In Time for Living, Inc. v. Guy Hatfield Homes/All Am. Dev. Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 30, 280 Cal. Rptr. 904 , homeowners sued their developer for latent construction defects within the 10-year period of Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a). The developer cross complained against a prior owner of the land who had graded the property for improvement and then sold it more than 10 years earlier, arguing that the indemnity action was timely under Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(c). In reversing summary judgment for the grader, the court stated that a cross complaint for indemnity is, almost by definition, transactionally related to the claims asserted by the plaintiff, because the claim depends on the allegation that the same harm for which the plaintiff seeks to hold the defendant liable is attributable, in part, to the acts of the cross defendant. An indemnity action seeks to apportion among the parties the precise liability claimed by the plaintiff in the main action; therefore, it necessarily arises out of the same occurrence or series of occurrences as asserted by the plaintiff (230 Cal. App. 3d 30, 39) . The only possible limitation is that under Sandy v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1277, 247 Cal. Rptr. 677 [see § 115.67[3][c]], the respective work of the cross complainant and cross defendant on the same land must be on the same development or improvement of that land. Whether the development or improvement is the same is essentially a question of fact (230 Cal. App. 3d 30, 42) .

153 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.68

§ 115.68 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Collateral Estoppel Principles Do Not Preclude Comparative Indemnity Despite Finding in Pretrial Proceeding That Indemnitor Was Not Liable to Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS NOT PRECLUDED FROM SEEKING COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR BY _____ [kind of motion, e.g., A MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] IN _____ [THIS or ANOTHER] ACTION PURSUANT TO WHICH IT WAS DETERMINED THAT INDEMNITOR HAD NO LIABILITY TO THE TORT VICTIM BECAUSE _____ [specify missing element of collateral estoppel, e.g., INDEMNITEE WAS NEITHER A PARTY TO, NOR IN PRIVITY WITH, A PARTY TO THAT PROCEEDING].

[EITHER]

Different Theory of Liability. In an action for comparative indemnity, the indemnitee is not collaterally estopped from asserting the indemnitor's liability to the tort victim by a prior adjudication of the indemnitor's nonliability unless the identical issue is presented in the two proceedings (Frank v. State of California (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 488, 494-495, 252 Cal. Rptr. 410).

[OR]

Lack of Privity. An indemnitee is not collaterally estopped in an action for comparative indemnity from asserting the indemnitor's liability to the tort victim by a prior adjudication of nonliability unless the indemnitee was a party or in privity with a party to the prior adjudication (see White Motor Corp. v. Teresinski (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 763, 263 Cal. Rptr. 26).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is not collaterally estopped from seeking comparative indemnity by a final judgment under which the indemnitor was adjudged to have no liability to the tort victim. In an appropriate case, the points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.75.

The alternative points and authorities assert the absence of different elements required to invoke collateral estoppel. The first alternative alleges a difference between the issue decided in the prior matter and the issue to be decided in the indemnity action. The second alternative alleges a lack of privity between the party alleged to be collaterally estopped and the parties to the prior matter.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the doctrine of collateral estoppel is sought to be invoked. It may be used in a memorandum in opposition to a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, that seeks to establish a bar of collateral estoppel as a matter of law. It may also be used in an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The particular facts that establish the nonapplicability of collateral estoppel should be developed. For example, if a lack of privity is alleged, the status of the indemnitee with regard to the prior proceeding should be developed. If a lack of identity of issues is alleged, the exact issues determined in the prior proceeding should be set forth and distinguished from the issues to be determined in the indemnity action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Different Theory of Liability

In Frank v. State of California (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 488, 252 Cal. Rptr. 410 , Mitchell sued Frank and the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV), as a department of the State of California, for injuries suffered in a motor vehicle accident. Mitchell's theory of liability as alleged in his complaint against the DMV was based on negligence in issuing a driver's license to a person (Frank) who, because of age and diminished physical and mental abilities, was incapable of safely operating a motor vehicle. Frank cross complained against the state for comparative indemnity.

