEASURE OF DAMAGES SET FORTH IN CIVIL CODE SECTION 3343 BECAUSE THE ALLEGED FRAUD _____ [DOES NOT ARISE OUT OF THE SALE OR EXCHANGE OF PROPERTY or INVOLVES FRAUD COMMITTED BY A FIDUCIARY or INVOLVES THE SALE OF "GOODS" WITHIN THE MEANING OF THE COMMERCIAL CODE].

A. Compensation for All Detriment. For the breach of an obligation not arising from contract, the measure of damages, except when otherwise expressly provided by the Civil Code, is the amount that will compensate for all the detriment proximately caused thereby, whether or not it could have been anticipated (Civ. Code § 3333).

B. Damages for Inducing Reliance Through Deceit. One who willfully deceives another with intent to induce him or her to alter his or her position to his or her injury or risk, is liable for any damages that he or she thereby suffers (Civ. Code § 1709).

[EITHER]

C. Cases Not Involving Vendor and Vendee. Although the "out of pocket" rule of damages contained in Civil Code Section 3343 applies in cases of fraud between a vendor and a vendee, the broader provisions of Civil Code Sections 1709 and 3333 apply in cases not involving such parties (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 490, 275 P.2d 15).

[OR]

C. Fraud in Sale of Goods. Remedies for material misrepresentation or fraud in the sale of goods include all remedies available under the sale division of the Commercial Code for nonfraudulent breach (Com. Code § 2721), and all statutes inconsistent with this provision are repealed (Com. Code § 13103).

[OR]

C. Fraud of Fiduciary. The much broader provisions of Civil Code Sections 1709 and 3333 apply to cases involving a fiduciary's fraud (Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 565-568, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463 ; Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 315, 298 P.2d 667).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish that the plaintiff was damaged as a result of the defendant's fraud. This form asserts that the plaintiff is not limited to the "out-of-pocket loss" measure of damages in Civil Code Section 3343, because the evidence or the allegations are in accordance with Civ. Code § 3333 and because the cause of action is not between vendor and vendee, but between persons who, for example, were an adviser and the person who was advised [see § 105.260[3]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.250 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, for example, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary adjudication of issues, supporting the contention that there is a triable issue of fact, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that the plaintiff is not limited to the "out-of-pocket loss" measure of damages in Civil Code § 3343.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For additional discussion and litigation forms pertaining to damages in fraud actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms related to actions under the Commercial Code based on breach of warranty, see Ch. 502, Sales: Warranties , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cases Not Involving Vendor and Vendee

In Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.270[3][b], the Supreme Court ruled that liability of the defendant, who had failed to exercise due care in testing certain real property for the depth of the fill on the property, whether for deceit or negligence, was to be measured by the actual losses suffered because of the misrepresentation, citing Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 (43 Cal. 2d 481, 490) .

[b] Fraud of Fiduciary

In Salahutdin v. Valley of Cal., Inc. (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 463 , the plaintiffs sued their real estate broker for certain material misrepresentations made by the broker's sales representative concerning the size of a parcel of real property that the plaintiffs wished to purchase. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the plaintiffs against the broker and computed damages under Civ. Code § 3333 based on the "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure--that is, the difference between the value of the property received by the plaintiffs and the value of the property they would have received had the sales representative's statements been true. The court of appeal affirmed.

On appeal, the defendant contended that the trial court erred in awarding the plaintiffs "benefit-of-the bargain" damages under Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333, rather than their "out-of-pocket" loss under Civ. Code § 3343. The court noted that the consensus of commentators is that Civ. Code § 3343 governs the measure of damages for fraud in the purchase, sale, or exchange of real property, but that an exception is recognized if a fiduciary relationship existed between the parties. In the latter case, Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 provide the measure of damages. The court observed that the cases support this distinction (24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 565) . However, the court noted that there was a split of authority concerning whether Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 authorize a "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure of damages in cases of fiduciary fraud. The court followed the authority permitting the broader measure of damages for fiduciary fraud and refused to limit damages to "out-of-pocket" loss. The court noted that its division had consistently applied the broader measure of damages and that the broader measure was just in the case of a faithless fiduciary, who should be required to make good the full amount of the loss caused by the fiduciary's breach of duty (24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 566-567) . The court of appeal concluded that the trial court therefore did not err in refusing to limit the plaintiffs to their "out-of-pocket" loss. The court further held that the plaintiffs' "benefit-of-the-bargain" damages were appropriately calculated as of the date of discovery of the fraud, rather than as of the date of the transaction (24 Cal. App. 4th 555, 568) .

In Simone v. McKee (1956) 142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 298 P.2d 667 , the court of appeal sustained a judgment for a real estate broker's client against the real estate broker in an action for fraud. The trial court awarded the plaintiff damages that the plaintiff sustained because of the defendant broker's fraud. The defendant contended that the "out-of-pocket" rule of Civ. Code § 3343 should have been applied. However, all of the cases cited in support of this rule were cases between a vendor and a vendee. None of those cases involved a fiduciary's fraud. In such cases, the court held, the much broader provisions of Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333 apply (142 Cal. App. 2d 307, 315) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages for Inducing Reliance Through Deceit

In Helmer v. Bingham Toyota Isuzu (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 29 Cal. Rptr. 3d 136 , the plaintiff left his previous employment as a parts and service manager with a car dealership after accepting a position in the parts department of another dealership. The plaintiff alleged that the service manager at the new employer had promised the plaintiff that he would earn at least $5700 per month if he came to work there, which was approximately the amount that the plaintiff had been earning with his prior employer and was the minimum amount that the plaintiff would accept to change employers. The plaintiff's checks in the first few months of his new employment averaged less than $5000 per month, however, and the plaintiff was fired after complaining that the compensation did not match the amount that he was allegedly promised. The plaintiff's prior employer had a strict no-rehire policy, and the plaintiff was unable to obtain comparable employment with another car dealership, the plaintiff was forced to take a job in another field with a much lower income. The plaintiff sued the car dealership that fired him, arguing that the dealership made false promises with no intention to perform in order to induce him to leave his prior employment and accept their offer of employment. The plaintiff was successful at trial, recovering compensatory damages that included the difference between what he was currently earning and what he would have expected to earn if he had stayed with the first employer. On appeal, the court of appeal affirmed these damages. The court held that in an action for promissory fraud, a plaintiff who leaves one employer to accept a position with another employer based on false promises of benefits to be obtained from the new employment may recover lost future income from the prior employment, if the damages are not too speculative or remote (129 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1130) . In this particular case, the court of appeal concluded that the testimony of the plaintiff's former supervisor that the plaintiff was a good and reliable employee, that he was sad to see the plaintiff leave, and that he was not rehired solely because of the strict no-rehire policy, was sufficient evidence to prove these damages (129 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1131) .

[b] Fraud in Sale of Goods

In Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 , an airline company brought an action in fraud against the manufacturer of an airplane that was destroyed because of defects that caused the airplane to catch on fire. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant's misrepresentations regarding the safety of the features that ultimately failed induced reliance in the purchase of that particular type of airplane over other models. The trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff based on three counts of fraud and one count of breach of contract, and the court of appeal affirmed (after modifying the amount of prejudgment interest awarded). With regard to the measure of damages, the court of appeal rejected the defendant's contention that Civ. Code § 3343 set forth the exclusive (out-of-pocket) measure of damages for fraud actions, holding that if the Commercial Code governs the sale of goods that is the basis of a fraud action, Com. Code § 2721, which gives the buyer the "benefit of the bargain," rather than Civ. Code § 3343, applies. The court also implied that Civ. Code § 3343 should have been repealed, in light of its sharp conflict with the Commercial Code and the legislature's intent that the Commercial Code provision supersede the Civil Code provision with respect to actions regarding the sale of "goods" within the meaning of the Com. Code § 2105 (216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 429-431) .

[c] Fraud of Fiduciary

In Strebel v. Brenlar Invs., Inc. (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 740, 37 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699 , the plaintiff sold his house in reliance on representations from his real estate broker and another seller that the plaintiff would simultaneously be able to purchase the other seller's house. However, the plaintiff was unable to purchase that house because of undisclosed tax liens on the other seller's property. Despite searching for about two years, the plaintiff was also unable to find affordable replacement property in the same area due to rapidly escalating housing costs. The plaintiff sued the broker and the other seller and recovered in compensatory damages the appreciation in value of the property that the plaintiff sold, measured from the time he sold it to the time of trial. The court of appeal allowed this measure of compensatory damages. The court noted that Civ. Code § 3343 did not apply because the action was predicated on the fraud of the real estate broker, who was a fiduciary. Therefore, the applicable damages statutes were Civ. Code §§ 1709 and 3333.

However, the court concluded that in this particular case, the appropriate measure of harm was neither a "benefit-of-the-bargain" measure nor an "out-of-pocket" loss measure. Because the plaintiff would otherwise have held onto his own property longer if he had not been told that he would definitely be able to purchase the other seller's property at the same time, the harm done to the plaintiff was to decrease his buying power in a rapidly appreciating housing market. To provide him with the same relative buying power that he lost, the court held that the trial court did not err in allowing the plaintiff to recover for the value of the appreciation of the property that he sold (135 Cal. App. 4th 740, 748-750) .

In Fragale v. Faulkner (2003) 110 Cal. App. 4th 229, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 616 , the plaintiffs, the buyers of a house, brought suit against the seller and their real estate broker based on alleged misrepresentations made about structural defects in the house. The plaintiffs alleged that the real estate broker assured them that although additions made to the house had been made without the required permits, the construction was otherwise in accordance with the applicable codes. However, soon after purchasing the house, the plaintiffs removed paneling that covered some of the walls in the additions and discovered that the work was not up to code and would require thousands of dollars to remedy. At trial, the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs against both defendants on causes of action for intentional and negligent misrepresentation. However, the judge granted the real estate agent's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the ground that the plaintiffs failed to provide evidence of the market value of the house if the true state of the construction had been known, which was required to prove damages under Civ. Code § 3343. The court of appeal reversed the judgment in part, concluding that the proper measure of damages in the action against the real estate agent for intentional misrepresentation was a benefit-of-the-bargain measure under Civ. Code § 3333. The court of appeal recognized that although the California Supreme Court had held, in Alliance Mortgage Co. v. Rothwell (1995) 10 Cal. 4th 1226, 1249-1250, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 352, 900 P.2d 601 , that only "out-of-pocket loss" may be recovered for negligent misrepresentations by a fiduciary, the Court had not ruled on whether a fiduciary may be liable for greater damages for committing intentional misrepresentations. The court of appeal noted that earlier court of appeal decisions were split on the issue, but sided with those opinions holding that a benefit-of-the-bargain measure was appropriate. Therefore, because the real estate agent was a fiduciary of the buyers, he could be liable for intentional misrepresentation under the benefit-of-the-bargain measure of damages regardless of whether a claim for breach of fiduciary duty was specifically pleaded. Because both the plaintiffs and the defendants had presented evidence of the cost to repair the house and bring it to a condition that the plaintiffs expected it to be in when they bought it, the plaintiffs had presented sufficient proof of damages to recover from the agent on that theory (110 Cal. App. 4th 229, 236-239) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.261

§ 105.261 Damages Are Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Economic Loss Rule Inapplicable if Defendant's Intentional Fraud Exposed Plaintiff to Liability

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE ECONOMIC LOSS RULE DOES NOT APPLY TO PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST DEFENDANT FOR FRAUD BECAUSE THE PLAINTIFF CAN ESTABLISH THAT DEFENDANT'S INTENTIONAL FRAUD EXPOSED PLAINTIFF TO LIABILITY.

Economic Loss Rule Inapplicable. The economic loss rule, which prevents a plaintiff from pursuing a cause of action for negligence or strict liability if the only damages suffered are economic loss without physical harm to persons or property, does not apply if the plaintiff is pursuing a cause of action for intentional fraudulent conduct and that fraudulent conduct exposed the plaintiff to liability to third parties (County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 328, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff has not sustained actionable damages because the plaintiff's only alleged damages are economic loss without physical harm to persons or property. This form asserts that the economic loss rule, under which economic loss alone is insufficient to support a cause of action without accompanying physical harm to persons or property, does not apply if the defendant's intentional fraudulent conduct has exposed the plaintiff to liability to third parties.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. Thus, for example, counsel should include facts showing that the defendant's conduct was intentional and fraudulent, and explain with specific details how this fraudulent conduct resulted in plaintiff being exposed to potential liability to third parties.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Economic Loss Rule Inapplicable

In County of Santa Clara v. Atlantic Richfield Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 313 , several California counties and related local entities brought a lawsuit against lead manufacturers that, prior to 1978, promoted lead for use in paint to be used in building interiors. The plaintiffs alleged that the defendants had promoted lead as safe for that use, even though they had known for years of lead's harmful health effects on humans and had actively concealed these known dangers and even campaigned against the regulation of lead. The plaintiffs' lawsuit, which was based on the presence of lead-based paint in public buildings, included causes of action for public nuisance, negligence, strict liability, unfair competition, and fraud. The trial court sustained the defendants' demurrer to the public nuisance causes of action and granted summary judgment on the remaining causes of action based on the applicable statute of limitations. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. In discussing the viability of the negligence and strict liability causes of action, the court reviewed the economic loss rule, which states that a plaintiff cannot pursue a cause of action for negligence or strict liability if the plaintiff's only damages consist of economic loss without physical damage to persons or property. The court noted that the plaintiffs in this case had not alleged that the lead paint in their buildings threatens the buildings themselves with physical harm, only that the presence of deteriorating paint poses an unreasonable danger to human beings and had required the plaintiffs to spend money to find and remove the lead paint. Although these allegations might support a cause of action brought by a person who had suffered adverse health effects from lead paint exposure in the buildings, the court, applying the economic loss rule, concluded that the plaintiffs had not yet suffered any compensable damages and that no cause of action for negligence or strict liability had accrued yet (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 325) .

The court then addressed the plaintiffs' fraud cause of action, which had been predicated on the same damage allegations. The court reviewed a case [Robinson Helicopter Co., Inc. v. Dana Corp. (2004) 34 Cal. 4th 979, 22 Cal. Rptr. 3d 352, 102 P.3d 268] , in which the Supreme Court held that a helicopter manufacturer was not limited to a breach of contract action and could sue a component part supplier for fraud for knowingly supplying substandard parts that were not in conformity with the applicable contractual specifications. The Supreme Court concluded in that case that the component supplier's intentional fraud in concealing the nonconformity of the parts arose independently from the breach of contract, caused economic loss for the helicopter manufacturer, and subjected the helicopter manufacturer to potential liability to third parties if the substandard parts caused helicopter malfunctions resulting in personal injuries or death. For these reasons, the Supreme Court held that the economic loss rule would not preclude the helicopter manufacturer from pursuing the fraud action (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 327-328) .

The court of appeal then held that the Supreme Court's holding, which precluded application of the economic loss rule, applied to any intentional affirmative fraud action in which the plaintiff can establish that the fraud exposed the plaintiff to liability. In this particular case, the plaintiffs had alleged that the defendant's affirmative misrepresentations about the dangers of low-level exposure to lead-based paint, on which the plaintiffs reasonably relied, had caused the plaintiffs to fail to make timely efforts to prevent and treat low-level lead exposure. This delay in instituting prevention and treatment caused more people to be exposed to the lead-based paint, increased the cost of treatment for those who had been exposed, and exposed the plaintiffs to liability to persons who might become ill through low-level exposure to the paint in their buildings. Under these circumstances, the court, applying Robinson Helicopter, held that the economic loss rule did not apply to the plaintiffs' fraud cause of action (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 328-329) . The court then held that the fraud action was not barred by the applicable three-year statute of limitations. The plaintiffs had alleged that they were not aware of the defendants' fraud in concealing the health dangers of low-level exposure to lead until 1998, when scientific studies finally demonstrated the falsity of the defendants' claim about the extent of danger caused by low-level exposure, and the action was initially filed in 2000 (137 Cal. App. 4th 292, 330-331) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
F. Damages

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.262-105.269

[Reserved]

§§ 105.262[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.270

§ 105.270 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Lack of Reasonable Ground to Believe Truth of Representation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT DEFENDANT HAD NO REASONABLE GROUNDS FOR DEFENDANT'S BELIEF THAT THE REPRESENTATION WAS TRUE.

A. Negligent Misrepresentation Defined. A deceit is the assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true (Civ. Code § 1710(2)).

B. Failure to Show No Reasonable Ground for Belief. In actions for negligent misrepresentation, the pleading must allege that the representation was an assertion as a fact of something that was not true and that it was made by one who had no reasonable ground for believing it to be true (Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 487, 275 P.2d 15 ; Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1696-1697, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for deceit consisting of a negligent misrepresentation or has failed to present evidence to establish a claim of negligent misrepresentation. The particular basis of this form is that there is no allegation or proof that the representation was made by one who had no reasonable ground for believing it to be true.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or a motion for summary judgment challenging the sufficiency of, respectively, the pleading or the proof.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief or to support a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by demurrer, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the allegations of the complaint and point out the omission of any allegation that the defendant had no reasonable grounds for the defendant's belief that the representation was true.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.280 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Show No Reasonable Ground for Belief

In Gagne v. Bertran (1954) 43 Cal. 2d 481, 275 P.2d 15 , the Supreme Court ruled that the plaintiffs had established a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation, reversing judgment for the plaintiffs on other grounds. The plaintiffs had employed the defendant to test certain real property for depth of fill. Relying on the defendant's report as to the fill depth, the plaintiffs purchased the property and proceeded to install foundations. After it was discovered that there was fill to a greater depth than reported, the plaintiffs filed suit to recover the resulting extra costs. The Court ruled that to be an actionable deceit under Civ. Code § 1710(2), a representation need not be made with knowledge of actual falsity, but need only be an assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true. Statements in a number of cases that scienter is an essential element of every cause of action for deceit were erroneous, and the Court disapproved them. The defendant had not given his statement as an opinion, but as a representation of fact obtained as the result of a negligently performed fill test. Because the defendant held himself out as an expert and the plaintiffs had hired him to supply information concerning matters of which they were ignorant and because his unequivocal statement necessarily implied that he knew facts that justified his statement, the plaintiffs had justifiably relied on the statement. Accordingly, they had established their cause of action for deceit (43 Cal. 2d 481, 487)

In Quality Wash Group V, Ltd. v. Hallak (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 592 , plaintiff, buyers of a car wash business, sued defendant for negligent misrepresentation based in part on its subsequent discovery that the car wash was encroaching on adjoining property. The trial court entered judgment in favor of defendant and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court did not misapply the law regarding negligent misrepresentation. Plaintiff contended that defendant was liable for negligent misrepresentation under the general rule that the owner of real estate, in the absence of facts to the contrary, was presumed to know the boundaries and area of his or her land, and a buyer was warranted in relying upon the owner's representations in respect to such facts. Plaintiff argued that defendant had a duty to be informed of the true boundaries of real property before making a representation regarding its location. The court responded that a landowner was entitled to rebut the presumption that he or she knew the boundaries and area of land by showing that the erroneous belief in that regard was reasonable under the facts and circumstances. If a landowner has an objectively reasonable basis for an inaccurate belief as to the location of boundaries or area, the landowner has not breached the duty to be informed regarding such matters (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1697) . Turning to the facts of this case, the court determined that the trial court properly viewed the question of whether defendant made the misrepresentation regarding the boundaries of the property without reasonable grounds for believing it to be true as a question of fact. It noted that the trial court's statement of decision which concluded that the evidence showed that defendant did have a reasonable ground for believing the boundary line was located as represented, that all parties had that same belief, and that the car wash had been used for many years prior to defendant's purchase with the same reasonable belief. The court concluded that these findings were supported by substantial evidence (50 Cal. App. 4th 1687, 1697) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Show No Reasonable Ground for Belief

In Hale v. George A. Hormel & Co. (1975) 48 Cal. App. 3d 73, 121 Cal. Rptr. 144 , the plaintiffs had entered into a contract with a vending machine company under which the company was to provide the plaintiff with vending machines for distributing cans of fruit juice and assist the plaintiffs in finding suitable locations for those machines. After the plaintiffs had made full payment of the purchase price, the company defaulted and never delivered any of the machines, but returned only a portion of the plaintiffs' purchase price. The plaintiffs then sued the fruit juice manufacturer and its local distributor for negligent misrepresentation on the basis that the manufacturer had allowed the vending machine company to use the manufacturer's name in advertising and that the distributor had recommended the vending machine company. The court of appeal noted that under Civ. Code § 1710(2), negligent misrepresentation is the assertion as a fact of something that is not true by one who has no reasonable ground for believing it to be true and that scienter is not an element of such a cause of action (48 Cal. App. 3d 73, 84) . On analysis of the facts, the court of appeal concluded that the statements the defendant's agent made to the plaintiff were true and that the recommendation was an opinion with some basis in fact (48 Cal. App. 3d 73, 87) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.271

§ 105.271 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Fails to Show Positive Assertion

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT FAILS TO ALLEGE or EVIDENCE FAILS TO SHOW] THAT DEFENDANT'S ALLEGEDLY UNTRUE REPRESENTATION WAS A POSITIVE ASSERTION.

Positive Assertion Required for Negligent Misrepresentation. If a deceit case is based on negligent misrepresentation, the plaintiff must allege that the defendant's untrue representation was a "positive assertion" (Yanase v. Automobile Club of S. Cal. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 468, 472-473, 260 Cal. Rptr. 513).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings fail to allege, or evidence fails to establish, that the defendant's allegedly untrue representation was a positive assertion.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.270[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by demurrer, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the allegations of the complaint and point out the omission of any allegation that the defendant's allegedly untrue representation was a positive assertion [see § 105.270[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.280 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Positive Assertion Required for Negligent Misrepresentation

In Yanase v. Automobile Club. of S. Cal. (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 468, 260 Cal. Rptr. 513 , the plaintiffs were the wife and children of the decedent, who was shot and killed in a motel parking lot. The decedent was a member of the defendant, an auto club. The motel was listed in the tourbook published and distributed by the defendant. The plaintiffs brought a cause of action against the defendant, alleging that the decedent had a special relationship with the defendant as a member, that the decedent relied on the defendant's recommendation and listing of the motel, and that the defendant had negligently failed to determine and publish information on the safety of the area and the existence of security measures by the motel. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the complaint failed to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action against the defendant.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that under Civ. Code §§ 1710(1), (2) and 1572, in an action for negligent misrepresentation, the tort consists of making a false statement while honestly believing it is true, but without reasonable ground for such belief. The court added that the tort requires a "positive assertion" and does not apply to implied representations (212 Cal. App. 3d 468, 472-473). The court stated that there was nothing in the tourbook listing or rating that consisted of a positive assertion, or even an implied representation, concerning neighborhood safety or security measures taken by the motel. The tourbook only gave information on attractions and accommodations and did not, even in its "puffing" statements concerning the efforts of its representatives in searching for and inspecting accommodations, suggest that neighborhood safety or security measures were factors considered in making the listings. The court concluded that it therefore followed that any alleged special relationship between the decedent and the defendant based on reliance concerning vehicular travel and services, if it existed at all, was limited to the listing and rating of accommodations and did not include within its scope matters of neighborhood safety or security measures (212 Cal. App. 3d 468, 473, 476).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Positive Assertion Required for Negligent Misrepresentation

Diediker v. Peelle Fin. Corp. (1997) 60 Cal. App. 4th 288, 70 Cal. Rptr. 2d 442 , arose out of the actions of a title insurance company which issued a policy insuring title to a property without excepting an Internal Revenue Service (IRS) lien, despite its knowledge of the lien's existence. The insurance company sought to recover the amount eventually paid to the IRS on behalf of its policyholder from the trustee who, lacking knowledge of the existence of the lien, conducted a foreclosure sale years earlier without notifying the IRS. The policyholder joined in the suit against the trustee. The central issue on appeal was whether the trustee was "required" to notify the IRS under the terms of a federal statute. The trial court concluded there was no such requirement, and granted summary judgment to the trustee. The court of appeals affirmed. On appeal plaintiffs argued that by stating that it had complied "with all the requirements of law regarding the mailing of copies of the Notice of Default or the publication or delivery of the same, the making, posting and publication of copies of Notice of Trustee's Sale" prior to selling the subject property, the trustee was guilty of negligent misrepresentation because he did not send notice to the IRS. The court determined that: there was no "requirement" under state or federal law that the IRS be notified prior to a foreclosure, so the representation made in the trustee's deed was not false on its face; and that plaintiffs could not read something into this neutral statement in order to justify their claim for negligent misrepresentation because the tort required a positive assertion (60 Cal. App. 4th 288, 298) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.272

§ 105.272 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Gratuitous Promise

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT THE ALLEGED MISREPRESENTATION WAS A MERE GRATUITOUS PROMISE.

Gratuitous Promise Is Not Grounds for Negligent Misrepresentation. A mere gratuitous promise that is insufficient to support an action for breach of contract is likewise insufficient to support a tort action for negligent misrepresentation (see Simonian v. Patterson (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 773, 782-783, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the pleadings allege, or evidence establishes, that the representation was a mere gratuitous promise.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.270[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by demurrer, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the allegations of the complaint and point out that the representation was a mere gratuitous promise [see § 105.270[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.280 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For related points and authorities that may be adapted to support a demurrer to a complaint for fraud alleging a promise made without intention to perform, see § 105.100 et seq.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Gratuitous Promise Is Not Grounds for Negligent Misrepresentation

In Simonian v. Patterson (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 773, 780-783, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 722 , the plaintiff brought an action against his ex-fiancee's father for negligent misrepresentation, breach of oral contract, and other causes of action, arising out of his efforts to retrieve various items of personal property from his fiancee after their relationship had ended. The defendant had helped his daughter move various items of personal property from the apartment that the plaintiff and the daughter had shared to the daughter's new apartment. Although some of these items were ultimately returned to the plaintiff, the defendant's daughter refused to return other items. Before filing the lawsuit, the plaintiff had spoken with the defendant and asked for his assistance in recovering the items. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant had promised that he would "see to it" that his daughter returned the items and that, in reliance on the defendant's assurances, the plaintiff had delayed filing the lawsuit for approximately 24 days. Later, the plaintiff alleged, the defendant "repudiated his prior oral agreement," disclaimed any responsibility for his daughter's debts or actions, and refused to assist the plaintiff in recovering any property from the defendant's daughter. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer to all causes of action and dismissed the action, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court first held that the trial court had properly sustained the demurrer to the contract causes of action for lack of consideration. The court noted that the promise made to help the plaintiff was one allegedly made between friends and that a gratuitous promise to help a friend collect a debt from a third party is unenforceable as a matter of law, notwithstanding the friend's forbearance from filing suit in reliance on the promise (27 Cal. App. 4th 773, 780) . The plaintiff contended that the same statements alleged to constitute a contract to return the property were also actionable in tort as negligent misrepresentations on which the plaintiff detrimentally relied by deferring the lawsuit for 24 days (27 Cal. App. 4th 773, 782). The court stated that the defendant's breach of promise to see to the return of the property was not actionable in contract and that calling that breach a tort did not make it one. The court held that because no legal duty arose as a result of the gratuitous promise, any failure by the defendant to assist in the return of the property was not recognizable as a tort cause of action (27 Cal. App. 4th 773, 783).

171 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.273

§ 105.273 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Mere Opinion as to Future Fact

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adopted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION BECAUSE _____ [THE ALLEGEDLY ACTIONABLE REPRESENTATIONS or THE EVIDENCE SHOWS THAT THE REPRESENTATIONS] MADE BY DEFENDANT WERE MERELY OPINIONS AS TO FUTURE FACTS.

Opinion as to Future Fact Is Not Actionable as Negligent Misrepresentation. A representation is not normally actionable as a negligent misrepresentation if it is merely an expression of opinion as to a future fact or occurrence (Neu-Visions Sports, Inc. v. Soren/McAdams/Bartells (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 303, 309-310, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the representations made by the defendant, either as alleged in the complaint or as shown by the proof, are not actionable because the representations were merely the defendant's opinion as to future facts.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.270[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, in support of a motion for summary judgment, counsel for the defendant should refer to the allegations of misrepresentations in the complaint and the declarations or other proof in support of the motion and argue that the alleged misrepresentations are not actionable because they were merely the expression of opinion as to future facts [see § 105.270[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.280 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Opinion as to Future Fact Is Not Actionable as Negligent Misrepresentation

In Neu-Visions Sports, Inc. v. Soren/McAdams/Bartells (2000) 86 Cal. App. 4th 303, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 159 , the plaintiffs were developers of an ice and roller hockey arena project who brought an action for negligent misrepresentation against an accountant and his accounting firm, based on two alleged misrepresentations made by the accountant in connection with the arena project. The accounting firm had been hired by a third party who was in negotiations to buy property with an existing building that would be leased to the plaintiffs, who would then convert the building to the arena. During the period in which the plaintiffs sought the estimated $3 million needed to convert the building, the accountant had represented to them both that the building was worth $5 million and that clear title to the property, which would allow a first priority security interest in the property, would not be a problem in securing financing for the project. However, after the plaintiffs signed a lease to develop the property, the anticipated financing was not obtained because the building actually appraised at a lesser value and, apparently, there was an impediment to establishing clear title to the property. After suit was filed, the defendants moved for summary judgment on the grounds that the alleged misrepresentations were matters of opinion that were not actionable as a matter of law. The trial court granted the motion and the plaintiffs appealed, arguing that triable issues of fact existed.

The court of appeal affirmed. After reviewing relevant case law, the court noted that expressions of opinion are not generally treated as actionable representations of fact, and that representations of value are opinions. The court also noted exceptions if one party states an opinion as fact, or possesses or holds himself or herself out as possessing special information or superior knowledge. However, recognizing the established principle that an actionable representation must have been made about past or existing facts, and that statements regarding future events are deemed opinions, the court held that the alleged misrepresentations in this case were expressions of opinion as to future facts and not actionable (86 Cal. App. 4th 303, 309-310) . Accepting the facts as described in depositions of the plaintiffs' principals, the court concluded that the statement concerning the value of the property was merely a prediction of what the property would appraise at, and that the plaintiffs knew that the accountant had no special knowledge and was not a professional appraiser (86 Cal. App. 4th 303, 310) . Similarly, the representation that the lessor would have free and clear title to the property, allowing a first priority security interest for the lender, was also the expression of an opinion about a future fact and not actionable. Moreover, the plaintiffs knew that there were questions about the title that could cause a problem and that the accountant had no special knowledge about the state of the title (86 Cal. App. 4th 303, 310) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.274-105.279

[Reserved]

§§ 105.274[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.280

§ 105.280 Negligent Misrepresentation Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Third Party Auditor's Misrepresentation in Audit Report

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION BY AN AUDITOR IN THE PERFORMANCE OF AN AUDIT BECAUSE ALL OF THE ELEMENTS OF THAT CAUSE OF ACTION ARE SATISFIED, AND PLAINTIFF IS IN THE CLASS OF PERSONS ENTITLED TO RECOVER.

A. Class of Persons Entitled to Recover. Persons who, although not clients of an auditor, may reasonably come to receive and rely on an audit report, who are known to the auditor, and for whose benefit, specifically, the auditor renders the audit report, may recover on a theory of negligent misrepresentation by the auditor (Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745).

B. Liability If Auditor Prepares Financial Records. If an independent accountant prepares a corporation's financial records, in addition to performing the audit on those records, the accountant is not acting as an independent auditor and may be liable for negligent misrepresentation to those third parties who reasonably and foreseeably relied on the financial records, the audit, or both (Nutmeg Sec., Ltd. v. McGladrey & Pullen (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1441-1444, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that an auditor is not liable to a plaintiff who is not the auditor's client for negligent misrepresentation contained in the defendant's audit of a person or entity other than the plaintiff (for example, a company in which the plaintiff has invested).

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.270 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, in the case of opposition to a motion for summary of judgment or summary adjudication, counsel would refer to facts in declarations or deposition transcripts establishing that there is a triable issue of material fact regarding whether all of the elements of that cause of action are satisfied or whether the plaintiff is in the class of persons entitled to recover.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Class of Persons Entitled to Recover

In Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 , an investor in a computer manufacturing company sued an accounting firm for damages on two theories: professional negligence and negligent misrepresentation. The gist of the complaint was that the accounting firm negligently performed an audit of the company, and in reliance on the audit, the plaintiff made and retained his investment, which was lost when the company soon thereafter became bankrupt. The trial court entered judgment on a jury verdict in the plaintiff's favor on the professional negligence theory, but against the plaintiff on the negligent misrepresentation theory. The court of appeal affirmed without reaching the issue, which the plaintiff raised on appeal, of whether the judgment against the plaintiff on the negligent misrepresentation theory was in error.

The Supreme Court reversed and remanded with instructions that (1) the judgment on the professional negligence theory be vacated and directed in favor of the accounting firm, and (2) the judgment on the negligent misrepresentation theory be reviewed in accordance with the Court's opinion regarding who may be entitled to recover from an auditor on that theory (3 Cal. 4th 370, 416) . The Court reviewed the audit function in public accounting and cases that have concerned the extent of an auditor's duty of care in the performance of an audit (3 Cal. 4th 370, 379-392) . The Court also considered various provisions of the Restatement (Second) of Torts and federal securities laws (3 Cal. 4th 370, 392-396) . Then the Court analyzed the auditor's liability to third persons (that is, persons other than the auditor's client) for audit opinions and held that an auditor's liability for general negligence in the conduct of an audit of a client's financial statements is confined to the client--that is, the person who contracts for or engages the audit services. Other persons may not recover on a pure negligence theory (3 Cal. 4th 370, 406) . The reference to a "pure" negligence theory was intended simply to distinguish that holding from the Court's holding on the second issue. On that issue, the court ruled that there is a narrow class of persons who, although not clients, may reasonably come to receive and rely on an audit report. The existence of this narrow class is a risk of audit reporting that may fairly be imposed on the auditor. These persons are specifically intended beneficiaries of the audit report who are known to the auditor and for whose benefit the auditor renders the audit report. Although they may not recover on a general negligence theory, they may recover on a theory of negligent misrepresentation (3 Cal. 4th 370, 406-407) .

[b] Liability If Auditor Prepares Financial Records

In Nutmeg Sec., Ltd. v. McGladrey & Pullen (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , the plaintiff, the underwriter of a corporation's initial public stock offering, brought suit against the accounting firm that both prepared and audited the corporation's financial records in anticipation of the corporation's initial stock offering. The complaint alleged that the corporation's financial report falsely represented that the corporation possessed $11 million in assets derived from the proceeds of the sale of a bearer note, and that the accounting firm both aided in the preparation of the report and later conducted the audit on the corporation's finances without properly confirming whether the funds even existed. The accounting firm also aided the corporation in preparing and filing other reports, which also contained materially false information concerning the corporation's financial health, with the Securities and Exchange Commission. In reliance on the accuracy of the materially false reports prepared and audited by the defendant, the plaintiff agreed to provide underwriting services for the corporation. When the plaintiff eventually questioned the corporation about its accounting practices, the corporation terminated the plaintiff's services and refused to pay the fees owed. The plaintiff's suit followed. The accounting firm demurred to the complaint on the grounds that the plaintiff could not allege that the plaintiff was the defendant's client, that the plaintiff had any direct contact with the defendant concerning any matters alleged in the complaint, or that the plaintiff was an intended recipient of the corporation's audit reports. The trial court sustained the demurrer, and the plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court began by reviewing the Supreme Court's decision in Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745 [see § 105.280[3][a]]. The court of appeal noted that the Bily decision dealt with the liability of an outside, independent auditor that performs an audit after the client prepares or otherwise supplies its own financial statements. The limitation on the liability of an outside auditor found in Bily was based on the fact that the client, rather than the outside auditor, is normally responsible for the contents of the financial statements and controls the environment for the audit. However, because the accounting firm in this case participated in the creation of the financial statements that formed the basis for the audit, the court of appeal concluded that the firm was not acting as an independent auditor and therefore that the limitations imposed by Bily did not apply. The court held that if an independent accountant prepares a corporation's financial records, in addition to performing the audit on those records, the accountant may be liable for negligent misrepresentation to those third parties who reasonably and foreseeably rely on the financial records, the audit, or both (92 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1441-1444) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Class of Persons Entitled to Recover

The facts and procedural background of Nutmeg Sec., Ltd. v. McGladrey & Pullen (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , are discussed in § 105.280[3][b]. After determining that the limitations imposed by Bily did not apply under the circumstances, the court of appeal nevertheless concluded that the allegations of the complaint were sufficient to meet the requirements of Bily and impose negligent misrepresentation liability on an auditor for damages caused to a third party such as the plaintiff. An auditor's liability for negligent misrepresentation does not require proof that the audit was intended to influence the particular plaintiff. A complaint is sufficient if it alleges that the audit was intended to influence the particular class of persons to which the plaintiff belongs, and IPO underwriters are a sufficiently narrow and circumscribed class for these purposes. The defendant was a large and experienced accounting firm, undoubtedly knew that one purpose of its audit was to attract a prestigious investment banker to underwrite the IPO, and could reasonably foresee that an underwriter would rely on the representations in its audit report (92 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1444-1445) .

In Arthur Andersen v. Superior Court (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879 , the state Insurance Commissioner brought suit against a large accounting firm for negligence and negligent misrepresentation based on an audit of an insurance company performed by the firm that had erroneously reported the financial health of the insurance company, which was in fact insolvent. The defendant moved for summary judgment and summary adjudication, arguing that it owed no duty to the Commissioner. The trial court denied the motion and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal held that the auditor of an insurance company owes a duty of care not to make negligent misrepresentations to the Insurance Commissioner when the Commissioner is acting in the capacity of representative of policyholders and creditors. The court ruled that since Ins. Code § 900.2 mandates that the report be filed with the Insurance Commissioner, who has a statutory duty to monitor insurance companies to ensure their ability to pay claims, the Commissioner was within the universe of persons to whom the auditor may be liable for negligent misrepresentation under the rule articulated in Bily v. Arthur Young & Co. (1992) 3 Cal. 4th 370, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 51, 834 P.2d 745) . The court in that case also rejected the auditor's argument that liability to the Commissioner could not be imposed if the auditor lacked knowledge that the report would be supplied to the Commissioner, since knowledge of the statutory filing requirement would be imputed to the auditor (67 Cal. App. 4th 1481, 1506-1507) .

In Soderberg v. McKinney (1996) 44 Cal. App. 4th 1760, 52 Cal. Rptr. 2d 635 , the plaintiffs were investors in a deed of trust who sued a real estate appraiser for negligent misrepresentation, stemming from the appraiser's overvaluation of property securing the deed of trust. The trial court granted summary judgment to the defendant. The plaintiffs appealed, and the court of appeal ruled that the Supreme Court holding in Bily v. Arthur Young (1996) 3 Cal. 4th 370 precluded summary judgment and compelled reversal. The court of appeal ruled that Bily applied to real estate appraisers as well as auditors and that even though appraisers hired by mortgage brokers may not know the potential investors by name or specific identity, the imposition of liability may be appropriate if the appraiser knows with substantial certainty that the particular class of persons to which the plaintiff belongs will rely on the representation in the course of the transaction. In addition, the court found that an appraiser need not contemplate the precise details of the transaction in which his or her report is ultimately used, but that liability may exist if the report is relied on in the type of transaction anticipated or in one substantially similar to it (44 Cal. App. 4th 1760, 1769) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
G. Negligent Misrepresentation

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.281-105.289

[Reserved]

§§ 105.281[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.290

§ 105.290 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Three-Year Statute of Limitations for Fraud Applies

[1] Pleading or Proof Shows Three-Year Statute of Limitations for Fraud Applies

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT THE ACTION IS BARRED BY THE THREE-YEAR STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Statute of Limitations. The period prescribed for commencing actions for relief on the ground of fraud is three years. The cause of action will accrue from the time that the aggrieved party discovers the facts constituting the fraud (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 335, 338(d)).

B. Application of Statute of Limitations. The limitations period contained in Code of Civil Procedure Section 338(d) commences to run after one has knowledge of facts sufficient to make a reasonably prudent person suspicious of fraud, thus putting that person on inquiry (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 437, 159 P.2d 958).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff may not recover for fraud and deceit because the action was barred by the three-year statute of limitations.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and any other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary judgment challenging the sufficiency of, respectively. the pleading or the proof.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms. For points and authorities supporting a general demurrer implying expiration of the statute of limitations, see § 105.293.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief or to support a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by general demurrer, if expiration of the statute of limitations is evident from the allegations of the complaint, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the particular allegations indicating expiration of the applicable statute of limitations.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities asserting that the plaintiff may not recover for fraud and deceit because the action was barred by the two-year statute of limitations applying to an action stemming from breach of a real estate broker's duty to prospective purchasers, see § 105.291.

For points and authorities asserting that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and fails to allege facts excusing the plaintiff's failure to discover the fraud, see § 105.292.

The points and authorities in this form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.10 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of specific pleading with regard to particular elements of the cause of action for fraud and deceit.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.300 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application of Statute of Limitations

In Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , the Supreme Court reversed a judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for fraudulent representations inducing the sale of corporate stock because of the trial court's errors in instructing the jury. The defendants had contended on appeal that the action was barred because it was not commenced for more than five years after the alleged fraud had taken place. The Court stated the general rule that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)], application of the statute of limitations is tolled until after the discovery of the fraud if the plaintiff pleads and proves that the plaintiff did not make the discovery until within three years prior to the filing of the complaint and establishes facts showing that the plaintiff was not negligent in failing to make the discovery sooner and had no actual or presumptive knowledge of facts sufficient to put the plaintiff on inquiry (26 Cal. 2d 412, 437) .

Although the Court held that the plaintiff in this case had met this burden, the defendants contended that, in addition to those requirements, the plaintiff was also required to show that he had made diligent inquiry to discover whether he had been defrauded. Rejecting this contention, the Court held that the statute commences to run only after one has knowledge of facts sufficient to make a reasonably prudent person suspicious of fraud, thus putting that person on inquiry, citing Civ. Code § 19 (actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put prudent person on inquiry as to particular fact as constructive notice of that fact if by pursuing that inquiry the person might have learned that fact). The circumstances must be such that the inquiry becomes a duty and the failure to make it a negligent omission, because courts should not lightly seize on some small circumstance to deny relief to a party plainly shown to have been actually defrauded on the ground that the party did not discover the fraud as soon as the party might have. Only if the defrauded party would have discovered the fraud, except for the party's own inexcusable inattention, will the defrauded party be charged with a discovery in advance of the party's actual knowledge (26 Cal. 2d 412, 437-439) . Therefore, the Court ruled that the plaintiff was not barred because the means of discovery were available at an earlier date, provided he showed that he was not put on inquiry by any circumstances known to him or his agents at any time prior to the commencement of the three-year period involved.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Application of Statute of Limitations

In Kline v. Turner (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1369, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 699 , the plaintiff was a talent agent who entered into a contract in 1990 with a recording company for the services of a musical group. In August 1990, the plaintiff sent an associate to pick up a $50,000 check due under the contract from the recording company. Pursuant to an earlier agreement, the check was to be made payable to the plaintiff. However, the check was changed and made payable to the associate. When the plaintiff found out and told the recording company that the payee should not have been changed, the recording company said that they would stop payment on the check, although a few days later they stated that they were unable to do so because the check had been cashed the same day. When confronted about the check several days later, the associate apparently told the plaintiff that he took the money to cover legal expenses and threatened the plaintiff and his family. In 1996, the plaintiff discovered that the check had been cashed four days after it was issued, not the same day, and that on the day in 1990 when the associate had gone to pick up the check, the associate had actually signed a contract with the recording company to represent the musical group himself. In 1999, the plaintiff brought suit against the recording company and its president for fraud, believing that the recording company had concocted the story about changing the name on the check to conceal their fraudulent conduct in contractually shifting representation of the musical group to the associate. Summary judgment was granted to the defendants on the grounds that the statute of limitations had expired, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that if the uncontradicted facts surrounding the discovery of the fraud were susceptible of only one legitimate inference, summary judgment was proper. The court then held that the only legitimate inference based on the uncontroverted facts was that in 1990 a reasonable person in the plaintiff's position would have concluded not only that he was injured through the associate's wrongdoing, but that he was injured through wrongdoing of the recording company as well. While the precise nature of the recording company's wrongdoing may not have been immediately apparent to the plaintiff in 1990, the plaintiff was on notice at that time that the company had committed some wrongdoing when the company changed the payee on the check without the plaintiff's approval, triggering a duty to conduct an investigation that would have uncovered the fraud (87 Cal. App. 4th 1369, 1374-1375) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.291

§ 105.291 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Two-Year Statute of Limitations for Breach of Real Estate Broker's Duty Applies

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT THE ACTION IS BARRED BY THE TWO-YEAR STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS APPLYING TO AN ACTION STEMMING FROM BREACH OF A REAL ESTATE BROKER'S DUTY TO PROSPECTIVE PURCHASERS.

A. Two-Year Period for Breach of Real Estate Broker's Duty. If a negligent misrepresentation cause of action is derived from the duty of a real estate broker to inspect property and disclose defects under Civil Code Section 2079, the applicable limitation period is the two-year period of Civil Code Section 2079.4, rather than the three-year period under Code of Civil Procedure Section 338 (Loken v. Century 21-Award Props. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 273).

B. Application of Statute of Limitations. [See § 105.290, Paragraph B].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff may not recover for fraud and deceit because the action was barred by the two-year statute of limitations applying to an action stemming from breach of a real estate broker's duty to prospective purchasers.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.290[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.290[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting an objection based on expiration of the three year period of limitations, see § 105.290. For points and authorities asserting that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and fails to allege facts excusing the plaintiff's failure to discover the fraud, see § 105.292.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.300 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Two-Year Period for Breach of Real Estate Broker's Duty

In Loken v. Century 21-Award Props. (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 263 , the purchaser of a single family residence sued various individuals and real estate brokerages for negligent misrepresentation with regard to a crack in the cement slab of the residence. Before purchasing the property, the plaintiff had expressed concern that any residence he purchase be structurally sound and not have a defective slab. A real estate agent responded to this concern with the representation that the house, which the plaintiff subsequently purchased, had no problems and appeared to be in a very structurally sound condition. Slightly over two years after the close of escrow, the plaintiff discovered a major crack in the cement slab of the house and filed suit for misrepresentation. The trial court found all the defendants liable to the plaintiff and entered a judgment for damages. The defendants appealed on the ground that the negligent misrepresentation cause of action was time-barred by the two-year limitations period of Civ. Code § 2079.4. The plaintiff argued that the three-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 338 applied because negligent misrepresentation is considered a species of fraud or deceit involving a false assertion.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment on the ground that the negligent misrepresentation cause of action was time-barred. According to the court, the basis of the cause of action was that it was unreasonable for the defendant to represent that the residence was structurally sound because he had a duty to inspect the property and disclose defects and he should have recognized problems indicating that the structural soundness was suspect. The court noted that the duty of a broker to inspect and disclose was first pronounced through case law and was subsequently codified in Civ. Code § 2079 (36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 269-270) . Because the broker's duty to inspect and disclose arose under Civ. Code § 2079, the court deemed it appropriate to apply the two-year limitations period of Civ. Code § 2079.4 (36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 270) . The court recognized that California law generally views negligent misrepresentation as a species of fraud or deceit, but reasoned that because the legislature provided for a two-year limitations period for actions stemming from the breach of duty imposed by Civ. Code § 2079, the specific statute prevailed over the general statute of limitations of three years for fraud and negligent misrepresentation (36 Cal. App. 4th 263, 272-273) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.292

§ 105.292 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Complaint Fails to Allege Facts Excusing Failure to Detect Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT DISCLOSES THAT THE ACTION IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS AND FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS THAT EXCUSE PLAINTIFF'S FAILURE TO LEARN OF THE FRAUD WITHIN THE STATUTORY PERIOD.

Pleading Facts Excusing Failure to Detect Fraud. If it appears on the face of a complaint for fraud that the time limit of the statute of limitations has run, the plaintiff must, to avoid the bar of the statute, state with particularity facts, rather than conclusions, that excuse the plaintiff's failure to learn of the fraud within the statutory period and that show specifically: (1) the plaintiff's lack of knowledge; (2) the plaintiff's lack of means of obtaining knowledge, that is, that in the exercise of reasonable diligence the facts could not have been discovered at an earlier date; and (3) how and when the plaintiff actually did discover the fraud (Casualty Ins. Co. v. Rees Inv. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 716, 719, 92 Cal. Rptr. 857).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud. The basis of this form is that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and fails to allege facts excusing the plaintiff's failure to discover the fraud.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.290[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by general demurrer, if expiration of the statute of limitations is evident from the allegations of the complaint, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the particular allegations indicating expiration of the applicable statute of limitations [see § 105.290[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting an objection based on expiration of the three-year period of limitations, see § 105.290.

For points and authorities asserting that the plaintiff may not recover for fraud and deceit because the action was barred by the two-year statute of limitations applying to an action stemming from breach of a real estate broker's duty to prospective purchasers, see § 105.291.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.300 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Pleading Facts Excusing Failure to Detect Fraud

In Casualty Ins. Co. v. Rees Inv. Co. (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 716, 92 Cal. Rptr. 857 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment of dismissal of a cross complaint for fraud following the sustaining of a general demurrer, holding that the cross complainant's fraud count did not sufficiently allege facts to excuse the cross complainant's failure to discover the asserted fraud. In an action by an insurer's lessor seeking a declaration that the lease was valid and enforceable and seeking payment of the lease obligations, the insurer cross complained for fraud against its former executive officer who had executed the lease and against an investment company that was the former executive's alter ego and owned the leased property at the time. The fraud pleading alleged that the insurer did not learn of the unfair terms of the lease until almost five years after the officer had resigned. No other reason or explanation appeared in the cross complaint for the insurer's failure to discover the alleged fraud.

In upholding the trial court's action, the court ruled that if it appears on the face of a pleading that the time limit on at an applicable statute of limitations has run, the pleader must, to avoid the bar of the statute, state with particularity facts, rather than conclusions, that excuse the pleader's failure to learn of the fraud within the statutory period (14 Cal. App. 3d 716, 719) . The plaintiff must plead and prove facts showing: (1) lack of knowledge; (2) lack of means of obtaining knowledge (in the exercise of reasonable diligence the facts were not discoverable at an earlier date); and (3) how and when the plaintiff actually discovered the fraud. In the absence of the allegation of such facts, the court of appeal held that the statute of limitations barred the cause for fraud (14 Cal. App. 3d 716, 719-720) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.293

§ 105.293 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--General Demurrer by Law Includes Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT DISCLOSES THAT THE ACTION IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Bar of Statute Deemed Included in General Demurrer. Objections that the statute of limitations bars an action must be deemed included in the grounds of a demurrer that the complaint does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 245, 94 P. 889).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for fraud and deceit if the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the statute of limitations bars the action.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.290[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in the case of objection by general demurrer, if expiration of the statute of limitations is evident from the allegations of the complaint, counsel for the demurring party would refer to the particular allegations indicating expiration of the applicable statute of limitations [see § 105.290[2][b]].

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.300 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bar of Statute Deemed Included in General Demurrer

Bell v. Bank of Cal. (1908) 153 Cal. 234, 94 P. 889 , was an action for the recovery of shares of stock. The defendant asserted in a general demurrer that the statute of limitations barred the action, and the trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The method of asserting the defense of the bar of the statute of limitations was not, apparently, at issue either in the trial court or on appeal, but the Supreme Court said that the bar of the statute of limitations is not specified as a ground of demurrer in the code and that objection to a complaint, while required to be stated in the demurrer, must be deemed to be included within the ground of want of facts sufficient to constitute a cause action (153 Cal. 234, 245) .

179 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.294-105.299

[Reserved]

§§ 105.294[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.300

§ 105.300 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Late Discovery Excused By Absence of Reasonable Notice

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE PLAINTIFF DID NOT ACTUALLY DISCOVER THE FACTS CONSTITUTING THE FRAUD UNTIL _____ [date] AND THEREFORE THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS DID NOT BEGIN TO RUN ON PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD UNTIL THAT DATE. PLAINTIFF'S FAILURE TO DISCOVER THE TRUE FACTS PRIOR TO THAT DATE IS EXCUSED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF HAD NO NOTICE OR KNOWLEDGE OF FACTS SUFFICIENT TO PUT A REASON ABLE PERSON ON INQUIRY PRIOR TO THAT DATE.

A. Constructive Notice. Every person who has actual notice of circumstances sufficient to put a prudent person on notice as to a particular fact has constructive notice of the fact itself in all cases in which, by pursuing that inquiry, the person might have learned that fact (Civ. Code § 19).

B. Mere Fact of Available Means of Knowledge Is Insufficient. If the law imposes no duty on a person to make inquiry and if, under the circumstances, a prudent person would not be put on inquiry, the mere fact that means of knowledge are open to the plaintiff and plaintiff did not avail himself or herself of them does not bar the plaintiff from relief if thereafter the plaintiff makes actual discovery. The circumstances must be such that the inquiry becomes a duty and the failure to make it a negligent omission (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 438-439, 159 P.2d 958 ; Davis v. Kahn (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 868, 878, 86 Cal. Rptr. 872).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because the plaintiff lacked a prior duty to investigate, the statute of limitations had not run when the plaintiff discovered the fraud, and the suit was instituted within three years after that discovery.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue--for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to a summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For additional points and authorities contending that the statute of limitations should not bar the plaintiff's action, see the following:

- The defendant's representations lulled the plaintiff into a sense of false security [see § 105.301].
- The defendant was in a fiduciary or confidential relationship with the plaintiff [see § 105.302].
- The plaintiff's absence from the jurisdiction is a relevant factor in explaining the plaintiff's delay of discovery [see § 105.303].
- The defendant fraudulently concealed facts [see § 105.304].
- The defendant continued to make misrepresentations [see § 105.305].

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Fact of Available Means of Knowledge Is Insufficient

Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , is discussed in § 105.290[3][a].

In Davis v. Kahn (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 868 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment for the plaintiff in an action for damages for fraud for the defendants' failure to account to the plaintiff for his share of the profits of two joint ventures. The defendants contended that the three-year statute of limitations barred the action. However, the court, citing Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co., ruled that in the absence of a duty to make inquiry, the statute does not run merely because the means of discovery were available and that the plaintiff is not compelled to disprove that those means existed. The plaintiff need only establish facts sufficient to show that the plaintiff made an actual discovery of hitherto unknown information within three years before filing the action. The court pointed out that on the formation of a joint venture, the joint adventurers assume the status of fiduciaries. Finding that there was a confidential relationship between the parties, the court of appeal concluded that Hobart governed the defendants' claim that the statute of limitations barred the action and held for the plaintiff (7 Cal. App. 3d 868, 878).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mere Fact of Available Means of Knowledge is Insufficient

In Cleveland v. Internet Specialties West, Inc. (2009) 171 Cal. App. 4th 24, 88 Cal. Rptr. 3d 892 , plaintiffs were investors in a business project under which plaintiffs would be repaid from the net cash receipts from the project. The investors learned later that year that the project was having financial difficulties, but the project principals would not return their calls for information or an accounting. Two years after that, plaintiffs were told by a lawyer that the project had failed. Approximately ten years after first investing their money, however, plaintiffs learned that the project enterprise was still doing business under another name and was making money. Plaintiffs sued for breach of contract and fraud. The trial court ruled as a matter of law that the statute of limitations began to run when plaintiffs first had problems getting financial information from the principals, and thus the action was time-barred. The court of appeal reversed. The court held that triable issues of fact existed as to when the investors had sufficient knowledge of fraud and resulting damage to trigger the running of the statute of limitations. The court noted that the mere belief that the investment funds had been lost, without more, did not trigger a duty to investigate whether actionable fraud had occurred, as the risk of loss of funds is inherent in such investments. In addition, even had plaintiffs conducted an investigation when first learning of the project's financial difficulties, they would not have discovered a cause of action for fraud, as the facts supporting that cause of action materialized subsequent to that period, at the earliest when the project began making money but failed to pay plaintiffs on their investments. While public court documents in other lawsuits available about two years after the investment was made would have informed plaintiffs that a new business entity had been formed to handle the business of the investment project, the issue was when plaintiffs learned of sufficient facts to create a duty to investigate for possible wrongdoing (171 Cal. App. 4th 24, 32-33) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.301

§ 105.301 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S REPRESENTATIONS WERE OF SUCH A NATURE THAT A REASONABLY PRUDENT PERSON IN PLAINTIFF'S CIRCUMSTANCES WOULD HAVE BEEN LULLED INTO A SENSE OF SECURITY OR A STATE OF INACTION AND WOULD NOT HAVE BEEN PUT ON INQUIRY.

Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction. If the defendant's representations were of such a nature that they lulled the plaintiff into a sense of security or a state of inaction, it cannot be held, as a matter of law, that a reasonably prudent person would have been put on inquiry (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 439, 159 P.2d 958).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because a reasonably prudent person would have been lulled into a sense of security or a state of inaction by the defendant's representations.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.300[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.300[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

In Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.290[3][a], the Supreme Court discussed the nature of the facts that would make a reasonable, prudent person suspicious and, thus, lead to a duty to inquire to determine whether the plaintiff was within the exception to the statute of limitations. The Court observed that the plaintiff's evidence, if believed, disclosed certain factors that may have tended to discourage the making of an exhaustive independent investigation. The jury could have found that the defendant's representations were of such a nature as to lull the plaintiff into a sense of security or a state of inaction--an important factor to be considered in determining whether or not the plaintiff was negligent in failing to investigate. The Court added that it could not hold, as a matter of law, that any of the circumstances known to the plaintiff should have put a reasonably prudent person on inquiry (26 Cal. 2d 412, 439) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

In E-Fab, Inc. v. Accountants, Inc. Services (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 64 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9 , plaintiff company hired an employment agency to provide an accountant. The employment agency placed a temporary accountant with plaintiff and told plaintiff that it had verified the accountant's background and qualifications. Plaintiff eventually hired the accountant as a full-time employee and over the course of the next seven years, this accountant embezzled over a million dollars from plaintiff. When the embezzlement was discovered, the police informed plaintiff that the accountant had a criminal record, had spent time in prison, and had falsified her academic credentials. Plaintiff sued the employment agency for negligence, negligent misrepresentation, and breach of contract, but the trial court sustained defendant's demurrer on the basis of statute of limitations. The court of appeal reversed. Applying the discovery rule, the court held that the claims against the employment agency did not accrue until the police notified plaintiff of the accountant's criminal record (153 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1323) . In addressing the adequacy of plaintiff's pleading, the court noted that the pleading did not suggest any circumstances that should have alerted plaintiff earlier to defendant's misconduct, and in fact plaintiff's reliance on defendant's experience and expertise warranted the creation of a sense of reassurance on the part of plaintiff as to the accountant's qualifications and credentials (153 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1325) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.302

§ 105.302 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant Was Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. PLAINTIFF MAY NOT BE HELD TO THE USUAL DEGREE OF DILIGENCE BECAUSE DEFENDANT HAD A _____ [FIDUCIARY or CONFIDENTIAL] RELATIONSHIP WITH PLAINTIFF AT THE TIME OF DEFENDANT'S FRAUDULENT REPRESENTATION.

Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship Existed. A pertinent factor in determining if a reasonably prudent person would have investigated an allegedly fraudulently representation is whether or not there existed a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the parties at the time of the fraudulent representation. If such a relationship existed, facts that would ordinarily require investigation may not excite suspicion, and the ordinarily required degree of diligence is not required (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 440, 159 P.2d 958 ; Davis v. Kahn (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 868, 878, 86 Cal. Rptr. 872).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because the plaintiff may not be held to the usual degree of diligence to investigate if a fiduciary or confidential relationship between the plaintiff and the defendant existed when the defendant made the fraudulent representations.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.300[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.300[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship Existed

In Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.290[3][b], the Court noted that one factor that is pertinent to a determination as to whether the plaintiff was within the exception to the statute of limitations is the existence of a fiduciary relationship between the parties when the defendant made the fraudulent representations. In cases involving such a relationship, facts that would ordinarily require investigation may not excite suspicion, and the same degree of diligence is not required, even though an inquiry would have disclosed the true facts. The defendants argued that the plaintiff was no longer entitled to the benefit of this rule once the fiduciary relationship terminated. The Court disagreed, pointing out that the plaintiff was under no duty to reexamine the transaction immediately after it took place merely because the fiduciary relationship had terminated. Under these circumstances, it was for the jury to determine whether the plaintiff was negligent to continue to rely, after completion of the transaction, on the representations made to him while the relationship existed (26 Cal. 2d 412, 440) .

Davis v. Kahn (1970) 7 Cal. App. 3d 868, 86 Cal. Rptr. 872 , is discussed in § 105.300[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Fiduciary or Confidential Relationship Existed

In Lee v. Escrow Consultants, Inc. (1989) 210 Cal. App. 3d 915 , the court of appeal reversed a dismissal of a complaint for fraud brought against an escrow agent that had allegedly disbursed escrow funds pursuant to a forged amended instruction. The agent had argued that the action was time-barred, but the court of appeal held that because of the fiduciary relationship between the plaintiff and the escrow agent, albeit limited to the agent's carrying out of the escrow instructions, the plaintiff had a relaxed duty to inquire about the disbursal of the funds. Thus, the plaintiff had no duty to inquire whether any funds were improperly disbursed unless he was aware of facts that would make a reasonably prudent person suspicious (210 Cal. App. 3d 915, 920-921).

Rosenfeld, Meyer & Susman v. Cohen (1987) 191 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 237 Cal. Rptr. 14 , was an appeal considering three judgments in three separate actions between former partners after dissolution of their partnership. Some of the partners continued most of the business in a new partnership. One of the judgments appealed arose from a fraud action by the withdrawing partners against some of the continuing partners, based on the fact that the continuing partners owned the physical assets of the partnership and leased them to the partnership at a profit. The ownership and lease were disclosed in a footnote to an annual report that had been circulated at a partnership meeting more than three years before the case was filed. In affirming the trial court's determination that the withdrawing partners did not have actual notice of the ownership and lease until two years before commencement of the action, the court of appeal said that what constitutes notice among fiduciaries is generally a question of fact (191 Cal. App. 3d 1035, 1059) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.303

§ 105.303 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Defendant's Statements Lulled Plaintiff Into Inaction

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE PLAINTIFF'S ABSENCE FROM THE LOCALITY IS A RELEVANT FACTOR TO BE CONSIDERED BY THE TRIER OF FACT IN EXPLANATION OF THE PLAINTIFF'S DELAY IN DISCOVERY OF THE TRUE FACTS.

Delay of Discovery Explained by Plaintiff's Absence. Although the plaintiff's absence from the locality would not toll the statute of limitations if it had already commenced to run, it is a relevant factor to be considered by the trier of fact to explain the plaintiff's delay in discovering the true facts (Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 441, 159 P.2d 958).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because the plaintiff's absence from the locality is a relevant factor to be considered by the trier of fact in explanation of the plaintiff's delay in discovering the true facts.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.300[3][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.300[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Delay of Discovery Explained by Plaintiff's Absence

In Hobart v. Hobart Estate Co. (1945) 26 Cal. 2d 412, 159 P.2d 958 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.290[3][b], the Supreme Court ruled that the plaintiff's absence from the state would not toll the statute of limitations if it had already commenced to run (for example, if the plaintiff had been put on inquiry by facts known to him prior to his departure), but it was a relevant factor to be considered by the jury in explaining the plaintiff's delay in discovering the true facts. The evidence was clearly sufficient, the Court noted, to support the implied finding of the jury that the plaintiff learned nothing to arouse his suspicions during the period between the completion of the transaction involved and the alleged discovery of the fraud after he returned from a five-year stay in Europe (26 Cal. 2d 412, 441) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.304

§ 105.304 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant Fraudulently Concealed Facts

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT CONCEALED A MATERIAL FACT OF THE TRANSACTION, KNOWING THAT PLAINTIFF WOULD ACT ON THE ASSUMPTION THAT NO SUCH FACT EXISTED.

Defendant Fraudulently Concealed Facts. If the defendant conceals a material fact of the transaction, knowing that the plaintiff acts on the assumption that no such fact exists, the concealment is as much a fraud as if the existence of the fact was expressly denied or the reverse expressly stated, and fraudulent concealment of the facts is a good answer to the defense of the statute of limitations (Balfour, Guthrie & Co. v. Hansen (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 173, 189-190, 38 Cal. Rptr. 525).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because the defendant concealed a material fact of the transaction, knowing that the plaintiff would act on the assumption that no such fact existed.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.300[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.300[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant Fraudulently Concealed Facts

In Balfour, Guthrie & Co. v. Hansen (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 173, 38 Cal. Rptr. 525 , the facts and background of which are discussed in § 105.222[4][a], the court of appeal ruled that fraudulent concealment of the facts is a good answer to the defense of the statute of limitations. The court noted that the trial court had found that there were no circumstances to cause the plaintiffs or their agents to become suspicious. The court ruled that if there is a concealment of a material fact of the transaction by the defendant, knowing that the other party acts on the assumption that no such fact exists, the concealment is as much a fraud as if the existence of the fact was expressly denied or the reverse of it expressly stated (227 Cal. App. 2d 173, 189-190) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.305

§ 105.305 Bar by Statute of Limitations Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Defendant's Continued Fraud Tolled Statute

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT IS NOT BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS BECAUSE DEFENDANT'S CONTINUED MISREPRESENTATIONS CONCEALED THE FALSITY OF EARLIER MISREPRESENTATIONS AND TOLLED THE RUNNING OF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

Defendant's Continued Fraud Tolled Statute. Allegations that the defendant's continued misrepresentations concealed the falsity of earlier misrepresentations can toll the running of the statute of limitations if the reliance on the later misrepresentations was reasonable (Parsons v. Tickner (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1529, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that the defendant may not escape liability by asserting a statute of limitations defense because the defendant's continued misrepresentations concealed the falsity of earlier misrepresentations and tolled the running of the statute of limitations.

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.290 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.300[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.300[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defendant's Continued Fraud Tolled Statute

In Parsons v. Tickner (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 810 , the daughter of a deceased musician sued her father's business managers for fraud and deceit in falsely representing that they owned the copyrights to her father's music and were entitled to publish his music catalog subject only to a limited obligation to distribute royalty payments to the estate and specified heirs. The plaintiff's complaint alleged that the defendants concealed the fact that they did not have any interest in the song catalog and that she did not become aware of the defendant's unlawful exploitations of the catalog until approximately eighteen years after the death of her father. The defendants generally demurred to the fraud and deceit causes of action on the ground that they were time barred, measuring the operative time for bringing the claims from the date of the musician's death. The trial court sustained the demurrers and entered judgments of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the claims were not time barred (31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1529) . The court noted that Code Civ. Proc. § 338 delays the accrual of the limitation period if a plaintiff can establish ignorance of the facts, subject to a judicial limitation that the plaintiff must exercise diligence to discover the facts (31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1525) . Given the fact that the defendants held themselves out as if they were the producers of the catalog and had distributed royalty payments in that capacity, the court reasoned that it was not unreasonable for either the estate or the plaintiff to assume that the defendants had the right to do so (31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1527) . The court further ruled that there was no duty imposed by law or otherwise on the plaintiff to verify the representations of the defendants that they were the producers of the catalog, stating that "there is no reward for being slick" (31 Cal. App. 4th 1513, 1529) .

186 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
1. Statute of Limitations

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.306-105.319

[Reserved]

§§ 105.306[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.320

§ 105.320 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows That Plaintiff Ratified Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF RATIFIED THE FRAUD.

Plaintiff Ratified Fraud. Affirmative relief sought on the ground of fraud will be denied if the complaining party, with full knowledge of the fraud practiced, ratifies the fraud by his/her conduct (First Nat'l Bank v. Thompson (1931) 212 Cal. 388, 407, 298 P. 808).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff's recovery is barred because the plaintiff, despite full knowledge of the fraud, ratified the alleged fraud by his or her conduct.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and any on other substantive issues that need to be addressed. For example, it may be submitted with other points and authorities supporting a demurrer or motion for summary judgment challenging the sufficiency of, respectively, the pleading or the proof.

This form may be combined, if appropriate, with the points and authorities in § 105.30 et seq., which challenge the sufficiency of pleading or proof with regard to other aspects or elements in a cause of action for fraud and deceit. If this form is used to support a demurrer, it may also be combined, if appropriate, with the forms in § 105.10 et seq., which focus on the requirement that elements of an action for fraud and deceit, particularly the deceitful act or omission, be alleged in specific rather than general terms.

This form may also be adapted for a trial or appellate brief, or to support of a motion for judgment on the pleadings, a motion for nonsuit, or any other request for relief based on the plaintiff's failure to show or establish the essential elements of the action for fraud or deceit.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum supporting a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used in support of a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum supporting a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities contending that the plaintiff waived any claim for damages, see § 105.321.

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.330 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Ratified Fraud

In First Nat'l Bank v. Thompson (1931) 212 Cal. 388, 298 P. 808 , the Supreme Court ruled that a the defendant/cross complainant could not assert fraud in his cross complaint for recovery of money he paid on a note because he voluntarily paid the money after full knowledge of the fraud. Years after the defendant/cross complainant knew substantially what the true facts were respecting the fraud that procured the note and after he was fully cognizant of the fraud and was charged with knowing what his legal rights were, he continued from time to time, and without any duress, to renew his note and finally paid it. These affirmative acts, which continued for a time that seemed to the Court to be wholly unreasonable, supported application of the rule that one who makes a voluntary payment cannot recover. Therefore, the defendant/cross complainant was not entitled to affirmative relief because, with full knowledge of the fraud practiced on him, he ratified that fraud by repeated renewals of the obligation and his later voluntary discharge of that obligation in full. The Court concluded that the law withholds its aid from those who are so unmindful of their rights.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.321

§ 105.321 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Shows Plaintiff Waived Fraud Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO _____ [STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE or ESTABLISH] A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT BECAUSE THE _____ [COMPLAINT DISCLOSES or EVIDENCE SHOWS] THAT PLAINTIFF WAIVED PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM FOR DAMAGES FOR FRAUD BY ENTERING INTO A NEW ARRANGEMENT WITH DEFENDANT.

Waiver of Claim for Fraud. If a party who claims to have been defrauded, enters, after discovery of the fraud, into new arrangements or engagements concerning the subject matter of the contract to which the fraud applies, that party is deemed to have waived any claim for damages on account of the fraud (Oakland Raiders v. Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 1185, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 ; Schied v. Bodinson Mfg. Co. (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 134, 142-143, 179 P.2d 380).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant either has failed to allege sufficient facts to constitute a cause of action for fraud or has failed to present evidence to establish a fraud claim. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff waived his or her claim for damages for fraud.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.320[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.320[2][b]].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting an objection based on expiration of the three year period of limitations, see § 105.320. For points and authorities asserting that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by the statute of limitations and fails to allege facts excusing the plaintiff's failure to discover the fraud, see § 105.292.

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 105.330 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Claim for Fraud

In Oakland Raiders v. Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum, Inc. (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 51 Cal. Rptr. 3d 144 , plaintiff, the Oakland Raiders National Football League team, sued the Oakland-Alameda County Coliseum for fraud in inducing the Raiders in 1995 to sign a long-term agreement to play at the Coliseum. The Raiders claimed that the Coliseum misrepresented the level of advance season ticket sales, inducing the Raiders to agree to return to Oakland rather than pursue other available options. A jury awarded the Raiders almost $35 million in damages for negligent misrepresentation, and the trial court denied the Coliseum's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the Raiders had waived the fraud claim and that the motion for JNOV should have been granted. The court, relying on Schmidt v. Mesmer (1897) 116 Cal. 267, 48 P. 54 , and other cases, recognized the long-established rule that a plaintiff claiming to have been induced into signing a contract by fraud or deceit is deemed to have waived a claim for damages for that fraud if, after discovering the fraud, the plaintiff enters into a new agreement with the defendant regarding the same subject matter that supersedes the former agreement and confers significant benefits on the plaintiff (144 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 1185) . After learning during the 1995 season that season ticket sales were not as high as they had been told, the Raiders subsequently entered into a new contract with the Coliseum in September 1996. This new contract concerned the same subject matter as the previous contract, modified the rights of the parties, conferred significant financial benefits on the Raiders, and otherwise reaffirmed the validity and enforceability of the 1995 agreement (144 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 1190-1191) . The court noted that while the existence of waiver is generally a question of fact, implied waiver, when based on conduct that is manifestly inconsistent with the intent to enforce a known right, may be determined as a matter of law if the underlying facts are undisputed (144 Cal. App. 4th 1175, 1191) .

Schied v. Bodinson Mfg. Co. (1947) 79 Cal. App. 2d 134 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment against the purchaser of equipment, who had claimed that the seller was guilty of fraud and deceit in procuring the sale contract and who had claimed recovery of losses and damages occasioned by the fraud. The trial court found that the seller was guilty of fraud in orally misrepresenting the efficiency of the equipment that the purchaser alleged to be defective. However, with full knowledge of the fraud complained of, the purchaser subsequently bargained for and received from the seller advice, work, labor, repairs, and machinery of substantial value for which the original contract did not provide. Moreover, the purchaser deliberately withdraw in writing a previous written complaint of alleged deficiencies in the equipment and specifically acknowledged the validity of the original contract, agreeing to abide by its terms and to pay the stipulated installments without reservations or further conditions. The court noted that if a party has been induced by fraud to enter into a contract, that party may elect either to rescind the contract or to affirm the contract, retain whatever advantage that party may have acquired, and still have an action for damages for deceit. However, this rule is subject to the limitation that if a party who claims to have been defrauded, enters, after discovery of the fraud, into new arrangements or engagements concerning the subject matter of the contract to which the fraud applies, that party is deemed to have waived any claim for damages on account of the fraud. The court therefore concluded that the purchaser's conduct clearly indicated an intention to waive the previous fraud and misrepresentations (79 Cal. App. 2d 134, 142-143).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Claim for Fraud

In Tucker v. Beneke (1919) 180 Cal. 588 , the Supreme Court affirmed a judgment for the defendants in an action for damages for fraud involving an exchange of real property. The fraud consisted of misrepresentations as to the dimensions and value of the property exchanged by the defendants. After obtaining knowledge of the true facts, the plaintiff requested an extension of time for the mortgage payments and that request was granted. The Court ruled that if the plaintiff knew of any fraud or believed that the defendants had practiced fraud, his conduct concerning the mortgage waived the fraud (180 Cal. 588, 594-595).

In Burne v. Lee (1909) 156 Cal. 221, 104 P. 438 , the Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's judgment for the defendant in an action for damages for fraud, holding that the plaintiff had waived any claim for damages for deceit that he might otherwise have had. The complaint for damages for fraud alleged that the defendant, with intent to defraud the plaintiff and induce him to purchase stock, made misrepresentations about the value of the stock and the profits of the corporation involved. However, it appeared from the defense set up by the defendant's answer that subsequent to the discovery of the alleged fraud, the plaintiff entered into negotiations with the defendant by which the parties entered into a compromise agreement. Under that agreement, the plaintiff's claim against the defendant was to be settled. The Court observed that prior to the negotiations, the plaintiff might have stood on his original contract and sued for damages for deceit, or he might have rescinded the contract, but he did neither. Instead, the plaintiff entered into the compromise agreement that superseded the first contract and resulted in a waiver of any claim for damages for deceit. The Court ruled that if a party who claims to have been defrauded enters into new arrangements or engagements concerning the subject matter of the contract to which the fraud applies, that party is deemed to have waived any claim for damages on account of the fraud (156 Cal. 221, 226) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities §§ 105.322-105.329

[Reserved]

§§ 105.322[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.330

§ 105.330 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Contract Cannot Waive Fraud Claim

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE AN ALLEGED WAIVER OF LIABILITY BY CONTRACT, BECAUSE A CONTRACT IN WHICH PARTIES ATTEMPT TO EXEMPT ANYONE FROM RESPONSIBILITY FOR FRAUD IS UNLAWFUL.

Contract Cannot Waive Fraud Claim. All contracts that have for their object, directly or indirectly, the exemption of anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law (Civ. Code § 1668).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for fraud or deceit. The basis of this form is that a contract in which parties attempt to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her fraud is unlawful under Civ. Code § 1668 (precluding contractual waiver) [see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 404, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 , discussed in § 105.331[3][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the substantive issue, for example, by response to a demurrer or by opposition to summary judgment motion. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show that the cause of action is encompassed within those listed in Civ. Code § 1668.

Any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to the pleading (or matters subject to judicial notice), if the form is used in a memorandum opposing a demurrer or another challenge to the sufficiency of the pleading. Similarly, any statement of fact should be supported by adequate reference to evidence admitted or otherwise cognizable by the court, if the form is used to oppose a motion challenging the adequacy of proof.

For example, a memorandum opposing a motion for summary judgment may refer to affidavits or declarations based on personal knowledge or matters subject to judicial notice [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2009, 2015.5 (affidavits and declarations); Evid. Code § 450 et seq. (judicial notice)]. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For legal background with detailed coverage of the elements of a tort action for fraud and deceit, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For additional points and authorities relating to demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.331

§ 105.331 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Contract Cannot Waive Claim of Negligent Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION, DESPITE AN ALLEGED WAIVER OF LIABILITY BY CONTRACT, BECAUSE A CONTRACT IN WHICH PARTIES ATTEMPT TO EXEMPT ANYONE FROM RESPONSIBILITY FOR HIS OR HER FRAUD IS UNLAWFUL.

A. "Fraud" Includes Negligent Misrepresentation. "Fraud," within the meaning of Civil Code Section 1668, includes negligent misrepresentation (Blankenheim v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1472-1473, 266 Cal. Rptr. 593 ; Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 404, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779).

B. Contract Cannot Waive Fraud Claim. [See § 105.330].

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The basis of this form is that a contract in which parties attempt to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her negligent misrepresentation or fraud is unlawful, under Civ. Code § 1668 (precluding contractual waiver) [see Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 404, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 ; see also § 105.330[2][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.330[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. Thus, counsel should show that the cause of action is encompassed within those listed in Civ. Code § 1668 [see § 105.330[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Fraud" Includes Negligent Misrepresentation

In Blankenheim v. E.F. Hutton & Co. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 266 Cal. Rptr. 593 , two investors brought an action against their stock brokerage firm and an individual stockbroker, alleging various theories based on negligent misrepresentation, arising from a recommended investment that failed. The plaintiffs contacted the defendants regarding the prospective purchase of certain tax shelters and ultimately invested in a company that the individual defendant recommended, based on several representations made by this defendant regarding its financial soundness. The parties executed several "hold-harmless" agreements in which the plaintiffs agreed to hold the brokerage firm harmless for any loss arising out of their investments. After the investments became worthless, the plaintiffs brought suit. The trial court granted the defendants' summary judgment motion on the grounds that the plaintiffs' reliance on the broker's representations was unjustifiable as a matter of law and that the plaintiffs had waived their claims. The plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the hold-harmless agreements were void as against the policy of the State of California and that factual issues remained regarding the element of justifiable reliance. With regard to the hold-harmless agreements, the plaintiffs contended that the were contrary to law, based on Civ. Code § 1668. The court noted that Civ. Code § 1668 reflects public policy disfavoring the attempt to "contract away" legal liability for the commission of torts, although a contract exempting liability for ordinary negligence is valid if no public interest is involved and no statute expressly prohibits it (217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1471-1472) . The issue on appeal therefore was whether negligent misrepresentation is ordinary negligence that a party may contract away or whether it constitutes fraud for which there can be no exemption from liability. The court noted that Civ. Code § 1572 defines "fraud" as, among other things, the "positive assertion, in a manner not warranted by the information of the person making it, of that which is not true, [although the person making it] believes it to be true" (217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1472) . Moreover, case law has long held that negligent misrepresentation is included within the definition of fraud. The court concluded that a contract that exempts a party from liability for his or her own positive assertions, which are made in a manner not warranted by the information and are untrue, is against the policy of the law. Consequently, the hold-harmless agreements that attempted to exempt the brokerage firm from all responsibility for its own misrepresentations were void as against the policy of the State of California (217 Cal. App. 3d 1463, 1473) .

In Continental Airlines, Inc. v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 264 Cal. Rptr. 779 , a commercial airline company brought an action against an aircraft manufacturer, on fraud and contract theories, arising from alleged defects in an airplane that caused a fire and resulting damage to the airplane. The fraud theories were based on representations, made to the plaintiff in a series of briefings and sales brochures, that various structures on the airplane, including the landing gear and fuel tank, would with high probability withstand the impact of a crash. The finalized purchase agreement contained more equivocal language with regard to those structural aspects of the airplane--for example, stating that the landing gear was "not likely" to rupture the wing fuel tanks or fuel lines. Following an aborted takeoff because of tire failure, the landing gear of the airplane was severed from the wing, causing fuel to escape, which resulted in a fire that irreparably damaged the airplane. The case ultimately submitted to the jury was based on five fraud theories and one breach of contract theory. The jury returned verdicts for the plaintiff on all but two counts, and judgment was granted on three counts of fraud, including negligent misrepresentation, and alternatively on the contract count, if the fraud verdicts did not withstand appeal. The defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment after modifying the amount of prejudgment interest awarded. The defendant contended that the cause of action for negligent misrepresentation was barred by an exculpatory provision in the purchase agreement, in which the plaintiff expressly agreed to waive all claims for "negligence." The court then considered whether negligent misrepresentation is a species of fraud that, pursuant to statutory and case law, may not be waived by an exculpatory clause. Under Civ. Code § 1668, all contracts that have for their object, directly or indirectly, the exemption of anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law. The defendant argued that the statute does not list "misrepresentation" among the kinds of conduct for which a party may not exculpate itself and that "fraud" within the meaning of that statute refers only to an intentional tort. However, negligent misrepresentation has been interpreted to be a form of fraud under Civ. Code § 1572(2), which defines actual fraud, and Civ. Code § 1710(2), which defines deceit (216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 402) . Although no other case has interpreted the relationship among Civ. Code §§ 1572(2), 1668, and 1710(2), cases that have interpreted those statutes in other contexts support the holding that a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation is included within the meaning of the word "fraud" in Civ. Code § 1668 (216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 403-404) . Consequently, the exculpatory clause of the contract was not a bar to that cause of action (216 Cal. App. 3d 388, 404) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.332

§ 105.332 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Continued Performance That Is Not Waiver

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE AN ALLEGED CONTINUED PERFORMANCE BY PLAINTIFF AFTER LEARNING OF THE FRAUD, BECAUSE _____ [PLAINTIFF HAS NOT INTENTIONALLY RELINQUISHED A KNOWN RIGHT or PLAINTIFF HAS ELECTED TO STAND ON THE CONTRACT AND SUE FOR DAMAGES].

A. Waiver of Fraud Requires Relinquishment of Right. There can be no waiver of fraud in the absence of an intentional relinquishment of a known right (Lawson v. Town & Country Shops, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 196, 201, 323 P.2d 843).

B. Continued Performance Is Not Waiver. If a party learns that he or she has been defrauded, that party may, instead of rescinding, elect to stand on the contract and sue for damages, and in this case that party's continued performance of the agreement does not constitute a waiver of an action for damages (Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 750, 192 P.2d 935).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff's continued performance does not constitute a knowing waiver of the plaintiff's cause of action for fraud [see § 105.330[2][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.330[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.330[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Waiver of Fraud Requires Relinquishment of Right

Lawson v. Town & Country Shops, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 196, 323 P.2d 843 , is discussed in § 105.334[3][a].

[b] Continued Performance Is Not Waiver

In Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 192 P.2d 935 , the Supreme Court held in favor of the defendants on their cross complaint for fraud, reversing the trial court's judgment with directions that the trial court make certain additional findings and adjudge that the defendants were entitled on their cross complaint to damages in accordance with a specific formula. The controversy arose out of the plaintiff's sale of a farm to the defendants. After making partial payment on the note secured by the farm, the defendants defaulted, the plaintiff sued to foreclose, and the defendants cross complained for damages, alleging that they had been induced to buy through fraudulent representations. On appeal, one of the contentions of the plaintiff was that recovery by the defendants/cross complainants was barred by waiver, which was evidenced by the facts that the defendants/cross complainants continued to make payments, sought and received the plaintiff's advice and assistance in the operation of the farm, requested an extension of time for payment, and failed to make any claim of fraud until filing the cross complaint. The Court held that a party who learns that he or she has been defrauded, that party may, instead of rescinding, elect to stand on the contract and sue for damages. In this situation, the party's continued performance of the agreement does not constitute a waiver of the action for damages. The party must comply with the terms of the contract, must not offer to perform the contract on conditions that the party has no right to exact, and must not make any new agreement or engagement respecting the contract. Otherwise, the party waives the alleged fraud. However, said the Court, it is unjust and unreasonable to hold that the defrauded party's mere asking of a favor should deprive an innocent person of rights arising from an unquestionably fraudulent act (31 Cal. 2d 744, 750) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Fraud

In Feckenscher v. Gamble (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 482, 85 P.2d 885 , the Supreme Court ruled that the plaintiff, who brought an action for fraud in the inducement of a real property exchange transaction, had not waived the fraud of the original representations made to her by entering into later contracts with the defendants because during the entire course of the transactions she remained unaware of the fraud. The Court noted that had she become aware of the false and fraudulent representations during the course of the negotiations and then, with this knowledge, entered into a subsequent contract, she would not thereafter be able to complain of the original fraud (12 Cal. 2d 482, 497) .

[b] Continued Performance Is Not Waiver

In Brockway v. Heilman (1967) 250 Cal. App. 2d 807, 58 Cal. Rptr. 772 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for damages for fraud, despite the defendant's contention that under the pleadings, the plaintiffs had restricted themselves to a cause of action for breach of contract. This argument overlooked the allegations of fraud, which claimed that when the defendants agreed to sell real and personal property and a liquor license, they did not intend to transfer the license. The plaintiffs did not allege rescission or tender because they elected to proceed on the ground of fraud. Under these circumstances, the plaintiffs had two choices: to rescind or to affirm and sue for damages. If a party learns that he or she has been defrauded, that party may, instead of rescinding, elect to stand on the contract and sue for damages, and in this situation, that party's continued performance of the agreement does not constitute a waiver of that party's action for damages (250 Cal. App. 2d 807, 811) .

In Thompson Crane & Trucking Co. v. Eyman (1954) 123 Cal. App. 2d 904 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's judgment canceling a note and distributing the proceeds between the defendants, who were adverse to each other. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants, Eyman and Weller, claimed adverse interests in the proceeds of a note that the plaintiff gave Weller and that Weller assigned to Eyman to secure payment due Eyman for services rendered to Weller in a tax matter pursuant to a contingent fee contract allegedly obtained through duress. The trial court rendered judgment providing for cancellation of the note, the payment to of part of the money to Eyman and the payment of the balance to Weller. Eyman appealed, contending, among other things, that Weller was seeking rescission of the fee contract, but that Weller had waived the right to rescind by later paying Eyman the remainder of the fee involved. The court held that Weller was not necessarily barred from any relief because he did not rescind promptly or because he conclusively waived his rights. The court noted that this was not an action for rescission. However, Weller's position was similar to that involved in the recognized rule that if a party is placed in a position in which rescission would not afford an adequate remedy, the party may complete the contract without waiving the right to assert a claim for the fraud. The court concluded that it could not hold, as a matter of law, that Weller had waived his right to defend against Eyman's claim to a fee (123 Cal. App. 2d 904, 910-911).

In Stevens v. Curtis (1953) 122 Cal. App. 2d 30, 264 P.2d 606 , the court of appeal reversed a judgment of nonsuit against the plaintiffs on their cause of action for fraud, holding that in electing to exercise an option, the plaintiffs had not waived their right to claim damages for the fraud. The defendant had leased land to the plaintiffs with an option to buy. The complaint alleged that the defendant had represented that an ample water supply was available, although he knew that both the available supply and the water utility's facilities were inadequate, that the plaintiffs believed and relied on the false statements, spending large sums of money, and that before they learned the truth, they had spent so much money that they were obliged to and did exercise the option. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for nonsuit on the ground that after learning that the water supply was insufficient, the plaintiffs had not rescinded, but had spent large sums of money and entered into a further contract with the defendant by exercising the option, thereby waiving any claim for misrepresentation. The court of appeal ruled that although a party generally waives any claim for damages for fraud by entering into a new arrangement concerning the subject matter of the contract at issue, if by the time that party had discovered the true conditions, the party has proceeded so far with plans and has so far obligated himself or herself that rescission would afford an inadequate remedy, that party may elect to complete the contract without waiving the right to claim damages for the fraud. The court pointed out that in electing to exercise the option, the plaintiffs were not entering into a new arrangement, but were merely exercising their right under the original contract. Moreover, before the escrow was closed, they had notified the defendant that they were not waiving any rights they might have respecting the misrepresentations. Accordingly, the court held that the plaintiffs had a right to affirm the contract and sue for damages instead of seeking rescission (122 Cal. App. 2d 30, 35) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.333

§ 105.333 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Request for Favor in Continuing Performance That Is Not Waiver

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE A[N ALLEGED] REQUEST BY PLAINTIFF FOR A FAVOR IN CONNECTION WITH THE CONTINUED PERFORMANCE OF THE CONTRACT, BECAUSE A MERE REQUEST FOR A FAVOR DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A WAIVER OF THE REQUESTING PARTY'S RIGHT TO CLAIM DAMAGES FOR FRAUD.

Mere Request for Favor in Continuing Performance Is Not Waiver. The mere making of a request for a favor in connection with the continued performance of a contract does not constitute a waiver of the requesting party's right to claim damages for fraud, and there is serious doubt whether even a granted request of a favor, such as an extension of time, should be held to constitute a waiver in the absence of estoppel or the making of a new agreement (Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 751, 192 P.2d 935).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The basis of this form is that the plaintiff's asking of a favor in connection with continued performance does not constitute a knowing waiver of the plaintiff's cause of action for fraud [see § 105.330[2][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.330[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.330[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mere Request for Favor in Continuing Performance Is Not Waiver

Bagdasarian v. Gragnon (1948) 31 Cal. 2d 744, 192 P.2d 935 , is discussed in § 105.332[3][b]. In ruling that it was unjust and unreasonable to hold that the defrauded party's mere asking of a favor should deprive an innocent person of rights arising from an unquestionably fraudulent act, the Supreme Court added, without deciding the issue, that there is serious doubt whether even a granted request of a favor, such as an extension of time, should be held to constitute a waiver in the absence of estoppel or the making of an agreement supported by new consideration (31 Cal. 2d 744, 751) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.334

§ 105.334 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows Modification of Contract That Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE A[N ALLEGED] _____ [REQUEST TO MODIFY CONTRACTUAL PROVISIONS or ACCEPTANCE OF A REQUEST TO MODIFY CONTRACTUAL PROVISIONS], BECAUSE SUCH A _____ [REQUEST or ACCEPTANCE] IS MERELY A FACTOR TO BE CONSIDERED IN DETERMINING WHETHER THERE WAS AN INTENT TO WAIVE FRAUD.

Modification of Contract Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud. There can be no waiver of fraud in the absence of intentional relinquishment of a known right, and requests for modifications of contractual provisions or the acceptance of those requests are merely factors to be considered in determining whether there was such an intent (Lawson v. Town & Country Shops, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 196, 200-201, 323 P.2d 843).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The basis of this form is that a modification of a contract is not necessarily a waiver of the plaintiff's cause of action for fraud [see § 105.330[2][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.330[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.330[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Modification of Contract Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

In Lawson v. Town & Country Shops, Inc. (1958) 159 Cal. App. 2d 196 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the plaintiffs in an action for damages for fraudulent misrepresentations inducing their execution of a lease, although the plaintiffs had remained on the leased premises for about 15 months after discovery of the fraud and had requested and received modifications of their obligations. The defendant argued that this indicated, as a matter of law, that the plaintiffs had waived and were estopped to rely on the alleged fraud. The court of appeal held that there can be no waiver in the absence of an intentional relinquishment of a known right and that requests for modifications of contractual provisions and even the acceptance of those requests are merely factors to be considered in determining whether or not the requisite intent was express or whether or not intent can be implied or inferred from the surrounding circumstances. The question of waiver, the court noted, is one of the facts on which the trial court must rule. It further noted that the question of whether delay renders it inequitable to grant relief from fraud is a question for the trial court's sound discretion (159 Cal. App. 2d 196, 200-201).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Modification of Contract Is Not Necessarily Waiver of Fraud

In Friedberg v. Weissbuch (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 287 P.2d 785 , the court of appeal affirmed judgment for the defendants in an action for damages for breach of a lease and purchase agreement in which the defendants had asserted a defense of fraud, holding that the defendants had not waived fraud by entering into a subsequent agreement with the plaintiffs for a reduction in the payments required by the original contract. The transaction involved the purchase of real and personal property, the goodwill of a medical practice, and the use of a trade name. The trial court rendered judgment for the defendants on the ground that the agreements were void because of the plaintiff's fraud. On appeal, the plaintiffs contended that the defendants had waived the fraud by entering into the subsequent agreement for the reduction of payments. The court of appeal stated that it did not agree with this contention. The subsequent agreement merely reduced the monthly payments required by the original contract and did not affect that contract's other provisions (135 Cal. App. 2d 750, 755-756) .

195 of 195 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 105 FRAUD AND DECEIT
PART II. FORMS
H. Defenses
2. Ratification or Waiver

10-105 California Points & Authorities § 105.335

§ 105.335 Bar by Ratification or Waiver Is Not Sufficiently Pleaded or Proven--Pleading or Proof Merely Shows New Agreement That Is Not Waiver Because Original Agreement Not Superseded

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities or adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF _____ [SHOULD PREVAIL ON THE or HAS STATED FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A] CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FRAUD AND DECEIT, DESPITE A[N ALLEGED] NEW AGREEMENT OR ENGAGEMENT, BECAUSE THE AGREEMENT OR ENGAGEMENT DID NOT RESULT IN A COMPROMISE AND ADJUSTMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S RIGHTS UNDER THE ORIGINAL CONTRACT, THEREBY SUPERSEDING THAT CONTRACT.

New Agreement Must Be With Defendant and Supersede Original Contract. A plaintiff only waives the right to seek damages for fraud if, after the plaintiff discovers the fraud, the plaintiff makes a new agreement or engagement with the other party to the original contract (the contract allegedly procured by the fraud of that party) and this new agreement or engagement results in a compromise and adjustment of the plaintiff's rights under the original contract, thereby superseding that contract (Smith v. Roach (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898-899, 126 Cal. Rptr. 29).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that the plaintiff or cross complainant has failed to establish a cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. The basis of this form is that a new agreement is not a waiver of the plaintiff's cause of action for fraud if it does not supersede the original agreement [see § 105.330[2][a]].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities in § 105.320 et seq.

This form should be included with other points and authorities, depending on the procedural context in which the issue is raised and on other substantive issues that may be involved [see § 105.330[2][a]].

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case [see § 105.330[2][b]].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] New Agreement Must Be With Defendant and Supersede Original Contract

Smith v. Roach (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 893, 126 Cal. Rptr. 29 , was an action for damages for fraud in connection with the sale of an apartment building to the plaintiffs. The trial court granted a nonsuit to the defendants based on the plaintiffs' opening statement, on the ground that the plaintiffs had waived damages for fraud by furnishing and renting the units in the building after they discovered the fraud. In reversing the judgment, the court of appeal stated the applicable general rule that if, after the plaintiff's knowledge of what the plaintiff claims to have been fraud, the plaintiff elects not to rescind but to adopt the contract and sue for damages, the plaintiff must stand toward the other party at arm's length and comply with the terms of the contract, the plaintiff must not offer to perform on conditions that the plaintiff has no right to exact, and the plaintiff must not make any new agreement respecting it the contract. Otherwise the plaintiff waives the alleged fraud. However, the court held that this rule applies only if, after the plaintiff discovers the fraud, the plaintiff makes a new agreement or engagement with the other party to the original contract (the contract allegedly procured by that party's fraud) and that new agreement or engagement results in a compromise and adjustment of the plaintiff's rights under the original contract, thereby superseding the original contract. The court found that the plaintiffs' opening statement did not show that they had entered into any new agreement or engagement with any of the defendants that altered or modified the terms of the original contract for purchase, but instead showed that the plaintiffs had continued to perform their contract by making the required payments for the building (53 Cal. App. 3d 893, 898-899) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP

10-106 California Points & Authorities 106.syn

§ 106.syn Synopsis to Chapter 106: GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP

§ 106.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 106.02 Governing Statutes

§ 106.03 Necessity of Supporting Memoranda

§ 106.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 106.05 Page Limits on Memoranda

§§ 106.06-106.19 [Reserved]

§ 106.20 Supporting Petition for Appointment of Guardian of Person and Estate of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Appointment of Guardian of Minor When Necessary or Convenient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Appointment of Minor When Necessary or Convenient

§ 106.21 Supporting Petition for Appointment of Guardian of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]--By Third Person Over Opposition of Parent [Fam. Code § 3041]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Attorney's Fees

[c] California Forms of Pleading and Practice

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Finding of Detriment to Child Required

[b] "Detriment to the Child" Includes Harm of Removal From Stable Placement

[c] Finding of Unfitness Not Required

[d] Allegation of Serious Abuse, Neglect, or Abandonment Not Required

[e] Balancing of Parent's Constitutionally Protected Interest in Opportunity to Form Relationship with Child Not Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Finding of Detriment to Child Required

[b] "Detriment to the Child" Includes Harm of Removal From Stable Placement

[c] Finding of Unfitness Not Required

§ 106.22 Supporting Petition for Order Regulating and Controlling the Disposition of the Person of the Ward [Prob. Code § 2102]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Authority to Control Guardian

[b] Court Authority to Grant Visitation Rights

§ 106.23 Supporting Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court From Proceeding With Guardianship Proceeding Where Prior Custody Award Has Been Made in Different Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Court Has Exclusive Jurisdiction

[b] California Court Must Stay Proceedings and Contact Out-of-State Court Having Pending Custody Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] First Court Has Exclusive Jurisdiction

[b] California Court Must Stay Proceedings and Contact Out-of-State Court Having Pending Custody Action

§ 106.24 Supporting Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court Sitting in Probate From Adjudicating Claim Against Stranger to Guardianship Proceeding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Jurisdiction Over Claim Against Stranger

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Jurisdiction Over Claim by Stranger

§ 106.25 Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)Supporting Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Minor Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

[b] Disaffirmation of Judgment by Minor if Guardian Not Appointed

[c] Use of Motion Is Proper

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Minor Required to Appear By Guardian Ad Litem

[b] Disaffirmation of Judgment by Minor if Guardian Not Appointed

[c] Use of Motion Is Proper

§ 106.26 Supporting Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent Person on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incompetent Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

[b] Vacation of Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Incompetent Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

[b] Vacation of Judgment

§ 106.27 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--To Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent Person on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem--Bar of Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

§ 106.28 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Order Approving Final Account as Res Judicata

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Approval of Final Account as Res Judicata

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Approval of Final Account as Res Judicata

§ 106.29 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian--Failure to Allege Judicial Finding Against Guardian

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity for Judicial Decree Establishing Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessity of Judicial Decree Establishing Liability

§ 106.30 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian or Conservator--Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations

§ 106.31 Opposing Petition for Appointment of Proposed Guardian of Person and Estate of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]--Guardian Not Suitable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proposed Guardian Is Unsuitable When He/She Is Unwilling to Obey Court Orders

§ 106.32 Opposing Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court Sitting in Probate From Adjudicating Claim in Guardianship Proceeding--Third Party in Privity With Estate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction of Probate Court

§ 106.33 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]--No Prejudice to Minor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Voidable

[b] Judgment Not Vacated If No Substantial Prejudice

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Not Vacated If No Substantial Prejudice

§ 106.34 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]-- Affirmation After Majority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Not Vacated if Affirmed

[b] Participation in Trial After Majority as Sufficient Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Participation in Trial After Majority as Sufficient Action

§ 106.35 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]--Third Party Acted in Good Faith Reliance on Validity of Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Voidable

[b] Innocent Purchaser Protected

§ 106.36 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Final Account Is Not Bar to Further Action When Guardian Accidentally or Fraudulently Concealed Assets on Account

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Final Account Not Bar

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Final Account Not Bar

§ 106.37 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Intermediate Account Not Bar to Further Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intermediate Account Not Bar

§ 106.38 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian or Conservator--Statute of Limitations [Prob. Code § 2333] Does Not Begin to Run Until Guardian or Conservator Is Discharged or Removed or Order Surcharging Guardian or Conservator Becomes Final

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Commences With Order of Removal or Order Surcharging Guardian

[b] Appeal of Removal Order Tolls Statute

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Commences With Order of Removal or Order Surcharging Guardian

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.01

§ 106.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 106.20, 106.21] and opposing [see § 106.31] petitions for appointment of guardians of minors. It also contains memoranda for use in supporting [see § 106.22] and opposing a petition for an order regulating and controlling the disposition of the person of the ward; in supporting [see §§ 106.23, 106.24] and opposing [see § 106.32] petitions for writs of prohibition to restrain the probate court from acting in excess of jurisdiction; and in supporting [see §§ 106.25, 106.26] and opposing [see §§ 106.33 -106.35] motions to set aside judgments because a minor or incompetent was not represented by a guardian ad litem. Finally, it contains memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 106.27 -106.30] and opposing [see §§ 106.36, 106.37, 106.39] demurrers to complaints by wards against guardians and sureties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansConservatorsAppointmentEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansGuardians for MinorsFamily LawGuardiansGeneral OverviewFamily LawGuardiansAppointment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.02

§ 106.02 Governing Statutes

The relationship of guardian and ward generally is governed by Prob. Code §§ 1500-1601, 2100-2893. The relationship of conservator and conservatee generally is governed by Prob. Code §§ 1800-1969, 2100-2893. The necessity for and the appointment of guardians ad litem is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 372-374.5. Sterilization of a ward or conservatee with a developmental disability is governed by Prob. Code §§ 1950, 1969.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansConservatorsGeneral OverviewEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansConservatorsAppointmentFamily LawGuardiansGeneral OverviewFamily LawGuardiansAppointment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.03

§ 106.03 Necessity of Supporting Memoranda

Most guardianship and conservatorship matters are handled by petitions which do not require memoranda. However, it is better practice to submit memoranda of points and authorities when a dispute may arise concerning the right to the relief requested in these petitions. This chapter contains memoranda for use in supporting and opposing petitions for the appointment of guardians of minors and a petition for an order regulating and controlling the disposition of the person of the ward. It also contains memoranda supporting and opposing petitions for writ of prohibition, demurrers, and a motion to set aside a judgment when such memoranda are required.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansGeneral OverviewFamily LawGuardiansGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.04

§ 106.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion and forms for petitions, orders, and complaints involving guardianships and conservatorships, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians , and Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators (Matthew Bender). For complaints and defenses in actions against sureties, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, andUndertakings (Matthew Bender). For complaints and defenses involving minors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors ; Ch. 365, Minors: Contract Actions ; and Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesBondsGeneral OverviewContracts LawFormationCapacity of PartiesAgeEstate, Gift & Trust LawConservators & GuardiansConservatorsAppointmentFamily LawFamily Relationships & TortsTort LiabilityChild TortsFamily LawGuardiansAppointment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.05

§ 106.05 Page Limits on Memoranda

A supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.113(d)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda 3.113, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeSupporting MemorandaGovernmentsCourtsRule Application & Interpretation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART I. INTRODUCTION

10-106 California Points & Authorities §§ 106.06-106.19

[Reserved]

§§ 106.06[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.20

§ 106.20 Supporting Petition for Appointment of Guardian of Person and Estate of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO
Guardianship of the	)	APPOINT GUARDIAN OF MINOR
_____ [Person and	)	Date: _____
Estate or Person or Estate] of	)	Time: _____
_____ [name],	)	Location: _____
a Minor.	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

IF APPOINTMENT OF A GUARDIAN IS NECESSARY OR CONVENIENT, THE COURT MUST GIVE CONSIDERATION TO THE PREFERENCE OF THE PROPOSED WARD IF THE PROPOSED WARD IS OF SUFFICIENT AGE TO FORM AN INTELLIGENT PREFERENCE AS TO THE PERSON TO BE APPOINTED AS GUARDIAN.

A. Appointment of Guardian of Minor When Necessary or Convenient. On hearing of the petition, the court may appoint a guardian of the person or estate of the proposed ward, or both, if it appears necessary or convenient (Prob. Code § 1514(a); Guardianship of Kentera (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 639, 642-643, 262 P.2d 317 ; Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781)).

B. Court Must Consider Preference of Proposed Ward. If the appointment of a guardian is necessary or convenient, the court must consider and give due weight to the preference of the proposed ward if the proposed ward is of sufficient age to form an intelligent preference as to the person to be appointed as guardian (Prob. Code § 1514(b), (e)(2); Fam. Code § 3042).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for the appointment of a guardian of a minor when the proposed ward is of sufficient age to form an intelligent preference as to the person to be appointed as guardian [see Prob. Code § 1514; Fam. Code § 3042].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For the Judicial Council Form petition for appointment of a guardian of a minor, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.110 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Appointment of Guardian of Minor When Necessary or Convenient

In Guardianship of Kentera (1953) 41 Cal. 2d 639, 262 P.2d 317 , a minor of more than 14 years filed a petition to have his paternal grandmother appointed guardian of his person. The petition was denied. The minor resided with his mother, stepfather, and stepbrothers, and the trial court ruled that the appointment of a guardian was not necessary or convenient because the minor had no property and had a suitable home with his mother. The Supreme Court affirmed. It held that former Prob. Code § 1406 [see now Prob. Code § 1514] required that the court must first find that the appointment of a guardian was necessary and convenient and only after such a finding did the minor have the right to have his nominee appointed. The Court also found that there was ample evidence to support the finding that the appointment of a guardian for the minor was not necessary or convenient (41 Cal. 2d 639, 642-643) .

In Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781 , the trial court appointed nonparents as the guardians of a mentally retarded teenager over the objections of his parents. The parents had placed their son in institutions caring for the mentally retarded since birth, and he had formed a close emotional and psychological bond with the petitioners, who worked as volunteers at the institution where he resided. In upholding the trial court's order, the appellate court held that the finding that parental custody was detrimental to the child was supported by evidence of the profound emotional harm that would result if the parents retained custody and prevented the child from continuing his regular visits with the petitioners and their children at their home. The finding of detriment was also supported by evidence that the parents had consciously avoided emotional attachment to their son, that he would experience educational and developmental injury if he remained in his parents' custody because they did not encourage the development of independent living skills, and by a reasonable inference that the parents' past conduct reflected a dangerously passive approach to his medical care (139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 422-423) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Appointment of Minor When Necessary or Convenient

In Guardianship of Kirkman (1914) 168 Cal. 688, 144 P. 745 , a case decided under the law in effect before January 1, 1981, a minor who was over 14 years of age petitioned for the appointment of a guardian to replace the guardian of his estate. The petition was denied. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that it was necessary and convenient to appoint a guardian because the minor had property (168 Cal. 688, 688) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.21

§ 106.21 Supporting Petition for Appointment of Guardian of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]--By Third Person Over Opposition of Parent [Fam. Code § 3041]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.20.]

AN AWARD OF CUSTODY TO A THIRD PERSON OVER A PARENT'S OBJECTION IS PROPER IF THE COURT FINDS THAT AN AWARD TO THE PARENT WOULD BE DETRIMENTAL TO THE CHILD AND THE AWARD TO THE THIRD PERSON IS IN THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILD. NO FINDING OF PARENTAL UNFITNESS IS REQUIRED AND NO ALLEGATION OF SERIOUS ABUSE, NEGLECT, OR ABANDONMENT IS REQUIRED. FURTHER, NO BALANCING OF A PARENT'S CONSTITUTIONALLY PROTECTED INTEREST IN AN OPPORTUNITY TO FORM A RELATIONSHIP WITH THE CHILD IS REQUIRED.

A. Finding of Detriment to Child Required. Before the court makes any order awarding custody to a person or persons other than a parent, over a parent's objection, it must find that an award of custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and the award to a third person is required to serve the best interestsof the child (Fam. Code § 3041(a); Guardianship of Z.C.W. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48).

B. "Detriment to the Child" Includes Harm of Removal From Stable Placement. "Detriment to the child" includes the harm of removal from a stable placement of a child with a person who has assumed, on a day-to-day basis, the role of his or her parent, fulfilling both the child's physical needs and the child's psychological needs for care and affection, and who has assumed that role for a substantial period of time. Moreover, if the court finds by a preponderance of the evidence that the person to whom custody may be given is a person described in the preceding sentence, this finding constitutes a finding that the custody is in the best interest of the child and that parental custody would be detrimental to the child absent a showing by a preponderance of the evidence to the contrary. A finding by clear and convincing evidence is not required (Fam. Code § 3041(b), (c), (d)).

C. Finding of Unfitness Not Required. The effect of Family Code Section 3041 is that a third person may be appointed guardian over the objections of a parent without a finding that the parent is unfit or has abandoned the child. The detriment test focuses on the needs of the child rather than the character of the parent (In re G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 694-698, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 ; Guardianship of Zachary H. (1999) 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 7 ; Guardianship of Simpson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 914, 921, 932-933 ; 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 ; Guardianship of Kassandra H. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1239-1240, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 668).

D. Allegation of Serious Abuse, Neglect, or Abandonment Not Required. Neither Probate Code Section 1514(b) nor Family Code Section 3041 requires an allegation of serious abuse, neglect, or abandonment by the parent to sustain an allegation that parental custody is detrimental to the child (Guardianship of Oliva J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1155-1161).

E. Balancing of Parent's Constitutionally Protected Interest in Opportunity to Form Relationship with Child Not Required. If a court finds that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental and granting custody to a nonparent would be in the child's best interests, the court may grant custody to the nonparent without further balancing the parent's constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with the child (Adoption of Danielle G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1408, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for guardianship by a third person when a parent is expected to object to the appointment.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Attorney's Fees

If a family law proceeding relating to custody of the minor is pending, the guardianship proceeding may be consolidated with the family law proceeding and the guardianship petitioner may thereby be required to pay attorney's fees under Fam. Code § 270 [Guardianship of Paduano (1989) 215 Cal. App. 3d 346, 350-352, 263 Cal. Rptr. 589] . For discussion and forms relating to motions for attorney's fees in family law proceedings, see California Family Law Trial Guide, Ch. 3, Pendente Lite Orders, §§ 3.50 -3.56, and Ch. 34, Trial of Attorney's Fees and Costs (Matthew Bender).

[c] California Forms of Pleading and Practice

For the Judicial Council Form petition for appointment of a guardian of a minor, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians, § 280.110 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Finding of Detriment to Child Required

Fam. Code § 3041(a) requires that before making an order granting custody to a person or persons other than a parent, over the objection of a parent, the court must make a finding that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child and that granting custody to the nonparent is required to serve the best interest of the child. Allegations that parental custody would be detrimental to the child, other than a statement of that ultimate fact, are not permitted to appear in the pleadings. The court, in its discretion, may exclude the public from the hearing on this issue. Counsel should note that whether or not granting custody to a parent would be detrimental to the child ordinarily must be supported by clear and convincing evidence, except as noted in § 106.21[3][b] [see Fam. Code § 3041(b)-(e)].

In Guardianship of Z.C.W. (1999) 71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 84 Cal. Rptr. 2d 48 , a petition for guardianship was filed by a woman seeking visitation rights withtwo children with whom she had previously lived during a lesbian relationship she had with their mother. The trial court denied the petition finding that there was no evidence of any detriment of significance to the children if they remained with their mother without visitation with the petitioner (71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527). The court of appeal affirmed, noting that a finding that an award of custody to the parents would be detrimental to the child is essential before a court may make an order granting custody to a nonparent, and in this case there was no such evidence (71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527). The court also noted that there is no statutory authority for a limited guardianship providing for visitation rights to a nonparent (71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 527). Finally, the court concluded that the petitioner could not be granted visitation rights as a de facto parent over the objection of the biological parent, in the absence of any showing of detriment to the child (71 Cal. App. 4th 524, 528).

Note, however, that since Guardianship of Z.C.W was decided, the California Supreme Court has recognized in a number of cases that a child may have two mothers. In Sharon S. v. Superior Court (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 417, 2 Cal. Rptr. 3d 699, 73 P.3d 554 , the court upheld a "second parent" adoption in which the mother of a child conceived by artificial insemination consented to the child's adoption by the mother's lesbian partner. In Elisa B. v. Superior Court (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 108, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 46, 117 P.3d 660 , the Court held that, under the Uniform Parentage Act, a woman may be a presumed mother of a child of her lesbian partner if they agree to raise the child together, she receives the child into her home, and she holds the child out as her natural child. In K.M. v. E.G. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 130, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 61, 117 P.3d 673 , the Court held that when a woman provides ova to her lesbian partner so that the partner can bear a child who will be raised in their joint home, both women are considered to be the child's parents. In Kristine H. v. Lisa R. (2005) 37 Cal. 4th 156, 33 Cal. Rptr. 3d 81, 117 P.3d 690 , the Court held that the lesbian mother of a child was estopped from challenging the validity of a stipulated judgment declaring that she and her lesbian partner were the child's parents.

In Guardianship of Pankey (1974) 38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 113 Cal. Rptr. 858 , a petition by a relative to be appointed guardian was opposed by the child's grandmother to protect the custodial rights of the child's father who did not appear. The petition for guardianship was granted. Evidence was presented at the hearing of the father's unfitness and abandonment of the children. On the grandmother's appeal, the court of appeal upheld the trial court. It first held that the grandmother had standing to appeal. It then reviewed the evidence and stated that it was of questionable sufficiency to show unfitness or abandonment. The court stated, however, that a finding of unfitness is not necessary to award custody to a third person because former Civ. Code § 4600 (now see Fam. Code § 3041) only requires a finding that the award to a parent would be detrimental to the child and the award to a nonparent would be in the child's best interests. Moreover, the court held that an express finding of detriment to the child was not necessary in this case because the father did not appear. The court found that the evidence was sufficient to show the necessity and convenience of appointment of a nonparent guardian because the parent did not appear and request custody and, therefore, that the relative was a proper person to be appointed guardian (38 Cal. App. 3d 919, 934-935) .

[b] "Detriment to the Child" Includes Harm of Removal From Stable Placement

Fam. Code § 3041(c) provides that "detriment to the child" includes the harm of removal from a stable placement of a child with a person who has assumed, on a day-to-day basis, the role of his or her parent, fulfilling both the child's physical needs and the child's psychological needs for care and affection, and who has assumed that role for a substantial period of time. Fam. Code § 3041(d) provides that finding by a preponderance of the evidence that a person is one described above constitutes a finding that custody by that person is in the child's best interest, and that parental custody would be detrimental to the child, unless a preponderance of the evidence supports a contrary result. Fam. Code § 3041(c) clarifies that the preceding requirement constitutes an exception to the general requirement that a finding that parental custody would be detrimental to the child must be supported by clear and convincing evidence. Note that if the child is an Indian child, before making an order granting custody to a person or persons other than a parent over the objection of a parent, the court is required to apply special evidentiary standards, and placement preferences and standards, specified in the federal Indian Child Welfare Act [see 25 U.S.C. §§ 1912 (d), (e), (f) (evidentiary standards), 1922 (placement)] and California law [Fam. Code § 3041(e); see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 224.6, 361.7 (evidentiary standards), 361.31 (placement)].

[c] Finding of Unfitness Not Required

In Guardianship of Zachary H. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 51, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 7 , the court rejected a father's contention that the federal Constitution embodies a parental preference doctrine that requires a showing of parental unfitness before a nonparent may be appointed as guardian of a child (73 Cal. App. 4th 51, 61-62) .

In Guardianship of Simpson (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 914, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 389 , the court noted that when a parent seeks to terminate a guardianship under Prob. Code § 1601, the parent has the burden of showing sufficient overall fitness to justify the termination. In this case, the trial court erroneously put the burden on the guardians to prove by clear and convincing evidence that it was detrimental to the children to be returned to their father (67 Cal. App. 4th 914, 921, 932-933) .

In Guardianship of Kassandra H. (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 75 Cal. Rptr. 2d 668 , the court held that the "no longer necessary" language of Prob. Code § 1601 requires a showing of overall fitness on the part of the natural parentseeking to end the guardianship sufficient to overcome the inherent trauma of removing a successful caregiver as the child's guardian (64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1239-1240) . The overall moral fitness of the parent must be evaluated, not just the isolated aspects of the parent's life that led to the guardianship (64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1238) . In this case, the court found that although the child's father who was seeking termination of the guardianship had overcome his drinking problem,which had led to the guardianship, he had not bothered with any of the logistical details of parenthood, i.e., arranging appropriate housing, day care, school enrollment, and medical care, and more importantly had not developed a strong bond with his child that would overcome the upheaval of terminating the guardianship. Thus, the court concluded, he had not presented a picture of overall fitness sufficient to overcome the inherent trauma of a change of custody (64 Cal. App. 4th 1228, 1241) .

[d] Allegation of Serious Abuse, Neglect, or Abandonment Not Required

In Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 , the trial court dismissed a petition for guardianship of a child born while the petitioner was a domestic partner of the child's mother. The petition alleged that parental custody would be detrimental to the child under Fam. Code § 3041, but did not allege serious abuse, neglect, or abandonment by the parent. The court dismissed the petition on the ground that, since the petitioner was not a parent of the child, in the absence of an allegation of abuse, neglect, or abandonment, the petitioner could not, as a matter of law, establish that parental custody was detrimental to the child. The court of appeal reversed, holding that neither Probate Code § 1514(b) (appointment of guardians generally) nor Family Code § 3041 (formerly Civ. Code § 4600) requires an allegation of serious abuse, neglect, or abandonment by the parent to sustain an allegation that parental custody is detrimental to the child. In addition, because the loss of a relationship with a nonparent may be a factor supporting a finding of detriment, the court of appeal remanded the case for further proceedings (84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1155-1161) .

[e] Balancing of Parent's Constitutionally Protected Interest in Opportunity to Form Relationship with Child Not Required

In Adoption of Danielle G. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 341 , a child of unwed parents was placed for adoption by the mother, but the father filed a paternity petition. In response, the adoption agency filed a petition to terminate the father's parental rights. The trial court ruled that since the father had a constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with his child, the adoption could not proceed without his consent. The proposed adoptive parents instead filed a guardianship petition. The trial court found that it would be detrimental to the child to grant either parent custody, and that it would be in the child's best interests to grant custody to the couple with whom the child had been placed. Nevertheless, the court ruled that the father's constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with the child compelled it to balance the detriment to the child against the preference for placement with a biological parent. As a result, the trial court denied the guardianship petition and granted temporary custody to the biological mother.

The court of appeal stated that if a court finds that granting custody to a parent would be detrimental and granting custody to a nonparent would be in the child's best interests, the court may grant custody to the nonparent without further balancing the parent's constitutionally protected interest in an opportunity to form a relationship with the child. Thus, the court reversed the trial court's decision, ruling that the guardianship petition should have been decided according to the standards set forth in Fam. Code § 3041, and remanded the case with directions to grant the guardianship petition (87 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1408) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Finding of Detriment to Child Required

In Stanley v. Illinois (1972) 405 U.S. 645, 92 S. Ct. 1208, 31 L. Ed. 2d 551 , the United States Supreme Court held that the authority of a probate court to appoint a guardian for a minor is limited by the constitutional right of parents to have custody of their children (405 U.S. 645, 649-659) .

In Troxel v. Granville (2000) 530 U.S. 57, 120 S. Ct. 2054, 147 L. Ed. 2d 49 , the United States Supreme Court invalidated a state statute authorizing any person to petition for visitation rights at any time, and providing that court may order visitation if it serves the child's best interests, on the grounds that the statute violates parents' right to substantive due process (530 U.S. 57, 70-74) . The statute accorded no deference to a parent's decision that visitation would not be in child's best interest, and imposed a burden on the parent of disproving that visitation with the nonparent would be in child's best interest (530 U.S. 57, 63) .

In Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 , discussed in § 106.21[3][d], the court held that the requirement of Fam. Code § 3041(a) that a nonparent may not be awarded custody of a child over a parent's objection unless the court finds that parental custody would be detrimental to the child and the award to a nonparent is required to serve the child's best interests, applies to guardianship proceedings under Prob. Code § 1514(b). The court also noted that by enacting Fam. Code § 3041, the legislature changed the focus of a custody dispute between a parent and a nonparent from the unfitness of the parent to the detriment of the child. The legislature did not, however, intend to disturb the judicial practice of awarding custody or guardianship to nonparents in preference to parents only in unusual and extreme cases (84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1153) . The court also held that the question of whether parental custody is detrimental to the child is highly dependent on the facts that are unique to eachchild and parent (84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1157) .

In Guardianship of Kaylee J. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662 , discussed in § 106.22[3][b], the court observed that a court in a probate guardianship proceeding faces a difficult decision concerning the child's best interest in ruling on a contested guardianship petition arising from the placement of a child with a nonparent. The court stated that in determining such a case, a court must look to all of the circumstances bearing on the child's best interests, including the child's emotional well-being and need for continuity and stability in relationships and care (55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1433) .

In Guardianship of Phillip B. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 188 Cal. Rptr. 781 , the trial court granted to a nonparent couple the guardianship of an institutionalized child with Down's Syndrome. The parents appealed the trial court's order on the ground of insufficiency of evidence. The court of appeal affirmed. It held that in a guardianship proceeding, an award of custody to nonparents must be based on a finding that awarding custody to the parents would be detrimental to the child, and that the award to a nonparent is required to serve the best interests of the child (139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 419). In this case, there was sufficient evidence to support such findings, since the parents failed to make any contact with the child or maintain any relationship with him, and refused to permit him to be trained or educated, to have contact with the couple he had become attached to, or to have medical treatment for his heart condition (139 Cal. App. 3d 407, 421-424) .

[b] "Detriment to the Child" Includes Harm of Removal From Stable Placement

In Guardianship of Olivia J. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1159, 101 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 , discussed in § 106.21[3][d], the court held that the loss of a relationship with a nonparent who has acted as a de facto or psychological parent is a factor the court may consider in determining whether parental custody is detrimental to the child (84 Cal. App. 4th 1146, 1159) .

[c] Finding of Unfitness Not Required

In Guardianship of Marino (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 952, 106 Cal. Rptr. 655 , a child's aunt and uncle petitioned to be appointed guardian of a child that they had raised since he was an infant. The petition was opposed by the child's father who had originally placed the child with the aunt and uncle, had seen little of the child until he was six, and then had begun to visit the child. The child preferred to live with his aunt and uncle and was upset at the idea of living with his father. The trial court granted the petition of the aunt and uncle based on its finding that the award of custody to the aunt and uncle was in the best interests of the child. The court of appeal upheld the trial court. It held that a finding that a parent was unfit was no longer necessary as a prerequisite to the award of custody to a nonparent based on former Civ. Code § 4600 (now see Fam. Code § 3041). It held that an express finding that an award to the parent would be detrimental to the child, however, was required and had not been made. Nevertheless, it concluded that, in finding that the award to the aunt and uncle was in the best interests of the child, the trial court had actually also found that an award to the father would be detrimental and amended the findings of fact to include that finding.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.22

§ 106.22 Supporting Petition for Order Regulating and Controlling the Disposition of the Person of the Ward [Prob. Code § 2102]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
Guardianship of the	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF PETITION
_____ [Person and	)	FOR ORDER REGULATING DISPOSITION OF
Estate or Person or Estate] of	)	PERSON OF WARD
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
a[n] _____ [Minor or	)	Time: _____
Incompetent Person].	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

ON THE PETITION OF AN INTERESTED PERSON, A COURT HAS AUTHORITY TO MAKE ORDERS CONTROLLING THE DISPOSITION OF THE PERSON OF THE WARD.

A. Court Authority to Control Guardian. In the management and disposition of the person committed to him/her, a guardian may be regulated and controlled by the court (Prob. Code § 2102).

B. Order With Regard to Care or Custody. On the petition of an interested person, the probate court has the authority to make orders regulating and controlling the guardian's actions with regard to the care or custody of the ward (Guardianship of Reynolds (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 669, 673-677, 141 P.2d 498).

C. Court Authority to Grant Visitation Rights. The court has the continuing authority to grant visitation rights in a probate guardianship proceeding (Guardianship of Kaylee J. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1431, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for an order regulating or controlling the actions of a guardian with regard to the care or custody of a ward.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to support a conservatorship petition for an order regulating and controlling the disposition of the person of a conservatee [see Prob. Code § 2102].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for instructions regarding the person of a ward, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians and Ch. 285, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Care of Ward or Conservatee (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Authority to Control Guardian

Guardianship of Reynolds (1943) 60 Cal. App. 2d 669, 141 P.2d 498 , was a petition by maternal grandparents for visitation rights with their grandson, whose guardian was the paternal grandfather. The court granted the petition. On the grandfather's appeal, the court of appeal held that the probate court had authority to make such a visitation order on the petition of an interested person over the objections of the guardian based on its statutory authority under former Prob. Code § 1400 (now see Prob. Code § 2102, to regulate and control the guardian in the management and disposition of the person of the ward. It also held that the court did not abuse its discretion in awarding such visitation rights and upheld the grant of the petition (60 Cal. App. 2d 669, 673-677) .

[b] Court Authority to Grant Visitation Rights

In Guardianship of Kaylee J. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 662 , the court noted that when a court appoints a nonparent as guardian of the person of a child (in this case, the child's stepgrandfather), the authority of the parent ceases under Fam. Code § 7505(a). The guardian, not the parent, has the care, custody, and control of the child in accordance with Prob. Code § 2351. However, the guardian is subject to the regulation and control of the court in the performance of the duties of guardian (Prob. Code § 2102). The court has the continuing authority to grant visitation rights (in this case, to the child's mother) in a probate guardianship proceeding (55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1431) . A guardian in a probate proceeding may be ordered to accommodate reasonable requests for visitation and contact with the child's parents or other persons as may be in the child's best interests. The frequency, duration, and nature of the visits are within the court's discretion. However, once a permanent guardianship is established and a nonparent guardian is appointed in a probate proceeding, the court does not have the authority to take steps to return custody to a parent unless and until a proper petition for termination of the guardianship of the person under Prob. Code § 1601 is before the court. Court-ordered visitation cannot be so extensive that it undercuts the probate guardianship (55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1432) . In addition, the court may not order reunification services in a probate guardianship proceeding. Reunification services only apply in juvenile court dependency proceedings (55 Cal. App. 4th 1425, 1431-1433) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.23

§ 106.23 Supporting Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court From Proceeding With Guardianship Proceeding Where Prior Custody Award Has Been Made in Different Court

[1] FORM

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DIVISION
[DIVISION _____]

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF PROHIBITION
vs.	)
THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE COUNTY OF _____	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION MAY BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN A SUPERIOR COURT FROM PROCEEDING WITH A GUARDIANSHIP PROCEEDING WHERE THERE IS A VALID PRIOR CUSTODY AWARD FROM ANOTHER COURT.

A. Use of Writ of Prohibition to Arrest Proceedings in Excess of Jurisdiction. The writ of prohibition arrests the proceedings of any tribunal exercising judicial functions, when the proceedings are without or in excess of the jurisdiction of such tribunal (Code Civ. Proc. § 1102). It may be issued by any court to an inferior tribunal in all cases in which there is not a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy in the ordinary course of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 1103).

B. No Adequate Remedy at Law. There is no adequate remedy at law when a court intends to proceed with a guardianship proceeding despite a valid prior custody award in a different court (Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 310, 231 P.2d 821).

C. First Court Has Exclusive Jurisdiction. A court is without jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person of a child when there is a valid prior custody award in a divorce proceeding in another superior court (Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 310-312, 231 P.2d 821).

[Optional] D. California Court Must Stay Proceedings and Contact Out-of-State Court Having Pending Custody Action. If the California court is informed during the course of the proceeding that a proceeding concerning the child custody was pending in another state before the California court assumed jurisdiction, the California court must stay the proceeding and communicate with the foreign state's court, so that the issue may be litigated in the more appropriate forum (Fam. Code § 3406(c); see Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 491-493, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for writ of prohibition to restrain a court from proceeding with a guardianship proceeding where there is a valid prior custody award from a different court. Optional Paragraph D may be used if an out-of-state court first assumed jurisdiction over custody of the minor in accordance with the provisions of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.) and the California court has refused to stay its own proceedings in the face of the other court's action.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For petitions for writs of prohibition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda supporting writs of prohibition, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] First Court Has Exclusive Jurisdiction

Greene v. Superior Court (1951) 37 Cal. 2d 307, 231 P.2d 821 , was a proceeding to obtain a writ of prohibition in the Supreme Court. The writ was sought to arrest the proceedings in the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco to appoint the mother of her children as guardian of their persons. There was a valid prior custody award entered in a divorce proceeding in the Superior Court of Santa Barbara County; that award gave custody to the mother but allowed the father visitation rights for four months a year. In the guardianship proceeding, the mother sought to restrict the visitation rights to one month a year. The father objected to the jurisdiction in San Francisco and, when that objection was denied, petitioned for the writ of prohibition. The Supreme Court first held that the father's remedy at law of appeal was not adequate or speedy. It then held that the court which first obtained jurisdiction over the custody of the minors had exclusive jurisdiction over their custody, that the court in San Francisco did not have jurisdiction to appoint a guardian of the person of the minors, and that any modification of the custody would have to be made in Santa Barbara. Therefore, it issued a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court in San Francisco from proceeding with the guardianship proceedings (37 Cal. 2d 307, 310).

[b] California Court Must Stay Proceedings and Contact Out-of-State Court Having Pending Custody Action

Guardianship of Donaldson (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 223 Cal. Rptr. 707 , was a California proceeding brought by the paternal aunt of two children. Prior to the father's death, he obtained his children's sole custody in marital dissolution proceedings. After his death, a county protective services agency informally placed the children with the aunt. However, their mother made arrangements for them to live in Illinois with her parents. The grandparents took the children to Illinois during visitation. Both the aunt and the grandparents petitioned for guardianship. In the aunt's guardianship proceeding, the grandmother filed a motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. At the hearing on this motion, the mother's attorney informed the court that the mother had executed an "Entry of Appearance, Waiver of [Service of] Summons, and Waiver of Notice" in the grandparents' Illinois proceeding. The California court ruled that it had subject matter jurisdiction and stated that the matter would be set for a contested hearing. At this hearing, the mother's attorney advised the court that the Illinois court had appointed the grandparents as co-guardians of the children a few days before. The trial court proceeded with the hearing and stated that it thought that California had superior jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act (UCCJA-- former Civ. Code §§ 5150-5174 (now see Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.). It appointed the aunt as guardian and the mother appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order appointing the aunt as guardian. It concluded that the UCCJA applies to guardianship proceedings and that the trial court failed to comply with the UCCJA. Specifically, reversal was required by the trial court's failure to contact the Illinois court to determine the more appropriate forum, as provided by the UCCJA. California properly assumed "home state" jurisdiction under former Civ. Code § 5152(1)(a) (now see Fam. Code § 3403) and Illinois properly assumed "significant connection" jurisdiction under former Civ. Code § 5152(1)(b). However, two courts may not exercise jurisdiction concurrently and when a trial court is informed of an action pending in another state, it is required to resolve the jurisdictional conflict by direct communication with the other state court to determine the most appropriate forum, under former Civ. Code § 5155(3) (now see Fam. Code § 3406). In this case, the trial court made no effort to contact the Illinois court, failed to seek information concerning the grandparents in Illinois, determined that it had jurisdiction, and set the case for a contested hearing. Furthermore, the trial court should have sought the Illinois court's cooperation in obtaining relevant evidence pursuant to the former Civ. Code § 5168. The failure to do so resulted in a custody determination based on inadequate information (178 Cal. App. 3d 477, 491-493) . Note that the provisions of the UCCJA discussed by the court, former Civ. Code §§ 5152, 5155, and 5168, are now set forth in Fam. Code §§ 3403, 3406, and 3420, respectively.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] First Court Has Exclusive Jurisdiction

Browne v. Superior Court (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 593, 107 P.2d 1, 131 ALR 276 , was a proceeding to obtain a writ of prohibition in the Supreme Court. The writ was sought to restrain habeas corpus proceedings in the Superior Court of the City and County of San Francisco which were brought to release an incompetent person from restraint by her guardian in a rest home. The guardian had been appointed in Santa Barbara County and the ward was confined to the rest home under an order from that court. The court held that the Santa Barbara court had exclusive jurisdiction over the custody of the ward and issued a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court in San Francisco from proceeding with the habeas corpus proceeding.

[b] California Court Must Stay Proceedings and Contact Out-of-State Court Having Pending Custody Action

In Guardianship of Ariana K. (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 817 , a child's grandmother and aunt filed separate petitions for temporary guardianship and appointment of a guardian for the child following her mother's death. They subsequently entered into a conciliation court agreement with the child's father, which gave the father primary custody of the child and visitationrights to the grandmother and aunt. Four years later, the grandmother and aunt filed an ex parte application for temporary guardianship of the child, alleging that they had become the child's primary caretakers, that the father did not participate in any of the child's activities and did not provide any financial support for the child, and that the father had taken the child to Greece and refused to return her to California. At the hearing on the petitioners' subsequent petition for permanent guardianship of the child, the court held that it had subject matter jurisdiction over the proceedings based on its original assertion of jurisdiction over the matter four years before. It ordered the father to return the child to California and to deliver her to the petitioners, who were required to bring the child to court for a hearing on the guardianship petition. The father brought the child back from Greece, and all parties appeared at the hearing. The court ordered that physical custody of the child was to be shared equally between the parties at two-week intervals and that the child was not to be taken from California. Two weeks later, the grandmother and aunt filed an application to modify the existing custody order and to grant them sole legal and physical custody and guardianship based on the father's removal of the child to Greece. At the hearing on the application, the court awarded the applicants sole legal and physical custody of the child, ordered the father to return her to California, and issued letters of guardianship to the applicants (120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 699-700) .

The father appealed from the order, arguing that the court had no subject matter jurisdiction over the guardianship proceedings because of the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act [Fam. Code § 3400 et seq.] and the Hague Convention on the Civil Aspects of International Child Abduction [42 U.S.C. § 11601 et seq.] The appellate court found that there was no merit to the father's argument that the trial court did not have subject matter jurisdiction. It noted that the UCCJEA governs custody matters, which include guardianship proceedings, and that the UCCJEA is the exclusive method of determining subject matter jurisdiction in California custody cases, including international custody disputes [Fam. Code § 3421] The trial court had subject matter jurisdiction over the original guardianship proceeding, as provided by the UCCJEA, because California was the child's home state and she had lived in California for at least six months before the petition was filed [Fam. Code §§ 3402(g), 3421(a)(1)] Once the trial court acquired jurisdiction, it continued to retain the authority to adjudicate the custody and visitation disputes between the parties in the proceedings filed four years later. By the time the father took the child to Greece, the trial court had exercised its jurisdiction under the UCCJEA [Fam. Code § 3402(c)] by making an order provided for shared custody and explicitly ordering the parties not to take the child from California (120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 704) .

The appellate court also rejected the father's assertion that the potential remedies available to the grandmother and the aunt under the Hague Convention prevented the trial court from ruling on the guardianship petitions. It noted the two primary objects of the Hague Convention: (1) to secure the return of a wrongfully removed child who is retained in a nation that is a signatory to the treaty; and (2) to insure that custody and visitation rights under the law of treaty signatories are respected by other parties to the Hague Convention. It also noted that a judicially expressed purpose of the Hague Convention is to deter a parent from fleeing to another jurisdiction in search of a more favorable decision. It concluded that the existence of the Hague Convention process for obtaining the return of a child from a country that is a treaty signatory did not deprive the trial court of subject matter jurisdiction, because California retains the authority to conduct guardianship proceedings. The remedies provided by the Convention are in addition to remedies available under other laws [42 U.S.C. § 11603(h)] (120 Cal. App. 4th 690, 707) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.24

§ 106.24 Supporting Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court Sitting in Probate From Adjudicating Claim Against Stranger to Guardianship Proceeding

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.23.]

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION MAY BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN A SUPERIOR COURT SITTING IN PROBATE FROM ADJUDICATING A CLAIM BETWEEN A GUARDIANSHIP ESTATE AND A STRANGER TO THE ESTATE.

A. Use of Writ of Prohibition to Arrest Proceedings in Excess of Jurisdiction. [See § 106.23, Paragraph A.]

B. No Jurisdiction Over Claim Against Stranger. A superior court sitting in probate does not have jurisdiction to decide a disputed claim between a guardianship estate and a stranger to the estate (Central Bank v. Superior Court (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 10, 285 P.2d 906).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition for writof prohibition to restrain a court sitting in probate from proceeding with hearing a claim against a stranger to the estate.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications this form can be adapted to support a petition for a writ of prohibition to restrain a superior court from hearing a claim against a stranger to a conservatorship proceeding.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for petitions for writs of prohibition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For forms for memoranda supporting writs of prohibition, see Ch. 150, Mandate and Prohibition .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Jurisdiction Over Claim Against Stranger

Central Bank v. Superior Court (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 10, 285 P.2d 906 , was a guardianship proceeding in which the guardian claimed that a bank had improperly paid guardianship funds to the guardian personally and, therefore, was liable to the estate for the funds. The bank was cited, appeared, and, when the court indicated it was going to rule that the bank had notice of the trust and was, therefore, liable, applied for a writ of prohibition. The Supreme Court granted the writ. It held that a superior court sitting in probate is without jurisdiction to decide a disputed claim between an estate and a stranger thereto. Such a claim must be litigated in an independent action between the parties in the proper court of general jurisdiction.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Jurisdiction Over Claim by Stranger

In Stevenson v. Superior Court (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 904, 88 Cal. Rptr. 462 , a creditor petitioned for an order requiring the payment of a debt by a conservator. The conservator objected on the basis that the court lacked jurisdiction to determine the validity of the claim that the conservator had rejected. When the court overruled the objection and began to hear the claim, the conservator petitioned for a writ of prohibition. The court of appeal granted the writ. It held that the superior court sitting in probate did not have jurisdiction to determine the validity of an indebtedness rejected by the conservator and that the validity of the claim must be determined in an independent proceeding. The court held that the provisions of former Prob. Code § 1859 (now see Prob. Code § 2404), which permit a creditor to petition to have a debt paid, apply only after the validity of the debt has been established in an independent proceeding and the conservator refuses to pay the debt.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.25

§ 106.25 Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)Supporting Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO VACATE )	JUDGMENT
	)

_____

ON THE MOTION OF A MINOR, A JUDGMENT AGAINST THE MINOR WHO WAS NOT REPRESENTED BY A GUARDIAN AD LITEM MAY BE VACATED.

A. Minor Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem. When a minor is a party to an action, he/she must appear either by a guardian of the estate or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending (Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)). The limited statutory exceptions to the foregoing requirement [see Code Civ. Proc. § 372(b)(1)] do not apply to this action.

B. Disaffirmation of Judgment by Minor if Guardian Not Appointed. A judgment against a minor for whom the court failed to appoint a guardian ad litem is voidable by the minor on reaching majority (In re Charles T. (2002),).

C. Use of Motion Is Proper. When the court that rendered the judgment possesses general jurisdiction in law and equity, a judgment obtained against an incompetent or minor without appointment of a guardian ad litem can be vacated on motion in the court that entered the judgment as well as by independent action (see Olivera v. Grace (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 570, 575-576, 122 P.2d 564).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a petition to vacate a judgment against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If necessary, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion, including a declaration by the moving party that there is a valid defense to the action.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, and discussion of the qualification and powers of guardian ad litem see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Minor Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

Civ. Code § 372(a) requires that minors must appear in an action through a guardian ad litem. The limited exceptions to this rule are listed in Code Civ. Proc. § 372(b)(1)], which provides that only in proceedings for injunction or temporary restraining orders against harassment or violence, or for protective orders under Fam. Code § 6200 or Fam. Code §§ 7710-7720, may a minor 12 years of age or older appear in court without a guardian, counsel, or a guardian ad litem.

[b] Disaffirmation of Judgment by Minor if Guardian Not Appointed

In In re Charles T. (2002) 102 Cal. App. 4th 869, 125 Cal. Rptr. 2d 868 , the court described the effect of a failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor. This failure is not jurisdictional, but is merely an irregularity in the proceedings; absent prejudice, any error in failing to make the appointment is harmless. However, a judgment against a minor lacking a guardian ad litem is voidable by the minor on reaching majority. Because the defect is not jurisdictional, when the minor is the plaintiff, a guardian ad litem can be appointed at any time during the proceedings and, if one is not appointed and the minor has not reached majority and affirmed the proceedings prior to judgment, a defendant may attack the judgment as being erroneous but not void (102 Cal. App. 4th 869, 876) .

[c] Use of Motion Is Proper

Olivera v. Grace (1942) 19 Cal. 2d 570, 122 P.2d 564 , was an action by an executor to set aside a judgment against a decedent on the basis that the decedentwas incompetent when the judgment was rendered and was not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem. The trial court entered a demurrer to the complaint. The Supreme Court held a person who has been prevented by extrinsic factors from presenting his or her case to the court may bring an independent action in equity to secure relief from the judgment or, where the court that rendered the judgment possesses a general jurisdiction in law and equity, may bring a motion in that court to secure relief. The court then ruled that a judgment could be set aside when the plaintiff knew that the defendant was incompetent and no guardian ad litem had been appointed even if the defendant had not been judicially declared incompetent. Therefore, the complaint stated a cause of action and the judgment which was entered after the trial court sustained the demurrer was overruled.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Minor Required to Appear By Guardian Ad Litem

In J.W. v. Superior Court (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 958, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 527 , the court stated that the essential difference between a general guardian and a guardian ad litem is that a general guardian is usually appointed to take care of the person or property of a minor, not for the purpose of prosecuting a lawsuit, while a guardian ad litem is appointed specifically to prosecute or defend a suit, and may be appointed even if the minor has a general guardian (17 Cal. App. 4th 958, 964) . The guardian ad litem has the power to assent to procedural steps that will facilitate a determination of the minor's case, subject to fiduciary duties owed to the minor and the requirement that court approval be obtained for certain acts (17 Cal. App. 4th 958, 965) . A guardian ad litem who is not an attorney may appear on behalf of the minor only through an attorney (17 Cal. App. 4th 958, 969) .

[b] Disaffirmation of Judgment by Minor if Guardian Not Appointed

Gouanillou v. Industrial Acc. Comm'n (1920) 184 Cal. 418 , was a proceeding in the Industrial Accident Commission involving an injury to a minor. A hearing was held at which the minor was not represented by a guardian ad litem. After reaching majority, the minor disaffirmed the award and filed a new application, on which a new award was granted. The employer appealed and contended that the first award was valid and the second was void. The Supreme Court held that the right of a minor to disaffirm an adjudication of his or her rights by a judicial tribunal in which he or she has not been represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem continues until barred by laches after the minor has reached majority. The right is not dependent on statute, but is a general rule enforced as a necessary incident to the status of majority. The court then held that the minor was entitled to disaffirm the first award even though the award was actually made after majority where she disaffirmed within a reasonable time. The second award was confirmed and the first was set aside.

[c] Use of Motion Is Proper

In Garbutt v. Campbell (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 167, 278 P.2d 508 , a default judgment was entered against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem. Within a year after attaining his majority, he moved to set aside the judgment. He established that he had not remembered the service of process and that he moved to set aside the default soon after he found out about the judgment when the judgment creditor levied on his property. The trial court set aside the default judgment and the court of appeal upheld the trial court. It stated that a minor must appear by a guardian ad litem and that there was no evidence of laches on the part of the minor.

In Keane v. Penha (1946) 76 Cal. App. 2d 693, 173 P.2d 835 , a default was entered against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem. She moved to set aside the default judgment within three weeks after the entry of judgment and within two weeks of her attaining majority. The trial court set aside the judgment and the court of appeal upheld the trial court. It held that a minor's right to disaffirm a judgment was absolute and continued throughout his or her minority.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.26

§ 106.26 Supporting Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent Person on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.25.]

JUDGMENT AGAINST AN INCOMPETENT OR PERSON FOR WHOM A CONSERVATOR HAS BEEN APPOINTED WHO WAS NOT REPRESENTED BY A CONSERVATOR OF THE ESTATE OR GUARDIAN AD LITEM SHOULD BE VACATED.

A. Incompetent Must Appear by Guardian Ad Litem. When an incompetent person or a person for whom a conservator has been appointed is a party, he/she must appear either by a conservator of the estate or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending (Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)); In re Daniel S. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 912, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646 .

B. Vacation of Judgment. A judgment entered against an incompetent person who was not represented by a conservator of the estate or a guardian ad litem may be vacated in a proceeding for that purpose when properly disaffirmed and when the plaintiff or petitioner knew or should have known of the incompetency and did not inform the court (see Briggs v. Briggs (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 312, 319, 325 P.2d 219).

C. Use of Motion Is Proper. [See § 106.25, Paragraph C.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion to vacate a judgment against an incompetent person or a person for whom a conservator has been appointed who was not represented by a conservator or a guardian ad litem.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If necessary, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which support the motion, including a declaration by the moving party that there is a valid defense to the action.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms for the appointment of a guardian ad litem, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incompetent Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

In In re Daniel S*. (2004) 115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 9 Cal. Rptr. 3d 646* , the court reiterated that under Code Civ. Proc. § 372, incompetents and persons for whom a conservator has been appointed lack the capacity to bring or defend an action in their own names. They must be represented either by a guardian or conservator of the estate, or by a guardian ad litem appointed by the court in which the action is pending (115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 912) . The court stated that the proper standard for determining competency is whether the individual has the capacity to understand the nature and consequences of the proceedings and is able to assist his or her attorney in preparation of the case (115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 913) . For example, a court need not appoint a guardian ad litem for a mentally disabled adult when the evidence shows that he or she understands the nature of the proceedings and is able to cooperate with his or her attorney in representing his or her interests (115 Cal. App. 4th 903, 913) .

[b] Vacation of Judgment

In Briggs v. Briggs (1958) 160 Cal. App. 2d 312, 325 P.2d 219 , a wife moved to vacate a judgment of annulment of marriage obtained by her husband. The complaint was served on the wife when she was institutionalized. Application was made for appointment of a guardian ad litem by the husband, but the order appointing a guardian ad litem was never signed although an attorney thought he had been appointed and had appeared for the wife. Meanwhile, after service on the wife, the husband told her that he had dismissed the complaint. The purported guardian ad litem filed an answer but after a hearing a judgment of annulment was taken by default. The husband never told the wife about the annulment and continued to hold himself out as her husband. When she was released from the institution and pronounced cured, she found out about the judgment of annulment and moved to vacate the judgment. The trial court set aside the judgment and the husband appealed. The court of appeal held that the guardian ad litem was not validly appointed because the order was never signed. The court then held that the wife could disaffirm the judgment because she was incompetent and not represented by a guardian ad litem, because she was not allowed to have a fair trial, and because the husband told her that he had dismissed the proceeding and continued to hold himself out as her husband.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Incompetent Required to Appear by Guardian Ad Litem

In In re Jessica G. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 714), the court stated that a judge may appoint a guardian ad litem for an incompetent adult only on notice and hearing or with the incompetent person's consent. At the hearing, testimony may be presented on the limited issue of competency (93 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187-1188) .

In Sarracino v. Superior Court (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 1, 118 Cal. Rptr. 21, 529 P.2d 53), the California Supreme Court held that a prior independent adjudication of the individual's incompetency is not a prerequisite for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The court may determine the individual's incompetency based on the application for the appointment and supporting declarations (13 Cal. 3d 1, 11-12) . The Court also held that a guardian ad litem who appears for an incompetent person in an action or proceeding does not thereby become a party to that action or proceeding. The guardian ad litem is both the incompetent's representative of record and a representative of the court (13 Cal. 3d 1, 13) .

[b] Vacation of Judgment

In re Christina B. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918 , involved a dependency proceeding in which a mother's guardian ad litem waived her right to trial over her objection. The juvenile court declared the mother's children to be dependents, removed them from her physical custody, and placed them with their father. The mother appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. It observed that theguardian ad litem's purpose is to protect the rights of the incompetent person (19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1453) , and that the waiver in this case did not protect or benefit the mother, but rather operated to deprive her of fundamental constitutional rights to a hearing with no countervailing benefit (19 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1454) .

In In re Lisa M. (1986) 177 Cal. App. 3d 915, 225 Cal. Rptr. 7 , the court of appeal held that the juvenile court erred when it failed to appoint a guardian ad litem for a mentally retarded mother in dependency proceedings involving her daughter. Although the juvenile court had expressly found that the mother was incapable of understanding the dependency proceedings, it did not appoint a guardian ad litem. The child was declared a dependent of the juvenile court and her mother's parental rights were terminated. The appellate court concluded that when a trial court has knowledge of a defendant's incompetency and inability to understand the proceedings, it has an obligation to appoint a guardian ad litem on its own motion (177 Cal. App. 3d 915, 919). The court, however, found that the error was moot and dismissed the mother's appeal. The court in dictum concluded that the mother should have sought to disaffirm the parental termination order and its foundational dependency determinations through use of either a motion to vacate or set aside the judgment or an independent action in equity to set the judgment aside (177 Cal. App. 3d 915, 919-920). If the mother brought such a motion, the trial court would have to decide whether the appointment of a guardian ad litem at the underlying dependency proceeding or parental termination proceeding would likely have resulted in a different outcome (177 Cal. App. 3d 915, 920 n.4).

Another court of appeal disagreed with In re Lisa M. regarding its holding that an appeal from an order initiating a Civ. Code § 232 (operative until January 1, 1994) or a Fam. Code § 7800 et seq. (operative January 1, 1994) termination proceeding was moot after judgment pursuant to that section. In In re Linda P. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 99, 240 Cal. Rptr. 474 , the court held that finality of a judgment pursuant to Civ. Code § 232 terminating parental custody does not render moot the appeal from an order in prior dependency proceedings continuing dependency and authorizing institution of proceedings under Civ. Code § 232 (195 Cal. App. 3d 99, 105-106) .

In Edison v. Edison (1960) 178 Cal. App. 2d 632, 3 Cal. Rptr. 201 , four years after the entry of an interlocutory judgment, the wife moved to vacate the interlocutory judgment. She alleged that she was incompetent when her default was entered and that her husband, who knew of her incompetency, concealed it from the court and prevented her from having a fair hearing. The husband conceded that he knew she had been committed and might still have been in the institution when the default was taken. He alleged that he had told his attorneys about his wife's incompetency. The trial court vacated the judgment. The court of appeal upheld the trial court. It held that the wife, in order to prevail, had to establish that she was mentally incompetent at the time of the service and entry of default, that the husband either knew of the incompetency or knew facts, which if revealed to the court, would have resulted in a continuance until the wife or a guardian could appear for her, and that plaintiff concealed such information from the court. The court of appeal held that there was sufficient evidence to establish those facts. It also held that the fact the husband told his attorneys of his wife's incompetency did not discharge his duty to disclose the facts to the court or minimize the fraud on the court.

In Saunders v. Saunders (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 67, 320 P.2d 131 , the wife first made a motion to vacate a judgment of divorce under Code Civ. Proc. § 473, which motion was denied. She then brought an independent action in equity to vacate the judgment. The trial court refused to permit the admission of any evidence, refused to grant leave to amend the complaint, and dismissed the complaint. The wife appealed and the court of appeal reversed and held that the wife had stated a cause of action based on her allegations that she was of unsound mind throughout all of the divorce proceedings, that her husband knew of her condition but her attorneys did not, that no guardian ad litem was appointed, and that her husband did not inform the court of her condition. The wife also alleged that there was a probability of a different result after a fair hearing.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.27

§ 106.27 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--To Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent Person on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem--Bar of Statute of Limitations [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COM-
vs.	)	PLAINT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT TO SET ASIDE THE JUDGMENT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object by demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e) when the ground for objection appears on the face thereof or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice).

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. A complaint fails to state a cause of action when the dates alleged in the complaint establish that the claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations (Guardian North Bay, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 963, 971-972, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748).

C. Applicable Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations applicable to an equitable action to vacate a judgment because an incompetent person was not represented by a conservator or guardian ad litem is the four-year statute of limitations in Code of Civil Procedure Section 343 governing actions not otherwise covered by statute (Zastrow v. Zastrow (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 710, 716-717, 132 Cal. Rptr. 536).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint to vacate a judgment against an incompetent who was not represented by a conservator or guardian ad litem when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that it appears on its face that the action is barred by a statute of limitations.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action

In Guardian North Bay, Inc. v. Superior Court (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 963, 114 Cal. Rptr. 2d 748 , the court set forth the well-established rule that a complaint fails to state a cause of action when the dates alleged in the complaint establish that the claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations (94 Cal. App. 4th 963, 971-972) (see also Traverso v. Department of Transportation (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1142, 1144-1146, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 179).

In Roman v. County of Los Angeles (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 316, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 13 , the court stated the equally well-established rule that in order for the bar of the statute of limitations to be raised by demurrer, the defect must clearly and affirmatively appear on the face of the complaint. It is not enough that the complaint shows that the action may be barred (85 Cal. App. 4th 316, 324-325).

As held in Childs v. State (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 155, 192 Cal. Rptr. 526 , any ambiguity or uncertainty regarding the date of the alleged wrong, which triggers the running of the statute, is a question of fact that may be properly resolved on a motion for summary judgment or at trial, but not on a demurrer (144 Cal. App. 3d 155, 160-163).

[b] Applicable Statute of Limitations

In Zastrow v. Zastrow (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 710, 132 Cal. Rptr. 536 , a wifefiled an action to set aside a judgment of dissolution and to rescind a property settlement agreement incorporated therein on the ground that she was incompetent when the property settlement agreement was negotiated and when the decree was entered. The husband demurred on the ground of the statute of limitations arguing that the three-year statute of limitations governing actions for relief on the ground of fraud or mistake [Code Civ. Proc. § 338(4); now see Code Civ. Proc. § 338(d)] was applicable and barred the action since it was filed three years and five months after the wife regained her competency. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. It found that the four-year statute of limitations on actions for rescission, which the wife intended to be applicable, was not applicable because the property settlement agreement was merged in the decree and could not be rescinded, and thus held that the action was barred by the three-year fraud statute of limitations. The court of appeal reversed. It agreed with the trial court that the rescission statute of limitations was not applicable. It held, however, that fraud was not the only basis for an action to set aside a judgment when the person against whom it was taken was incompetent and not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem. It found that the essence of the wife's claim for equitable relief was a disability that deprived her of a fair opportunity to present her case to the court. This ground is separate from fraud, and therefore is not covered by the fraud statute of limitations. Instead, it falls within the scope of Code Civ. Proc. § 343, the four-year statute of limitations governing actions not otherwise covered by statute. Since the four years had not run, the trial court erred in sustaining the demurrer and was reversed (61 Cal. App. 3d 710, 716-717) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.28

§ 106.28 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Order Approving Final Account as Res Judicata

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.27.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FOR MONEY NOT ACCOUNTED FOR BY GUARDIAN FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON ITS FACE THAT THE GUARDIAN'S FINAL ACCOUNT WAS APPROVED, WHICH APPROVAL IS RES JUDICATA.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 106.27, Paragraph A.]

B. Approval of Final Account as Res Judicata. When complaint brought against a guardian by a ward for money not accounted for by the guardian shows on its face that there has been a court approved final account as between the guardian and the ward, it does not state a cause of action because the final account is res judicata as to the issue of the guardian's liability to the ward (Adams v. Martin (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 246, 248, 44 P.2d 572).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint against a guardian by a ward for money not accounted for by the guardian when the demurrer asserts that the complaint does not state a cause of action because it discloses on its face that there has been a final account as between the guardian and the ward.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a demurrer to a complaint against a conservator for money not accounted for by a conservator.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Approval of Final Account as Res Judicata

In Adams v. Martin (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 246, 44 P.2d 572 , the guardian of an incompetent brought an action against the former guardian for misappropriation of the ward's money. Prior to the action, there had been a final accounting by the former guardian for misappropriation of the ward's money. Prior to the action, there had been a final accounting by the former guardian which had been approved and had not been appealed. The final account did not charge against the former guardian the amounts sought in the action by the new guardian. The trial court gave judgment for the new guardian. The Supreme Court reversed. It held that the final account was res judicata and conclusive against the ward. The Court pointed out that it was not contended that the former guardian had concealed property of the ward and failed to account for it or that there was any fraudulent prevention of a hearing. There was a hearing on the account, which was attended by the plaintiff's new guardian. The plaintiff's only contention was that the former guardian perjured himself at the hearing on the final account, which is intrinsic, not extrinsic fraud, and which is not sufficient basis for equitable relief against afinal judgment (3 Cal. 2d 246, 248) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Approval of Final Account as Res Judicata

In E. & J. Gallo Winery v. Gallo Cattle Company (9th Cir. 1992) 967 F.2d 1280 , a trademark infringement action, the defendant counterclaimed that he had inherited part of the winery and was thus entitled to use the name. However, the Ninth Circuit affirmed the district court's finding that the defendant's probate claims had been settled years before when the defendant attained his majority, and a final account by his defendant's guardians had been approved. The final accounting and the probate's court decree approving and settling the final account in the guardianship proceeding were res judicata with respect to the defendant's current claims (967 F.2d 1280, 1287-1288) .

In Bank of America v. Superior Court (1986) 181 Cal. App. 3d 705, 226 Cal. Rptr. 685 , the court of appeal held that a ward's claim that her guardian had misrepresented its skill and improperly invested guardianship funds was barred by res judicata. The barred claim pertained to an account that had been previously settled by the probate court. The guardian demurred to the claim under Prob. Code § 2103(a), which provides that an order settling a guardianship accounting releases the guardian from claims based on any act or omission directly approved or confirmed in the order. The ward claimed that the fraud exception to that provision [see Prob. Code § 2103(b)] precluded operation of res judicata. However, the court of appeal stated that the "fraud" specified in Prob. Code § 2103(b) is "extrinsic" fraud that occurs in obtaining the court order. The ward admitted that the accounting revealed the losses sustained by the guardianship funds. Because the alleged fraud did not prevent the ward from attending the hearing to settle the account or litigate any claims of wrongdoing against the guardian, it was not extrinsic and the res judicata exception did not apply (181 Cal. App. 3d 705, 714-715, 226 Cal. Rptr. 685).

In Hornaday v. Hornaday (1949) 95 Cal. App. 2d 384 , former wards brought an action against their former guardian for attorney's fees incurred by their estate in removing the former guardian. A demurrer to the complaint was sustained. The court of appeal affirmed. Among the bases for its affirmance was the fact that the final account of the former guardian was res judicata as to his liability to the wards and their estate.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.29

§ 106.29 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian--Failure to Allege Judicial Finding Against Guardian

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.27.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT AGAINST A SURETY ON THE BOND OF A GUARDIAN FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE THAT THE GUARDIAN HAS BEEN FOUND LIABLE BY THE COURT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 106.27, Paragraph A.]

B. Necessity for Judicial Decree Establishing Liability. In an action against a surety on a bond of a guardian, a cause of action is not stated unless there is an allegation that there is an appropriate judicial decree establishing the fact of the breach by the guardian and the amount thereof (Richardson v. Royal Indem. Co. (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 557, 560, 134 P.2d 1).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint against a surety on the bond of a guardian when the demurrer asserts that the complaint does not state a cause of action because it fails to allege the existence of a judicial decree establishing the liability of the guardian.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a demurrer to a complaint against a conservator's surety.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a demurrer to a complaint against a surety on the bond of a guardian based on failure to allege a judicial decree, see California Forms of Pleading andPractice, Ch. 290, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Maintenance of Ward or Conservatee (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Necessity for Judicial Decree Establishing Liability

Richardson v. Royal Indem. Co. (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 557, 134 P.2d 1 , was an action by the administrator of the estate of a deceased ward against the estate of a deceased guardian and the surety to recover money that was allegedly fraudulently appropriated by the guardian from the ward's estate. The plaintiff voluntarily dismissed the action against the administrator of the guardian's estate. At the trial the defendant surety objected to the introduction of evidence on the ground that a cause of action was not stated against the surety. The trial court sustained the objection and dismissed the action. The Supreme Court affirmed. It held that before a surety can be held for a breach of a bond filed by the guardian, there must be an appropriate judicial decree establishing the fact of the breach and the amount thereof. In the absence of an allegation of such a judicial decree, no cause of action against the surety is stated (21 Cal. 2d 557, 560) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Necessity of Judicial Decree Establishing Liability

In Price v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Companies (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1536, 239 Cal. Rptr. 158 , the court of appeal held that a ward who sought recovery against a surety on a guardian's bond was not relieved of the requirement of obtaining an accounting and surcharge order against the guardian before bringing suit against the surety. Several exceptions to this requirement are recognized, including when the guardian has died, absconded, was removed before a final accounting, or is beyond the court's jurisdiction. Similarly, when an accounting is impossible or unnecessary, or the amount of liability can be ascertained without an accounting, none will be required. However, the guardian's mere avoidance of service of process and failure to appear in an action by the ward for conversion of estate assets does not render the guardian outside the court's jurisdiction and does not constitute absconding for this purpose (193 Cal. App. 3d 1536, 1541-1542) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.30

§ 106.30 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian or Conservator--Bar of Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.27.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT AGAINST A SURETY ON THE BOND OF A _____ [GUARDIAN OR CONSERVATOR] FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON THE FACE THEREOF THAT IT IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 106.27, Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to State Cause of Action. [See § 106.27, Paragraph B.]

C. Statute of Limitations. No action may be maintained against the sureties on a bond given by a guardian or conservator unless commenced within four years from the discharge or removal of the guardian or conservator or within three years from the date the order surcharging the guardian or conservator becomes final, whichever is later (Prob. Code § 2333(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint against a surety for a guardian or conservator when the demurrer asserts that the action is barred by the statute of limitations.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations

The limitation period described in Paragraph C of this form may be extended in cases of fraud, conspiracy, or misrepresentation [see Prob. Code § 2103(b)]. That is, Prob. Code § 2103 provides that although final orders in a guardianship or conservatorship proceeding release sureties from claims of the ward or conservatee, this rule does not apply when the judgment or order is obtained by fraud, conspiracy, or misrepresentation. However, in any case, and notwithstanding Prob. Code § 2103, no action may be maintained against the sureties on the bond unless the action commences within six years from the date the judgment under Prob. Code § 2103, or the later of the orders under Prob. Code § 2333(b) becomes final [Prob. Code § 2333(c)]

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations

In Keck v. Keck (1936) 16 Cal. App. 2d 521, 61 P.2d 79 , a former ward brought an action against his former guardian and her surety. The order appointing the guardian had been revoked more than three years before the action had been commenced. The trial court gave judgment for the surety based on the statute of limitations. The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the order revoking the guardianship removed the guardian and commenced the running of the statute of limitations. It also held that the fact that the ward had not procured the final account of the guardian until after the statute of limitations had run on an action against the surety was immaterial and that the proceedings to obtain an accounting did not toll the statute. The court indicated that no excuse had been raised by the former ward for the delay in obtaining the final account.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.31

§ 106.31 Opposing Petition for Appointment of Proposed Guardian of Person and Estate of Minor [Prob. Code §§ 1510, 1514]--Guardian Not Suitable

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Guardianship of the	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO APPOINTMENT OF
_____ [Person and	)	GUARDIAN FOR MINOR
Estate or Person or Estate] of	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
a Minor.	)	Location: _____
	)	Judge: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE PROPOSED GUARDIAN IS NOT A SUITABLE PERSON TO BE APPOINTED WHEN HE/SHE IS UNWILLING TO OBEY COURT ORDERS.

A. Proposed Guardian of Minor Is Required to Be Suitable Person. In appointing a guardian of the person of a minor, the court is governed by the provisions of Family Code § 3040 which requires that the person appointed as guardian of the person be deemed by the court to be suitable and able to provide adequate and proper care and guidance for the child (Fam. Code § 3040; Prob. Code § 1514(b)). In appointing a guardian of the estate of a minor, the court is to be guided by what appears to be in the best interest of the proposed ward, taking into account the proposed guardian's ability to manage and to preserve the estate as well as the proposed guardian's concern for and interest in the welfare of the proposed ward (Prob. Code § 1514(e)(1)).

B. Proposed Guardian Is Unsuitable When He/She Is Unwilling to Obey Court Orders. Where the proposed guardian has refused to obey prior court orders regarding the minor, he/she indicates a lack of amenability to court authority and, thus, is not a suitable person to be appointed guardian (see Guardianship of MacLean (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 144, 145-147, 244 P.2d 63).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a petition for appointment of a person as guardian when the proposed guardian has refused to obey prior court orders with regard to the child.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form can be used in an appropriate situation to oppose the memorandum supporting the petition in see §§ 106.20 and 106.21.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proposed Guardian Is Unsuitable When He/She Is Unwilling to Obey Court Orders

In Guardianship of MacLean (1952) 111 Cal. App. 2d 144, 244 P.2d 63 , a minor of 14 years nominated as his guardian his sister-in-law with whom he had been living. She petitioned to be appointed guardian in place of the minor's father, who opposed her petition. The sister-in-law's petition was denied. In prior proceedings involving the custody of the minor, the sister-in-law had refused to obey court orders with regard to the minor's custody. The trial court based its decision that the sister-in-law was not a suitable person on that fact and on the fact that the sister-in-law held title to property which had belonged to the child's mother and in which the child had a claim adverse to the sister-in-law. The court of appeal upheld the trial court and stated that the sister-in-law's refusal to obey prior court orders was an index of her lack of amenability to the authority of the court of which she proposed to be a sworn officer (111 Cal. App. 2d 144, 145-147).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.32

§ 106.32 Opposing Petition to Court of Appeal for Writ of Prohibition [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]--To Restrain Superior Court Sitting in Probate From Adjudicating Claim in Guardianship Proceeding--Third Party in Privity With Estate

[1] FORM

IN THE COURT OF APPEAL OF THE
STATE OF CALIFORNIA,
_____ APPELLATE DIVISION
[DIVISION _____]

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Petitioner,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION FOR WRIT OF PROHIBITION
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103]
THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA FOR THE COUNTY OF _____.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A WRIT OF PROHIBITION SHOULD NOT BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN A SUPERIOR COURT SITTING IN PROBATE FROM ADJUDICATING A CLAIM AGAINST A PERSON WHO IS IN PRIVITY WITH THE ESTATE.

[EITHER]

Jurisdiction of Probate Court. The Superior court sitting in probate has jurisdiction to adjudicate a controversy between an estate or those acting on its behalf and the guardian thereof acting in his/her personal capacity (Central Bank v. Superior Court (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 10, 15, 285 P.2d 906).

[OR]

Jurisdiction of Probate Court. The superior court sitting in probate has jurisdiction to adjudicate a controversy involving particular property claimed by the estate and others where the property involved is conceded by both parties to be or to have been acquired by the claimant in the course of the guardianship proceedings (Central Bank v. Superior Court (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 10, 15-16, 285 P.2d 906).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a petition for a writ of prohibition where the probate court has jurisdiction over the claim because it is against someone in privity with the estate. The first alternative is for use when the third party is the guardian acting in his or her personal capacity; the second is for use when the property was acquired by the third party in the guardianship proceeding.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in the memorandum showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form can be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the petition in § 106.24.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Jurisdiction of Probate Court

In Central Bank v. Superior Court (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 10, 285 P.2d 906 , the Supreme Court granted a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court sitting in probate from adjudicating, against a bank, a claim that certain funds paid to the guardian personally were estate funds and that the bank was liable to the estate. The court held that the superior court sitting in probate did not have jurisdiction over a claim against a stranger. The court did, however, state in dicta that the probate court has jurisdiction over a contest between the estate and those in privity with the estate. The court cited two examples of those in privity with the estate. The first was a dispute between the estate or those acting on its behalf and the executor or administrator acting in his or her personal capacity. The second was a dispute over property that is conceded by both parties to be or to have been acquired in the course of the probate proceedings.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.33

§ 106.33 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]--No Prejudice to Minor

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION TO VACATE
vs.	)	JUDGMENT
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A JUDGMENT AGAINST A MINOR WHO WAS NOT REPRESENTED BY A GUARDIAN AD LITEM SHOULD NOT BE SET ASIDE WHERE THE MINOR'S INTERESTS SUFFERED NO SUBSTANTIAL PREJUDICE.

A. Judgment Voidable. A judgment rendered against a minor who is not represented by a guardian or a guardian ad litem is not jurisdictional, but merely irregular, and is, therefore, not void (Medical Legal Consulting Services, Inc. v. Covarrubias (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 80, 87-93, 285 Cal. Rptr. 559).

B. Judgment Not Vacated If No Substantial Prejudice. If the minor's interests are not substantially prejudiced by the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem, the judgment should not be vacated (Pacific Coast Joint Stock Land Bank of San Francisco v. Clausen (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 364, 366, 65 P.2d 352).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorites may be submitted in opposition to a petition to vacate a judgment against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or guardian ad litem on the ground that the minor was not substantially prejudiced thereby.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If necessary, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion.

This form can be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the petition in § 106.25.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Voidable

In Medical Legal Consulting Services, Inc. v. Covarrubias (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 80, 285 Cal. Rptr. 559 , the court held that the failure to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor who is a defendant is not a jurisdictional defect. Thus, a money judgment against the minor is not void and may be enforced against the minor's estate by proceeding against the guardian of the estate (234 Cal. App. 3d 80, 87-93) .

[b] Judgment Not Vacated If No Substantial Prejudice

In Pacific Coast Joint Stock Land Bank of San Francisco v. Clausen (1937) 8 Cal. 2d 364, 65 P.2d 352 , a default judgment on a foreclosure action was entered against a minor. The minor had a guardian of her estate who was also a defendant in the action. The guardian chose not to appear on behalf of the minor or on her own behalf. The minor moved to set aside the judgment on the ground of her minority when the judgment was entered. The trial court denied the motion. The Supreme Court upheld the trial court. It held there was no substantial prejudice to the minor's interests when the minor has a guardian who decides not to appear, when there is no showing that the guardian was either negligent or fraudulent, and when there was no showing of a valid defense to the action.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Not Vacated If No Substantial Prejudice

In Smith v. Wagner (1934), , judgment was rendered in a negligence case against a defendant who appealed on the ground that he was a minor when judgment was rendered and was not represented by a guardian ad litem. The court of appeal upheld the judgment and stated that there was no substantial prejudice to the minor's interest when he was represented by counsel, appeared at trial, and did not raise the issue of his minority until after judgment had been rendered against him.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.34

§ 106.34 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Minor on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]-- Affirmation After Majority

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.33.]