The state's demurrer to Mitchell's complaint was granted with leave to amend. Mitchell failed to amend, and judgment was entered for the state. The state then demurred to the cross complaint, alleging that Frank was collaterally estopped from seeking indemnity from a party who had been determined to have no liability to the plaintiff. Frank filed an amended cross complaint against the state, among others, alleging a dangerous condition by failure to control the intersection where the accident occurred. The trial court granted the state's demurrer on the ground that it was barred by the doctrine of res judicata.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that equitable indemnity against the state was not barred by res judicata or collateral estoppel by the judgment in favor of the state on the complaint. Unlike Columbus Line, Inc. v. Gray Line Sight-Seeing Cos. Associated, Inc. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 174 Cal. Rptr. 527 [see § 115.75], there was no adjudication that the state was not responsible in any manner for Mitchell's injuries. The only issue that was resolved was Mitchell's allegation of the DMV's negligence in the issuance of the driver's license to Frank. The dismissal was not tantamount to an adjudication of the issue of whether the state was responsible for Mitchell's injuries due to a dangerous condition in a traffic intersection, which was the basis of the cross complaint for indemnity. The first requirement for res judicata or collateral estoppel, a prior adjudication of an issue identical with the one presented in the action in question, was not satisfied. The court said that a contrary result would be inequitable in that Frank's rights against the state would be entirely dependent on Mitchell's litigation strategy, and would be cut off simply because Mitchell chose not to pursue various legal theories of liability (205 Cal. App. 3d 488, 494-495) .

[b] Lack of Privity

White Motor Corp. v. Teresinski (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 263 Cal. Rptr. 26 , involved an attempted "offensive" use of collateral estoppel by an indemnitee, rather than a "defensive" use by an indemnitor. White and Vic's Auto Sales (Vic's) were among the defendants sued in a personal injury action. White cross complained for indemnity against several defendants, not including Vic's. Vic's also cross complained for indemnity against other defendants, including White.

White successfully moved for summary judgment against plaintiffs on the complaint, and a judgment was entered dismissing White from the plaintiffs' action. Plaintiffs appealed, but abandoned the appeal in consideration of a $50,000 payment from White. Eight months after summary judgment was entered, White added Vic's as a cross defendant on its cross complaint for indemnity.

Plaintiffs proceeded to trial against Vic's only, and the jury found Vic's share of comparative fault to be 60 percent. White then moved for summary judgment on its cross complaint for indemnity against Vic's. The trial court found that because White was determined to have no liability and Vic's was determined to be 60 percent responsible, White was entitled to total indemnity from Vic's as a matter of law.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that because the element of privity was lacking, collateral estoppel principles did not preclude Vic's from litigating White's and Vic's comparative liability to the plaintiffs. The court noted that notice of White's motion for summary judgment against plaintiffs was given to Vic's. However, at the time of the motion, Vic's was not named as a cross defendant in White's cross complaint for equitable indemnity. Under these circumstances, Vic's would have no reason to anticipate that a successful summary judgment motion by White against plaintiffs would someday be used as a basis for White's obtaining indemnity from Vic's. To the contrary, if White were successful in its summary judgment motion, the logical assumption would be that White would not pay any funds to plaintiffs and there would be nothing to indemnify. Because there was no privity, Vic's could not be collaterally estopped by the determination that White was not liable to the plaintiffs (214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 763) .

The court recognized the validity of White's interests in settling in exchange for an abandonment of the appeal and refused to deny indemnity on the basis that the payment was "voluntary" [see § 115.164]. However, it found it highly illogical and manifestly inequitable to permit White to take the inconsistent positions that, on one hand, it faced potential liability should its summary judgment have been reversed (and therefore, was not a volunteer), but, on the other hand, that the same summary judgment was a final determination that it was not at fault (and therefore, entitled to full equitable indemnity as a matter of law). To affirm such a judgment would increase the potential for collusion and other abuses of the system (214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 763-764) .