A JUDGMENT AGAINST A MINOR WHO WAS NOT REPRESENTED BY A GUARDIAN AD LITEM SHOULD NOT BE SET ASIDE WHERE THE MINOR AFFIRMED THE JUDGMENT AFTER REACHING MAJORITY.

A. Judgment Voidable. [See § 106.33, Paragraph A.]

B. Judgment Not Vacated if Affirmed. A judgment taken against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or a guardian ad litem will be considered affirmed by the minor if he/she takes any action with reference thereto after reaching majority which is only consistent with the validity of the judgment. If so affirmed, the judgment will not later be vacated (Childs v. Lanterman (1894) 103 Cal. 387, 390-392, 37 P. 382).

[Optional] C. Participation in Trial After Majority as Sufficient Action. If a judgment is taken against a minor for whom no guardian ad litem was appointed, the minor's further participation in the trial after reaching majority will bar a later motion to set aside the judgment (Hughes v. Quackenbush (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 349, 362-363, 37 P.2d 99).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a petition to vacate a judgment against a minor who was not represented by a guardian or a guardian ad litem on the ground that the minor affirmed the judgment after majority.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If necessary, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion.

This form can be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the petition in § 106.25.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Not Vacated if Affirmed

Childs v. Lanterman (1894) 103 Cal. 387, 37 P. 382 , was a quiet title action. One of the defendants was a minor who was represented by an attorney but for whom no guardian ad litem was appointed. The judgment was filed and entered the day after the minor reached majority. Thereafter, he and the other defendants moved for a new trial and then appealed the judgment. The judgment was affirmed and then the former minor moved to vacate the judgment because he was not represented by a guardian ad litem. The motion was denied by the trial court. The Supreme Court upheld the denial. It held that a judgment taken against a minor who did not have a guardian ad litem is voidable and can be affirmed by the minor after majority if he takes action which is only consistent with the validity of the judgment. It held that the actions taken after majority in moving for a new trial and appealing the judgment constituted affirmation and, therefore, that the judgment should not have been set aside.

[b] Participation in Trial After Majority as Sufficient Action

In Hughes v. Quackenbush (1934) 1 Cal. App. 2d 349, 37 P.2d 99 , a defendant against whom a judgment had been entered in a personal injury action, appealed from the trial court's denial of his motion to set aside the judgment because he was a minor unrepresented by a guardian ad litem. The court of appeal held that if the minor becomes of age during the pendency of the proceedings and continues to participate therein, through counsel, his subsequent disaffirmance will not be given effect. The court then held that the actions of the minor in participating in the trial and moving for a new trial after reaching majority barred him from disaffirming the judgment. The court pointed out that the minor who reaches majority during the pendency of a case against him should not be able to speculate on the outcome and then have the judgment vacated if it is against him.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Participation in Trial After Majority as Sufficient Action

Carver v. Donin (1934) 139 Cal. App 395, 33 P.2d 841 , was a personal injury action in which one of the defendants was a minor and was not represented by a guardian ad litem. The minor reached majority three days after the trial and before the judgment was entered and filed. After majority, her attorneys submitted points and authorities on her behalf in support of a motion for new trial. After the judgment was entered, a motion was made to set aside the judgment, which motion was denied. On appeal, the court of appeal held that the participation of the minor in the proceeding after her majority and the fact that she reached majority before the judgment was entered barred her from disaffirming the judgment.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.35

§ 106.35 Opposing Motion to Vacate Judgment Against Incompetent on Ground He or She Was Not Represented by Guardian Ad Litem [Code Civ. Proc. § 372(a)]--Third Party Acted in Good Faith Reliance on Validity of Judgment

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.33.]

A JUDGMENT AGAINST AN INCOMPETENT WHO WAS NOT REPRESENTED BY A GUARDIAN AD LITEM SHOULD NOT BE VACATED AS AGAINST A THIRD PARTY WHO ACTED IN GOOD FAITH RELIANCE ON THE JUDGMENT.

A. Judgment Voidable. A judgment rendered against an incompetent person who is not represented by a conservator or guardian ad litem is irregular but not void (Dunn v. Dunn (1896) 114 Cal. 210, 212, 46 P. 5).

B. Innocent Purchaser Protected. A judgment obtained against an incompetent person for whom no guardian or guardian ad litem was appointed should not be vacated as against a third party who acted in good faith reliance on the judgment (Dunn v. Dunn (1896) 114 Cal. 210, 211-212, 46 P. 5).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted by a third party in opposition to a motion to vacate the judgment against an incompetent person who was not represented by a conservator or guardian ad litem on the ground thatthe third party relied in good faith on the judgment.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. If necessary, counsel should attach affidavits or declarations which oppose the motion.

This form can be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the petition in § 106.26.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Voidable

Dunn v. Dunn (1896) 114 Cal. 210, 46 P. 5 , was an action to annul a mortgage and a judgment of foreclosure. It was brought by the heirs of a person who, when she was incompetent, had mortgaged property. While she was still incompetent, the mortgagor brought an action for judicial foreclosure and obtained a decree of foreclosure, without the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The defendant purchased the property from the purchaser at the foreclosure sale for valuable consideration, in good faith, and without knowledge that the former owner was incompetent when the decree of foreclosure was entered. The trial court entered judgment for the defendant and the Supreme Court affirmed. It held that the decree obtained against the incompetent was irregular and not void. It could have been vacated in a direct proceeding if no innocent purchaser had acquired rights under it, but its validity as to such an innocent purchaser cannot be raised by collateral attack because the judgment was regular on its face and the purchaser had no knowledge of the facts which made it irregular.

[b] Innocent Purchaser Protected

Dunn v. Dunn (1896) 114 Cal. 210, 46 P. 5 , is discussed in § 106.35[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.36

§ 106.36 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Final Account Is Not Bar to Further Action When Guardian Accidentally or Fraudulently Concealed Assets on Account

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant.	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO DEMURRER TO COM-)	PLAINT
	)

_____

A FINAL ACCOUNTING IS NOT A BAR TO A FURTHER ACTION BY A WARD AGAINST A GUARDIAN WHERE THE GUARDIAN HAS ACCIDENTALLY OR FRAUDULENTLY CONCEALED ASSETS.

A. Final Account Not Bar. A final account is not a bar to a further action against a guardian as to property that a guardian accidentally or fraudulently withheld from the account and upon which the account did not pass (Lataillade v. Orena (1891) 91 Cal. 565, 576-577, 27 P. 924).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by a prior final account between the guardian and the ward, but the complaint alleges facts showing that the guardian fraudulently or accidentally concealed property from the account.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form can be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the demurrer in § 106.28.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Final Account Not Bar

In Lataillade v. Orena (1891) 91 Cal. 565, 27 P. 924 , a former ward brought an action against his former guardian for an accounting after a final accounting in the guardianship proceeding. The defendant demurred to the complaint, the demurrer was sustained, and plaintiff appealed. One ground for the demurrer was that the final account in the guardianship matter was conclusive and barred the action. The Supreme Court held that such a final account was not a bar to the action when the complaint alleged that the interest of the ward in the assets was fraudulently concealed and was not included in the inventory or final account. Another ground for the demurrer was that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. The Supreme Court held that the action was based on fraud and, therefore, could be brought within three years of the discovery of the fraud and that the complaint adequately alleged that there was nothing to put the former ward on notice of the fraud before he actually discovered it, which was within three years of the commencement of the action. Based on these holdings, the Supreme Court reversed and held that the demurrer should have been overruled.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Final Account Not Bar

In Conservatorship of Coffey (1986) 186 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 231 Cal. Rptr. 351 , the court of appeal affirmed a judgment in favor of a life insurance beneficiary surcharging a former conservator for loss of insurance policy benefits and interest [see Prob. Code § 2625]. The conservator failed to pay the conservatee's life insurance policy premiums on time, and the policy lapsed. Later, the conservator obtained an order settling his first and final accounting and discharging him as conservator. The court of appeal held that the conservator's failure to inform the probate court of the policy lapse constituted an omission of material fact within the meaning of Prob. Code § 2103(b), and effectively negated the finality and releasing provisions of Prob. Code § 2103(a), regarding the particular transaction that was the subject of the omission (186 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 1436-1437) . A guardian or conservator is not entitled to assert a res judicata bar to transactions that were not fully disclosed to the court (186 Cal. App. 3d 1431, 1437) .

In Richardson v. Royal Indem. Co. (1943) 21 Cal. 2d 557, 134 P.2d 1 , the facts of which are discussed in § 106.29[3][a] the court stated in dicta that equity will afford relief against a guardian who has fraudulently prevented a full disclosure of all the assets of the estate, and a decree of the probate court settling such a fraudulent account is not a bar to equitable relief.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.37

§ 106.37 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Against Guardian for Money Not Accounted for by Guardian--Intermediate Account Not Bar to Further Action

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.36.]

AN INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNT IS NOT A BAR TO A FURTHER ACTION BY A WARD AGAINST THE GUARDIAN BASED ON MATTERS SETTLED IN THE INTERMEDIATE ACCOUNT.

Intermediate Account Not Bar. An intermediate account is not a bar to a further action against the guardian by the ward based on matters settled in the intermediate account (Guardianship of Di Carlo (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 225, 234-235, 44 P.2d 562 ; Guardianship of Vucinich (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 235, 240, 44 P.2d 567).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint when the demurrer asserts that the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred by a prior account between the guardian and ward but the complaint alleges that the account was an intermediate, not a final account.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form can be used in appropriate circumstances to oppose the memorandum supporting the demurrer in § 106.28.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intermediate Account Not Bar

In Guardianship of Di Carlo (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 225, 44 P.2d 562 , and Guardianship of Vucinich (1935) 3 Cal. 2d 235, 44 P.2d 567 , the Supreme Court granted hearings to decide the question as to whether settlement of the annual or intermediate account of a guardian has the effect of a final judgment so that the items approved cannot be reexamined on a later or final account. In both cases the trial court had allowed the reexamination on the final account of matters settled at intermediate accounts, which ruling was upheld by the Court. The Court stated that such accounts are not conclusive against the ward and, therefore, may be reexamined.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
CHAPTER 106 GUARDIANSHIP AND CONSERVATORSHIP
PART II. FORMS

10-106 California Points & Authorities § 106.38

§ 106.38 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--Against Surety on Bond of Guardian or Conservator--Statute of Limitations [Prob. Code § 2333] Does Not Begin to Run Until Guardian or Conservator Is Discharged or Removed or Order Surcharging Guardian or Conservator Becomes Final

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 106.36.]

THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS HAS NOT RUN ON THE COMPLAINT AGAINST THE SURETY BECAUSE THE ACTION WAS BROUGHT WITHIN FOUR YEARS FROM THE _____ [insert whichever of the following events occurred last: DISCHARGE OR REMOVAL OF THE _____ (GUARDIAN or CONSERVATOR) or DATE THE ORDER SURCHARGING THE _____ (GUARDIAN or CONSERVATOR) BECAME FINAL].

A. Statute of Limitation Commences With Order of Removal or Order Surcharging Guardian. An action against sureties of a guardian or conservator is not barred until four years after a final order removing or discharging the guardian or four years from the date the order surcharging the guardian or conservator becomes final, whichever is later (Prob. Code § 2333(b); Estate of Mason (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 634, 639, 274 Cal. Rptr. 61).

[Optional] B. Statute of Limitations Extended for Judgments or Orders Obtained by Fraud, Conspiracy, or Misrepresentation. Although a final judgment or order releases the sureties from claims of a ward or conservatee based on an act or omission authorized, approved, or confirmed in the judgment or order, this rule does not apply when the judgment or order is obtained by fraud, conspiracy, or misrepresentation (Prob. Code § 2103(b)). In those situations, an action may be maintained against the sureties on the bond if it commences within six years from the date the judgment under Probate Code Section 2103, or the later of the orders under Probate Code Section 2333(b) becomes final (Prob. Code § 2333(c); see Prob. Code § 2103(b)).

[Optional] C. Appeal of Removal Order Tolls Statute. The statute of limitations contained in Probate Code Section 2333(b) is tolled during the period of an appeal by the ward or guardian from an order of the trial court removing the guardian (Burns v. Massachusetts etc. Ins. Co. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 962, 966-972, 146 P.2d 24 ; see Prob. Code § 1310(a) (appeal stays operation and effect of judgment or order)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a general demurrer to a complaint against a guardian's surety when the demurrer asserts that the complaint shows on its face that it is barred by the statute of limitations. These points and authorities may also be submitted in response to an objection by the surety to a ward's or conservatee's petition for an order surcharging the guardian or conservator and ordering payment from the bond.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

This form can also be used in appropriate situations to oppose the memorandum supporting the demurrer in § 106.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Commences With Order of Removal or Order Surcharging Guardian

In Estate of Mason (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 634, 274 Cal. Rptr. 61 , a probate court ordered, in 1982, the distribution of guardianship property, but the guardian converted it to his own use and failed to seek a discharge. In 1988, his former ward successfully petitioned for surcharge and payment from his surety bond. The trial court held, over the surety's objection to the petition, that Prob. Code § 2333 was the applicable statute of limitations under the facts. The court further held that the statute begins to run on discharge or removal of the guardian or on the date an order surcharging the guardian becomes final, whichever is later. Since the guardian had never been discharged or surcharged, the limitations period had not begun to run. The surety appealed, arguing that Code Civ. Proc. § 337, which is applicable generally to actions based on written contracts, was the applicablelimitations period under these facts and that its four-year limitation period had expired (224 Cal. App. 3d 634, 636-637) .

The court of appeal affirmed the order of the trial court. The court of appeal reasoned that under settled rules of statutory construction, the specific provisions of Prob. Code § 2333, rather than the general provisions of Civ. Code § 337, were controlling (224 Cal. App. 3d 634, 638) . Therefore, because Prob. Code § 2333 did not begin to run until the guardian was discharged or surcharged, the ward's petition for a surcharge order was timely (224 Cal. App. 3d 634, 639) .

[b] Appeal of Removal Order Tolls Statute

In Burns v. Massachusetts etc. Ins. Co. (1944) 62 Cal. App. 2d 962, 146 P.2d 24 , a surety was adjudged liable to the ward. On appeal, the surety claimed that the action was barred by the statute of limitations. The order terminating the guardianship had been made more than three years before the commencement of the action. After that order, the ward objected to the guardian's accounts which objections were tried and appealed. On appeal the ward prevailed and the guardian was adjudged to be liable to the ward. However, this appeal was not finished until more than three years had passed since the order of discharge which commenced the running of the statute of limitations, and until the appeal was decided, the ward could not commence the action because the judgment of the guardian's liability was a prerequisite to the action against the surety. The court of appeal sustained the trial court and held that the statute of limitations was tolled during the period of appeal from the accounting and, therefore, that the action against the surety was timely commenced (224 Cal. App. 3d 634) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute of Limitations Commences With Order of Removal or Order Surcharging Guardian

In Cook v. Ceas (1904) 143 Cal. 221, 77 P. 65 , the Supreme Court reversed the trial court's judgment sustaining a demurrer to a complaint against a surety on the ground that the former three-year statute of limitations had run. The trial court had reasoned that the statute began to run when the ward reached majority and the guardian's authority ceased. The Supreme Court held that language in the statute stating that the limitations period commenced running on the discharge or removal of the guardian meant that the limitations period began to run on the issuance of a court order removing or discharging the guardian, rather than on the termination of the guardian's authority when the ward reaches majority. Because three years had not run since the court order of removal, the demurrer should have been overruled (143 Cal. 221, 228-230).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 10 Chapters 100-109 EMPLOYER & EMPLOYEE---to---GUARDIANSHIP
Chapters 107through 109 RESERVED

10-107 California Points & Authorities Chapters 107through 109

RESERVED

Chapters 107RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS

11-110 California Points & Authorities 110.syn

§ 110.syn Synopsis to Chapter 110: HABEAS CORPUS

§ 110.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 110.02 Governing Statutes

§ 110.03 Civil and Criminal Uses of the Writ

§ 110.04 Outline of Pleadings in Habeas Corpus Proceedings

§ 110.05 Memorandum Not Expressly Required

§ 110.06 Use of Chapter

§ 110.07 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 110.08 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 110.09-110.19 [Reserved]

§ 110.20 Caption for Memorandum in Support of Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus or in Support of Return to Writ of Habeas Corpus--Superior Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Appellate Courts

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

§ 110.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--General Authority [Penal Code § 1473]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

§ 110.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Constructive Restraint or Reasonable Apprehension of Restraint

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constraint by Reasonable Apprehension of Force

§ 110.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Lawfully in Custody but Unlawfully Restrained

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unlawful Restraint Within Lawful Custody

[b] Communication With Counsel

[c] Denial of Privileges Within Hospital

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unlawful Restraint Within Lawful Custody

§ 110.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Committed to State Facility [Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Committed Is Entitled to Writ

§ 110.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Certified for Intensive Treatment as a Mental Patient [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5275]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Committed Is Entitled to Writ

§ 110.26 Welf. & Inst. Code § 4800Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Adult Admitted or Committed to a Facility as a Mental Patient []

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

§ 110.27 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Unconstitutionality of Civil Commitment Procedures

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constitutionality of Civil Detention

[b] Due Process Right in Civil Detention

[c] Due Process in Civil Commitment Procedures

§ 110.28 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Failure to Follow Statutory Procedures

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Statutory Prerequisites

[b] Commitment As Mentally Disordered

[c] Commitment As Narcotic Addict Not Charged With Crime

[d] Commitment As Narcotic Addict Convicted of Crime

[e] Commitment of Mentally Disordered Juvenile Court Ward

§ 110.29 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Commitment to Mental Hospital as Required to Have Reasonable Relationship to Purpose of Commitment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Validity of Commitment

[b] Habeas Corpus Available

[c] Failure of Committed Person to Receive Treatment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure of Committed Person to Receive Treatment

§ 110.30 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Person Committed to Mental Facility as Entitled to Writ to Test Recovery

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Committed Person

[b] Person Incompetent to Stand Trial

§ 110.31 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Challenge to Commitment or Continued Confinement as Mentally Disordered Sex Offender

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Challenge to Commitment or Continued Confinement as Mentally Disordered Sex Offender

[b] Failure to Follow Statutory Procedures

[c] Violation of Due Process

§ 110.32 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Person Committed to Mental Facility as Entitled to Be Present at Commitment Hearing

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Be Present at Commitment Hearing

§ 110.33 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Trial Court Lacked Jurisdiction to Impose the Order or Judgment Confining Petitioner

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction

[b] Broad Meaning of Jurisdiction on Habeas Corpus

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction

§ 110.34 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody by Previous Order of Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Custody of Minor Child

[b] Enforcement of Previous Custody Order

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Previous Custody Order

§ 110.35 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody by Previous Order of Out-of-State Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Allegation of Unlawful Restraint

[b] Enforcement of Out-of-State Custody Order

[c] Prima Facie Right of Nonresident to Custody

[d] Resolution of Controversy by Out-of-State Court

[e] Out-of-State Decree Valid on Its Face

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Out-of-State Custody Order

§ 110.36 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Nonresident Entitled to Custody Pursuant to Out-of-State Decree--Applicable Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standards and Procedures

§ 110.37 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Determining Right to Custody--No Previous Court Order

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determination of Custody of Child

[b] Full Hearing on Custody

[c] Statute Governing Proper Custody

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute Governing Proper Custody

§ 110.38 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody Despite Previous Order of Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Previous Custody Order Was Made Without Jurisdiction

§ 110.39 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Jurisdiction--Original Proceeding in Superior Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Superior Court Jurisdiction Equal to Appellate Court Jurisdiction

[b] Factual Questions Require Application First in the Superior Court

§ 110.40 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Jurisdiction--No Territorial Restriction on Jurisdiction of Superior Courts or Courts of Appeal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Special Habeas Corpus Proceedings

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Courts of Appeal

[b] Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

[c] Petition Resolved Where Filed Absent Substantial Reason for Transfer

§ 110.41 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Disposition of Case--Court's Power to Grant Relief Requested

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Power to Grant Relief

§ 110.42 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Disposition of Case--Authority for Discharge From Custody [Penal Code § 1487(1)-(6)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

§ 110.43 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Review--Application to Court of Appeal After Denial by Superior Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial of Writ by Superior Court as Nonappealable

[b] Relief by New Proceeding in Court of Appeal

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Denial of Writ by Superior Court as Nonappealable

§ 110.44 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1974]--Review of Superior Court Determinations--Child Custody--Application to Higher Court After Denial of Writ by Lower Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Res Judicata Effect of Denial of Writ

[b] Questions of Law Properly Raised With Appellate Court

[c] Substantial Evidence for Trial Court's Findings of Fact

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of Law Properly Raised With Appellate Court

[b] Substantial Evidence for Trial Court's Findings of Fact

§ 110.45 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Petition for Writ Must Be Verified [Penal Code § 1474(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unverified Petition May Be Rejected

§ 110.46 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Petitioner Not Restrained

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ Not Available Where No Restraint

§ 110.47 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Habeas Corpus Not Available to Legal Entities

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Habeas Corpus Not Available to Legal Entities

§ 110.48 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Required

[b] Jurisdictional Requirement of Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

§ 110.49 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Application to Appellate Court Before Application to Superior Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Refuse to Issue Writ

[b] Factual Questions Require Application First in Superior Court

§ 110.50 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Child Custody--Respondent Entitled to Temporary Custody Despite Existing Out-of-State Decree

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Health and Safety of Child Jeopardized

§ 110.51 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Child Custody--Proceedings in Appellate Court--Relitigation of Factual Issues Decided on Hearing in Superior Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attempt to Relitigate Factual Issues Decided by Superior court

§ 110.52 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Transfer of Proceeding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transfer

[b] Substantial Reason for Transfer

[c] Necessity for Evidentiary Hearing as Substantial Reason for Transfer

[d] Transfer to Judgment Court Where Judgment Challenged

[e] Transfer to Jurisdiction of Confinement Where Conditions of Confinement Challenged

§ 110.53 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Exception to Sufficiency of Return

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exception to Sufficiency Similar to Demurrer

[b] Return Shows Right to Relief

[c] Return Must Allege Facts Showing Legality of Confinement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exception to Sufficiency Similar to Demurrer

§ 110.54 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Habeas Corpus Appropriate Although Petitioner Released From Custody--Issue of Broad Public Interest Likely to Recur

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[i] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus as Proper to Resolve Issue of Public Interest

§ 110.55 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody Pursuant to Out-of-State Custody Decree--Insufficient Allegation in Return to Writ

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Insufficient Allegation in Return

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.01

§ 110.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities for use in memoranda submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus [see §§ 110.21 -110.44], in support of the return to the writ or to the order to show cause [see §§ 110.45 -110.52], and in support of the traverse to the return [see §§ 110.53 -110.55]. It also contains a form of caption for use with these memoranda [see § 110.20]. The chapter is limited to a discussion and memoranda filed in proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus involving civil matters such as child custody and civil commitment; it does not discuss or contain memoranda for use in proceedings involving criminal defendants and the review of criminal decisions.

For discussion and forms concerning habeas corpus proceedings involving criminal defendants and the review of criminal decisions, see California Criminal Defense Practice, Ch. 102 (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusCognizable IssuesDue ProcessCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdictionFamily LawChild CustodyEnforcementHabeas Corpus Relief

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.02

§ 110.02 Governing Statutes

The writ of habeas corpus generally is governed by Penal Code §§ 1473-1508. Certain acts in disobedience of the writ are misdemeanors under Penal Code §§ 362-364. Use of the writ by persons certified for involuntary intensive treatment in mental hospitals is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5275-5277, and use of the writ by persons committed to institutions as developmentally disabled (mentally retarded) persons is governed by Health & Safety Code §§ 38450-38454. General procedural rules governing habeas corpus proceedings in superior courts are set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 4.550-4.552. General requirements for habeas corpus proceedings in reviewing courts are set forth in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.380.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusCognizable IssuesDue ProcessCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureCourt RulesCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdiction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.03

§ 110.03 Civil and Criminal Uses of the Writ

Although the uses of the writ of habeas corpus can be generally divided into those which test the validity of criminal procedure or detention and those which test the validity of civil custody or detention, the procedures to be followed in both types of cases are those set forth in Penal Code §§ 1473-1508. Even a habeas corpus decision which deals with criminal procedure or criminal detention will, therefore, be applicable to a case involving a civil use of the writ as long as the decision deals with the procedures to be followed in habeas corpus matters or with the general availability of the writ. Some decisions dealing with criminal cases are inapplicable to civil uses of the writ, however, because they involve the validity of the rules of criminal procedure or the special limitations on collateral attack of criminal judgments.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusCognizable IssuesDue ProcessCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureCourt RulesCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdiction

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.04

§ 110.04 Outline of Pleadings in Habeas Corpus Proceedings

A complete discussion of habeas corpus procedure is set out in Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice(Matthew Bender). An outline of the basic pleadings used in such proceedings is set forth below as an aid in the use of this chapter:

1. Petition for writ of habeas corpus is filed by petitioner or by some person in his or her behalf [see Penal Code § 1474]. The function of the petition is to obtain issuance of the writ [In re Egan (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 323, 330, 149 P.2d 693 , cert. denied, 323 U.S. 785, 65 S. Ct. 272, 89 L. Ed. 626] .

2. The writ is issued or denied [see Penal Code § 1476] ex parte in chambers [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 165, 166(a)(1)], or an order to show cause why the writ should not issue is granted [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1] . If the petition is filed in superior court, the court also has the option of requesting an informal response [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(a)(3)(A), (4)]. Generally, if the court fails to rule on the petition (by issuing an order to show cause, denying the writ, or requesting an informal response) within 60 days of its filing, the petitioner may file a notice and request for a ruling [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(a)(3)(B), (4); see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.550(b)(2) (order to show cause may be referred to as "granting the writ")]. If the court has requested an informal response, the court must issue an order to show cause or deny the petition within 45 days after receipt of the informal response [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(a)(5)].

3. The respondent makes a return to the writ [see Penal Code § 1480] or to the order to show cause [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(d); see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1] . The return is analogous to the complaint in a civil proceeding [In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1047, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921] . In superior court, any material allegation of the petition that is not controverted by the return is deemed admitted for purposes of the habeas corpus proceeding [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(d)].

4. Petitioner files a traverse to the return, which may deny or controvert any of the material facts or matters set forth in the return, except to the sufficiency of the return, or allege any fact to show either that > the imprisonment or detention is unlawful or that the person detained is entitled to discharge [see Penal Code § 1484; Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(e)]. The traverse is analogous to the answer in a civil proceeding. The petition may also be treated as a traverse either by stipulation or by acquiescence [In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1047, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921] . When the petitioner excepts to the sufficiency of thereturn, questions of law are raised in a procedure analogous to a demurrer [In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1048, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921] .

If an order to show cause has been issued by a superior court, the traverse (also called the "denial" in the California Rules of Court) must be served on the respondent and filed with the court within 30 days after service and filing of the return [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(e)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdictionCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionPleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.05

§ 110.05 Memorandum Not Expressly Required

Neither the Code of Civil Procedure nor the California Rules of Court require that a memorandum be filed in support of a petition for writ of habeas corpus, in support of a return, or in support of a traverse in the superior court or in an appellate court. Moreover, if filed by a petitioner who is not represented by an attorney, a petition for a writ of habeas corpus is specifically exempted from the general requirement that memoranda accompany petitions to reviewing courts for writs within the original jurisdiction of those courts [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.380(b)]. Even if the petition is filed by an attorney for the petitioner, there is no specific requirement that a memorandum of points and authorities be filed [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.384]. Nevertheless, the better practice, when time and circumstances allow, is to file a memorandum with the petition, the return, or the traverse, as the case may be, supporting the client's contention as to the availability of relief by writ of habeas corpus and as to the proper disposition of the case. Any memorandum an attorney submits with the petition must comply with Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.204(a) and (b) (specifying contents and form of briefs), and any supporting documents submitted by the attorney must comply with Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.486(c) (specifying form of supporting documents) [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.384(a)(2), (b)(3)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionSubject Matter JurisdictionGeneral OverviewCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdiction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.06

§ 110.06 Use of Chapter

No form in this chapter is intended to constitute a complete memorandum of in support of a pleading in a habeas corpus proceeding. Counsel should select the appropriate points and authorities from among those contained in this chapter to support the client's contention as to the availability of relief by habeas corpus and as to the propriety of the relief sought or opposed, and should thus construct a memorandum for use in supporting the petition, return, or traverse, as the case may be. The memorandum submitted with the petition for the writ should support the availability of the writ both generally and in the particular circumstances of the petitioner's case; should support the availability of the type of relief requested by petitioner; and should support the propriety of the court's granting the relief requested under the circumstances of the case. As a practical matter, the petition should be supported by a memorandum which is as completely supportive of all of petitioner's contentions as is possible, because the court may consider whether to grant or deny petitioner's application ex parte in chambers [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 165, 166(1)], and because the petition and supporting documents may later by stipulation be used as the answer, or traverse, to respondent's return to the writ and should, therefore, support those of petitioner's contentions which are challenged by respondent.

The return to the writ should also be supported by a memorandum that includes support for the maintenance of custody by respondent, which opposes the relief requested by petitioner, and, in an appropriate case, which challenges the availability of the writ, and, particularly where an order to show cause has been issued and the writ has not been issued ex parte, the sufficiency of the petition for the writ.

The traverse to the return should be supported by a memorandum that supports any contentions of the petitioner which were not raised in the petition and incorporated by reference in the traverse or used as a traverse by stipulation. The petitioner may also, in the traverse, except to the sufficiency of the return in a procedure analogous to a demurrer.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewContracts LawFormationCapacity of PartiesMental CapacityCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdictionCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas

CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionPleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.07

§ 110.07 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms of petitions, allegations, writs, returns, and traverses involving the writ of habeas corpus, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms for use in particular cases involving the writ of habeas corpus, see in that publication the following chapters:

- Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations.
- Ch. 135, Contempt.
- Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewContracts LawFormationCapacity of PartiesMental CapacityCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdictionCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionPleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.08

§ 110.08 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda that may be useful in particular proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus may be found in the following chapters in this publication:

- Ch. 47, Contempt.
- Ch. 117, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Actions Involving Mental Patients.
- Ch. 118, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Capacity to Contract.
- Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJurisdictionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureJurisdictionPersonal Jurisdiction & In Rem ActionsGeneral OverviewContracts LawFormationCapacity of PartiesMental CapacityCriminal Law & ProcedureHabeas CorpusProcedureFiling of PetitionJurisdiction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-110 California Points & Authorities §§ 110.09-110.19

[Reserved]

§§ 110.09[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.20

§ 110.20 Caption for Memorandum in Support of Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus or in Support of Return to Writ of Habeas Corpus--Superior Court

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

In the Matter of the Application of _____ [name], Petitioner, [on behalf of _____ (name)], for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.	)))))))	NO. _____ MEMORANDUM _____ [IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS or IN SUPPORT OF RETURN TO WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS or IN SUPPORT OF TRAVERSE]

_____

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing caption is for use in filing a memorandum submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus, in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus, or in support of the traverse, where such a memorandum is filed as a separate document. Such a memorandum may also be attached to a petition for the writ of habeas corpus, to a return to the writ of habeas corpus, or to the traverse, under the brief caption "Memorandum in Support of Petition," or "Memorandum in Support of Return," or "Memorandum in Support of Traverse," where the petition, return, or traverse, itself is introduced by the appropriate caption, and indicates that the document also contains a memorandum in its support.

[b] Appellate Courts

Where the petition and other pleadings are to be filed with a court of appeal or with the Supreme Court, the memorandum should be filed as a part of the pleading, under the appropriate brief heading, and the inclusion of the memorandum with the pleading should be indicated in the heading on the cover and in thetitle of the pleading. For a caption for a petition with memorandum for writ of habeas corpus to be filed in the court of appeal or in the Supreme Court, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of caption for a petition for writ of habeas corpus filed in the Superior Court, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.21

§ 110.21 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--General Authority [Penal Code § 1473]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

EVERY PERSON UNLAWFULLY IMPRISONED OR RESTRAINED UNDER ANY PRETENSE WHATEVER MAY PROSECUTE A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS TO INQUIRE INTO THE CAUSE OF THE IMPRISONMENT OR RESTRAINT.

Availability of Writ. Every person unlawfully imprisoned or restrained of his/her liberty, under any pretense whatever, may prosecute a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into the cause of the imprisonment or restraint (Penal Code § 1473(a)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing form is for use in a memorandum submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus. The foregoing statute supports the issuance of the writ wherever a person is unlawfully imprisoned or restrained. It may be used wherever no more specific authority supports the use of the writ in the factual situation in which petitioner is attempting to obtain relief by use of the writ, or this statute may be used together with more specific authority supporting the issuance of the writ in the particular factual situation.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing form may also be used in a memorandum submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ, where the return alleges that use of the writ is inappropriate in the circumstances in which petitioner is seeking relief.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.22

§ 110.22 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Constructive Restraint or Reasonable Apprehension of Restraint

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IS A PROPER REMEDY EVEN THOUGH PETITIONER IS NOT IN ACTUAL PHYSICAL DETENTION OR RESTRAINT IF PETITIONER IS CONSTRUCTIVELY RESTRAINED OR HAS REASONABLE APPREHENSION OF PHYSICAL RESTRAINT.

Constraint by Reasonable Apprehension of Force. To justify issuance of the writ of habeas corpus, constraint need not consist of actual physical force. Conduct inducing a reasonable apprehension of force may be sufficient to restrain one of his/her liberty (In re Rider (1920) 50 Cal. App. 797, 802, 195 P. 965).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner is not subject to actual physical restraint or imprisonment but is subject to a reasonable apprehension of restraint by force.

Counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the return alleges the impropriety of issuance of the writ because petitioner is not subject to physical restraint.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constraint by Reasonable Apprehension of Force

In re Rider (1920) 50 Cal. App. 797, 195 P. 965 , was a habeas corpus proceeding in which petitioner, a ward of the juvenile court being held in a juvenile hall prior to her preliminary examination on a complaint charging her with a felony, sought a writ of habeas corpus to compel respondent, the superintendent of the juvenile hall, to permit her to consult with her attorney without the presence of respondent or any other person whose presence was objectionable to petitioner. The superior court denied the petition for the writ, and petitioner applied to the court of appeal for the writ.

In issuing the writ, the court of appeal first determined that the right of an accused confined in a jail or other place of detention to consult with counsel without any third person objectionable to the prisoner being present is one of the fundamental rights guaranteed by American criminal law and by the California Constitution [decided under Cal. Const., art. I, § 1; now Cal. Const., art. I, § 10]. Respondent had conceded this right to petitioner but had argued that the writ of habeas corpus was not the proper remedy, since it will lie only where the person on whose behalf the writ is sought is unlawfully imprisoned and is entitled to release from custody. The court found that the language in Penal Code § 1473 allowing the writ to issue in all cases where the petitioner is unlawfully "restrained" of his or her liberty under any pretense whatever, in addition to those cases in which the petitioner is unlawfully "imprisoned," should be construed in favor of the citizen so as to entitle the petitioner to the writ of habeas corpus when, although in lawful custody, petitioner is deprived of some right to which, even in confinement, he or she is lawfully entitled under the constitution or laws of the United States or California.

The court of appeal further indicated that the right which is denied should be one the deprivation of which serves to make the imprisonment more onerous than the law allows or which curtails, to a greater extent than the law permits even in confinement, the person's freedom to go when and where he or she likes. The court reasoned that petitioner in this case was deprived of the privilege of going when and where she pleased by being denied a place to consult privately with counsel. The court also found that the fact that petitioner was not physically constrained was not determinative because constraint need not consist of actual physical force, but rather conduct inducing a reasonable apprehension of force. The court concluded that, by respondent's insistence on being within the presence of petitioner and her counsel under circumstances where, if petitioner were to object, she would be deprived of all opportunity to consult with counsel, petitioner was restrained of her liberty within the meaning of Penal Code § 1473, so that she had the right to inquire into the legality of that restraint on the writ of habeas corpus. The court ordered respondent to permit petitioner to consult privately with counsel.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.23

§ 110.23 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Lawfully in Custody but Unlawfully Restrained

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON LAWFULLY IN CUSTODY MAY USE THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS FOR THE PURPOSE OF VINDICATING RIGHTS TO WHICH HE/SHE IS ENTITLED IN CONFINEMENT.

A. Availability of Writ. [See § 110.21.]

B. Unlawful Restraint Within Lawful Custody. The writ of habeas corpus may be sought by one lawfully in custody for the purpose of vindicating rights to which he/she is entitled even in confinement (In re Allison (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 282, 285, 57 Cal. Rptr. 593, 425 P.2d 193).

[Optional] C. Communication with Counsel. An incarcerated person has the right to consult privately with counsel at reasonable times and that right is enforceable by writ of habeas corpus (In re Allison (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 282, 286-287, 57 Cal. Rptr. 593, 425 P.2d 193 ; In re Rider (1920) 50 Cal. App. 797, 801-802, 195 P. 965).

[Optional] D. Denial of Privileges Within Hospital. Even though confinement of a person within a hospital for mental disorder is legal, the writ of habeas corpus is available to challenge an allegedly improper condition of confinement which interferes with the treatment and chances of recovery of the confined person (In re Cirino (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 1012, 105 Cal. Rptr. 194).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner is lawfully in custody but wishes to challenge the terms or conditions of confinement by habeas corpus proceedings.

Counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relation between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unlawful Restraint Within Lawful Custody

In re Allison (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 282, 57 Cal. Rptr. 593, 425 P.2d 193 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which a prisoner in a state prison petitioned for the writ on the grounds that he had been denied the right to communicate with counsel and the opportunity to engage in legal research, and had been subjected to brutality by prison personnel. The original application appears to have been made to the court of appeal, although it does not appear from the record whether the petitioner first applied to the superior court and was refused relief in that court. The court of appeal issued an order to show cause why the writ of habeas corpus should not issue rather than issuing the writ itself (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). Although the court of appeal decided that petitioner was not, in fact, entitled under the law and facts of his particular case to the relief he had requested, the court found that the writ of habeas corpus may be sought by one lawfully in custody for the purpose of vindicating rights to which he or she is entitled even in custody.

[b] Communication With Counsel

The facts of In re Allison (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 282, 57 Cal. Rptr. 593, 425 P.2d 193 , are § 110.23[3][a]. In considering petitioner's application for relief by habeas corpus, the Supreme Court stated that a prisoner is entitled to consult privately with counsel at reasonable times and can enforce that right by writ of habeas corpus. The right, the Court noted, is available not only where an appeal or other legal action is pending, but wherever the prisoner seeks to communicate with counsel to interest counsel in whatever remedies the prisoner may have.

Although In re Allison, above, dealt with the right of a prisoner to counsel, the principle should be applicable to a person confined in a hospital or other facility.

In re Rider (1920) 50 Cal. App. 797, 195 P. 965 , is discussed in § 110.22[3][a].

[c] Denial of Privileges Within Hospital

In re Cirino (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 1009, 105 Cal. Rptr. 194 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which an inmate of a state mental hospital, committed as a person found not guilty by reason of insanity pursuant to Penal Code § 1026, petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus to have unlawful conditions of confinement, denying him grounds privileges at the hospital, removed. A superior court judge in the county in which the hospital was located had ordered that petitioner be confined without grounds privileges after the hospital personnel had granted petitioner those privileges. Although the Court denied the relief requested, the Court found that the petitioner had shown that a basic right was denied although he was legally in confinement. Under those circumstances, the court found even if a person in legal confinement were required to show the denial of a basic or fundamental right to be entitled to enforce that right by habeas corpus, petitioner had shown the denial of such a right when he alleged that grounds privileges were necessary to his further recovery.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unlawful Restraint Within Lawful Custody

In re Jordan (1972) 7 Cal. 3d 930, 103 Cal. Rptr. 849, 500 P.2d 873 , was a proceeding in which two inmates of a state prison sought by petition for writ of habeas corpus to challenge rules of the prison authorities forbidding confidential correspondence by an inmate with an attorney. The procedures followed in the case were not further discussed in the Supreme Court's opinion, but the Court held that inmates have a right to confidential correspondence with their attorneys unread and unopened by prison officials. In reaching this issue, the Court held that it is a well established rule that habeas corpus may be sought by one lawfully in custody for the purpose of vindicating rights to which he is entitled even in confinement (7 Cal. 3d 930, 932) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.24

§ 110.24 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Committed to State Facility [Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

ANY PERSON WHO HAS BEEN COMMITTED IS ENTITLED TO A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS ON PROPER APPLICATION TO THE SUPERIOR COURT OF THE COUNTY IN WHICH THE HOSPITAL IS LOCATED.

Person Committed Is Entitled to Writ. Any person who has been committed to a state mental hospital is entitled to a writ of habeas corpus on a proper application made by the Department of Health, by the person, or by a relative or friend in behalf of the person, to the judge of the superior court of the county in which the hospital is located, in order to inquire into the commitment and to determine whether the person has recovered (Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250; Cal. Const., art. I, § 11; In re De La O (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 128, 141-142).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner has been committed to a state mental hospital and wishes to have the court inquire into the truth of the allegations under which he or she was committed.

The petition supported by these points and authorities is generally filed in the superior court of the county in which the hospital is located [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250]. However, if the person was found incompetent to stand trial and committed in accordance with Penal Code Section 1367 et seq., judicial review must be in the superior court for the county that determined the question of the person's mental competence [Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250].

Counsel should include argument with this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Committed Is Entitled to Writ

The facts and procedure of In re De La O (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 128 are discussed in § 110.30[3][a]. In considering a habeas petition filed by a person committed to the California Rehabilitation Center as a drug addict convicted of a crime, the Supreme Court held that, even in the absence of a specific statutory remedy, Cal. Const., art. I, § 5 [now see Cal. Const., art. I, § 11] entitles a committed person to judicial review by a writ of habeas corpus to inquire into the fact of the commitment, including review of an administrative decision that the person could not yet be discharged (59 Cal. 2d 128, 141-142) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.25

§ 110.25 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Person Certified for Intensive Treatment as a Mental Patient [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5275]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

EVERY PERSON DETAINED BY CERTIFICATION FOR INTENSIVE TREATMENT IN A MENTAL INSTITUTION HAS A RIGHT TO A HEARING BY WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS FOR HIS/HER RELEASE AFTER MAKING A REQUEST FOR RELEASE.

Right of Person Certified to Hearing by Writ of Habeas Corpus. Every person detained involuntarily by certification for intensive treatment pursuant to the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.) has a right to a hearing by writ of habeas corpus for his/her release after he/she or any person acting on his/her behalf has made a request for release (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5275; Thorn v. Superior Court (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 666, 673, 83 Cal. Rptr. 600, 464 P.2d 56).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for a writ of habeas corpus when petitioner is a person who has been certified for involuntary intensive treatment in a mental treatment facility and has requested release from detention as provided in Welf. & Inst. Code § 5275.

Counsel should include argument with this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

Such review by writ of habeas corpus will be had in the superior court of the county in which the facility is located, unless the patient or a person acting in his or her behalf informs the professional staff of the 72-hour evaluation facility in writing that judicial review will be sought, in which case review will be in the superior court of the county in which the 72-hour evaluation facility is located [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5276].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

For discussion and procedural guide relating to review of certification for involuntary intensive treatment by writ of habeas corpus, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Committed Is Entitled to Writ

In Thorn v. Superior Court (1970) 1 Cal. 3d 666, 83 Cal. Rptr. 600, 464 P.2d 56 , the staff of a legal services organization obtained an order from the superior court appointing them as attorneys for all persons being detained in a county's facilities for the 14-day intensive treatment authorized by the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.]. The order directed the hospitals to admit the attorneys so that patients could be apprised of their legal rights, including the right to a writ of habeas corpus if they wished to leave, or else the court would issue a writ of habeas to have all such persons being treated brought before the court. Two hospitals sought a writ of prohibition seeking to nullify the order.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the court's order was an acceptable procedure to assure that the patients' rights received meaningful protection (1 Cal. 3d 666, 675-676) . The court recognized that the right to seek release on habeas corpus not only accords with the intent of the Legislature in enacting Welf. & Inst. Code § 5275 but also protects the patients' right to due process (1 Cal. 3d 666, 673) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.26

§ 110.26 Welf. & Inst. Code § 4800Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Availability of Writ--Adult Admitted or Committed to a Facility as a Mental Patient []

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

EVERY ADULT ADMITTED OR COMMITTED TO A STATE HOSPITAL OR OTHER FACILITY AS A DEVELOPMENTALLY DISABLED PATIENT HAS A RIGHT TO A HEARING BY WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS FOR HIS/HER RELEASE AFTER HE/SHE OR ANY PERSON ACTING IN HIS/HER BEHALF MAKES A REQUEST FOR RELEASE.

Right of Developmentally Disabled Adult to Hearing by Writ of Habeas Corpus. Every adult who is or has been admitted or committed to a _____ [state hospital, or community care facility as defined in Section 1504 of the Health and Safety Code, or health facility as defined in Section 1250 of the Health and Safety Code] as a developmentally disabled patient has a right to a hearing by writ of habeas corpus for his/her release from the _____ [hospital, or community care facility, or health facility] after he/she or any person acting on his/her behalf makes a request for release (Welf. & Inst. Code § 4800).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing authority is for use in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner is an adult who has been admitted or committed to a state hospital or other facility as a developmentally disabled patient and wishes to seek release.

Counsel should include with the foregoing authority argument showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

Judicial review on the writ of habeas corpus under Welfare & Institutions Code § 4800 generally must be sought in the county in which the hospital or other facility is located [Welf. & Inst. Code § 4801(a)]. However, if the adult has been found incompetent to stand trial and has been committed under Penal Code § 1367 et seq. , judicial review must be in the superior court of the county that determined the question of the mental competence of the defendant [Welf. & Inst. Code § 4801(a)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.27

§ 110.27 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Unconstitutionality of Civil Commitment Procedures

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS LIES TO TEST THE CONSTITUTIONALITY OF CIVIL PROCEDURES UNDER WHICH PETITIONER HAS BEEN IMPRISONED OR CONSTRUCTIVELY RESTRAINED.

A. Constitutionality of Civil Detention. Habeas corpus lies to test the constitutionality of civil legislation under which the petitioner was imprisoned or constructively restrained (In re Harris (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 486, 487-488, 72 Cal. Rptr. 340, 446 P.2d 148).

B. Due Process Right in Civil Detention. A person who is deprived of his/her liberty by civil process is as much entitled to due process of law as a defendant who is deprived of his/her liberty because he/she is charged with a crime (In re Harris (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 486, 491, 72 Cal. Rptr. 340, 446 P.2d 148).

[Optional] C. Due Process in Civil Commitment Procedures. The writ of habeas corpus will lie to test the constitutionality of legislation under which persons may be civilly committed to hospitals or other institutions for mental illness (see In re Lambert (1901) 134 Cal. 626, 634-635).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner seeks to test the constitutionality of civil commitment procedures pursuant to which he or she was committed or confined.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Constitutionality of Civil Detention

In re Harris (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 486, 72 Cal. Rptr. 340, 446 P.2d 148 , was a proceeding on the writ of habeas corpus, in which a person who was a party to a civil action sought to challenge the constitutionality of the civil arrest procedures under which he had been arrested and detained. Petitioner contended, and the Supreme Court agreed, that the procedures did not provide due process of law. In reaching this holding, the Court noted that habeas corpus lies to test the constitutionality of the legislation under which the petitioner was imprisoned and was then constructively restrained on bail. After examining the procedures followed under the statutes, the Court concluded that due process had not been afforded petitioner and that a defendant who is deprived of liberty by civil process is as much entitled to due process of law as a defendant who is deprived of liberty because he or she is charged with a crime.

[b] Due Process Right in Civil Detention

In re Harris (1968) 69 Cal. 2d 486, 72 Cal. Rptr. 340, 446 P.2d 148 , is discussed in § 110.27[3][a].

[c] Due Process in Civil Commitment Procedures

In re Lambert (1901) 134 Cal. 626 , was a habeas corpus proceeding in which petitioner sought release from a civil commitment to a state hospital for the insane. The Supreme Court issued the writ on the petition, and the respondent in the return alleged the order of commitment by a superior court authorizing the commitment and that the petitioner was still insane and not entitled to release. The petitioner challenged the sufficiency of the return on the ground that the statutes authorizing the commitment under which the proceedings for his commitment were had, were unconstitutional, in that he had been deprived of due process of law, and that the proceedings were, therefore, beyond the jurisdiction of the superior court. The Court considered the constitutionality of the questioned statutes and found that they did deprive persons committed of due process, in that there was no provision for notice of the proceedings to the person to be committed and in that the entire proceeding could be conducted ex parte. The only hearing provided for could be had on request of the person committed only after placement in the hospital and only if the person provided for the payment of costs. The Court noted that a commitment could be had on the certificate of two medical examiners without any independent examination by the court. The opinion of doctors on the question of sanity, the Court noted, is not always uniform or infallible, especially if the opinion is formed ex parte or without an opportunity for full investigation of the charge. The Court further found that the order of commitment is not made by the superior court in the exercise of any judicial authority of the state which the constitution has vested in the superior court, but in the exercise of a merely statutory authority conferred on the court by the insanity and commitment laws. In the exercise of such statutory authority, the Court found, it is essential that the facts on which te court's right to exercise sch authority depend must be se forth in the document by which the person is to be deprived of liberty. In discharging petitioner from the hospital, the Court held that the insanity law in question, to the extent that it authorized the confinement of a person in an insane asylum without giving notice and an opportunity to be heard on the charge, was unconstitutional, and that the proceedings by which petitioner had been held were invalid.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.28

§ 110.28 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Failure to Follow Statutory Procedures

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON COMMITTED IN A CIVIL COMMITMENT PROCEEDING MAY SECURE RELEASE ON THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS WHERE THERE WAS NOT STRICT COMPLIANCE WITH EACH OF THE SPECIFIC STATUTORY PREREQUISITES FOR MAINTENANCE OF THE PROCEEDING AND SUBSTANTIAL COMPLIANCE WITH ALL OF THE STATUTORY REQUIREMENTS.

A. Strict Compliance with Statutory Prerequisites. Where a person is committed pursuant to a statutory civil commitment proceeding which is in the nature of a special civil proceeding unknown at common law, jurisdiction to enter an order of commitment depends on strict compliance with each of the statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding, and the requirements of the statute must be at least substantially, if not strictly, followed in order to give the court hearing the proceedings jurisdiction. The lack of jurisdiction entitles the petitioner to relief by writ of habeas corpus (In re Raner (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 635, 639, 30 Cal. Rptr. 814, 381 P.2d 638).

[Optional] B. Commitment As Mentally Disordered. The authority of the court in commitment of persons as mentally disordered is statutory and depends on at least substantial compliance with the statutory procedures (In re Hofmann (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 758, 761-762, 281 P.2d 96).

[Optional] C. Commitment As Narcotic Addict Not Charged With Crime. The commitment procedures for narcotic addicts not charged with a crime (see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 3100-3111) are in the nature of special civil proceedings unknown to the common law and are a creature of statute, so that jurisdiction to enter an order of commitment pursuant to these procedures depends on strict compliance with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding (In re Raner (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 635, 639, 30 Cal. Rptr. 814, 381 P.2d 638 (decided under former Penal Code §§ 6500-6510).

[Optional] D. Commitment As Narcotic Addict Convicted of Crime. The commitment procedures for narcotic addicts who have been convicted of a crime (see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 3050-3054) are in the nature of special civil procedures unknown to the common law and are a creature of statute, so that jurisdiction to enter an order of commitment pursuant to these procedures depends on strict compliance with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding (In re Johnson (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 644, 645-646, 30 Cal. Rptr. 819, 381 P.2d 643).

[Optional] E. Commitment of Mentally Disordered Juvenile Court Wart. The commitment of a minor ward of the juvenile court to a state hospital can be lawfully accomplished only in accordance with the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.), and when the protections afforded by that act are not accorded to petitioner, the writ of habeas corpus will lie (In re E. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 183, 189, 193, 123 Cal. Rptr. 103, 538 P.2d 231).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for writ of habeas corpus where petitioner seeks to challenge the validity of a commitment pursuant to a civil commitment procedure on the ground that the committing court has exceeded its jurisdiction in that the statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding have not been strictly followed and the statutory requirements have not been substantially complied with.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the return alleges that habeas corpus is an inappropriate remedy for invalid civil commitment proceedings or that strict compliance with statutory procedures is unnecessary.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for the writ of habeas corpus to test the validity of a civil commitment, see Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Strict Compliance With Statutory Prerequisites

In re Raner (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 635, 30 Cal. Rptr. 814, 381 P.2d 638 , was a petition for the writ of habeas corpus by a person confined as a narcotic addict for treatment in the California Rehabilitation Center under an order of commitment entered pursuant to former Penal Code §§ 6500-6510 (now Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 3100-3111) providing for commitment of narcotic addicts not charged with a crime. Petition for the writ of habeas corpus was made to the Supreme Court, which issued an order to show cause why the writ should not issue (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]) and appointed counsel for petitioner. Petitioner sought to challenge the constitutionality of the statutory procedures and also contended that the procedural safeguards set up by the statutes were disregarded in his case so that he was committed illegally and without due process of law. The court held that the statutory procedure in question is a creature of statute unknown at common law, so that jurisdiction to enter an order of commitment depends on strict compliance with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding. All the statutory requirements must be at least substantially, if not strictly, followed in order to give the court jurisdiction of the proceedings. The failure to give petitioner notice of the hearing in this case as required by statute, deprived the court of jurisdiction to enter the commitment order, the Court found. The Court further held that the right to notice of the time and place of the hearing, which had also not been given to petitioner, was essential to the fairness of the entire proceeding. The court granted the writ of habeas corpus and ordered petitioner discharged from custody.

[b] Commitment As Mentally Disordered

In re Hofmann (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 758, 281 P.2d 96 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which the attorney for a person confined at a mental hospital as a mental patient petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of habeas corpus after an order of the superior court committing the person to the hospital. The court of appeal issued a writ of habeas corpus, to which return was filed, and on which a hearing was held. The court of appeal ordered the person released from confinement due to irregularities in the proceedings leading up to confinement. The superior court had failed to follow the statutory procedures for notice of the person to be confined and for the person to remain at home during the proceedings. The court of appeal, in granting the requested relief, held that the authority of the court in matters of civil commitment is statutory and found not even substantial compliance with the prescribed procedure.

[c] Commitment As Narcotic Addict Not Charged With Crime

In re Raner (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 635, 30 Cal. Rptr. 814, 381 P.2d 638 , was discussed in § 110.28[3][a].

[d] Commitment As Narcotic Addict Convicted of Crime

In re Johnson (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 644, 30 Cal. Rptr. 819, 381 P.2d 643 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which petitioner was committed to the California Rehabilitation Center for treatment as a narcotic addict by an order of the superior court pursuant to former Penal Code §§ 6500-6510 [now Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 3050-3054] providing for commitment of narcotic addicts convicted of a crime. The Supreme Court issued an order to show cause (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]) and appointed counsel for petitioner. After the hearing on the order to show cause, the Court granted the writ of habeas corpus and discharged petitioner from custody, finding that he had not been given notice as required by the statute. The Court found that, as in the case of procedures for commitment of narcotic addicts not convicted of crimes, strict compliance with the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceedings was required, and that without such compliance, the court was without jurisdiction to enter the order of commitment.

[e] Commitment of Mentally Disordered Juvenile Court Ward

In re E. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 183, 123 Cal. Rptr. 103, 538 P.2d 231 , was a habeas corpus proceeding in which petitioner, a ward of the juvenile court confined to a state mental hospital pursuant to an order of the juvenile court authorizing his placement for treatment of a mental disorder, sought release on the grounds that his commitment was effected without compliance with protections afforded to persons committed in analogous situations. A juvenile court referee had ordered petitioner placed in the care of a probation officer for commitment and instructed the officer to deliver petitioner to a hospital. A petition for rehearing was filed and heard before a juvenile court judge in which petitioner raised the contention that he could not be committed except in accordance with the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.]. Petitioner was purportedly "voluntarily" admitted to the state hospital by the probation officer, in accordance with the order of the court after rehearing. The petitioner applied to the court of appeal for a writ of habeas corpus, but relief was denied. He then petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of habeas corpus, and the Supreme Court granted the writ and disapproved the opinion of the court of appeal in In re M. J. E. (1974) 43 Cal. App. 3d 792, 118 Cal. Rptr. 398 , which had denied the writ. In granting the writ and discharging petitioner from the detention and commitment, the Court found that the actual commitment of a mentally disordered minor who is also a ward of the juvenile court can be accomplished only in accordance with the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act. The Court also found that the petitioner had not been committed in accordance with the Act and that none of the protections which would have been given to petitioner if the Act had been followed had been afforded him by the procedures followed by the juvenile court.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.29

§ 110.29 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Commitment to Mental Hospital as Required to Have Reasonable Relationship to Purpose of Commitment

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON WHOSE COMMITMENT TO A STATE FACILITY AS A MENTAL PATIENT NO LONGER BEARS A REASONABLE RELATIONSHIP TO THE PURPOSE WHICH ORIGINALLY JUSTIFIED THE COMMITMENT IS ENTITLED TO SEEK RELEASE BY WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

A. Validity of Commitment. Due process demands that the duration of a commitment to a state facility as a mental patient must bear some reasonable relation to the purpose which originally justified the commitment (In re Davis (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 798, 805, 106 Cal. Rptr. 178, 505 P.2d 1018 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 870, 94 S. Ct. 87, 38 L. Ed. 2d 88).

B. Habeas Corpus Available. A person committed to a mental hospital may seek a writ of habeas corpus to test the continued validity of his/her commitment on the ground that it no longer bears a reasonable relationship to the purpose which originally justified the commitment (In re Davis (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 798, 809-810, 106 Cal. Rptr. 178, 505 P.2d 1018 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 870, 94 S. Ct. 87, 38 L. Ed. 2d 88 ; In re Gary W. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 296, 303, 96 Cal. Rptr. 1, 486 P.2d 1201).

[Optional] C. Failure of Committed Person to Receive Treatment. Where detention of a person in a mental facility is authorized by statute for purposes of treatment, any person confined who is not receiving treatment may seek release through appropriate habeas corpus procedures (In re Gary W. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 296, 303, 96 Cal. Rptr. 1, 486 P.2d 1201).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner seeks release on the ground that the commitment does not bear a reasonable relation to the purpose for which he or she was originally committed.

Counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Validity of Commitment

In re Davis (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 798, 106 Cal. Rptr. 178, 505 P.2d 1018 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 870, 94 S. Ct. 87, 38 L. Ed. 2d 88 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which petitioners sought to review the constitutionality of procedures for the commitment to, and release from, state hospitals of defendants in criminal cases who have been found to lack sufficient mental competence to stand trial. The lower court proceedings, if any, do not appear from the opinion. The Supreme Court issued orders to show cause (a procedure frequently followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). In discharging the orders to show cause and denying the writ of habeas corpus, the Court nevertheless found that due process demands that the duration of commitments to state hospitals must bear some reasonable relation to the purpose which originally justified the commitment. As a result, the Court found, a person charged with a criminal offense who is committed solely on account of incapacity to proceed with trial cannot be held more than the reasonable period of time necessary to determine whether there is a substantial probability that the person will attain that capacity in the foreseeable future. If it is determined that this is not the case, then the state must either begin the customary civil commitment proceeding that would be required to commit indefinitely any other citizen, or release the defendant. The Court also adopted the rule that even if it is determined that the defendant probably soon will be able to stand trial, continued commitment must be justified by progress toward that goal.

[b] Habeas Corpus Available

The facts of In re Davis (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 798, 106 Cal. Rptr. 178, 505 P.2d 1018 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 870, 94 S. Ct. 87, 38 L. Ed. 2d 88 , are discussed in § 110.29[3][a]. In discharging the orders to show cause and denying the writ of habeas corpus, the Court also dealt with the petitioners' contentions that Penal Code § 1370 (defendants incompetent to stand trial) was invalid for failing to provide opportunity for a defendant to initiate proceedings for release on the ground that he or she is now competent to stand trial. The Court held that there is ample opportunity to obtain release on this ground through the initiation of habeas corpus proceedings pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 7250, among other procedures.

In re Gary W. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 296, 96 Cal. Rptr. 1, 486 P.2d 1201 , was an appeal from an order of the trial court that a minor remain subject to the control of the Youth Authority for two years pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 1800-1803; on a finding that he was a person physically dangerous due to his mental deficiency. The minor appealed from the order of the trial court, and the Supreme Court ordered the juvenile court order vacated and the matter remanded to the juvenile court for proceedings not inconsistent with its decision, in which the Court had held that the minor was entitled to, among other safeguards, a jury trial on the issue of his dangerousness. The Court noted that the statutes under which the minor was to be held, Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 1800-1803, authorize detention only of wards for whom treatment for the underlying cause of the dangerousness is provided. Since the Youth Authority is under an affirmative duty to provide treatment, the Court held that detention without treatment of such wards would be unauthorized by statute and that any person confined pursuant to those sections who is not receiving treatment may seek release through appropriate habeas corpus procedures.

[c] Failure of Committed Person to Receive Treatment

In re Gary W. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 296, 96 Cal. Rptr. 1, 486 P.2d 1201 , is discussed in § 110.29[3][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure of Committed Person to Receive Treatment

In People v. Feagley (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 338, 121 Cal. Rptr. 509, 535 P.2d 373 , defendant was convicted of a misdemeanor, found to be a mentally disordered sex offender, and committed to an institutional unit of a state prison. On appeal from the judgment that he was a mentally disordered sex offender, defendant challenged the procedures under which he was committed and contended that he was illegally committed to an institution in which adequate treatment was not furnished. The Attorney General argued that defendant had a statutory right to treatment and, if confined without treatment, should enforce that right through a petition for the writ of habeas corpus. The Supreme Court, in reversing on appeal the commitment by the lower court, found that habeas corpus is an appropriate remedy to test a civil confinement which is in violation of a statutory right to treatment, but that defendant in this case was not required to use the remedy by writ of habeas corpus and reversed the commitment on appeal.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.30

§ 110.30 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Person Committed to Mental Facility as Entitled to Writ to Test Recovery

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON COMMITTED PURSUANT TO A CIVIL COMMITMENT PROCEDURE IS ENTITLED TO A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS TO DETERMINE WHETHER HE/SHE HAS RECOVERED FROM THE CONDITION WHICH JUSTIFIED THE COMMITMENT.

Recovery of Committed Person. Pursuant to the constitutional guarantee found in Article I, Section 11, of the California Constitution, that the writ of habeas corpus may not be suspended unless required by public safety in cases of rebellion or invasion, a person committed pursuant to a civil commitment procedure which gives the person no specific remedy for determining the question of his/her recovery is entitled to have that question determined by writ of habeas corpus (In re De La O (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 128, 142-143, 28 Cal. Rptr. 489, 378 P.2d 793).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus when the petitioner seeks to have the court determine the question of his or her eligibility for release from a civil commitment due to recovery from the condition which justified the commitment.

Counsel should include argument with this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Recovery of Committed Person

In re De La O (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 128, 28 Cal. Rptr. 489, 378 P.2d 793 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus, in which petitioner, a person committed to the California Rehabilitation Center under an order of commitment pursuant to former Penal Code § 6450 [see now Welf. & Inst. Code § 3050] attacked the constitutionality of the statutes under which he was confined. Petitioner had been convicted of a misdemeanor and was certified to the superior court for proceedings for commitment as a narcotic addict convicted of a crime. The Supreme Court rejected petitioner's contention in a petition for writ of habeas corpus that the statutes in question were unconstitutional in that they provided a criminal penalty for an illness, narcotic addiction. In determining that the statutes did not provide a criminal penalty, the Court noted that the statutes did not provide a specific method for judicial review of an administrative determination not to release petitioner before a specified term had run. However, it concluded that the writ of habeas corpus is available to any person confined pursuant to a civil commitment procedure who seeks to have a court determine whether the person is, in fact, subject to commitment or whether the person has recovered from the condition which justified commitment. The Court found that this right flows not from any statutory provision but from the constitutional guarantee that the writ may not be suspended [see Calif Const, Art I, § 11] (59 Cal. 2d 128, 142-143) .

[b] Person Incompetent to Stand Trial

In re Davis (1973) 8 Cal. 3d 798, 106 Cal. Rptr. 178, 505 P.2d 1018 , cert. denied, 414 U.S. 870, 94 S. Ct. 87, 38 L. Ed. 2d 88 is discussed in § 110.29[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.31

§ 110.31 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Challenge to Commitment or Continued Confinement as Mentally Disordered Sex Offender

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IS AN APPROPRIATE REMEDY TO CHALLENGE THE VALIDITY OF COMMITMENT OR CONTINUED CONFINEMENT OF A PERSON AS A MENTALLY DISORDERED SEX OFFENDER.

A. Challenge to Commitment or Continued Confinement As Mentally Disordered Sex Offender. Habeas corpus is appropriate to challenge the validity of a person's commitment or continued confinement as a mentally disordered sex offender (In re Bevill (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 854, 858, 69 Cal. Rptr. 599, 442 P.2d 679).

[Optional] B. Failure to Follow Statutory Procedures. Jurisdiction to enter an order committing a person to custody as a mentally disordered sex offender depends on strict compliance with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding, and a commitment which fails to comply with these prerequisites may be set aside in a habeas corpus proceeding (In re Kramer (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 287, 289, 64 Cal. Rptr. 686).

[Optional] C. Violation of Due Process. Where the procedures followed by the trial court in a proceeding to commit a person as a mentally disordered sex offender were so inadequate as to be a violation of due process, the commitment may be set aside in a habeas corpus proceeding (In re Kramer (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 287, 289, 64 Cal. Rptr. 686).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner wishes to use the writ to challenge the validity of commitment or continued confinement as a mentally disordered sex offender.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities supporting a traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus, where the return alleges that the writ is inappropriate to challenge commitment or continued confinement as a mentally disordered sex offender.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Challenge to Commitment or Continued Confinement as Mentally Disordered Sex Offender

In re Bevill (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 854, 69 Cal. Rptr. 599, 442 P.2d 679 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus brought by a person confined as a mentally disordered sex offender on the ground that he was convicted under an unconstitutional statute. The Supreme Court issued an order to show cause why the writ should not issue (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). In granting the writ and discharging petitioner from custody, the Supreme Court found that the writ of habeas corpus is an appropriate remedy for challenging the validity of commitment or continued confinement as a mentally disordered sex offender.

[b] Failure to Follow Statutory Procedures

In re Kramer (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 287, 64 Cal. Rptr. 686 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which petitioner had been committed to a state institution as a mentally disordered sex offender. Petitioner had not appealed from the order of commitment. The petition for the writ filed with the court of appeal alleged that petitioner was illegally confined in that the superior court had failed to conduct the proceedings as required by the statutory provisions. The facts appearing from the petition and the return showed that the proceedings were defective in that no form of certification was delivered to petitioner to give him notice as required by the statute, the judge failed to inform petitioner of his rights to make a reply and to produce witnesses as required by statute, and no sufficient hearing was held. In granting the writ of habeas corpus and ordering petitioner returned to superior court for proceedings to determine whether he was a mentally disordered sex offender, the court found that the failure to deliver to petitioner the necessary notice and to inform him of his rights constituted a denial of due process. In mentally disordered sex offender proceedings, the court found as in proceedings for commitment ofnarcotic addicts, jurisdiction to enter an order of commitment depends on strict complaince with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding.

[c] Violation of Due Process

In re Kramer (1967) 257 Cal. App. 2d 287, 64 Cal. Rptr. 686 , is discussed in § 110.31[3][b].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.32

§ 110.32 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Civil Commitment--Person Committed to Mental Facility as Entitled to Be Present at Commitment Hearing

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON COMMITTED IN A CIVIL COMMITMENT PROCEEDING MAY SECURE RELEASE BY WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS WHEN THAT PERSON WAS DENIED HIS/HER RIGHT TO BE PRESENT AT HIS/HER COMMITMENT PROCEEDING.

Right to Be Present at Commitment Hearing. A hearing to determine a person's mental retardation and dangerousness may result in a substantial loss of personal liberty; therefore, a person subject to civil commitment proceedings is entitled to a hearing that complies with the due process requirements of the United States and California Constitutions, and absent waiver of the right to be present or evidence that the person was physically incapable of being present, that his or her attendance would aggravate his or her propensity for dangerous conduct, or that he or she was unable to understand and participate in the proceedings, the denial of a person's right to be present during the presentation of evidence against him or her deprives that person of his or her fundamental constitutional right to due process of law (In re Watson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 459, 154 Cal. Rptr. 151).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for writ of habeas corpus when petitioner seeks to challenge the validity of a commitment pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 6500.1 based on the ground that petitioner was denied his or her fundamental constitutional right to due process of law by being denied the right to be present at the commitment hearing.

Counsel should insert argument in the foregoing form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel should include discussion of facts in the record showing that petitioner did not waive his or her right to be present at the commitment hearing and should point out the absence of any facts in the record affirmatively showing that the person is so mentally retarded as to be unable to comprehend the proceedings [In re Watson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 462, 154 Cal. Rptr. 151] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right to Be Present at Commitment Hearing

In re Watson (1979) 91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 154 Cal. Rptr. 151 , involved a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Petitioner was committed to the state hospital as a developmentally disabled person. She was not present at the committment hearing, although petitioner's counsel had discussed the proceedings with petitioner, petitioner knew that counsel would submit the matter on the papers and reports available, and petitioner was aware that the likely outcome would be her commitment to the state hospital. Petitioner contended that her constitutional rights were violated. The court of appeal agreed and granted the petition.

The court stated that habeas corpus is a proper remedy in California to collaterally attack a judgment of conviction that has been obtained in violation of fundamental constitutional rights. The court held that although petitioner was not convicted of a crime, she was no less entitled to the protection of her fundamental constitutional rights, and a judgment obtained in violation of those rights was vulnerable to collateral attack (91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 458) . The court noted that commitment under Welf. & Inst. Code § 6500.1 is a commitment for placement in a state hospital, and no mentally retarded person may be so committed without proof of dangerousness to self or others (91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 458-459) . The court held that a hearing to determine a person's mental retardation and dangerousness may result in a substantial loss of personal liberty and that petititoner was therefore entitled to a hearing that complies with the due process requirements of the United States and California Constitituions (91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 459) . The court found that petitioner had not waived her right to be present and that there was no evidence to show that petitioner was physically incapable of being present, that her attendance would have aggravated her propensity for dangerous conduct, or that she was unable to understand and participate in the proceedings. Therefore, the court held that the denial of petitioner's right to be present during the presentation of evidence against her could and did result in a substantial loss of personal liberty and deprived her of her fundamental constitutional right to due process of law (91 Cal. App. 3d 455, 460) .

51 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.33

§ 110.33 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Trial Court Lacked Jurisdiction to Impose the Order or Judgment Confining Petitioner

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS WILL LIE TO TEST THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT UNDER WHOSE ORDER PETITIONER IS RESTRAINED, AND PETITIONER WILL BE RELEASED WHERE THE ORDER WAS BEYOND THE JURISDICTION OF THE COURT.

A. Habeas Corpus Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction. A writ of habeas corpus will lie where it appears on the face of the record that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to impose the order or judgment pursuant to which the petitioner is held in custody (Penal Code § 1487(1); In re Clark (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 838, 840, 337 P.2d 67 ; In re Kowalski (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 67, 71, 98 Cal. Rptr. 444).

B. Discharge From Custody Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or of any judge or other officer of such a court, the person may be discharged from custody when the jurisdiction of the court of officer has been exceeded (Penal Code § 1487(1)).

C. Broad Meaning of Jurisdiction on Habeas Corpus. For purposes of the writ of habeas corpus, as for purposes of prohibition or certiorari, the term "jurisdiction" is not limited to its fundamental meaning, and in such proceedings judicial acts may be restrained or annulled if they are determined to be in excess of the court's powers as defined by constitutional provision, statute, or rules developed by courts (In re Zerbe (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 666, 667-668, 36 Cal. Rptr. 286, 388 P.2d 182).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner seeks relief on the basis that the court by virtue of whose process the petitioner is held in custody lacked jurisdiction or exceeded its jurisdiction in making the order of custody.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the forgoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus, where the return has alleged that the custody is by virtue of the process of a court and the petitioner wishes to seek relief on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction or exceeded its jurisdiction in entering the order in question.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction

In re Clark (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 838, 337 P.2d 67 , was a habeas corpus proceeding in which an attorney filed a petition for the writ on behalf of a prisoner alleging that a trial court exceeded its jurisdiction in modifying the terms of probation of the prisoner. The Supreme Court held that the order modifying the terms of probation was beyond the jurisdiction of the court, since it was based on the same facts as the original order granting probation. Although the prisoner had not appealed the order, the Court held that habeas corpus would lie. The Court stated that, although habeas corpus is ordinarily not a substitute for an appeal, the writ will lie where it appears on the face of the record that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to impose the order or judgment pursuant to which the petitioner is held in custody, although an appeal was not taken. The Court discharged defendant from custody and granted the writ.

In re Kowalski (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 67, 98 Cal. Rptr. 444 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which petitioner alleged that he was entitled to be released from custody since the trial court had granted a motion to set aside his indictment and ordered the case dismissed but another superior court judge had set aside the dismissal, fixing a date for trial and setting bail. Petitioner argued that the action of the second judge was without jurisdiction. The court of appeal granted the writ and discharged petitioner from custody, agreeing that the order setting aside the dismissal, was beyond the court's jurisdiction. In determining that the writ should be granted, the court noted that a writ of habeas corpus will lie where it appears on the face of the record that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to impose the order or judgment pursuant to which the petitioner is held in custody.

[b] Broad Meaning of Jurisdiction on Habeas Corpus

In re Zerbe (1964) 60 Cal. 2d 666, 36 Cal. Rptr. 286, 388 P.2d 182 , was a habeas corpus proceeding to secure release of a prisoner from custody. Petitioner was convicted in a municipal court of a criminal offense. The judgment was affirmed by the appellate department of the superior court, which certified a transfer of the case to the court of appeal, which denied the transfer. Petitioner then began the habeas corpus proceeding in the Supreme Court, to secure release from custody. In granting the writ of habeas corpus, the Supreme Court found that habeas corpus is available in cases where the court has acted in excess of its jurisdiction, and that "jurisdiction," for purposes of the writ of habeas corpus, as well as prohibition and certiorari, is not limited to its fundamental meaning. The Court found that in such proceedings judicial acts may be restrained or annulled if determined to be in excess of the court's powers as defined by constitutional provision, statute, or rules developed by courts. In discharging petitioner from custody, the Court found the act of the trial court to be beyond its jurisdiction and habeas corpus to be the proper remedy where there is no material dispute as to the facts of the conviction and it appears that the statute under which the petitioner was convicted did not prohibit the conduct.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus Where Court Lacked Jurisdiction

People v. Mutch (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 389, 93 Cal. Rptr. 721, 482 P.2d 633 , was a proceeding by a person convicted of kidnapping under an overruled interpretation of the kidnapping statutes. Defendant petitioned the court of appeal for a recall of the remittitur or other appropriate relief, contending that he was entitled to a redetermination of his appeal in the light of an intervening case. In deciding that it could give relief to defendant despite the finality of the case for purposes of appeal, the court noted that habeas corpus or other appropriate extraordinary remedy will lie to rectify the error where defendant was convicted although what he did was not prohibited by the statute. The court noted that habeas corpus is available in cases where the court has acted in excess of its jurisdiction and that for purposes of this writ the term "jurisdiction" is not limited to its fundamental meaning, and in such proceedings judicial acts may be restrained or annulled if determined to be in excess of the court's powers as defined by constitutional provision, statute, or rules developed by courts.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.34

§ 110.34 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody by Previous Order of Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON ENTITLED TO THE PHYSICAL CUSTODY OF A MINOR CHILD MAY ENFORCE THAT RIGHT AGAINST A PERSON WRONGFULLY WITHHOLDING THE CHILD BY PETITIONING FOR THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

A. Availability of Writ. [See § 110.21.]

B. Enforcement of Custody of Minor Child. It is well settled that a person entitled to the physical custody of a minor child may enforce the right to custody against a person wrongfully withholding the child by a petition for writ of habeas corpus (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 789, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

C. Enforcement of Previous Custody Order. The writ of habeas corpus will lie to correct violations of a custody order, since the writ will lie when the person entitled to custody of a minor child is denied possession of the child (In re Barr (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 25, 27, 243 P.2d 787).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus where petitioner seeks to regain custody of a child against a person withholding custody of the child in violation of an order of a court.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

For a form of petition for writ of habeas corpus to regain custody of a child pursuant to a court order, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Custody of Minor Child

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , was a proceeding on the writ of habeas corpus by the mother of an illegitimate child to have the child returned to her custody. Before filing her petition with the Supreme Court, petitioner had filed a petition with the superior court which had then issued a writ commanding respondent, the child's father, to appear with the child. In his return to the writ, the father alleged that he had legitimated the child and was entitled to custody. After an evidentiary hearing, the superior court found that the father had legitimated the child and had custody rights equal to those of the mother. The court referred the case for preparation of a custody report and, after considering that report, awarded permanent custody of the child to the father. The mother then sought a writ of habeas corpus in the court of appeal, which issued an order to show cause (a procedure frequently followed in appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]), a writ of habeas corpus ordering the father to deliver the child to the mother, and an auxilliary writ of prohibition restraining the superior court from enforcing its order. The Supreme Court granted a hearing. In deciding to what extent it should be bound by the determinations of the lower courts in previous habeas corpus proceedings, the Supreme Court held that it is well settled that a person entitled to the physical custody of a minor child may enforce the right to that custody as against one wrongfully withholding the child by a petition for writ of habeas corpus. The Court then found that there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's findings and that the mother was not entitled to return of the child from the father.

[b] Enforcement of Previous Custody Order

In re Barr (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 25, 243 P.2d 787 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus brought by the mother of a child against her former husband, the father of the child, who had retained custody of the child pursuant to a modified custody order from which the petitioner had filed an appeal. Since at the time of this decision an appeal from a modified custody order automatically stayed enforcement of the modified order, the Supreme Court found that the petitioner was entitled to regain custody of the child by writ of habeas corpus and granted the writ. The Court held that the writ is a remedy to correct violations of court orders granting custody of children, since the writ will lie when a person entitled to custody of a child is denied possession of the child.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Previous Custody Order

Rose v. Superior Court (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 173, 194 P.2d 568 , was a proceeding in which petitioner sought a writ of certiorari for the purpose of annulling a writ of habeas corpus and all proceedings connected with the habeas corpus matter. Petitioner for certiorari was the mother of a child who had been adopted by the mother's parents in Kentucky. Petitioner had brought the child to California and refused to return the child to Kentucky. Her parents then petitioned the superior court in California for a writ of habeas corpus to get custody of the child. After a hearing, the court ordered the child returned to the grandparents, and petitioner sought the writ of certiorari. (At the time, there was no appeal from an order granting the writ of habeas corpus.) The court of appeal held that the superior court had jurisdiction to entertain the petition for writ of habeas corpus, since it was well established that the superior court has jurisdiction to entertain an application for the writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of obtaining the custody of a minor child. Habeas corpus, the court held, was the proper procedure to release an infant from all manner of illegal restraint and to determine matters of custody. If the custody of the child has been awarded by a decree of a competent tribunal, the writ is available to compel delivery of the child to the one declared entitled to custody. The writ is also available to determine whether one who has custody without authority of legal proceedings is entitled to custody, and to release the child if the restraint is found unlawful.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.35

§ 110.35 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody by Previous Order of Out-of-State Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A PERSON ENTITLED TO THE CUSTODY OF A CHILD PURSUANT TO THE VALID DECREE OF A COMPETENT OUT-OF-STATE TRIBUNAL MAY ENFORCE THAT RIGHT TO CUSTODY BY A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IN A CALIFORNIA COURT.

A. Availability of Writ. [See § 110.21.]

B. Enforcement of Out-of-State Custody Order. Where an out-of-state court which had jurisdiction of the parties and subject matter has determined the custody of a minor child, the order of that court is entitled to full faith and credit in the California courts and is res judicata of the rights of the parties as of the date of the order (Estate of Bauman (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 359, 361).

C. Prima Facie Right of Nonresident to Custody. The petitioner for writ of habeas corpus to regain custody pursuant to an out-of-state decree which is entitled to full faith and credit in California courts states a prima facie case for an order directing the immediate return of the child to his/her care and the burden is then on the respondent resident to show why, despite the existing decree, he/she should be awarded temporary custody (Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 836, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304).

D. Resolution of Controversy by Out-of-State Court. The courts ordinarily should refuse to reopen the question of the custody of a child whose custody is vested in a nonresident parent under an existing decree and should not resolve the merits of the controversy as to permanent custody, although it may stay its own proceedings to await determination of the matter by the court of the nonresident's domicile (Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 836, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304).

[Optional] E. Sufficient Allegation of Unlawful Restraint. Where the custody of the child has been with petitioner until respondent refused to return the child after a visit, allegations in a habeas corpus proceeding to obtain custody of a child which show that the petitioner has been awarded custody of the child and that the child is being held by respondent in violation of that order are sufficient allegations of unlawful restraint of liberty for issuance of the writ (In re Kyle (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 634, 639, 176 P.2d 96).

[Optional] F. Out-of-state Decree Valid on Its Face. Where the petition for the writ pleads a judgment and decree granting custody to petitioner, which is regular on its face, the judgment and decree of a court of general jurisdiction will be presumed to be valid in the absence of evidence to the contrary and will carry the presumption that the court had jurisdiction (In re Kyle (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 634, 176 P.2d 96).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus to regain custody of a child where petitioner is entitled to custody pursuant to the valid decree of a court of competent jurisdiction in another state and the children are held in California in violation of that decree.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner is not entitled to custody of the child and respondent seeks to retain custody pursuant to the out-of-state decree.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Articles

For a form of petition for writ of habeas corpus which seeks to regain custody of a child pursuant to a court order, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Allegation of Unlawful Restraint

In re Kyle (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 634, 176 P.2d 96 , was a proceeding in habeas corpus to recover the custody of a child, in which petitioner, the father, had been granted custody pursuant to a Nevada divorce decree. The child's mother retained the child after a visit in California, and the father filed his petition for writ of habeas corpus. Respondents excepted to the sufficiency of the petition for the writ on the ground that the petitioner based his claim to custody on a Nevada divorce decree and did not allege in the petition that the Nevada court had jurisdiction to render the judgment and decree. The court of appeal held, however, that the judgment was regular on its face and, therefore, presumed to be valid in the absence of evidence to the contrary. Such a judgment, the court held, carries with it the presumption that the court had jurisdiction. The respondents also argued that the courts of California were not required to give full faith and credit to the judgment, but the court held that such a decree may be modified only on a showing of change of circumstances arising subsequent to the entry of the former decree. The respondents further argued that habeas corpus was not the proper remedy to determine custody in the absence of an issue as to the welfare of the child. In rejecting that argument, the court held that those cases which seemed to set forth that rule involved parents who had brought their children to California legally while entitled to custody of the children, after which time the court of the sister state had purported to modify the custody order, and the modified order's validity was questioned. In those cases custody had already been with the party for some time. The present case was distinguished because the custody of the child had been with petitioner until the respondents refused to return the child after a visit. In such a case, the court held, petitioner is entitled to rely on the previous custody order without alleging that the child is in some danger. The court returned custody of the child to petitioner, after upholding the jurisdiction of the Nevada court.

[b] Enforcement of Out-of-State Custody Order

Estate of Bauman (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 359 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which petitioner, the father of a child, sought to secure custody of the child pursuant to a decree of an Oklahoma court granting him custody. In granting the writ and returning the child to its father, the court of appeal found that the order of the Oklahoma court, that court having had jurisdiction of the parties and the subject matter of the controversy, was entitled to full faith and credit and was res judicata of the rights of the parties, and that the California court would not go behind the Oklahoma decree. The only ground on which the mother could prevail, the court found, was a showing that since the date of the order a change warranted modification of the order. That change must be a change of conditions affecting the welfare of the child.

[c] Prima Facie Right of Nonresident to Custody

In Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 , an Idaho divorce decree gave custody of the children to the wife with reasonable visitation rights to the husband. Both husband and wife moved separately to California. The parties later stipulated to a modification of the decree in a California court. The wife moved to Alabama and the husband to Delaware. After a visit, the husband moved with the children to Los Angeles, California. Shortly thereafter, the husband filed a motion in San Francisco superior court bearing the number of the earlier stipulation to obtain custody of the children. The wife responded with a motion to dismiss on grounds of forum non conveniens, asserting that she and the children were residents of Alabama. The court granted the wife's motion despite allegations by the husband that the wife's new husband had physically mistreated the children. The husband appealed from the order dismissing his action. He also moved in Orange County, where he lived, for an order modifying the divorce decree, but that court dismissed for failure to make proper service on the wife. The wife petitioned the court of Orange County for a writ of habeas corpus to regain custody and physical possession of the childen. The husband's return alleged mistreatment of the children and requested sole custody. The wife filed a demurrer to the return and a motion to strike. The court ordered a probation report and awarded temporary custody of the children to the husband. The wife then petitioned the court of appeal for prohibition and mandate to compel the superior court to vacate its order awarding the husband temporary custody and to direct it to issue a writ ordering the husband to surrender custody of the children. The court of appeal denied the writ, and the Supreme Court granted a hearing and ordered the husband's appeal transferred to it from the San Francisco court. The Court found that, regardless of whether the issue of custody arises when a resident parent initates an action for modification of custody to keep the child or when the nonresident parent brings proceedings for habeas corpus to recover possession of the child pursuant to the foreign decree, the trial court employs the same standards and procedures. Once jurisdiction is established, the court must decide the temporary custody of the child, and generally the parent entitled to custody under the existing decree can enforce that right and secure temporary custody. Exceptions to the right of the parent to enforce the existing decree exist where a foreign decree attempts to affect custody lawfully held by a resident of the forum or a bona fide resident child, where the decree was procured by unclean hands of a nonresident parent, where the nonresident parent has delayed so that the child has acquired an etablished home and affectional relationships in California, or where the resident parent alleges and supports by proof that the health or safety of the child will be jeopardized by enforcement of the custody order. For the latter ground, the resident parent must show that there will be substantial emotional harm or other forms of injury in addition to physical mistreatment. A mere allegation that an award of custody to the resident would further the best interest or welfare of the child is not sufficient grounds for denying enforcement of the foreign decree. The Court found that the Orange County court was correct in giving temporary custody of the children to the husband despite the wife's petition for the writ of habes corpus in that court seeking to enforce the previous custody decree, because the husband had supported allegations of mistreatment of the children with affidavits and suggested that return of the children to the wife would expose them to further danger. That superior court also had discretion to decide whether to hear the proceedings on their merits or to return the children to the wife's forum, staying its own proceedings.

[d] Resolution of Controversy by Out-of-State Court

Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 , is discussed in § 110.35[3][c].

[e] Out-of-State Decree Valid on Its Face

In re Kyle (1947) 77 Cal. App. 2d 634, 176 P.2d 96 , is discussed in § 110.35[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcement of Out-of-State Custody Order

In re Bergmann (1955) 133 Cal. App. 2d 323 , was a proceeding in habeas corpus in which petitioner, the father of children sought to have custody returned to him from the mother, who had the children in California. The court ordered the children returned to the father, holding that since the Michigan court had jurisdiction of the parties and of the subject matter, and since there was no evidence of any changed conditions, the court must return the children to the father and give full faith and credit to the Michigan decree.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.36

§ 110.36 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Nonresident Entitled to Custody Pursuant to Out-of-State Decree--Applicable Law

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

WHEN THE ISSUE OF CHILD CUSTODY BETWEEN A NONRESIDENT AND A RESIDENT PARENT ARISES ON WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS, THE TRIAL COURT SHOULD EMPLOY THE SAME STANDARDS AND PROCEDURES IT WOULD EMPLOY IF THE QUESTION HAD ARISEN IN ANOTHER TYPE OF PROCEEDING.

Standards and Procedures. Regardless of whether the issue of child custody between a resident and nonresident parent arises on the writ of habeas corpus or on another type of procedure, the trial court employs the same standards and procedures (Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 834, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for writ of habeas corpus, where a nonresident entitled to custody of a child pursuant to an out-of-state court decree seeks to enforce by writ of habeas corpus that decree in California against a person withholding custody of the child.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standards and Procedures

Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 , is discussed in § 110.35[3][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.37

§ 110.37 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Determining Right to Custody--No Previous Court Order

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDING IS AVAILABLE TO DETERMINE THE PROPER CUSTODY OF CHILDREN.

A. Availability of Writ. [See § 110.21.]

B. Enforcement of Custody of Minor Child. [See § 110.34, Paragraph B.]

C. Determination of Custody of Child. The right to custody of a child may be enforced by writ of habeas corpus, and the court may inquire into proper custody in the proceeding on habeas corpus. The writ is a proper means of determining right to custody of minor children generally (In re Croze (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 492, 495, 302 P.2d 595 ; In re Bauman (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 359, 360).

D. Full Hearing on Custody. In a habeas corpus proceeding to determine proper custody of a child, the court must consider all legally relevant evidence offered on proper custody (In re Reyna (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 301, 126 Cal. Rptr. 138).

[Optional] E. Statute Governing Proper Custody. Section 3040 et seq. of the Family Code applies to any proceeding where there is at issue the custody of a minor child, including a proceeding on writ of habeas corpus (see In re G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 695-696, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for writ of habeas corpus when petitioner seeks custody of a child in the situation in which there is no previous court order determining custody.

Counsel should include argument with these points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For allegations for a petition for writ of habeas corpus seeking determination of the custody of a child, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice(Matthew Bender). For forms and discussion relating to child custody generally, see Ch. 223, Dissolution of Marriage: Child Custody , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Determination of Custody of Child

In re Croze (1956) 145 Cal. App. 2d 492, 302 P.2d 595 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which petitioner was the mother of an illegitimate minor child. Petitioner sought to have custody of the child returned to her from respondents, persons with whom she had left the child while she was unable to care for it after its birth. Respondents contended that petitioner had abandoned the child and that she was an unfit mother. Because petitioner had first sought the writ from the superior court, respondents also contended that the order of the superior court denying custody to the mother on the grounds that she had abandoned the child was res judicata on the issue of custody. Although the court of appeal found that the superior court's order was res judicata on the issues tendered, tried, and decided in the superior court, it also found that the petitioner could present a petition to the court of appeal where there were changed circumstances or where the superior court decision had been a matter of law rather than fact. In deciding to appoint a referee to determine the issue of abandonment of the child by the petitioner, the court of appeal found that the trial court had failed to reach and determine that issue as required. The court of appeal found that the mother of an illegitimate child may enforce her right to custody by writ of habeas corpus, but that the court at the hearing should determine all of the issues affecting proper custody rather than simply determining the naked legal right to custody. It was error on the part of the superior court, the court of appeal held, to refuse to determine the issue of abandonment of the child by the mother (145 Cal. App. 2d 492, 495) .

Note that this decision was reached when former Civ. Code § 230 applied to determine the proper custody of an illegitimate child. Custody is no longer determined by that statute, which has been repealed [Stats. 1975, ch. 1244] but rather by Fam. Code § 3010. It should still be proper, however, to use the writ of habeas corpus to determine proper custody of a child.

Estate of Bauman (1947) 82 Cal. App. 2d 359 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus in which petitioner sought to secure the custody of his daughter from his divorced wife, who had left the jurisdiction of the divorce action with the child and brought the child to California. The court of appeal noted that it is quite clear and that no contention had been made to the contrary that habeas corpus is a proper remedy to determine the right to custody of children (82 Cal. App. 2d 359, 360) .

[b] Full Hearing on Custody

In re Reyna (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 126 Cal. Rptr. 138 , was a proceeding in habeas corpus to secure custody of a child. The father of an illegitimate child filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus in a superior court seeking to obtain custody of his child from the welfare department adoption agency. At a hearing, the petition was denied by a minute order without findings of fact. Petitioner then filed a petition with the court of appeal, which issued an order to show cause (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]) and scheduled a hearing as to why the petition should not be granted. The mother of the child had relinquished the child for adoption to the adoption agency, which placed the child with prospective adoptive parents. The father did not receive the notice sent by the adoption agency concerning his rights as a parent, but the father learned of the adoption from the mother and contacted the adoption agency. a home for the child. Although the writ proceeding in the court of appeal is an original proceeding, that court held, the court was not precluded from further consideration of questions of law, including whether there is substantial evidence to support the lower court's findings of fact. The court of appeal found that former Civ. Code § 4600 [see now Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.] had been applicable to the proceeding in the superior court and that a finding that custody in a parent would be detrimental to the child was therefore required, as well as a finding that the best interests of the child would be served by an award to a nonparent. Because the superior court had refused evidence that an award of custody would be detrimental to the child and this refusal was error, the court of appeal concluded that a referee should be appointed and a hearing conducted to receive whatever evidence any of the parties wished to present on the question of possible detriment to the child if it were placed with the father (55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 301) .

[c] Statute Governing Proper Custody

In re G. (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 679, 114 Cal. Rptr. 444, 523 P.2d 244 , was a proceeding to determine the custody of two minor children. The father had come to the United States with his children, had died, and had left the children with their grandparents and with neighbors. The neighbors applied for a foster home license, the probation department scheduled a dependency hearing for the children, and notified the grandparents, but not the mother of the children, of the hearing. At the hearing the children were declared dependent children and placed in the custody of the welfare department to be maintained in the home of the foster parents. At an annual review the mother appeared by counsel, submitted to the jurisdiction of the court, and requested custody of the children. In deciding to apply former Civ. Code § 4600 [see now Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.] to the determination of proper custody of the children on appeal from the order of the superior court placing the children with the foster parents, the Supreme Court found that former Civ. Code § 4600 [see now Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.] governs all proceedings in which the custody of minor children is at issue, including proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus (11 Cal. 3d 679, 695-696) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute Governing Proper Custody

In In re Baby Girl M. (1984) 37 Cal. 3d 65 , the Supreme Court held that a nonpresumed natural father's rights to his minor child may not be terminated in a proceeding under former Civ. Code § 7017(d) [see now Fam. Code § 7664], and the child may not be placed in the custody of adoptive parents unless the court finds that granting custody to the father would be detrimental to the child, pursuant to former Civ. Code § 4600(c) [see now Fam. Code § 3040 et seq.], in addition to finding that adoption would be in the child's best interests. It reiterated that former Civ. Code § 7017(d) [see now Fam. Code § 7664] applies in any proceeding to determine child custody (37 Cal. 3d 65, 68) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.38

§ 110.38 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody Despite Previous Order of Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDING IS AVAILABLE TO ATTACK A PREVIOUS CUSTODY ORDER MADE BY A COURT THAT HAD NO JURISDICTION TO MAKE THE ORDER.

A. Availability of Writ. [See § 110.21.]

B. Previous Custody Order Was Made Without Jurisdiction. The writ of habeas corpus will lie when a person entitled to child custody is denied possession of the child by a court order made without jurisdiction (In re Barr (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 25, 27-28, 243 P.2d 787).

C. Broad Meaning of Jurisdiction on Habeas Corpus. [See § 110.33, Paragraph C.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus when petitioner seeks to collaterally attack a previous order that grants custody of a child to another person and that was made without jurisdiction.

Counsel should include argument with these points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Previous Custody Order Was Made Without Jurisdiction

The facts and procedure in In re Barr (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 25, 243 P.2d 787 are discussed in § 110.34[3][b]. The court held that a writ of habeas corpus was an appropriate remedy to prevent enforcment of a modification order granting custody to the child's father when the mother, who had custody under the original divorce decree, had appealed the modification. The appeal suspended the power of the court to enforce the modification order or to further modify it (39 Cal. 2d 25, 27-28) . If the welfare of the child were endangered by remaining with the mother, the father's remedy would be to apply to the court having jurisdiction over the appeal, or to the juvenile court (39 Cal. 2d 25, 29) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.39

§ 110.39 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Jurisdiction--Original Proceeding in Superior Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE SUPERIOR COURTS AND THEIR JUDGES HAVE ORIGINAL JURISDICTION IN HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS.

A. Original Jurisdiction of Superior Courts. The superior courts and their judges have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceeding (Cal. Const., art. VI, § 10).

B. Superior Court Jurisdiction Equal to Appellate Court Jurisdiction. The superior courts and their judges are expressly authorized to issue the writ of habeas corpus, and they have an equal right in this respect with the justices of the Supreme Court and the courts of appeal (In re Elias (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 262, 264, 25 Cal. Rptr. 739).

[Optional] C. Factual Questions Require Applications First in Superior Court. When factual questions are involved, petitioner is generally required first to seek relief by habeas corpus in the superior court (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 789, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petition is filed in the first instance with a superior court.

Counsel should include argument with these points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the return alleges that the petition should not have been filed in the superior court.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a petition for the writ of habeas corpus for filing in a superior court in a civil use of the writ, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice(Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Superior Court Jurisdiction Equal to Appellate Court Jurisdiction

In re Elias (1962) 209 Cal. App. 2d 262, 25 Cal. Rptr. 739 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus by a petitioner who had been taken into custody by virtue of a warrant of commitment issued for contempt by a superior court. In his petition for the writ to the court of appeal, the petitioner alleged that he had presented a substantially similar petition to the superior court, which had refused to entertain the petition on the ground that it had no jurisdiction to hear the petition and that the petition should have been filed with the court of appeal.

The court of appeal held that the refusal of the superior court to entertain the petition was error if based solely on that ground and that the superior court had a duty to consider the application and, if the petition was meritorious, to issue the writ even though the legality of an order of commitment previously made by that same court was under attack. The court of appeal held that the superior court has an equal right to issue the writ with the Supreme Court and the courts of appeal. After considering the merits of the case, the court discharged petitioner from custody on the commitment of which he complained (209 Cal. App. 2d 262, 264) .

[b] Factual Questions Require Application First in the Superior Court

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , was a proceeding on the writ of habeas corpus in which petitioner, the mother of a minor, illegitimate child, sought by petition for the writ to have her child returned to her custody. The child's father had retained the child after a visit and the mother had filed a petition for the writ in the superior court, which had issued a writ commanding the father to appear with the child. After a hearing, the superior court returned custody of the child to the father. The mother then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of habeas corpus. The court of appeal issued an order to show cause (a procedure which is often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]) a writ of habeas corpus ordering the father to return custody to the mother, and a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court from enforcing its order.

The Supreme Court then granted a hearing. In denying the writ of habeas corpus and discharging the order to show cause, the Supreme Court noted that a factual hearing had been held in the superior court on the issues of whether the father had legitimated the child and in whose custody the child should be placed for its best interests. The court stated that, although appellate as well as superior courts have jurisdiction to issue the writ, where factual questions are involved, a petitioner should generally seek relief first in the superior court (14 Cal. 3d 783, 789) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.40

§ 110.40 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Jurisdiction--No Territorial Restriction on Jurisdiction of Superior Courts or Courts of Appeal

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THERE IS NO TERRITORIAL LIMITATION ON THE JURISDICTION OF THE _____ [SUPERIOR COURTS or COURTS OF APPEAL] TO ENTERTAIN PROCEEDINGS ON THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS, AND TRANSFER OF THE PROCEEDINGS IS THE PROPER PROCEDURE.

A. Original Jurisdiction in Habeas Corpus Proceedings in _____ [Superior Courts or Courts of Appeal]. _____ [Courts of appeal or Superior courts] and their judges have original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings (Cal. Const, art. VI, § 10).

[EITHER]

B. Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Courts of Appeal. Section 10 of Article VI of the California Constitution, adopted November 8, 1966, eliminated any territorial limitation on the jurisdiction of courts of appeal to entertain petitions for and to grant relief in habeas corpus proceedings, and there is no longer any territorial limitation on the exercise of habeas corpus jurisdiction by a court of appeal (In re Van Heflin (1976) 58Cal. App. 3d 131, 135 ; see Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 343, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727).

[OR]

B. Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Superior Courts. Any territorial limitations on the jurisdiction of superior courts to entertain petitions for and to grant relief in habeas corpus matters which may have existed prior to 1966 were eliminated by Section 10 of Article VI of the California Constitution, adopted November 8, 1966, and there is now no territorial limitation on the power of a superior court to entertain a petition for habeas corpus relief. As a general rule the court in which the petition is presented must, if the petitioner has otherwise complied with pertinent rules, file the petition and determine whether it states a prima facie case for relief (Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 343, 346-347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727).

C. Petition Resolved Where Filed Absent Substantial Reason for Transfer. Where the relief sought on petition for the writ of habeas corpus does not fall into the category of a challenge to a judgment or of a challenge to the conditions of confinement, unless there is a substantial reason for transferring the petition, it should be entertained and resolved in the court where it was filed (Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 ; see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 4.552(c), 8.385(c)(2); In re Roberts (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 575, 584-585, 588-594, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458, 115 P.3d 1121).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in a memorandum submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus where petitioner seeks issuance of the writ from an appellate or superior court whose territorial jurisdiction does not include the place where the petitioner or other person in whose behalf the writ is brought is confined. The California Constitution formerly provided that a court of appeal had power to issue the writ only to any part of its appellate district and could make the writ returnable only before that court or any superior court in the district [see former Cal. Const, art VI, § 4(b)] and that a superior court had power to issue the writ only as to persons in custody in the county in which the court sat [see former Cal. Const, art VI, § 5]. These territorial restrictions have been removed by the adoption on November 8, 1966, of Cal. Const, art VI, § 10 [Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 343, 346-347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 ; In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257] .

Unless there is a substantial reason for transferring the petition to another jurisdiction, it should be entertained and resolved where it was filed. Generally, when an evidentiary hearing is necessary and the persons who will participate in the hearing are more efficiently available to the court to which the proceedings are to be transferred or where that court is better situated to conduct a hearing on the issues raised, transfer is proper. In particular, a challenge to the proceedings under which the person was confined should be transferred to the jurisdiction of the court which rendered the judgment. Where the challenge is to conditions of confinement, the proceedings may be transferred to the jurisdiction in which the person is confined [Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727] .

This memorandum supports the ability of the court in which the petition is filed to entertain and resolve the petition for the writ of habeas corpus, or, if appropriate, to determine whether the petition presents a prima facie case for relief and, if so, to transfer the proceedings to a convenient jurisdiction.

Counsel should include argument with this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Special Habeas Corpus Proceedings

Special statutory or decisional rules apply to certain proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus, such as those to test the confinement of a person for involuntary treatment as mentally disordered pursuant to the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.]. In such proceedings, jurisdiction and venue is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5276. In proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus to test the confinement of a person as mentally retarded (developmentally disabled), jurisdiction is governed by Health & Safety Code § 38451.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Courts of Appeal

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , was a proceeding on the writ of habeas corpus, in which a petition for the writ was filed by a prisoner in a state institution seeking an order striking from a judgment reference to a prior felony conviction and modifying his sentence. Petitioner first sought the writ in the superior court of the county in which he was confined. That court transferred the petition to the sentencing court, which summarily denied relief. Petitioner then filed a petition for the writ in the court of appeal for thedistrict in which the sentencing court was located. Since it determined that the petition stated a prima facie case for relief, the court of appeal had to decide whether to transfer the proceedings to the court of appeal for the district in which the petitioner was confined. In deciding to retain the proceedings and to issue an order to show cause (a procedure often followed by appellate courts where petitioner is in custody of a state institution [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]) the court concluded that there is no longer any territorial limitation on the jurisdiction of courts of appeal to entertain proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus. The court based its conclusion on the Supreme Court's holding in Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 343, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , that any territorial limitation on the exercise of habeas corpus jurisdiction by a superior court was eliminated by Cal. Const, art VI, § 10, adopted in 1966, and on the fact that the constitutional revision granted identical original jurisdiction to the superior courts and the courts of appeal (58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 135) .

Although the problem of transfers from one court of appeal to another was not directly dealt with in In re Van Heflin, above, the case does stand for the proposition that the rules set forth in Griggs (discussed in § 110.40[3][b]), concerning transfer of cases between superior courts, should apply between courts of appeal, since the court of appeal found that the superior courts and courts of appeal were given identical original jurisdiction in habeas corpus proceedings by Cal. Const, art. VI, § 10. Note that the petitioner in this case was not entitled to release from confinement and that the order to show cause was discharged and the writ denied, although the relief requested concerning the correction of the judgment and sentence was granted.

[b] Absence of Territorial Limitation on Habeas Corpus Jurisdiction of Superior Courts

In Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , the superintendent of a prison sought a writ of mandate to compel the respondent superior court to quash orders to show cause and to dismiss proceedings in which inmates at the prison made applications for the writ of habeas corpus. Each of the prisoners who petitioned for the writ of habeas corpus filed the petition in the superior court of the county in which the prison was located. However, each was transferred in the normal course of prison administration to a prison outside the county in which the original petition had been filed by the time the orders to show cause were issued (issuance of the order to show cause why the writ should not issue rather than the writ itself as common procedure where the petitioner is in custody of a state institution [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). Each of the inmates moved in the superior court for the transfer of the proceedings to the superior court of the county in which he was confined. The respondent court denied the motion to quash in each case but did not rule on the motions to transfer. At that time the alternative writ of mandate issued from the Supreme Court, and the respondent court took no further action. Although the petitioners for the writ of habeas corpus had all either abandoned the proceedings or had conceded that the original superior court now lacked jurisdiction to issue the order to show cause, the Supreme Court, noting that the parties cannot effectively stipulate that a court has or lacks jurisdiction, decided that the 1966 constitutional revision effectively eliminated the express reservation of Cal. Const, art. VII, § 5, on the power of superior courts to act only within their respective counties and imposed no express limitation on the current power of the courts to exercise origial jurisiction in habeas corpus proceedings. The Court decided, thus, that the former territorial limitation had been eliminated and that there was no longer any territorial limitation on the power of a superior court to entertain a petition for the writ of habeas corpus. The Court also decided, however, that, although a court has jurisdiction to entertain and adjudicate a petition, it should not do so in all instances. The procedure which the Court outlined was that the court to which the petition was presented must, if the petitioner has otherwise complied with pertinent rules, file the petition and determine whether it states a prima facie case for relief. If it does not, the petition should be denied. If it states a case, then the court must determine whether it will hear the matter on the merits. If the challenge is to a particular judgment, the petition should be transferred to the court which rendered the judgment if that court is not the one where the petition was filed. If the challenge is to conditions of confinement, then the petition should be transferred to the superior court of the county in which the person is confined if that court is a different court from the court in which the petition was filed. In cases which do not fall within one of these categories, unless there is substantial reason for transferring a petition it should be entertained and resolved in the court where it was filed. The Court did note, however, that a court should not be precluded from transferring the petition should it appear that an evidentiary hearing is necessary and that the persons who will participate in the hearing are more efficiently available to another court or that the other court is better situated to conduct a hearing (16 Cal. 3d 341, 343-347) .

NOTE:

The foregoing procedure was modified effective January 1, 2002, by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(2), which provides that the superior court may transfer a habeas petition without first determining whether a prima facie case for relief exists.

[c] Petition Resolved Where Filed Absent Substantial Reason for Transfer

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Roberts (2005) 36 Cal. 4th 575, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458, 115 P.3d 1121 , involved a petition for habeas corpus relief filed by a state prisoner to challenge a finding by the Board of Prison Terms that the petitioner was unsuitable for parole. In the years since his conviction and sentence, the petitioner had been incarcerated at several locations in different counties, and the petitioner had previously filed several habeas petitions challenging earlier denials of parole. The lower courts were in disagreement over whether the proper venue for a habeas petition challenging the denial of parole was in the county of confinement or the county in which the conviction and sentence were handed down. As a result, the courts had given the petitioner conflicting instructions about where to file. To resolve the conflict, the California Supreme Court granted review to determine which court is the proper venue to adjudicate a petition for a writ of habeas corpus challenging the denial of parole.

The Supreme Court began its analysis by noting that in Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 (discussed in § 110.40[3][b]), the Court had held that in general, when a petitioner has complied with pertinent rules, the superior court in which the petition is presented should file and review the allegations of the petition in order to determine whether it states a prima facie case for relief. The Griggs Court explained that if the petition states a prima facie case, the superior court must determine whether to hear the matter on the merits. If the challenge is to a particular judgment or sentence, the petition should be transferred to the court that rendered judgment if that court is a different court from the court in which the petition was filed (see Cal Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(2)(A)). However, if the challenge is to conditions of the petitioner's confinement, then the petition should be transferred to the superior court of the county in which the petitioner is confined if that court is a different court from the court in which the petition was filed (see Cal Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(2)(B)). The question in the present case, therefore, was whether a habeas petition challenging the denial of parole more nearly corresponds to a petition challenging the conviction or sentence, or to a petition challenging the conditions of confinement (36 Cal. 4th 575, 584-585) .

The Supreme Court found that the determination by the Board of Prison Terms of a prisoner's suitability for parole is analogous to a sentencing determination, and it is not the equivalent of individual correction officials' conduct affecting the prisoner's conditions of confinement. The Court remarked that the Board's determination is more appropriately determined in the county in which the sentence was imposed, rather than the county in which the petitioner is currently confined. The Court explained that in general, a sentence contemplates a period of parole, and the objectives of sentencing and parole are related. In essence, sentencing achieves mandatory separation of the offender from society. At the conclusion of that phase, parole assists in returning the prisoner to society while simultaneously affording some measure of continuing protection to society. The Court also found that having the court of commitment review all habeas petitions concerning the denial of parole will have the beneficial effect of producing consistent review of such claims. The Court also found it significant that a prisoner under consideration by the Board will, in most cases, return to and have ties to the county in which he or she formerly resided at the time of the offenses that resulted in the commitment. Therefore, assigning venue to the court of commitment serves the goal of locating the review of parole decisions where the release of the prisoner is most likely to have an impact on the community. Finally, the Court pointed out that assigning venue to the court of commitment lessens the burden on judicial resources in those counties that are small in population and contributing a minute percentage of the felony convictions that occur statewide, but that have large or numerous facilities for the incarceration of criminal defendants (36 Cal. 4th 575, 588-592) .

Accordingly, the Supreme Court prescribed the following procedures. First, the Court directed that a petitioner who seeks to challenge by means of habeas corpus the denial of parole (or his or her suitability for parole) should file the petition in the superior court located in the county in which the conviction and sentence arose, and the petition should be adjudicated in that venue. Second, the Court directed that when a habeas corpus petition challenging the denial of parole or suitability for parole is filed in the superior court in a county other than that in which the petitioner's conviction and sentence were imposed, the filing court should transfer the petition to the superior court in the county of commitment in the first instance, prior to any determination being made that the petitioner has made a prima facie case. Lastly, the Court directed that, among the three levels of state courts, a habeas corpus petition challenging a decision of the parole board should be filed in the superior court, which should entertain the petition in the first instance (36 Cal. 4th 575, 593-594) .

The foregoing procedures prescribed by the Supreme Court have since been incorporated in the California Rules of Court (see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 4.552(c), 8.385(c)(2)).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.41

§ 110.41 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Disposition of Case--Court's Power to Grant Relief Requested

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

WHEN A COURT HAS ISSUED A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS, ITS POWER IS NOT LIMITED TO EITHER DISCHARGING THE PETITIONER FROM OR REMANDING THE PETITIONER TO CUSTODY BUT EXTENDS TO DISPOSING OF THE PETITIONER AS THE JUSTICE OF THE CASE MAY REQUIRE.

Court's Power to Grant Relief. When a court has issued a writ of habeas corpus, its power is not limited to either discharging the petitioner from or remanding the petitioner to custody but extends to disposing of the petitioner as the justice of the case may require (Penal Code § 1484; In re Crow (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 613, 619, 94 Cal. Rptr. 254, 483 P.2d 1206).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner seeks relief other than discharge from illegal custody.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing authority showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing authority may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the return alleges that the relief requested by petitioner is beyond the capacity of the court to grant.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Power to Grant Relief

In re Crow (1971) 4 Cal. 3d 613, 94 Cal. Rptr. 254, 483 P.2d 1206 , was a petition for the writ of habeas corpus brought by a prisoner in a state prison alleging that he had been deprived of the right to a speedy trial. The superior court granted the writ and found after hearing that petitioner was entitled to a new trial. The state did not appeal the decision. The court which was to give the new trial attempted to dismiss the superior court's order and remanded the petitioner to the state prison. The Supreme Court found that the granted relief lay within the superior court's jurisdiction, since the court's power once it has issued the writ of habeas corpus cannot be limited to either discharging the petitioner from or remanding the petitioner to custody but extends to disposing of petitioner as the justice of the case may require.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.42

§ 110.42 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Disposition of Case--Authority for Discharge From Custody [Penal Code § 1487(1)-(6)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

WHERE IT APPEARS ON THE RETURN OF THE WRIT THAT THE PERSON IS IN CUSTODY BY VIRTUE OF PROCESS FROM ANY COURT OF THIS STATE OR FROM ANY JUDGE OR OFFICER OF SUCH A COURT, THE PERSON MAY BE DISCHARGED _____ [specify condition met pursuant to Penal Code § 1487].

[EITHER]

Restraint Has Become Unlawful. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or from any judge or officer of such a court, the person may be discharged when the imprisonment was at first lawful but has, by some act, omission, or event which has taken place afterwards, become entitled to a discharge (Penal Code § 1487(2)).

[OR]

Process Is Defective in Substance. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or from any judge or officer of such a court, the person may be discharged when the process is defective in some matter of substance required by law, rendering such process void (Penal Code § 1487(3)).

[OR]

Process Issued in Case Not Allowed by Law. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or from any judge or officer of such a court, the person may be discharged when the process, though proper in form, has been issued in a case not allowed by law (Penal Code § 1487(4)).

[OR]

Improper Custodian. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or from any judge or officer of such a court, the person may be discharged when the person having custody of the person is not the one allowed by law to detain the person (Penal Code § 1487(5)).

[OR]

Unauthorized Process. If it appears on the return of the writ that the person is in custody by virtue of process from any court of this state or from any judge or officer of such a court, the person may be discharged when the process is not authorized by any order, judgment, or decree of any court, nor by any provision of law (Penal Code § 1487(6)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner seeks to justify the granting of the relief sought pursuant to one of these statutory grounds for release.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus, where the return alleges that petitioner is in custody by virtue of process.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.43

§ 110.43 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1474]--Review--Application to Court of Appeal After Denial by Superior Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE DECISION OF A SUPERIOR COURT DENYING THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IS NOT APPEALABLE, BUT THE PETITIONER MAY SEEK THE SAME RELIEF BY PETITION FOR HABEAS CORPUS IN THE COURT OF APPEAL.

A. Denial of Writ by Superior Court As Nonappealable. The decision of a superior court denying the writ of habeas corpus is not appealable (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 789, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

B. Relief by New Proceeding in Court of Appeal. After denial of the writ of habeas corpus by a superior court, the petitioner may seek the same relief by instituting habeas corpus proceedings in the court of appeal (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 789, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

[Optional] C. Point of Law Not Raised in Prior Proceeding. Should the petitioner desire to raise some point of law not raised in the petition for or at the hearing on the return of the prior writ, then, if the prior writ was returned or returnable before the superior court or a superior court judge, no writ can be issued on a second or other application except by the appropriate court of appeal or some judge of that court of appeal, or by the Supreme Court or some judge of the Supreme Court. In that event, the writ must not be made returnable before any superior court or any judge of the superior court (Penal Code § 1475).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petition has been denied by a superior court and petitioner seeks the same relief by filing the petition for the writ of habeas corpus with the court of appeal as a new habeas corpus proceeding.

Where appropriate, counsel should include with the foregoing points and authorities argument showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

It should be noted that the foregoing authorities are applicable only to the situation described above. Where any or all of the relief requested has been granted by the superior court, an appeal may be taken to the court of appeal from the final order of the superior court. Further, where such an appeal has been heard in the court of appeal, or where the application for the writ has been heard and determined by the court of appeal on a new petition for the writ of habeas corpus filed in that court, and where all or part of the relief has been granted by the court of appeal, an application may be made for a hearing (on appeal) in the Supreme Court [Penal Code § 1507].

Where the court of appeal has denied the relief requested on habeas corpus or has denied the writ, there is no specific statute indicating that a petition for hearing (on appeal) can be made to the Supreme Court. It might seem that a new petition for the writ of habeas corpus filed with the Supreme Court would therefore be the remedy on denial of the writ by a court of appeal. Such petitions may be made and can, where appropriate, be granted [see In re E. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 183, 193, 123 Cal. Rptr. 103, 538 P.2d 231] . The Supreme Court has stated, however, that it disapproves of this procedure because rebriefing is wasteful and because a published opinion from the court of appeal denying the writ may remain on the books even though the Supreme Court would have granted a hearing and removed the opinion of the court of appeal. It is preferable, therefore, when the court of appeal has denied the writ, for petitioner to follow the procedure indicated by the Supreme Court by applying to the Court for a hearing on the denial of the writ, rather than filing a new petition for a writ of habeas corpus [see In re E. (1975) 15 Cal. 3d 183, 193 fn. 15, 123 Cal. Rptr. 103, 538 P.2d 231] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Denial of Writ by Superior Court as Nonappealable

The facts of In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , are discussed in § 110.34[3][a]. In deciding to consider the merits of the mother's petition for custody of her minor child, the Supreme Court noted that although the mother had petitioned the superior court for the writ and the writ had been denied, the order denying the writ was nonappealable and the mother's proper remedy had been to make a new application for the writ to the appellate court.

[b] Relief by New Proceeding in Court of Appeal

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , is discussed in § 110.43[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Denial of Writ by Superior Court as Nonappealable

In Bloom v. Municipal Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 71, 127 Cal. Rptr. 317, 545 P.2d 229 , plaintiff sought to prevent the municipal court from proceeding with a criminal prosecution by a writ of prohibition, which was denied by the superior court. Plaintiff then appealed to the court of appeal from the denial of the writ. The court of appeal held that a superior court judgment denying a writ of prohibition to restrain a municipal court prosecution is not appealable, and that the only remedy is a petition in the court of appeal for an original writ of prohibition. The Supreme Court ordered a hearing and transferred the case to the Court on its own motion. In holding that the order denying the writ of prohibition is appealable, the Supreme Court rejected analogy to procedure on denial of the writ of habeas corpus as nonpersuasive. The Court found that the rule that a denial of the writ of habeas corpus can be challenged only by filing a new petition is a statutory rule applicable only to proceedings for habeas corpus.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.44

§ 110.44 Supporting Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus [Penal Code § 1974]--Review of Superior Court Determinations--Child Custody--Application to Higher Court After Denial of Writ by Lower Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

ON A NEW PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IN AN APPELLATE COURT AFTER DENIAL OF THE WRIT BY A SUPERIOR COURT IN A CHILD CUSTODY PROCEEDING, PETITIONER MAY PRESENT QUESTIONS OF LAW TO THE APPELLATE COURT INCLUDING THE QUESTION OF WHETHER THE TRIAL COURT'S DETERMINATION IS SUPPORTED BY SUBSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

A. Limited Res Judicata Effect of Denial of Writ. Where habeas corpus is used to assert custody rights to a minor child, rather than to secure relief from confinement resulting from criminal prosecution, the superior court's determination to deny the writ is given some weight. Appellate courts, however, recognize on denial of the writ in child custody cases an exception to the general rule giving full res judicata effect to a superior court order. The order denying the writ is given res judicata effect not in the broad sense that it bars further proceedings for the custody of the child, but in the very narrow sense that a petition for writ of habeas corpus cannot again litigate the issues of fact decided in the superior court (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 790-791, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

B. Questions of Law Properly Raised with Appellate Court. When the petitioner in a child custody case reapplies for the writ of habeas corpus to an appellate court, a denial of the writ by the superior court does not bar the petitioner from raising in the new proceeding a question of law rather than fact decided by the superior court (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 791, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

C. Substantial Evidence for Trial Court's Findings of Fact. The category of questions of law which may be raised on a new application for the writ of habeas corpus with an appellate court after denial of the writ by a superior court in a child custody case includes the question of whether the trial court's findings of fact were supported by substantial evidence (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 791, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

[Optional] D. Changed Circumstances. Where there is a change in the circumstances which affect the right to custody after the hearing in the superior court, the petitioner may relitigate on petition to the appellate court the issues of fact decided in the superior court on the original application for the writ of habeas corpus in a child custody case (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 791, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of a petition for the writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner seeks to obtain custody of a minor child, where the petitioner has first applied to a superior court for a writ of habeas corpus but the writ has been denied, and where the petitioner is now seeking relief from an appellate court by a new petition for the writ on the grounds that the trial court's determinations of questions of law were erroneous or that the trial court's findings of fact were not supported by substantial evidence.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of the traverse to the return to the writ where the return alleges that consideration of the case is barred by denial of the writ by a lower court.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Res Judicata Effect of Denial of Writ

The facts of In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , are discussed in § 110.34[3][a]. The Supreme Court had to determine to what extent it was bound by the previous proceedings on the writ of habeas corpus to determine custody of the child in the superior court. The Court noted that the new proceeding in the appellate court is not a review of the superior court determination and that the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel are not applicable and do not preclude reassertion of arguments rejected in the prior proceeding. Although the former rule had been that a petitioner in a child custody proceeding who had been unsuccessful in the superior court could not maintain a proceeding of the same nature in the court of appeal absent an allegation of changed circumstances, the Court noted, that rule had acted to wrongfully deprive an unsuccessful petitioner of review, since a denial of the writ of habeas corpus is not appealable. The Court approved of the rule that the order denying the writ is not res judicata in the broad sense that it bars further proceedings for the custody of the child, but in the very narrow sense that a petitioner for a writ of habeas corpus cannot, in an appellate court, again litigate the issues of fact decided in the superior court, unless after the hearing in the superior court there is a change of circumstances which affect the right to custody. The Court also approved the rule that a decision by the superior court which constitutes merely a decision of a question of law rather than a fact does not bar the petitioner from presenting the same question of law to an appellate court on an application for the writ filed in that court. Included within the category of questions of law, the Court found, is the determination of whether there is substantial evidence to support the trial court's findings of fact. The Court noted that this rule gives the trial court primary esponsibility in the performance of the task for which it is best equipped, the resolution of questions of fact, and narrows the function of the appellate court to that of final arbiter of questions of law.

[b] Questions of Law Properly Raised With Appellate Court

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , is discussed in § 110.44[3][a].

[c] Substantial Evidence for Trial Court's Findings of Fact

In re Richard M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , is discussed in § 110.44[3][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Questions of Law Properly Raised With Appellate Court

In re Reyna (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 126 Cal. Rptr. 138 , was a proceeding on habeas corpus by the father of an illegitimate child to secure its custody. Petitioner first filed a petition for the writ in the superior court seeking to obtain custody of the child from the welfare department adoption agency with which the mother had placed the child for adoption. The superior court held a hearing and denied the petition by minute order without findings of fact. Petitioner then filed a petition for the writ with the court of appeals, which issued an order to show cause and scheduled a hearing as to why the petition should not be granted (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). In considering the issue of whether the father was entitled to custody of the child, the court of appeal first considered the scope of its review of the proceedings in the superior court. It found that the superior court's determination of the factual issues in the proceeding below was entitled to some weight but that the court of appeal was not foreclosed from further considerations of questions of law, including whether there is substantial evidence to support the lower court's findings of fact. The court found that although the trial court failed to make express findings in den ying the original petition for the writ, the court of appeal was permitted to review the evidence to determine if all the necessarily implied findings were supported by the evidence, resolving all doubts in favor of the trial court's decision.

[b] Substantial Evidence for Trial Court's Findings of Fact

In re Reyna (1976) 55 Cal. App. 3d 288, 126 Cal. Rptr. 138 , is discussed in § 110.44[4][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.45

§ 110.45 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Petition for Writ Must Be Verified [Penal Code § 1474(3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE PETITION FOR THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS MUST BE VERIFIED, AND AN UNVERIFIED PETITION MAY BE REJECTED.

A. Petition Must Be Verified. The petition for writ of habeas corpus must be verified by the oath or affirmation of the party making the application (Pen. Code § 1474(3)).

B. Unverified Petition May Be Rejected. A petition for writ of habeas corpus may be rejected on the basis that it is unverified (People v. Manson (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 102, 169, 132 Cal. Rptr. 265 ; In re Newell (1923) 64 Cal. App. 103, 220 P. 425).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus or the return to an order to show cause why the writ should not issue when the respondent opposes the granting of relief on the ground that the petition was not verified. Appellate courts often follow the procedure of issuing an order to show cause [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1] ; this procedure is expressly authorized by rule for superior courts [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(c), (d)].

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unverified Petition May Be Rejected

In People v. Manson (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 102, 132 Cal. Rptr. 265 , a criminal defendant attempted, by petitioning for a writ of habeas corpus, to obtain a dismissal of the charges against her on the grounds that she had ineffective counsel and that she did not knowingly and voluntarily waive her Fifth Amendment right to remain silent. The trial court summarily denied the writ of habeas corpus. Petitioner, rather than filing a second petition for the writ in the appellate court as would have been her proper recourse, assigned the denial of the writ as error on an appeal of the criminal conviction. The court of appeal found, although it noted that it was unnecessary to determine the correctness of the trial court's ruling because the denial of the writ is not appealable, that the petition could have been properly rejected on the sole ground that it was not verified as required by Penal Code § 1474(3).

In re Newell (1923) 64 Cal. App. 103, 220 P. 425 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which the appellate court denied the petition for the writ summarily on the ground that it was not verified as required by Penal Code § 1474, although the court also noted that the question raised by the petition had already been disposed of on an application to the Supreme Court.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.46

§ 110.46 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Petitioner Not Restrained

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

HABEAS CORPUS IS NOT AVAILABLE WHERE _____ [PETITIONER or THE PERSON IN WHOSE BEHALF THE WRIT IS SOUGHT] IS NEITHER ACTUALLY NOR CONSTRUCTIVELY RESTRAINED.

Writ Not Available Where No Restraint. Where _____ [petitioner or the person in whose behalf the writ is sought] is neither actually nor constructively restrained, the writ is not available (Williams v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 949, 952, 83 Cal. Rptr. 76).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where respondent opposes use of the writ on the ground that petitioner or the person in whose behalf the writ is sought is neither actually nor constructively restrained or confined.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a return to the writ of habeas corpus in a civil use of the writ, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ Not Available Where No Restraint

In Williams v. Department of Motor Vehicles (1969) 2 Cal. App. 3d 949, 83 Cal. Rptr. 76 , the Department of Motor Vehicles had suspended defendant's driver's license because he had twice been convicted of driving under the influence of alcohol. Defendant filed a petition for writ of mandate in the superior court to command the Department to revoke its suspension of his license, and the court issued the alternative writ. The Department filed its return, and a hearing was held on the petition for the writ of mandate. The writ was granted, because defendant had not been represented by counsel at the first conviction. The Department contended on appeal that defendant should have sought a writ of habeas corpus rather than mandate. In rejecting this contention, the court of appeal noted that habeas corpus is not available to a petitioner who is neither actually nor constructively restrained, so that mandate was the proper remedy in this case.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.47

§ 110.47 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Habeas Corpus Not Available to Legal Entities

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS IS NOT AVAILABLE TO LEGAL ENTITIES BUT ONLY TO NATURAL PERSONS.

Writ of Habeas Corpus Not Available to Legal Entities. The writ of habeas corpus is not available to a legal entity such as a labor union (In re Coleman (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 568, 572 fn. 2, 116 Cal. Rptr. 381, 526 P.2d 533).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the writ is sought on behalf of or by a legal entity rather than a natural person, and the respondent argues that the writ is available only to natural persons.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of return to the writ of habeas corpus in civil uses of the writ, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Writ of Habeas Corpus Not Available to Legal Entities

In re Coleman (1974) 12 Cal. 3d 568, 116 Cal. Rptr. 381, 526 P.2d 533 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus, in which members of a striking union, who had been found in contempt of court for violation of a restraining order, sought to review their contempt convictions. The Court issued an order to show cause (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). On consideration of the merits, the Court discharged the order to show cause and granted the writ of habeas corpus to some individual petitioners. In denying the petition of the union for the writ, however, the Court noted that the writ of habeas corpus is not available to a legal entity such as a union.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.48

§ 110.48 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES MUST BE EXHAUSTED BEFORE RESORT IS HAD TO THE COURTS ON THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS, AND EXHAUSTION OF ADMINISTRATIVE REMEDIES IS A JURISDICTIONAL PREREQUISITE TO RESORT TO THE COURTS.

A. Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Reqired. The doctrine requiring exhaustion of available administrative remedies before an applicant seeks relief in the courts applies to applications for the writ of habeas corpus (In re Muszalski (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 500, 506, 125 Cal. Rptr. 286).

B. Jurisdictional Requirement of Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies. The rule that administrative remedies must be exhausted before relief may be sought in the courts is not a matter of judicial discretion, but is a fundamental rule of procedure laid down by courts of last resort, followed under the doctrine of stare decisis, and binding on all courts. Exhaustion of administrative remedies is a jurisdictional prerequisite to resort to the courts (Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 293, 109 P.2d 942, 132 ALR 715 (relief by writ of mandate and temporary restraining order as improper)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where respondent in the return to the writ alleges that relief by writ of habeas corpus is improper because petitioner has failed to exhaust available administrative remedies.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Required

In re Muszalski (1975) 52 Cal. App. 3d 500, 125 Cal. Rptr. 286 , was a proceeding on the writ of habeas corpus, in which an inmate of a prison petitioned the superior court for a writ of habeas corpus seeking to inspect all of the documents pertaining to his case in preparation for a parole consideration hearing before the Adult Authority. The superior court held an evidentiary hearing and partially granted the requested relief. The Department of Corrections appealed from that order, and the court of appeal affirmed the order of the trial court. Insofar as the requested relief was denied, however, petitioner filed in the court of appeal a new petition for habeas corpus, and that court issued an order to show cause why the writ should not issue (a procedure frequently followed by the appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). In denying the writ of habeas corpus and discharging the order to show cause, the court of appeal decided that the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies is applicable to applications for habeas corpus relief. The question had not been previously considered in California. The court of appeal based its decision on the example of those federal cases which hold that a federal prisoner seeking relief similar to that sought by petitioner in this case must exhaust the administrative remedies made available by the regulations of the prison authority. The court also based its decision on the rationale behind the rule of exhaustion of administrative remedies. As the court noted, that rule is based on the consideration that the courts should not interfere with an agency until it has completed its action, or else has exceeded its jurisdiction, and on the further consideration that the agency should be allowed to develop the necessary factual background on which its decisions should be based.

Petitioner raised the contention that the requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies should be waived where petitioner is seeking vindication of a constitutional right. The court denied this contention on the basis that cases had held that habeas corpus will not issue where the petitioner has failed to exhaust the remedy of appeal even though fundamental constitutional rights were involved.This holding may, however, be questionable since other cases have held that failure to take an appeal does not bar relief by writ of habeas corpus where special circumstances exist. Moreover, in this respect, the rule requiring exhaustion of remedies by appeal has been held to be a discretionary rule [see In re Coughlin (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 52, 55] .

By contrast, the requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies has been held to be a jurisdictional requirement and not to be a discretionary matter [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 293, 109 P.2d 942, 132 ALR 715] , and the fact that a constitutional issue is involved would not cause the requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies to be waived.

There is one further requirement for the applicability of the doctrine of exhaustion of administrative remedies beyond the availability of an administrative remedy. The administrative remedy set up must be efficacious and establish a clearly defined machinery for the submission, evaluation, and resolution of complaints [see Endler v. Schutzbank (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 162, 168, 65 Cal. Rptr. 297, 436 P.2d 297] . The court of appeal found that the procedure set up by the Department of Corrections for review of denials of access to information sought by inmates was such an administrative procedure and that petitioner, therefore, was required to follow that remedy before seeking relief by the writ of habeas corpus and, accordingly, denied the writ of habeas corpus and discharged the order to show cause. A petition for rehearing was denied, and petitioner's application for a hearing by the Supreme Court was likewise denied.

The requirement of exhaustion of administrative remedies has usually been imposed to prevent judicial relief only where the statutes or regulations set up a complete administrative procedure fulfilling the requirements of due process of law [see Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 292, 109 P.2d 942, 132 ALR 715] and where the statute or regulation under which the procedure is offered establishes cleary defined machinery for the submission, evaluation, and resolution of complaints by aggrieved parties [see Endler v. Schutzbank (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 162, 168, 65 Cal. Rptr. 297, 436 P.2d 297] . Petitioner contended that the administrative procedures offered in this case were inadequate and therefore did not have to be exhausted before petitioner could seek relief by writ of habeas corpus. His contention was rejected by the court of appeal, which found the administrative procedures offered to be adequate. Although it rejected petitioner's argument, the court did accept petitioner's contention that inadequate administrative remedies need not be exhausted. In denying petitioner's application for the writ, the court found that the remedies were adequate as a matter of fact.

[b] Jurisdictional Requirement of Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies

Abelleira v. District Court of Appeal (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 280, 109 P.2d 942, 132 ALR 715 , was a petition for a writ of prohibition before the Supreme Court to restrain the court of appeal from taking any steps toward the enforcement of a writ of mandate and temporary restraining order issued by the court of appeal and directed against an administrative agency. Before an administrative determination had been completed, one of the parties applied to a court of appeal for a writ of mandate and other incidental relief, stating that it had not exhausted its administrative remedies because the action of the agency would violate the statutes, that in prior decisions the agency had shown its position to be against its case on the issue raised, and that the decision of the agency would damage the fund maintained by the agency which was at issue. The court of appeal issued an alternative writ and a temporary restrainingorder. The party then filed an appeal with the agency from the decision of the agency, and the other party then petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition. In holding that the court of appeal lacked jurisdiction to issue the writ of mandate concerning the administrative proceeding, the Supreme Court found that the requirement that the administrative remedies be exhausted is a jurisdictional prerequisite for the resolution of questions in a court. Moreover, the Court found that the exhaustion of administrative remedies is a jurisdictional rule and not a matter of discretion for the courts. The Court therefore issued the writ of prohibition to restrain the enforcement of the writ of mandate and temporary restraining order by the court of appeal.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.49

§ 110.49 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Application to Appellate Court Before Application to Superior Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

AN APPELLATE COURT HAS DISCRETION TO REFUSE TO ISSUE THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS AS AN EXERCISE OF ORIGINAL JURISDICTION ON THE GROUND THAT APPLICATION HAS NOT BEEN MADE FOR THE WRIT IN A LOWER COURT.

A. Discretion to Refuse to Issue Writ. Although the appellate courts have jurisdiction to issue the writ of habeas corpus on a first application made in an appellate court, they have discretion to refuse to issue the writ as an exercise of original jurisdiction on the ground that application has not been made for the writ in a lower court in the first instance (In re Hillery (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 293, 294, 20 Cal. Rptr. 759).

[Optional] B. Factual Questions Require Application First in Superior Court. [See § 110.39, Paragraph C.]
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where petitioner has applied in the first instance to an appellate court, not having sought relief in a superiorcourt by application for the writ.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Discretion to Refuse to Issue Writ

In re Hillery (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 293, 20 Cal. Rptr. 759 , was a proceeding for the writ of habeas corpus in which petitioner, who had been imprisoned in a county jail without being charged with any crime or taken before a magistrate, sought release by a petition for the writ filed in the first instance with the court of appeal. In denying the writ, the court noted that petitioner had alleged that no prior application for the writ had been made. The court found that it had jurisdiction to issue the writ but that it had discretion to refuse to issue the writ as an exercise of original jurisdiction onthe ground that application had not been made for the writ in a lower court in the first instance. Since there was no showing in the petition of extraordinary circumstances justifying action by an appellate court, and since habeas corpus proceedings involving a factual situation should be first tried in the superior court rather than in an appellate court, except where questions of law are involved, the court held that petitioner should have applied to the superior court.

[b] Factual Questions Require Application First in Superior Court

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , was discussed in § 110.49[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.50

§ 110.50 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Child Custody--Respondent Entitled to Temporary Custody Despite Existing Out-of-State Decree

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

DESPITE THE EXISTENCE OF AN OUT-OF-STATE COURT DECREE AWARDING CUSTODY OF A CHILD TO PETITIONER, RESPONDENT MAY BE AWARDED TEMPORARY CUSTODY WHERE RESPONDENT ALLEGES AND PROVES JEOPARDY TO THE CHILD'S HEALTH OR SAFETY.

Health and Safety of the Child Jeopardized. Despite the existence of an out-of-state court decree awarding custody to petitioner, respondent may be awarded temporary custody of the child pending final determination of proper custody in another state where alleging and proving that the child's health or safety will be jeopardized and that some substantial harm will occur if respondent is not awarded temporary custody (Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 837, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where petitioner is entitled to custody pursuant to a valid out-of-state court decree, but respondent wishes to retain temporary custody of the child pending final determination of the right to custody because substantial harm will occur to the health or safety of the child if custody is returned to petitioner.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The foregoing authority should also be accompanied by affidavits showing the existence of facts which indicate that the health or safety of the child would suffer substantial harm if custody remained with petitioner.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Health and Safety of Child Jeopardized

Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 , is discussed in § 110.35[3][c].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.51

§ 110.51 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Child Custody--Proceedings in Appellate Court--Relitigation of Factual Issues Decided on Hearing in Superior Court

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

ON A NEW PETITION FOR WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS FILED WITH AN APPELLATE COURT IN A CHILD CUSTODY CASE AFTER DENIAL OF THE WRIT BY THE SUPERIOR COURT, PETITIONER MAY NOT AGAIN LITIGATE THE ISSUES OF FACT DECIDED IN THE SUPERIOR COURT ABSENT CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES.

Attempt to Relitigate Factual Issues Decided by Superior Court. Where habeas corpus has been used to assert custody rights to a minor child and the writ has been denied by the superior court, petitioner may not on a new application for the writ in an appellate court again litigate the issues of fact decided in the superior court unless after the hearing in the superior court there is a change of the circumstances which affect the right to custody (In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 790-791, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to a writ of habeas corpus where the petitioner is using the writ to determine an issue of child custody and has previously applied for the writ in the superior court but has been unsuccessful on the factual issues in the case at the superior court level. If petitioner attempts to relitigate these issues at the appellate level, respondent can raise the bar of such relitigation by the doctrines of res judicata and collateral estoppel, unless changed circumstances are shown.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a return to the writ of habeas corpus in a child custody case, see Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attempt to Relitigate Factual Issues Decided by Superior court

In re M. (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 783, 122 Cal. Rptr. 531, 537 P.2d 363 , is discussed in § 110.34[3][a], 110.44[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.52

§ 110.52 Supporting Return [Penal Code § 1480]--Transfer of Proceeding

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

THE COURT SHOULD TRANSFER A HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDING WHERE _____ [THERE IS SUBSTANTIAL REASON FOR TRANSFER or THE PROCEEDING SEEKS TO TEST THE CONDITIONS OF CONFINEMENT AND THE PETITIONER IS NOT CONFINED WITHIN THE TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION OF THE COURT WHERE THE WRIT IS FILED or THE PROCEEDING CHALLENGES THE JUDGMENT OF A COURT NOT WITHIN THE SAME TERRITORIAL JURISDICTION AS THE COURT IN WHICH THE PETITION IS FILED].

A. Transfer. The court in which the petition is filed should transfer the proceeding to another court if _____ [there is a substantial reason for the transfer or the proceeding challenges the conditions of confinement and petitioner is not confined within the territorial jurisdiction of the court where the petition is filed or the proceeding challenges the judgment of a court not within the same territorial jurisdiction as the court in which the petition is filed] (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(2); Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 (superior court); In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 (court of appeal).

[Optional] B. Substantial Reason for Transfer. Where there is a substantial reason for transfer of the proceeding for writ of habeas corpus, the court in which the petition is filed need not resolve the petition and may transfer the proceeding (Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 (superior court); see In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 (rule applied to court of appeal)).

[Optional] C. Necessity for Evidentiary Hearing as Substantial Reason for Transfer. Transfer of a proceeding on habeas corpus is proper where an evidentiary hearing is necessary and the persons who will participate in it are more efficiently available to the court to which the proceedings are transferred, or where that court is better situated to conduct a hearing (Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727).

[Optional] D. Transfer to Judgment Court Where Judgment Challenged. Although any _____ [superior court or court of appeal] has jurisdiction to entertain and adjudicate a petition for the writ of habeas corpus, the court must determine whether it will hear the matter on the merits or transfer the proceeding to another court. If the challenge is to a particular judgment, the petition should be transferred to the court which rendered judgment if that court is a different court from the court in which the petition was filed (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(1), (2)(A); Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 ; In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 (rule applied to courts of appeal)).

[Optional] E. Transfer to Jurisdiction of Confinement Where Conditions of Confinement Challenged. Although any _____ [superior court or court of appeal] has jurisdiction to entertain and adjudicate a petition for the writ of habeas corpus, the court must determine whether it will hear the matter on the merits or transfer the proceeding to another court. If the challenge is to conditions of confinement, then the petition should be transferred to the jurisdiction in which the person in confined if that jurisdiction is different from that of the court in which the petition was filed (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(1), (2)(B); Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 ; In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 134-135, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 (rule applied to courts of appeal)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the respondent wishes the court to transfer the proceedings to a more convenient forum.

Formerly, the superior court's determination that a habeas petition stated a prima facie case for relief was a prerequisite of transferring the petition [see Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 343-347, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727] . Effective January 1, 2002, that requirement was eliminated. Accordingly, the superior court may transfer a habeas petition without first determining whether a prima facie case for relief exists [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.552(b)(1), (2)].

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transfer

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

[b] Substantial Reason for Transfer

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is dicussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

[c] Necessity for Evidentiary Hearing as Substantial Reason for Transfer

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

[d] Transfer to Judgment Court Where Judgment Challenged

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in *§ 110.40[3]*b].

[e] Transfer to Jurisdiction of Confinement Where Conditions of Confinement Challenged

Griggs v. Superior Court (1976) 16 Cal. 3d 341, 128 Cal. Rptr. 223, 546 P.2d 727 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

In re Van Heflin (1976) 58 Cal. App. 3d 131, 128 Cal. Rptr. 257 , is discussed in § 110.40[3][b].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.53

§ 110.53 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Exception to Sufficiency of Return

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

RESPONDENT'S RETURN TO THE WRIT IS INSUFFICIENT BECAUSE _____ [specify reason(s) why return is insufficient, e.g., THE RETURN CONTAINS ONLY GENERAL DENIALS OF THE ALLEGATIONS IN THE PETITION AND CONTAINS NO (SUFFICIENT) ALLEGATIONS OF SPECIFIC FACTS SHOWING THE LEGALITY OF PETITIONER'S CONFINEMENT].

A. Exception to Sufficiency of Return. The party brought before the court or judge on the return to the writ may except the sufficiency of the return (Penal Code § 1484).

B. Exception to Sufficiency Similar to Demurrer. When petitioner to the sufficiency of the return in the traverse, petitioner raises questions of law in a procedure analogous to demurrer (In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1048, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921).

[EITHER]

C. Return as Required to Be Verified. The return must be signed by the person making it, and, except when the person is a sworn public officer making the return in his or her official capacity, the return must be verified by his or her oath (Penal Code § 1480(5)).

[AND/OR]

D. Statement of Authority for Restraint. If the respondent has the party in his or her custody or power, or under his or her restraint, respondent must state the authority and cause of that imprisonment or restraint (Penal Code § 1480(2)).

[AND/OR]

E. Copy of Written Authority to Be Attached. If the party is detained by virtue of any writ, warrant, or other written authority, a copy of it must be attached to the return (Penal Code § 1480(3)).

[AND/OR]

F. Statement Concerning Transfer of Custody. If the person on whom the writ is served had the party in his or her power or custody, or under restraint, at any time prior or subsequent to the date of the writ of habeas corpus, but has transferred custody or restraint to another, the return must state particularly to whom, at what time and place, for cause, and by what authority the transfer took place (Penal Code § 1480(4)).

[AND/OR]

G. Statement of Custody. The person on whom the writ is served must state in the return plainly and unequivocally whether he or she has or has not the party in his or her custody, or under his or her power or restraint (Penal Code § 1480(1)).

[AND/OR]

H. Return Shows Right to Relief. In superior court, any material allegation of the petition that is not controverted by the return is deemed admitted for purposes of the habeas corpus proceeding (Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 4.551(d)). When the return effectively acknowledges or admits allegation in the petition or traverse that, if true, justify the relief sought, the relief may be granted without a hearing on the other factual issues joined by the pleadings (In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1048, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921).

[AND/OR]

I. Return Must Allege Facts Showing Legality of Confinement. A return containing only general denials of the factual allegations in the petition for habeas corpus is insufficient. The return must allege facts tending to establish the legality of petitioner's confinement. The allegations in the return must also specifically respond to the allegations of the petition that form the basis of the petitioner's claim that the confinement is unlawful (People v. Duvall (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 464, 476, 480-481, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259, 886 P.2d 1252).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a traverse to return to the writ of habeas corpus that excepts to the sufficiency of the return. The return is made in response to the writ of habeas corpus or to the order to show cause why the writ should not issue (a procedure often followed by appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). Rather than functioning as an answer to the petition or to the writ itself, the return functions as a complaint would in a civil proceeding. The traverse is a response to the return and is subject to many of the rules applicable to answers, such as that new matter contesting the legality of the custody or restraint which appears in the travers is deemed denied, and the respondent is not required to file a response to the traverse [see In re Egan (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 323, 330, 149 P.2d 693] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exception to Sufficiency Similar to Demurrer

In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921 , was a habeas corpus proceeding in which petitioner sought a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that he was denied effective assistance of counsel at his trial. On petition for writ of habeas corpus, the Supreme Court issued an order to show cause and appointed counsel to represent petitioner. In determining to grant the writ and reverse the judgment of conviction, the Court considered the effect of the various pleadings filed in the writ proceeding. In a habeas corpus proceeding, the Court noted, the return to the writ or order to show cause alleges facts tending to establish the legality of the challenged detention and is analogous to the complaint in a civil proceeding. The Court observed that the traverse (or the petition when, by stipulation, it is treated as the traverse) is analogous to the answer in a civil proceeding, and the petitioner may deny or controvert any of the material facts or matters set forth in the return or allege any fact to show either that his imprisonment or detention is unlawful or that he is entitled to his discharge (2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1047) . The issues are joined in this manner, and new matter set up in the traverse is deemed denied and must be proved by the party alleging it, namely, the petitioner. The Court also stated that the petitioner may except to the sufficiency of the return in a proceeding analogous to the demurrer. The Court noted that when the return effectively acknowledges or admits allegations in the petition and traverse which, if true, justify the relief sought, the relief may be granted without a hearing on the other factual issues joined by the pleadings (2 Cal. 3d 1033, 1047-1048) .

[b] Return Shows Right to Relief

In re Saunders (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 1033, 88 Cal. Rptr. 633, 472 P.2d 921 , is discussed in § 110.53[3][a].

[c] Return Must Allege Facts Showing Legality of Confinement

Petitioner in People v. Duvall (1995) 9 Cal. 4th 464, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 259, 886 P.2d 1252 , was convicted of second-degree murder. Along with his direct appeal from the conviction, petitioner filed a petition for writ of habeas corpus challenging the legality of his conviction and subsequent imprisonment. The petition alleged that petitioner was denied effective assistance of counsel because defense counsel (who died sometime after the trial) had failed to adequately investigate and present a defense based on petitioner's alleged intoxication at the time of the crime. Before the court of appeal, the Attorney General, representing the Department of Corrections, filed a return that admitted some of the allegations of the petition, but simply denied the portions of the petition alleging that petitioner received ineffective assistance of trial counsel and that petitioner was prejudiced by any such ineffective assistance. The return was accompanied by a verification executed by the deputy attorney general who prepared the return and a memorandum of points and authorities, which set forth in more detail the legal and factual basis for the Attorney General's opposition to the petition. The court of appeal, after considering the allegations of the petition, the return, and the traverse, and without holding an evidentiary hearing, issued the writ of habeas corpus and reversed petitioner's conviction.

On review, the California Supreme Court summarized the procedure applicable to writs of habeas corpus. The Court observed that if the court initially determines that the petitioner has pleaded sufficient facts in his or her petition that, if true, would entitle him or her to relief, the custodian of the confined person must then file a responsive pleading, called a return, justifying the confinement (9 Cal. 4th 464, 475) . The Court noted that its prior decisions have required more of the return than mere compliance with the literal language of Penal Code § 1480 (which requires only that the custodian state whether or not he or she has the confined party in his or her custody or under his or her power and restrain, and, if he or she has custody of the party, the authority and cause of the imprisonment or restraint). The Court stated that return must allege facts tending to establish the legality of the petitioner's detention. Those facts are not simply the existence of a judgment of conviction and sentence when the petitioner challenges his restraint in prison. The factual allegations of a return must also respond to the allegations of the petition that form the basis of the petitioner's claim that the confinement is unlawful. Furthermore, the Court noted, the return should also, when appropriate, provide such documentary evidence, affidavits, or other materials as will enable the court to determine which issues are truly disputed (9 Cal. 4th 464, 476) .

The Court noted that following the filing of the return, the habeas corpus petitioner responds to the facts pleaded in the return in a pleading called a traverse. The requirement that the return allege facts responsive to the petition is critical because the factual allegations in the return are either admitted or disputed in the traverse, and this interplay frames the factual issues that the court must decide. Facts set forth in the return that are not disputed in the traverse are deemed true. Conversely, when the return effectively acknowledges or admits allegations in the petition and traverse that, if true, justify the relief sought, the court may grant the relief without a hearing on the other factual issues joined by the pleadings (9 Cal. 4th 464, 476-477) . If, after considering the return and the traverse, the court finds material facts in dispute, it may appoint a referee and order an evidentiary hearing to be held (9 Cal. 4th 464, 478) .

The Court further stated that by failing to allege facts demonstrating the lawfulness of the challenged detention, a return containing only general denials is deficient in two important ways. First, such a return fails to fulfil its function of narrowing the facts and issues to those that are truly in dispute. Second, failure to allege facts in the return prevents a habeas corpus petitioner from controverting those facts in his or her traverse. The traverse becomes a useless pleading, unable to assist the court in sharpening the issues that must be decided in an evidentiary hearing. Accordingly, the Court reiterated its past disapproval of the practice of filing returns that merely contain a general denial of a habeas corpus petitioner's factual allegations (9 Cal. 4th 464, 480-481) .

Examining the return filed in this case, the Court noted that although the return specifically denied the allegations of the key paragraphs of the petition that set forth the legal and factual basis for the requested relief (i.e., that petitioner received ineffective assistance of counsel), the return did not indicate the factual basis for the denials. The Court held that such assertions do not assist the court in identifying the material factual issues actually in dispute and therefore may be fairly characterized as general denials (9 Cal. 4th 464, 481-482) . However, the Court held that in cases (which will often include allegations of ineffective assistance of counsel) in which access to critical information is limited, in which it is unreasonable to expect a party to obtain information at the pleading stage, or in which the proper resolution of the case hinges on the credibility of witnesses, the general rule requiring the pleading of facts should not be enforced in such a draconian fashion as to defeat the ends of justice. If one party (the respondent in the return, or the petitioner in the traverse) can allege that (1) he or she has acted with due diligence; (2) crucial information is not available; and (3) there is good reason to dispute certain alleged facts or dispute the credibility of certain declarants, courts evaluating the return and the traverse should endeavor to determine whether there are facts legitimately in dispute that may require holding an evidentiary hearing (9 Cal. 4th 464, 485) . Applying this rule, the Court held that, although the return in this case was technically deficient, its contents, coupled with portions of the memorandum of points and authorities accompanying the return, sufficiently identified the facts that the Attorney General wished to dispute. Moreover, given defense counsel's death and the Attorney General's argument's before the court, it appeared that the critical information was possessed by petitioner and was not reasonably available to the ttorney General. The Court therefore concluded that the court of appeal should have appointed a referee to hold an evidentiary hearing to determine the truth or falsity of the factual allegations regarding defense counsel's failure to investigate and present a defense based on petitioner's alleged diminished mental state. Therefore, the Court vacated the court of appeal's judgment and remanded the matter with directions to appoint a referee and order an evidentiary hearing (9 Cal. 4th 464, 486) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exception to Sufficiency Similar to Demurrer

In re Landry (1943) 61 Cal. App. 2d 230, 142 P.2d 432 , was a proceeding in habeas corpus to secure custody of a child. Petitioner had previously applied to the superior court for the writ but the petition had been denied on the ground that the child had expressed a desire not to return to petitioner. Petitioner, however, was entitled to custody pursuant to a Nevada divorce decree. Petitioner then filed a petition for the writ with the court of appeal. The return and the amended return to the writ alleged that habeas corpus was not a proper remedy and that the court of appeal was not a proper court, and also set forth facts showing the petitioner to be unfit to have custody of the child. Petitioner filed both a general demurrer and an answer to the return. The demurrer raised the issue of the sufficiency of the facts alleged to constitute a defense to the writ by respondent, among other issues. The court treated the demurrer as it would a demurrer to a complaint in a civil action, holding that the petitioner admitted the material facts alleged in the return by filing the demurrer and considering whether respondent had stated a sufficient case. The court also found that objections that essential facts appear only inferentially or as conclusions of law must be raised by special demurrer and cannot be reached by special demurrer (61 Cal. App. 2d 230, 233) . Overruling the demurrer to the return, the court of appeal appointed a referee to hear and take testimony (61 Cal. App. 2d 230, 235) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.54

§ 110.54 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Habeas Corpus Appropriate Although Petitioner Released From Custody--Issue of Broad Public Interest Likely to Recur

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

ALTHOUGH PETITIONER HAS BEEN RELEASED FROM CONFINEMENT, THE COURT MAY EXERCISE AN INHERENT DISCRETION TO ENTERTAIN A HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDING IN ORDER TO RESOLVE AN ISSUE OF BROAD PUBLIC INTEREST THAT IS LIKELY TO RECUR.

Habeas Corpus as Proper to Resolve Issue of Public Interest. If a pending case poses an issue of broad public interest that is likely to recur, the court may exercise an inherent discretion to resolve that issue even though an event occurring during its pendency would normally render the matter moot. Questions of general public concern do not become moot by reason of the fact that the ensuing judgment may no longer be binding on a party to the action (In re William M. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 16, 23-25, 89 Cal. Rptr. 33, 473 P.2d 737).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus if the petitioner has been released from custody before the court can reach a consideration of the petitioner's right to release, but the case poses an issue of broad public concern that is likely to recur with regard to petitioner or with regard to others similarly situated.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[i] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications the foregoing points and authorities may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the petition for a writ of habeas corpus where the respondent may raise the mootness of the proceedings due to the release of petitioner or the granting of other relief requested.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Habeas Corpus as Proper to Resolve Issue of Public Interest

In re William M. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 16, 89 Cal. Rptr. 33, 473 P.2d 737 , was a proceeding brought by the father of a juvenile for the writ of habeas corpus. The probation officer for the juvenile department of the superior court had filed a petition alleging that the minor came within the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 602. The minor was taken into custody on an arrest warrant, and the minor was not released on his promise, or that of his parents, that he would appear for further proceedings. The judge of the court refused to consider factors supporting the minor's release and continued the detention. The minor's father filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus with the court of appeal, which denied the petition without an opinion. The father then filed a petition for a hearing with the Supreme Court, which granted the petition and transferred the matter to itself. The Court issued an order to show cause (a procedure frequently followed in the appellate courts [see In re Hochberg (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 870, 874 fn. 2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 681, 471 P.2d 1]). Pending determination of the petition, the Court directed that the minor be released from custody until the hearing in the juvenile court. The juvenile court found the allegations of the petition against the minor to be true and declared the minor a ward of the court. At the time of the decision of the Supreme Court in the habeas corpus proceeding, the minor had been placed in the home of his parents under the supervision of the probation officer. The district attorney asserted that the habeas corpus proceeding was therefore moot. In deciding to consider the case despite the release of the minor, the Court noted that if a pending case poses an issue of broad public interest that is likely to recur, the court may exercise an inherent discretion to resolve that issue even though an event occurring during its pendency would normally render the matter moot. Such questions of general public concern, the Court further noted do not become moot by reason of the fact that the ensuing judgment may no longer be binding on a party to the action. Habeas corpus may be used to obtain a declaration of rights, and such a use is particularly appropriate, despite mootness, where it is used to determine important issues which could not otherwise be decided because of the brevity of the sentence under review, the Court found. Although the Court ruled in favor of the rights sought by the petitioner on the writ, the Court discharged the order to show cause and denied the writ, since the purpose of the proceedings had been to obtain the determination which the Court had made, and since the petitioner had already obtained relief.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 110 HABEAS CORPUS
PART II. FORMS

11-110 California Points & Authorities § 110.55

§ 110.55 Supporting Traverse to Return [Penal Code § 1484]--Child Custody--Petitioner Entitled to Custody Pursuant to Out-of-State Custody Decree--Insufficient Allegation in Return to Writ

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 110.20.]

A MERE ALLEGATION THAT AN AWARD OF CUSTODY TO A PARENT RESIDING IN CALIFORNIA WOULD FURTHER THE BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILD OR THE WELFARE OF THE CHILD IN THE RETURN TO THE WRIT IS NOT SUFFICIENT GROUND FOR DENYING ENFORCEMENT OF A FOREIGN CUSTODY DECREE.

A. Exception to Sufficiency of Return. [See § 110.53, Paragraph A.]

B. Insufficient Allegation in Return. A mere allegation in the return that an award of custody to the resident parent would further the best interests of the welfare of the child is not sufficient ground for denying enforcement of a foreign custody decree (Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 837, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

The foregoing points and authorities are for use in a memorandum of points and authorities submitted in support of the traverse to the return to the writ of habeas corpus where the return alleges that it would be for the welfare of the child or in the best interest of the child for custody to remain with respondent despite the existence of a foreign court decree giving petitioner the right to custody.

Where appropriate, counsel should include argument with the foregoing points and authorities showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Insufficient Allegation in Return

Ferreira v. Ferreira (1973) 9 Cal. 3d 824, 109 Cal. Rptr. 80, 512 P.2d 304 , is discussed in § 110.35[3][c].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
Chapter 111 RESERVED

11-111 California Points & Authorities Chapter 111

RESERVED

Chapter 111RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS

11-112 California Points & Authorities 112.syn

§ 112.syn Synopsis to Chapter 112: HOMESTEADS

§ 112.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 112.02 Governing Statutes

§ 112.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

§ 112.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 112.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 112.06-112.19 [Reserved]

§ 112.20 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070] Submitted in Opposition to Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010]--Homestead Exemption Plus Amount of Encumbrances Exceeds Value of Homesteaded Property [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.730]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Exempt From Attachment

[b] Homestead Exempt From Enforcement of Judgment or Attachment

[c] Homestead as Sold Subject to Exemption and Encumbrances

[d] Rental of Portion of Building Not Impairing Homestead

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Minimum Bid Requirement

§ 112.21 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]--To Prevent Execution Sale of Homesteaded Property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.510-701.830]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Threat of Sale of Homesteaded Property

[b] Controversy Over Validity of Homestead

[c] Homestead Awarded in Dissolution as Not Subject to Separate Debts of Other Spouse

§ 112.22 Opposing Defendant's Claim of Exemption Submitted in Opposition to Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f)]--Value of Property Exceeds Aggregate Amount of Homestead Exemption Plus Amount of Encumbrances [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.730, 704.950(c)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Excess Value of Homestead as Subject to Attachment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.01

§ 112.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda of points and authorities for use in opposing an application for a right to attach order on the grounds that the property is homesteaded and has no excess value [see § 112.20], in supporting an application for temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction to prevent the execution sale of homesteaded property [see § 112.21], and in opposing a defendant's claim of exemption [see § 112.22].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionExemptionsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsWrits of AttachmentReal Property LawHomestead Exemptions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.02

§ 112.02 Governing Statutes

The provisions governing the procedures and requirements for claiming a homestead exemption are set forth in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.510-703.610, 704.710-704.800, and 704.965.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsEntry of JudgmentsEnforcement & ExecutionExemptionsCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsWrits of AttachmentReal Property LawHomestead ExemptionsReal Property LawHomestead Exemptions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.03

§ 112.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a memorandum must not exceed 15 pages, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda of points and authorities, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawCivil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsWrits of AttachmentReal Property LawHomestead Exemptions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.04

§ 112.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion of the procedures and requirements for claiming a homestead, forms for filing declarations of homesteads, and forms of complaint involving homesteads, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 294, Homesteads (Matthew Bender).

For a discussion of, and forms for, supporting and opposing the issuance of a writ of attachment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsWrits of AttachmentReal Property LawHomestead Exemptions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.05

§ 112.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda of points and authorities in support of, or in opposition to, a writ of attachment may be found in Ch. 23, Attachment .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureRemediesProvisional RemediesAttachmentsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsAncillary WritsWrits of Attachment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-112 California Points & Authorities §§ 112.06-112.19

[Reserved]

§§ 112.06[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART II. FORMS

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.20

§ 112.20 Supporting Claim of Exemption [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070] Submitted in Opposition to Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010]--Homestead Exemption Plus Amount of Encumbrances Exceeds Value of Homesteaded Property [Code Civ. Proc. § 704.730]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____
_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM SUPPORTING CLAIM OF EX-
_____ [name(s)],	)	EMPTION IN OPPOSITION TO APPLICATION
Defendant(s).	)	FOR RIGHT TO ATTACH ORDER
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 484.010]
	)

A WRIT OF ATTACHMENT MAY NOT ATTACH AND NO RIGHT TO ATTACH ORDER SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN THE AGGREGATE AMOUNT OF A HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION PLUS THE AMOUNT OF ENCUMBRANCES EXCEEDS THE VALUE OF THE HOMESTEADED PROPERTY.

A. Notice of Opposition. A defendant who desires to oppose the issuance of the right to attach order sought by plaintiff, or who objects to the amount sought to be secured by the attachment, must file and serve on plaintiff, no later than five days prior to the date set for the hearing, a notice of opposition stating the grounds on which defendant opposes the issuance of the order or objects to the amount sought to be secured by the attachment. The notice must be accompanied by an affidavit supporting any factual issues raised and points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)).

B. Claim of Exemption. If the defendant claims that the property described in the plaintiff's application, or a portion of such property, is exempt from attachment, the defendant must claim such exemption in accordance with the provisions set forth in Section 484.070(c)-(g) of the Code of Civil Procedure that provide for procedures by which a claim of exemption may be sought (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070).

C. Property Exempt From Attachment. Except as provided under Civil Code section 3439.07(a)(2), all property exempt from enforcement of a money judgment is also exempt from attachment (Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a)).

D. Homestead Exempt From Enforcement of Judgment or Attachment. Except as provided under Civil Code section 3439.07(a)(2), a homestead is exempt from attachment or enforcement of a judgment other than the foreclosure of a mortgage, deed of trust, or other lien or encumbrance other than an attachment or enforcement lien (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.020(a), 703.010).

E. Minimum Bid Requirement. At an execution sale of homesteaded property no bid will be received unless it exceeds the amount of the homestead exemption plus the aggregate amount of all liens and encumbrances on the property (Code Civ. Proc. § 704.800(a)). If no bid is received that exceeds 90 percent of the appraised fair market value determined pursuant to Section 704.780 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the court, on motion of the judgment creditor, may grant permission to accept the highest bid that exceeds the amount of the homestead exemption plus the aggregate amount of all liens and encumbrances on the property, or the court may issue a new order for sale of the homestead (Code Civ. Proc. § 704.800(b)).

F. Claim of Exemption by Judgment Debtor or Spouse of Judgment Debtor. The judgment debtor or the spouse of the judgment debtor may claim an exemption of $75,000, unless the claimant is a member of a family unit and there is at least one member of the family unit who owns no interest in the homestead or whose only interest in the homestead is a community property interest with the judgment debtor, in which case the amount of the exemption is $100,000, or unless the claimant is 65 years of age or older or a person physically or mentally disabled who as a result of that disability is unable to engage in substantial gainful employment, or the claimant is a person 55 years old or older with a gross annual income of not more than $15,000 or, if married, a gross annual income, including the gross annual income of the judgment debtor's spouse, of not more than $20,000 and the sale is an involuntary sale, in which cases the exemption is $175,000 (Code Civ. Proc. § 704.730).

[Optional] G. Increased Exemptions Applicable. A homestead declaration was recorded before _____ [specify operative date of amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 704.730, e.g., January 1, 1998], the operative date of the amendment to Section 704.730 of the Code of Civil Procedure that increased the amount of the homestead exemption, and the judgment creditor did not obtain a lien on the declared homestead before that date; therefore, for purposes of Sections 704.950(c) and 704.960 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the amount of the exemption is the increased amount (see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.965).

H. Homestead as Sold Subject to Exemption and Encumbrances. The law is well settled that property selected as a homestead and subject to an encumbrance must be sold subject to the encumbrance. Unless a bid is received that exceeds the homestead exemption and the encumbrance, no sale can be had and a showing that the value of the homestead does not exceed the exemption plus the encumbrances on the property is sufficient to discharge a levy of attachment (Southern Pac. Milling Co. v. Milligan (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 729, 730-731, 104 P.2d 654 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 487.025(b)).

[Optional] I. Rental of Portion of Building Not Impairing Homestead. If there is one building, a portion of which is used as a family residence, the fact that other portions are rented to tenants does not impair the right of the claimant to select the structure and the land on which it is situated as a homestead (Vincenzini v. Fiorentini (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741, 38 P.2d 876).

[Optional] J. Judgment Debtor Need Not Continuously Own Property to Obtain Homestead Exemption. A judgment debtor need only reside at a property to obtain the benefits of a homestead exemption; the debtor need not own the property (Broadway Foreclosure Investments, LLC v. Tarlesson (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-938, 109 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memoranda may be submitted in support of a claim of exemption that is submitted in opposition to the application for a right to attach order, or in opposition to the amount sought to be secured by the attachment [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060], when the defendant asserts that he or she has a claim of exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070] because the value of the property sought to be attached does not exceed the aggregate amount of the homestead exemption plus the encumbrances on the property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 704.800].

Optional Paragraph G should be used when the homestead exemption has been increased and the judgment debtor claims an exemption to a lien on the homestead or its proceeds for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.950(c) and 704.960. The increased exemption will be allowed if a homestead declaration was recorded before the operative date of any amendment to Code Civ. Proc. § 704.730 increasing the exemption, and the judgment creditor has not obtained a lien on the declared homestead prior to the operative date of that amendment.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the value of the property for which the right to attach order is sought is less than the amount of the homestead exemption plus the sum of all liens andencumbrances on the property. In addition, counsel must include affidavits supporting any factual issues raised and points and authorities supporting any legal issues raised [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.060(a)]. In raising the claim of exemption, the documents must also include a description of the property claimed to be exempt and a citation of the statute section supporting the claim [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(c)].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms and a discussion of the procedure for making a motion in opposition to the issuance of a right to attach order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Property Exempt From Attachment

The exclusion from the attachment exemption under Code Civ. Proc. § 487.020(a), as provided under Civ. Code §

3439.07(a)(2), refers to actions under Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12 for relief against fraudulent conveyances [see Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(2)].

[b] Homestead Exempt From Enforcement of Judgment or Attachment

For a discussion of the exclusion from the attachment exemption, see § 112.20[3][a].

[c] Homestead as Sold Subject to Exemption and Encumbrances

In Southern Pac. Milling Co. v. Milligan (1940) 15 Cal. 2d 729, 104 P.2d 654 , the Supreme Court affirmed the order granting the defendant's motion to quash a writ of attachment and vacate a levy on their homestead, the former common-law method of opposing a writ of attachment. Accompanying the motion was an affidavit stating that the homesteaded property had a fair market value of $5,000 but was subject to a $3,500 encumbrance, so that with the aggregate amount of the homestead exemption and the encumbrance of the property there was no excess value. In affirming the order of the trial court, the Court held that the law is well settled that property selected as a homestead and subject to an encumbrance must be sold subject to the encumbrance. Unless a bid is received that exceeds the homestead exemption and the encumbrance, no sale can be had, and a showing that value of the homestead does not exceed the exemption, plus the encumbrances on the property, is sufficient to discharge a levy of attachment (15 Cal. 2d 729, 730-731).

[d] Rental of Portion of Building Not Impairing Homestead

In Vincenzini v. Fiorentini (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 739, 38 P.2d 876 , the court of appeal affirmed an order discharging a writ of attachment on property standing in the name of the defendant. The defendant filed an affidavit along with the motion to discharge the writ stating that a homestead had been filed on the property, that it consisted of a one-story residence and outbuildings, and that it had a total cash value of $4,000. The plaintiff filed a counter affidavit alleging that at the time of the filing of the homestead declaration and at all times thereafter there were two dwelling houses on the property. The defendant and her family occupied a portion of one building that contained a four-room dwelling. Several years after the construction of the building, another structure had been added which was, on different occasions, occupied either by the defendant's married daughter and her husband or by rent-paying tenants. The two structures shared a common wall and chimney but had separate entrances and separate gas and electric services. The court stated that when there is one building, a portion of which is occupied as a family residence, the fact that other portions are rented to tenant does not impair the right to select the structure and land as a homestead. It held that it was the role of the trial court to decide whether the property held one or two buildings and since the lower court had chosen to believe the affidavit of the defendant, the order to discharge the writ was correct (2 Cal. App. 2d 739, 741).