NOTE:

At the time of White's summary judgment motion against plaintiffs, Vic's had a cross complaint for indemnity from White pending, although the court labelled it as "dormant" [White Motor Corp. v. Teresinski (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 763, n.12, 263 Cal. Rptr. 26] . Thus, had Vic's subsequently sought comparative indemnity from White, it would have been in exactly the same position as the indemnitees in Columbus Lines v. Gray Lines and would have been collaterally estopped from relitigating White's liability to the plaintiffs in the indemnity action. The distinction between the two cases lies in the difference between offensive and defensive use of collateral estoppel. In Columbus Lines v. Gray Lines, Gray Lines used collateral estoppel defensively, that is, having established its nonliability to the plaintiffs, it sought to also escape liability for indemnity. In White Motor Corp., White sought to use collateral estoppel offensively--that is, armed with a judgment of nonliability, it nevertheless paid plaintiffs $50,000 and sought to recover the payment from Vic's.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.69

§ 115.69 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--No Right of Comparative Indemnity Exists If Parties Are Not Jointly and Severally Liable for Loss Incurred

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE INDEMNITOR AND INDEMNITEE ARE NOT JOINTLY AND SEVERALLY LIABLE FOR THE LOSS FOR WHICH INDEMNITY IS SOUGHT.

A. Joint and Several Liability Required. Unless the prospective indemnitor and indemnitee are jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff, there is no basis for equitable indemnity (Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400).

[Optional] B. No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitor Is Not Liable to Tort Victim. Parties are not jointly and severally liable, and thus there is no right of comparative indemnity between them, if the indemnitor is determined to have no liability to the tort victim (Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Superior Court (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1157-1159, 214 Cal. Rptr. 615).

[Optional] C. Lack of Duty to Tort Victim. A party who owes no duty of care to the tort plaintiff has no liability to that plaintiff, and therefore, cannot be liable to a tortfeasor for equitable indemnity (Seamen's Bank v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491-1492, 236 Cal. Rptr. 31 ; Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425-427, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400).

[Optional] D. No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitee Is Not Liable to Tort Victim. Parties are not jointly and severally liable, and thus there is no right of comparative indemnity between them, with regard to amounts paid to the tort victim by the indemnitee for which the indemnitee has no liability (Woodward-Gizienski & Assocs. v. Geotechnical Exploration, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68, 255 Cal. Rptr. 800).

[Optional] E. No Right of Indemnity From Tort Victim. There is no equitable basis for a tortfeasor's claim for indemnity from the victim of his or her tortious conduct (Seamen's Bank v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1492-1493, 236 Cal. Rptr. 31).

[Optional] F. Equitable Indemnity Not Available to Malpractice Tortfeasor. Equitable indemnity is not available to shift a subsequent medical provider's liability to the initial medical provider (Children's Hosp. v. Sedgwick (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1789 , 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725).

[Optional] G. Contractual Duties Owed by Indemnitor to Tort Victim Not Basis for Comparative Indemnity to Tortfeasor. If the only duties allegedly violated by the indemnitor are contractual duties owed to the tort victim, the indemnitor had no contractual relationship with the tortfeasor, and there is no other basis for the indemnitor to be liable in tort, the indemnitor cannot be liable for comparative indemnity to the tortfeasor (BFGC Architects Planners, Inc. v. Forcum/Mackey Constr., Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 848, 852-853, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that comparative equitable indemnity is not available because the indemnitor and indemnitee are not jointly and severally liable to the injured party. Paragraph A should be used to establish the basic principle that there is no indemnity without joint and several liability. Optional paragraphs B through G set forth various situations under which a lack of joint and several liability may be found so as to defeat comparative indemnity rights.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which comparative indemnity rights may be litigated, see the § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The particular facts that establish a lack of joint and several liability under one of the optional paragraphs of this form should be set forth. For example, if the indemnitor's position is that it has no liability to the injured person because of a lack of duty to the tort victim (optional Paragraph C), the alleged acts of the indemnitor toward the victim should be set forth and the legal principles that establish a lack of duty should be developed.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability Required

In Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 , one Rodriguez and Davis were involved in an automobile accident. Rodriguez retained attorney Munoz to bring an action against Davis. Munoz failed to bring the action within the time required by the applicable statute of limitation, and Rodriguez sued Munoz for legal malpractice. Munoz cross complained against Davis for equitable indemnification. The trial court sustained Davis' demurrer to the cross complaint.