In Broadway Foreclosure Investments, LLC v. Tarlesson (2010) 184 Cal. App. 4th 931, 936-938, 109 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , the judgment creditor argued that the judgment debtor was not entitled to claim a homestead exemption for her property because she deeded it to a third party. The creditor argued that a judgment debtor must at all relevant times own an interest in the property in order to claim a homestead exemption. The court of appeal disagreed. It held that there was no implicit or explicit requirement in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 703.020 or 704.710 that the judgment debtor continuously own the property [184 Cal. App. 4th 931, 937] . The court held that a judgment debtor need only continuously reside in a dwelling to retain a sufficient equitable interest in the property to claim a homestead exemption even when they have conveyed title to another person [184 Cal. App. 4th 931, 937] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Minimum Bid Requirement

In Rourke v. Troy (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 880, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 660 , the trial court did not fix the amount of the homestead or the fair market value of the dwelling, because it concluded that Code Civ. Proc. § 704.800(a) prohibited it from selling at a bid that does not exceed the amount of the homestead plus any additional liens and encumbrances including the lien of the judgment creditor seeking the sale. The court of appeal reversed, holding that "all liens and encumbrances" for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 704.800(a) should be interpreted as excluding the lien of the executing judgment creditor, and including only those liens senior to the lien of the executing judgment creditor. In enacting § 704.800(a), the Legislature was not attempting to ensure that all debts, including the judgment being executed by the sale, be satisfied by the sale of the dwelling. Rather, its purpose was to ensure that senior liens and encumbrances would be paid. The Legislature wanted to avoid a situation in which none of the sale proceeds went to pay debts (17 Cal. App. 4th 880, 883-886) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART II. FORMS

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.21

§ 112.21 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]--To Prevent Execution Sale of Homesteaded Property [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.510-701.830]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Defendant(s).	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF APPLICATION FOR TEM-)	PORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND PRELIM-)	INARY INJUNCTION
	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]

_____

AN INJUNCTION MAY ISSUE TO RESTRAIN AN EXECUTION SALE OF HOMESTEADED PROPERTY WHEN THE SALE WOULD OTHERWISE RESULT IN GREAT AND IRREPARABLE INJURY.

A. Obtaining Preliminary Injunction. A preliminary injunction may be granted at any time before judgment when it appears from the facts that great or irreparable injury would result to the applicant before the matter can be heard (Civ. Code § 527(a)).

B. Threat of Sale of Homesteaded Property. When the threat of an execution sale of property properly homesteaded and therefore exempt from execution would have clouded the claimant's title and caused irreparable injury, an injunction may be granted by the trial court (Roth v. Insley (1890) 86 Cal. 134, 139-140, 24 P 853).

[Optional] C. Controversy Over Validity of Homestead. Where there is a controversy over the liability of a claim of homestead, a trial court may, in its discretion, restrain the execution proceedings by granting a preliminary injunction (Oktanski v. Burn (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 419, 421-422, 291 P.2d 954).

[Optional] D. Homestead Awarded in Dissolution as Not Subject to Separate Debts of Other Spouse. Where a spouse has been awarded a homestead for life in dissolution proceedings, the property may not be subjected to execution sale for the separate debts of the other spouse (Robbins v. Bueno (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 79, 82-86, 68 Cal. Rptr. 347).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used to support an application for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527] enjoining an execution sale of homesteaded property on the grounds that the failure to restrain the sale would cause great and irreparable injury.

Where appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In addition, counsel should include affidavits or declarations supporting any factual issues raised by the homestead claimant.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and related forms of injunctions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Threat of Sale of Homesteaded Property

In Roth v. Insley (1890) 86 Cal. 134, 24 P 853 , the defendants appealed from an order refusing to dissolve an injunction. The defendants had caused an execution to be levied upon the homestead of the plaintiff based on a judgment obtained against him. In obtaining the injunction, the plaintiff complained that the defendant constable had levied upon the property and was about to sell it under execution; that the execution was issued without authority; that the constable had been informed that the property was homesteaded; but that the defendants insisted on continuing with the proposed sale; and that, unless restrained by the court, the defendants would sell the homestead. The plaintiff also alleged that the sale contemplated would cast a cloud on the title to the property and would cause irreparable injury and disturb plaintiff in the quiet enjoyment of the property and that plaintiff had no speedy or adequate remedy at law.

The trial court first granted a temporary injunction. A motion was made to dissolve the injunction on the grounds that, although the plaintiff had been the head of a family when he had made a homestead claim, the death of his mother, the only dependent, had removed any right of the plaintiff to claim the homestead as a head of a family, and, therefore, the property should be subject to any debtsfor which the plaintiff might be liable. The Supreme Court, in affirming the decision of the trial court, held that, given the admitted validity of the homestead at the time of the filing of the declaration, the exemption always remained as a protection against debts that did not come within the exceptions provided for in the homestead laws. The Court further held that an application for an injunction had been the proper procedure for the plaintiff to choose for relief, since the proposed sale, if completed, would have cast a cloud on the title to the property and any remedy at law, such as an action in ejectment, would have not been adequate because of the complicated evidentiary problems.

[b] Controversy Over Validity of Homestead

In Oktanski v. Burn (1956) 138 Cal. App. 2d 419, 291 P.2d 954 , the respondents had instituted proceedings in the superior court for the purpose of restraining the sale of certain real property under a writ of execution. In the lower court proceedings an order to show cause and a temporary restraining order were issued, the defendants filed a general demurrer in opposition, and, after the hearing, a preliminary injunction was issued. In their demurrer and affidavits, the defendants alleged that the plaintiffs' property was not exempt since their declaration of homestead did not comply with the requisite statutory provisions in that it was void for uncertainty in its property description. The description contained the correct street address of the property but an incorrect property description. Applying the rule of liberal construction, the court of appeal held that the declaration of homestead was valid since the street address was correctly given and was sufficient to identify the property to be protected. It stated that absolute perfection in a declaration was not required, and that any inaccuracy thereafter occurring was surplusage. It also stated that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in granting a preliminary injunction under the facts and circumstances of the controversy which was before it, holding that, where there is a controversy over the validity of a claim of homestead, a trial court may, in its discretion, restrain the execution proceedings by granting a preliminary injunction.

[c] Homestead Awarded in Dissolution as Not Subject to Separate Debts of Other Spouse

In Robbins v. Bueno (1968) 262 Cal. App. 2d 79, 68 Cal. Rptr. 347 , among other matters, the appellant appealed from an order enjoining him from selling or causing to be sold homesteaded property awarded to a respondent by a decree of divorce. Prior to instituting a suit for divorce from her spouse, the respondent recorded a declaration of homestead on property which was the separate property of her spouse. In the subsequent divorce proceedings, the homestead was awarded to respondent for life. After the entry of the divorce decree, the appellant commenced levy of execution on the residence for the separate debts of the husband and determined through the court-appointed appraisers that the property had a surplus value considerably in excess of the homestead exemption and encumbrances. The appellant then moved for the sale of the property. Respondent sued to have further efforts of the appellant to sell the property enjoined, and an order enjoining the appellant was issued. In affirming the decision of the lower court, the court of appeal held that the interlocutory decree of divorce had given the respondent the right to undisturbed possession and enjoyment of the property for her life. Any creditor attempting to subject the homestead to satisfaction of the separate debts of respondent's former spouse could only subject his interest in the property to execution. While that interest was potentially valuable, since the judgment debtor had still retained title to the property, it was subject to the respondent's interest in the property under the divorce decree.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 112 HOMESTEADS
PART II. FORMS

11-112 California Points & Authorities § 112.22

§ 112.22 Opposing Defendant's Claim of Exemption Submitted in Opposition to Application for Right to Attach Order [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f)]--Value of Property Exceeds Aggregate Amount of Homestead Exemption Plus Amount of Encumbrances [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 704.730, 704.950(c)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name(s)],	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO CLAIM OF EXEMPTION
Defendant(s).	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f)]
	)
	)

AN ATTACHING CREDITOR MAY, BY FORCED SALE, RECOVER THE VALUE OF HOMESTEADED PROPERTY IN EXCESS OF THE AMOUNT OF THE HOMESTEAD EXEMPTION AND ANY PRIOR ENCUMBRANCES.

A. Plaintiff's Opposition to Defendant's Claim of Exemption. If plaintiff desires to oppose the defendant's claim of exemption, he or she should file and serve on the defendant a notice of opposition to the claim of exemption accompanied by supporting documents not less than two days before the date set for the hearing on the right to attach (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f)).

B. Burden of Proof on Defendant. If the plaintiff files and serves a notice of opposition to the defendant's claim of exemption, the defendant has the burden of proving that the property is exempt from attachment (Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(g)).

C. Property Subject to Enforcement of Money Judgment as Subject to Attachment. All property not exempt from enforcement of a money judgment is subject to attachment (see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.010, 487.020).

D. Excess Value of Homestead as Subject to Attachment. The excess value of the homestead cannot be said to be exempt from, or not liable to, execution when the execution levy under Sections 699.510-699.560 of the Code of Civil Procedure (former Sections 1245-1259 of the Civil Code) is a necessary step to secure or preserve valuable rights for the judgment creditor, and not being exempt from execution, it is also subject to attachment (Marelli v. Keating (1929) 208 Cal. 528, 530-531, 282 P 793 ; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 487.025(b)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in a hearing on an application for a right to attach order [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 484.010-484.060] in support of a plaintiff's notice of opposition to defendant's claim of exemption [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070; § 112.20] when the plaintiff claims that the value of the homesteaded property exceeds the aggregate amount of the homestead exemption and the encumbrances on the property, and that he or she has the right to attach any such excess [Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f); see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.010, 487.020].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should show that the value of the property for which the right to attach order is sought exceeds the amount of the homestead exemption plus the sum of all liens and encumbrances on the property. In addition, counsel should include affidavits or declarations supporting any factual issues raised by the plaintiff [see Code Civ. Proc. § 484.070(f)].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form and discussion of a notice of opposition to a claim of exemption, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 62, Attachment (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of proceedings for levying a writ of execution on homesteaded property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 294, Homesteads (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Excess Value of Homestead as Subject to Attachment

In Marelli v. Keating (1929) 208 Cal. 528, 282 P 793 , the Supreme Court affirmed a trial court decision to dissolve an injunction restraining the sheriff from proceeding on an execution sale against property in the possession of the plaintiff for a debt that had been reduced to judgment and rendered against plaintiff's grantor. Plaintiff's grantor was his wife whom he had married after the institution of the defendant judgment creditor's suit. A writ of attachment had been levied on the property before the conveyance to plaintiff, but the judgment had been rendered after the conveyance. Plaintiff claimed that, since his grantor had a validdeclaration of homestead on the property, the house was exempt from forced sale and the court below was in error in not permanently restraining the sheriff. The defendants had filed an answer after the temporary restraining order had been granted, alleging that the value of the house was approximately $24,000, which greatly exceeded the then maximum exemption of $5,000, and that they had taken the required statutory steps to subject the excess to forced sale. In its discussion, the Court stated that the execution levy and proposed sale would have been unauthorized unless the attachment levied before the conveyance was effective in securing to the judgment creditor the right to hold the excess after ownership had passed from the judgment debtor to her grantee. The Court held that, since all property not exempt from execution is subject to attachment, the attachment was a proper method of reaching the nonexempt excess on the homestead. Thus, the plaintiff-grantee was charged with notice of the rights of the attaching creditor to the excess value and he took title to the property subject to the right of the judgment creditor to reach the excess value through the proceedings provided for in Code Civ. Proc. §§ 699.510-699.550 (former Civ. Code §§ 1245-1259). The Court also held that the trial court was correct in dissolving the injunction and permitting the sale to go forward.

Counsel should note that the Court in Marelli relied on former Code Civ. Proc. § 541 (this may be a typographical error and the correct reference should probably be former Code Civ. Proc. § 542) in holding that plaintiff's attachment reached the nonexempt excess of the homestead. It would appear, however, from the reasoning of the case that the right to attach the excess value of a homestead would still be valid under the attachment statutes that became effective January 1, 1977 (amended as of July 1, 1983) [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 487.010, 487.020, 487.025(b)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
Chapter 113 RESERVED

11-113 California Points & Authorities Chapter 113

RESERVED

Chapter 113RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE

11-114 California Points & Authorities 114.syn

§ 114.syn Synopsis to Chapter 114: HUSBAND AND WIFE

§ 114.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 114.02 Governing Statutes

§ 114.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§ 114.04 Related Family Law Publications

§§ 114.05-114.19 [Reserved]

§ 114.20 Supporting Contention That Spouse's Earnings Are Not Liable for Other Spouse's Premarital Debt [Fam. Code § 911]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[i] Generally

[ii] Nondebtor Spouse as Defendant in Action on Debt

[iii] Nondebtor Spouse as Plaintiff in Independent Collateral Action

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 114.21 Supporting Contention That Spouse's Separate Property Is Not Liable for Other Spouse' Debt Incurred Before or During Marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability of Separate Property for Debts of Spouse

[b] Tracing Commingled Separate Property

[c] Expenses Paid From Commingled Account

[d] Negligible Amount of Commingled Community Property

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Liability of Separate Property for Debts of Spouse

[b] Tracing Commingled Separate Property

[c] Expenses Paid From Commingled Account

[d] Negligible Amount of Commingled Community Property

§ 114.22 Supporting Contention That Spouse Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt for Necessaries [Fam. Code § 914] Unless Named as Party to Action on Debt

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Personal Liability or Liability of Separate Property for Debt of Spouse Without Joinder

§ 114.23 Supporting Contention That Spouse Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt for Necessaries [Fam. Code § 914]--Action Is For Debt of Deceased Spouse and Is Barred by Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Necessaries Against Surviving Spouse Based on Marital Liability of Deceased Spouse Must Be Brought Within One-Year Period

§ 114.24 Supporting Contention That Community Property Is Not Liable for Spouse's Tort--Tortious Activity Not Performed for Benefit of Community [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 114.25 Supporting Contention That Community Property Is Not Liable for Debt Incurred While Spouses Separated Before Judgment of Dissolution or Legal Separation [Fam. Code § 910]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Related Family Law Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonliability of Community Property

§ 114.26 Supporting Contention That Property Received by Spouse in Property Division on Marital Dissolution Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt Incurred Before or During Marriage [Fam. Code § 916(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Assigned Debt--Joinder of Party

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[e] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 114.27-114.39 [Reserved]

§ 114.40 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Property Levied on Is Community Property [Fam. Code § 910]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Debt of Spouse

[b] When Community Debt for Contract Incurred

[c] Community Remains Liable Despite Set Aside of Unauthorized Transfer of Community Real Property

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Debt of Spouse

§ 114.41 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Earnings Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse for Premarital Debt--Earnings Were Commingled With Other Community Property [Fam. Code § 911]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 114.42 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Separate Property Commingled, Is Not Traceable, and Is Liable as Community Property [Fam. Code § 910(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commingled Separate Property

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Commingled Separate Property

§ 114.43 Opposing Defendant Spouse's Contention of Nonliability for Debt--Debt for Necessaries Furnished to Other Spouse While Living Together During Marriage [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Use Separate Property

[b] Meaning of "Necessaries of Life"

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Meaning of "Necessaries of Life"

§ 114.44 Opposing Defendant Spouse's Contention of Nonliability for Debt--Debt for Common Necessaries of Life Furnished to Other Spouse While Spouses Living Separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Meaning of "Common Necessaries of Life"

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Separate Property

§ 114.45 Opposing Spouse's Motion to Quash Levy of Execution--Spouse Not Party to Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Standing

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Lack of Standing

§ 114.46 Opposing Spouse's Contention of Nonliability of Community Property for Other Spouse's Tort--Liability Arose From Activity Performed for Benefit of Community [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Tort

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Tort

§ 114.47 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Property Levied on Acquired by Illegal Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Procedural Context

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proceeds of Illegal Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Proceeds of Illegal Conduct

§§ 114.48-114.59 [Reserved]

§ 114.60 Opposing Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Supporting Cancellation of Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Unilaterally Transferring, Community Real Property [Fam. Code § 1102(a)]--Consent of Both Spouses Required for Valid Transfer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Transfer Is Voidable in Its Entirety During Marriage

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unilateral Transfer Is Voidable in Its Entirety During Marriage

§ 114.61 Opposing Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone, on Basis That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations [Fam. Code § 1102(d)]--Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] One-Year Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

[b] Filing of Other Documents Is Insufficient to Commence Limitations Period

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] One-Year Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

§§ 114.62-114.79 [Reserved]

§ 114.80 Supporting Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone [Fam. Code § 1102]--Nonjoinder of Transferor Spouse

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transferring Spouse as Necessary Party

§ 114.81 Supporting Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone [Fam. Code § 1102]--Action Not Commenced Within One Year of Recordation of Instrument [Fam. Code § 1102(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation Period May Be Raised by Demurrer if Bar Appears on Face of Complaint

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.01

§ 114.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities for use in actions involving the property rights of married persons. The primary focus of this chapter is on the liability of one spouse for the contract and tort debts of the other in relation to third parties, including the liability of community property and of a nondebtor spouse's separate property. Included are forms that may be used by a nondebtor spouse to resist liability for the debts of the other spouse [see §§ 114.20 -114.26] and forms that may be used by the creditor and the debtor spouse to impose this liability [see §§ 114.40 -114.47].

This chapter also discusses remedies of a married person for the transfer of property by one of the spouses without the consent of the other, including forms that may be used by the spouse who did not consent to the transfer [see §§ 114.60 -114.61] and forms that may be used by the transferor spouse [see §§ 114.80 -114.81]. This chapter does not address the basis for dividing debts between the spouses in proceedings for marital dissolution or legal separation.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawCommunity PropertyGeneral OverviewFamily LawFamily Relationships & TortsTort LiabilitySpousal TortsFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProcedures

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.02

§ 114.02 Governing Statutes

Usage of the terms "husband" and "wife" is governed by Fam. Code § 11. The rights and obligations of spouses, both between themselves and with respect to third parties, are governed primarily by Fam. Code § 720 et seq. Fam. Code § 900 et seq. govern the liability of property of a married person for his or her debts and those of a spouse. "Debts" are defined by Fam. Code § 902 to include obligations based on "contract[s], tort[s], other otherwise."

The statutes pertaining to debt liability [see Fam. Code § 900 et seq.] are generally applicable to debts enforced on or after January 1, 1985, regardless of whether the debt was incurred before, on, or after that date [Fam. Code § 930]. In addition, statutes governing a spouse's right to reimbursement for the satisfaction of certain debts apply to all of those debts, regardless of whether satisfied before, on, or after January 1, 1985 [see Fam. Code §§ 920, 931].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawCommunity PropertyGeneral OverviewFamily LawFamily Relationships & TortsTort LiabilitySpousal TortsFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsProperty RightsCharacterizationCommunity PropertyFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProcedures

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.03

§ 114.03 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

The general legal effects of marriage are discussed, and related forms are provided, in Ch. 359, Marriage in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For consideration of the characterization of property of a married person, see Ch. 122, Community Property in that set. For discussion of debt liability between spouses, as well as division of such liability on marital dissolution or legal separation, see Ch. 222, Dissolution of Marriage: Property Division and Valuation .

For additional discussion and forms involving remedies that are applicable to the memoranda of points and authorities in this chapter, see, California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments , and Ch. 482, Quieting Title .

[2] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities involving remedies that are related to the memoranda of points and authorities in this chapter, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title in this set. For points and authorities involving the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Estate, Gift & Trust LawCommunity PropertyGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Duties & RightsDebt LiabilityFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyReal Property LawProperty Valuation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.04

§ 114.04 Related Family Law Publications

For a full discussion of spousal liability for debts, as well as discussion of dividing debts on marital dissolution or legal separation, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, CALIFORNIA FAMILY LAW PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender), ch. 23.

For discussion of the trial of issues regarding division of debt on dissolution or legal separation, including planning considerations, checklists, arguments, and authorities, see Denner, Rothschild & Johnson, CALIFORNIA FAMILY LAW GUIDE, Unit 48.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Family LawMarital Duties & RightsGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportGeneral OverviewFamily LawMarital Termination & Spousal SupportDissolution & DivorceProperty DistributionCharacterizationCommunity PropertyReal Property LawProperty Valuation

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-114 California Points & Authorities §§ 114.05-114.19

[Reserved]

§§ 114.05[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.20

§ 114.20 Supporting Contention That Spouse's Earnings Are Not Liable for Other Spouse's Premarital Debt [Fam. Code § 911]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE EARNINGS OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CLAIMANT] SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE THE DEBT ON WHICH JUDGMENT _____ [WAS GIVEN or IS SOUGHT] WAS THE DEBT OF _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S or CLAIMANT'S] SPOUSE AND WAS INCURRED BEFORE MARRIAGE.

Liability of Earnings for Premarital Debts of Spouse. The earnings of a married person during marriage are not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before marriage. After the earnings of a married person are paid, they remain not liable so long as they are held in a deposit account in which the person's spouse has no right of withdrawal and are uncommingled with other property in the community estate, except property insignificant in amount (Fam. Code § 911(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that one spouse's earnings are not liable for the premarital debts of the other spouse. It may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.20[2][b][i]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that earnings of the married person have been or may be subject to levy or garnishment in enforcement of a judgment; (2) that the judgment is for a debt of the person's spouse incurred before marriage; and (3) that the married person's earnings are or were held in a deposit account in which the debtor spouse has no right of withdrawal and are or were uncommingled with other community property, except property insignificant in amount [see Fam. Code § 911(a)].

For the purpose of interpreting Fam. Code § 911(a), the term "during marriage" does not include the period during which the spouses are living separate and apart before a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [Fam. Code § 910(b)]. Thus, earnings "during marriage" and debts incurred "during marriage," for the purpose of Fam. Code § 911(a), would not include earnings earned or debts incurred after separation and before judgment of dissolution or legal separation.

[b] Procedural Context

[i] Generally

The liability of one spouse's earnings for the premarital debts of the other spouse may be raised in a number of different procedural contexts. The issue may arise in an action brought by a creditor on a premarital debt to which both spouses are made parties defendant [§ 114.20[2][b][ii]]. It may also arise in an independent collateral action brought by the nondebtor spouse to retain or recover earnings that have been improperly levied on to enforce a judgment on the debtor spouse's premarital debt [§ 114.20[2][b][iii]].

[ii] Nondebtor Spouse as Defendant in Action on Debt

The rule that a married person's segregated earnings are not liable for a premarital debt of his or her spouse is an exception to the general rule that community property is liable for a debt incurred by either spouse before or during marriage [see § 114.40]. In general, community property is liable for such a debt regardless of whether one or both spouses are parties to the debt or to a judgment for the debt [see Fam. Code § 910(a); see also 1984 Legislative Committee Comment--Assembly, to former Civ. Code § 5120.110 (not necessary to join debtor's spouse as party for purpose of enforcing judgment from community property)]. Therefore, a creditor may bring an action on a premarital debt against only the debtor spouse, obtain judgment against that spouse, and enforce the judgment by levying on property that the creditor assumes to be community property, without any notice to the nondebtor spouse.

Note, however, that without joinder of the nondebtor spouse, there is no personal liability or liability of separate property of that spouse [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914; Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; see §§ 114.21, 114.22]. In addition, earnings withholding orders (wage garnishment orders) may not be issued against the earnings of the judgment debtor's spouse except by court order on noticed motion [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.109].

On the other hand, the nondebtor spouse may be joined as a defendant in an action on the debtor spouse's premarital debt for the purpose of levying against community property, although no statute expressly makes the nondebtor spouse personally liable for the debt [cf. Fam. Code § 914 (spouse is personally liable for necessaries furnished other spouse during marriage, and nondebtor spouse's separate property may be applied to satisfaction of debt; see § 114.43)]. For purposes of judicial economy, the existence of certain property, its character as community property, and its liability for the debt may be litigated in the action on the debt [see Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860-861, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538] . Therefore, the creditor of a debtor spouse may choose to bring an action against both spouses jointly, even if only community property may be levied on to enforce the judgment.

If the nondebtor spouse is made a party for the purpose of levying against community property, the fact that his or her earnings are not liable for the debt would probably not be a sufficient ground to obtain dismissal by demurrer or summary judgment. However, the point may be raised in a trial brief in order to obtain a limitation in the judgment on the right of the creditor to levy against the earnings [see Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc., v. Terranova

(1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538 (judgment may be specifically limited by direction that it be satisfied only out of property made liable for debt by statute)]. The point may also be raised on a motion to quash a writ of execution, which may be brought by a judgment debtor [Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209] .

[iii] Nondebtor Spouse as Plaintiff in Independent Collateral Action

If a creditor brings an action on a premarital debt against the debtor spouse only, and then levies on earnings of the nondebtor spouse who is not liable for the debt, the nondebtor spouse may be required to take action to retain or recover the earnings. If the money is still in the hands of the levying officer, the nondebtor spouse may file a third party claim of ownership and possession with the levying officer [Code Civ. Proc. § 720.110, 720.120], and the claim may be resolved by judicial hearing [see Code Civ. Proc. § 720.310]. This form may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of such a claim.

If the money has already been turned over to the creditor by the levying officer, the nondebtor spouse must proceed against the creditor directly by way of an action for the recovery of personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380; see also Code Civ. Proc. §§ 714.010-714.030]. This form may be used in a memorandum of points and authorities in support of the claim.

A nondebtor spouse may not need to take independent action to retain or recover earnings when that spouse is an employee and a creditor seeks a wage garnishment. An earnings withholding order may not be issued against the earnings of the spouse of the judgment debtor, except by court order on noticed motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 706.109]. Earnings that are protected from liability for premarital debts include all compensation for personal services performed, whether as an employee or otherwise [Fam. Code § 911(b)(2)]. However, earnings that are not subject to wage garnishment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.011(a)] must be protected by preemptive action by the earning spouse.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Chs. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , 119, Claim and Delivery , 150, Conversion , 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments , and 482, Quieting Title (Matthew Bender). For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Chs. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery Ch. 51, Conversion and Ch. 198, Quieting Title. For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.41 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.21

§ 114.21 Supporting Contention That Spouse's Separate Property Is Not Liable for Other Spouse' Debt Incurred Before or During Marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE SEPARATE PROPERTY OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CLAIMANT] SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE THE DEBT ON WHICH JUDGMENT _____ [WAS GIVEN or IS SOUGHT] IS SOLELY THE DEBT OF _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S or CLAIMANT'S] SPOUSE.

A. No Liability of Separate Property for Debts of Spouse. Except as otherwise provided by statute, the separate property of a married person is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before or during marriage (Fam. Code § 913(b)(1); Leasefirst v. Borrelli (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 28 , 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 114).

[Optional] B. Encumbrance of Community Property. The joinder or consent of a married person to an encumbrance of community property to secure payment of a debt incurred by the person's spouse does not subject the person's separate property to liability for the debt unless the person also incurred the debt (Fam. Code § 913(b)(2)).

[Optional] C. Tracing Commingled Separate Property. A spouse's separate property that appears to be commingled with community property, but that can be traced to its separate source, retains its character as separate property and is not liable for the debts of the other spouse contracted before or during marriage (In re Marriage of Mix (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 604, 611, 122 Cal. Rptr. 79 ; Hicks v. Hicks (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 144, 157, 27 Cal. Rptr. 307).

[Optional] D. Expenses Paid From Commingled Account. If family living expenses exceed community income and are paid from a bank account in which community funds and a spouse's separate funds have been commingled, the balance in the account is presumed to be separate funds (see Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 733, 742, 22 Cal.

Rptr. 1, 371 P.2d 745).

[Optional] E. Negligible Amount of Commingled Community Property. If the proportion of community property commingled with separate property is negligible, all of the property will be regarded as separate property (see Fam. Code § 911(a); Kershman v. Kershman (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 18, 21, 13 Cal. Rptr. 288).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that one spouse's separate property is not liable for a debt of the other spouse, whether incurred before or during marriage. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised. For discussion of the issues concerning various possible procedural contexts, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

The first option (Paragraph B) is for use if the creditor's claim is based on an encumbrance of community property agreed to by the nondebtor spouse to secure a debt of the other spouse [see Fam. Code § 913(b)(2)]. The other options are for use if the character of the property is in question because separate and community property have become commingled, most commonly in a bank account. On the duty of a spouse who commingles separate and community funds to keep adequate records, see See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888 , under § 114.42[4]. The character of property as separate or community involves many complex issues, of which commingling is an example. For guidance on these issues, see Kirkland, Lurvey, & Richmond, California Family Law Practice and Procedure, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender), Chs. 20 and 21.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that property of the married person has been or may be subject to levy in enforcement of a judgment; (2) that the property is the separate property of the nondebtor spouse; and (3) that the judgment is for a debt incurred solely by the person's spouse either before or during marriage [see Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)].

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery Ch. 150, Conversion, Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

Depending on the circumstances of the case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 114.40, 114.42, 114.43 and 114.44 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Liability of Separate Property for Debts of Spouse

In Leasefirst v. Borrelli (1993) 13 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 28 , a creditor obtained a judgment against a married man in a dispute over a lease agreement. Subsequently, the creditor filed a motion for an order allowing levy on the wages of the debtor's spouse. The debtor spouse opposed the motion on the ground that his was the only signature on the lease and that his wife's wages were separate property pursuant to a prenuptial agreement. The trial court granted the motion and ordered the levy, finding that, although the prenuptial agreement characterized the wife's wages as separate property, she treated her wages as community property by supporting the spouse with her wages. The debtor spouse appealed and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal cited former Civ. Code § 5120.130(b) [now see Fam. Code § 913(b)(1)] for the proposition that a spouse's separate property is not liable for a debt incurred by the other spouse before or during marriage. Although former Civ. Code § 5110 [now see Fam. Code § 760] creates a presumption that all property acquired by a married person is community property, former Civ. Code § 5110.710 [now see Fam. Code § 850] and former Civ. Code § 5110.730 [now see Fam. Code § 852] allow spouses to transmute community property into separate property by a valid written agreement. In this case, the spouses executed a valid written prenuptial agreement transmuting what would be presumed community property into separate property. Furthermore, the debt did not come within the exception set forth in former Civ. Code § 5120.140 [now see Fam. Code § 914] (separate property of one spouse liable for debt incurred for necessaries of other spouse). The court noted that third party creditors can avoid this result by obtaining the signatures of both spouses on contracts or notes, citing Kennedy v. Taylor (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 126, 201 Cal. Rptr. 779 , and American Olean Tile Co. v. Schultze (1985) 169 Cal. App. 3d 359, 215 Cal. Rptr. 184 (13 Cal. App. 4th Supp. 28, 30-32) .

[b] Tracing Commingled Separate Property

In re Marriage of Mix (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 604, 122 Cal. Rptr 79 , was an action for dissolution of marriage in which the trial court found that the wife, an attorney, had adequately traced the source of funds used by her to acquire and improve various property, both real and personal, and upheld the wife's claim that these assets were her separate property. The Supreme Court affirmed, stating that the wife had overcome the presumption that property acquired by purchase during marriage is community property.

Although the funds used to purchase the properties were kept in a bank account in which community and separate funds were commingled, such funds do not lose their separate or community character unless it is impossible to trace the source of the funds. Tracing of separate property funds may be accomplished in one of two ways, either by "direct tracing" [see Hicks v. Hicks, below], or by showing that all community income in the commingled account has been exhausted by family expenses (see discussion under § 114.21[3][c]). In this case, the trial court believed that the wife had met her burden of tracing the separate property source of funds used to purchase the properties by the introduction of a schedule showing separate property income and expenses and by her own testimony. The Supreme Court concluded that there was substantial evidence to support the trial court's finding (14 Cal. 3d 604, 612) .

In Hicks v. Hicks (1962) 211 Cal. App. 2d 144, 27 Cal. Rptr. 307 , the court stated that separate funds do not lose their character as such if they become commingled with community funds in a bank account, as long as the amount of the separate funds can be ascertained. If the source of funds used for the purchase of certain property is traced to separate property, the purchased property is also separate property, even though the process of tracing may involve a withdrawal from a bank account consisting of commingled separate and community funds. Whether separate funds remain on deposit when a withdrawal is made for the purchase of specific property, and whether the intention of the drawer is to withdraw only that separate property, are questions of fact for determination by the trial court (211 Cal. App. 2d 144, 157) . This method of tracing is known as the "direct tracing test" (see In re Marriage of Mix, above).

[c] Expenses Paid From Commingled Account

Estate of Neilson (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 733, 22 Cal. Rptr. 1, 371 P.2d 745 was an heirship proceeding to determine the rights of a decedent's second wife in his estate, which was claimed to consist entirely of the decedent's separate property. The Supreme Court stated, as part of its discussion, that property acquired during a marriage is presumed to be community property, and that this presumption applies when a spouse purchases property during the marriage with funds from a disputed source, such as an account in which community and separate funds have been commingled. However, the presumption of community property may be rebutted by proof that, at the time the property was acquired, all community income in the disputed account had been exhausted by community expenses. This method of tracing was used to establish that assets discovered after the husband's death had been acquired before the marriage (57 Cal. 2d 733, 742) .

[d] Negligible Amount of Commingled Community Property

In Kershman v. Kershman (1961) 192 Cal. App. 2d 18, 13 Cal. Rptr. 288 , the court of appeal held that certain corporate stock and its proceeds were the wife's separate property because the time she spent in managing it was slight compared with the factors of income and appreciation. The court stated that if the community contribution in commingled separate and community property is insignificant in amount compared to the separate property contribution, the whole will be treated as separate property (192 Cal. App. 2d 18, 21) .

To the same effect are Cone v. Cone (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 424, 430-431, 280 P.2d 871 , and Cline v. Cline (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 626, 629, 41 P.2d 588 .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Liability of Separate Property for Debts of Spouse

In Abbett Electric Corp v. Storek (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1460, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 845 , a judgment creditor sought an execution sale of a residence that the judgment debtor had purchased with his former wife. The creditor claimed that the residence was entirely community property subject to execution, although title to the residence was held in the names of the judgment debtor and his former wife as joint tenants. The appellate court upheld the trial court's findings that the presumption of community property was overcome by the fact that title was taken in joint tenancy, that each joint tenancy interest was held by the former spouses as separate property, and that only the debtor's one-half interest was subject to execution. However, the trial court's denial of the creditor's application for sale, on the ground that the debtor's one-half interest was less than the combined amount of his homestead exemption and all encumbrances, was reversed in view of applicable statutory requirements [see Code Civ. Proc. § 704-780(b)].

[b] Tracing Commingled Separate Property

In Mears v. Mears (1960) 180 Cal. App. 2d 484, 4 Cal. Rptr. 618 , disapproved on other grounds in See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 785, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888, 415 P.2d 776 [see discussion of See v. See under § 114.42[4]], the court held that the wife in a divorce action must be credited with the amount of her separate property that was contributed to the purchase of an automobile. The court noted that the exact amount of funds allocable to separate and community property used to purchase the automobile could be readily traced and ascertained and that the value of the automobile had not changed (180 Cal. App. 2d 484, 500, 503) .

In Thomasset v. Thomasset (1953) 122 Cal. App. 2d 116, 264 P.2d 626 , disapproved on other grounds in See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 786, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888, 415 P.2d 776 [see discussion of See v. See under § 114.42[4]], the wife contended on appeal from a disposition of property in a divorce action that property purchased with commingled funds was community property, even though the amounts of separate and community funds deposited in a commingled account were known. The court stated that the wife's contention was not the law. To the contrary, if separate and community funds are so commingled that it is impossible to trace the source of the funds, the whole is treated as community property. However, the presumption under former Civ. Code § 5110 [now see Fam. Code § 760)] that property acquired during marriage is community property controls only when it is impossible to trace the source of the specific property (122 Cal. App. 2d 116, 124) .

[c] Expenses Paid From Commingled Account

In Brown v. Meredith (1963) 220 Cal. App. 2d 762, 34 Cal. Rptr. 153 , the court affirmed a judgment for defendant wife in an action by her former husband for partition of personal property. The down payment on the property had been made from a common bank account into which the husband had deposited his community earnings and the wife had deposited her separate earnings, and the exact amount of community funds deposited in the account was shown. The court stated that all of the other funds deposited in the account thus came from the wife's separate property and that there was no inseparable commingling of separate and community funds. By applying the presumption that normal and ordinary living expenses were paid from community income, the court held that the trial court could properly find that the down payment was actually taken from the wife's separate funds (220 Cal. App. 2d 762, 764-765) .

In Estate of McGee (1959) 168 Cal. App. 2d 670, 336 P.2d 622 , the wife had greatly increased the value of her separate property by reinvestments and astute management. The court rejected an argument that her savings, derived from rents, should be attributed to her services and treated as community property. It stated that there was no presumption that the wife supported her husband out of her separate funds and preserved intact the community estate (168 Cal. App. 2d 670, 678) .

In Kenney v. Kenney (1954) 128 Cal. App. 2d 128, 274 P.2d 951 , disapproved on other grounds in See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 785-786, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888, 415 P.2d 776 [see discussion of See v. See under § 114.42[4]], the court upheld a finding that the husband had used his separate property funds to purchase certain property. These funds had been commingled in an account with community funds at a time when family expenses exceeded community income. The court stated that evidence showing no excess of community income over living expenses is considered effective to demonstrate the separate character of the remaining property (128 Cal. App. 2d 128, 136-138) .

[d] Negligible Amount of Commingled Community Property

Estate of Cudworth (1901) 133 Cal. 462, 65 P. 1041 , was an appeal by a devisee objecting to part of a decree finding certain property to have been community instead of separate property. The property in question consisted of a very large amount of cash that had been commingled with approximately $15 per month of the wife's separate property over the course of a 21-year marriage. The Supreme Court reversed the decree. Regarding the question of commingling of funds, the Supreme Court stated that if there were any commingling of the separate funds of the wife with the separate funds of the husband, it was a commingling of "such a trifling sum with such a large amount" that it would be inequitable to hold that the husband's property thus lost its separate character and became community property (133 Cal. 462, 468) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.22

§ 114.22 Supporting Contention That Spouse Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt for Necessaries [Fam. Code § 914] Unless Named as Party to Action on Debt

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CLAIMANT'S] SEPARATE PROPERTY SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE HE/SHE WAS NOT MADE A PARTY TO THE ACTION IN WHICH THE JUDGMENT WAS ENTERED AND IS NOT LIABLE ON THE JUDGMENT.

No Personal Liability or Liability of Separate Property for Debt of Spouse Without Joinder. The separate property of a married person may not be subjected to process under Family Code Section 914(b) by a creditor who has furnished necessaries to the person's spouse, unless the person was joined as a party defendant to the action on the debt and is a judgment debtor pursuant to that action (Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; see Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 295-298, 128 P. 794).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that one spouse's separate property cannot be levied on pursuant to a judgment on a debt of the other spouse incurred during marriage, even if the debt is for necessaries for which the nondebtor spouse and his or her separate property are otherwise liable, when the nondebtor spouse was not made a party to the action [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914; Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 860, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538 ; Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 128 P. 794] . This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.22[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that separate property of the married person has been or may be subject to levy or garnishment in enforcement of a judgment; (2) that the judgment is for a debt incurred solely by the person's spouse; and (3) that the person was not a party to the action in which the judgment was entered against the debtor spouse and is not a judgment debtor pursuant to that action.

[b] Procedural Context

This form must be used in an independent collateral action brought by an owner of real or personal property that has been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse for the purpose of retaining or recovering the property. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Personal Liability or Liability of Separate Property for Debt of Spouse Without Joinder

Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc. v. Terranova (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 93 Cal. Rptr. 538 , involved an action by a dentist's assignee against a wife for dental services rendered to her deceased husband. The case was certified to the court of appeal to resolve the questions (1) whether the plaintiff's cause of action against the wife under former Civ. Code § 5121 [now see Fam. Code § 914] could establish personal liability or was in the nature of a quasi in rem action, and (2) whether the judgment should have been limited to specifically designated parcels of property owned by the wife.

In reviewing the history of case law interpreting the nature of a spouse's liability under former Civ. Code § 5121 [now see Fam. Code § 914], the appellate court stated the following principles applicable to actions under that statute: (1) a nondebtor spouse must be made a party to the action on the debt and have an opportunity to litigate the issues on which the liability of his or her separate property may depend; (2) it must be shown that the debt was for necessaries and that the spouses were living together at the time they were furnished [see § 114.43]; (3) former Civ. Code § 5121 (unlike its successor, Fam. Code § 914(b)), did not impose general personal liability on the nondebtor spouse; and (4) a judgment establishing liability under the former Civil Code section must be limited and conditional, rather than a general, unqualified personal judgment. The court concluded that, while the judgment should be against the wife rather than against her property, it should be specifically limited by a direction that it be satisfied only out that portion of her separate property made liable by the statute (15 Cal. App. 3d 854, 857-860) .

Note that the California Law Revision Commission Comment to Fam. Code § 914(b) recognizes the continuing applicability of Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay District v. Terranova, requiring joinder of a spouse for the purpose of subjecting that spouse's separate property to debts for necessaries of the other spouse, even though Fam. Code §

914(b) imposes personal liability on a married person for necessaries of life furnished to his or her spouse.

In Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 128 P. 794 , a plaintiff doctor sued a husband and wife jointly for medical services rendered to their children. Only the husband had dealt with the doctor, and the wife had made no promise or agreement to pay. The jury was instructed that the wife's liability depended on whether or not she had contracted for the services and, under this instruction, found for the wife.

The appellate court reversed on the ground that, under the applicable statute, some but not all of the wife's separate property could be taken in satisfaction of a debt for necessaries furnished to her children, and thus the statute made the wife personally liable for the debt. Among the arguments advanced by the wife in opposition to her personal liability was that, under the statute, it was not necessary to join the wife as a party in order to subject her separate property to liability on the judgment against the husband. However, the court rejected this premise, stating that in order to bind the separate property of the wife, it was in fact necessary to make her a party to the action. While the statute did not expressly provide for the wife's personal liability (unlike current Fam. Code § 914(a)), the court was of the opinion that personal liability, to the extent of the wife's separate property that was liable for the debt under the statute, was implied under the statute.

In order to levy against the wife's separate property, it was necessary that she be made a party to the action on the debt and given an opportunity to litigate the applicability of the statute to the facts of her case. The court concluded that a person or her property should under no circumstances be bound by a judgment in an action to which she has not been made a party and in which she has not had an opportunity to be heard (20 Cal. App. 288, 295-298) .

Note that the rule requiring joinder does not apply to the liability of community property for a debt of the other spouse incurred before or during marriage [see Fam. Code § 910(a); § 114.40], and community property may be levied on without joining the nondebtor spouse as a party [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 910; see also § 114.20[2][b][ii]]. However, much of the reasoning of Credit Bureau of Santa Monica Bay Dist., Inc. v. Terranova and Evans v. Noonan would seem to apply to the interest of the nondebtor spouse in community property, and counsel who is faced with a levy against community property pursuant to a judgment under which only one spouse is a judgment debtor [see § 114.40] may wish to advance an argument based on the due process overtones of these cases that joinder is required.

Note, also, that special procedural provisions may apply to a levy against community property when the nondebtor spouse was not joined in the debt action [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. § 706.109 (issuance of earnings withholding order against spouse of judgment debtor); Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 910].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.23

§ 114.23 Supporting Contention That Spouse Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt for Necessaries [Fam. Code § 914]--Action Is For Debt of Deceased Spouse and Is Barred by Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

[PLAINTIFF'S or CLAIMANT'S] SEPARATE PROPERTY SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY A JUDGMENT ON A DEBT FOR NECESSARIES OR COMMON NECESSARIES INCURRED BY HIS/HER DECEASED SPOUSE, BECAUSE IT IS BASED ON AN ACTION THAT WAS NOT COMMENCED WITHIN THE LIMITATIONS PERIOD SET FORTH IN SECTION 366.2 OF THE CALIFORNIA CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE, AND NO EXCEPTIONS TO THIS RULE APPLY.

Action for necessaries or common necessaries against surviving spouse based on marital liability of deceased spouse must be brought within one-year period. The limitations period set forth in Section 366.2 of the California Code of Civil Procedure applies with respect to an action against a surviving spouse on a debt for necessaries or common necessaries if the spouse who incurred the debt dies, unless the surviving spouse actually knew of the debt before expiration of this limitations period and the deceased spouse's personal representative failed to provide the creditor asserting the claim with a timely written notice of the probate administration of the decedent's estate [Fam. Code § 914(c); Collection Bureau of San Jose v. Rumsey (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 301, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792, 6 P.3d 713] .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that one spouse's separate property cannot be levied on pursuant to a judgment on a debt that the other spouse incurred during marriage for necessaries or common necessaries of life if the incurring spouse has died and the action was brought after expiration of the one-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 [see Fam. Code § 914(c)(1)].

Under Fam. Code § 914(c), the one-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 applies, unless the surviving spouse had actual knowledge of the debt before expiration of the one-year period, and the decedent spouse's personal representative failed to provide the creditor asserting the claim with a timely written notice of the probate administration of the estate as required by statute [see Prob. Code § 9050], in which case the statute of limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 337 or 339, as applicable, would apply [see Fam. Code § 914(c)(2)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. This would include, for example, the fact and date of death of the spouse who incurred the debt; and any facts tending to show either the lack of knowledge of the surviving spouse of the debt (within the one-year limitation period) or, if the surviving spouse did have knowledge, that the decedent's personal representative gave timely written notice of any probate administration to the creditor asserting the claim [see Fam. Code § 914(c)(2)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action for Necessaries Against Surviving Spouse Based on Marital Liability of Deceased Spouse Must Be Brought Within One-Year Period

In Collection Bureau of San Jose v. Rumsey (2000) 24 Cal. 4th 301, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 792, 6 P.3d 713 , the Supreme Court held that the one-year statute of limitations set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 applies in an action by a collection agency against a surviving spouse for recovery of the hospital and medical expenses of a deceased spouse's last illness. It reversed the judgment of the court of appeal, which held that although the agency's action was barred by the one-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 because it had not been filed within one year from the date of the deceased spouse's death, the agency had an entirely separate and independent cause of action for recovery of the debt from the surviving spouse by virtue of Fam. Code § 914, which makes spouses personally liable for each other's debts incurred for "necessaries of life." An action under Fam. Code § 914 would be governed by the four-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337, which is generally applicable to open book accounts. In reviewing the legislative history of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2, the Supreme Court found a clear legislative intent that this one-year statute would govern and apply to any action on a debt of the decedent, regardless of whom the action was brought against, and specifically including the decedent's surviving spouse. It noted that Prob. Code § 13554(c) expressly provides that the one-year limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 366.2 applies to actions against a deceased debtor spouse, or derivatively, against the surviving spouse for any debt remaining unpaid on the death of the debtor spouse. This express provision, which specifically addresses the liability of a married person for the debts incurred by the other spouse on the death of that spouse, controls over Fam. Code § 914, which merely addresses the general liability of a spouse for the debts of the other spouse incurred during the marriage. In cases in which a debtor spouse has died, the one-year limitation period applies whether the action is brought under Prob. Code § 13554 or Fam. Code § 914 (24 Cal. 4th 301, 306-313) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.24

§ 114.24 Supporting Contention That Community Property Is Not Liable for Spouse's Tort--Tortious Activity Not Performed for Benefit of Community [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

COMMUNITY PROPERTY SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE JUDGMENT WAS GIVEN FOR THE TORT LIABILITY OF _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CLAIMANT'S] SPOUSE BASED ON AN _____ [ACT or OMISSION] ARISING FROM AN ACTIVITY NOT PERFORMED FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE COMMUNITY AND THE TORTFEASOR SPOUSE'S SEPARATE PROPERTY HAS NOT BEEN EXHAUSTED.

A. Damage Caused by Other Spouse. A married person is not liable for any injury or damage caused by the other spouse except in cases in which the married person would be liable therefor if the marriage did not exist (Fam. Code § 1000(a)).

B. Not Acting for Benefit of Community. If the liability of a married person for death or injury to person or property is not based on an act or omission that occurred while the married person was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, it must be satisfied first from the separate property of the married person and second from the community property (Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that the tortfeasor spouse's separate property must be levied on first, before community property is levied on, to satisfy that spouse's tort liability, because the act or omission giving rise to the liability occurred in the course of an activity not for the benefit of the community [see Fam.

Code § 1000(b)(2)]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.24[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that property of a married person has been or may be levied on or garnished in enforcement of a judgment; (2) that the property is community property; (3) that the judgment is for the tort liability of the person's spouse; (4) that the act of the spouse that gave rise to the liability was pursuant to an activity not for the benefit of the community; and (5) that the tortfeasor spouse has separate property that may be used to satisfy the judgment [see Fam. Code § 1000(b)(2)].

Note that cases decided prior to the 1985 enactment of former Civ. Code § 5122 [now see Fam. Code § 1000] provide for a right of reimbursement as between the spouses when community property is reached to pay a spouse's tort liability arising from an act or omission that was not for the benefit of the community [see, e.g., In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 588, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172] . However, no right of reimbursement may be exercised more than seven years after the spouse in whose favor the right arises has actual knowledge of the application of the property to the satisfaction of the debt. Additionally, note that the provisions of Fam. Code § 1000 do not apply to the extent the liability is satisfied out of the proceeds of liability insurance, whether the proceeds are from property in the community estate or from separate property [Fam. Code § 1000(c)].

[b] Procedural Context

This form is designed for use in an independent collateral action brought by the nontortfeasor spouse for the purpose of retaining or recovering community property that has been levied on to enforce a tort judgment against the person's spouse. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

It does not seem likely that the issue would be litigated in the original action against the tortfeasor spouse because the liability of community property depends on the nonavailability of separate property, a fact that cannot be determined until the time of levy. If both spouses are named as parties defendant in the original action, the proper response of the nontortfeasor spouse is to move for dismissal [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d), (e)] or summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] on the ground that a married person is not liable for the torts of his or her spouse, absent some theory of liability independent of the marriage relationship (for example, agency or conspiracy) [see Fam. Code § 1000(a)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.46 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.25

§ 114.25 Supporting Contention That Community Property Is Not Liable for Debt Incurred While Spouses Separated Before Judgment of Dissolution or Legal Separation [Fam. Code § 910]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE DEBT TO _____ [state person or entity to whom debt is owed] WAS INCURRED BY _____ [HUSBAND or FORMER HUSBAND or WIFE or FORMER WIFE] WHILE THE _____ [SPOUSES or FORMER SPOUSES] WERE LIVING SEPARATE AND APART BEFORE A JUDGMENT FOR _____ [MARITAL DISSOLUTION or LEGAL SEPARATION]; THEREFORE, THE DEBT IS THE SEPARATE DEBT OF _____ [HUSBAND or FORMER HUSBAND or WIFE or FORMER WIFE], AND THE COMMUNITY PROPERTY OF THE _____ [SPOUSES or FORMER SPOUSES] IS NOT LIABLE FOR THE DEBT.

Nonliability of Community Property. Although community property is generally liable for a debt incurred by either spouse before or during marriage, the term "during marriage" as used in Family Code Section 910 does not include the period during which the spouses are living separate and apart before a judgment for dissolution of marriage or a judgment for legal separation (Fam. Code § 910(b); see In re McCoy (1990) 111 Bankr. 276).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that community property should not be held liable for a debt incurred during marriage by one of the spouses when the debt was incurred while the spouses were separated before a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 910]. It may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.25[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, facts pertaining to the date on which the debt was incurred and the period during which the parties were separated should be set forth to demonstrate that the debt was incurred during a period of separation and before a judgment of marital dissolution or legal separation [see Fam. Code § 910].

[b] Procedural Context

The issue of liability of community property may be raised in the context of a family law proceeding between the spouses or in a proceeding against one or both spouses by a third-party creditor.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments , and Ch. 482, Quieting Title .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title .

[e] Related Family Law Chapters

For a general discussion of liability of community and separate property, see Kirkland, Lurvey, & Richmond, CALIFORNIA FAMILY LAW PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender), ch. 23.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonliability of Community Property

In re McCoy (1990) 111 Bankr. 276 was a bankruptcy proceeding that was filed by a husband while a marital dissolution proceeding was pending in California. In April, 1987, the trial court in the dissolution action made an order pendente lite requiring the sale of the community property residence, with proceeds to be distributed to the parties equally after payment of community debts. In July, 1987, the federal bankruptcy court prohibited sale of the residence, but later authorized the sale in April, 1988. The debtor-husband sought to sell the residence to pay encumbrances and community debts, and to distribute one-half of the remaining proceeds to the wife. At a hearing regarding the proceeds, the bankruptcy court ruled (1) that the community property had not been divided as of the beginning of the bankruptcy case; (2) that, prior to entry of a decree of dissolution, community property is liable for all debts incurred during marriage, including post-separation debts; and (3) that the sale proceeds were therefore subject to the claims of the husband's creditors for debts he incurred after separation but before judgment of dissolution. The wife appealed.

The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel reversed the judgment, holding that, as a result of 1989 legislation amending former Civ. Code § 5120.110 [now see Fam. Code § 910], the wife's share of the community property was not liable for the husband's post-separation debts. The court noted that, before the statutory amendment, the sale proceeds of the couple's residence would have been liable for the post-separation business debts. However, the language of the amended provision defined the term "during marriage" as not including the period during which the spouses are living separate and apart before a judgment for dissolution of marriage or a judgment for legal separation. By amending former Civ. Code § 5120.110 [now see Fam. Code § 910], the Legislature clearly mandated that a separated spouse's share of the community property is not reachable to satisfy the other spouse's post-separation debts. Moreover, even though the amended provision did not go into effect until January 1, 1990, former Civ. Code §§ 5120.010-5122 [now see Fam. Code §§ 900-1000] apply to all debts enforced on or after January 1, 1985, regardless of when the debt was incurred [see Fam. Code §§ 930, 931]. Therefore, because the debts in this case were all enforced after January 1, 1985, the provisions of former Civ. Code § 5120.110(c) [now see Fam. Code § 910] applied retroactively.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.26

§ 114.26 Supporting Contention That Property Received by Spouse in Property Division on Marital Dissolution Is Not Liable for Other Spouse's Debt Incurred Before or During Marriage [Fam. Code § 916(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE SEPARATE PROPERTY OF _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CLAIMANT], AND HIS/HER SHARE OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY RECEIVED IN THE DIVISION OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY PURSUANT TO _____ [DISSOLUTION OF MARRIAGE or LEGAL SEPARATION], SHOULD NOT BE LEVIED ON TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE THE DEBT ON WHICH JUDGMENT _____ [WAS GIVEN or IS SOUGHT] WAS INCURRED BY _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or DEFENDANT'S or CLAIMANT'S] SPOUSE AND THE DEBT WAS NOT ASSIGNED FOR PAYMENT BY _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CLAIMANT] IN THE DIVISION OF COMMUNITY PROPERTY; _____ [PLAINTIFF or DEFENDANT or CLAIMANT] IS THEREFORE NOT LIABLE FOR THE DEBT.

A. Liability of Separate Property and Share of Community Property Received in Property Division for Debts of Spouse. The separate property owned by a married person at the time of a division of community and quasi-community property between spouses pursuant to dissolution of marriage or legal separation, and the property received by the person in the division, is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse or former spouse before or during the marriage, unless the debt was assigned for payment by the person in the division of the property (Fam. Code § 916(a)(2); see Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 835, 841-842, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 733).

B. Personal Liability of Spouse for Debt of Other Spouse After Property Division. After a division of community and quasi-community property pursuant to dissolution of marriage or legal separation, a person is not personally liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse or former spouse before or during marriage, unless the debt was assigned for payment by that person in the division of property (Fam. Code § 916(a)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention that a person's separate property and share of community property received under a property division pursuant to dissolution of marriage or legal separation is not liable for a debt of his or her spouse incurred before or during the marriage. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.26[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that the person's property has been or may be subject to levy or garnishment in enforcement of a judgment; (2) that the judgment is for a debt incurred solely by the person's spouse before or during marriage; (3) that the marriage has either been dissolved or is in the process of being dissolved, or that a judgment of legal separation has been, or is in the process of being, entered; (4) that, pursuant to the dissolution or legal separation, a division of the parties' community and quasi-community property has been effected; (5) that the property subject to levy either was the person's separate property at the time of the division or was the person's share of community property received pursuant to the division; and (6) that the debt was not assigned for payment by the person in the division of property [see Fam. Code § 916(a)(2); see also Fam. Code § 2620 et seq.; but see Kenney v. U.S. (N.D. Cal. 2004) 329 F.Supp.2d 1193, 1196 (transfer of wife's interest in property under marital settlement agreement did not extinguish federal tax liens that attached to property before agreement)].

[b] Procedural Context

After a division of property pursuant to a dissolution of marriage or legal separation, Fam. Code § 916(a)(2) establishes both the nonliability of property and personal nonliability for the debt of a spouse incurred before or during marriage. Therefore, if an action is brought on a debt for which personal nonliability can be established, this form may be used in support of a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] or motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. It may also be used in a trial brief or in support of a motion to quash a levy against exempt property [see Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209] .

If an action is brought and judgment is entered solely against the debtor spouse, and enforcement of the judgment is then sought against the separate property or community property share of the nondebtor spouse, this form may be used in an independent collateral action brought for the purpose of retaining or recovering the property. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Assigned Debt--Joinder of Party

After division of community and quasi-community property pursuant to Fam. Code § 2550, the separate property owned by a married person at the time of the division, and the community property received by the person in the division, is liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before or during marriage, and the person is personally liable for the debt, if the debt was assigned for payment by the person in the division of the property [Fam. Code § 916(a)(3)]. Nevertheless, if a money judgment for the debt is entered after the division, such property is not subject to enforcement of the judgment and the judgment may not be enforced against the married person unless the person was made a party to the judgment [Fam. Code § 916(a)(3); see In re Chenich (Bankr. 9th Cir. 1988) 87 Bankr. 101] . When levy is sought against the property of the assignee spouse without him or her having been joined as a party to the action in which judgment was rendered, § 114.22 can be adapted for use in such a case.

[d] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints for remedies for improper levy on property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title (Matthew Bender). For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that publication.

[e] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to remedies for improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
1. Spouses' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities §§ 114.27-114.39

[Reserved]

§§ 114.27[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.40

§ 114.40 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Property Levied on Is Community Property [Fam. Code § 910]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

LEVY ON _____ [describe property] WAS PROPER BECAUSE COMMUNITY PROPERTY IS LIABLE FOR THE DEBTS OF EITHER SPOUSE CONTRACTED _____ [BEFORE or DURING] MARRIAGE.

A. Liability of Community Property for Debt of Spouse. A judgment against a spouse for a debt contracted by the spouse before or during marriage may be satisfied out of the community property of the marriage (Fam. Code § 910; Century Sur. Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 942, 944, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 ; In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 622-624, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312 ; In re Marriage of Orchard (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 155, 157, 161, 273 Cal. Rptr. 499).

[Optional] B. When Community Debt for Contract Incurred. A contract made during marriage and before a spousal separation creates a community liability even if the time set for performance falls after that separation, because a contract debt is incurred when the contract is "made"--that is, when the contractual consideration is exchanged, without regard to the time of performance (In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 622-624, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312).

[Optional] C. Community Remains Liable Despite Set Aside of Unauthorized Transfer of Community Real Property. Although a spouse may set aside in its entirety a transfer of community realty made without that spouse's consent in violation of Fam. Code § 1102(a) by a timely action during marriage, the set aside does not extinguish the underlying community debt, or prevent the maintenance of a lien on the property when a judgment for the debt has been rendered (Lezine v. Security Pacific Financial Services, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 56, 73-74, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76, 925

P.2d 1002).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that a levy on property in enforcement of a judgment against the person's spouse was improper, on the ground that the property levied on is community property. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.40[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that defendant is a judgment creditor under a judgment against the plaintiff's or claimant's spouse; (2) that the judgment is for a debt of the spouse incurred before or during marriage; (3) that, in enforcing the judgment, defendant levied on the property at issue; and (4) that the property is community property of the judgment debtor, other than the segregated earnings of the plaintiff or claimant [see Fam. Code §§ 910, 911].

Optional Paragraph B may be used in opposition to the claim that a spouse's contract debt is not a community debt because the time set for performance takes place after a spousal separation. It is based on the premise that liability under the contract is incurred as of the time the contract is made, rather than as of the time set for performance, so that if the contract is made during marriage and before separation, the liability flows to the community [see In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 622-624, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312] .

Optional Paragraph C may be used in opposition to a spouse's claim that setting aside a transfer of community real property made in violation of Fam. Code § 1102(a) precludes a creditor's action to recover the amount of the underlying community debt or maintenance of a lien on community realty if a money judgment for the debt has already been rendered [see Lezine v. Security Pacific Financial Services, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 56, 73-74, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76, 925 P.2d 1002] . Optional Paragraph C directly opposes the points and authorities set out in § 114.60.

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor to oppose an independent collateral action brought by a married person for the purpose of retaining or recovering property that has been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was a party to the original action in which the judgment was entered [see Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209 ; for opposition to motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was not a party to the original action, see § 114.45]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms to oppose an action alleging improper levy on property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments ; Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery ; Ch. 150, Conversion ; Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments ; and Ch. 482, Quieting Title (Matthew Bender).

For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions for alleged improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery ; Ch. 51, Conversion ; and Ch. 198, Quieting Title , in this set. For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

Depending on the facts of the case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 114.20 through 114.26 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

In addition, the points and authorities set out in Form No. 40 may be used in opposition to the contention in Optional Paragraph C.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Debt of Spouse

In Century Sur. Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , an insurer sued its insureds for reimbursement of legal fees and a declaration as to its duty to defend a third party action. The insureds, a business operated as a sole proprietorship, its owner, and his wife, cross-complained against the insurer for breach of contract and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Judgment was awarded in favor of the insureds. The appellate court affirmed the judgment, holding that under the policy, the insurer had a duty to defend the wife in the third party breach of contract action against her husband and his business, even though she was not named as a defendant in that action, because there was a possibility that she would become legally obligated to pay damages. The court noted that community property is liable for a money judgment against one spouse whether or not the other spouse is a named defendant in the underlying action. The business was a family owned business and the contract with the third party was entered into and performed for the benefit of the community. Because the spouses purchased and operated the business during their marriage, it was community property. As her husband's spouse with a community property interest in the business, the wife would be legally obligated under Fam. Code §§ 810 and 1000(b)(1) to pay any judgment against him (139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 942-944) .

In In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312 , one of the issues in the parties' dissolution trial involved characterization of liability for a lawsuit brought against the husband for failing to satisfactorily complete a home that he had contracted to build. The husband had made the contract before separating from his wife. A referee in the suit found he had acted as a general contractor, had breached the contract (after the parties' separation) by, among other things, failing to complete the home on time, and not completing all work required. The dissolution court determined that the lawsuit was a community obligation, and the wife appealed.

The appellate court affirmed the judgment, holding that the contractual liability incurred by the husband was community in character. Construing Fam. Code §§ 903 and 910 together, the court reasoned that a contract debt is incurred at the time the contract is "made," and a contract is made when the consideration is given and received. Here the promise to build (and, if necessary, do any remedial work to assure compliance with agreed on plans), and the right to payment, respectively, were exchanged before the spouses separated. Thus, a post-separation breach of a contract "made during marriage" gives rise to a community liability, subject to rules for credit and reimbursement as between the spouses if the community is diminished for a separate wrongful act. In this case, credit and reimbursement were not awarded, because both spouses had failed to raise these issues, and therefore had waived their respective rights to assert them (40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 623-625) .

In In re Marriage of Orchard (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 155, 273 Cal. Rptr. 499 , a former wife sought collection of past-due child support under her dissolution judgment from her former husband through a district attorney's office. The district attorney obtained an enforcement order, recorded it, and claimed a judgment lien against six acres of unimproved real estate that the former husband and his current wife had purchased during marriage. Thereafter, the husband quitclaimed his interest in the property to his current wife, who later claimed that the acreage had become her separate property by oral agreement. In the meantime, a writ of execution against the property had been issued. Ultimately, a court ordered the property sold to satisfy the husband's support obligation (for arrearages over $14,000), and denied the current wife's third-party claim to sole ownership. She appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed a finding that the real estate at issue was community property despite the quitclaim, and therefore was liable for the support debt under former Civ. Code §§ 5120.110(a), 5120.150 [now see Fam. Code §§ 910(a), 915(a)]. Title to the property had been taken by the spouses as "husband and wife," their promissory note was executed by them "jointly and severally," and their trust deed was made out as husband and wife. Finally, the quitclaim deed was recorded after a lien was filed against the property for payment of the child support. Thus, the property could properly be sold to satisfy the lien for the premarital debt (224 Cal. App. 3d 155, 161) .

[b] When Community Debt for Contract Incurred

The facts and procedural background of In re Marriage of Feldner (1995) 40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 47 Cal. Rptr. 2d 312 , are discussed under § 114.40[3][a]. In Feldner, the court of appeal concluded that a contract debt is incurred at the time the contract is "made," and a contract is made when the consideration is given and received, without regard to the time of performance. Therefore, even though the husband's breach of contract took place after the couple separated, the community was liable because he had made the contract before their separation (40 Cal. App. 4th 617, 623-625) .

[c] Community Remains Liable Despite Set Aside of Unauthorized Transfer of Community Real Property

In Lezine v. Security Pacific Financial Services, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 56, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76, 925 P.2d 1002 , a wife brought an action against her husband and trust deed beneficiaries seeking a determination that two trust deeds securing loans encumbered by the couple's residence were void because the debt was incurred without the wife's knowledge and consent, in violation of former Civ. Code § 5127 (now see Fam. Code § 1102(a)). A trial court ruled that the trust deeds were void, and ultimately awarded the trust deed beneficiaries money judgments against the husband. Abstracts of judgment were recorded in the county recorder's office. Subsequently, in a separate marital dissolution proceeding, the family law court awarded the residence to the wife as her separate property, and ordered the husband to pay the debts incurred without the wife's knowledge and consent. The wife sought a clarification in the judgment in the civil action that the trust deed beneficiaries' abstracts of judgment did not constitute liens against her house. The trial court granted the relief sought, ruling that the abstract "shall not constitute [a lien]" on the property. One of the trust deed beneficiaries appealed, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment. The California Supreme Court later granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. It held that the setting aside, alone, of a security interest in community real property pursuant to former Civ. Code § 5127, does not cancel the underlying obligation or liability of the community property for satisfaction of that obligation. In this instance, while it was legally correct to set aside the creditor's security interest under former Civ. Code § 5127 and Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 26, 30, 46, 283 Cal. Rptr. 584, 812 P.2d 931 , the set aside did not affect the liability of the community realty for satisfaction of the money judgment against the husband for the amount of the loan obligation. In other words, the loss of security does not extinguish the underlying debt, or the character of that unsecured debt as one for which the community estate is liable. In addition, the creditor's recordation of the abstract of judgment, prior to the division of property in the couple's marital dissolution proceeding, created a judgment lien that attached to the property and was enforceable for satisfaction of the money judgment against the husband. Through Code Civ. Proc. § 695.020, the Legislature has expressly established the liability of community real property for the satisfaction of money judgments rendered against either spouse, including a nondebtor spouse's one-half community interest. A creditor who loses its security interest under former Civ. Code § 5127 retains the rights of any other unsecured creditor to resort to the community real property for satisfaction of the underlying debt. Thus, the Supreme Court found that the trial court exceeded its authority in declaring the community realty awarded to the wife free of any judgment lien in favor of the creditor (14 Cal. 4th 56, 63-75) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Debt of Spouse

In Mejia v. Reed (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 657, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 390, 74 P.3d 166 , a married man had an extramarital relationship with the plaintiff that led to the birth of a child. In a subsequent dissolution proceeding, the man and his wife entered into a marital settlement agreement under which he transferred all of his interest in jointly held real property to the wife. The plaintiff claimed that the purpose of this transfer was to prevent her from collecting child support, and she asked the court to impose a lien on the real property. The Supreme Court held that a transfer of real property under a marital settlement agreement may be found invalid under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (Civ. Code §§ 3439-3439.12) (31 Cal. 4th 657, 661, 668) . The case was remanded for further proceedings on the issue of actual fraud (31 Cal. 4th 657, 672) .

In In re Marriage of Leni (2006) 144 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 886 , the wife in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage sought an order compelling the husband to reimburse the community for the proceeds of the sale of their community property that he used to take care of his mother. The court of appeal held that the trial court erred in treating the expenditures on behalf of the husband's infirm mother as an unauthorized gift of community funds, because the husband had an obligation under Fam. Code § 4400 to support his indigent mother to the extent he was able. The court concluded that an obligation imposed by statute is a "debt" within the meaning of Fam. Code § 910. The husband's support obligation was a community obligation for which he was not required to reimburse the community (144 Cal. App. 4th 1087, 1096-1098) .

In Filip v. Bucurenciu (2005) 129 Cal. App. 4th 825, 28 Cal. Rptr. 3d 884 , a judgment creditor sued a judgment debtor's former wife and her daughter under the Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act (UFTA), alleging that they had conspired with the judgment debtor to prevent the creditor from collecting on a judgment owed by the debtor by transferring property to a corporation in which they were the sole shareholders. The defendants claimed that the transfer was merely part of a property settlement agreement and part of the former wife's financial planning needs, not evidence of a plan to defraud the creditor. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the creditor and the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It found that there was abundant evidence that the defendants worked together to hide assets from the plaintiff, such that a finding of actual intent to defraud "was virtually compelled" (129 Cal. App. 4th 825, 834) . It also rejected the defendants' contention that specified real property transferred to them was not an asset for purposes of the UFTA by virtue of Civ. Code § 3439.01(a)(1) because it was encumbered for more than its fair market value. While the record reflected that the property was transferred in exchange for a note equivalent to the amount of the encumbrance on the property, the evidence also suggested that this transaction was not "above board" (129 Cal. App. 4th 825, 835) . Thus, the trial court properly set aside the transfers of the property and authorized the plaintiff to foreclose on those properties to satisfy its judgment (129 Cal. App. 4th 825, 839-840) .

Mehrtash v. Mehrtash (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 75, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 802 involved an action by a former wife to set aside a conveyance of her former husband's home to his stepsons. She alleged that this was a fraudulent conveyance by her former husband for the purpose of avoiding his obligations under a money judgment for spousal support. The trial court granted judgment in the defendants' favor, because the plaintiff failed to prove that the value of the property exceeded encumbrances and senior liens. The appellate court held this was a proper basis for a judgment in the defendants' favor and affirmed the judgment (93 Cal. App. 4th 75, 77, 81-82) .

Sanwa Bank California v. Chang (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1314, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 330 was an appeal after a trial court found a married woman liable for a fraudulent conveyance as the transferee of the family residence from her husband, prior to her husband's filing for bankruptcy. The trial court found that the residence was actually community property and remained liable for a debt incurred by a husband, despite his transfer of it to the wife as her separate property prior to bringing bankruptcy proceedings. The residence was never listed in the bankruptcy estate, and because it was listed as separate property of the wife it was liable for the community debts as if it remained community property. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the injunction created by husband's bankruptcy discharge did not protect the residence from a fraudulent conveyance action because it was pre-bankruptcy property, not after-acquired property, and it was never made a part of the bankruptcy estate. Thus, the appellant wife remained personally liable for the community debt (87 Cal. App. 4th 1314, 1319) .

In State Bd. of Equalization v. Woo (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 481, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 206 , a wife appealed from an earnings withholding order imposed against her for delinquent sales taxes owed by her husband to the State Board of Equalization. The court of appeal affirmed the order, rejecting the wife's contention that a marital agreement she entered into with her husband transmuting their community property to the separate property of each spouse precluded the Board from garnishing her wages. The court held that the wife's attempt to transmute community property earnings to her separate property constituted a fraudulent transfer in violation of Civ. Code § 3439.04(a) and Fam. Code § 851, because she acknowledged that the community estate was liable for her husband's tax debt under Fam. Code § 910 and entered into the marital agreement after learning that the Board intended to garnish her wages (82 Cal. App. 4th 481, 483-484) .

In Gagan v. Gouyd (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 835, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 733 , defendant couples appealed from judgments setting aside interspousal transfers of property and imposing constructive trusts on that property in favor of a judgment creditor. Although the court of appeal reversed the judgment with respect to one of the couples, who had transferred assets in the course of a divorce, it affirmed the judgment with respect to the couple who remained married (Victor and Mary). A trial court had found that certain personalty transfers by husband Victor to wife Mary were fraudulent with respect to the plaintiff, a judgment creditor of Victor's. On appeal, the only issue was whether Mary's interest in a transferred limited partnership (Apache Cablevision) was her separate property or community property. Only if it were her separate property would it not be liable for the underlying debt of her husband. The court of appeal found that Mary had the burden of proving by clear and convincing evidence that the property was separate and not community and she had not met this burden. Mary had relied on her husband's testimony, which established only the length of marriage and that the property had been acquired during marriage. Given that there was substantial evidence of community property, the trial court's finding was upheld. The appellate court noted that it was actually unnecessary to frame the issue in terms of fraudulent conveyance because the defendants retained their assets and all were available to satisfy plaintiff's underlying judgment, but the trial court's order imposing a constructive trust for plaintiff's benefit was not prejudicial. Therefore, the appellate court affirmed the judgment against that couple (73 Cal. App. 4th 835, 843-844) .

In 11601 Wilshire Assocs. v. Grebow (1998) 64 Cal. App. 4th 453, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 912 , a lessor of commercial property sought a judgment against a wife solely on the basis that her husband had personally guaranteed the obligations of the tenant under the lease, the husband's law corporation. The trial court granted summary judgment to the wife, finding that the lessor did not, and could not, state a cause of action against her. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, rejecting the lessor's contention that the wife was liable on the husband's personal guaranty because they were married and, as such, she was responsible for his obligations to the extent of their community property under Fam. Code § 910. The lessor admitted that it named the wife as a defendant in the action not because she was personally liable on the husband's guaranty, but to facilitate its postjudgment recovery of money damages should it prevail on its claim against the husband. The court concluded that the lessor could not state a cause of action against the wife under Fam. Code § 910 merely in her capacity as a community representative. Instead, her share of the community estate would be liable for any judgment against the husband to the extent permitted under Fam. Code § 910 (64 Cal. App. 4th 453, 455-458) .

In In re Marriage of Hargrave (1995) 36 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 474 , the court of appeal upheld a trial court's order that an ex-wife pay her share of federal income taxes pursuant to the parties' interlocutory dissolution judgment and agreement, even though she was later designated an "innocent spouse" pursuant to the Internal Revenue Code. The interlocutory judgment imposed one-half of "all income tax liabilities" on each party, and the trial court correctly interpreted this to mean that each of the parties was obligated to pay one-half of the federal income tax liabilities. The wife could have reached a compromise with the IRS, thus halting the rapid accumulation of penalizing interest on her share of the liability. Instead of doing so, she waited to see what kind of arrangement her ex-husband could make with the Internal Revenue Service, in an attempt to avoid responsibility for any portion of her liability. She was, therefore, properly assessed a share of the accumulating interest, in addition to her share of the taxes due. The appellate court rejected the contention that provisions of the Internal Revenue Code concerning "innocent spouse" status preemp t a state court's power to impose tax liability as between the divorcing parties (36 Cal. App. 4th 1313, 1322) .

In Hunting World, Inc. v. Superior Court (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 67, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 923 , a debtor husband quitclaimed his interest in the family residence to his wife after the husband's creditor filed suit in federal court for trademark infringement. The creditor also filed suit in state court to set aside the transfer as fraudulent. On the husband's motion, the trial court expunged a notice of lis pendens filed by the creditor. The appellate court issued a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order, holding that the fraudulent transfer action constituted a "real property claim" under the lis pendens statute [Code Civ. Proc. § 405.4].

In Kirkeby v. Superior Court (2004) 33 Cal. 4th 642, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 805, 93 P.3d 395 , a shareholder of a close corporation brought a fraudulent conveyance action against the majority shareholders, a husband and wife, alleging that they obtained a loan from the corporation by representing they would use the borrowed funds to construct a building to house the corporation's operations, but instead used the loan to purchase residential income property for themselves, which they transferred to a family limited partnership. Before this purchase, they had also transferred their family residence to the family limited partnership. The plaintiff alleged that the defendants made both of these transfers in order to defraud creditors in the collection of their claims, and requested that the transfers be voided to the extent necessary to satisfy the claims set forth in her complaint. After filing the action, the plaintiff recorded a notice of lis pendens on both properties. The trial court granted the defendants' motion to expunge the lis pendens. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that a fraudulent conveyance action seeking avoidance of a transfer of title of specific real property under Civ. Code § 3439.07(a)(1) is a real property claim for purposes of the lis pendens statute (33 Cal. 4th 642, 652) . To be entitled to a lis pendens the plaintiff must establish, by a preponderance of the evidence, the probable validity of the real property claim. This requires the court to consider the merits of the plaintiff's claim (33 Cal. 4th 642, 651) .

In In re Soderling, 998 F. 2d 730 (9th Cir. 1993) , the appellate court held that a federal criminal restitution judgment was nondischargeable in bankruptcy and constituted a debt under state community property law. Since the debt was incurred during the parties' marriage, the community property of the parties was potentially liable for payment of the claim.

In Bales v. Farley (1951) 107 Cal. App. 2d 642, 237 P.2d 686 , a judgment was entered against the wife before the marriage, and the judgment creditor levied on an automobile purchased in the husband's name. The appellate court affirmed denial of the husband's third-party claim to recover the automobile, holding that the evidence supported a finding that the automobile was community property not exempt under former Civ. Code § 170 [now see Fam. Code § 910] (107 Cal. App. 2d 642, 643, 646) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.41

§ 114.41 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Earnings Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse for Premarital Debt--Earnings Were Commingled With Other Community Property [Fam. Code § 911]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

LEVY ON _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CLAIMANT'S] EARNINGS WAS PROPER BECAUSE THE EARNINGS WERE COMMINGLED WITH OTHER COMMUNITY PROPERTY OF A SIGNIFICANT AMOUNT.

Liability of Commingled Earnings for Premarital Debt of Other Spouse. The earnings of a married person are liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before marriage if they are commingled with other community property, except property insignificant in amount (see Fam. Code § 911(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that a levy on his or her earnings, in enforcement of a judgment against the person's spouse for a premarital debt, was improper. The ground of the contention is that the earnings have been commingled with other community property of a significant amount [Fam. Code § 911(a)]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.41[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that defendant is a judgment creditor under a judgment against the plaintiff's or claimant's spouse; (2) that the judgment is for a debt of the spouse incurred before marriage; (3) that, in enforcing the judgment, defendant levied on the earnings at issue; and (4) that the earnings were held in an account in which they were commingled with other community property of a significant amount (most commonly, a joint account into which each spouse deposits his or her earnings) [see Fam. Code § 911(a)].

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor to oppose an independent collateral action brought by a married person for the purpose of retaining or recovering earnings that have been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse for a premarital debt. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was a party to the original action in which the judgment was entered [see Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209 ; for opposition to motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was not a party to the original action, see § 114.45]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms to oppose an action alleging improper levy on property, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title (Matthew Bender). For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions for alleged improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.20 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.42

§ 114.42 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Separate Property Commingled, Is Not Traceable, and Is Liable as Community Property [Fam. Code § 910(a)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

LEVY ON _____ [describe property] WAS PROPER BECAUSE, EVEN THOUGH [describe property] MAY ONCE HAVE BEEN _____ [PLAINTIFF'S or CLAIMANT'S] SEPARATE PROPERTY, IT HAS BEEN COMMINGLED WITH COMMUNITY PROPERTY AND CAN NO LONGER BE TRACED; THEREFORE, _____ [describe property] IS NOW LIABLE AS COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

Commingled Separate Property. If a spouse's separate property is so commingled with community property that it cannot be traced, the entire commingled property will be treated as community property and will be held liable for the debts of the other spouse (Nichols v. Mitchell (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 598, 197 P.2d 550 ; Grolemund v. Cafferata (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 679, 683-684, 111 P.2d 641 ; see Fam. Code §§ 850, 852(d), 910(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that a levy on property in enforcement of a judgment against the person's spouse was improper. The ground of the opposing contention is that the levy was proper because any separate property character of the property levied on was lost once the property was commingled with community property and was unable to be traced. When the character of the property as community property is established, it becomes liable for any debt of either spouse incurred before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 910(a); see § 114.40]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.42[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that defendant is a judgment creditor pursuant to a judgment against the plaintiff's or claimant's spouse; (2) that the judgment is for a debt of the spouse incurred before or during marriage; and (3) that, in enforcing the judgment, defendant levied on the property at issue.

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor to oppose an independent collateral action brought by a married person for the purpose of retaining or recovering property that has been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was a party to the original action in which the judgment was entered [see Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209 ; for opposition to motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was not a party to the original action, see § 114.45]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms to oppose an action alleging improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions for alleged improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion , and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commingled Separate Property

Nichols v. Mitchell (1948) 32 Cal. 2d 598, 197 P.2d 550 , was an action by a husband's judgment creditor for declaratory relief and to quiet title to real property purchased at an execution sale; both husband and wife were made parties to the action. The wife cross-complained on the ground that she had furnished the consideration for the purchase of the real property and that it was her separate property. The trial court found that any separate property of the wife had become commingled with the parties' community property to such an extent that its identity was "absolutely lost," that it was impossible to trace any such separate property, and that the real property was therefore entirely the community property of the parties.

The Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the plaintiff creditor, stating that the evidence supported a finding that the property, although standing in the wife's name alone, was acquired by the expenditure of community funds. Although the wife had maintained a separate bank account, and funds from the account had been used to purchase and maintain the property, the court found that funds deposited into the account were both separate and community in character. Substantial evidence existed to support the trial court's finding that any separate property that the wife may have had in the account was no longer identifiable as such, but had instead become commingled with, and a part of, the community estate. Accordingly, the real property was deemed liable for satisfaction of the husband's debt (32 Cal. 2d 598, 609-610) .

In Grolemund v. Cafferata (1941) 17 Cal. 2d 679, 111 P.2d 641 , the defendants had obtained a judgment against the husband in an action for damages arising out of an automobile accident. When the defendants sought to execute on the judgment by selling certain real and personal property owned by the husband and his wife, the spouses instituted an action seeking to enjoin the sale. The trial court found for the defendants, and the husband and wife appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the evidence supported a finding that the property was acquired by the husband and wife with commingled funds. The Court stated that, with regard to the blending of separate and community property, the general rule is that when the two are made indistinguishable from each other, the entire mass is rendered community property. The Court explained that when the owner of separate property is not able either to establish a separate right to any article of the mass or to prove the right to a computable share of it, the general presumption applies that property acquired during marriage is community property [now see Fam. Code § 760]. Thus, the property in question was held to be community property and liable for the payment of the tort claim against the husband (17 Cal. 2d 679, 683-684) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Commingled Separate Property

See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888 , involved a husband who deposited his community property earnings into various accounts that also contained separate property funds. The trial court held that community expenses had exceeded community income during marriage and, as a result, that all property acquired with funds from the commingled accounts was the husband's separate property.

The appellate court reversed, holding that property acquired during marriage is presumed to be community property, and the burden of proving otherwise is on the spouse who asserts its separate property character. The presumption of community property may be rebutted by tracing the source of assets acquired during marriage to separate funds, and one method of doing so is to prove that, at the time the property was acquired, community income was exhausted by family expenses. A spouse who commingles separate and community property assumes the burden of keeping records adequate to establish the balance of community income and expenditures at the time the asset is acquired with commingled funds. By failing to keep adequate records, the husband had failed to meet his burden of proving an excess of community expenses over community income at the time the assets were purchased, and the judgment finding them to be his separate property was reversed (64 Cal. 2d 778, 784) .

Note

that there are limitations on the doctrine of tracing set forth in See v. See. For discussion of these limitations, see Kirkland, Lurvey & Richmond, CALIFORNIA FAMILY LAW PRACTICE AND PROCEDURE, 2nd ed. (Matthew Bender), ch. 20.

In Patterson v. Patterson (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 333, 51 Cal. Rptr. 339 , the court stated that if separate and community property or funds are commingled in such a manner that it is impossible to trace the source of the property or funds, the whole will be treated as community property. The burden is on the claimant to establish that certain property is separate property and, if he or she fails to do so, the presumption that it is community property is controlling (242 Cal. App. 2d 333, 341-342) .

In Tedder v. Johnson (1951) 105 Cal. App. 2d 734, 234 P.2d 149 , the appellate court affirmed a judgment quieting title to an undivided one-half interest in real property in favor of the purchaser at an execution sale of the husband's interest in property held in joint tenancy. The judgment debtor's wife contended that the property was really purchased with her separate funds and held in joint tenancy for convenience only, although she could not document her claim. The court stated that when separate and community property is thus commingled, the wife may not thereafter claim an exemption for a sum equalling the amount of her earnings which she had placed in the common fund (105 Cal. App. 2d 734, 738) .

In Truelson v. Nelson (1941) 42 Cal. App. 2d 750, 109 P.2d 996 , the court affirmed a judgment quieting title to real property in favor of the purchaser at an execution sale and against the claim of the judgment debtor's wife that the property was her separate property. It stated that if separate and community property are so commingled that they cannot be traced and the identity of each has been lost, the whole will be treated as community property because the burden to establish that fact is on the party who claims that the property is separate (42 Cal. App. 2d 750, 754) .

Fountain v. Maxim (1930) 210 Cal. 48, 290 P. 576 , was an action by an administratrix against the surviving husband of decedent to quiet title to decedent's real property. The court affirmed judgment for the defendant, holding that accumulations of the husband and wife during their marriage were so pooled and mixed with the wife's separate property that the court could not distinguish any part in the real property in question. The Supreme Court stated the principle that was later restated in the Truelson case, above (210 Cal. 48, 51) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.43

§ 114.43 Opposing Defendant Spouse's Contention of Nonliability for Debt--Debt for Necessaries Furnished to Other Spouse While Living Together During Marriage [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S SEPARATE PROPERTY SHOULD BE HELD LIABLE BECAUSE THE DEBT WAS INCURRED FOR NECESSARIES OF LIFE FURNISHED TO DEFENDANT'S SPOUSE WHILE THE SPOUSES WERE LIVING TOGETHER.