The court of appeal affirmed. It stated that there can be no indemnity without liability. In other words, unless the prospective indemnitor and indemnitee are jointly and severally liable to the plaintiff, there is no basis for indemnity ( 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425) . The court held that Davis and Munoz were not jointly and severally liable because Davis had no duty to Munoz [see § 115.69[3][c]].

NOTE:

Under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51), the liability of each defendant for noneconomic damages is several only and not joint [Civ. Code § 1431.2; see § 115.09]. Therefore, if Proposition 51 applies, there is no longer any right of comparative indemnity with regard to noneconomic damages [Union Pac. Corp. v. Wengert (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1447-1449, 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68] . For discussion of the interrelation among settlement, indemnity, and Proposition 51, see 115.66[2][b] and § 115.150[2][c].

It is not clear whether or not joint and several liability to the tort victim is required if the right to indemnity is to be implied from contractual duties between the indemnitor and the indemnitee [see Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1238-1241 , disapproved on other grounds, Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1032 n.12, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; see generally § 115.91].

[b] No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitor Is Not Liable to Tort Victim

In Allis-Chalmers Corp. v. Superior Court (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 214 Cal. Rptr. 615 , the indemnitor obtained summary judgment against the plaintiff with regard to the underlying claim and then brought a motion for summary judgment on the indemnitee's cross complaint for indemnity. The trial court denied the motion, but the court of appeal reversed. It held that because there can be no right of indemnity without joint and several liability, once the nonliability of the indemnitor to the plaintiff was established, any claim for comparative indemnity was destroyed (168 Cal. App. 3d 1155, 1159) . For consideration of this same result as an application of the doctrine of collateral estoppel, see § 115.75.

NOTE:

An indemnitor may be granted summary judgment as to the plaintiff and still be potentially liable for comparative indemnity if the indemnitee asserts a theory of liability different from that propounded by the plaintiff and adjudicated with regard to the motion leading to dismissal [Frank v. State of California (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 488, 491-495, 252 Cal. Rptr. 410 ; see also § 115.68] .

[c] Lack of Duty to Tort Victim

Seamen's Bank v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 236 Cal. Rptr. 31 was essentially an indemnity action within an indemnity action. A bank (Bank of America) brought an indemnity action against three of its employees [see § 115.93] to recover amounts that it was required to pay to certain investors (Seamen's) because of the employees' alleged failure to use due care in performing their duties as bank officers in the operation of the real estate loan pool. The defendant bank officers cross complained against Seamen's for equitable indemnity. The officers' equitable indemnity claim was based on allegations that the investors failed to act as reasonably prudent investors with regard to the underlying transaction. Seamen's demurrer to the cross complaint was overruled by the trial court.

The court of appeal issued an alternative writ of mandate to review the trial court's order, and later discharged the alternative writ and issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to sustain the demurrers. The court noted that there can be no indemnity without liability, and that equitable indemnity required joint and several liability. On the facts before it, the officers and Seamen's would have to be jointly and severally liable to Bank of America in order to support the officers' claim to equitable indemnity from Seamen's. Because an investor owes no duty of care to an escrow agent or trustee to investigate a deal before or after investing, Seamen's could not be liable to Bank of America; Seamen's and the officers could not be jointly and severally liable to Bank of America; and there could be no basis for equitable indemnity between the officers and Seamen's (190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1491-1492) .

The facts of Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 , are discussed in § 115.69[3][a]. The court held that the original tortfeasor (Davis) and the subsequent tortfeasor attorney (Munoz) could not be jointly and severally liable to the injured party (Rodriguez) because Davis owed no duty to Rodriguez to ensure that his legal claims were being competently prosecuted. The court distinguished Ash v. Mortensen (1944) 24 Cal. 2d 654, 657, 150 P.2d 876 , in which it was held that an original tortfeasor is also liable for the aggravation of the original injury caused by subsequent medical malpractice because the malpractice is reasonably foreseeable. In contrast, in the case before it, the court found that the nexus between Davis' conduct and the risk of the injury that ultimately occurred to Rodriguez (legal malpractice) was too tenuous to support the imposition of a duty on Davis (141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425-427) .