A. Personal Liability. A married person is personally liable for a debt incurred for necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living together (Fam. Code § 914(a)(1)).

B. Liability of Separate Property. The separate property of a married person may be applied to the satisfaction of a debt incurred for necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living together (Fam. Code § 914(b); see Fam. Code § 4301).

C. Duty to Use Separate Property. A married person must support his or her spouse while they are living together out of the married person's separate property when there is no community or quasi-community property (Fam. Code § 4301; see In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413).

[Optional] D. Meaning of "Necessaries of Life." A debt is incurred for a "necessary of life" when it is reasonably necessary for the support of a spouse according to the parties' station in life (In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that he or she, and his or her separate property, are not liable for a debt of the person's spouse incurred during marriage. The ground of the contention is that defendant's separate property is liable because the debt was incurred for necessaries of life of the other spouse while the spouses were living together [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1)]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.43[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that the action is for a debt incurred by a married person during marriage; (2) that the debt was incurred for necessaries of life of the other spouse; and (3) that the spouses were living together at the time the debt was incurred [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1); see Fam. Code § 4301].

Note that if separate property of the nondebtor spouse is applied to satisfy such a debt at a time when nonexempt community property, or separate property of the debtor spouse, is available but not so applied, the nondebtor spouse is entitled to reimbursement to the extent such property was available [Fam. Code § 914(b)].

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor in opposition to a demurrer or motion for summary judgment in which the defendant asserts the general rule that separate property of a married person is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse before or during marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1); see § 114.21]. This general rule is subject to the following statutory exceptions relevant to this form: (1) Fam. Code § 914(a) provides that a married person is personally liable for debts incurred for necessaries of life of the person's spouse while living together during marriage; and (2) Fam. Code § 4301 provides that a married person must support his or her spouse, while they are living together, out of the married person's separate property when there is no community or quasi-community property.

Note that the term "necessary of life" is used in the context of married persons who are living together [Fam. Code § 914(a)(1)], and that the meaning of the term may vary depending on the circumstances and standard of living of the parties [see Wisnom v. McCarthy (1920) 48 Cal. App. 697, 701, 192 P. 337 , discussing "station of life" test]. In contrast, the term "common necessaries of life" is used in the context of married persons who are living separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)], and refers to those things necessary to sustain life in a most basic sense [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914, indicating that the "station of life" test does not apply in the case of common necessaries of life; on distinction between the two types of necessaries, see Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722 , discussed in § 114.44[3][a]]. Thus, construction of the term and resolution of the issue would seem appropriate on demurrer or summary judgment rather than at trial.

Note, further, that the separate property of a married person may not be levied on to enforce a judgment for necessaries unless the person was joined as a party to the action on the debt [Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 295-298, 128 P. 794 ; see § 114.22]. Therefore, the question of whether a given debt was for necessaries must be litigated in the action on the debt and cannot properly be raised in an independent collateral action or claim in response to a levy on property.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a complaint against a spouse for the value of necessaries furnished to the other spouse, see Ch. 359, Marriage in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms generally related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms generally related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 114.21 and 114.22 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Use Separate Property

In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413 involved, among other issues, reimbursement sought by the husband of separate property funds he had expended for community purposes pendente lite. The trial court allowed reimbursement and the wife appealed this and other issues. The Supreme Court referred to former Civ. Code § 5100 [now see Fam. Code § 720] for the statutory rule that married persons assume a mutual obligation of support during marriage. When community funds are exhausted, a spouse must utilize his or her separate property to provide for the support of the other (24 Cal. 3d 76, 83) .

The Court cited See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888 [see discussion under § 114.42[4][a]] for the proposition that a party who utilizes separate property for community purposes is presumed to intend a gift to the community and is not entitled to reimbursement from the community, unless there is an agreement between the parties to that effect. Absent a statutory right of reimbursement, a spouse who elects to use separate property to meet community expenses is not entitled to reimbursement from the community.

Note that In re Marriage of Epstein was decided prior to the enactment of Fam. Code § 914(b), which became operative January 1, 1994. This statute does create a statutory right of reimbursement to the extent that a married person applies his or her separate property to the satisfaction of the other spouse's debt at a time when nonexempt property in the community estate, or separate property of the debtor spouse, is available but not applied to the satisfaction of the debt. Since, under Fam. Code § 4301, a married person's duty to use separate property for the support of the other spouse while living together is expressly made subject to Fam. Code § 914, it appears that the holding of Epstein with respect to the issue of reimbursement has been abrogated, and reimbursement would be allowed, to the extent that nonexempt community property, or separate property of the other spouse, was available but not used at the time the nondebtor spouse used separate property to pay for his or her spouses's necessaries while living together.

[b] Meaning of "Necessaries of Life"

In In re Marriage of Higgason (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 476, 110 Cal. Rptr. 897, 516 P.2d 289 , the issue was the right of one spouse to be supported by the other from the other's separate property in the absence of community property [see Fam. Code § 4301]. During marriage, the wife had considerable separate property, and the husband had incurred major medical expenses that remained unpaid at the time of dissolution. The court held that, to the extent the husband's obligations were incurred during marriage and were reasonably necessary for his support according to the parties' station in life, the wife owed a duty to provide the support (10 Cal. 3d 476, 488) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Meaning of "Necessaries of Life"

In Wisnom v. McCarthy (1920) 48 Cal. App. 697, 192 P. 337 , the plaintiff sued a married couple jointly for the reasonable value of domestic services provided to them. The trial court found the services to be necessaries of life for persons in the economic and social position of the defendants. The appellate court accepted this finding as correct without discussion (48 Cal. App. 697, 701) .

The facts and procedural background of Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 128 P. 794 , are discussed in § 114.22[3][a]. The proceeding involved an action by a physician against a husband and wife for medical services provided to their children. The court held that medical services were necessaries of life, and that the spouses were jointly liable for medical services provided to their children. In so holding, the court noted, without relying on, unspecified cases that held that the word "necessaries" is a relative term that has been restricted or enlarged according to the circumstances and conditions of the parties, and that necessaries could include many of the conveniences of refined society, such as ornaments of dress that are usually worn by persons of rank and position (20 Cal. App. 288, 292-293) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.44

§ 114.44 Opposing Defendant Spouse's Contention of Nonliability for Debt--Debt for Common Necessaries of Life Furnished to Other Spouse While Spouses Living Separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT AND HIS/HER SEPARATE PROPERTY SHOULD BE HELD LIABLE BECAUSE THE DEBT WAS INCURRED FOR THE COMMON NECESSARIES OF LIFE FURNISHED TO DEFENDANT'S SPOUSE WHILE THE SPOUSES WERE LIVING SEPARATELY.

A. Personal Liability. A married person is personally liable for a debt incurred for the common necessaries of life of the person's spouse while the spouses are living separately (Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)).

B. Liability of Separate Property. The separate property of a married person may be applied to the satisfaction of a debt for which the person is personally liable because the debt is for the common necessaries of life furnished to the person's spouse (Fam. Code § 914(b)).

[Optional] C. Meaning of "Common Necessaries of Life." The term "common necessaries of life" means those things that are regarded universally, or substantially so, as necessary to sustain life (Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722 ; Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 295-298, 128 P. 794).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that he or she, and his or her separate property, is not liable for a debt of the person's spouse incurred during marriage, but while the spouses were living separately. The ground of the contention is that the defendant's separate property is liable for the debt because it was incurred for common necessaries of life furnished to the other spouse [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.44[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that the action is for a debt incurred by a married person while still married but living separately; (2) that the separation is not by agreement of the parties; and (3) that the debt was for common necessaries of life furnished to the person's spouse. If spouses are separated under an agreement, and the agreement makes no provision for support, the duty of support is terminated [see Fam. Code § 4302; see also Fam. Code § 914(a)(2) and Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914].

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor in opposition to a demurrer or motion for summary judgment in which the defendant asserts the general rule that separate property of a married person is not liable for a debt incurred by the person's spouse during marriage [Fam. Code § 913(b)(1); see § 114.21]. Note that the term "common necessaries of life" is used in the context of married persons who are living separately [Fam. Code § 914(a)(2)], and refers to those things necessary to sustain life in a most basic sense [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914, indicating that the "station of life" test [discussed in § 114.43] does not apply in the case of common necessaries of life; see also Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722] . Thus, construction of the term and resolution of the issue would seem appropriate on demurrer or summary judgment rather than at trial.

Note that the separate property of a married person may not be levied on to enforce a judgment for necessaries, unless the person was joined as a party to the action on the debt [Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 295-298, 128 P. 794 ; see § 114.22]. Therefore, the question of whether a given debt was for common necessaries must be litigated in the action on the debt and cannot properly be raised in an independent collateral action or claim in response to a levy on property.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form for a complaint against a spouse for the value of necessaries furnished to the other spouse, see Ch. 359, Marriage in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms generally related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For forms generally related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in §§ 114.21 and 114.22 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Meaning of "Common Necessaries of Life"

Ratzlaff v. Portillo (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 92 Cal. Rptr. 722 , involved construction of a wage garnishment statute making earnings exemptions inapplicable in the case of a debt incurred for the common necessaries of life [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 706.051(c)(1)]. The debt at issue was for the purchase of an automobile. The court distinguished between "necessaries" and "common necessaries of life," holding that the latter term referred only to those articles that are regarded universally, or substantially so, as necessary to sustain life. The court held that, because of the availability of public transportation, home delivery service, and neighborhood shopping centers, the automobile, although a great convenience, is not necessary to sustain life and cannot be viewed as a common necessary of life within the contemplation of the garnishment statute. The court also rejected the proposition that something that is not, of itself, a common necessary of life becomes one if it is used to earn a living (14 Cal. App. 3d 1013, 1015-1016) .

Note that the legislative history suggests that the construction of "common necessaries of life" given in Ratzlaff v. Portillo is applicable to the use of the same term in Fam. Code § 914(a)(2) [see Cal. Law Rev. Comm'n. Comment to Fam. Code § 914].

The facts and procedural background of Evans v. Noonan (1912) 20 Cal. App. 288, 128 P. 794 , are discussed in § 114.22[3][a]. The proceeding involved an action by a physician against a husband and wife for medical services provided to their children. In holding that medical expenses furnished to the children of a married couple were necessaries of life for which the spouses were jointly liable, the court distinguished between the terms "necessaries of life" and "common necessaries of life." While the former is a relative term according to the circumstances and conditions of the parties, the latter refers only to those things that are proper and requisite for human sustenance. These include food, clothing, shelter, and such medical attention in case of illness as is absolutely requisite to relieve physical suffering and pain and to overcome or conquer disease (20 Cal. App. 288, 292-293) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Separate Property

In re Marriage of Epstein (1979) 24 Cal. 3d 76, 154 Cal. Rptr. 413 , involved, among other issues, reimbursement sought by the husband of separate property funds he had expended for community purposes after the parties had separated but before judgment for dissolution. The Supreme Court referred to former Civ. Code § 5100 [now see Fam. Code § 720] for the statutory rule that married persons assume a mutual obligation of support during marriage. When community funds are exhausted, a spouse must utilize his or her separate property to provide for the support of the other. The Court cited See v. See (1966) 64 Cal. 2d 778, 51 Cal. Rptr. 888 [see discussion under § 114.42[4][a]] for the proposition that a party who utilizes separate property for community purposes is presumed to intend a gift to the community and is not entitled to reimbursement from the community, unless there is an agreement between the parties to that effect. Absent a statutory right of reimbursement, a spouse who elects to use separate property to meet community expenses is not entitled to reimbursement from the community (24 Cal. 3d 76, 83) .

Note

that In re Marriage of Epstein was decided prior to the enactment of Fam. Code § 914(b), which became operative January 1, 1994. This statute did create a statutory right of reimbursement to the extent that a married person applies his or her separate property to the satisfaction of the other spouse's debt at a time when nonexempt property in the community estate, or separate property of the debtor spouse, is available but not applied to the satisfaction of the debt.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.45

§ 114.45 Opposing Spouse's Motion to Quash Levy of Execution--Spouse Not Party to Action

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE MOTION TO QUASH LEVY OF EXECUTION SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE MOVING PARTY IS NOT A PARTY TO THIS ACTION AND HAS NO STANDING TO SO MOVE.

Lack of Standing. A married person who is not a party to the action has no standing to move the court for an order quashing a levy of execution made on that person's allegedly separate property under a writ of execution issued on a judgment against that person's spouse (Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a motion to quash a levy of execution on a married person's allegedly separate property, based on a judgment against that person's spouse. The ground of the contention is that the person making the motion is not a party to the action.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that an action was brought and judgment was entered against a married person on a debt incurred by that person; (2) that, in enforcing the judgment, the plaintiff levied on certain property considered to be liable for the debt; (3) that a motion to quash the levy was brought by the judgment debtor's spouse on the ground that the property levied on was the spouse's separate property and was not liable for the debt; and (4) that the moving party spouse was not a party to the action in which the judgment was entered.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Standing

Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 305 P.2d 209 , involved a creditor who secured a judgment against the husband; the wife was not made a party to the action. Prior to entry of the judgment, the husband conveyed his interest in the property to the wife, and the wife recorded a declaration of homestead on the property. When the creditor moved the court for an appraisal to determine whether the property's value exceeded the homestead, the wife filed an answer, alleging that she was not a party to the creditor's action and that she held the property as her separate property and homestead. The trial court found that the creditor's judgment was solely against the husband, that the husband had no interest in the property, and that the execution levied upon the property should be quashed.

The appellate court reversed, holding that the Civil Code statutes regarding execution of judgment make no provision for trying the question of whether the judgment debtor has any interest in the subject real property. Rather, a purchaser at an execution sale acquires only such interest as the judgment debtor had in the property. In an execution proceeding, the court may not define the interest of the judgment debtor in the property, and a levy cannot be quashed on the grounds that the judgment debtor has no interest in the property levied on. No one except the judgment debtor may move to quash a writ of execution or the levy thereof, unless the judgment on which it is issued, or the writ, is void on its face. The appellate court held that the trial court had exceeded its jurisdiction by trying the question of title, by terminating the lien which the creditor had acquired on the property, and by quashing the execution levied thereon.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Lack of Standing

In Vest v. Superior Court (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 91, 294 P.2d 988 , a creditor had obtained a judgment for community debts against the husband prior to a divorce decree between the husband and the wife. The wife had not been made a party to the creditor's action. Pursuant to the divorce decree, the property was held to be community in character and was awarded to the wife. When the judgment creditor caused a writ of execution to be levied on the husband's former interest in the property, which now stood in the wife's name, the wife moved to quash the writ. The appellate court stated that, as a general rule, no one but those parties to the action who are liable to be injured can move for recall of the writ, unless the judgment or writ is void on its face. A levy cannot be quashed on the ground that a judgment debtor has no interest in the property levied on. The property awarded to the wife in the divorce action was held to be subject to the burdens with which it was encumbered at the time of the award, and the creditor's levy was upheld (140 Cal. App. 2d 91, 93) .

For a discussion of the remedies available to a nondebtor spouse who faces execution on property for debts of the other spouse, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.46

§ 114.46 Opposing Spouse's Contention of Nonliability of Community Property for Other Spouse's Tort--Liability Arose From Activity Performed for Benefit of Community [Fam. Code § 1000(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

COMMUNITY PROPERTY SHOULD BE LEVIED ON BEFORE SEPARATE PROPERTY TO SATISFY THE JUDGMENT BECAUSE THE _____ [ACT or OMISSION] GIVING RISE TO LIABILITY ON WHICH THE JUDGMENT IS BASED OCCURRED WHILE THE TORTFEASOR SPOUSE WAS PERFORMING AN ACTIVITY FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE COMMUNITY.

Liability of Community Property for Tort. If the liability of a married person for death or injury to person or property is based on an act or omission that occurred while the person was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, the liability must be satisfied first from the community property and second from the separate property of that person (Fam. Code § 1000(b)(1); see In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 310, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623 ; In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that community property is not liable to satisfy a judgment in tort against his or her spouse. The ground of the contention is that the community property is liable because liability was incurred while the tortfeasor spouse was performing an act for the benefit of the community [see Fam. Code § 1000(b)(1)]. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.46[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that the plaintiff's or claimant's spouse is a judgment debtor under a judgment fixing liability for death or injury to person or property; (2) that, in enforcing this judgment, defendant has levied on community property of the tortfeasor and his or her spouse; and (3) that the act giving rise to the tortfeasor spouse's liability occurred while that spouse was performing an act for the benefit of the community [see Fam. Code § 1000(b)(1)].

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor to oppose an independent collateral action brought by a married person for the purpose of retaining or recovering property that has been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020(a)]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms to oppose an action alleging improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments ; Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery ; Ch. 150, Conversion ; Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments ; and Ch. 482, Quieting Title , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender). For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions for alleged improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery ; Ch. 51, Conversion ; and Ch. 198, Quieting Title . For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.24 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Tort

In re Marriage of Bell (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 623 , involved characterization and division of liability for settlement of a civil case arising out of the wife's embezzlement from an employer. The case had settled for some $150,000, and $55,000 in legal fees were incurred in the process. In their property division, a trial court assigned responsibility for both the attorney's fees and the settlement, along with a related income tax liability, to the wife's share of community property. She then appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment, finding that the trial court incorrectly attributed to the wife all legal costs and the settlement amount. The trial court's ruling was in error because the community benefited from the proceeds of the embezzlement. Under Fam. Code § 1000(b), if a married person's liability is based on an act or omission that occurred while he or she was performing an activity for the benefit of the community, that liability must first be satisfied from the community estate and secondarily from the separate property of the tortfeasor spouse. Regarding the settlement amount, the evidence demonstrated that the community received a major infusion of funds as a result of the wife's conduct, and that those funds had been utilized by the community. The appellate court, citing In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 , determined that, because the community had shared in the benefit, it was equitable that it also share in its cost. However, under In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 , it found that the trial court had correctly decided that the wife was liable for the attorney's fees in both the civil and criminal actions, as well as the tax arising from the embezzlement. The appellate court reasoned that, because the husband did not participate in the fraud and so could do nothing to avoid it, he should not in fairness bear the same burden as the wife (49 Cal. App. 4th 300, 309-310) .

In re Marriage of Hirsch (1989) 211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 259 Cal. Rptr. 39 , involved a post-dissolution motion by a former husband to classify a debt, which had been satisfied with his post-dissolution separate property, as a community obligation. The debt sought to be classified as community arose from a settlement of lawsuits against the husband in connection with his tenure as a member of the board of directors of a bank. His service on the board began before marriage and continued during the marriage and after the parties separated. The husband sought reimbursement for one-half the amount he expended in settling the lawsuits, including attorney's fees and costs. A trial court denied his motion, finding that his actions were tortious and should not be charged against the community.

The court of appeal reversed the order of denial, holding that litigation debts arising from the tortious conduct of a spouse while engaged in an activity for the benefit of the community are community debts, regardless of whether that conduct was negligent or intentional. The appellate court criticized the case on which the trial court had relied, In re Marriage of Stitt (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 579, 195 Cal. Rptr. 172 , which held that losses arising from the negligent conduct of a spouse engaged in an activity for the benefit of the community are a separate obligation of the tortfeasor spouse. Although an innocent spouse is not required to share in losses incurred by intentionally tortious or criminal conduct of a spouse when there is no benefit to the community, losses caused by either negligent or intentionally tortious conduct are a community debt when the activities benefitted the community. In this case, the court concluded, there was evidence that the husband's activities had benefitted the community, and the remuneration he received was undisputedly community property. Furthermore, his former wife presented no evidence that his service on the board was to protect his separate property interests; thus, there was no legitimate basis on which to characterize the settlement obligation as his separate debt (211 Cal. App. 3d 104, 110-111) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Liability of Community Property for Tort

In In re Marriage of Partridge (1990) 226 Cal. App. 3d 120, 276 Cal. Rptr. 8 , the trial court ordered the husband to hold the wife harmless from certain tax liabilities arising from the husband's contracting business during marriage, citing the husband's failure to cooperate in filing a tax return. The appellate court reversed, citing In re Marriage of Hirsch, above, for the proposition that, as long as the community receives some benefit from a spouse's actions, regardless of whether those actions are negligent or intentional, the community is properly chargeable with liabilities arising from those actions. Although, in a proceeding under the Family Code, the court may order an unequal division of community property when one spouse has "deliberately misappropriated" community assets [see Fam. Code § 2602], the appellate court here found no factors to justify such an unequal division (226 Cal. App. 3d 120, 126) .

In Century Sur. Co. v. Polisso (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 468 , an insurer sued its insureds for reimbursement of legal fees and a declaration as to its duty to defend a third party action. The insureds, a business operated as a sole proprietorship, its owner, and his wife, cross-complained against the insurer for breach of contract and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing. Judgment was awarded in favor of the insureds. The appellate court affirmed the judgment, holding that under the policy, the insurer had a duty to defend the wife in the third party breach of contract action against her husband and his business, even though she was not named as a defendant in that action, because there was a possibility that she would become legally obligated to pay damages. The court noted that community property is liable for a money judgment against one spouse whether or not the other spouse is a named defendant in the underlying action. The business was a family owned business and the contract with the third party was entered into and performed for the benefit of the community. Because the spouses purchased and operated the business during their marriage, it was community property. As her husband's spouse with a community property interest in the business, the wife would be legally obligated under Fam. Code §§ 810 and 1000(b)(1) to pay any judgment against him (139 Cal. App. 4th 922, 942-944) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.47

§ 114.47 Opposing Spouse's Claim to Property Levied on for Satisfaction of Judgment Against Other Spouse--Property Levied on Acquired by Illegal Conduct

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

LEVY ON _____ [describe property] WAS PROPER BECAUSE _____ [describe property] CAN BE TRACED TO THE PROCEEDS OF ILLEGAL CONDUCT BY THE DEBTOR SPOUSE, AND THE NONDEBTOR SPOUSE SHOULD NOT BE ENTITLED TO RETAIN THE PROCEEDS OF HIS/HER SPOUSE'S ILLEGAL CONDUCT.

Proceeds of Illegal Conduct. A spouse may not retain the proceeds of his or her spouse's fraudulent conduct, even though the former did not participate in the fraud (Tinsley v. Bauer (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 724, 728-729, 271 P.2d 116).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention of a married person that a levy on property in enforcement of a judgment against the person's spouse was improper. The ground of the contention is that the levy was proper because the property levied on can be traced to the proceeds of illegal conduct by the debtor spouse, and the nondebtor spouse should not be permitted to retain any benefit from that conduct. This form may be combined with other points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which it is raised [see discussion under § 114.47[2][b]].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should establish (1) that defendant is a judgment creditor under a judgment against the plaintiff's or claimant's spouse; (2) that, in enforcing the judgment, defendant levied on the property at issue; and (3) that since the property was procured by the illegal conduct of the debtor spouse, it is liable to satisfy the debt (even though, under otherwise applicable law, the property might not be so liable).

[b] Procedural Context

This form may be used by a judgment creditor to oppose an independent collateral action brought by a married person for the purpose of retaining or recovering property that has been levied on to enforce a judgment against the person's spouse. Such an action might be a third-party claim filed with the levying officer [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 720.110, 720.120], an action against the creditor for a writ of possession to recover personal property [see Civ. Code §§ 3379, 3380], or an action to quiet title to real or personal property [see Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020(a)].

With appropriate modifications, this form may be used to oppose a motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was a party to the original action in which the judgment was entered [see Blue v. Superior Court (1956) 147 Cal. App. 2d 278, 283, 305 P.2d 209 ; for opposition to motion to quash levy of execution when the nondebtor spouse was not a party to the original action, see § 114.45]. For further discussion, see § 114.20[2][b][i].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms to oppose an action alleging improper levy on property, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments , Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 150, Conversion , Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms for the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions for alleged improper levy on property, see Ch. 40, Claim and Delivery , Ch. 51, Conversion, and Ch. 198, Quieting Title. For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proceeds of Illegal Conduct

Tinsley v. Bauer (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 724, 271 P.2d 116 , involved a husband's third-party claim to property levied on in enforcement of a judgment against the wife [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 720.110]. Under then-applicable law, the husband was required to prove, in order to establish his claim, that the property in question was either his separate property or community property not derived from his wife's earnings. His claim was denied, and he appealed.

In affirming, the appellate court stated that one spouse will not be permitted to hide behind statutory rules of exemption from levy if he or she will reap the fruits of the other spouse's illegal conduct, especially if the fruits can be traced to the property levied on. The husband was entitled to release of only so much of the property levied on as he could prove not to be derived from the illegal conduct of the wife, even if the property was otherwise exempt from levy (125 Cal. App. 2d 724, 728-729) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Proceeds of Illegal Conduct

Kemp v. Enemark (1924) 194 Cal. 748, 230 P. 441 , was an action by a wife to enjoin the execution sale of property on which she had declared a homestead. The purpose of the execution was to satisfy a judgment against the husband on a loan obtained by the husband through fraud, the proceeds of which loan were used to purchase the property in question. Although the wife did not participate in the fraud, the Supreme Court affirmed a denial of relief because she should not be permitted to reap the fruit of the fraud (194 Cal. 748, 753-754) .

In South v. Wishard (1958) 165 Cal. App. 2d 8, 331 P.2d 227 , the court reversed a judgment of dismissal. It noted that the complaint stated a cause of action against a wife when it alleged that her husband misused funds held as a constructive trustee for the benefit of the plaintiff, and that the wife shared in the misuse of those funds with full knowledge of her husband's breach of trust. The court stated that, even though the wife may not have committed a fraud on the plaintiff, she had no legal protection when she knowingly retained the fruits of her husband's fraud (165 Cal. App. 2d 8, 16) .

Demetris v. Demetris (1954) 125 Cal. App. 2d 440, 270 P.2d 891 , was an action by a father to reform a deed in which title was mistakenly taken in the names of the plaintiff, his son, and his daughter-in-law as joint tenants, instead of in the names of plaintiff and his son as tenants in common. The court stated that the law of California is that a wife, although herself innocent, will not be protected in retaining the fruits of her husband's fraud (125 Cal. App. 2d 440, 444) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
A. Liability Of Separate And Community Property For Spousal Debts
2. Creditors' Forms

11-114 California Points & Authorities §§ 114.48-114.59

[Reserved]

§§ 114.48[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
B. Transfer Of Property By Spouse Without Consent Of Other Spouse
1. Remedies Of Nonconsenting Spouse

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.60

§ 114.60 Opposing Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Supporting Cancellation of Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Unilaterally Transferring, Community Real Property [Fam. Code § 1102(a)]--Consent of Both Spouses Required for Valid Transfer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [DEMURRER or MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE _____ [LEASE FOR A PERIOD EXCEEDING ONE YEAR or ENCUMBRANCE or SALE or CONVEYANCE] OF THE COMMUNITY REAL PROPERTY OCCURRED DURING THE SPOUSES' MARRIAGE WITHOUT THE PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT. IT THEREFORE VIOLATES FAMILY CODE SECTION 1102 AND GIVES RISE TO A TIMELY ACTION BY THE NONCONSENTING SPOUSE, DURING MARRIAGE, TO INVALIDATE THE TRANSFER IN ITS ENTIRETY.

Unilateral Transfer Is Voidable in Its Entirety During Marriage. Under Family Code Section 1102(a), both spouses must join in executing an instrument by which community real property (or any interest in that property) is leased for a longer period than one year, or is sold, conveyed, or encumbered. When a nonconsenting spouse, during the marriage, timely challenges a transfer made in violation of Family Code Section 1102(a), the transfer is voidable in its entirety (Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 26, 30, 46, 283 Cal. Rptr. 584 , decided under former Civ. Code § 5127; In re Marriage of Brooks & Robinson (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 183, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10] or motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] to a complaint to quiet title to, and in support of the cancellation of an instrument purporting to unilaterally transfer an interest in, community real property. Opposition to the transfer is based on the ground that the consent of both spouses is required to make a valid transfer of an interest in community real property during marriage [see Fam. Code § 1102(a); see also Civ. Code § 3412; Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020].

A transfer made in violation of Fam. Code § 1102(a) is voidable, and when a timely challenge to the transfer is brought by the nonconsenting spouse during marriage, the transfer may be invalidated in its entirety [Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 26, 30, 46, 283 Cal. Rptr. 584, 812 P.2d 931 ; In re Marriage of Brooks & Robinson (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 183, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624]. Notwithstanding Fam. Code § 1102(a), either party may encumber his or her interest in community real property to pay reasonable attorney's fees in order to retain or maintain counsel in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, nullity, or legal separation [Fam. Code §§ 1102(e), 2033(a)].

Additional remedies are provided for a breach of fiduciary duties between spouses, including the transfer by one spouse of community real or personal property without the consent of the other. The court may order an accounting and may determine the parties' rights of ownership in, beneficial enjoyment of, or access to, community property; and may determine the classification of all of the spouses property [Fam. Code § 1101(b)]. The court may also order that the name of a spouse be added to community property held in the name of the other spouse alone, or otherwise reform title to community property to reflect its community character, except as to certain business interests [Fam. Code § 1101(c)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Counsel's argument should indicate (1) the nature of the transfer; (2) the time at which the transfer occurred in relation to the period of the marriage; (3) the fact that the plaintiff's consent to the transfer was not obtained; and (4) the fact that the action is being brought during the marriage [see Fam. Code § 1102(a); Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 26, 30, 46, 283 Cal. Rptr. 584, 812 P.2d 931] .

For memoranda in opposition to the contentions raised in this form, see § 114.40, Optional Paragraph C [see Lezine v. Security Pacific Financial Services, Inc. (1996) 14 Cal. 4th 56, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 76, 925 P.2d 1002] .

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint to cancel an instrument transferring an interest in community real property in violation of Fam. Code § 1102(a), see Ch. 122, Community Property , in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For memoranda generally related to actions to quiet title and to cancel an instrument affecting title, see Ch. 198, Quieting Title .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unilateral Transfer Is Voidable in Its Entirety During Marriage

In Droeger v. Friedman, Sloan & Ross (1991) 54 Cal. 3d 26, 283 Cal. Rptr. 584, 812 P.2d 931 , a husband brought an action during marriage to quiet title to two parcels of community real property. His estranged wife had encumbered the property without his consent in order to secure the payment of attorney's fees in a pending marital dissolution proceeding. The wife executed a promissory note and a deed of trust for both parcels, and the husband had not joined in the execution of these instruments. The defendant law firm demurred, claiming that the deed of trust was enforceable against the wife's one-half interest in the property. The trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend and entered a judgment of dismissal; it also denied the husband's motion for reconsideration. The court of appeal reversed the judgment, and the California Supreme Court then granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. It held that under former Civ. Code § 5127 [now see Fam. Code § 1102(a)], both spouses must consent to the transfer during marriage of community real property. It further stated that when a nonconsenting spouse, during the marriage, timely challenges a transfer made in violation of that section, the transfer is voidable in its entirety. Thus, the husband was able to invalidate the encumbrance in its entirety. In reaching this conclusion, the Court discussed the significance of 1975 legislation that granted both spouses equal management and control of community property [now see Fam. Code §§ 1100, 1102] (54 Cal. 3d 26, 30) .

Before 1975 the law was clear. If an action was brought under former Civ. Code § 5127 [now see Fam. Code § 1102(a)] to set aside an unauthorized transfer after dissolution or after the transferor spouse's death, the nonconsenting spouse could recover his or her one-half interest in the transferred property. If, however, the action was brought during marriage, the nonconsenting spouse could set the transfer aside in its entirety. After 1975, a split of authority developed. Mitchell v. American Reserve Ins. Co. (1980) 110 Cal. App. 3d 220, 167 Cal. Rptr. 760 , held that if a spouse makes an unauthorized transfer of community real property, a nonconsenting spouse may recover only his or her one-half interest in the property transferred (54 Cal. 3d 26, 35-36) . On the other hand, Andrade Development Co. v. Martin (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 330, 187 Cal. Rptr. 863 held that a nonconsenting spouse may void a spouse's unauthorized transfer in its entirety, because California prefers a rule that protects each spouse from the other's unauthorized acts that defeat community real property interests. The Court concluded that Andrade is correct (54 Cal. 3d 26, 36-39) .

Either party may unilaterally encumber his or her interest in community real property to pay reasonable attorney's fees in order to retain or maintain counsel in a proceeding for dissolution of marriage, for nullity of marriage, or for legal separation of the parties [Fam. Code §§ 1102(e), 2033(a)], provided that all notice requirements for recordation of the encumbrance are satisfied [see Fam. Code §§ 1102(e), 2033(a), (b)]. This encumbrance is known as a "family law attorney's real property lien" and attaches only to the encumbering spouse's interest in the community real property [Fam. Code §§ 1102(e), 2033(a)].

Fam. Code § 1102(e) and 2033 appear to abrogate Droeger, above, to the extent that it applies to an encumbrance of community real property for the payment of attorney's fees in an action under the Family Code. Nonetheless, the Droeger ruling appears to remain intact with respect to the Court's general analysis of consent issues.

In In re Marriage of Brooks & Robinson (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624, a husband sought a declaration that certain real property his wife sold shortly before he filed a petition for dissolution of their marriage was community property, and requested that the sale be set aside because he had not joined in the conveyance. The court rejected the husband's claims and entered judgment for the purchaser of the property, which was affirmed on appeal. The court noted that the wife took title to the property solely in her name without reference to her marriage to the husband, and that the husband had agreed that title would be held in the wife's name (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 179-180).

The appellate court acknowledged that a conveyance in violation of Fam. Code § 1102(a) is generally voidable by the spouse who did not join in the conveyance. It also noted, however, that under Fam. Code § 1102(c)(2), a deed to community real property given to a third-party purchaser is presumed valid if the purchaser received the deed in good faith without knowledge of the marriage relationship. In addition, a bona fide purchaser for value that acquires its interest in real property without notice of another's asserted rights in the property takes that property free of these unknown rights. Because the purchaser in this case was a bona fide purchaser of the property, it therefore acquired its title free of the husband's claim (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 183) .

The appellate court also held that the husband did not have an interest in the property as a matter of law (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 184) . When the wife took title to the property solely in her name, a presumption arose that the property was her separate property (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 186). The fact that the property was acquired during marriage does not rebut the form-of-title presumption. The act of taking title to property in the name of one spouse during marriage with the other spouse's consent effectively removes that property from the general community property presumption, and the property is presumably the separate property of the spouse in whose name title is taken (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 186-187). The party asserting that title is other than as stated in the deed has the burden of proving that fact by clear and convincing evidence. The form-of-title presumption can be overcome only by clear and convincing evidence of an agreement or understanding between the parties that the title specified in the deed is not what the parties intended (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 189-190). The husband presented no such evidence in this case. The presumption was not overcome by tracing the source of the funds used to purchase the property to the husband's employment earnings, by the fact that the parties were married at the time the wife acquired the property, by the husband's unilateral belief that the property belonged to both of them, or by the husband's assertion that title was taken in the wife's name to facilitate financing of the property (169 Cal. App. 4th 176, 190-192) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unilateral Transfer Is Voidable in Its Entirety During Marriage

In Hyatt v. Mabie (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 541, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 447 , a husband encumbered community real property with a second deed of trust without the wife's knowledge or consent. The existence of the encumbrance was not disclosed at trial. The judgment of dissolution awarded the real property to both parties as tenants in common, ordered that the property be sold and the first deed of trust paid, and divided the net proceeds equally between the parties. The wife discovered the existence of the second deed of trust four months later, but permitted the encumbrance to be paid through escrow. She then brought suit for reimbursement against the husband and the beneficiaries of the second deed of trust. The appellate court affirmed the trial court's decision against the wife, holding that a nonconsenting spouse's right to invalidate an encumbrance under former Civ. Code § 5127 [now see Fam. Code § 1102(a)] must be exercised during marriage. After dissolution of the community, a nonconsenting spouse's right to void an encumbrance is limited to the extent of his or her interest in the property. Since, in this case, the encumbrance did not affect the wife's interest in the property, her only remedy was to move for a modification of the dissolution judgment. The court held that, by allowing the encumbrance to be paid through escrow, the wife had waived this remedy (24 Cal. App. 4th 541, 547) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
B. Transfer Of Property By Spouse Without Consent Of Other Spouse
1. Remedies Of Nonconsenting Spouse

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.61

§ 114.61 Opposing Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone, on Basis That Action Is Barred by Statute of Limitations [Fam. Code § 1102(d)]--Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [DEMURRER or MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE ONE-YEAR LIMITATION PERIOD TO BRING AN ACTION TO AVOID AN INSTRUMENT AFFECTING COMMUNITY REAL PROPERTY STANDING IN THE NAME OF ONE SPOUSE ALONE IS INAPPLICABLE IF THE INSTRUMENT IS NOT RECORDED.

A. One-Year Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded. A spouse is not barred by the one-year limitation period of Family Code Section 1102(d) from bringing an action to avoid an instrument affecting community real property standing in the name of the other spouse alone if the instrument is not recorded (Waldeck v. Hedden (1928) 89 Cal. App. 485, 491, 265 P. 340).

[Optional] B. Filing of Other Documents Is Insufficient to Commence Limitations Period. The filing of documents, such as a complaint or lis pendens, other than the instrument affecting community real property, is not recognized as a substitute for the recordation of the instrument itself for the purpose of commencing the one-year period of limitations (Waldeck v. Hedden (1928) 89 Cal. App. 485, 491, 265 P. 340).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in an action by a spouse to quiet title to community real property and to cancel an instrument executed solely by the other spouse in opposition to a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10] or motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c] which raises the one-year statute of limitations of Fam. Code § 1102(d) [see § 114.81]. The ground of the contention is that the limitation period is inapplicable if the instrument sought to be canceled was not recorded.

Optional paragraph B may be used to overcome the contention that the limitations period began by filing a complaint or lis pendens, rather than by recording the instrument that is sought to be canceled.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of complaint to cancel an instrument affecting title to real property held in the name of one spouse only, see Ch. 122, Community Property in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms of complaints to quiet title and to cancel an instrument generally, see Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments and Ch. 482, Quieting Title in that set. For forms for general use to oppose the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set. For forms to oppose the applicability of statutes of limitations, see Ch. 345, Limitation of Actions .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to actions to quiet title and to cancel an instrument affecting title, see Ch. 198, Quieting Title in this set. For forms related to the termination of an action without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments . For memoranda of points and authorities opposing the applicability of statutes of limitation, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.81 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] One-Year Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

In Waldeck v. Hedden (1928) 89 Cal. App. 485, 265 P. 340 , plaintiffs brought an action for specific performance of an exchange agreement between themselves and the defendants, a married couple. In the agreement, defendant husband had agreed to exchange several pieces of real property in Los Angeles and $5,000 for plaintiff's stock ranch in Tulare County and personal property on the ranch. The trial court gave judgment to plaintiffs for partial specific performance of the exchange agreement, including a parcel that the trial court found to be the community property of defendants. Defendants appealed. Defendant wife contended, in part, that the trial court erred in decreeing specific performance with regard to the community property because she had not joined in signing the exchange agreement.

The court of appeal reversed, holding in part that the exchange agreement was not enforceable regarding the community property unless the wife had joined in execution of the agreement. It found that the wife was not estopped from setting aside the exchange agreement merely because she had yielded possession with the defendant. Furthermore, the defendant's spouse was not barred by the one-year limitation imposed by former Civ. Code § 172 [now see Fam. Code § 1102(d)] because the exchange agreement was not recorded. The court stated that the statute was plain and specific in requiring the recording of the instrument affecting the community real property interest, such as the exchange agreement, in order to begin the period of limitation. It did not recognize the filing of other documents, such as the complaint and lis pendens, as substitutes for the recordation (89 Cal. App. 485, 491) .

[b] Filing of Other Documents Is Insufficient to Commence Limitations Period

The facts and procedural background of Waldeck v. Hedden (1928) 89 Cal. App. 485, 265 P. 340 , are set forth under § 114.61[3][a]. The court of appeal concluded that the defendant's spouse was not barred by the one-year limitation period imposed by statute because the operative instrument, an exchange agreement, was not recorded. It reasoned that filing of documents other than the instrument affecting community real property, such as the complaint and lis pendens, is not recognized as a substitute for the recordation of the instrument itself for the purpose of commencing the one-year period of limitation (89 Cal. App. 485, 491) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] One-Year Limitation Inapplicable if Deed Not Recorded

In Gantner v. Johnson (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 869, 79 Cal. Rptr. 381 , the husband quitclaimed his interest in real property to the sellers after defaulting on a conditional land sale contract. After the husband's death, his widow sought to set aside the quitclaim on the ground that she had not joined in the conveyance. The court held that the husband's transfer of the real property was valid only as to his one-half interest therein. Since neither the conditional sales agreement nor the quitclaim deed had been recorded at the time the widow brought her action to set aside the transfer, the one-year limitation period [now see Fam. Code § 1102(d)] did not preclude her from having the quitclaim deed set aside as to her one half of the community interest in the real property (274 Cal. App. 2d 869, 878) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
B. Transfer Of Property By Spouse Without Consent Of Other Spouse
1. Remedies Of Nonconsenting Spouse

11-114 California Points & Authorities §§ 114.62-114.79

[Reserved]

§§ 114.62[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
B. Transfer Of Property By Spouse Without Consent Of Other Spouse
2. Remedies Of Transferor Spouse

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.80

§ 114.80 Supporting Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone [Fam. Code § 1102]--Nonjoinder of Transferor Spouse

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION BECAUSE IT FAILS TO JOIN PLAINTIFF'S SPOUSE AS A DEFENDANT.

A. Transferring Spouse as Necessary Party. In a spouse's action to avoid the transfer of community real property standing in the name of the other spouse alone, the transferor spouse is a necessary party, and the failure to join that spouse is a ground for granting a demurrer (see Vanasek v. Pokorny (1925) 73 Cal. App. 312, 319-321, 238 P. 798 ; see also Fam. Code § 1102).

B. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object to the complaint on the ground that there is a defect or misjoinder of parties (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)). If the ground for the objection to the complaint appears on the face thereof, or from any matter of which the court is required to take judicial notice, the objection may be taken by demurrer (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint by a spouse seeking to avoid an instrument affecting community real property if the transferor spouse has not been joined as a party to the action. Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of demurrer based on a spouse's failure to join the other spouse in an action to avoid an instrument affecting community real property, see Ch. 122, Community Property in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms of demurrers generally, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to demurrers, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings . For memoranda of points and authorities relating to joinder of parties, see Ch. 168, Parties .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Transferring Spouse as Necessary Party

In Vanasek v. Pokorny (1925) 73 Cal. App. 312, 238 P. 798 , plaintiff commenced an action to quiet title to certain real property against a married couple and a third defendant (Strybl). The property, which was in the name of the husband but was community property, had been conveyed by the husband to Strybl without the wife's consent. The wife answered the complaint, denying plaintiff's title to the property, and also filed a cross-complaint against Strybl to avoid her husband's deed to him. Styrbl demurred to the cross-complaint, in part, on the ground that the wife failed to join the husband as a necessary party. The trial court overruled the demurrer and subsequently found the deed void as to Strybl, who was found to have had knowledge of the marriage. The court canceled the deed and quieted title to the property in the wife. Strybl appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment against him. The court reasoned that the husband was a necessary party to the cross action so that (1) he would be bound by a judgment determining the character of the property transferred, (2) there would be a complete determination of the controversy, and (3) any title adjudged to revest in him could be revested. The court stated that, because the husband was a necessary party to the action, Strybl's demurrer on the ground of his nonjoinder was proper and should have been sustained (73 Cal. App. 312, 319-321) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 114 HUSBAND AND WIFE
PART II. FORMS
B. Transfer Of Property By Spouse Without Consent Of Other Spouse
2. Remedies Of Transferor Spouse

11-114 California Points & Authorities § 114.81

§ 114.81 Supporting Demurrer [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(d)] to Complaint to Quiet Title [Code Civ. Proc. § 760.020] to, and Cancel Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412] Affecting, Interest in Community Real Property Held in One Spouse's Name Alone [Fam. Code § 1102]--Action Not Commenced Within One Year of Recordation of Instrument [Fam. Code § 1102(d)]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S _____ [DEMURRER or MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE ACTION IS BARRED BY THE ONE-YEAR LIMITATION PERIOD CONTAINED IN SECTION 1102(d) OF THE FAMILY CODE.

A. One Year in Which to Commence Action. No action to avoid any instrument affecting community real property standing of record in the name of either spouse alone, and executed by the spouse alone, may be commenced after the expiration of one year from the filing for record of the instrument in the recorder's office in the county in which the land is situated [Fam. Code § 1102(d)].

B. Limitation Period May Be Raised by Demurrer if Bar Appears on Face of Complaint. The limitation period of Family Code Section 1102(d) may be raised by demurrer if the complaint shows on its face that the action is barred, otherwise the bar may be raised by summary judgment (see Brown v. Brown (1932) 125 Cal. App. 429, 435, 13 P.2d 1004 , decided under former Civ. Code § 5127; see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in an action by a spouse to quiet title to community real property and to cancel an instrument executed solely by the other spouse when the action was not commenced within one year from the recordation of the instrument [Fam. Code § 1102(d)]. They may be submitted in support of a demurrer [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10] or motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of demurrer based on a spouse's failure to commence an action to avoid an instrument affecting community real property within one year of recordation of the instrument, see Ch. 122, Community Property in California Forms of Pleading and Practice. For forms generally related to dispositions without trial, see Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , Ch. 375, Motions to Strike , Ch. 389, Nonsuit and Motions for Judgment , and Ch. 537, Summary Judgment in that set.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For memoranda of points and authorities generally related to disposition without trial, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments in this set. For memoranda of points and authorities supporting the applicability of statutes of limitation, see Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities set out in § 114.61 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitation Period May Be Raised by Demurrer if Bar Appears on Face of Complaint

In Brown v. Brown (1932) 125 Cal. App. 429, 13 P.2d 1004 , a wife commenced an action under former Civ. Code § 172a [now see Fam. Code § 1102(d)] against her husband and his grantee to cancel a deed executed by the husband in favor of his son. The property covered by the deed was alleged to be community real property of the plaintiff and her husband. The deed had been properly recorded. The son demurred to the complaint, in part, for uncertainty in failing to set forth facts from which it could be ascertained whether record title was held by the parties jointly or by the husband alone. His argument was that if title was held by the husband alone, the one-year limitation period of the statute was applicable, and that therefore the complaint was defective for failure to plead facts from which the applicability of the limitation could be determined. The trial court overruled the demurrer and, when the son failed to answer, entered judgment decreeing the deed void.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating in part that the complaint was not uncertain. The court held that the limitation period of the statute could be raised by demurrer if the complaint showed on its face that the action was barred. However, since the complaint did not show on its face that title to the real property stood in the husband's name alone, it could not be determined from the face of the complaint that the action was barred and, therefore, the demurrer was not well taken. The failure of a complaint to allege facts that would enable a defendant to raise the bar of the statute by demurrer, rather than by answer, is not in itself a valid ground for demurrer (125 Cal. App. 429, 434-436) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities 115.syn

§ 115.syn Synopsis to Chapter 115: INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION

§ 115.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 115.02 Governing Law

§ 115.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

§ 115.04 Indemnity and Contribution Distinguished

§ 115.05 Express and Implied Indemnity

§ 115.06 Total and Partial Indemnity

§ 115.07 Effect of Good-Faith Settlement

§ 115.08 Overpayment by Settling Defendant

§ 115.09 Effect of Fair Responsibility Act of 1986

§ 115.10 Proceedings to Enforce Indemnity Rights

§ 115.11 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 115.12 Related Points And Authorities Chapters

§§ 115.13-115.29 [Reserved]

§ 115.30 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Parties May Contract for Total Indemnity, and Principles of Comparative Negligence Do Not Apply to Express Indemnity Agreements

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contractual Right to Total Indemnity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contractual Right to Total Indemnity

§ 115.31 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Providing for Indemnity Against Indemnitee's Own Negligence Does Not Violate Public Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Public Policy

§ 115.32 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--General Indemnity Agreement Provides Indemnity for Indemnitee's Passive Negligence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Indemnity Under General Indemnity Agreement Not Barred By Indemnitee's Passive Negligence

[b] Passive Negligence Defined

[c] Nonfeasance

[d] Landowner's Failure to Fulfill Duty of Care Imposed By Law

§ 115.33 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Not Expressly Providing for Indemnitee's Negligence May Be Construed to Extend to Any

Negligence of Indemnitee If Parties So Intended

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intention of Parties Controls

[b] Indemnity for Active Negligence Under General Indemnity Clause

[c] Obvious Risk Within Contemplation of Parties and Bargained for by Indemnitee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intention of Parties Controls

§ 115.34 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Written Indemnity Agreement Is Sufficient to Impose Indemnity Obligation on Injured Person's Employer [Lab. Code § 3864]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Reference to Employees Not Required

[b] Unnamed Third Party Beneficiary May Enforce Written Indemnity Agreement Against Employer

§ 115.35 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause Providing for Indemnity Unless Liability Results From Indemnitee's Sole Negligence or Willful Misconduct is Valid and Enforceable if Parties Are Concurrently Negligent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Excepting Sole Negligence and Willful Misconduct of Indemnitee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agreement Excepting Sole Negligence and Willful Misconduct of Indemnitee

§ 115.36 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnity Clause At Issue Is One Expressly Excepted From Public-Policy Bar to Enforceability [Civ. Code §§ 2782, 2784.5]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement on Liability for Design Defect

§ 115.37 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Collateral Estoppel Bars Relitigation of Indemnitor's Liability to Third Person if Indemnitor Was Party to Prior Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relitigation of Indemnitor's Negligence

§ 115.38 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee Was Justified In Incurring Attorneys' Fees to Defend Claim Covered by Indemnity Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Justification for Indemnitee's Defense

[b] Indemnitor's Refusal to Defend Action

[c] Conflict of Interest

[d] Liability to Provide Defense When No Liability for Indemnity

[e] Underlying Complaint Need Not Specifically Allege Negligence of Indemnitor

[f] Indemnitee's Failure to Tender Defense

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Indemnitor's Refusal to Defend Action

§ 115.39 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee May Not Recover for Loss That Is Beyond Terms of Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Losses Beyond Scope of Indemnity Agreement

§ 115.40 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Is General and Does Not Provide Indemnity for Active Negligence of Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Active and Passive Negligence

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Strict Construction of Indemnity Agreement Against Indemnitee

[b] General Indemnity Clause

[c] Active Negligence

[d] Knowledge of or Acquiescence in Act as Active Negligence

[e] Strict Liability as Active Negligence

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Active Negligence

§ 115.41 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee's Active Negligence Was Adjudicated in Prior Action and Collateral Estoppel Bars Relitigation of Issue

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Negligence

[b] Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Character of Negligence as Active

§ 115.42 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause in Construction Contract [Civ. Code § 2782] or Contract for Hauling, Trucking, or Cartage [Civ. Code § 2784.5] Providing for Indemnity Based on Indemnitee's Sole Negligence or Willful Misconduct Is Against Public Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Definition of Construction Contract

[c] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Void Indemnity Provisions in Construction Contracts

§ 115.42A Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause in Residential Construction Contract [Civ. Code § 2782] Providing for Indemnity of Builder or Contractor by Subcontractor for Negligence of Builder or Contractor Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

§ 115.43 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity

Agreement--Agreement Does Not Provide for Recovery of Costs of Defense Voluntarily Assumed by Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cost of Indemnitee's Voluntary Defense of Third-Party Claim Not Recoverable

§ 115.44 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Licensing Statute Bars Recovery by Unlicensed Contractors/Developers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Express Contractual Indemnity Unavailable Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor

§§ 115.45-115.59 [Reserved]

§ 115.60 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Tortfeasor May Seek Comparative Indemnity To Apportion Liability In Proportion to Fault

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Partial Indemnity Authorized

[b] Tortfeasor's Right to Assign Indemnity Cause of Action

[c] Award of Damages Directly to Assignee

§ 115.61 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Subsequent Medical Malpractice Tortfeasor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Subsequent Medical Malpractice as Basis for Comparative Indemnity

§ 115.62 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Limitations Period for Filing Indemnity Action Against Medical Malpractice Tortfeasor Tolled by Notice Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[c] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] MICRA Tolling Period Applies to Non-MICRA Limitations Period Applicable in Equitable Indemnity Action

§ 115.63 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Comparative Indemnity Is Not Precluded by Indemnity Agreement With Limited Scope

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Indemnity Agreement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Indemnity Agreement

§ 115.64 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Shortfall Is to Be Apportioned According to Comparative-Fault Ratio of Remaining Codefendants

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Shortfall Limited to Economic Damages

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Shortfall Caused by Insolvent Tortfeasor

[b] Shortfall Caused Because Comparative Indemnity Is Barred Against Tortfeasor Who Entered Into Good-Faith Settlement

§ 115.65 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Applies Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Cotortfeasors

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Tortfeasors

[b] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Tortfeasors

§ 115.66 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Nonsettling Concurrent Tortfeasors in Favor of Settling Tortfeasors

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Settlements and Proposition 51

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right of Settling Tortfeasor to Pursue Claim for Comparative Indemnity

§ 115.67 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Tortfeasor Not Sued by Tort Victim in Favor of Defendant Tortfeasor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint for Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued By Tort Victim

[b] Separate Action for Comparative Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued by Tort Victim

[c] Comparative Indemnity Available Despite Statute of Limitations Bar to Tort Victim's Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Despite Statute of Limitations Bar to Tort Victim's Action

§ 115.68 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Collateral Estoppel Principles Do Not Preclude Comparative Indemnity Despite Finding in Pretrial Proceeding That Indemnitor Was Not Liable to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Different Theory of Liability

[b] Lack of Privity

§ 115.69 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--No Right of Comparative Indemnity Exists If Parties Are Not Jointly and Severally Liable for Loss Incurred

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability Required

[b] No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitor Is Not Liable to Tort Victim

[c] Lack of Duty to Tort Victim

[d] No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitee Is Not Liable to Tort Victim

[e] No Right of Indemnity From Tort Victim

[f] Equitable Indemnity Not Available to Malpractice Tortfeasor

[g] Contractual Duties Owed by Indemnitor to Tort Victim Not Basis for Comparative Indemnity to Tortfeasor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability Required

[b] Contractual Duties Owed by Indemnitor to Tort Victim Not Basis for Comparative Indemnity to Tortfeasor

§ 115.70 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--No Right of Comparative Indemnity Exists if Neither Party Is at Fault

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Indemnity Without Fault

§ 115.71 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Statutory Immunity from Liability Precludes Assignment of Comparative Fault for Non-Economic Damages [Civ. Code § 1714.45]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right of Indemnity for Non-Economic Damages if Indemnitor Is Statutorily Immune From Liability

§ 115.71A Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Party Liable for Intentional Tort Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages Based on Negligence of Another Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Intentional Tort Not Subject to Apportionment

§ 115.71B Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Party Vicariously Liable Under Doctrine of Nondelegable Duty for Negligence of Another Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hirer Liable for Nondelegable Duty Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages

§ 115.72 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Should Be Denied Because of Public Policy or Equitable Considerations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

[b] Equitable Considerations

[c] Attorney-Client Relationship

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Equitable Considerations

[b] Attorney-Client Relationship

§ 115.73 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Not Available Because Parties Have Entered Into Express Indemnity Agreement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rights Determined by Contract

§ 115.74 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Claim for Comparative Indemnity Against Injured Person's Employer Is Barred Absent Written Agreement [Lab. Code § 3864]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lab. Code § 3864 Applies to Comparative Indemnity

[b] Requirement That Agreement Be Signed Before Injury

[c] Agreement Not Executed by Performance

[d] Lab. Code § 3864 Precludes Indemnity From Employer's Public Liability Carrier

§ 115.75 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of

Comparative Indemnity--Collateral Estoppel Principles Preclude Comparative Indemnity Because Indemnitor Was Found to Be Not Liable to Plaintiff in Pretrial Proceeding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Precluded by Collateral Estoppel

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Precluded by Collateral Estoppel

§ 115.76 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity for Amounts Paid by Indemnitee's Insurer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Indemnity for Amounts Paid by Insurer

§§ 115.77-115.89 [Reserved]

§ 115.90 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right to Total Indemnity May Exist Under Principles of Comparative Fault

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Total Indemnity

[b] Vicarious Liability

§ 115.91 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity May Be Implied From Breach of Contractual Duty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Contractual Indemnity as Form of Equitable Indemnity

[b] Negligent Performance of Contractual Duty

[c] Total Indemnity Implied From Contract

§ 115.92 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity in Favor of Public Entity Indemnitee May Be Implied From Licensor-Licensee Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Licensor-Licensee Relationship With Public Entity as Basis for Implied Indemnity

§ 115.93 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Against Employee or Agent and in Favor of Indemnitee Who Is Employer or Principal Arises From Employment or Agency Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employer-Employee Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

[b] Principal-Agent Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

§ 115.94 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Against Employer or Principal and in Favor of Indemnitee Who Is Employee or Agent Arises From Employment or Agency Relationship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employee's Right to Indemnity From Employer

[b] Agent-Principal Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Employee's Right to Indemnity From Employer

§ 115.95 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Is Available From Intentional Tortfeasor in Favor of Negligent Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Total Indemnity From Intentional Tortfeasor

§ 115.96 Supporting Motion by Indemnitee for Award of Attorney's Fees in Action for Implied Total Indemnity [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending or Bringing Third-Party Suit Allowed to Person Who Prevails on Claim for Implied Indemnity

[b] Defendant Prevailing in Underlying Action Is Party Prevailing on Claim for Implied Indemnity

[c] Defendant Found Liable as Matter of Law for Acts of Indemnitor in Underlying Action Is Without Fault

[d] "Principal Case" Is Action in Which Defendant Incurred Attorney's Fees

§ 115.97 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Indemnitor Cannot be Liable for Implied Contractual Indemnity When Indemnitor Has Complete Defense Against Liability to Injured Third Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Contractual Indemnity Barred When Indemnitor Cannot be Held Directly Liable to Injured Third Party

§§ 115.98- 115.109 [Reserved]

§ 115.110 Supporting Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Party to Joint or Joint and Several Obligation Has Paid More Than Proportionate Share of Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contribution Among Obligors

§ 115.111 Supporting Motion for Contribution [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883]--Nontort Judgment Debtor Who Has Satisfied Judgment May Seek Contribution from Judgment Debtor Who Is Jointly Liable for Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proportionate Liability

§ 115.112 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--No Showing of Payment on Underlying Joint or Joint and Several Obligation in Excess of Proportionate Share

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Payment

[b] Payment of No More Than Proportionate Share

§ 115.113 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Obligation Is Several Only and Not Joint

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Contribution on Several Obligation

[b] Several Obligation

§ 115.114 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Party From Whom Contribution Is Sought Has Paid Proportionate Share of Joint Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payment of Proportionate Share

§§ 115.115- 115.129 [Reserved]

§ 115.130 Supporting Motion for Contribution [Code Civ. Proc. § 878]--Tort Judgment Debtor Is Entitled to Contribution From Cotortfeasor Judgment Debtors According to Comparative-Fault Principles

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Motion for Contribution or Action for Comparative Indemnity

[c] Service of Notice of Motion and Supporting Papers

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principles of Comparative Fault Applicable to Contribution

§§ 115.131-115.149 [Reserved]

§ 115.150 Supporting Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)] Bars Claim for Comparative Indemnity or Contribution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Applicability of Form to Contribution

[c] Good-Faith Settlements and Proposition 51

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Effect of Good-Faith Settlement

[b] "Joint Tortfeasors" Defined

[c] Claims Barred If Essentially Indemnification Claims

[d] Insurer May Be Precluded From Seeking Equitable Indemnity

[e] Good Faith of Out-of-State Settlements May Be Determined

[f] No Requirement That Tortfeasors Be Defendants in Single Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Claims Barred if Essentially Indemnification Claims

§ 115.151 Supporting Contention That Good Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c)] Bars Claim for Total Comparative Indemnity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Claim for Total Indemnity

§ 115.152 Supporting Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Settlement Made After Jury in Bifurcated Trial Determines Liability but Before Jury Assesses Damages Is "Before Verdict or Judgment"

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Made Before Jury in Bifurcated Trial Assesses Damages Based on Finding of Liability Is "Before Verdict or Judgment"

§ 115.153 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6] Does Not Bar Action for Express Contractual Indemnity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Settlement Does Not Bar Right to Express Contractual Indemnity

§ 115.154 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement Made After Verdict or Judgment Does Not Bar Indemnity Rights [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Is Required to Be Made Before Verdict or Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Settlement Is Required to Be Made Before Verdict or Judgment

§ 115.155 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6] Is Not Binding on Party Who Had No Opportunity to Be Heard

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Finding of Good-Faith Settlement Not Binding on Unnamed Joint Tortfeasor or Co-Obligor Who Had No Opportunity to Be Heard

§ 115.156 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement Is Not In Reasonable Range of Settling Party's Liability

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Burden of Proof and Evidentiary Material

[c] Applicability of Form to Contribution

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable-Range Requirement

[b] Settlement Involving Dismissal Based On Determination of Lack of Liability

[c] Computation Involving Error of Law

[d] Settling Defendant's Potential Culpability Should be Considered

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable-Range Requirement

[b] Computation Involving Error of Law

§ 115.157 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement Is Aimed At Injuring Interests of Nonsettling Parties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Good Faith Extends to Nonsettling Parties

[b] Intent to Injure Nonsettling Defendants

[c] Tactical Considerations Unrelated to Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Injure Nonsettling Defendants

§ 115.158 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Sliding-Scale Agreement Must Meet Tech-Bilt Standards

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sliding Scale Settlement Agreements Must Meet Tech-Bilt Standards

§ 115.159 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settling Parties Have Not Provided Sufficient Information Regarding Allocation of Settlement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Information Regarding Settlement's Apportionment of Damages

[b] Settlement Sought to Be Confirmed Cannot Be Withheld on Confidentiality Grounds

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inadequate Information Regarding Settlement's Apportionment of Damages

§ 115.160 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Amount Represents Reasonable Apportionment Based on Information Available At Time of Settlement

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time of Evaluation

[4] Additional Authorities

§ 115.161 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement With Underinsured Judgment-Proof Tortfeasor for Liability Policy Limits Is in Good Faith Regardless of Whether Settlement Is in Reasonable Range

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Financial Condition of Settling Party Is Factor to Be Considered

[b] Underinsured and Judgment-Proof Tortfeasors

§ 115.162 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Provision Requiring Settling Tortfeasor to Participate at Trial Does Not Preclude Finding of Good Faith

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settling Defendant May Participate in Trial

[b] Participation at Trial by Settling Defendants Does Not Deprive Non Settling Defendant's of Fair Trial

§ 115.163 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Payment Was Made Voluntarily, Without Regard to Legal Liability

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Indemnity for Voluntary Payment

[b] No Contribution for Voluntary Payment

§ 115.164 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement Does Not Constitute Voluntary Payment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Settlement Is Not Voluntary Payment

[b] Settlement Following Refusal of Tendered Defense

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Settlement Following Refusal of Tendered Defense

§ 115.165 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Waiver of Statute of Limitations Does Not Constitute Voluntary Payment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Valid Waiver of Statute of Limitations Does Not Result in Voluntary Payment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.01

§ 115.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains memoranda for use with regard to the loss-sharing or loss-shifting doctrines of indemnity and contribution. Subpart A of Part II relates to express indemnity agreements, and contains forms of memoranda supporting [see §§ 115.30 -115.38] and opposing [see §§ 115.39 -115.44] the contention that an indemnitee may recover under an express contractual indemnity agreement.

Subpart B of Part II relates to comparative indemnity, or implied equitable indemnity. It contains forms of memoranda supporting [see §§ 115.60 -115.68] and opposing [see §§ 115.69 -115.76] the contention that an indemnitee may recover partial indemnity under a theory of comparative indemnity. It also contains forms of memoranda supporting [see §§ 115.90 -115.95] the contention that an indemnitee may recover total indemnity under a theory of comparative indemnity, and a form of memorandum supporting a motion by the indemnitee for an award of attorney's fees in an action for total indemnity [see § 115.96].

Subpart C of Part II relates to contribution. It contains forms of memoranda supporting [see § 115.110] and opposing [see §§ 115.112 -115.114] the contention that a nontort obligor is entitled to contribution, and a form of memorandum supporting a motion for contribution under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883 by a nontort obligor [see § 115.111]. It also contains a form of memorandum supporting a motion by a tort judgment debtor for contribution under Code Civ. Proc. § 878 [see § 115.130].

Subpart D of Part II considers the effect of a settlement entered into by the plaintiff and one or more, but less than all, defendants on a claim for indemnity or contribution. It contains forms of memoranda supporting [see §§ 115.150 -115.152] and opposing [see §§ 115.153 -115.155] the contention that a good-faith settlement precludes recovery under a claim for indemnity or contribution, and forms of memoranda supporting [see §§ 115.156 -115.159] and opposing [see §§ 115.160 -115.162] a motion for judicial confirmation of the good faith of a settlement. It also contains forms of memoranda supporting [see § 115.163] and opposing [see §§ 115.164, 115.165] the contention that a "voluntary payment" precludes recovery under a claim for indemnity or contribution.

Although an insurance policy is an express indemnity agreement, the many requirements of the Insurance Code make insurance policies different from other indemnity agreements. For discussion of insurance contracts, see Ch. 120,

Insurance . Bonds and guarantee agreements are covered in Ch. 222, Suretyship .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawTypes of ContractsGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityNoncontractual IndemnityTortsProcedureSettlementsMultipartiesGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureSettlementsMultipartiesContribution

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.02

§ 115.02 Governing Law

Civ. Code § 2772 et seq. governs the interpretation of express indemnity agreements. The interpretation of express indemnity agreements is also governed by Civ. Code § 1549 et seq., the statutes applicable to interpretation of contracts generally. Public-policy limitations on contracts for indemnity are set forth in Civ. Code §§ 1668 (contracts exempting one from liability for fraud, willful injury, or violation of law), 2773 (agreement to indemnify against unlawful act), 2782-2782.5 (construction contracts), and 2784.5 (hauling, trucking, or cartage contracts).

The right of comparative indemnity (also referred to as implied equitable indemnity) is a judicially created doctrine. It has its antecedents in the landmark California Supreme Court case of Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 828-829, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , which abolished contributory negligence as a complete bar to recovery in California, and introduced the concept of comparative negligence in its place. Subsequently, in American Motorcycle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], the California Supreme Court restructured the right of implied equitable indemnity from a method to effect a complete shift of loss depending on relative degrees of culpability to a method to achieve equitable apportionment of loss among multiple tortfeasors based on principles of comparative fault.

A general right of contribution among joint obligors is provided for in Civ. Code § 1432. Contribution among joint judgment debtors is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875-883. Contribution among judgment debtors other than joint tortfeasors is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 881-883.

Contribution among joint tortfeasor judgment debtors is governed by Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875-880. However, various of these statutes predate the advent of comparative negligence and comparative equitable indemnity as set forth in American Motorcycle Association v. Superior Court [see, e.g., Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875, 876]. The continuing validity of these statutes to the extent that they conflict with principles of comparative negligence and comparative indemnity is questionable [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-328, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 ; see also §§ 115.04, 115.130[3]]. The effect of a release of one of two or more joint debtors on contribution rights is stated in Civ. Code § 1543.

The Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51), which abolishes the rule of joint and several liability with regard to certain "noneconomic" damages, is found in Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5 [see § 115.09].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawContract InterpretationGeneral OverviewContracts LawDebtor & Creditor RelationsTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesContributory NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.03

§ 115.03 Page Limits on Memoranda

Generally, a supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length, or, in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs § 1.05.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesIndemnityTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsContributionGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.04

§ 115.04 Indemnity and Contribution Distinguished

Indemnity is an obligation resting on one party (the indemnitor) to make good a loss or damage that another party (the indemnitee) has incurred [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; see Civ. Code § 2772]. Indemnity may operate to effect a complete shift of loss from the indemnitee to the indemnitor, or it may operate to effect a partial shifting of loss according to the respective shares of comparative fault of the various tortfeasors [Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; see § 115.06]. In contrast, contribution generally distributes a loss equally among all who are liable, each bearing a pro rata share [Herrero v. Atkinson (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 73, 38 Cal. Rptr. 490] . For example, if there are two judgment debtors, under contribution, each would ultimately pay half of the judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 876]. Under indemnity, the loss would either be entirely shifted from one to the other, or each would bear the percent of the loss that corresponded to that defendant's percentage of fault as found by the trier of fact.

Contribution is a right that continues to apply to nontort judgment debtors [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 881-883]. Prior to American Motorcycle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 , a right of contribution existed among tort, as well as nontort judgment debtors [see, e.g., Caterpillar Tractor Co. v. Teledyne Indus., Inc. (1975) 53 Cal. App. 3d 693, 698, 126 Cal. Rptr. 455] , and California statutes continue to provide for a right of contribution among joint tortfeasors [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875-878]. Since the decision in American Motorcycle, most courts have construed the word "contribution" in these statutes as now referring to the right of comparative indemnity created by the California Supreme Court in that case [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-328, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 ; see also § 115.38[3][a]]. Courts have essentially ignored Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a), which continues to provide for pro rata contribution among tortfeasor judgment debtors. However, at least two courts have found Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a) to still provide for a pro rata distribution of loss among tortfeasors in some situations [see Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1378-1381, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673 ; Lamberton v. Rhodes-Jamieson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 748, 750-755, 245 Cal. Rptr. 162] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:

TortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesIndemnityTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsContributionGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.05

§ 115.05 Express and Implied Indemnity

Under California law, a right of indemnity is either express [see § 115.30 et seq.] or implied [see Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97] . In Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1028-1029, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 , the California Supreme Court clarified that all implied indemnity finds its source in equitable considerations brought into play either by contractual language not specifically dealing with indemnification or by the equities of the particular case. That is, all implied indemnity, including implied contractual indemnity, is equitable indemnity [see § 115.60 et seq.]. In Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 , the Court held that there is a single equitable or "comparative" indemnity doctrine in California, which permits partial indemnification on a comparative fault basis, or a total shift of liability, depending on the facts and circumstances of a given case [see § 115.06]. Thus, "implied" indemnity, "equitable" indemnity, and "comparative" indemnity, or any combination of these terms, refers to the same doctrine [see Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1028-1029, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399] . The term "comparative indemnity" is used by the Supreme Court to describe the doctrine and will be the principal one used in this chapter.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesIndemnityTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesIndemnityTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityContractual Indemnity

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.06

§ 115.06 Total and Partial Indemnity

Express contractual indemnity operates to effect a complete shift of the loss from the indemnitee to the indemnitor [Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 676, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399] . By contrast, comparative indemnity is based on principles of comparative fault. A concurrent tortfeasor is entitled to obtain partial indemnity from other concurrent tortfeasors for that part of a settlement or judgment paid to a tort plaintiff that exceeds the indemnitee's comparative share of liability to the plaintiff [American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598] .

Although the operative principle of comparative indemnity is fair allocation and apportionment of loss, comparative indemnity includes the entire range of possible apportionments, from no right to any indemnity to a right to complete indemnity [Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; see Standard Pac. of San Diego v. A.A. Baxter Corp. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 577, 587-588, 222 Cal. Rptr. 106] . Thus, under appropriate circumstances, a complete shift of a loss may be accomplished under either express or comparative indemnity principles (see §§ 115.90 -115.95).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesIndemnityTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesRelease & SettlementTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityContractual Indemnity

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.07

§ 115.07 Effect of Good-Faith Settlement

A tortfeasor may be discharged from any liability for all comparative indemnity claims, including claims seeking total indemnity, by entering into a good-faith settlement with the tort plaintiff [Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1028-1035, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; [Code Civ. Proc. § 877(b); see Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6; see also § 115.151]. However, settlement has no effect on a right to indemnity arising from an express indemnity agreement [Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1032, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; C.L. Peck Contractors v. Superior Court (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 828, 834-835, 205 Cal. Rptr. 754 ; see § 115.153]. An indemnity claim based on statute also survives a good-faith settlement by the statutory indemnitor [Kantor v. Housing Auth. (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 424, 430-431, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 (allowing indemnity claimed under Gov. Code § 825, which provides for public entity's indemnification of employee or former employee)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsIndemnityTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityContractual IndemnityTortsProcedureSettlementsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.08

§ 115.08 Overpayment by Settling Defendant

A defendant who enters into a good-faith settlement for more than what it believes to be its fair share of liability, or for more than what the trier of fact ultimately determines its fair share to be, may seek indemnity from nonsettling tortfeasors [Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 801-802, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399] . A settling defendant who overpays may seek equitable indemnity from concurrent tortfeasors or may assign its indemnity claims to the plaintiff [Bush v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1374, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsProcedureSettlementsMultipartiesGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureSettlementsMultipartiesIndemnityTortsProcedureSettlementsMultipartiesPartial Settlements

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.09

§ 115.09 Effect of Fair Responsibility Act of 1986

Under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51) [Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5], the doctrine of joint and several liability does not extend to all damages. In actions based on principles of comparative fault for personal injury, property damages, or wrongful death, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several only and is not joint, so that each defendant is liable to the plaintiff only for that proportion of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages that is attributable to the defendant under comparative fault principles [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a) ; see Civ. Code § 1431.2(b)(2) (definition of "noneconomic" damages). Although the comparative fault of all tortfeasors must be considered, including the fault of those tortfeasors who are immune from suit [DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 601-604, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238, 828 P.2d 140 (fault of employer must be considered, even though immune from suit under workers' compensation law)], a party who owes no duty of care as a matter of law cannot be assigned a share of fault for purposes of reducing a tortfeasor's liability for noneconomic damages [Richards v. Owens-Illinois, Inc. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 985, 1000-1001, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103, 928 P.2d 1181 (when tobacco companies owed no duty due to statutory protection, asbestos manufacturer could not shift share of fault for causing plaintiff's illness); Ford v. Polaris Industries, Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 755, 778-779, 43 Cal. Rptr. 3d 215 (when party owed no duty under primary assumption of risk doctrine, no portion of fault could be assigned to that party); see also Munoz v. City of Union City (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 173, 182, 55 Cal. Rptr. 3d 393 (in absence of statutory basis for liability, public entity was not tortfeasor and could not be assigned percentage of fault); but see Ovando v. County of Los Angeles (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 42, 71-72, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 415 (fault could be apportioned to public employees who were personally immune from liability for prosecutorial actions under Gov. Code § 821.6, as statute reflects no legislative determination that immune employee has breached no legal duty and bears no "fault" for any injury caused)]. Joint or concurrent tortfeasors remain jointly liable for a plaintiff's economic damages [see Civ. Code §§ 1431, 1431.2(b)(1) (definition of "economic" damages)].

The effect of Proposition 51 on indemnity rights under many circumstances will have to be determined by the courts. Particularly, there are unresolved issues with regard to the effect of settlement on indemnity rights under Proposition 51. For discussion of these issues, see §§ 115.66[2][b] and 115.150[2][c]. As a general principle, prior indemnity law should still remain valid with regard to economic damages. However, there may no longer be indemnity rights with regard to noneconomic damages because defendants are no longer jointly liable for these damages, and indemnity is based on joint and several liability [see Civ. Code § 1431.2(a); Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425, 190

Cal. Rptr. 400 ; see also § 115.69].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
TortsDamagesGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesAssumption of RiskElements & NaturePrimary Assumption of RiskTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceDefensesComparative NegligenceMultiple PartiesGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsJoint & Several Liability

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.10

§ 115.10 Proceedings to Enforce Indemnity Rights

Any party may obtain a determination of indemnity rights by filing a cross complaint for declaratory relief in an action brought by a third party [People ex rel. Dep't of Transp. v. Superior Court (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 744, 758-760, 163 Cal. Rptr. 585, 608 P.2d 673 ; see Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consol., Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 604, 611-612, 189 Cal. Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160 (noting that proper form of cross complaint for indemnity is one for declaratory relief); Rimington v. General Accident Group of Ins. Cos. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 394, 397, 23 Cal. Rptr. 40 (express indemnity by cross complaint); Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10 (permissive cross complaints), 1060 (declaratory relief)]. However, this right to seek indemnity by cross complaint does not alter the general rule that indemnity rights do not accrue until the indemnitee suffers actual loss by paying a claim. Therefore, an indemnitee may also enforce indemnity rights in a subsequent action after paying the claim [E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 ; see Mascarin Prof'l Pharmacy v. Hart (1970) 13 Cal. App. 3d 462, 464, 91 Cal. Rptr. 560] . A party may also bring a separate action for a declaratory judgment as to contractual indemnity rights [Indenco, Inc. v. Evans (1962) 201 Cal. App. 2d 369, 373, 374, 20 Cal. Rptr. 90] .

Thus, either the indemnitee or the indemnitor could be a plaintiff, defendant, cross complainant, or cross defendant under a pleading for declaratory relief. The indemnitee might also be a plaintiff in a separate action for direct enforcement of indemnity rights, in which the indemnitor would be the defendant. Therefore, forms in this chapter have been cast as to be used by either the indemnitee or indemnitor, without further attempt to identify a status as a party.

A party who believes itself to be entitled to total comparative indemnity may be compelled to litigate its indemnity rights at a hearing to confirm a settlement as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. If a settlement is confirmed between the potential indemnitor and the plaintiff, the indemnitee's rights are terminated. Therefore, the indemnitee must be prepared to present at the § 877.6 hearing the facts that justify or require a total shift of the loss to the indemnitor [see Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1034-1035, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 (implied contractual indemnity); Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 814-817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 (vicarious liability); see §§ 115.90 -115.95].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsCross-ComplaintsCivil ProcedureDeclaratory Judgment ActionsState JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.11

§ 115.11 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in indemnity actions and actions seeking contribution among joint nontort judgment debtors, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice. Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender). For forms for use with regard to settlement, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 520, Settlement and Release (Matthew Bender). For consideration of indemnity rights in the insurance field, California Forms of Pleading and Practice, see Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For consideration of indemnity rights under sureties and bonds, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings (Matthew Bender).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsCross-ComplaintsCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.12

§ 115.12 Related Points And Authorities Chapters

For a discussion and sample forms showing how to use the forms in this chapter to draft a complete memorandum or brief, and for further discussion of law and motion procedure and strategy, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms for the various procedural contexts within which the forms in this chapter may be used, see Ch. 61, Cross Complaints , Ch. 67, Declaratory Relief , Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings , and Ch. 221, Summary Judgments . For forms for use with regard to insurance policies, see Ch. 120, Insurance . For forms for use with regard to bonds and guaranty agreements, see Ch. 222, Suretyship .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticePleadingsComplaintsCross-ComplaintsCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresPretrial JudgmentsJudgment on the Pleadings

127 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.13-115.29

[Reserved]

§§ 115.13[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.30

§ 115.30 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Parties May Contract for Total Indemnity, and Principles of Comparative Negligence Do Not Apply to Express Indemnity Agreements

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD GIVE FULL EFFECT TO THE EXPRESS INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE INDEMNITY RIGHTS CREATED BY CONTRACT ARE NOT SUBJECT TO REDUCTION BASED ON PRINCIPLES OF COMPARATIVE NEGLIGENCE

Contractual Right to Total Indemnity. An "all or nothing" right of indemnity that is not affected by the principle of partial indemnity between concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis may be created by the parties to an indemnity contract (Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 676, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that a written indemnity agreement should be enforced and the indemnitor required to completely indemnify the indemnitee for a loss that is within the scope of the agreement. The specific argument made by the form is that the principle of partial indemnity between concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis, as established by the California Supreme Court in American Motorcycle Ass'n v. Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], does not apply to express indemnity rights created by contract [Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 676, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399] .

This form is for use by the express indemnitee to establish a right to contractual indemnity. The express indemnitor should use § 115.73 to oppose a claim for implied indemnity made by the express indemnitor.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court [see § 115.10]. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the indemnitor's liability may be established as a matter of law from the four corners of the indemnity agreement. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) there is or was a claim against the indemnitee that is within the scope of the indemnity agreement; and (3) the resolution of the claim, but for the indemnity agreement, would involve allocation of responsibility between the indemnitee and indemnitor as joint or concurrent tortfeasors under the principles of comparative negligence.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contractual Right to Total Indemnity

In Rodriguez v. McDonnell Douglas Corp. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 151 Cal. Rptr. 399 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment that Norman, a general contractor, was entitled to indemnity from Bethlehem and Orvin, both subcontractors, under indemnity agreements that required Bethlehem and Orvin to indemnify Norman for the latter's liability arising out of the negligent acts or omissions (as the Bethlehem contract provided), or just acts or omissions (as the Orvin contract provided), of the indemnitors, including their employees. Norman, which was found to have been negligent and adjudged liable to Rodriguez, the injured plaintiff, was still found to be entitled to indemnity because its negligence was characterized as only passive [see § 115.32].

Among the arguments that Bethlehem and Orvin presented on appeal was that adoption of the principle of partial indemnity between concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], mandated that their indemnity obligation be analyzed under comparative fault principles. Because Norman had been found liable to Rodriguez, it was alleged that Norman could only obtain indemnity from other defendants based on comparative fault and not pursuant to the indemnity agreements. In rejecting this argument, the court stated that American Motorcycle did away with the all-or-nothing doctrine of equitable indemnity, but did not purport to affect the rules governing contractual indemnity (87 Cal. App. 3d 626, 676) .

NOTE:

A subsequent case may have opened the door to the possible development of a doctrine of "proportional contractual indemnity." In that case, an equipment lease provided for the lessee to indemnify the lessor only for liability or loss caused by the lessee; it did not provide for any right of indemnity for liability for the lessor's own negligence. The equipment caused injury, and the jury apportioned fault 55 percent to the lessee and 20 percent to the lessor. The lessor was required to pay the lessee's share of the joint and several judgment for economic damages [see Civ. Code § 1431.2 (Proposition 51)] because the lessee was the plaintiff's employer and therefore immune from liability to the plaintiff under workers' compensation's exclusive remedy principle [see Lab. Code § 3600]. The lessor then sought indemnity under the agreement, but the trial court denied it, applying the rule that the lessor's active negligence bars indemnity under a general indemnity clause [Hernandez v. Badger Constr. Equip. Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1818 n.21, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732 ; see § 115.40].

On appeal, the lessor argued that the agreement required the lessee to indemnify it for the percentage of the plaintiff's damages that represented the lessee's comparative share of liability that the lessor was required to pay on account of joint and several liability. The court of appeal agreed. It construed the agreement under contract principles as requiring the lessee to indemnify the lessor for the portion of the lessor's liability attributable to the lessee's fault. It further held that the lessor was not entitled to indemnity from the lessee for the portion of its liability attributable to its own negligence [Hernandez v. Badger Constr. Equip. Co. (1994) 28 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1818-1823, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 732] .

Whether this case has any relevance beyond its facts remains to be seen. It rests solely on contractual interpretation of a fairly nontypical indemnity agreement; one that does not purport to create any right of indemnity for the indemnitee's own negligence. However, it represents yet another step away from the legal distinction between active and passive negligence [see § 115.33], and at least introduces the possibility that equitable loss-sharing may be appropriate between joint tortfeasor contractual indemnitors and indemnitees under some circumstances, regardless of the characterization of the indemnitee's negligence.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Contractual Right to Total Indemnity

Regional Steel Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 , is discussed in § 115.73[3][a]. An express indemnity agreement between a general contractor (as indemnitee) and Regional Steel Corporation, a subcontractor (as indemnitor), read as follows: "Regional Steel Corporation will indemnify others only to the extent that damage is caused in whole by any negligent act or omission by anyone directly employed by or under the control of Regional Steel Corporation" (25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 527) . In a subsequent action against both the general and subcontractor, the general contractor cross complained against Regional Steel for comparative equitable indemnity. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for Regional Steel, citing the rule that if the parties have expressly contracted with respect to the duty to indemnify, the extent of that duty must be determined from the contract and not by reliance on the independent doctrine of equitable indemnity. The court held that the language "caused in whole" meant that the general contractor had bargained away its right to seek comparative indemnity under situations in which the negligence of both general and subcontractors contributed to the injury (25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 529) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.31

§ 115.31 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Providing for Indemnity Against Indemnitee's Own Negligence Does Not Violate Public Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES, WHICH PROVIDES FOR TOTAL INDEMNITY FROM ALL LIABILITY, INCLUDING ALL LIABILITY ARISING FROM THE INDEMNITEE'S OWN NEGLIGENCE, DOES NOT VIOLATE PUBLIC POLICY.