NOTE:

In a case involving original and subsequent tortfeasors, such as Munoz v. Davis, there is a two-step duty analysis. First, there must be a duty on the part of the original tortfeasor toward the tort victim to establish the original tort. In Munoz v. Davis, it was Davis's duty to use due care in driving his automobile, a point not at issue in the case. Second, there must also be a duty on the part of the original tortfeasor with regard to the aggravated injury suffered by the tort victim because of the acts of the subsequent tortfeasor. Such a duty usually exists only if it is foreseeable to the original tortfeasor that the subsequent tort might occur. It was this duty that the court found to be lacking.

The court's effort in Munoz v. Davis to distinguish the prior authority involving medical malpractice on the grounds of joint and several liability, duty, and foreseeability is not convincing. It is not readily apparent why subsequent medical malpractice is foreseeable and subsequent legal malpractice is not. Nevertheless, the result in Munoz v. Davis is more arguably correct under the court's alternate holding on public policy grounds [see Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 429-430, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 ; see also § 115.72].

[d] No Right of Indemnity If Indemnitee Is Not Liable to Tort Victim

In Woodward-Gizienski & Assocs. v. Geotechnical Exploration, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 255 Cal. Rptr. 800 , a condominium homeowners' association sued the developers of the project for damages arising from soil settlement. The developers cross complained against the soils engineering firm that they had retained prior to construction on the project (W-G). The association retained another soils engineering firm (Geotech) to make repairs. In reliance on Geotech, the association implemented repairs costing about $1,000,000. The developers, including W-G, settled with the association for $731,400. W-G then cross complained against Geotech for equitable indemnity, alleging that the excessive cost of repairs caused it to incur a liability for which Geotech should be liable. W-G alleged that the reasonable cost of repairs was only $100,000.

The trial court granted Geotech's demurrer and the court of appeal affirmed. It held that the excessive cost of repairs could not legally cause detriment to W-G. Under fundamental principles of damages, W-G were only liable for reasonable costs of repairs, and it has no liability for excessive costs. Because the W-G and Geotech were not jointly and severally liable for the increased damages due to the alleged excessive repairs, there was no basis to apportion their liability (208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68) .

NOTE:

Although it is not expressed in the opinion, the court's holding appears to be an application of the rule that there is no right to equitable indemnity with regard to a voluntary payment, that is, one that the indemnitee has no legal duty to make [see Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 122 ; see also § 115.164[3][a]]. W-G was under no legal compulsion to settle with the association for an amount that reflected an excessive cost of repairs; therefore, it had no right to recover those amounts through equitable indemnity.

[e] No Right of Indemnity From Tort Victim

The facts of Seamen's Bank v. Superior Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 236 Cal. Rptr. 31 , are discussed in § 115.69[3][c]. The court essentially viewed the bank officers' cross complaint against the investors (Seamen's) as a procedural device to establish that the investors were also negligent with regard to the transaction. The officers sought a reduction of their liability to Bank of America by the percentage that Seamen's recovery from Bank of America might have been reduced on account of Seamen's negligence had the matter proceeded to trial rather than been settled. The court stated that the officers had a legitimate interest in establishing Seamen's negligence. However, the place to litigate their fault was in the Bank of America's action for indemnity against its officers, not in an indemnity action by the officers against Seamen's under the fiction that Seamen's itself is a tortfeasor. The fact that Seamen's was not a party in the litigation between Bank of America and the officers does not prejudice the officers. It is not necessary that a person be a party to an action in order for the court to assess that person's proportion of fault. Thus, there is no equitable basis for a tortfeasor's claim for indemnity from a victim (190 Cal. App. 3d 1485, 1492-1493) .

[f] Equitable Indemnity Not Available to Malpractice Tortfeasor

In Children's Hosp. v. Sedgwick (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 , plaintiff hospital brought an action for equitable indemnity against an anesthesiologist alleging that the doctor negligently administered anesthesia to a patient which caused the patient serious physical injuries. The hospital sought indemnity from the doctor for the settlement payment it made on the patient's behalf in an earlier malpractice action against the hospital. The hospital alleged that the damages were caused primarily and ultimately by the doctor's negligence. The doctor moved for summary judgment, and presented evidence of a favorable judgment in an earlier action concerning her asserted medical negligence and patient's injuries. The jury in that action found that the doctor negligently treated the patient but that the negligence was not a legal cause of the patient's injuries. The doctor also presented evidence of the jury's verdict in the malpractice action against the hospital to the effect that the hospital could have prevented the patient's injuries by treating her with reasonable care. The hospital responded that since the trial court precluded evidence of the doctor's alleged negligence in the original malpractice action against it, it should be able to litigate this issue on appeal. The trial court granted summary judgment, reasoning that a cause of action for equitable indemnity required the indemnitor to be jointly and severally liable to the injured party. Since it was undisputed that the jury found no liability by the doctor to the plaintiff in the underlying action, the court concluded that there was no basis for the claim of shared or joint or several liability.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the hospital's indemnity claim lacked the essential element of common liability to an injured person. The court reasoned that the doctor was entitled to raise against the hospital any substantive defense to liability that she could assert against the patient in the underlying action. Her exoneration from liability after trial on the merits of her alleged malpractice precluded the patient, and derivatively, the hospital from relitigating her alleged negligence. As an independent ground for affirming the trial court's judgment the court of appeal held as a matter of law that equitable indemnity was not available to shift a subsequent medical provider's liability to the initial medical provider. According to the court if the rule were otherwise, every alleged tortfeasor would be a malpractice insurer, and equity would not permit such a result (45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1789) .

[g] Contractual Duties Owed by Indemnitor to Tort Victim Not Basis for Comparative Indemnity to Tortfeasor

In BFGC Architects Planners, Inc. v. Forcum/Mackey Constr., Inc. (2004) 119 Cal. App. 4th 848, 14 Cal. Rptr. 3d 721 , a school district entered into a contract with an architectural firm to design and supervise construction of a high school. The district also entered into contracts with two general contractors for the site and construction phases of the project. After construction was completed, one of the general contractors sought $11,000,000 from the district for delays and disruptions allegedly caused by the architects' defective designs. The district and the contractor settled. The district then sued the architects for breach of contract and professional negligence, and the architects filed cross-complaints seeking equitable (comparative) indemnity from the two general contractors based on their negligence. The trial court sustained demurrers on the cross-complaints without leave to amend, and the architects appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court noted the established principle that equitable indemnity is only appropriate if the indemnitor and indemnitee are jointly and severally liable in tort to a third party. Thus, for the contractors to be liable to the architects for equitable indemnity, there must be some basis for the contractors being liable in tort to the district. Because no basis existed for imposing tort liability under theories of vicarious liability, strict liability, or implied contractual indemnity, the architects were required to show that the contractors owed and a tort duty directly to the district and breached that duty. The architects failed to do so. Their allegations of misconduct on the part of the contractors were nothing more than claims that the contractors breached contractual duties owed to the district. Because a breach of contractual duties would not support the imposition of tort liability, there was no way for the architects and the contractors to be jointly and severally liable in tort to the district. Therefore, there was no basis for allowing the architects' claim for equitable indemnity against the contractors (119 Cal. App. 4th 848, 852-853) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Joint and Several Liability Required

In Fieldstone Co. v. Briggs Plumbing Prods., Inc. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 357, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 701 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment for defendant, manufacturer of inexpensive bathroom sinks, in plaintiff's action to recoup the costs of replacing sinks that prematurely rusted and chipped. Plaintiff's complaint did not contain negligence causes of action against defendants, but alleged that defendants' "breaches" created the sink defects, and that therefore it was entitled to complete or partial implied equitable indemnity or contribution from them for any damages sustained. The trial court determined that defendants could not be liable for indemnity, because they were not liable for plaintiff's economic damages under either a strict liability or negligence theory as a matter of law. The court of appeal agreed, stating that there can be no indemnity without joint and several liability by the prospective indemnitor and indemnitee. In this case the court found specifically that: (1) strict liability had no application; (2) plaintiff was precluded from recovering economic losses under a negligence theory; (3) there was no special relationship between the parties justifying the recovery of economic damages in a negligence action, despite the absence of physical or personal injury; and (4) even if a case could be made for a duty of care, it would still conclude that no duty existed, for if a duty of care to avoid economic injury existed in the circumstances of this case, every manufacturer would become an insurer, potentially forever, against economic losses from negligent defects in a product used for its intended purpose (54 Cal. App. 4th 357, 368) .