Public Policy. A contract by which the indemnitor agrees to indemnify the indemnitee for loss caused by the indemnitee's own negligence does not violate public policy (Goldman v. Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 40, 48, 41 Cal. Rptr. 73, 396 P.2d 377 ; County of San Joaquin v. Stockton Swim Club (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 968, 972-973, 117 Cal. Rptr. 300 ; John E. Branagh & Sons v. Witcosky (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 835, 837-844, 51 Cal. Rptr. 844).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that an indemnity agreement that shifts the indemnitee's loss entirely to the indemnitor, even though the indemnitee's own negligence was a proximate cause of the loss, does not violate public policy and should be enforced. The points and authorities in this form should be used to set forth the general principle that there is no public policy bar to indemnity for one's own negligence. It should be used together with other points and authorities that address the construction of the indemnity agreement to encompass the particular negligence involved [see § 115.33] or that characterize the indemnitee's negligence as merely passive [see § 115.32].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the indemnitor's liability may be established as a matter of law from the four corners of the indemnity agreement. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an indemnity agreement under which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee for loss; (2) that the scope of the agreement extended to loss proximately caused by the indemnitee's own negligence; and (3) that the particular loss incurred for which indemnity is sought is one for which the parties intended to provide indemnity even though the loss was proximately caused by the indemnitee's negligence.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

The facts and principal holding of Goldman v. Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 40, 41 Cal. Rptr. 73, 396 P.2d 377 , are discussed in § 115.40[3][a]. One argument presented by the indemnitor for the nonenforceability of the indemnity agreement was that an agreement to relieve a party from the effects of its own negligence is against public policy [see Tunkl v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1963) 60 Cal. 2d 92, 32 Cal. Rptr. 33, 383 P.2d 441 (certain preinjury releases from liability were void as against public policy)]. The California Supreme Court, having found no indemnity right for the indemnitee's negligence under the agreement for other reasons, rejected the public policy argument in dicta. The Court distinguished between an exculpatory agreement and an indemnification agreement. While the former provides no remedy to the injured party, the latter resembles an insurance agreement. The purpose is to allocate the loss rather than to avoid it. The true effect of an indemnity agreement is to transfer the burden of providing liability insurance for the loss in question (62 Cal. 2d 40, 48-49) .

County of San Joaquin v. Stockton Swim Club (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 968, 117 Cal. Rptr. 300 , is discussed in § 115.38[3][b]. The indemnitee was a consortium of public entities, and the indemnitor was a private swim club that was required to execute an indemnity agreement in consideration for the right to use public swimming pools in connection with their program. In that case, the indemnitor also raised a public-policy defense based on Tunkl, contending that the indemnification clause was an illegal contract of adhesion. The court rejected the public policy argument, citing Goldman (42 Cal. App. 3d 968, 972-973) .

In John E. Branagh & Sons v. Witcosky (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 835, 51 Cal. Rptr. 844 , the court also confronted the indemnitor's argument that to allow indemnity for the indemnitee's own negligent conduct was contrary to public policy. In this case, the indemnitee's conduct at issue was a violation of a state safety order. The indemnitor sought to avoid application of Goldman because the rejection of the public-policy argument in that case was only dicta. In enforcing the indemnity agreement, the court of appeal rejected the public policy argument and applied the Supreme Court's reasoning in Goldman (242 Cal. App. 2d 835, 837-844) .

NOTE:

The vast majority of express indemnity cases arise from provisions in a commercial contract that may be viewed as the product of arms-length negotiations between commercial entities regarding the allocation of responsibility for loss among the parties respective insurance carriers [see Guy F. Atkinson Co. v. Schatz (1980) 102 Cal. App. 3d 351, 356, 161 Cal. Rptr. 436] . In this context, courts are generally reticent to disregard a commercial agreement reached by business entities regarding the allocation of loss, at least when the allocation involves only the economic loss sustained by the parties [see, e.g., CAZA Drilling (California), Inc. v. TEG Oil & Gas U.S.A., Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 475, 48

Cal. Rptr. 3d 271] . The public-policy considerations might be different with regard to an indemnity clause inserted in a preprinted contract of adhesion in a noncommercial context, such as a residential lease or a consumer contract.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Public Policy

In CAZA Drilling (California), Inc. v. TEG Oil & Gas U.S.A., Inc. (2006) 142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 48 Cal. Rptr. 3d 271 , an oil company hired a drilling company to drill an oil well. The contract between the parties contained several paragraphs allocating responsibility for different types of loss to one party or the other under particular circumstances. Subsequently, an accident allegedly caused by the drilling company's negligence killed one worker and injured others, and caused economic losses. The drilling company sued the oil company for an unpaid amount owed under the contract. The oil company cross-complained to recover for its economic loss, arguing that the drilling company was negligent and in violation of certain regulations. The trial court entered judgment for the drilling company on the cross-complaint, concluding that the contract placed responsibility for the economic loss on the oil company. The court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that the drilling contract did not implicate the public interest and the parties were of relatively equal bargaining strength and free to negotiate the terms of the agreement. Thus, there was no reason to void the agreement's allocation of responsibility for the loss (142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 469) . The court also noted that the drilling company was responsible under the agreement for damage to its own equipment, for injury to its employees, and for certain pollution and contamination removal costs. Moreover, the drilling company had accepted liability for personal injuries that had occurred. Recognizing that courts have generally been reluctant to disregard a commercial agreement reached by business entities regarding the allocation of loss - at least when the allocation involves only the economic loss sustained by the parties - the court of appeal concluded that the challenged contract provisions represented a valid limitation on liability, rather than an impermissible attempt to shield a contracting party from liability for a violation of the law (142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 475) . The court also concluded that the oil company had failed to identify any specific law or regulation that the drilling company allegedly violated (142 Cal. App. 4th 453, 476-478) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.32

§ 115.32 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--General Indemnity Agreement Provides Indemnity for Indemnitee's Passive Negligence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY SHOULD BE ALLOWED BECAUSE ANY NEGLIGENCE OF INDEMNITEE THAT MAY HAVE PROXIMATELY CAUSED THE LOSS FOR WHICH INDEMNITY IS SOUGHT IS PASSIVE NEGLIGENCE ONLY.

A. Indemnity Under General Indemnity Agreement Not Barred By Indemnitee's Passive Negligence. An indemnitee under a general indemnity agreement is not prohibited from recovering indemnity for loss caused in part by its own negligence if its negligence can be characterized as only "passive" (Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97).

B. Passive Negligence Defined. Passive negligence is the omission or failure to perform a duty of care imposed by law, but in which there is no participation with another in any affirmative act of negligence that is the proximate cause of the injury to a third person (Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 629, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 112, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575).

[Optional] C. Nonfeasance. Mere nonfeasance, such as a failure to discover a dangerous condition, is passive negligence and does not preclude indemnity under a general indemnity clause (Markley v. Beagle (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 951, 962).

[Optional] D. Landowner's Failure to Fulfill Duty of Care Imposed By Law. A failure to act in fulfillment of a duty of care that devolves on an indemnitee by law as the owner or occupier of land is passive negligence (Harvey Mach. Co. v. Hatzel & Buehler, Inc. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 445, 448, 6 Cal. Rptr. 284, 353 P.2d 924).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that any negligence of the indemnitee that may have proximately caused the loss for which indemnity is sought is passive negligence only, and that therefore, indemnity may be recovered under a general indemnity clause. This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.40, that the indemnitee's negligence should be characterized as active and indemnity disallowed under a general indemnity agreement. For points and authorities related to the characterization of an indemnity clause as general, see also § 115.40.

As an alternative to the use of this form, the indemnitee may contend that it was the intent of the parties to provide for indemnity for the particular negligence of the indemnitee involved, regardless of whether the negligence might be characterized as active or passive [see § 115.33]. For further discussion of the importance of the distinction between active and passive negligence, see § 115.40[2][b].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the indemnitee's negligence may be characterized as passive as a matter of law [see Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 810, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190] . It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The particular acts of the indemnitee's alleged negligence should also be set forth. A connection should then be made between these acts and one or more of the characterizations of passive negligence set forth in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Indemnity Under General Indemnity Agreement Not Barred By Indemnitee's Passive Negligence

Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 , was an appeal by Pylon from a judgment of the superior court requiring Pylon to indemnify Rossmoor for certain sums expended in satisfying a prior tort judgment. Rossmoor had employed Pylon to construct a sewage pump station on its property. In the contract, Pylon agreed to indemnify Rossmoor against all claims for damages arising out of the work and for attorney's fees and costs that might be incurred in the event of a damage suit, and to obtain insurance for itself and to name Rossmoor in the policy as an additional insured. During construction, one Pylon employee was killed and another was injured when a trench collapsed. The trench had been negligently constructed by Pylon. A successful personal injury and wrongful death action was brought against Rossmoor [see Widman v. Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 734, 97 Cal. Rptr. 52] . Rossmoor satisfied the judgment and then brought this declaratory action for express indemnity against Pylon. Trial to the court resulted in a judgment in favor of Rossmoor, based in part on a finding that Rossmoor's negligence consisted of failing to discover that Pylon employees intended to enter the trench, and that this negligence was only passive (13 Cal. 3d 622, 625-628) .

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. First it found that the language of the indemnity agreement was general because it did not state what effect Rossmoor's negligence would have on the indemnity obligation. It then noted that under existing case law, Rossmoor could not recover indemnity if its negligence was deemed to be "active" [see § 115.40]. However, a general indemnity clause may be construed to provide indemnity for a loss resulting in part from an indemnitee's passive negligence (13 Cal. 3d 622, 628) .

[b] Passive Negligence Defined

The facts of Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 , are discussed in § 115.32[3][a]. With regard to the distinction between active and passive negligence, the court stated that passive negligence is found in mere nonfeasance, such as the failure to discover a dangerous condition or to perform a duty imposed by law. Active negligence is found if an indemnitee has personally participated in an affirmative act of negligence, was connected with negligent acts or omissions by knowledge or acquiescence, or has failed to perform a precise duty that the indemnitee has agreed to perform. The crux of the inquiry is to determine whether there is participation in some manner by the person seeking indemnity in the conduct or omission that caused the injury beyond the mere failure to perform a duty imposed by law (13 Cal. 3d 622, 629) . The Court then deferred to the trial court's determination that Rossmoor's negligence was passive, based on its findings that (1) Rossmoor had no supervisory personnel at the site at the time of the accident; (2) that Pylon alone knew that its employees intended to enter the trench; and (3) that Pylon was directly responsible for the trench remaining unshored (13 Cal. 3d 622, 630-631) .

In Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575 , discussed in § 115.40[3][b], the indemnitee requested and the court gave a jury instruction that set forth the following definition of passive negligence, based on Rossmoor: "Passive negligence is the omission or failure to perform a duty of care imposed by law in which there is no participation with another in any affirmative act of negligence which is the proximate cause of injury to a third person" (185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 112) . The court of appeal accepted this instruction, although the issue in the case revolved around other language in the instruction.

NOTE:

In Rossmoor, there was substantial evidence from which the Court could have found Rossmoor to have been actively negligent as a matter of law [cf. Morgan v. Stubblefield (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 606, 625, 100 Cal. Rptr. 1, 493 P.2d 465 ; see generally § 115.40]. Pylon presented evidence that the trenches were excavated in accordance with plans and specifications provided by Rossmoor; that the plans were prepared by an engineering firm retained by Rossmoor; that Rossmoor approved the plans; that Rossmoor and the engineering firm had numerous supervisory personnel on the job site at various stages of construction; that Rossmoor's supervisory personnel knew of, permitted, and approved the excavation of the trench; that Rossmoor had experienced considerable difficulty with land slippage and excavation collapse during construction; that Rossmoor was conducting dynamiting operations in the area that caused the ground to shake; and that Rossmoor was worried about delays in construction [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 630, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97] . Nevertheless, the Court deferred to the trial court's finding of passive negligence based principally on the fact that Rossmoor did not know that the employees intended to enter the trench.

The Rossmoor case is very difficult to accept with regard to its application of a distinction between active and passive negligence to the facts. However, its greater significance lies in its language that the active-passive dichotomy is never wholly dispositive of any case. Instead, the crucial point of inquiry is the intent of the parties with regard to the acts and omissions that caused the injury. The court found that the parties intended that Pylon assume the entire burden of liability for injury occurring during construction [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 632-633,119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; see § 115.33].

Although not expressly noted by the court, another important consideration in Rossmoor was probably that Pylon was required to obtain insurance and name Rossmoor as an additional insured. The parties' respective insurers were also parties to the case, and the real issue was over whose insurer should bear the loss. Viewed from the perspective of allocation of insurance risk, the result is arguably more reasonable.

[c] Nonfeasance

Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190 , is discussed in § 115.34. The indemnitee's job superintendent discovered the condition, but did not discover that it was dangerous. The California Supreme Court held that this conduct was mere nonfeasance, and therefore, passive negligence (20 Cal. 3d 798, 810-811) .

Markley v. Beagle (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 951, 59 Cal. Rptr. 809, 429 P.2d 129 , was a premises liability action for personal injuries suffered when a railing collapsed. The defendants were a contractor, who allegedly created the dangerous condition, and the owners of the premises. The owners cross complained against the contractor on an express indemnity agreement. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff against both defendants and for the owners on the cross complaint. The verdict against the owners was based on their negligent failure to discover the dangerous condition on their property.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the trial court's refusal to grant the contractor's motion for judgment notwithstanding the verdict on the cross complaint. Although the Court held that an indemnity clause phrased in general terms and providing that the indemnitor hold the indemnitee harmless for damages arising in connection with certain work would not provide indemnity for consequences resulting from an indemnitee's own actively negligent acts, it stated that mere nonfeasance, such as the negligent failure to discover a dangerous condition, would be covered under such an agreement (66 Cal. 2d 951, 961-962) .

[d] Landowner's Failure to Fulfill Duty of Care Imposed By Law

Harvey Mach. Co. v. Hatzel & Buehler, Inc. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 445, 6 Cal. Rptr. 284, 353 P.2d 924 , is discussed in § 115.33[3][c]. In finding a right of indemnity for a property owner against a construction contractor, the court noted certain significant facts that allowed it to characterize the owner's negligence as passive. The owner did not continue to maintain independent operations on the premises while construction was in progress. The injuries did not result from some conduct or omission unrelated to the contractor's performance of the contract. Most significantly, the claimed breach of duty by the owner was a failure to act in fulfillment of a duty of care that devolved on it by law as the owner of the land on which the injury occurred. The negligence was not active, affirmative misconduct, but at most, passive negligence (54 Cal. 2d 445, 448) .

NOTE:

Other cases finding passive negligence based on a failure to fulfill a duty of care include Muth v. Urricelqui (1967) 251 Cal. App. 2d 901, 911, 60 Cal. Rptr. 166 (failure to inspect and specify changes) and Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 111-113, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820 (failure to exercise supervisory right to order removal of defective material) [see § 115.38].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.33

§ 115.33 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Not Expressly Providing for Indemnitee's Negligence May Be Construed to Extend to Any Negligence of Indemnitee If Parties So Intended

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

IF THE CIRCUMSTANCES INDICATE THAT A LOSS RESULTING FROM THE INDEMNITEE'S NEGLIGENCE WAS INTENDED TO BE WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE PARTIES' INDEMNITY AGREEMENT, ANY CLAIM ARISING FROM THAT NEGLIGENCE IS A PROPER BASIS FOR INDEMNITY EVEN IF THE AGREEMENT DID NOT EXPRESSLY COVER THE INDEMNITEE'S NEGLIGENCE AND EVEN IF THAT NEGLIGENCE MIGHT POSSIBLY BE CHARACTERIZED AS "ACTIVE."

A. Intention of Parties Controls. In determining whether an indemnity clause covers a given case turns primarily on contractual interpretation; the dichotomy of active and passive negligence is never wholly dispositive, and it is the intent of the parties as expressed in the agreement that should control (Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 632-633, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; Morton Thiokol, Inc. v. Metal Bldg. Alteration Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1030, 238 Cal. Rptr. 722).

B. Indemnity for Active Negligence Under General Indemnity Clause. Indemnity for the indemnitee's active negligence is not precluded under an indemnity clause that does not expressly provide for indemnity in the case of the indemnitee's negligence, if the parties intended that the agreement allow such a recovery (Schackman v. Universal Pictures Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 860, 63 Cal. Rptr. 607).

C. Obvious Risk Within Contemplation of Parties and Bargained for by Indemnitee. An indemnity clause that does not expressly mention the indemnitee's negligence protects an indemnitee from liability for injuries sustained as a result of the indemnitee's negligence if the circumstances of the loss were within the contemplation of the parties as one of the obvious risks against which the indemnitee sought to be covered, and it reasonably could be concluded that the parties knowingly bargained for the very protection at issue (Harvey Mach. Co. v. Hatzel & Buehler, Inc. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 445, 448, 6 Cal. Rptr. 284, 353 P.2d 924 ; Ralph M. Parsons Co. v. Combustion Equip. Assocs., Inc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 221-222, 218 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; Schackman v. Universal Pictures Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 862, 63 Cal. Rptr. 607).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that an indemnity agreement should be enforced despite the lack of express language covering the indemnitee's negligence because the circumstances of the indemnitee's liability that caused the loss were within the contemplation of the parties, and the parties intended to provide for indemnity under these circumstances. The points and authorities in this form may be submitted in opposition to those in § 115.40, which advance the proposition that an indemnity clause that does not expressly mention the indemnitee's negligence is general and does not provide indemnity if the indemnitee is actively negligent. These points and authorities should be submitted as an alternative argument to the narrower contention for enforcement of a general indemnity clause made in § 115.32, that the indemnitee's negligence should be characterized as merely passive.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the intent of the parties may be determined from the agreement as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) the indemnitee incurred a loss for which it is seeking indemnity pursuant to the agreement; and (3) although the agreement did not expressly provide for indemnity from the indemnitee's own negligence and the indemnitee's own negligence allegedly was a proximate cause of the loss for which indemnity is sought, the loss is one for which the parties intended to provide for a right of indemnity in the agreement.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Intention of Parties Controls

The facts and principal holding of Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 , are discussed in § 115.32[3][b]. The California Supreme Court enforced a right of indemnity under an indemnity agreement that did not expressly provide for indemnity in the case of the indemnitee's own negligence. The court deferred to the determination of the trier of fact that the indemnitee was only passively negligent (13 Cal. 3d 622, 630-631) .

As an alternative argument, the indemnitor argued for the abolition of the distinction of active and passive negligence in favor of a rule denying recovery under an indemnity clause to any negligent indemnitee unless its negligence was wholly derivative, such as under the doctrine of respondeat superior. They characterized the distinction between active and passive negligence as illusory and urged that indemnity should not depend on mere labels (13 Cal. 3d 622, 631-632) .

The Court adhered to the underlying distinction between active and passive negligence. Nevertheless, it stated that it did not employ the active-passive dichotomy as wholly dispositive of this or any other case. The issue of whether the indemnity clause in question operates to exculpate the indemnitee from the consequences of its own alleged breach of duty is one of contract interpretation. It is the intent of the parties as expressed in the agreement that should control. If the parties knowingly bargain for the protection at issue, the protection should be afforded. The proper inquiry is into the circumstances of the damage or injury and the language of the contract. Of necessity, each case will turn on its own facts (13 Cal. 3d 622, 632-633) .

Morton Thiokol, Inc. v. Metal Bldg. Alteration Co. (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 238 Cal. Rptr. 722 , was an action brought by a worker against the owner of a building, on which a new roof was being installed, for injuries sustained in a fall from the roof. Despite an extremely hazardous roof surface (the result of salt accumulation, a condition created by the owner), safety equipment that would have prevented the accident was not provided.

The owner cross complained against the contractor for contractual indemnity. The contract required the contractor: (1) to supervise and direct the work using its best skill and attention; (2) to take all necessary precautions during the progress of the work to protect all persons and the property of others from injury or damages; and (3) to indemnify and hold harmless the owner and its agents and employees from any and all liability, loss, damage, cost and expense (including attorney's fees) sustained by reason of the contractor's breach of warranty, breach of contract, misrepresentation or false certification, or failure to exercise due care. The contractor subcontracted the entire job to another company that employed the injured worker.

The trial court found the contractual provision to be a "general" indemnity agreement and, based on the jury's verdict, that the owner was "actively" negligent, denied the owner's claim for indemnity. The court of appeal reversed and enforced the indemnity clause because the precautions that would have prevented the accident were bargained for and were the responsibility of the indemnitor under the contract. The court cited the admonition from Rossmoor, that the active-passive rubric ought not to be wholly dispositive, but that the enforceability of an indemnity agreement should instead turn primarily on a reasonable interpretation of the intent of the parties. Because the agreement clearly indicated that the owner was to be indemnified for damages sustained because of the contractor's breach of the agreement, and the accident would not have happened but for that breach, indemnity was viable notwithstanding the jury's finding of the indemnitee's "active" negligence (193 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1030) .

[b] Indemnity for Active Negligence Under General Indemnity Clause

Schackman v. Universal Pictures Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 63 Cal. Rptr. 607 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court awarding the owner of an amusement arcade (Schackman) indemnity from a motion picture studio (Universal) that had rented the arcade for a brief period in order to film a scene. The plaintiff in the underlying action was injured during the filming and obtained a judgment for personal injuries against Schackman and Universal. In a cross action, Schackman was awarded indemnity from Universal on the basis of the written agreement between the parties. The agreement was on a printed form prepared by Universal. It provided that Universal would indemnify Schackman against all loss, damages, costs, and expenses incurred by him because of any injury to property or injury to or death of any person occurring on leased property during its use by Universal. It did not expressly mention the effect that Schackman's negligence would have on his right to indemnity.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in the cross action, finding that the indemnification clause provided for indemnity against loss and damages proximately caused by the combined negligence of the parties. The court found it unnecessary to characterize Schackman's negligence as passive or active. Assuming, arguendo, that Schackman's negligence was active, it would not necessarily preclude him from a recovery under the indemnity agreement if the parties intended that the agreement allow such a recovery (255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 858-860) .

[c] Obvious Risk Within Contemplation of Parties and Bargained for by Indemnitee

Harvey Mach. Co. v. Hatzel & Buehler, Inc. (1960) 54 Cal. 2d 445, 6 Cal. Rptr. 284, 353 P.2d 924 , was an action for a declaratory judgment for a determination of rights under an indemnity agreement. A landowner (Harvey) contracted with various contractors, including H & B, for the complete construction of its plant, and indemnity agreements were included in the contracts in favor of Harvey as indemnitee. The agreement between Harvey and H & B protected the owner from liability for injury arising from the use of the premises of the owner and did not mention the owner's own negligence. An employee of H & B was injured in a fall into an open elevator pit while on the job and brought a third-party negligence action against Harvey pursuant to workers' compensation law.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the judgment declaring that the agreement provided for total indemnity should Harvey be found liable to the injured employee. In so holding, the Court stated that the question of whether an indemnity clause operates to exculpate the indemnitee from the consequences of its own breach of duty is one of contract interpretation. If it can be determined that the parties intended by their agreement to protect the indemnitee against claims of damage caused by any or even all types of negligent conduct on its part, the agreement would effectively accomplish that purpose (54 Cal. 2d 445, 447) . In this case, Harvey had no actual occupancy of the premises or control over the construction activities. Therefore, the court determined that the intent of the parties was to place the risk of all construction-related injury on the contractors (54 Cal. 2d 445, 448-449) .

The court found that the terms and circumstances of the agreement required a realistic conclusion that the parties knowingly bargained for the very protection at issue, that is, the owner's potential premises liability to workers. H & B had practical control of the structures on the premises and any negligence for the condition of the structures would obviously not be that of the owner alone. The accident, in these circumstances, was one of the risks, if not the most obvious risk, against which the owner sought to be covered. The court found it unnecessary to label the indemnity clause as "general" or to determine whether the owner's negligence might be active or passive (54 Cal. 2d 445, 446-448) .

The principal holding of Ralph M. Parsons Co. v. Combustion Equip. Assocs., Inc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 218 Cal. Rptr. 170 , is discussed in § 115.35[3][a]. Parsons, a general contractor (and a settling defendant), had subcontracted with Combustion (another defendant) to perform certain tasks. The agreement contained an indemnity clause under which Combustion agreed to indemnify Parsons for liability arising out of Combustion's performance of the contract unless Parsons was the sole cause of the accident. Also under the contract, Combustion was required to carry comprehensive public liability insurance covering the work. An employee of another subcontractor was injured in the course of the work, and the jury found both Parsons and Combustion to have been negligent.

The trial court awarded Parsons indemnity from Combustion based on the contract, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court's principal holding was that the indemnity clause was not a general one because it expressly provided for the indemnitee's negligence, and that, therefore, the distinction between active and passive negligence was of no import (172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220-221) . The court found that Combustion's obligation to indemnify Parsons for liability resulting from the violation of safety regulations was specifically considered and bargained for by the parties. The evidence, including the surrounding circumstances such as the magnitude of the job and the relative situation of the parties, as well as the insurance requirement in the contract amply supported the trial court's finding on this point (172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 222) .

The facts and principal holding of Schackman v. Universal Pictures Co. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 63 Cal. Rptr. 607 , are discussed in § 115.33[3][b]. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's determination that the hazard of accidental injury in the shooting gallery was within the contemplation of the parties as one of the most obvious risks against which Schackman sought to be covered. The contract provided for only a small payment for the use of the premises. When weighed against the virtually unlimited liability to which Schackman might be subjected for injuries while Universal was carrying on its filming, it would seem reasonable, under these circumstances, that the parties intended that Schackman be indemnified from all loss regardless of his own negligence (255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 862-863) .

The court also construed the printed agreement against its preparer, Universal. The court stated that had Universal intended to exclude injury partially caused by Schackman's negligence from the coverage of the indemnification paragraph, it would have been a simple matter for it to have so stated in the agreement (255 Cal. App. 2d 857, 862) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intention of Parties Controls

In Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bailey & Sons, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519 , a 1978 indemnity agreement was construed as a general agreement. The indemnitee argued that the line of cases beginning with Rossmoor and including Morton Thiokol [see § 115.33[3][a]] should be construed as permitting an actively negligent party to seek contractual indemnity on a comparative fault basis from the indemnitor. The court of appeal rejected such a broad reading. It reaffirmed the basic principles that although an actively negligent tortfeasor cannot recover under a general indemnity provision that is silent on the issue of the indemnitee's negligence, the general rule is merely a tool to be used to ascertain the intent of the parties. In this case, because the agreement was executed when the general rule reflected the most likely commercial expectations of the parties to an agreement, the burden was on the indemnitee to offer evidence that the parties' intent was otherwise (35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 868-869) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.34

§ 115.34 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Written Indemnity Agreement Is Sufficient to Impose Indemnity Obligation on Injured Person's Employer [Lab. Code § 3864]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITY RIGHTS AGAINST THE INJURED PERSON'S EMPLOYER ARE NOT EXTINGUISHED BY SECTION 3864 OF THE LABOR CODE BECAUSE, PRIOR TO THE TIME OF THE INJURY, THE EMPLOYER SIGNED A WRITTEN INDEMNITY AGREEMENT.

A. Written Indemnity Agreement Makes Labor Code Section 3864 Inapplicable. One against whom a judgment has been entered or who has settled a claim for personal injury may seek indemnity from the injured person's employer if the employer executed a written indemnity agreement prior to the injury (Lab. Code § 3864).

[Optional] B. Specific Reference to Employees Not Required. A general indemnity agreement may be sufficient to fulfill the requirements of Labor Code Section 3864 even in the absence of express reference to a right of indemnity for injury to the indemnitor's employees (Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 808-809, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190 ; Herman Christensen & Sons, Inc. v. Paris Plastering Co. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 237, 246, 132 Cal. Rptr. 86).

[Optional] C. Unnamed Third Party Beneficiary May Enforce Written Indemnity Agreement Against Employer. A third-party beneficiary of an indemnity agreement executed between an employer and another party before an injury to an employee of the employer is entitled to enforce the indemnity agreement against the employer even though the beneficiary is not named or identified individually in the agreement (Kaiser Eng'rs, Inc. v. Grinnell Fire Prot. Sys. Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1054-1055, 219 Cal. Rptr. 626).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that indemnity may be recovered from the employer of an injured party, despite Lab. Code § 3864, because of a sufficient written agreement between the indemnitee and the employer as indemnitor. Lab. Code § 3864 bars indemnity claims against an injured person's employer in absence of a written indemnity agreement executed prior to the injury. This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.74, that Lab. Code § 3864 bars indemnity rights.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the validity of the agreement may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) subsequently, an employee of the indemnitor was injured and that the indemnitee incurred a loss as a result of that injury, for which it is seeking indemnity pursuant to the agreement; and (3) the scope of the agreement extended to liability of the indemnitee arising from injury to employees of the indemnitee.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specific Reference to Employees Not Required

Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190 , was an appeal from a judgment on a cross complaint for indemnity. Gonzales, an employee of a subcontractor (Vienna) brought an action against the general contractor (Novick) for damages for personal injuries he suffered when he fell from a scaffold while working for Vienna. Novick cross complained against Vienna for indemnity based on an indemnity clause in the construction contract. Under the clause, Vienna agreed to indemnify for all claims for damages to persons or to property growing out of the execution of Vienna's work. The trial court awarded Novick indemnity, and Vienna appealed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. Vienna argued that the agreement was insufficient to meet the requirements of Lab. Code § 3864 (no indemnity from employer for injury to employee absent written indemnity agreement) because it did not expressly provide that the indemnity rights created in the agreement extended to loss incurred due to injury to Vienna's employees. The Court discussed the history of the statute and the intent of the legislature to abolish the double burden placed on the employer through the doctrine of implied indemnity in contravention of the exclusive remedy theory of the workers' compensation statutes. It then concluded that the language of the agreement was sufficient to create an indemnity agreement covering employees of the indemnitor and fulfill the requirements of Lab. Code § 3864 (20 Cal. 3d 798, 807-809) .

NOTE:

The fact that the language of an indemnity clause is sufficient to meet the requirement of a written agreement as set forth in Lab. Code § 3864 does not automatically mean that the indemnitee is entitled to recover for loss proximately caused by its own negligence. Once the court determines that indemnity rights are not barred by the statute, it must then construe the agreement, as in the case of any other indemnity clause, to determine whether its language and intent provide for indemnity on the facts at issue [see Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 809-812, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190 (indemnity provided under general indemnity clause because indemnitee's negligence was only passive); cf. Widson v. International Harvester Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 45, 58-61, 200 Cal. Rptr. 136 (indemnity clause that does not specifically provide for indemnity from employer for injuries to employee does not meet requirements of Lab. Code § 3864)]. Thus, the points and authorities set forth in §§ 115.32, 115.33, and 115.40 are relevant in an indemnity action on an agreement with the injured person's employer.

Herman Christensen & Sons, Inc. v. Paris Plastering Co. (1976) 61 Cal. App. 3d 237, 132 Cal. Rptr. 86 , was an appeal from a judgment on a cross complaint for indemnity. The injured employee was employed as a hod carrier for a subcontractor and was injured while working on a scaffolding furnished by a general contractor. He sued the general contractor for damages, and the general contractor cross complained against the employer subcontractor for express indemnity. The injured plaintiff recovered a judgment against the general contractor, and the general contractor was awarded indemnity from the employer. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment of indemnity. The court ruled that the agreement language "any and all claims, suits, or liability for injuries to persons" was broad enough to cover persons employed by the indemnitor, and that the agreement previously executed by the employer therefore fulfilled the requirements of Lab. Code § 3864.

[b] Unnamed Third Party Beneficiary May Enforce Written Indemnity Agreement Against Employer

In Kaiser Eng'rs, Inc. v. Grinnell Fire Prot. Sys. Co. (1985) 173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 219 Cal. Rptr. 626 , an injured employee of Grinnell Fire Protection Systems (Grinnell) sued Kaiser Engineers, Inc. (Kaiser). Both Kaiser and Grinnell were working on a government project at the time. Grinnell had contracted to perform certain work for the agency in charge of the project. The contract included an indemnity provision under which Grinnell promised to indemnify and hold harmless the government and its agents for all injuries arising out if its performance of the contract. Grinnell's employee was injured in the performance of the contract and sued Kaiser for personal injury. Kaiser cross complained against Grinnell, alleging that it (Kaiser) was an agent of the government and thus entitled to indemnity as a third party beneficiary under Grinnell's contract with the government. The trial court sustained Grinnell's demurrer without leave to amend on the ground that Lab. Code § 3864 did not allow an unnamed party to assert a right to indemnity against an employer under a third party beneficiary theory (173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1053) .

The court of appeal reversed. It held that Lab. Code § 3864 does not prohibit an employer from entering into a written indemnity agreement with another for the express benefit of a third party (173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1055) . The court held that an unnamed third party beneficiary can enforce a contract by showing that he or she is a member of the class for whose express benefit the contract was made, and that the allegations in Kaiser's cross complaint were sufficient to withstand the demurrer (173 Cal. App. 3d 1050, 1055-1056) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.35

§ 115.35 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause Providing for Indemnity Unless Liability Results From Indemnitee's Sole Negligence or Willful Misconduct is Valid and Enforceable if Parties Are Concurrently Negligent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD GIVE FULL EFFECT TO THE EXPRESS INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE THE LOSS FOR WHICH INDEMNITY IS SOUGHT AROSE FROM THE CONCURRENT NEGLIGENCE OF THE PARTIES AND THE AGREEMENT EXCEPTS ONLY LIABILITY ARISING FROM THE INDEMNITEE'S SOLE NEGLIGENCE OR WILLFUL MISCONDUCT.

Agreement Excepting Sole Negligence and Willful Misconduct of Indemnitee. An indemnity clause that provides a right of indemnity for all claims except claims arising through the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the indemnitee is not a general indemnity clause, and is enforceable if the loss is caused by the parties' concurrent negligence regardless of whether the indemnitee's negligence might be characterized as active or passive (C. I. Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Johnson & Turner Painting Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1015-1018, 189 Cal. Rptr. 824 ; see Ralph M. Parsons Co. v. Combustion Equip. Assocs., Inc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220, 218 Cal. Rptr. 170).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that an indemnity clause that provides for indemnity from all loss except that caused by the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct is enforceable in a case of concurrent negligence. Such a clause in a construction or hauling, trucking or cartage contract expresses the statutory rule that no right of indemnity may be provided for the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct [see Civ. Code §§ 2782, 2784.5 (§ 115.42)]. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.40.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment if the validity of the agreement may be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see the § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from all loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions, except loss arising from the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct; (2) the indemnitee has incurred or may incur a loss that was, in part, allegedly caused by its own negligence; and (3) the loss for which indemnity is sought was proximately cause, at least in part, by the indemnitor's negligence.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement Excepting Sole Negligence and Willful Misconduct of Indemnitee

C. I. Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Johnson & Turner Painting Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 189 Cal. Rptr. 824 , was an appeal from a summary judgment awarding express indemnity to a general contractor on its cross complaint against a subcontractor under an indemnity clause in a construction contract. The contract required the subcontractor to indemnify the contractor against, among other things, all liability for injury to or death of persons, including the subcontractor's employees, arising out of the subcontractor's performance of the contract, except liability arising through the sole negligence or the sole willful misconduct of the contractor. The subcontractor's foreman had been injured on the job as a result of his own negligence and that of the contractor-indemnitee and had sued the contractor.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the indemnity clause at issue was not a general one [see § 115.40], but rather one that did address itself to the issue of the indemnitee's own negligence. A right of indemnity for all liability except that arising from the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct is the functional equivalent of a clause that would provide for indemnity against any and all liability, including that arising from the indemnitee's own negligence. Under the latter language, the public policy expressed in Civ. Code § 2782 [see § 115.42] would limit the operation of the clause, as a matter of law, in the case of the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct. Because the clause was not a general one, characterization of the indemnitee's negligence as active or passive was irrelevant (140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1014-1018) .

NOTE:

In C.I. Engineers and Constructors, Inc., the court imputed the employee's own negligence to the employer with the result that the parties to the indemnity agreement were concurrently negligent [C. I. Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Johnson & Turner Painting Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1016-1017, 189 Cal. Rptr. 824] .

In Ralph M. Parsons Co. v. Combustion Equip. Assocs., Inc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 218 Cal. Rptr. 170 , a general contractor (Parsons) sought indemnity from a subcontractor (Combustion) under the terms of an indemnity provision in the subcontract for the amount of a settlement paid by Parsons to an injured employee of another subcontractor. The agreement contained an indemnity clause under which Combustion agreed to indemnify Parsons for liability arising out of Combustion's performance of the contract unless Parsons was the sole cause of the accident. The jury determined that the negligence of both Parsons and Combustion proximately caused the plaintiff's injuries.

The court of appeal enforced the indemnity provision and awarded Parsons total indemnity from Combustion. The court found that the agreement reflected the intent of the parties to contract for indemnity should they be joint or concurrent tortfeasors (172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 218-222) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agreement Excepting Sole Negligence and Willful Misconduct of Indemnitee

In Smoketree-Lake Murray, Ltd. v. Mills Concrete Constr. Co. (1991) 234 Cal. App. 3d 1724, 286 Cal. Rptr. 435 , a developer incurred liability to a homeowners's association for construction defects. The developer cross complained for indemnity against certain subcontractors based on several express indemnity agreements.

The subcontractors asserted that the indemnity agreements were unenforceable, on the ground that the developer had made misrepresentations and concealed information from the condominium purchasers. The trial court ruled that a finding of such fraud would preclude indemnity, and the jury found that the developer had committed fraud.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the fraud finding did not preclude enforcement of the indemnity agreement. The court construed Civ. Code § 2782 as prohibiting indemnity only if the liability was due to the indemnitee's sole negligence or sole willful misconduct, meaning that the situation in which the liability resulted from the indemnitors' negligence and the indemnitee's negligence and willful misconduct was not within the prohibition of the statute (234 Cal. App. 3d 1724, 1737-1738) .

The court essentially viewed the fraud as collateral conduct, not directly relevant to the liability for which indemnity was sought. The indemnity agreements did not purport to provide indemnity for fraud, but rather for damages other than those due to the developer's sole negligence or misconduct or due to the fault or failure of the subcontractors to meet the requirements of the particular specifications. The developer was not seeking indemnity for damages paid to the owners for fraud, but rather for losses due, at least in part, to the negligence and failure to meet the specifications of the subcontractors (234 Cal. App. 3d 1724, 1741-1742) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.36

§ 115.36 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnity Clause At Issue Is One Expressly Excepted From Public-Policy Bar to Enforceability [Civ. Code §§ 2782, 2784.5]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COURT SHOULD GIVE FULL EFFECT TO THE EXPRESS INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES BECAUSE THE INDEMNITY AGREEMENT INVOLVED IN THIS ACTION IS EXPRESSLY EXCEPTED FROM THE PROVISIONS OF SECTION _____ [2872 or 2784.5] OF THE CIVIL CODE.

[EITHER]

Inapplicability to Insurance Contracts. Sections 2782 and 2784.5 of the Civil Code expressly exclude from their provisions insurance contracts, workers' compensation insurance contracts, and agreements issued by an admitted insurer (Civ. Code §§ 2782(a), 2784.5).

[OR]

Accommodation Agreement. Section 2782 of the Civil Code does not prevent a contractor responsible for the performance of a construction contract from fully indemnifying a person, firm, corporation, state, or other agency for whose account the construction contract is not being performed but who, as an accommodation, enters into an agreement with the contractor permitting the contractor to enter on or adjacent to its property for the purpose of performing the construction contract for others (Civ. Code § 2782.1).

[OR]

Agreement on Liability for Design Defect. Section 2782 of the Civil Code does not prevent a party to a construction contract and the owner or other party for whose account the construction contract is being performed from negotiating and expressly agreeing with respect to the allocation, release, liquidation, exclusion, or limitation as between the parties of any liability (1) for design defects or (2) of the promisee to the promisor arising out of or relating to the construction contract (Civ. Code § 2782.5; Markborough Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 705).

[OR]

Agreement to Indemnify Professional Engineer. Section 2782(a) of the Civil Code does not prevent an agreement to indemnify a professional engineer against liability for the negligence (but not willful misconduct) of the engineer or the engineer's agents or employees in providing inspection services to plants or other facilities if all of the following criteria are satisfied: (1) the promisor is the owner of the plants or facilities inspected; (2) the promisor is audited annually by an independent certified public accountant, public accountant, or accounting licentiate of another state authorized by the laws of that state to perform the audit; (3) the net worth of the promisor as of the time the contract for indemnification was entered into exceeded $10 million, as determined by the promisor's most recent annual independent audit; (4) the promisor is self-insured with respect to liability arising from ownership of the plant or facility; and (5) the indemnification does not apply to the first $250,000 of liability (Civ. Code § 2782.2).

[OR]

Professional Services Regarding Hazardous Materials. Section 2782(a) of the Civil Code does not prevent an agreement, other than an agreement by a public entity, to indemnify a professional engineer or geologist (or their agents, employees, independent contractors, or subsidiaries) from liability for damages in excess of $250,000 that are caused by the sole negligence (but not gross negligence or willful misconduct) of the engineer or geologist in providing hazardous materials identification, evaluation, preliminary assessment, design, remediation services, or other services as described in Sections 25322 and 25323 of the Health & Safety Code or the federal National Oil and Hazardous Substances Pollution Contingency Plan, Section 300.1 et seq. of Title 40 of the Code of Federal Regulations, if the services, in whole or in part, address subterranean contamination or other concealed conditions caused by the hazardous materials, and the promisor is responsible, or potentially responsible, for all or part of the contamination (Civ. Code § 2782.6).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that the indemnity provision on which the claim is based is expressly excepted by statute from the provisions of Civ. Code § 2782 or 2784.5. These statutes provide that unless one of the statutory exceptions applies, an indemnity agreement that purports to relieve the indemnitee of responsibility for its sole negligence or willful misconduct is against public policy and unenforceable [see Civ. Code §§ 2782(a), 2784.5; see also § 115.42]. The various alternative provisions set forth the statutory exception for insurance contracts [see Civ. Code §§ 2782(b), 2784.5 (first alternative paragraph)]; accommodation agreements [see Civ. Code § 2782.1 (second alternative paragraph)]; design defects [see Civ. Code § 2782.5 (third alternative paragraph)]; inspection services of professional engineers [see Civ. Code § 2782.2 (fourth alternative paragraph)]; and certain services of professional engineers or geologists with regard to the clean-up of hazardous materials, as defined [see Civ. Code § 2782.6 (fifth alternative paragraph)]. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.42.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the applicability of the statutory exception to the nonenforceability may be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from all loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) the agreement in question is contained in, is collateral to, or affects a construction contract [see Civ. Code §§ 2782, 2783] or a hauling, trucking, or cartage contract [see Civ. Code § 2784.5]; and (3) the agreement either expressly provides for or may be construed to provide for indemnity for loss arising from the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct, or, in the case of a construction contract, for defects in design furnished by the indemnitee. The facts that bring the agreement within one or more of the express statutory exceptions to nonenforceability, as set forth in the alternate paragraphs above, should then be established.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement on Liability for Design Defect

Markborough Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1991) 227 Cal. App. 3d 705, 277 Cal. Rptr. 919 , involved a dispute between a developer of real property (Markborough) and an engineering firm (Glenn) that had designed an artificial lake which the developer subsequently constructed on the property. The contract contained a clause limiting Glenn's liability to Markborough for professional negligence to the greater of $50,000 or Glenn's consulting fee on the project. The clause was not expressly bargained for between the parties, but was one of a number of fine-print, boilerplate provisions on the reverse of Glenn's standard form agreement. The lake design was flawed; the lake liner failed; and Markborough incurred over $5 million in costs to remedy the problem. Markborough sued Glenn for breach of contract, but the trial court enforced the limitation of liability and awarded Markborough only the consulting fee of $67,640 in damages. Markborough sought review by writ of mandate.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting all of Markborough's arguments that the limitation-of-liability clause was outside the scope of Civ. Code § 2782.5 and thus unenforceable under Civ. Code § 2782 [see § 115.42]. The court surveyed the legislative history and concluded that Civ. Code § 2782 was intended to prohibit one party to a construction contract from avoiding liability to third parties because of its sole negligence (or willful misconduct) by forcing the other party to provide indemnification. Civ. Code § 2782.5 was intended to reaffirm and clarify that limitation-of-liability provisions between a property owner and a contractor remain valid. Thus, Civ. Code § 2782 speaks to liability of the parties to third persons; Civ. Code § 2782.5 speaks to allocation of liability as between the parties themselves (227 Cal. App. 3d 705) . As the provision at issue was a limitation-of-liability clause between the parties themselves and not an indemnity clause with regard to liability to third parties, it was within Civ. Code § 2782.5 and not invalid under Civ. Code § 2782.

The court then held that there is no affirmative duty to specifically advise the other party of the inclusion of a limitation of liability clause in a construction contract, or to inform the other party of the risks involved in the project (227 Cal. App. 3d 705) . Finally, the court construed the word "negotiate" in Civ. Code § 2782.5 to simply mean that each party had an opportunity to accept, reject, or modify the provision. If the parties had such an opportunity, the provision is valid even if there was no actual discussion regarding the provision. Whether the parties had that ability or right depends on a consideration of all the facts surrounding the transaction, including, but not limited to, whether the parties were of relatively equal bargaining power and whether it was an arm's length transaction (227 Cal. App. 3d 705) .

In the case before it, the court found that two equal bargainers had, by contract, agreed concerning the allocation of risk (and to the responsibility to insure against that risk) between them. There was no justification for transferring the risk in any manner other than as the parties had agreed (227 Cal. App. 3d 705) .

135 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.37

§ 115.37 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Collateral Estoppel Bars Relitigation of Indemnitor's Liability to Third Person if Indemnitor Was Party to Prior Action

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITOR IS COLLATERALLY ESTOPPED FROM RELITIGATING ANY ELEMENT OF ITS NEGLIGENCE IN THIS ACTION TO ENFORCE THE PARTIES' INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BECAUSE LITIGATION OF AN UNDERLYING ACTION TO WHICH INDEMNITOR WAS A PARTY RESULTED IN A FINAL JUDGMENT DETERMINING THAT INDEMNITOR WAS NEGLIGENT.

Relitigation of Indemnitor's Negligence. Under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, a determination in a prior action that an indemnitor was negligent bars relitigation of any element of its negligence in a subsequent action on an indemnity agreement (see San Diego Gas & Elec. Co. v. Davey Tree Surgery Co. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 1096, 1101).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that a prior judgment conclusively determines that the indemnitor's negligence proximately caused the loss for which indemnity is sought, and that the indemnitor is collaterally estopped from relitigating any element of its negligence in a subsequent proceeding on an indemnity agreement. Under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, judgment in a prior action bars the party against whom it was entered from relitigating any issue in a subsequent action that was actually litigated and determined in the prior action [Saunders v. New Capital for Small Businesses, Inc. (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 324, 330, 41 Cal. Rptr. 703] . For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or motion for summary adjudication of issues, depending on whether the operation of collateral estoppel will resolve all issues in the second action. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) an action was brought against both the indemnitee and the indemnitor on a claim for which the indemnitee now seeks indemnity under the agreement; (3) pursuant to that action, the indemnitor was determined, either by the trier of fact or as a matter of law, to have been negligent; and (4) the action by the claimant resulted in a judgment, now final, against the indemnitor on the claim. The effect of this conclusive determination of negligence on the indemnity claim should also be shown. For example, in an appropriate case counsel should argue that the prior determination of the indemnitor's negligence forecloses a claim that indemnity should be denied because of the indemnitee's sole negligence.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Relitigation of Indemnitor's Negligence

San Diego Gas & Electric Co. v. Davey Tree Surgery Co. (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 1096, 89 Cal. Rptr. 702 , involved an injury suffered by an avocado picker when his picking pole came into contact with power lines that passed near the top of the tree in which he was working. The picker sued both the public utility responsible for the lines (SDG&E) and the company with which the utility had contracted for tree-trimming services along its right of way (Davey). SDG&E cross complained for express indemnity against Davey based on an indemnity clause in the contract. The clause required Davey to indemnify SDG&E from liability arising out of or connected in any manner with the performance of the work specified in the agreement.

Trial resulted in a verdict for the picker against both defendants, and Davey satisfied the judgment, reserving its right to seek contribution from SDG&E. It defended against SDG&E's cross complaint for indemnity on the ground that, under its contract with SDG&E, it assumed only a duty to keep trees from coming in contact with the wires to prevent the trees from endangering the lines and interrupting electrical service. It had no duty to keep the trees a safe distance from the power lines to protect pickers, and therefore, liability to the picker did not arise out of the performance of the work specified in the contract. The trial court rejected this argument and awarded SDG&E indemnity.

In affirming the judgment of indemnity, the court of appeal noted that Davey had presented the same argument regarding the scope of its duty under the contract in the trial on the picker's claim. Davey had moved for judgment notwithstanding the verdict for the picker on the ground that the contract imposed no duty on Davey to the picker. The motion was denied, judgment against Davey was entered, and Davey took no appeal from that judgment. Under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, the prior judgment was a conclusive determination of Davey's duty under the tree-trimming contract to trim trees in such a way as to protect the safety of persons working in the trees. This duty having been conclusively determined, Davey could not assert in a subsequent action on the indemnity clause that liability for the picker's injuries was not covered by the indemnity clause (11 Cal. App. 3d 1096, 1100-1101) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.38

§ 115.38 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee Was Justified In Incurring Attorneys' Fees to Defend Claim Covered by Indemnity Agreement

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN INDEMNITEE MAY RECOVER ATTORNEY'S FEES UNDER AN INDEMNITY AGREEMENT FOR COSTS INCURRED FOR THE DEFENSE OF A THIRD-PARTY CLAIM, IN GOOD FAITH AND IN THE EXERCISE OF REASONABLE DISCRETION, IF THERE IS SUFFICIENT JUSTIFICATION FOR THE DEFENSE.

A. Express Indemnity Embraces Costs of Defense. A contract of indemnity embraces the costs of defense against claims, demands, or liability incurred by the indemnitee in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion (Civ. Code § 2778(3)).

B. Sufficient Justification for Indemnitee's Defense. An indemnitee may recover attorney's fees from the indemnitor for its defense of a third-party action if it can show a contractual right or sufficient justification or need for a separate defense (Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 371, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369).

[Optional] C. Indemnitor's Refusal to Defend Action. If an indemnitor is properly notified of an action brought against the indemnitee by a third-party and does not defend the action, thus causing the indemnitee to incur the costs and attorneys' fees necessary in presenting its own defense, the costs are considered as incurred in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion, and may be recovered from the indemnitor (Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 371, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369 ; see County of San Joaquin v. Stockton Swim Club (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 968, 973, 117 Cal. Rptr. 300).

[Optional] D. Conflict of Interest. An indemnitee may recover attorney's fees for the costs of a separate defense of a third-party action, even though the indemnitor undertakes the defense of the indemnitee, if there is a conflict of interest between the parties and the defense provided by the indemnitor is not fully protective of the indemnitee's interests (see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 114-116, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820).

[Optional] E. Liability to Provide Defense When No Liability for Indemnity. An indemnitor may be required by contract to provide a defense, or failing to do so, pay costs incurred by the indemnitee in providing its own defense, even when the indemnitor is ultimately found not to be liable to provide indemnity (Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541, 553, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721, 187 P.3d 424).

[Optional] F. Underlying Complaint Need Not Specifically Allege Negligence of Indemnitor. The underlying complaint need not allege negligence specifically on the part of the indemnitor in order to trigger a duty to defend on the part of that indemnitor, and it is sufficient that the complaint describe factual circumstances that suggest the possible negligence of the indemnitor, and the indemnitee then specify in a cross-complaint or otherwise that at least some of the damage would have been caused by the indemnitor's negligence (UDC-Universal Development, L.P. v. CH2M Hill (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 10, 21, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684).

[Optional] G. Indemnitee's Failure to Tender Defense. If the indemnitor does not offer to provide a defense, the fact that the indemnitee provides its own defense without first tendering defense of the action to the indemnitor will not preclude the indemnitee from recovering its defense costs, at least in the absence of language in the indemnity agreement that demonstrates a contrary intent (City of Watsonville v. Corrigan (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548-1552, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that the costs of its separate defense of a third-party claim are recoverable from the indemnitor under an indemnity agreement. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.43, that if the indemnitor provides a defense of the claim, the indemnitee is not entitled to recover the cost of its separate, voluntary, defense.

Paragraph A sets forth the basic statutory rule that an indemnitor is liable for the costs of defense incurred by an indemnitee in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion [Civ. Code § 2778(3)]. Paragraph B sets forth the basic principle that the indemnitee may recover the costs of a separate defense if the right is provided for in the agreement or if there is sufficient justification for the separate defense. Optional Paragraphs C and D set forth two situations that have been found to constitute sufficient justification; the indemnitor's refusal to defend (Paragraph C), and the existence of a conflict of interest (Paragraph D). Optional Paragraphs E and F support the contention that a duty to defend is separate from a duty to indemnify and arises even if the indemnitor is ultimately found not to be negligent. Optional Paragraph G states that the indemnitee's failure to tender the defense to the indemnitor does not preclude the recovery of defense costs.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or motion for summary adjudication of the issue of damages recoverable under the indemnity agreement, if the indemnitee's right to a separate defense at the indemnitor's expense may be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) an action was brought against the indemnitee on a claim that was within the scope of the indemnity agreement; and (3) the indemnitee provided its own defense of that claim for which it now seeks indemnity under the agreement. The facts that indicate why the indemnitee was justified in conducting its own separate defense, for example, that the indemnitor refused to defend or that the indemnitor's defense did not adequately protect the indemnitee's interests, should also be established.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Justification for Indemnitee's Defense

Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369 , is discussed in § 115.43[3][a]. This case holds against the indemnitee and establishes the principle that the indemnitee is generally not entitled to reject the indemnitor's tendered defense, conduct its own defense, and then recover the cost of that defense from the indemnitor under the indemnity agreement. In so holding, the court noted two basic exceptions to the general rule; first, such a right might be expressly provided for in the indemnity agreement; and second, the indemnitee might be able to make a showing of sufficient justification or need for a separate defense that would bring the cost of the defense within the rule of Civ. Code § 2778(3), that an indemnitee may recover costs of defense incurred in good faith, and in the exercise of a reasonable discretion (252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 371) .

[b] Indemnitor's Refusal to Defend Action

County of San Joaquin v. Stockton Swim Club (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 968 , 117 Cal. Rptr. 300 , involved an indemnity agreement under which a private swim club agreed to indemnify various public entities with regard to its use of public swimming facilities. A member of the swim club was injured at one of the facilities and brought suit against the club and the public entities. The public entities called on the swim club to defend the action pursuant to the indemnity agreement, but the club refused. The entities then conducted their own defense of the action and also cross complained against the swim club for indemnity, including the costs of defense. The plaintiff's action resulted in a judgment in favor of all defendants, including the swim club. However, the court awarded the public entities judgment on the cross complaint against the swim club for the cost of the defense.

One reason that the swim club had rejected the defense was its belief that the indemnity agreement did not extend to the public entities' own negligence or the defective condition of its property. On appeal, the court found this question to be irrelevant. The question was only whether the public entities' cost of defending themselves was within the contract language as a "cost or expense that may arise during or be caused in any way by such use or occupancy of the property." The court affirmed the trial court's holding that the expenses were covered by the agreement (42 Cal. App. 3d 968, 973) . No reference is made in the opinion to Civ. Code § 2778(3) and (4), but the result is consistent with the statutes.

Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369 , is discussed in §§ 115.38[3][a] and 115.43[3][a]. The court offered the following dicta: "If the indemnitor is properly notified and does not avail itself of the opportunity to defend an action, thus causing the indemnitee to incur the costs and attorneys' fees necessary in presenting his own defense, this is considered a cost of defense incurred in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion, for which the indemnitee may recover" (252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 371) .

[c] Conflict of Interest

Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820 , was an appeal from a superior court judgment in an action for indemnity. Safeway Stores and defendant King, a general contractor, had entered into a written contract for the construction of a new store. The contract contained a hold-harmless and indemnification clause that imposed on King the obligation of furnishing a performance bond, which the contractor secured from a bonding company. In construction of the store, King used poor quality roof trusses. The trusses collapsed, and six of King's employees were injured. They brought suit for damages against Safeway and the supplier of the trusses. Safeway called on King to defend the action under the indemnity agreement. King accepted the defense without qualification, and his attorney undertook the joint representation of the two parties. However, it soon became apparent to Safeway that there was a conflict between its interests and the defense being provided by King. The attorney was taking the position that if it should be determined that Safeway was negligent in causing the accident, regardless of the character of that negligence as active or passive, King would deny liability under the indemnity agreement. Safeway felt that there was a conflict of interest and retained its own attorney, who assumed the active control of the defense.

The trial court adjudged that Safeway was entitled to be indemnified under the provisions of the construction contract for all loss, damage, and expense, including legal fees. The court of appeal affirmed this judgment, holding that Safeway was justified in providing its own defense. The defense provided to Safeway by King was qualified and technical and not fully promotive of Safeway's interests. King's defense for Safeway amounted to a refusal to defend Safeway's real interests; King failed to perform his obligations under the indemnity contract; and Safeway did not, as a result, voluntarily employ its own counsel (202 Cal. App. 2d 99,114-116).

NOTE:

A conflict of interest would seem to be present if the indemnitor may be able to deny liability under the agreement based on the indemnitee's sole or active negligence or willful misconduct [see §§ 115.40 and 115.42]. It is in the interests of the indemnitor to attach the greatest degree of culpability possible to the conduct of the indemnitee, in order to increase the likelihood that indemnity is not available. The situation in Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance Co., in which the indemnitee's counsel took over the entire defense from the indemnitor's counsel, seems only to reverse, rather than resolve, the conflict of interest.

[d] Liability to Provide Defense When No Liability for Indemnity

In Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721, 187 P.3d 424 , a housing developer had a contract with a subcontractor, a window manufacturer, under which the subcontractor agreed to both indemnify the developer for damage caused by the subcontractor's work and also defend the developer against any claims growing out of the execution of the subcontractor's work. The developer and the subcontractor were sued by homeowners for damage caused by allegedly defective windows and window framing, claims which came under the contractual language obligating the subcontractor to provide a defense for the developer. The subcontractor refused to provide a defense, the developer settled, and the developer then sought to recover its defense costs under the agreement. However, in the homeowners' suit against the subcontractor, the subcontractor was eventually found not to be negligent and thus owed no actual indemnity to the developer. The trial court nonetheless awarded the developer its defense costs from the subcontractor and another subcontractor. The window manufacturer subcontractor appealed. The court of appeal held that under the language of the particular indemnity agreement, the subcontractor was liable for its share of the developer's defense costs. Another appeal followed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that, unless the indemnity agreement provides otherwise, Civ. Code § 2778(4) effectively places in every indemnity contract a duty on the part of the indemnitor to assume the indemnitee's defense, if tendered, against all claims embraced by the indemnity agreement. This duty arises immediately upon a proper tender of defense by the indemnitee and does not first require a determination of whether indemnity is actually owed. Thus, this duty to defend does not depend on the outcome of the litigation for which defense is tendered (44 Cal. 4th 541, 557-558) . The Court also concluded that an indemnitor who refuses to provide a defense without a contractual basis for such refusal may subsequently owe damages in the form of reimbursement of defense costs to the indemnitee, even when the indemnitor is not otherwise liable for indemnity under the agreement because the indemnitee was not found liable to the third party (44 Cal. 4th 541, 557-558) .

[e] Underlying Complaint Need Not Specifically Allege Negligence of Indemnitor

In UDC-Universal Development, L.P. v. CH2M Hill (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 10, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 684 , a homeowner's association brought suit for construction defects against the developer of the condominium complex. The developer brought a cross-complaint for indemnity against subcontractor engineering consultants and other subcontractors, also tendering defense of the underlying action to the subcontractors pursuant to provisions in the hiring contracts. The engineering consultants generally denied the allegations of the cross-complaint and refused to provide a defense on the grounds that the underlying complaint did not allege that they were negligent. The developer eventually settled the underlying lawsuit and all cross-complaints except the one against the engineering consultants and trial proceeded on that action alone. A jury eventually found that the engineering consultants were not negligent and owed no indemnity to the developer. However, pursuant to the then-recent decision of the California Supreme Court in Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc. (2008) 44 Cal. 4th 541, 79 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721, 187 P.3d 424 , described in [d], above, the trial court ruled that despite the eventual finding that no indemnity was owed, the subcontractor had breached its contractual duty to provide the developer with a defense in the underlying action. The subcontractor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The subcontractor argued that the contract between the parties called for a defense only when the underlying claims arose out of its negligence, and that in this case, the jury had found that the subcontractor had not been negligent or breached its contract with the developer. Thus, according to the subcontractor, because the underlying complaint had not contained allegations that the subcontractor had been negligent, no duty to provide a defense arose. The court rejected this argument. The court noted that while the jury may have found that the subcontractor was not negligent and had not breached the subcontract during performance of the construction work, the issue of whether the refusal to provide a defense constituted a breach of contract was not submitted to the jury but was retained for decision by the trial judge. The court also noted that the contract with the consultants required them to defend any suit or action "aris[ing] out of or ... in any way connected with any negligent act or omission by" the subcontractor. Applying the Supreme Court's rationale in Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc., the court concluded that the contactual language was broad enough to generate a duty to defend whenever the underlying claims arose from work performed by the consultants, even though the consultants might eventually be found not to have been negligent (181 Cal. App. 4th 10, 18-21) . The court also concluded that the underlying complaint need not have alleged negligence specifically on the part of the consultants in order to trigger a duty to defend on their part, and it was sufficient that the complaint described factual circumstances that suggested their possible negligence. In the instant case, the developer's cross-complaint, filed in response to the underlying complaint, specified that at least some of the damage would have been caused by the indemnitor's negligence, and this was sufficient to trigger the consultants' duty to defend (181 Cal. App. 4th 10, 21) .

[f] Indemnitee's Failure to Tender Defense

In City of Watsonville v. Corrigan (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 58 Cal. Rptr. 3d 458 , a city incurred defense costs after it was named a defendant in an action brought by property owners stemming from soil instability and landslides. The city eventually settled and an insurance payment was made on its behalf to the plaintiffs. The city filed a cross-action to recover its defense costs and attorney fees under express indemnity agreements with certain developers. The trial court ruled that the city could not recover its defense costs from the developers because it had failed to tender defense of the action against it to those developers. The city appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court rejected arguments based on the duty to defend imposed on insurers, noting that indemnity agreements are not construed like insurance policies, which are adhesion contracts and require an insured to tender defense of a claim to the insurer (149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548-1549) . The court noted that the indemnity agreement between the parties was silent on the issue of defense costs, and thus, the provisions of Civ. Code § 2778 were applicable when determining the rights of the parties (149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1548-1549) . Under Civ. Code § 2778(3), indemnity against claims includes recovery of the costs of defense incurred in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion. Although Civ. Code § 2778(4) obligates the indemnitor to provide a defense for the indemnitee, it does not mandate that the indemnitee tender defense of the claim to the indemnitor (149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1549) . The court concluded that if the indemnitor does not offer to provide a defense, the fact that the indemnitee provides its own defense without first tendering defense of the action to the indemnitor will not preclude the indemnitee from recovering its defense costs, at least in the absence of language in the indemnity agreement that demonstrates a contrary intent. The court of appeal remanded to the trial court to rule on the good faith and reasonableness of the costs and fees claimed by the city (149 Cal. App. 4th 1542, 1552-1553) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Indemnitor's Refusal to Defend Action

In United States Elevator Corp. v. Pacific Inv. Co. (1994) 30 Cal. App. 4th 122, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 , the indemnitee under an express indemnity agreement tendered its defense of a third party action to the indemnitor, but the indemnitor refused it. The indemnitee then provided for its own defense and cross complained against the indemnitor for its costs and attorney's fees incurred in the defense. The indemnitor settled the matter, paid the entire settlement amount, and obtained a dismissal with prejudice as to all defendants including the indemnitee. On trial of the cross complaint, the court held that the indemnitor had no obligation to indemnify the indemnitee because there was neither a judgment against the indemnitee nor any payment made by the indemnitee on the liability (30 Cal. App. 4th 122, 124-125) .

The court of appeal reversed. It held that under Civ. Code § 2778(4), unless there is a contrary intention in the agreement, the indemnitor under an express indemnity must defend the indemnitee on demand. The duty to defend is imposed independently of any duty to indemnify; therefore, the fact that the case was settled without the indemnitee's incurring any liability was irrelevant to the duty to assume the indemnitee's defense (30 Cal. App.4th 122, 126-129) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.39

§ 115.39 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee May Not Recover for Loss That Is Beyond Terms of Agreement

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE IT SEEKS INDEMNIFICATION FOR A LOSS THAT IS NOT WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THE INDEMNITY AGREEMENT.

Losses Beyond Scope of Indemnity Agreement. An indemnity agreement is to be construed like any other contract with a view to determining the actual intention of the parties, and the terms of the writing will not be extended by implication; therefore, an indemnitee cannot recover beyond the terms of the agreement (Southern Cal. Gas Co. v. Ventura Pipe Line Constr. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 253, 257, 309 P.2d 849).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the indemnitee's claim for indemnity exceeds the scope of an express indemnity agreement between the parties. The points and authorities in § 115.63 are for use by the express indemnitor in support of its claim for implied indemnity with regard to the same occurrence, based on the limited scope of the indemnity agreement.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the indemnitor's nonliability may be established as a matter of law from the four corners of the indemnity agreement. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) that the indemnitee incurred a loss for which it is seeking indemnity pursuant to the agreement; and (3) the loss for which indemnity is sought is not one for which the agreement, expressly or by implication, provides a right of indemnity.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

For points and authorities supporting the contention that an indemnitee is entitled to indemnification on the same basis, see § 115.30.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Losses Beyond Scope of Indemnity Agreement

Southern Cal. Gas Co. v. Ventura Pipe Line Constr. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 253, 309 P.2d 849 , was an appeal from a judgment of the trial court for plaintiff-indemnitee (Gas Co.) on a written indemnity agreement given by defendant-indemnitor (Ventura). The owner of certain land had granted an easement to Gas Co. for laying a pipeline across the land. Gas Co. executed an indemnity agreement with the landowner under which Gas Co. agreed to indemnify the landowner against claims arising from exercise of the easement rights, regardless of any negligence of the owner. Gas Co. then hired Ventura to install the pipeline, and Ventura, in turn, executed an indemnity agreement with Gas Co.

This agreement contained two pertinent provisions. Under the first, Ventura agreed to indemnify Gas Co. from liability and claims for injury or death of any employee of Ventura or any subcontractor. Under the second, Ventura agreed to indemnify Gas Co. against claims for injury or death of all other persons and property, including employees and property of Gas Co., but excluding claims resulting solely from negligence on the part of Gas Co.'s employees or representatives. No mention was made in the Ventura-Gas Co. agreement of the liability that Gas Co. had agreed to assume under its easement with the landowner, and Ventura had no knowledge of this agreement (150 Cal. App.2d 253, 255-256) .

During construction, an employee of Ventura was killed, and the employee's widow brought a third party wrongful death action under workers' compensation law against the landowner, but not Gas Co. The landowner called on Gas Co. to defend the action under the terms of the indemnity agreement between them, and Gas Co. agreed to pay the expenses of the defense. Gas Co. then called on Ventura to assume the defense and its costs pursuant to their indemnity agreement, but Ventura refused. A verdict in the wrongful death action for the widow was reversed on appeal. Gas Co. then sued Ventura for recovery of the defense costs.

In reversing the judgment for Gas Co., the court of appeal discussed the rules governing the construction of contracts, particularly the controlling issue of the intent of the parties, and stated that an indemnitee could not recover beyond the terms of the indemnity contract. The court construed the first provision of Ventura's indemnity agreement with Gas Co. as intended to indemnify Gas Co. in the case of a third party action against Gas Co. by an employee whose exclusive remedy against Ventura was under workers' compensation [see Lab. Code § 3864 (requiring express agreement in order for liable third party to recover indemnity from employer of injured employee); see also §§ 115.34, 115.74]. The second provision was also construed as referring only to liability incurred by Gas Co. pursuant to a claim that Gas Co. itself had been negligent. The expense that was incurred by Gas Co. did not arise in any way from any claim of negligence against Gas Co., but solely from the separate agreement between it and the landowner. Protection against liability arising from that agreement could not be implied with respect to Ventura because it had no knowledge of the agreement. It was not within the scope of the Ventura-Gas Co. agreement because it was not one of the things concerning which the parties intended to contract (150 Cal. App.2d 253, 257-260) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.40

§ 115.40 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Is General and Does Not Provide Indemnity for Active Negligence of Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES IS A GENERAL INDEMNITY AGREEMENT, WHICH DOES NOT EXPRESSLY PROVIDE INDEMNITY FOR LOSS CAUSED, WHOLLY OR IN PART, BY THE INDEMNITEE'S OWN NEGLIGENCE, AND INDEMNITEE WAS ACTIVELY NEGLIGENT.

A. Strict Construction of Indemnity Agreement Against Indemnitee. A contract of indemnity that purports to relieve the indemnitee from the results of a failure to exercise ordinary care should be strictly construed against the indemnitee, and will not be held to provide indemnity unless so expressed in clear and unequivocal terms (Goldman v. Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 40, 44, 41 Cal. Rptr. 73, 396 P.2d 377).

B. General Indemnity Clause. An indemnity clause that is phrased in general terms and does not expressly state that damage caused by the indemnitee's negligence is included in the indemnity coverage does not indemnify against liability or loss caused by the indemnitee's active negligence (Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 114, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575 ; see Vinnell Co. v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 411, 415, 340 P.2d 604).

C. Active Negligence. An indemnitee who participates in some manner in the conduct or omission that caused the injury, beyond the mere failure to perform a duty imposed by law, is actively negligent (Morgan v. Stubblefield (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 606, 625, 100 Cal. Rptr. 1, 493 P.2d 465 ; MacDonald & Kruse, Inc. v. San Jose Steel Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 105 Cal. Rptr. 725).

[Optional] D. Knowledge of or Acquiescence in Act as Active Negligence. Active negligence may consist of the actual connection with an act or omission of another by knowledge of or acquiescence in the act or omission (Jimenez

v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 112, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575).

[Optional] E. Strict Liability as Active Negligence. An indemnitor is not liable to indemnify an indemnitee under a general indemnity agreement if the indemnitee is found passively negligent but strictly liable, because strict liability is equated with active negligence for purposes of construing an indemnification agreement (Widson v. International Harvester Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 45, 59-60, 200 Cal. Rptr. 136 ; see Price v. Shell Oil Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 245, 85 Cal. Rptr. 178, 466 P.2d 722).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that its indemnity agreement is general and does not provide for indemnity if the indemnitee's own active negligence was a proximate cause of the loss. Paragraph A sets forth the basic principle that an indemnity agreement that purports to indemnify the indemnitee for its own negligence is to be construed strictly against the indemnitee. Paragraph B sets forth the principle that a general indemnity agreement--that is, one that does not expressly provide indemnity for loss caused by the indemnitee's own negligence--does not protect the indemnitee from its "active" negligence. Paragraph C sets forth a general definition of active negligence. Optional Paragraphs D and E are for use with regard to particular conduct that is considered to be active negligence: knowledge of or acquiescence in the negligent act of another (Paragraph D), and strict liability (Paragraph E).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the character of the indemnity agreement as general and the character of the indemnitee's negligence as active may be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an indemnity agreement under which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee for loss; (2) the agreement made no mention of indemnity for the indemnitee's own negligence; and (3) the particular loss incurred for which indemnity is sought was proximately caused by the indemnitee's own negligence. The particular negligent acts of the indemnitee should then be established. Finally, a connection should be made between these acts and one or more of the characterizations of active negligence set forth in this form.

[b] Active and Passive Negligence

The decision in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 591-598, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 , discarded the use of an active-passive distinction of negligence insofar as the distinction required an all-or-nothing result with regard to comparative indemnity [see § 115.60]. However, American Motorcycle did not involve express contractual indemnity and did not alter the rule of general indemnity agreements and active and passive negligence.

Almost immediately after American Motorcycle, the California Supreme Court reaffirmed the rule that an indemnity clause that does not address itself to the issue of an indemnitee's negligence is a general indemnity clause, which may be construed to provide indemnity for a loss resulting in part from an indemnitee's passive negligence but not active negligence [Gonzales v. R.J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 809-810 , P.2d 1190; see Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 111-117, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575 ; see also § 115.40[3][d]]. However, the Court previously made it clear that the above rule is simply one in aid of construction of the agreement, and that the determination as to whether an indemnity clause is general or specific or whether negligence is active or passive is never wholly dispositive. The proper approach is to determine whether the parties intended that the agreement provide indemnity for the particular liability of the indemnitee that is at issue [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 632-633, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; see § 115.33]. If so, under traditional contract and insurance principles, the agreement should be enforced.

In such an inquiry, the result does not rest on whether the indemnitee's negligence is characterized as active, passive, vicarious, contractual, or otherwise. Therefore, it would seem that the continuing validity of the active-passive distinction with regard to express indemnity agreements may be questioned.

[c] Opposing Memoranda

The points and authorities in § 115.33 may be used to oppose the analytical approach taken by the contentions supported by these points and authorities [see § 115.140[3][b]]. The points and authorities in § 115.32 may be used to oppose the narrower contention supported by the points and authorities of this form, that the indemnitee's negligence should be characterized as active.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Strict Construction of Indemnity Agreement Against Indemnitee

Goldman v. Ecco-Phoenix Elec. Corp. (1964) 62 Cal. 2d 40, 41 Cal. Rptr. 73, 396 P.2d 377 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an action for declaratory relief. General contractors (Clovis) had contracted with the City of San Francisco to build a firehouse, and a subcontractor (Ecco) had agreed to do all the electrical work in the construction of the building. The vice-president and foreman of Ecco was injured on the job site, and he brought an action for personal injuries against Clovis. On the basis of a provision in the subcontract, Clovis demanded that Ecco defend and indemnify it against any liability in the personal injury action. The provision stated that Ecco agreed "[t]o be bound to Clovis ... in the same manner and to the same extent as Clovis is bound to the Owner under the general contract, to the extent of work provided for in this agreement." Clovis argued that this language incorporated its own indemnity obligation to the city contained in the general contract (62 Cal. 2d 40, 42, ns.1, 2).

The trial court made no findings as to whether or not the negligence of either contractor contributed to the accident, but it held Ecco was obligated to indemnify Clovis. The Supreme Court reversed the judgment and remanded the case for a determination of whether or not the negligence of the general contractor contributed to the accident.

The Court held that the language of the contract was insufficient to provide indemnity for the indemnitee's own negligence. It stated that a contract of indemnity that purports to relieve the indemnitee from the results of a failure to use ordinary care, by himself or his employees, should be strictly construed against the indemnitee. The agreement will not be held to provide such indemnification unless so expressed in clear and unequivocal terms (62 Cal. 2d 40, 44, n.3).

[b] General Indemnity Clause

In Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575 , cross defendant, a subcontractor, had contracted with cross complainant, a general contractor, to provide a general right of indemnity in favor of the general contractor. The agreement apparently made no mention of a right of indemnity for the general contractor's own negligence. Two employees of the subcontractor were injured in a collapsed trench (one fatally), and plaintiffs brought actions against the general contractor for wrongful death and personal injuries. The trial court found that the general contractor was guilty of active negligence and denied its claim for indemnity against the subcontractor. The court of appeal affirmed. The court stated that an indemnity clause phrased in general terms will not be interpreted to provide indemnity for consequences resulting from the indemnitee's own actively negligent acts (185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 114) . The issue in the case, therefore, was whether there was evidence to support the finding that the general contractor was actively negligent [see § 115.40[3][d]].

NOTE:

The following language has been held to be general and insufficient to impose indemnity for active negligence: "in any suit at law," "from all claims for damages to persons," and "from any cause whatsoever" [Rossmoor Sanitation, Inc. v. Pylon, Inc. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 622, 628-629, 119 Cal. Rptr. 449, 532 P.2d 97 ; see Markley v. Beagle (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 951, 961, 59 Cal. Rptr. 809, 429 P.2d 129 ; Morgan v. Stubblefield (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 606, 626, 100 Cal. Rptr. 1, 493 P.2d 465] ; MacDonald & Kruse, Inc. v. San Jose Steel Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 422-423, 105 Cal. Rptr. 725 ; see also MacDonald & Kruse, Inc. v. San Jose Steel Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 422-423, 105 Cal. Rptr. 725] . However, a clause that provides for indemnity "except for loss caused solely by the negligence of the indemnitee" is not a general clause. It is not silent with respect to the issue of the indemnitee's negligence, and therefore, provides for indemnity for loss resulting from the combined negligence of the indemnitor and the indemnitee, whether the indemnitee's negligence is characterized as active or passive [Ralph M. Parsons Co. v. Combustion Equip. Assocs., Inc. (1985) 172 Cal. App. 3d 211, 220, 218 Cal. Rptr. 170 ; C.I. Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Johnson & Turner Painting Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1014-1018, 189 Cal. Rptr. 824 ; see § 115.35].

In Vinnell Co. v. Pacific Elec. Ry. Co. (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 411, 340 P.2d 604 , a railroad granted permission to a construction contractor to build a drain ditch across the railroad's yard and received an indemnity agreement in return. The agreement provided for indemnity for liability "howsoever same may be caused," but made no further mention of liability proximately caused by the railroad's own negligence. While the ditch was under construction, the railroad continued to operate in the yard, and negligently switched a string of its cars into an excavation, injuring an employee of the contractor.

On appeal, the California Supreme Court affirmed judgment for the contractor denying indemnity. The Court stated that the rule in California is that if the parties fail to refer expressly to negligence in their contract, the failure is evidence of the parties' intention not to provide for indemnity for the indemnitee's negligent acts. Had the railroad, which drafted the agreement, intended to provide for indemnity for its own negligence, it could have plainly so stated in the agreement (52 Cal. 2d 411, 415) .

CAUTION:

A court of appeal decision has criticized the Court's construction of the language of the agreement in Vinnell. In that case, the court of appeal stated, "To require that an express indemnity clause be cast in the rote form suggested by Vinnell is to compel contracting parties to lie upon a procrustean bed of linguistic formalism that inhibits the clear meaning of plain English" [C.I. Eng'rs & Constructors, Inc. v. Johnson & Turner Painting Co. (1983) 140 Cal. App. 3d 1011, 1018, 189 Cal. Rptr. 824 ; see also §§ 115.35, 115.40[2][b]].

[c] Active Negligence

Morgan v. Stubblefield (1972) 6 Cal. 3d 606, 100 Cal. Rptr. 1, 493 P.2d 465 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an action brought by employees of a subcontractor against the general contractor and the lessor of a rolling scaffold. The plaintiffs were injured when a wheel of the scaffold on which they were standing fell into a hole in the floor while it was being moved. Both defendants cross complained against the subcontractor, seeking express indemnity on the basis of separate indemnity clauses contained in the subcontract and the equipment lease. The superior court entered judgments in favor of the general contractor and against the scaffold lessor on the cross actions.

On appeal, the California Supreme Court held in favor of the indemnitor subcontractor on both agreements, affirming the judgment against the equipment lessor and reversing the judgment in favor of the general contractor. The Court construed both indemnity clauses at issue as general and not providing indemnity for the indemnitee's active negligence. The court stated that a party seeking indemnity who personally participates in an affirmative act of negligence, or who is physically connected with an act or omission by knowledge or acquiescence in it, or who fails to perform some duty in connection with the omission that the party may have undertaken under the agreement, may not obtain indemnity. The crux of the inquiry is to determine whether there is participation in some manner by the person seeking indemnity in the conduct or omission that caused the injury, beyond the mere failure to perform a duty imposed by law (6 Cal. 3d 606, 625) .

The Court then found both indemnitees to be actively negligent as a matter of law. The subcontractor had relied on the equipment lessor to select the scaffold components that it deemed appropriate for the job. The lessor was familiar with the job site and aware of the safety regulations for scaffolds, but nevertheless chose components that did not meet the safety requirements (6 Cal. 3d 606, 625-626) . The general contractor had cut a hole in the floor and had not properly covered it in a building with insufficient lighting, all in violation of construction safety orders. Thus, the general contractor had negligently created the condition that was the cause of the injuries (6 Cal. 3d 606, 626-627) .

In MacDonald & Kruse, Inc. v. San Jose Steel Co. (1972) 29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 105 Cal. Rptr. 725 , the court of appeal reached the question of whether the indemnitee's negligence was active or passive only in dicta, having previously held that the terms of the agreement did not extend to the liability at issue. The indemnitee was a general contractor on a freeway-widening project. On the job site, an employee of a subcontractor was injured in a 32-foot fall. In its contract with the state, the general contractor had agreed to provide all safety devices and protective equipment. A safety order required the use of safety nets for elevations above 25 feet. The general contractor did not have enough safety nets for the entire project. The court stated that the failure to provide safety equipment as required in its contract with the state was active negligence (29 Cal. App. 3d 413, 424-425) .

[d] Knowledge of or Acquiescence in Act as Active Negligence

The procedural background and construction of the indemnity clause in Jimenez v. Pacific W. Constr. Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 229 Cal. Rptr. 575 are discussed in § 115.40[3][b]. One employee of a subcontractor was killed and another injured when a trench in which they were standing caved in. The sides of the trench had a vertical slope, in violation of safety regulations, which required that the trench be either shored or sloped back.

The issue was whether the general contractor was barred from obtaining indemnity because of its active negligence. The general contractor's foreman and safety inspector was on the job site, daily and had observed the trench. There was evidence to support the inference that the foreman had actual knowledge of the dangerous condition of the trench. On these facts, the court of appeal held that active negligence was established and denied indemnity. The court felt compelled by stare decisis to hold that active negligence is established if the indemnitee has actual knowledge of a dangerous condition (185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 111-113) .

Nevertheless, the court strongly expressed the opinion that the rule should be reexamined to the extent that it applies to cases in which the dangerous condition was created by the indemnitor. The court stated that a rule of law that permits a party who creates a dangerous condition to be relieved of financial responsibility for injuries caused by the condition if the indemnitee's negligence consists of no more than inaction is unsound (185 Cal. App. 3d 102, 115-117) .

[e] Strict Liability as Active Negligence

Widson v. International Harvester Co. (1984) 153 Cal. App. 3d 45, 200 Cal. Rptr. 136 , was an action for injuries based on both product defect and negligence theories. A worker at a construction site was injured when an earth-moving machine backed over him. His employer had leased the machine directly from the manufacturer (Harvester). The employee brought suit against Harvester and others. Harvester filed a cross complaint against the employer-lessee for express indemnity based on the terms of its lease. The jury found that the machine had a design defect and that Harvester, although strictly liable, was only passively negligent. The trial court denied Harvester's indemnity claim against the employer.

The court of appeal affirmed. It construed the indemnity agreement as general because it did not expressly provide for indemnification with regard to a defective product furnished by Harvester. The characterization of Harvester's liability as passive was of no significance. Under California law, a manufacturer is strictly liable for injuries resulting from a defectively manufactured product, and the manufacturer may not limit or abrogate that liability by contract. The court stated that it would thwart basic public policy behind strict liability to permit indemnification of a strictly liable manufacturer under a general indemnity clause (153 Cal. App. 3d 45, 58-61) .

Price v. Shell Oil Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 245, 85 Cal. Rptr. 178, 466 P.2d 722 , also involved an indemnity agreement contained in an equipment lease. Shell, as lessor-indemnitee, had furnished a defective ladder that had caused personal injury. The California Supreme Court construed the indemnity clause as general and denied indemnity. The court stated that it thwarts the basic purpose of the strict liability doctrine to interpret a general clause as transferring the liability for a defective article from the party putting the article in the stream of commerce to the user or consumer of the article, who is within the class that the doctrine was designed to protect (2 Cal. 3d 245, 256-258) .

CAUTION:

In Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bailey & Sons, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519 , the court limited the rule of Widson and Price to cases involving strict products liability involving injury to the user of the product. In this case, Kelly was the general contractor and owner of a condominium project. The homeowers' association sued Kelly for construction defects alleging the strict liability of residential real estate developer for any defect in the project, regardless of whether the developer had any involvement in the conduct causing the defect. Maryland, Kelly's insurer, settled with the association on behalf of Kelly, and took an assignment of Kelly's rights against the subcontractors, several of whom had written indemnity agreements running in favor of Kelly.

The court of appeal found the agreements to be general agreements, on which recovery would be barred if it were determined that Kelly had been actively negligent [see § 115.33]. The indemnitors then relied on Widson and Price for the proposition that Kelly's strict liability was to be equated with active negligence, but the court rejected the proposition.

The court found that Widson and Price involved circumstances in which the strictly liable party who had put the defective product into the stream of commerce was seeking indemnity from the user of the product. To allow indemnification under these circumstances would permit that party to abrogate by contract its liability to the consumer, the party within the class that the strict liability doctrine was specifically intended to protect.