[b] Contractual Duties Owed by Indemnitor to Tort Victim Not Basis for Comparative Indemnity to Tortfeasor

In Stop Loss Ins. Brokers, Inc. v. Brown & Toland Medical Group (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 , the Regents of the University of California had retained an insurance broker to obtain a $1 million-per-claim insurance policy for patients receiving health services through University providers. Under the policy the broker obtained, the Regents were required to notify the insurer of any potential or actual claims exceeding 50 percent of the policy's deductible. A medical group retained by the Regents worked together with the broker to provide this information to the insurer. The medical group analyzed the Regents' claims each month and sent the necessary information the broker, who then prepared the necessary claim forms and sent them to the medical group, who approved the forms and sent them to the insurer. In 2001, a new policy expressly excluded coverage for preexisting claims not disclosed by the Regents. The Regents signed a binder purporting to disclose all preexisting claims, but one claim was omitted. Because of this omission, coverage was denied when the claim was submitted later that year. The Regents, after incurring unreimbursed expenses for treatment provided to the patient, sued the insurance broker for breach of contract and negligence, and the broker cross-complained for indemnity against the medical group. In the cross-complaint, the broker alleged that the medical group owed a duty to the Regents to analyze the claims properly and provide all relevant claims information to the broker in a timely manner, and that the medical group breached this duty to the Regents, which obligated the group to pay full or partial indemnity for any damages that the broker might be compelled to pay to the Regents. The trial court sustained a demurrer on the cross-complaint in favor of the medical group and the court of appeal affirmed. The court concluded that the duties that the medical group allegedly breached were contractual duties, and did not constitute a breach of a legal duty of care (which would have given rise to an equitable indemnity cause of action under tort law). Consequently, the medical group was not a joint tortfeasor with the broker. Because equitable indemnity is only available between joint tortfeasors and cannot be based upon a negligent breach of contractual duties, the broker had not stated a valid cause of action for equitable indemnity and the sustaining of the medical group's demurrer was proper as a matter of law (143 Cal. App. 4th 1036, 1040-1044) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.70

§ 115.70 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--No Right of Comparative Indemnity Exists if Neither Party Is at Fault

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE POTENTIAL INDEMNITOR WAS NOT DETERMINED TO BE AT FAULT.

No Indemnity Without Fault. At a minimum equitable indemnity requires a determination of fault on the part of the alleged indemnitor. In the absence of a contractual agreement between the parties concerning allocation of fault, a court determination that neither party was at fault precludes either from obtaining indemnity against the other (City of Huntington Beach v. City of Westminster (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 220, 225).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention that indemnitee is entitled to partial indemnification under principles of comparative indemnity because neither the indemnitee nor the indemnitor were found to be at fault.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which comparative indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

[b] Argument

Counsel should add argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should set forth particular facts showing a lack of fault on the part of indemnitee and indemnitor and a lack of any contractual agreement between the parties allocating fault, and then argue that these facts preclude either party from obtaining indemnity against the other.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion relating to comparative indemnity, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Memoranda

For a memoranda relating to the necessity of joint and several liability for entitlement to partial indemnity, see § 115.69.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Indemnity Without Fault