However, the court found these underlying policy considerations to be inapplicable to the case before it. Maryland did not seek indemnity from a consumer of a product; rather, it sought it from parties (subcontractors) who played an integral part in the creation of the product (condominiums). Because the subcontractors were involved exclusively in the production, rather than the use, of the final product, permitting a general contractor to seek indemnity from the culpable subcontractors was in no way inconsistent with Widson and Price. Instead, allowing indemnity furthered another important policy consideration; the sharing of fault among those whose conduct causes injury. General contractors ought to be allowed to spread the cost of their strict liability to culpable subcontractors [Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bailey & Sons, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 870-872, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Active Negligence

In McCrary Constr. Co. v. Metal Deck Specialists, Inc. (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 624 , a construction worker was killed when he fell through a hole cut into a roof by a roofing subcontractor. Employees of the roofing subcontractor had left the work site with the hole uncovered, and the superintendent of the general contractor, knowing of the danger, asked an employee for another subcontractor to cover the hole. However, that employee did not secure the plywood covering and the decedent, not knowing that there was a hole underneath, fell through the hole when attempting to lift the plywood. The general contractor and the roofing subcontractor were both found partly liable for wrongful death damages, and each paid their share of the damages in proportion to their assigned percentages of fault. The general contractor then sought indemnity from the roofing subcontractor, arguing that such indemnity was owed under their contract of hire. The indemnity agreement in that contract provided in general that the subcontractor would be liable to indemnify the general contractor for injuries cause by acts or omissions of the subcontractor or the agents or employees of the subcontractor. The court of appeal held that indemnity was inappropriate under this general indemnity clause, which did not specifically make the subcontractor liable for the general contractor's own negligence. The court noted that the general contractor was responsible for work place safety due to its status as general contractor, even though that responsibility was shared with its subcontractors under their contractual agreements. When the general contractor specifically assumed responsibility for eliminating the known danger of the hole left in the roof after the roofing subcontractor failed to correct the dangerous condition, the general contractor engaged in active negligence when it failed to ensure that the hole was covered and marked appropriately. Because the indemnity agreement with the subcontractor did not specifically cover the general contractor's own negligence, indemnity was inappropriate (133 Cal. App. 4th 1528, 1540-1541) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.41

§ 115.41 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Indemnitee's Active Negligence Was Adjudicated in Prior Action and Collateral Estoppel Bars Relitigation of Issue

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

AN INDEMNITEE IS COLLATERALLY ESTOPPED FROM RELITIGATING THE ISSUE OF WHETHER ITS CONDUCT AMOUNTED TO ACTIVE NEGLIGENCE IN AN ACTION FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY IF LITIGATION OF AN UNDERLYING CLAIM RESULTED IN A FINAL JUDGMENT CONCLUSIVELY DETERMINING THAT INDEMNITEE WAS ACTIVELY NEGLIGENT.

A. Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Negligence. An indemnitee may be collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue of its negligence if, in a prior action or proceeding within the same action that resulted in a judgment against the indemnitee, the indemnitee was found to have been negligent (King v. Timber Structures, Inc. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 178, 182-184, 49 Cal. Rptr. 414).

B. Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Character of Negligence as Active. An indemnitee who has been found to have been actively negligent in a prior action or proceeding within the same action is collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue of the characterization of its negligence as active or passive (see Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities, Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 663-664, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the indemnitee is collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue of whether its negligence should be characterized as active or passive because the issue was determined in a prior action. Under the doctrine of collateral estoppel, judgment in a prior action bars the party against whom it was entered from relitigating any issue in a subsequent action that was actually litigated and determined in the prior action [Saunders v. New Capital for Small Businesses, Inc. (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 324, 330, 41 Cal. Rptr. 703] . For further discussion, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 491, Res Judicata (Matthew Bender).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or motion for summary adjudication of issues, depending on whether the operation of collateral estoppel will resolve all issues in the second action. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) an action was brought against the indemnitee on a claim for which it now seeks indemnity under the agreement; (3) pursuant to that action, the indemnitee was determined, either by the trier of fact or as a matter of law, to have been actively negligent [see § 115.40]; (4) the action by the claimant against the indemnitee resulted in a judgment, now final, against the indemnitee on the claim; and (5) this finding of active negligence precludes indemnity under the general language of the indemnity agreement between the parties [see § 115.40].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Negligence

King v. Timber Structures, Inc. (1966) 240 Cal. App. 2d 178, 49 Cal. Rptr. 414 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an indemnity action. Six employees of a general contractor (King) were injured when the roof collapsed while they were constructing a building for Safeway Stores, Inc., and they brought an action against Safeway as owner of the building. Safeway settled and then brought an action against King and his surety on a contract of indemnity. In the same action, King cross complained against the subcontractor who had produced and erected the roof trusses (Timber Structures).

Timber Structures' motion for severance of the cross complaint was granted, and the main action of Safeway against King was tried first [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 114-116, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820 ; see also § 115.38]. The court found that King was negligent in installing inferior materials in the roof; by failing to install required bracing; by failing to maintain safeguards against accidents and injuries; and by overloading the building in a manner that endangered its safety. The court also found that King was in violation of several safety ordinances. No specific finding was made as to the character of King's negligence as active or passive because it was not at issue in the action on the agreement between King and Safeway (240 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180-181) .

King's cross complaint against Timber Structures then came to trial before a different judge. That judge reviewed the record in the Safeway-King trial and determined that the findings of negligence against King in that trial operate as a conclusive determination that King was guilty of active negligence. Indemnity on King's cross complaint was denied because it was based on a general indemnity agreement [see § 115.40], and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that it was proper for the second judge to invoke collateral estoppel to bar King from relitigating the issue of his negligence. Further, it was also proper for the second judge to decide as a matter of law that King's negligence was active, based on the findings of the prior trial (240 Cal. App. 2d 178, 182-185) .

[b] Collateral Estoppel to Relitigate Character of Negligence as Active

Burlingame Motor Co. v. Peninsula Activities Inc. (1971) 15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 93 Cal. Rptr. 376 , involved a number of leases and subleases for commercial property. Burlingame, the original lessee, subleased the premises first to Peninsula, and then to Dick Bullis, Inc., (Bullis) a corporation closely related to Peninsula. The subleases both contained indemnity clauses in favor of Burlingame as sublessor-indemnitee.

After the term of the Peninsula sublease and during the term of the Bullis sublease, an employee of Bullis was injured as a result of an explosion caused by two shortcircuiting wires. The employee sued Burlingame and Peninsula. Burlingame cross complained for express indemnity against Bullis and for implied indemnity against Peninsula. The three separate pleadings were trifurcated for trial.

In the trial of the employee's action, evidence established that the explosion was due to the negligent removal of certain equipment by Burlingame some years earlier, resulting in a dangerous condition of which both Peninsula and Bullis were aware during their subtenancies, but had taken insufficient steps to remedy. The employee recovered against both Burlingame and Peninsula.

The same jury next considered Burlingame's implied indemnity claim against Peninsula. It reached a determination that Burlingame's negligence should be characterized as active, which under the then-applicable law, constituted a complete bar to implied indemnity. The court of appeal upheld this finding (15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 660-662) .

In the third part of the trial, the court considered Burlingame's express indemnity claim against Bullis based on the sublease. The judge construed the indemnity clause as general, meaning that Burlingame could be indemnified only if its negligence were characterized as passive rather than active [see § 115.40]. He then made an independent finding, over and above the previous jury finding but based on the record of the previous trials, that Burlingame was actively negligent, and denied indemnity.

In affirming, the court of appeal held that the principle of collateral estoppel applied. The jury's finding of Burlingame's active negligence with regard to Peninsula was a final adjudication of the issue with regard to Bullis also. The court stated that negligence cannot be active as to one person and inactive as to another. The very nature of the inquiry into the character of negligence as active or passive is to determine whether the fault was that of an actor in the events or that of a person on whom responsibility has been fastened by operation of law due to mere inaction, such as a failure to make a discovery. The court also noted that the judge's independent finding of active negligence was not without effect because the question may be one of mixed fact and law, and that the court itself might be persuaded to regard Burlingame's negligence as active as a matter of law (15 Cal. App. 3d 656, 663-664) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.42

§ 115.42 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause in Construction Contract [Civ. Code § 2782] or Contract for Hauling, Trucking, or Cartage [Civ. Code § 2784.5] Providing for Indemnity Based on Indemnitee's Sole Negligence or Willful Misconduct Is Against Public Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE INDEMNITY CLAUSE ON WHICH IT IS BASED _____ [IS CONTAINED IN or IS COLLATERAL TO or AFFECTS] A _____ [CONSTRUCTION or HAULING or TRUCKING or CARTAGE) CONTRACT AND PURPORTS TO PROVIDE INDEMNITY FOR THE INDEMNITEE'S SOLE NEGLIGENCE AND WILLFUL MISCONDUCT, AND IS AGAINST PUBLIC POLICY, VOID, AND UNENFORCEABLE UNDER CALIFORNIA LAW.

[EITHER]

Void Indemnity Agreements in Construction Contracts. Provisions, clauses, covenants, or agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting any construction contract and that purport to indemnify the promisee against liability for damages for death or bodily injury to persons, injury to property, or any other loss, damage, or expense arising from the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the promisee or the promisee's agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the promisee, are against public policy and are void and unenforceable (Civ. Code § 2782(a); Southern Pacific Transportation Co. v. Sandyland Protective Assn. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1494, 1497-1498 ; see Gonzales v. R. J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 809 n.8, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190).

[OR]

Void Indemnity Provisions in Hauling, Trucking, or Cartage Contract. Any provision, promise, agreement, clause, or covenant contained in, collateral to, or affecting any hauling, trucking, or cartage contract or agreement is against public policy and is void and unenforceable if it purports to indemnify the promisee against liability that is caused by the sole negligence or willful misconduct of the promisee, or the agents, servants, or independent contractors directly responsible to the promisee, unless the agents, servants, or independent contractors are under the direct supervision and control of the promisor (Civ. Code § 2784.5).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the indemnity clause on which the indemnitee's claim is based is against public policy, void, and unenforceable because it purports to relieve the indemnitee from responsibility for its own sole negligence or willful misconduct. Such a clause is made void by statute in the case of construction contracts [see Civ. Code § 2782 (first alternative paragraph) and hauling, trucking, or cartage contracts [see Civ. Code § 2784.5 (second alternative paragraph)]].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the invalidity of the indemnity clause is alleged as a matter of law. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, or in an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) the agreement is contained in either a construction contract [see § 115.42[2][b]] or a hauling, trucking, or cartage contract; (3) either expressly or by implication, the agreement purports to extend to the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct; and (4) the loss for which indemnity was sought was proximately caused by the indemnitee's sole negligence or willful misconduct.

[b] Definition of Construction Contract

As used in Civ. Code § 2782, a "construction contract" is any written or oral agreement or understanding, respecting the construction, surveying, design, specifications, alteration, repair, improvement, maintenance, removal of or demolition of any building, highway, road, parking facility, bridge, railroad, airport, pier or dock, excavation or other structure, development or other improvement to real or personal property, or an agreement to perform any portion thereof or any act collateral thereto, or to perform any service reasonably related thereto, including, but not limited to, the erection of all structures or performance of work in connection therewith, the rental of all equipment, all incidental transportation, crane, and rigging service, and other goods and services furnished in connection therewith [Civ. Code § 2783].

[c] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.36 may be used to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Void Indemnity Provisions in Construction Contracts

In Southern Pacific Transportation Co. v. Sandyland Protective Assn. (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 1494 , a homeowners association and a railroad entered into an agreement under which the association agreed to construct and maintain a roadway so that its members would have access to their property across the railroad's tracks. The agreement provided that the association would also install and maintain signs, gates, or barricades as the railroad might designate or require, and that the railroad would maintain existing protective devices at the association's expense. The agreement also contained an express indemnity clause that required the association to indemnify the railroad for any negligence of the railroad.

Subsequently, a car was struck by a train at the crossing. The driver and passenger sued the railroad for personal injuries, alleging negligent operation of the train and negligent maintenance of the train, tracks, crossing, and signaling devices. The railroad cross complained against the association under the indemnity clause contained in the agreement.

The trial court granted summary judgment for the association under Civ. Code § 2782 on the express indemnity claim, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the railroad's claim that the statute invalidated indemnity only for negligence in breach of duties established by the agreement. The court read the statute broadly as extending to indemnity for any negligence of the indemnitee, no matter how arising, as long as it was "contained in, collateral to, or affecting" the construction contract. The court also rejected the railroad's argument that the railroad was not solely negligent because the injured plaintiffs in the action were concurrently negligent. The court construed the term "sole negligence" in the statute to mean that, as between the indemnitor and indemnitee under the contract, the indemnitee was solely negligent. Absent negligence on the part of the association, the negligence of the plaintiffs or of other third parties was immaterial (224 Cal. App. 3d 1494, 1498-1499) .

NOTE:
The railroad apparently did not cross complain under any theory of comparative indemnity or implied contractual indemnity arising from the association's possible negligent performance of its duties under the agreement [see § 115.60 et seq.].

Gonzales v. R. J. Novick Constr. Co. (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 798, 144 Cal. Rptr. 408, 575 P.2d 1190 , is discussed in § 115.34[3][a]. The Supreme Court held that the indemnitor's contention that the indemnity clause involved was rendered wholly void by the provisions of Civ. Code § 2782 was without merit. The Court commented, however, that the purpose of the legislature in passing Civ. Code § 2782 was to insure that an indemnitee would not, by contractual language, however specific, require indemnity for damages sustained as a result of its sole negligence or willful misconduct (20 Cal. 3d 798, 809 n.8).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawTypes of ContractsConstruction ContractsContracts LawTypes of ContractsCovenantsTortsNegligenceGeneral OverviewTortsNegligenceProofGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.42A

§ 115.42A Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Clause in Residential Construction Contract [Civ. Code § 2782] Providing for Indemnity of Builder or Contractor by Subcontractor for Negligence of Builder or Contractor Is Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR EXPRESS INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE INDEMNITY CLAUSE ON WHICH IT IS BASED _____ [IS CONTAINED IN or IS COLLATERAL TO or AFFECTS] A RESIDENTIAL CONSTRUCTION CONTRACT THAT WAS ENTERED INTO AFTER JANUARY 1, 2009, PURPORTS TO INDEMNIFY THE BUILDER OR A GENERAL CONTRACTOR OR CONTRACTOR NOT AFFILIATED WITH THE BUILDER BY A SUBCONTRACTOR AGAINST LIABILITY FOR CONSTRUCTION DEFECTS, AND IS UNENFORCEABLE UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 2782(c).

A. Indemnity of Residential Builder by Subcontractor for Builder's Negligence Unenforceable. For residential construction contracts entered into after January 1, 2009, provisions, clauses, covenants, and agreements contained in, collateral to, or affecting the construction contract and any amendments to the contract that purport to insure or indemnify, including the cost to defend, the builder or a general contractor or contractor not affiliated with the builder by a subcontractor against liability for claims of construction defects are unenforceable to the extent that those claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder, or contractor or the builder's or contractor's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or are for defects in design furnished by those persons, or to the extent those claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties (Civ. Code § 2782(c)).

B. Waiver Prohibited. The provisions of Civil Code Section 2782(c) may not be waived or modified by contractual agreement, act, or omission of the parties (Civ. Code § 2782(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention by an alleged indemnitor that the indemnity agreement is unenforceable because it is contained in, collateral to, or affects a residential construction contract, or its amendment, entered into after January 1, 2009, and purports to indemnify the builder or general contractor or other contractor not affiliated with the builder by a subcontractor against claims for construction defects. Such indemnity agreements are unenforceable under Civ. Code § 2782(c) to the extent that the underlying claims arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder or contractor or the builder's or contractor's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or are for defects in design furnished by those persons, or to the extent that those claims do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which these points are raised. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that: (1) the indemnity provision was contained in, was collateral to, or affects a residential construction contract entered into after January 1, 2009; (2) this indemnity agreement purports to indemnify the builder or general contractor or other contractor not affiliated with the builder by the subcontractor for construction defects; and (3) the underlying claims on which the indemnity claim is based arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the negligence of the builder or contractor or the builder's or contractor's other agents, servants, or independent contractors who are directly responsible to the builder, or are for defects in design furnished by those persons, or do not arise out of, pertain to, or relate to the scope of work in the written agreement between the parties.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsConstruction ContractsTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityGeneral OverviewTortsProcedureMultiple DefendantsIndemnityContractual IndemnityTortsProducts LiabilityDesign Defects

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.43

§ 115.43 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Agreement Does Not Provide for Recovery of Costs of Defense Voluntarily Assumed by Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

UNDER THE PARTIES' INDEMNITY AGREEMENT, INDEMNITEE IS PRECLUDED FROM RECOVERING ATTORNEYS' FEES INCURRED IN DEFENSE OF A THIRD-PARTY ACTION BECAUSE INDEMNITEE VOLUNTARILY INCURRED THESE COSTS DESPITE INDEMNITOR'S OFFER TO ASSUME THE DEFENSE, AND THE INDEMNITY AGREEMENT MAKES NO EXPRESS PROVISION FOR THEIR RECOVERY.

A. Indemnitor Must Assume Defense of Third-Party Action. An indemnitor is bound, on an indemnitee's request, to defend actions or proceedings brought against the indemnitee in respect to matters covered by the indemnity agreement (Civ. Code § 2778(4)).

B. Cost of Indemnitee's Voluntary Defense of Third-Party Claim Not Recoverable. Although an indemnitee has the right to conduct a defense of a third-party claim that is within the scope of an indemnity agreement, the indemnitor is not responsible for the costs of the defense if (1) the indemnitee has voluntarily assumed defense of the claim without sufficient justification, and (2) the indemnity agreement did not expressly provide for the recovery of such costs (Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 371-374, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369 ; see Civ. Code § 2778(3), (4); Goodman v. Severin (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 885, 897, 79 Cal. Rptr. 555).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the indemnitee may not recover its cost of defending a third-party claim that is within the scope of an express indemnity agreement between the parties because it voluntarily assumed that defense. Paragraph A sets forth the basic statutory policy requiring an indemnitor under an express indemnity agreement to assume the cost of defending a third-party claim [Civ. Code § 2778(4)]. Paragraph B sets forth the basic principle that the indemnitee is generally required to tender the defense to and accept the defense of the indemnitor, and that the failure to tender the defense will constitute a voluntary assumption of the defense costs.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the validity and scope of an express indemnity agreement is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or motion for summary adjudication of the issue of damages recoverable under the indemnity agreement, if the voluntary nature of the indemnitee's defense may be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions, but that did not require the indemnitor to pay the cost of the indemnitee's voluntarily assumed defense of a claim; (2) an action was brought against the indemnitee on a claim that was within the scope of the indemnity agreement; and (3) the indemnitee provided its own defense of that claim for which it now seeks indemnity under the agreement. The facts that indicate that the indemnitee's assumption of the defense was entirely voluntary--for example, that it gave the indemnitor no notice of the claim nor request to defend, or that it refused the indemnitor's tendered defense without justification--should also be established.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.38 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cost of Indemnitee's Voluntary Defense of Third-Party Claim Not Recoverable

Buchalter v. Levin (1967) 252 Cal. App. 2d 367, 60 Cal. Rptr. 369 , was an appeal from a judgment denying indemnity under an indemnity agreement for attorneys' fees incurred by the indemnitee in defending a third-party action. Indemnitees were buyers of certain real property. Previously, they had inspected the property with a real estate broker (Driscoll) for the purpose of possibly leasing it, but decided against the lease. They later contacted another broker (Levin) concerning the purchase of the property, and a sale was arranged with the owners. Advised that Driscoll might claim a commission on the sale of the property, buyers and Levin executed an indemnity agreement that required Levin to indemnify buyers against any liability to Driscoll for a commission on the sale. Driscoll did file suit against buyers, Levin, and others, and Levin offered to provide legal representation for buyers. Buyers, however, rejected this offer and hired other counsel, who filed a cross complaint against Levin for indemnity under the agreement. Levin subsequently negotiated a settlement of Driscoll's claim, and the action was dismissed with prejudice.

Buyers proceeded to trial on their cross complaint against Levin, seeking the cost of defending the Driscoll claim under the indemnity agreement. The court refused to award indemnity and the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted that under Civ. Code § 2778(3), an indemnitor is only liable for the indemnitee's costs of defense incurred in good faith and in the exercise of reasonable discretion. Under Civ. Code § 2778(4), it is clear that the indemnitee has the right to refuse the indemnitor's proffered defense and conduct its own defense. However, the court refused to construe this statute as giving the indemnitee the right to reject the indemnitor's defense without cause and still recover the separate costs of a defense voluntarily incurred (252 Cal. App2d 367, 374) . Absent some contractual privilege to do so or some showing of sufficient justification or need, the indemnitee may not refuse to join in or cooperate with the indemnitor's defense and still recover its separate and redundant attorneys' fees and costs. The indemnitee may not recover attorneys' fees for its own participation in the defense if the intervention is not required by the terms of the agreement and was wholly voluntary and gratuitous (252 Cal. App.2d 367, 371) .

In this case, the indemnity agreement stated that the buyers wished to avoid litigation. In light of such an understanding, they could not refuse Levin's offer of defense (252 Cal. App.2d 367, 375) . Because the buyers had no reason to believe that Levin would not provide them with a full and adequate defense or that he would be unable or unwilling to satisfy in full any judgment that might be rendered, there was no justification for a separate defense, and their attorney's fees were not incurred in good faith (252 Cal. App.2d 367, 373) .

Goodman v. Severin (1969) 274 Cal. App. 2d 885, 79 Cal. Rptr. 555 , involved a complex set of financial transactions involving a stock pledge for security for a loan. Severin gave a promise to the lender to repurchase the stock for the outstanding amount on the loan should the borrowers default. Ultimately, this agreement was construed as one for indemnity, and enforced against Severin. However, the court of appeal held that the agreement did not extend to the borrowers' costs of defending the action brought by the lender on their note. The court found that the stock repurchase-indemnity agreement was silent on the question of attorney's fees and that Civ. Code § 2778 therefore controlled. With respect to Civ. Code § 2778(4), the court relied on the language from Buchalter v. Levin, that absent some contractual privilege or sufficient justification, an indemnitee ordinarily may not refuse to join with the indemnitor's proffered defense and still recover its separate counsel fees. Because the officers had neither pleaded nor proved sufficient justification for a separate defense to the main action, there was no entitlement to indemnity for the costs of the defense (274 Cal. App.2d 885, 896-897) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of LawContracts LawContract Conditions & ProvisionsIndemnityContracts LawContract InterpretationGeneral OverviewContracts LawTypes of ContractsGeneral OverviewReal Property LawBrokersRight to Commissions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.44

§ 115.44 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Indemnification Under Express Indemnity Agreement--Licensing Statute Bars Recovery by Unlicensed Contractors/Developers [Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFFS ARE PRECLUDED BY BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONS CODE SECTION 7031 FROM SEEKING EXPRESS INDEMNITY FROM SUBCONTRACTORS FOR NEGLIGENT PERFORMANCE BECAUSE PLAINTIFFS ARE UNLICENSED CONTRACTORS.

Express Contractual Indemnity Unavailable Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor. Business And Professions Code Section 7031 bars express indemnity claims by unlicensed general contractors against negligent subcontractors (Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1418).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the claim for indemnity is barred by licensing laws.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. They may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

For discussion of the procedures by which comparative indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that (1) the parties entered into an indemnity agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) the indemnitee incurred a loss for which it is seeking indemnity pursuant to the agreement; and (3) indemnity is not available because the indemnitee was unlicensed.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For detailed discussion and practice forms relating to indemnity generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities relating to an indemnitee's right to comparative indemnity on the same basis, see § 115.65.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Express Contractual Indemnity Unavailable Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor

In Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co.. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397 , the trial court granted summary judgments in favor of numerous cross-defendant subcontractors and against cross-complainants, the developers/general contractors of two separate condominium projects. The trial court found that since neither of the developers/general contractors possessed contractors' licenses, their cross-complaints for equitable and implied contractual indemnity against the allegedly negligent subcontractors who worked on the projects were necessarily barred by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 as "actions for compensation" for services rendered and work performed by those cross-complainant developers/general contractors.

The court of appeal upheld the trial court's ruling as to the express indemnity claim, ruling that Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 barred express indemnity claims by unlicensed general contractors against negligent subcontractors (49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1404) . Section 7031 bars a person from suing in a California court to recover compensation for any act or contract that requires a California contractor's license, unless the person alleges and proves that he or she was licensed at all times during the performance. The court determined that the express indemnity claim was fundamentally based in contract since the developers/contractors sought to recover money from the subcontractors, and that the contracts were illegal because the developers/contractors were unlicensed. Accordingly, the cause of action for express indemnity was barred by the statutory licensing requirements (49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1418) .

144 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
A. Express Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.45-115.59

[Reserved]

§§ 115.45[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.60

§ 115.60 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Tortfeasor May Seek Comparative Indemnity To Apportion Liability In Proportion to Fault

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO SEEK PARTIAL INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR IN ORDER TO OBTAIN AN EQUITABLE APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY ACCORDING TO PRINCIPLES OF COMPARATIVE FAULT.

A. Comparative Partial Indemnity Authorized. The doctrine of comparative partial indemnity provides that each concurrent tortfeasor bear liability for an indivisible injury in direct proportion to his or her fault (American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598).

B. Tortfeasors Right to Assign Indemnity Cause of Action. A tortfeasor may assign a cause of action for equitable indemnity for the contingent damages it faces as a result of litigation, even though actions for indemnity do not typically accrue for the purposes of the statute of limitations until payment of a judgment or settlement (Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 933, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407).

C. Award of Damages Directly to Assignee. As long as the assignment carries with it the burden to prove liability and damages, a court may properly award damages directly to an assignee of an indemnity cause of action (Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 935, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is entitled, under principles of implied equitable indemnity and comparative fault, to an apportionment of liability with the indemnitor for a loss that it has incurred or may incur. This form should be used to establish a basic entitlement to partial indemnity under current law. It may be combined with other points and authorities that establish more specific grounds for partial indemnity [see §§ 115.61 -115.67].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if partial indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party for which the indemnitor is or may also be liable; and (2) there is no express agreement between the indemnitor and the indemnitee that provides for a right of indemnity with regard to the loss in question.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Partial Indemnity Authorized

American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578 , determined one of the collateral issues raised by the adoption of comparative negligence in California in Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , specifically the issue of apportionment of damages among multiple tortfeasors. In American Motorcycle, plaintiff, a teenage boy, brought an action to recover damages for personal injuries suffered in a cross-country motorcycle race. The American Motorcycle Association (AMA), a defendant, had been one of the sponsors of the race. Defendant AMA sought leave of court to file a cross complaint against plaintiff's parents for negligent supervision and for either total equitable indemnity, on the theory that the parents' negligence was "active" while AMA's negligence, if any, was only "passive" (see §§ 115.32, 115.40), or for a reduction of any damages awarded against AMA by the percentage of damages allocable to the parents' negligence. The trial court concluded that existing legal doctrines did not support AMA's proposed cross complaint and denied leave to file it. The common law doctrine of implied equitable indemnity was available only as a complete loss-shifting device based on relative degrees of culpability expressed in terms such as active or passive negligence, or primary and secondary liability. AMA sought a writ of mandate.

The California Supreme Court granted the writ and directed the court to allow the cross complaint, determining that the adoption of principles of comparative negligence between plaintiff and defendant (replacing the former rule, which imposed an absolute bar to recovery if the plaintiff was contributorily negligent) called for a fundamental modification of the doctrine of equitable indemnity. The doctrine was found to suffer from the same "all or nothing" deficiency as the contributory negligence doctrine, and was held to be incompatible with the goal of Li v. Yellow Cab that liability for damages should be borne by those whose negligence causes the damages, in proportion to the parties' respective fault. The Court concluded that California's common law equitable indemnity doctrine should be modified to permit a concurrent tortfeasor to obtain partial indemnity from other concurrent tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis (20 Cal. 3d 578, 591) .

[b] Tortfeasor's Right to Assign Indemnity Cause of Action

In Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 , a land developer sold a lot which contained a residential building pad to a builder who constructed a house on the pad. Plaintiff bought the house which suffered damage from subsidence. The 10 year statute of limitations prevented plaintiff from suing the developer.

Plaintiff sued the builder and the builder cross complained for indemnity against the developer. Defendant builder stipulated to liability on plaintiff's complaint and assigned its cross complaint for indemnity to plaintiff in a settlement agreement. The trial court ruled that the assignment was proper, but that the stipulated settlement was not made in good faith and did not bind the developer. The agreement provided that if the settlement were not approved, plaintiff would defend and indemnify the builder against all related cross complaints against it. Plaintiff proceeded to trial. The jury issued a judgment in favor of plaintiff finding that the tort damages suffered by plaintiff were completely caused by the defective building lot. The trial court concluded that plaintiff, as the assignee of builder's cross complaint for equitable indemnity against developer, was entitled to judgment directly against developer for the full amount of the judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that even though actions for indemnity do not typically accrue for the purposes of the statute of limitations until payment of a judgment or settlement, the trial court did not err in permitting defendant builder to assign to plaintiff its cause of action for equitable indemnity for the contingent damages it faced as a result of the litigation (54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 933) . On appeal the developer argued that the builder's assignment of its cross complaint for indemnity did not entitle plaintiff to the direct money judgment he obtained here because builder never suffered an indemnifiable loss through settlement or judgment. The developer asserted that the assignment of the cross complaint before the builder's liability had been incurred or paid violated indemnity principles, circumvented the spirit of the statute of limitations and permitted plaintiff to obtain a double recovery. The court responded that: (1) because the builder bore potential liability for damages to plaintiff, it had the right to cross complain against developer for the right to equitable indemnity to recoup damages which might be assessed against it by any previous tortfeasors who caused the subsidence; and (2) there was no reason why an improver of property which had a latent defect caused by a former tortfeasor could not assign its cross complaint for indemnity before being found liable for damages. The court went on to state that after the trial court in this case refused to approve the settlement between plaintiff and defendant builder, plaintiff had to prove both liability and damages against defendant for the injuries to his property. Because plaintiff had not given builder a convenant not to execute if liability were found against it, it remained at risk to pay its comparative fault in the instant situation. According to the court, plaintiff could not receive the windfall of a double recovery, because the trial court disapproved the settlement between plaintiff and defendant builder and ruled that the agreement would only bind the builder. The court therefore concluded that since the jury determined that the entire cause of the damages in this case was due to the developer's negligence in creating the defective building pad, and since the primary purpose of the statutory provision allowing cross complaints for indemnity was to insure that the 10-year statute did not insulate the previous tortfeasor actually at fault when another, subsequent tortfeasor is timely sued and found liable, equity and judicial economy dictated that plaintiff need not file additional proceedings to collect on the judgment in this case (54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 934) .

[c] Award of Damages Directly to Assignee

The facts of Fleck v. Bollinger Home Corp. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 63 Cal. Rptr. 2d 407 , are discussed in § 115.60[3][b]. The court held that as long as the assignment carries with it the burden to prove liability and damages, a court may properly award damages directly to an assignee of an indemnity cause of action. The court reasoned that there was no sound reason in law or equity why damages had to be funneled through builder to plaintiff (54 Cal. App. 4th 926, 935) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.61

§ 115.61 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Subsequent Medical Malpractice Tortfeasor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR ON ACCOUNT OF INDEMNITOR'S SUBSEQUENT PROFESSIONAL MEDICAL NEGLIGENCE WITH REGARD TO THE DAMAGES INCURRED BECAUSE OF THE AGGRAVATED INJURY CAUSED BY THAT NEGLIGENCE.

Subsequent Medical Malpractice as Basis for Comparative Indemnity. Under principles of comparative negligence, partial indemnification is available to the party who first caused an injury against a medical professional whose subsequent negligence aggravated the injury (Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1202-1203, 213 Cal. Rptr. 781).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that he or she is entitled to seek partial indemnity on a comparative fault basis from a medical professional whose subsequent negligence aggravated the victim's injuries. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.69.

It should be noted that pursuant to Proposition 51, as codified in Civ. Code § 1431.2, a defendant in a personal injury suit is only severally liable for non-economic damages based on the percentage of fault apportioned to that defendant. However, the defendant remains jointly and severally liable for any economic damages awarded, and thus this form may be used to seek partial indemnification for those economic damages from a medical professional whose subsequent negligence aggravates the original injury [see Henry v. Superior Court (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 440, 455, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 808].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the alleged negligence of the indemnitee caused an injury for which the indemnitee is or may be liable; and (2) the injuries were aggravated by the professional medical negligence of the indemnitor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Subsequent Medical Malpractice as Basis for Comparative Indemnity

In Blecker v. Wolbart (1985) 167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 213 Cal. Rptr. 781 , Blecker's negligent driving was a proximate cause of an injury to a motorcyclist (Cole). Cole subsequently underwent surgery, suffered cardiac arrest, and died. Blecker's employer settled with Cole's estate, and Blecker brought an action for indemnity against various medical defendants, alleging their subsequent negligence. The case was tried to a jury. The court accepted Blecker's stipulation that her negligence was a proximate cause of Cole's original injuries but not his death and refused the doctors' offer of evidence with regard to her collision with the motorcycle.

On appeal, the court held that this failure to accept the evidence was error. Resolution of the issue revolved around the effect of the adoption of principles of comparative negligence in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598 (see § 115.60) on prior law. Prior to American Motorcycle, California law provided that an original tortfeasor was also liable for the damages caused by subsequent negligent medical treatment as a matter of law [Ash v. Mortensen (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 654, 657, 150 P.2d 876] . However, the subsequent medical tortfeasor was liable only for the aggravation of damages caused by the malpractice. Therefore, an apportionment was required by the trier of fact between the amount of damages attributable to the original injury and the amount of damages caused by the subsequent malpractice [Niles v. San Rafael (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 230, 240, 116 Cal. Rptr. 733] . The original tortfeasor then was entitled to complete indemnity from the malpractice tortfeasor with regard to the damages attributed to the malpractice [Niles v. San Rafael (1974) 42 Cal. App. 3d 230, 237-240, 116 Cal. Rptr. 733 ; Herrero v. Atkinson (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 74-77, 38 Cal. Rptr. 490] . There was no right of indemnity on behalf of the medical defendant against the original tortfeasor because the medical defendant had no liability for the original injuries, and equity, under the all-or-nothing indemnity rule of prior law, required that the medical defendant bear the entire loss for the damages attributable to aggravation [see Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 429, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; see also § 115.69].

The court in Blecker noted that the parties and the trial court were confused over whether, after American Motorcycle, a jury could apportion the liability of successive tortfeasors, or whether American Motorcycle even applied to successive tortfeasors. The court found comparative negligence to be essentially harmonious with the prior system, rather than in conflict with it. It stated that successive acts, each of which has a discernible effect contributing to the ultimate loss, do not militate against comparative indemnification. Cases prior to American Motorcycle support the availability of equitable indemnification, comparative or otherwise, as between parties who made separate contributions to the loss (167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1202-1203) .

The confusion appeared to revolve around the difference between apportionment of damages and comparison of the respective tortious conduct of the parties. What is required by American Motorcycle is that the respective conduct of concurrent tortfeasors be considered by the trier of fact in ascertaining fault. In the case of successive tortfeasors, this question is distinct from the question of the particular injuries that the conduct of each caused. Under comparative negligence, it was for the jury to consider the respective degree of fault as between Blecker's driving and the doctors' medical procedures, not the extent of Cole's injuries before and after treatment (167 Cal. App. 3d 1195, 1203-1204) .

NOTE:

As an example of the operation of the principles set forth in Blecker v. Wolbart, suppose that A, while driving at an excessive rate of speed and under the influence of alcohol and drugs, sideswipes a vehicle driven by B. B suffers only minor injuries and seeks treatment from Dr. C. While under treatment, B suffers an extremely rare reaction to medication of which Dr. C was unaware and dies. The jury establishes damages for wrongful death at $1,000,000 dollars and apportions only $1,000 to the initial injury and $999,000 to the subsequent aggravation. However, in comparing the respective conduct of A and Dr. C, the jury finds A to be 90 percent negligent and Dr. C to be only 10 percent negligent. A pays all of the $1,000 allocated to the original injury and 90 percent of the $999,000 allocated to aggravation. Dr. C pays only 10 percent of the $999,000.

NOTE:

Dicta in Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 [see § 115.69], a post-American Motorcycle case, suggests that in the case of original and subsequent tortfeasors who are jointly and severally liable, comparative indemnity is never available to the subsequent tortfeasor from the original tortfeasor because the subsequent tortfeasor is not liable for the original injury. Under the principles of Blecker v. Wolbart, this proposition would not be correct. The subsequent tortfeasor should be as entitled as the original tortfeasor to a comparison of the respective fault of the parties because that comparison is applicable to the apportionment of liability for the damages due to aggravation [see Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 429, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.62

§ 115.62 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Limitations Period for Filing Indemnity Action Against Medical Malpractice Tortfeasor Tolled by Notice Provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d)

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE 90-DAY STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS TOLLING PERIOD FOLLOWING NOTICE OF INTENT TO SUE, WHICH APPLIES TO ACTIONS BASED ON A HEALTH CARE PROVIDER'S PROFESSIONAL NEGLIGENCE, APPLIES ALSO TO EQUITABLE INDEMNITY ACTIONS BASED ON PROFESSIONAL NEGLIGENCE, EVEN IF THE ACTION IS GOVERNED BY A LIMITATIONS PERIOD OTHER THAN THE GENERAL MEDICAL MALPRACTICE LIMITATIONS PERIOD OF CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 340.5.

MICRA Tolling Period Applies to Non-MICRA Limitations Period Applicable in Equitable Indemnity Action. The 90-day statute of limitations tolling period following notice of intent to sue, which applies to actions based on a health care provider's professional negligence, applies also to equitable indemnity actions based on professional negligence, even if the action is governed by a limitations period other than the general medical malpractice limitations period of Code of Civil Procedure Section 340.5 (Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Reiswig (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 208, 218, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187, 980 P.2d 895 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that an action for indemnity filed against a health care provider, and based on the health care provider's professional negligence, is not untimely because notice of intent to sue was given to the health care provider within the last 90 days of the limitations period and therefore the applicable limitations period was tolled for 90 days [see Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include discussion of the facts showing that the action for indemnity is based on the health care provider's professional negligence, that notice of intent to sue was provided to the health care provider within 90 days prior to expiration of the applicable limitations period, and that the indemnity action was timely after taking into consideration the 90-day tolling period.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the issue that the indemnity action was not untimely under the applicable limitations period. They may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief. For a discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion relating to comparative indemnity, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender), and for discussion relating to actions based on the professional negligence of health care providers, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice (Matthew Bender).

[c] Related Memoranda

For points and authorities relating to actions based on the professional negligence of health care providers, see Ch. 175, Physicians and Surgeons: Medical Malpractice .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] MICRA Tolling Period Applies to Non-MICRA Limitations Period Applicable in Equitable Indemnity Action

In Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Reiswig (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 208, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187, 980 P.2d 895 , a woman's hand was slammed in the door of a van owned by a church, and the injury was later seriously exacerbated by the alleged negligence of the woman's treating physicians. The church's insurer eventually paid the woman its $1 million dollar policy limit in exchange for a release of all claims against the church. The woman sued her treating physicians for malpractice. The insurer then filed an action against the physicians asserting the church's right to equitable indemnity for the subsequent negligence of the physicians that contributed to the woman's injuries. Prior to filing suit, the insurer and the woman had both complied with the notice of intent to sue requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 364, which is part of the Medical Injury Compensation Reform Act (MICRA). Under Code Civ. Proc. § 364, providing notice of intent to sue is a prerequisite to filing suit against a health care provider for injuries based on the professional negligence of the health care provider, and if the notice is provided within 90 days prior to expiration of "the applicable statute of limitations," the limitations period is tolled for 90 days. The indemnity action was not filed within the general one-year personal injury limitations period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 (two-year period, beginning in 2003)], although it was timely filed as to two doctors if the limitations period was tolled for 90 days after the insurer provided notice of intent to sue. The doctors demurred to the insurer's complaint, and the trial court granted the demurrer on the grounds that because the applicable statute of limitations was former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1] and that statute was not part of MICRA, the MICRA tolling provision did not apply. The insurer appealed, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that Code Civ. Proc. § 364 did not apply to indemnity actions. The insurer again appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed, holding that MICRA's 90-day tolling period following notice of intent to sue applies to equitable indemnity actions based on professional negligence, even if the action is governed by a limitations period other than MICRA's general medical malpractice limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5. The Court noted that prior decisions had held that MICRA provisions may apply to equitable indemnity actions, including its own decision in Western S.S. Lines, Inc. v. San Pedro Peninsula Hosp. (1994) 8 Cal. 4th 100, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 263, 876 P.2d 1062 , which held that the $250,000 MICRA limitation on noneconomic damages applied to derivative actions for equitable indemnity. The Court also rejected the argument that because the opinion in Western Steamship had differentiated between substantive questions involving MICRA, such as the damages limitation, and simple procedural ones, such as those involving statutes of limitations, the Western Steamship decision did not support the conclusion that MICRA limitations provisions could apply to indemnity actions (21 Cal. 4th 208, 215-217) . The Supreme Court then concluded that an equitable indemnity action that flows from professional negligence actions, as opposed to flowing from unrelated tort actions, is "based upon" professional negligence (21 Cal. 4th 208, 217-218) .

Finally, the Court reasoned that if the legislature had intended the tolling provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d) to apply only to Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5, rather than providing that it applied to the "applicable statute of limitations," it could have stated so. The Court also concluded that applying Code Civ. Proc. § 364(d) to cases based on a health care provider's professional negligence, including derivative claims for equitable indemnity that follow settlement of the original action, would further the legislative purpose of the 90-day tolling period, and MICRA in general, to give doctors and their insurers an opportunity to negotiate with prospective plaintiffs and settle derivative claims without unnecessary litigation (21 Cal. 4th 208, 218-219) .

NOTE:

Although the Supreme Court in Preferred Risk Mutual Insurance Co. v. Reiswig applied the general one-year personal injury limitations period of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1 (two-year period, beginning in 2003)], to the equitable indemnity action brought by the insurance company, the Court did not specifically hold that this is the applicable limitations period for actions for equitable indemnity. In that case, at the time of the appeal to the Supreme Court, both parties agreed that former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1] was the applicable limitations period, rather than the MICRA limitations period of Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5 [Preferred Risk Mutual Ins. Co. v. Reiswig (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 208, 213] . Although the Supreme Court agreed, without providing analysis, that Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5 was inapplicable to the case before it [Preferred Risk Mut. Ins. Co. v. Reiswig (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 208, 213 n.2, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 187, 980 P.2d 895] , the Court did not otherwise specifically address the general applicability of former Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3) [now see Code Civ. Proc. § 335.1].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.63

§ 115.63 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Comparative Indemnity Is Not Precluded by Indemnity Agreement With Limited Scope

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INDEMNITY AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE PARTIES WAS NOT INTENDED TO PROVIDE FOR INDEMNITY WITH RESPECT TO THE PARTICULAR OCCURRENCE AT ISSUE AND DOES NOT PRECLUDE INDEMNITEE FROM SEEKING COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR.

Indemnity Agreement That Is Limited in Scope. If an indemnity agreement, construed as a whole, does not provide for a right of indemnity with respect to the particular incident at issue, a party to the contract may recover implied equitable indemnity from the other contracting party (E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506-510, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 ; People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works v. Daly City Scavenger Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 280-281, 96 Cal. Rptr. 669).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that a right of comparative indemnity is not barred on account of an express indemnity agreement between the parties. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.73.

This form is for the use of the comparative indemnitee, that is, the party who is seeking a right to comparative indemnity despite the agreement. The comparative indemnitee may be either party to the indemnity agreement, the express indemnitee or the express indemnitor. If the form is used by the express indemnitor, it should be used together with § 115.39, which advances the point that a right of express indemnity arising from contract does not extend beyond the scope of the agreement.

This form may also be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if implied indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement that provided for a right of indemnity under certain express and limited circumstances; and (2) the loss for which comparative indemnity is sought is not within the scope of the agreement.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Indemnity Agreement

In E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 , the city had contracted with White, a general contractor, for the construction of certain public improvements that included a storm drain. The contract provided for a right of indemnity in favor of the city from White for claims arising out of the performance of or in consequence of the work contemplated. After construction was completed and the city had accepted the work, the drain malfunctioned and the city arranged for repairs with the particular subcontractor who had constructed it. In the course of repairs, one employee of the subcontractor was killed and another injured, and actions were brought against the city and White. The malfunction was later found to be due to the faulty work of the subcontractor. The city filed a separate action for indemnity under the contract against White, but lost because the agreement was construed as general and the city's negligence was found to be active [see § 115.40]. White then brought the instant action against the city for implied equitable indemnity. White's action was dismissed by the trial court.

On appeal, the city contended that the indemnity clause in the contract effectively operated to preclude any claim for implied indemnity in favor of White. The city argued that by agreeing to the particular language, the parties memorialized the entire agreement between them regarding indemnity. By excluding any right of indemnity in favor of White, they indicated their intention that no such right should exist.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded the matter for trial [see § 115.90]. The court stated that the city's contention found no support in California law. Implied equitable indemnity and contractual indemnity are each subject to their own distinct legal rules and limitations. Within the limitations of the language used, an express indemnity clause is accorded a certain preemptive effect, displacing any implied rights that might otherwise arise within the scope of its operation [see § 115.73]. If, however, the duty established by contract is, by its terms and conditions, inapplicable to the particular factual setting before the court, the equitable principles of implied indemnity may indeed come into play (21 Cal. 3d 497, 506-508) .

In the prior action, it had been determined that the indemnity clause was not intended to and did not create an obligation in White to indemnify the city for the city's active negligence. It was also determined that the city was actively negligent and that its negligence was a cause of the underlying liability. Any preemptive effect that the clause might have had did not extend to the instant situation. Accordingly, the principles of implied equitable indemnity did apply, the scope of which were to be determined at trial in the manner required by American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578 [see § 115.60] (21 Cal. 3d 497, 510) .

People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works v. Daly City Scavenger Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 96 Cal. Rptr. 669 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an action for declaratory relief brought by the State of California. The state had closed a portion of a highway by placing hinged fence gates at two points on the road. In order to provide cross defendant company with access to its property located within the barricaded highway, the state and company entered into a written agreement that provided that the company would receive keys for the locked gates and that the company would indemnify the state for injury to any person using the barricaded portion of the highway pursuant to the purposes of the agreement. This agreement also provided that the company need not indemnify the state for injury to a person using the highway for his or her own purposes. Subsequent to the execution of this agreement, the company erected a chain fence across the highway south of the state's southerly fence. Two individuals, using the highway for their own purposes, were killed when a motorcycle on which they were riding collided with the chain barrier. The state and company settled the resulting wrongful death actions filed against them, and the state sought to recover its payment from the company by a cross complaint for declaratory relief. The trial court ruled for the company and the state appealed. The court of appeal held that the state was not precluded from seeking implied equitable indemnity because the express indemnity agreement was not intended to provide for indemnity rights with respect to the particular occurrence at issue. The court held that because the incident occurred at a geographical location removed from the area expressly covered by the agreement and was only remotely related to the subject matter of the agreement, it was not included within the scope of the indemnity obligations of the agreement, and the state was not precluded by the agreement from seeking implied indemnity (19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 280-281) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Limited Scope of Indemnity Agreement

In Maryland Cas. Co. v. Bailey & Sons, Inc. (1995) 35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 41 Cal. Rptr. 2d 519 , an express indemnity agreement ran in favor of CMA as indemnitee and against Kelly, as indemnitor. The court found the facts of this case to be indistinguishable from E.L. White [see § 115.63[3][a]]. It reaffirmed that the existence of the agreement did not preclude the contract indemnitor from seeking equitable indemnity from the contract indemnitee if the duties established by contract are, by their terms and conditions, inapplicable to the particular factual setting (35 Cal. App. 4th 856, 873-875) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.64

§ 115.64 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Shortfall Is to Be Apportioned According to Comparative-Fault Ratio of Remaining Codefendants

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO EQUITABLE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR TO APPORTION LIABILITY ACCORDING TO THE COMPARATIVE FAULT OF THE PARTIES, EXCLUDING THE PERCENTAGE LIABILITY OF; _____ [name of insolvent tortfeasor or tortfeasor against whom indemnity is barred].

[EITHER]

Shortfall Caused by Insolvent Tortfeasor. An insolvent defendant's shortfall must be shared proportionately by the solvent defendants, as though the insolvent person had originally not participated (Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531 ; see Ambriz v. Kress (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 963, 969, 196 Cal. Rptr. 417).

[OR]

Shortfall Caused Because Comparative Indemnity Is Barred Against Tortfeasor Who Entered Into Good-Faith Settlement. If indemnity is barred against one or more tortfeasors who entered into a good-faith settlement, liability is to be apportioned among the remaining tortfeasors in direct proportion to their respective percentages of fault, computed as though the settling tortfeasors had not been involved in the action (Lyly & Sons Trucking Co. v. State of California (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 353, 358, 195 Cal. Rptr. 116 ; see Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is entitled to comparative indemnity from another tortfeasor due to a shortfall caused by an "absent" tortfeasor. This form is for use after the trier of fact has determined the percentages of comparative fault of joint or concurrent tortfeasors in the tort action, including at least one tortfeasor who is absent from the case in some sense. This absence may be simply an economic absence, as in the case of an insolvent party [see, e.g., Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531] , or it may be because a tortfeasor is not subject to the jurisdiction of the court, or because one or more tortfeasors previously entered into a good-faith settlement with the original plaintiff and are protected from a claim for comparative indemnity by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c) [see, e.g., Lyly & Sons Trucking Co. v. State of California (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 353, 195 Cal. Rptr. 116] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the scope of comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a motion, such as a motion for summary judgment, in which the apportionment of a shortfall is sought as a matter of law. It may also be used in an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) in the underlying or an independent tort action, a trier of fact has apportioned liability among multiple tortfeasors in percentages totaling 100 percent; and (2) one or more of the tortfeasors against whom comparative fault was apportioned is not available to satisfy its share of the judgment and the reason for the unavailability. The comparative fault of the remaining judgment debtors should then be recomputed according to their ratio of comparative fault and restated to total 100 percent.

For example, assume a $100,000 judgment for the tort victim. The jury finds A to be 30 percent responsible, B to be 20 percent responsible, and C to be 50 percent responsible, but C is judgment proof. A and B are liable in a ratio of 3 to 2. To total 100 percent, A's liability is 60 percent and B's liability is 40 percent. If A has paid more than $60,000, A is entitled to equitable comparative indemnity from B for the amount paid that exceeds $60,000.

[b] Shortfall Limited to Economic Damages

Comparative equitable indemnity is available only if the parties are jointly and severally liable [Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; see § 115.69]. In actions covered by the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51) [Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5; see § 115.09], a defendant's liability for noneconomic damages is several only and not joint [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. Therefore, there can no longer be a shortfall after trial with regard to noneconomic damages because the plaintiff bears any loss caused by an absent tortfeasor. Thus, the principles of comparative indemnity that are set forth in this form are limited to the apportionment of liability for a plaintiff's economic damages.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Shortfall Caused by Insolvent Tortfeasor

In Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531 , plaintiffs sued a hospital and two doctors for negligence. A $1.5 million judgment was apportioned 10 percent ($150,000) against the hospital, 40 percent ($600,000) against Dr. L, and 50 percent ($750,000) against Dr. S. Dr. S was insolvent and presumably judgment proof. The hospital paid 33 percent of the judgment ($500,000) and Dr. L paid 67 percent ($1 million). The hospital claim for contribution from Dr. L, to be apportioned according to principles of comparative fault, was denied by the trial court.

Relying on both Li v. Yellow Cab Co. (1975) 13 Cal. 3d 804, 823-826, 119 Cal. Rptr. 858, 532 P.2d 1226 , and American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 589-598, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], the court of appeal reversed and extended the doctrine of comparative fault to require that the shortfall of an insolvent cotortfeasor judgment debtor be borne by the solvent cotortfeasors in proportion to their respective fault as though the insolvent party had not participated. The ratio of liability between the hospital and Dr. L was 1 to 4, which when recomputed in terms of 100 percent was 20 to 80. The hospital was entitled to contribution from Dr. L for the amount in excess of 20 percent of the total judgment that it had paid ($500,000 minus 20 percent of $1.5 million ($300,000) equals $200,000 contribution) (143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 89-93) .

In Ambriz v. Kress (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 963, 196 Cal. Rptr. 417 , Mrs. Ambriz was driving a car in which her son was a passenger when an accident occurred in front of their home. Mr. Ambriz observed the immediate aftermath of the accident. All three brought suit against two defendants, McDowell and Kress. Kress was essentially judgment-proof and his insurer was insolvent.

The jury awarded damages to all three plaintiffs. It apportioned fault 20 percent to Mrs. Ambriz, 70 percent to Kress, and 10 percent to McDowell. McDowell paid the judgment and brought a motion against Mrs. Ambriz for contribution with regard to the amounts paid to Mr. Ambriz and the child. He argued that under Paradise Valley Hospital, the shortfall due to Kress' insolvency should be apportioned in a 2-to-1 ratio, to reflect the comparative fault ratio between Mrs. Ambriz and McDowell.

The trial court agreed and the court of appeal affirmed. The court agreed with the result of Paradise Valley Hospital and found no reason why the result should be different simply because Mrs. Ambriz was also a plaintiff. It saw nothing inconsistent or paradoxical in Mrs. Ambriz' being both a plaintiff and a cross defendant. She was a cross defendant vis-a-vis her coplaintiffs and must bear the burden of a shortfall caused by the insolvency of another defendant in direct proportion to her respective degree of culpability (148 Cal. App. 3d 963, 968-972) .

[b] Shortfall Caused Because Comparative Indemnity Is Barred Against Tortfeasor Who Entered Into Good-Faith Settlement

In Lyly & Sons Trucking Co. v. State of California (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 353, 196 Cal. Rptr. 116 , a driver and his passenger were injured in a motor vehicle accident that was within workers' compensation coverage. Driver sued the owner of the other vehicle involved (Lyly) and Country Club. Passenger sued these parties and Driver. The plaintiffs' employer's workers' compensation carrier intervened for subrogation in the actions. Lyly cross complained against the State of California for equitable indemnity based on negligent maintenance, design, and control of the highway. Before trial, all parties except the State entered into good-faith settlements that completely discharged all liability to both plaintiffs. Thus, both Country Club and Driver were immune from any liability for comparative indemnity or contribution [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c)]. Of the $920,000 total awards paid, Lyly paid $875,000. Lyly then proceeded on its cross complaint against State based on a stipulated apportionment of fault that gave 10 percent to State, 40 percent to Lyly, and 50 percent to the other settling parties. The parties further stipulated that the reasonable net damages to all plaintiffs was $875,000, providing for a reduction of the total damages by the amount of settlements paid by the other parties. Under the stipulation, there was a significant shortfall because the actual amounts of settlements paid by the other parties ($45,000) was far below 50 percent of the total damages ($920,000/2 = $460,000). The trial court awarded Lyly only $87,500 in indemnity, or 10 percent of the amount of the stipulated net damages.

The court of appeal reversed and held that the respective shares of Lyly and State should be determined without reference to the shares of the settling parties. Because they had stipulated that their relative ratio of fault was 1 to 4, or 20 to 80 in terms of 100 percent, State was liable for comparative indemnity to Lyly for 20 percent of the stipulated net damages (147 Cal. App. 3d 353, 356-358) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.65

§ 115.65 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Applies Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Cotortfeasors

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR EVEN THOUGH _____ [INDEMNITEE or INDEMNITOR] IS LIABLE UNDER PRINCIPLES OF STRICT LIABILITY AND _____ [INDEMNITOR or INDEMNITEE] IS LIABLE UNDER PRINCIPLES OF NEGLIGENCE.

A. Comparative Indemnity Available Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Tortfeasors. The doctrine of partial or comparative indemnity applies even if one tortfeasor is held liable on a strict liability theory and the other tortfeasor is liable only for negligence (Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-332, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441).

[Optional] B. Comparative Indemnity Available Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor. Unlicensed general contractors who also act as developers, and thus may be held strictly liable for damages to homeowners in actions for defective construction, are not barred from seeking indemnity from negligent subcontractors by reason of their lack of contractors' license (Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1404, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 386).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that principles of comparative indemnity should be applied to apportion liability between a negligent and a strictly liable tortfeasor. This form may be used by either the negligent or the strictly liable tortfeasor, depending on which one would benefit from comparative indemnity.

This form may be adapted for use if both the indemnitee and the indemnitor are alleged to be liable to the plaintiff on a strict liability theory. Comparative indemnity is available, under the reasoning of Safeway v. Nest-Kart, between strictly liable defendants, including commercial defendants who are barred from recovering under strict liability as plaintiffs [GEM Developers v. Hallcraft Homes of San Diego, Inc. (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 419, 425-430, 261 Cal. Rptr. 626 ; Gentry Constr. Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 177, 180-183, 260 Cal. Rptr. 421] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) in an underlying tort action, the trier of fact has found or may find both the parties to be liable to the same person; and (2) the basis of liability with regard to one of the parties is negligence, and with regard to the other party is strict liability.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Tortfeasors

In Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 , a shopper was injured in a Safeway store when the shopping cart that she was using broke and fell on her foot. The shopper brought suit against, among others, Safeway and Nest-Kart, the manufacturer of the cart. The jury returned a verdict against Safeway and Nest-Kart, apportioning fault 80 percent to Safeway and 20 percent to Nest-Kart. Special findings disclosed that the jury had found Safeway liable under both negligence and strict liability theories and Nest-Kart liable under strict liability and breach of warranty theories. Safeway and Nest-Kart satisfied the judgment on an 80/20 apportionment. Safeway then moved in the trial court for a judgment of contribution to require Nest-Kart to pay an additional 30 percent to Safeway so as to achieve a 50-50 apportionment between the tortfeasors, claiming a 50-50 apportionment was required by California's contribution statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875, 876; see § 115.130]. The case was tried before the decision in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], and the trial court felt compelled by the contribution statutes and past decisions to order contribution from Nest-Kart in order to achieve a pro rata (equal) apportionment of liability. Nest-Kart appealed.

In reversing the trial court order, the Supreme Court found that nothing in the contribution statutes prevented the apportionment of liability between negligent and strictly liable tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis [see § 115.130] (21 Cal.3d 322, 327-328) . In cases in which one or more tortfeasors' liability rests on the principle of strict liability, fairness and other tort policies, such as deterrence of dangerous conduct or encouragement of accident-reducing behavior, frequently call for an apportionment of liability among multiple tortfeasors. In the instant case, the jury concluded that while the defectiveness of the shopping cart partially caused the accident, the primary fault lay with Safeway because of its negligent failure to properly maintain the cart in safe working condition. Under these circumstances, both common sense and equitable considerations suggested that Safeway should bear a proportionately greater share of liability for the accident than Nest-Kart (21 Cal.3d 322, 330) .

The Court also was unconcerned with any fundamental doctrinal obstacle to comparing the relative fault of a negligent defendant with that of a defendant whose liability rests on the no-fault concept of strict products liability. The Court considered the difficulties to be more theoretical than practical. Experience in other jurisdictions demonstrated that juries are fully competent to apply comparative fault principles between negligent and strictly liable defendants (21 Cal.3d 322, 331) .

NOTE:

Under pre-American Motorcycle law, strict liability was considered as primary or active negligence, precluding a shift of liability onto a negligent cotortfeasor under the all-or-nothing equitable indemnity doctrine [see Ford Motor Co. v. Robert J. Poeschl, Inc. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 694, 698-699, 98 Cal. Rptr. 702 ; see also § 115.40[2][b]]. However, pro rata contribution from a negligent cotortfeasor was available, so that the strictly liable tortfeasor could reduce its liability to half in the case of two tortfeasors, 25 percent in the case of four, etc. [see, e.g., Kerr Chems., Inc. v. Crown Cork & Seal Co. (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 1010, 1014-1017, 99 Cal. Rptr. 162] . Thus, in Safeway v. Nest-Kart, comparative negligence worked to the benefit of the strictly liable Nest-Kart and against the negligent Safeway. However, the interests would have been reversed had the jury's apportionment of percentage fault to Nest-Kart exceeded its pro rata share under contribution, for example, if Nest-Kart had been apportioned 40 percent fault, and there had been three tortfeasors instead of two.

NOTE:

A subsequent court of appeal decision presents a possible deviation from the rule of Safeway v. Nest-Kart. Although the matter was not an issue and therefore was not discussed in the case, the procedures employed to reach the issue of comparative indemnity may indicate a different view of the relationship between negligent and strictly liable tortfeasors. In that court of appeal case, farmers sued the manufacturer, wholesaler, and retailer of a chemical that caused crop damage. Theories of liability included strict liability, breach of warranty, negligence, and misrepresentation. The defendants all filed cross complaints against each other for comparative indemnity. The jury returned a defense verdict for the retailer; found the manufacturer and wholesaler liable (the facts do not disclose on what theory or theories); and found the farmers 45 percent comparatively negligent. The jury apparently did not compare the negligence of the manufacturer and wholesaler with that of the plaintiffs. Rather, it next took up their cross complaints and awarded the wholesaler total comparative indemnity against the manufacturer [Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 289-290, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; see § 115.96[3][b]]. The only reasonable explanation for these results was that the jury was comparing the manufacturer's negligence with the wholesaler's strict liability; otherwise, principles of comparative fault between two negligent tortfeasors would have required some apportionment of fault to the wholesaler.

The procedure used to determine comparative indemnity rights would seem to be improper under Safeway v. Nest-Kart. If the wholesaler were liable to the farmers under any theory, including strict liability, the jury should have assigned a percentage of comparative fault to the acts of each. Comparative indemnity rights would have been fixed according to those percentages, and any claim for total indemnity would have been foreclosed. As the case actually proceeded, it suggests that a defendant who is strictly liable to a tort victim solely for having been in the chain of distribution may obtain total indemnity from the manufacturer of the product [see Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 293, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787] .

[b] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Unlicensed Contractor/Developer and Subcontractor

In Ranchwood Communities Limited Partnership v. Jim Beat Construction Co. (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1397 , construction defect actions consolidated on appeal, the trial court granted summary judgments in favor of numerous cross-defendant subcontractors and against cross-complainants, the developers/general contractors of two separate condominium projects. The trial court found that since the developers/general contractors did not possess contractors' licenses, their cross-complaints for equitable and implied contractual indemnity against the allegedly negligent subcontractors who worked on the projects were necessarily barred by Bus. & Prof. Code § 7031 as "actions for compensation" for services rendered and work performed by those cross-complainant developers/general contractors.

The court of appeal held that the trial court's ruling was erroneous because it disregarded the dual nature of the developers'/general contractors' functions in these cases. They acted, according to the court, not only as general contractors, who had to be licensed in order to pursue an action for compensation for their work, but also acted as developers, who could be held strictly liable in damages to the homeowners/plaintiffs in the actions for defective construction, and who would normally be allowed to seek to spread that loss among all culpable parties. Under these circumstances, the court stated that the developers' implied indemnity claims were not barred by reason of their lack of contractors' licenses (49 Cal. App. 4th 1397, 1403-1404) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Between Negligent and Strictly Liable Tortfeasors

In Greystone Homes, Inc. v. Midtec, Inc. (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 196 , a homebuilder that had paid to replace faulty plumbing fittings in a condominium complex, including those that had not yet failed, brought suit for indemnity against the component manufacturer of the fittings and the manufacturer of the plumbing systems that utilized the fittings. The builder settled with the systems manufacturer for an amount that exceeded the cost of replacing the fittings that had already failed. The trial court then granted summary judgment for the component manufacturer after concluding that, given the settlement, the builder's remaining claim was one for economic loss without actual property damage and as such was not compensable in tort. The court of appeals reversed. The court held that the homebuilder could seek equitable indemnity from the component manufacturer under the Right to Repair Act, codified at Civ. Code § 895 et seq. The court noted that under that Act, which establishes a set of building standards for new residential construction, homeowners have a cause of action against builders, subcontractors, individual product manufacturers, and others for violation of the standards provided in the Act (see Civ. Code §§ 896, 936). On a showing that a defendant has violated a particular standard, a homeowner may recover for economic loss from a builder, including the reasonable value of repairing any violation of the standards provided in the Act, without having to show that the violation caused property damage or personal injury (see Civ. Code §§ 896, 942). The court then held that a builder, who is strictly liable under the Act if the standards imposed by the Act are violated, may in turn recover for economic loss from a product manufacturer through an action for equitable indemnity, if the manufacturer's negligence or breach of contract caused a violation of the standards provided by the Act (168 Cal. App. 4th 1194, 1216-1219) .

In Expressions at Rancho Niguel Ass'n v. Ahmanson Devs., Inc. (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 895 , the owner of a residential housing project was a settling defendant in a construction defects action brought by a homeowners association. After most of the subcontractors who were joint tortfeasors settled for their share of liability with the owner and the developer, the owner brought an action for indemnity against the one roofing subcontractor who failed to settle. The trial court agreed with the owner, who was strictly liable to the homeowners, that the subcontractor's negligence liability was joint and several and that the subcontractor was liable for the full amount of the settlement proceeds allocated to roofing damages, offset by payments received from the other roofing subcontractors. The court of appeal reversed. Citing existing case discussions, including Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart, the court of appeal concluded that comparative fault principles, rather than principles of joint and several liability, govern a claim for indemnity made by a strictly liable defendant against joint tortfeasors whose liability is based on negligence. The court rejected the claim that as a matter of law, a strictly liable defendant is entitled to recover full indemnity from a joint tortfeasor whose negligence is a proximate cause of the underlying injuries, although the court recognized that under the appropriate facts, full indemnity may result (86 Cal. App. 4th 1135, 1140-1143) .

In Yamaha Motor Corp. v. Paseman (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 958, 268 Cal. Rptr. 514 , plaintiff was injured while riding a moped that his parents had bought for him seven years earlier. Plaintiff sued the moped manufacturer (Yamaha) on various theories, including strict product liability, alleging that the moped was a defective product. Yamaha cross complained for comparative indemnity against the plaintiff's parents, alleging negligent maintenance and failure to repair the moped (219 Cal. App. 3d 958, 962) . The court of appeal found no legal impediment to the cross complaint, finding that Yamaha and the parents could be jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff, and following the rule of Safeway v. Nest-Kart (219 Cal. App. 3d 958, 966-971) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.66

§ 115.66 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Nonsettling Concurrent Tortfeasors in Favor of Settling Tortfeasors

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE, AFTER ENTERING INTO A GOOD-FAITH SETTLEMENT, IS ENTITLED TO SEEK EQUITABLE INDEMNITY FROM THE REMAINING DEFENDANTS IN ORDER TO APPORTION LIABILITY ACCORDING TO THE COMPARATIVE FAULT OF THE PARTIES.

Right of Settling Tortfeasor to Pursue Claim for Comparative Indemnity. A settling concurrent tortfeasor may pursue a right of equitable indemnity against other concurrent tortfeasors who have not entered into a good-faith settlement (Bolamperti v. Larco Mfg. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 249, 252, 255, 210 Cal. Rptr. 155 ; see Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 801-802, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; American Bankers Ins. Co. v. Avco-Lycoming Div. (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 732, 736, 159 Cal. Rptr. 70).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a settling tort defendant's contention that it may seek equitable indemnity from tortfeasors who have not settled with the tort plaintiff.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if comparative indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee was a defendant in the same action or in an underlying tort action; (2) the indemnitee settled with the plaintiff in that action; (3) the settlement was confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6; and (4) the indemnitor is a concurrent tortfeasor who is also liable to the tort plaintiff for the injuries on which the indemnitee reached a settlement. It may also be necessary to show that the amount of the settlement exceeded the settling party's fair share of the tort plaintiff's damages [see Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 826-827, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 (Kaufman, J., concurring and dissenting); see also § 115.66[3][a]].

[b] Settlements and Proposition 51

Comparative indemnity is available only with regard to amounts for which cotortfeasors are jointly and severally liable [Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; see § 115.69]. Under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51) [Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5], the doctrine of joint and several liability does not extend to all damages. In actions based on principles of comparative fault for personal injury, property damages, or wrongful death, the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several only and is not joint, so that each defendant is liable to the plaintiff only for that proportion of the plaintiff's noneconomic damages that is attributable to the defendant under comparative-fault principles [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a)]. Joint or concurrent tortfeasors remain jointly liable for a plaintiff's economic damages [see Civ. Code §§ 1431, 1431.2(b)(1); see also § 115.09].

Before Proposition 51, if one of multiple defendants settled with the plaintiff before trial, the entire amount of a settlement was credited to reduce the total damages awarded by the trier of fact against nonsettling defendants, and a joint and several judgment for the balance was entered against the nonsettling defendants [see Civ. Code § 877(a)]. The settling defendants were then entitled to indemnity from the nonsettling defendants for any amount by which the settlement exceeded the settling defendant's liability as ultimately found by the trier of fact [see Bolamperti v. Larco Mfg. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 249, 255, 210 Cal. Rptr. 155] . Thus, a settling defendant could settle for more than what ultimately proved to be its comparative share of liability, and subsequently obtain indemnity from nonsettling defendants (the proposition of this form). A defendant could even settle the plaintiff's entire claim, obtaining a dismissal as to all defendants, and then seek indemnity from the nonsettling defendants to apportion the damages [see American Bankers Ins. Co. v. Avco-Lycoming Div. (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 732, 736, 159 Cal. Rptr. 70] .

Under Proposition 51, the interaction of the indemnity requirement of joint and several liability and the elimination of joint liability for noneconomic damages forecloses the right of a settling defendant to recover comparative indemnity from other nonsettling tortfeasors for any part of the settlement that is apportioned to noneconomic damages [Union Pac. Corp. v. Wengert (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1447-1449, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68] . To facilitate this restriction, settlements will have to be apportioned between economic and noneconomic damages in some manner [see Espinoza v. Machonga (1992) 9 Cal. App. 4th 268, 11 Cal. Rptr. 2d 498 (calculating the effect of an unapportioned settlement on a nonsettling defendant's liability for an award of economic and noneconomic damages so as to make an allocation in accord with proportionate fault and avoid a setoff of noneconomic damages)]. For discussion of possible apportionment methods, see Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 73 (Matthew Bender). After apportionment, comparative indemnity rights are limited to the amount of the settlement allocated to economic damages that exceeds the comparative share of the settling defendant of the plaintiff's economic damages, as found ultimately by a trier of fact.

Proposition 51 does not provide any guidance regarding its interaction with settlement and indemnity. Numerous complex issues remain to be resolved by the courts or by the legislature. These issues are discussed in Levy, Golden & Sacks, California Torts, Ch. 74 (Matthew Bender). The points and authorities set forth in this form must be considered in light of the changes made by and the uncertainties raised by Proposition 51.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Right of Settling Tortfeasor to Pursue Claim for Comparative Indemnity

In Bolamperti v. Larco Mfg. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 249, 210 Cal. Rptr. 155 , plaintiff sued a hospital, a radiologist, and others for personal injuries suffered when she was struck by an electronically operated door on the premises of the hospital. After service but before pleading, the hospital and the radiologist settled with the plaintiff. The settlements were confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, and the hospital and radiologist were dismissed from the action. The hospital then filed a motion to intervene back into the same action for the purpose of pursuing a proposed declaratory relief action for equitable indemnity against the other defendants. The trial court denied the motion.

The court of appeal reversed. The court reviewed Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. International Harvester Co. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 492, 147 Cal. Rptr. 262 , decided before the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, which had held that a settling concurrent tortfeasor may pursue a right of equitable partial indemnity against other concurrent tortfeasors. The court's holding in Sears was grounded on a hierarchy of interests: (1) the maximization of recovery to the injured party; (2) the encouragement of settlement; and (3) the equitable apportionment of liability among the tortfeasors. Permitting post-settlement claims for indemnity is in harmony with all three policies. It in no way impinges on the maximization of recovery to the injured person; it encourages settlement in that if indemnity were barred, a defendant would be inhibited in settling because it would defeat recourse to other solvent concurrent tortfeasors in order to share the loss; and it effects the policy of equitable apportionment of the loss among all parties responsible for it. The court held that these policies were in no way changed by the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, and that the holding of Sears was as valid after enactment of the statute as it was before (164 Cal. App. 3d 249, 252-255) .

The facts and principal holding of Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 , are discussed in § 115.151[3][a]. Far West entered into a settlement agreement with the plaintiff, the settlement was confirmed as in good faith, and Far West was dismissed from the action as a defendant. Far West then continued to pursue its own cross complaint in the same action against other defendants, seeking equitable indemnity for the amount that had been paid to the plaintiff.

Although it was not an issue in the case, the majority opinion stated, "It is clear under existing precedent that Far West had the right to continue to seek indemnification in this manner ... and no party challenges Far West's indemnity claim in this respect" (46 Cal. 3d 796, 801-802) .

In his concurring and dissenting opinion, Justice Kaufman responded to this dictum. He wrote, "Were the issue presented, I would be inclined to hold that a settling defendant's right to pursue a claim for comparative indemnity is not absolute but depends on whether the settlement amount substantially exceeds the settlor's fair share of the plaintiff's damages. ... A tortfeasor who has settled for an amount within the reasonable range of his liability has no claim in equity to partial reimbursement from other defendants in the event plaintiff's damages or the settlor's percentage of fault is determined at trial to be less than anticipated" (46 Cal. 3d 796, 826-827) .

NOTE:

The position of Justice Kaufman is probably best viewed as standing for the proposition that the right to pursue equitable indemnity after settlement is not necessarily a right to prevail on the claim. A settling tortfeasor may seek equitable indemnity, but should be allowed to collect it only if the tortfeasor has settled the entire claim or paid substantially in excess of its fair share under principles of comparative fault.

In American Bankers Ins. Co. v. Avco-Lycoming Div. (1979) 97 Cal. App. 3d 732, 159 Cal. Rptr. 70 , one defendant's insurer, American Bankers, settled the plaintiff's claim for the full amount and obtained the plaintiff's dismissal of the action with prejudice in regard to all defendants. American Bankers then filed a separate action for equitable indemnity against, among others, Avco, who had been dismissed from the prior action [see E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 (independent action for equitable indemnity may be filed against alleged concurrent tortfeasor after judgment in underlying tort case)]. Avco's demurrer was sustained without leave to amend by the trial court.

The court of appeal reversed. The court found that the policy considerations enumerated in Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. International Harvester Co. (1978) 82 Cal. App. 3d 492, 147 Cal. Rptr. 262 , maximization of recovery to the injured party, settlement, and equitable apportionment of liability, supported the right of a settling tortfeasor to seek indemnity in an independent action. No element of collateral estoppel or res judicata was present because Avco was entitled to a trial on the merits regarding its liability to the original plaintiff. A dismissal with prejudice in one action does not require the termination of all litigation involving the same facts. It bars the dismissing plaintiff from further proceedings against the dismissed defendants, but has no effect on the rights of the defendants with regard to each other. In addition, the nonsettling defendants had the added benefit that the negotiated settlement imposed a lid on damages, which, in all likelihood, would be a sum less than what might be awarded by a jury at trial of the injured party's action (97 Cal. App. 3d 732, 736-737) .

NOTE:

A settling defendant may bring an independent action for indemnity against other alleged concurrent tortfeasors even if it does not settle the plaintiff's entire claim. However, a defendant in the indemnity action may defeat the claim for indemnity by settling in good faith with the tort plaintiff before verdict or judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877(b)]. The settlement may be confirmed as in good faith in the original tort action unless that action has been dismissed, in which case it may be confirmed in the indemnity action [Regal Recovery Agency, Inc. v. Superior Court (1989) 207 Cal. App. 3d 693, 694-695, 255 Cal. Rptr. 34] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.67

§ 115.67 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Available From Tortfeasor Not Sued by Tort Victim in Favor of Defendant Tortfeasor

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A TORT DEFENDANT RETAINS THE RIGHT TO SEEK COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM ANOTHER TORTFEASOR WHO WAS NOT SUED BY THE TORT VICTIM, EVEN IF THE TORT VICTIM'S ACTION AGAINST THAT TORTFEASOR IS BARRED BY THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.

[EITHER]

A. Cross Complaint for Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued By Tort Victim. A tort defendant is generally authorized to file a cross complaint against a concurrent tortfeasor for comparative indemnity, even if the concurrent tortfeasor has not been named a defendant in the original complaint (American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 607, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899).

[OR]

A. Separate Action for Comparative Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued by Tort Victim. A tort defendant may bring a separate suit for comparative indemnity after settlement or satisfaction of judgment against an alleged concurrent tortfeasor who was not named by the tort victim in the original action (Teachers Ins. Co. v. Smith (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 862, 865-866, 180 Cal. Rptr. 701).

[CONTINUE]

B. Comparative Indemnity Available Despite Statute of Limitations Bar to Tort Victim's Action. A defendant in a tort action may seek comparative indemnity from another concurrent tortfeasor not originally named as a defendant by the tort victim despite the fact that the victim's claim against the tortfeasor is barred by the statute of limitations (People ex rel. Dep't of Transp. v. Superior Court (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 744, 752, 163 Cal. Rptr. 585, 608 P.2d 673 ; see Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consol., Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 604, 611, 189 Cal. Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it may seek comparative indemnity from a tortfeasor who was not sued by the tort victim. The first alternative of Paragraph A is for use if the indemnitee is proceeding by cross complaint. The second alternative is for use if the indemnitee is proceeding by a separate suit. Paragraph B asserts the availability of such a right even if the applicable statute of limitations now bars the victim from proceeding directly against the indemnitor.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if comparative indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee is or may be liable for damages to a tort victim as a result of its tortious conduct; (2) the indemnitor is also a tortfeasor with regard to the tort victim for the same damages; and (3) the tort victim did not proceed against the indemnitor with regard to the damages in question. The facts that establish the running of the statute of limitations with regard to the victim and the timeliness of the indemnity action should then be established. The general rule is that a cause of action for comparative indemnity does not accrue until the indemnitee has actually incurred the loss through payment [E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cross Complaint for Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued By Tort Victim

The facts and procedural background of American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 , are discussed in § 115.60[3][a]. The Supreme Court ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to permit defendant to file a cross complaint for comparative equitable indemnity against plaintiff's parents, who were not defendants in the action. The Court noted that as early as its opinion in Roylance v. Doelger (1962) 57 Cal. 2d 255, 19 Cal. Rptr. 7, 368 P.2d 535 , a defendant could file a cross complaint for declaratory relief against a previously unnamed party on allegations that the defendant would be entitled to indemnity from the party if the plaintiff prevails on the underlying complaint. The Court found the Roylance rule to have been codified in the 1972 revision of the cross-complaint statutes [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 428.10(b), 428.20, 428.70; see also Code Civ. Proc. § 1060 (declaratory relief to ascertain status)]. The Court stated that a plaintiff's legitimate concerns about control of litigation may be partially obviated by providing for separate trial of a cause of action for comparative indemnity asserted in a cross complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1048(b) (discretionary severance)] (20 Cal. 3d 578, 604-607) .

[b] Separate Action for Comparative Indemnity Against Tortfeasor Not Sued by Tort Victim

In Teachers Ins. Co. v. Smith (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 862, 180 Cal. Rptr. 701 , an insurance company negotiated a settlement on behalf of its insureds with the parents of a child injured by the insureds and then brought an independent action for partial indemnity against the parents, alleging comparative fault based on negligent supervision. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer on the ground that the insurance company was a volunteer and had unilaterally entered into the settlement [see § 115.163].

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that it is established California law that a suit for partial indemnity may be brought against a concurrent tortfeasor not named by the tort plaintiff in the original complaint; that a claim for partial indemnity is independent and can be brought in a separate suit after settlement or after satisfaction of judgment in the underlying suit. There need not be a judgment against a settling tortfeasor seeking indemnity (128 Cal. App. 3d 862, 865) . Although as a general rule it may be simpler and more expeditious for a settling tortfeasor to file a presettlement cross complaint in the principal action, if it fails to do so it should not forfeit its right to pursue partial indemnity based on comparative fault in an independent action (128 Cal. App. 3d 862, 866) .

[c] Comparative Indemnity Available Despite Statute of Limitations Bar to Tort Victim's Action

In People ex rel. Dep't of Transp. v. Superior Court (1980) 26 Cal. 3d 744, 163 Cal. Rptr. 585, 608 P.2d 673 , plaintiff, injured in an automobile accident on a public highway, filed an action against several individuals but did not file a timely claim against the State of California under the California Tort Claims Act and did not name the state as a defendant. Two of the defendants filed a cross complaint against the state, alleging that the state's negligence in blocking several lanes of the highway was a proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries, and seeking partial equitable indemnity from the state. Although the cross complaint was filed more than four years after the accident, the state's demurrer to the cross complaint was based only on the failure of the plaintiff to file a claim against the state within 100 days of the accident as required by Gov. Code §§ 901, 911.2. The trial court overruled the state's demurrer, and the state sought a writ of prohibition or mandate.

The Supreme Court denied the writ. The Court held that a tort defendant's claim for equitable indemnity is separate and distinct from the injured party's claim, is not lost because the injured party's claim is barred by the applicable statute of limitations, and does not come into existence until the indemnitee has suffered actual loss through payment of a settlement or judgment (26 Cal. 3d 744, 750-752) .

NOTE:

The general rule that a cause of action for indemnity does not accrue until payment has been made, as stated in the above case, remains true. However, with respect to public entities, Gov. Code § 901 was amended in 1981 to provide that the date on which a cause of action for equitable indemnity or partial equitable indemnity accrues is the date on which a defendant is served with the complaint giving rise to the defendant's claim for equitable indemnity or partial equitable indemnity against the public entity.

Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consol., Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 604, 189 Cal. Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160 , was an action by homebuyers against a general contractor and a subcontractor for negligent construction. The general contractor filed a cross complaint for declaratory relief concerning its right to implied equitable indemnity against the subcontractor. The action against the general contractor was timely in that it was filed within ten years from the date of substantial completion, but it was untimely as against the subcontractor because the subcontractor's performance was substantially completed 12 years before the complaint was filed [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)]. The subcontractor moved for summary judgment on both the complaint and cross complaint on the ground the action and cross action were barred by the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a). The motions were granted and the subcontractor was dismissed from both the complaint and cross complaint. The general contractor appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed and held that the cross complaint was timely under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c). This statute provides that a cross complaint for indemnity may be filed pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b) in an action that has been brought within the time period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a), that is, 10 years. The Court interpreted this language to mean that a cross complaint for indemnity may be filed more than 10 years after the alleged indemnitor has substantially completed its services, provided the underlying action giving rise to the claim for indemnity was itself brought within the 10-year limitation period of the statute (33 Cal. 3d 604, 609) . The court held that permitting the cross complaint for indemnity under the statute was consistent with the common-law rule that a cause of action for indemnity does not accrue until the indemnitee has suffered a loss through payment of an adverse judgment or settlement (33 Cal. 3d 604, 611) .

NOTE:

In a subsequent case, the court of appeal refused to extend the rule of Valley Circles Estates to a cross complaint against a cross defendant who had no connection or relationship to the acts of the defendant cross complainant that were the subject of the original complaint. In the original action, various condominium owners timely sued a developer who had converted an apartment building into condominiums, alleging negligence at the time of the conversion. The developer then filed a cross complaint for indemnity against the original architect of the building, whose alleged negligent acts had been performed more than 10 years before the original complaint was filed, and thus were barred by the limitation period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15. The court held that the cross complaint was likewise barred. The exception in Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c) was held to be limited to acts arising from the same transaction or occurrence under Code Civ. Proc. § 428.10(b). The court considered the original design and the conversion to be separate transactions or occurrences. Because the original plaintiffs were barred by limitation from suing the developer for acts arising from the original design, the developer could not cross complain against the architect for these acts [Sandy v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 1282-1284, 247 Cal. Rptr. 677] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Available Despite Statute of Limitations Bar to Tort Victim's Action

In Crouse v. Brobeck, Phleger, & Harrison (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 94 , plaintiff brought a malpractice action against her attorney, the attorney's former law firm, and the attorney's current firm, alleging a single injury caused by the negligence of the defendant attorney and his former law firm in misplacing and not safeguarding a promissory note, as well as by the attorney and his current law firm in not acting appropriately when informed of the missing note. Defendant attorney and his current firm cross-complained for equitable indemnity against the attorney's former law firm. Former law firm successfully moved for summary judgment against plaintiff on the grounds that, as to it, the one-year statute of limitations had expired prior to suit being filed. Attorney's former law firm also obtained summary adjudication and judgment on the cross-claims for equitable indemnity when the trial court concluded in part that Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6, the statute of limitations in attorney malpractice actions, barred all suits for indemnity. The court of appeal affirmed that plaintiff's claim against the attorney's former law firm was barred by the one-year statute of limitations. However, the court reversed the trial court's ruling that all claims for equitable indemnity were also time-barred. Instead the court noted that the established rule was that a tort defendant's equitable indemnity action is separate and distinct from the tort plaintiff's action against the defendant and the indemnity action is governed by its own limitations period, even though the tort plaintiff's direct action against the indemnitor may be barred by its own statute of limitations. Moreover, the court noted that an indemnity action does not accrue for purposes of the statute of limitations until the defendant pays a judgment or settlement for which the defendant is entitled to indemnity. Thus, in the absence of language in the statute suggesting it was intended to apply to indemnity actions, Code Civ. Proc. § 340.6 did not apply to claims for equitable indemnity brought by one liable attorney against other potentially liable attorneys (67 Cal. App. 4th 1509, 1542-1544) .

In West v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409 , buyers of real property sued the sellers and the broker. The sellers cross complained against the broker for implied contractual indemnity based on the broker's negligent performance of the seller-broker contract. The buyers' action against the broker was barred by the limitation period of Civ. Code § 2079.4 (two years from date of possession of real property for action against broker based on duty to buyer). Nevertheless, the court allowed the seller's indemnity action against the broker to proceed. The court held that Civ. Code § 2079.4 did not apply to an action for implied contractual indemnity by the sellers against the broker (27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 1632-1635) .