In City of Huntington Beach v. City of Westminster (1997) 57 Cal. App. 4th 220, 66 Cal. Rptr. 2d 286 , two cities settled a lawsuit brought by a robbery victim who was accidentally bitten by a police dog and the court entered judgment pursuant to the stipulated settlement, holding both cities jointly and severally liable. Several months later the cities tried their respective indemnity cross complaints before a judge. The judge found no negligence on the part of any employee of either police department, but ordered one city to bear 100 percent of the responsibility because using the police dog lessened the exposure of the other city's police officers to deadly harm thereby greatly benefiting that city. The trial court concluded that by asking for assistance and using that assistance, the requesting agency should bear the financial responsibility for unfortunate and unforeseen consequences of the inherent risk of police activities which are not caused by the assisting agency's negligence. The trial court entered judgment in favor of one city and the other city appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that there was no equitable basis for a total shifting of a loss from one fault-free party to another, and that the statutory right of contribution required the cities to share the burden of the judgment equally between them (57 Cal. App. 4th 220, 222) . The court reasoned that California has but a single comparative indemnity doctrine which permits partial indemnification on a comparative fault basis in appropriate cases. At the heart of the doctrine is apportionment based on fault. At a minimum equitable indemnity requires a determination of fault on the part of the alleged indemnitor. None of these circumstances applied here. Neither city was determined to be more directly culpable than the other, and there was no contractual agreement between the parties concerning allocation of fault. The court ruled that in the absence of a contractual agreement between the parties concerning allocation of fault, a court determination that neither party was at fault precluded either from obtaining indemnity against the other (57 Cal. App. 4th 220, 225) . The court concluded that as joint judgment debtors in a tort action the cities each had a right of contribution against the other. Thus, the burden of the judgment should have been distributed equally between the two. In closing it noted that courts should be reluctant to impose all-or-nothing liability in municipal aid situations without some direction and guidance from the involved cities themselves or the legislature (57 Cal. App. 4th 220, 226-227) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.71

§ 115.71 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Statutory Immunity from Liability Precludes Assignment of Comparative Fault for Non-Economic Damages [Civ. Code § 1714.45]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum or points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY MUST BE DENIED BECAUSE STATUTORY IMMUNITY FROM LIABILITY PRECLUDES ASSIGNMENT OF COMPARATIVE FAULT FOR NON-ECONOMIC DAMAGES.

A. Several Liability for Non-Economic Damages. In a tort action governed by principles of comparative fault, a defendant is severally liable for plaintiff's non-economic damages in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault (Civ. Code § 1431.2 (a)).

[Optional] B. No Right of Indemnity for Non-Economic Damages if Indemnitor Is Statutorily Immune from Liability. To the extent that prospective indemnitor's are statutorily immune from liability under Civil Code Section 1714.45, on the grounds that the immunized conduct breached no duty and constituted no tort, the statute also precludes indirect assignment of comparative fault for non-economic damages under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986, Civil Code Section 1431 et seq. (Richards v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 985, 1001, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a defendant's contention that comparative indemnity for non-economic damages is not available because the prospective indemnitor is statutorily immune from liability. Paragraph A should be used to establish the statutory principle that in a tort action governed by principles of comparative fault, a defendant is severally liable for plaintiff's non-economic damages in direct proportion to that defendant's percentage of fault. Optional Paragraph B can be used to defeat comparative indemnity claims where the prospective indemnitor is statutorily immune from liability.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which comparative indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which comparative indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. The particular facts that establish the statutory immunity of the prospective indemnitor should be set forth.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right of Indemnity for Non-Economic Damages if Indemnitor Is Statutorily Immune From Liability

In Richards v. Owens-Ill., Inc. (1997) 14 Cal. 4th 985, 60 Cal. Rptr. 2d 103 , a shipyard worker sued a manufacturer of an asbestos product for damages from a respiratory injury. Defendant claimed that, since plaintiff was a smoker, cigarette manufacturers shared fault for plaintiff's injury. Defendant thus contended that its liability should be reduced under Civ. Code § 1431 et seq., which provides that a defendant is liable for non-economic damages only in direct proportion to the defendant's percentage of fault. Plaintiff disagreed, relying on Civ. Code § 1714.45, which provides immunity from suit to suppliers of certain unhealthy consumer products such as tobacco. Plaintiff argued that since the law immunizes tobacco companies, they cannot be part of a shared fault. The trial court agreed with plaintiff, and excluded evidence concerning the fault of tobacco manufacturers. However, the court of appeal reversed, relying on a holding in DaFonte v. Up-Right, Inc. (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 593, 7 Cal. Rptr. 2d 238 that apportionment of non-economic damages for purposes of Civ. Code § 1431 et seq. must include the "universe of tortfeasors," including those immune from suit. In DaFonte, an action by a farm employee against a harvester manufacturer for injury caused by a defect in the machines design, the defendant was allowed to limit its liability for non-economic damages by showing that the plaintiff's employer's negligence contributed to the injury, even though the employer was statutorily immune from tort damages.

The Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal, concluding that the DaFonte holding did not apply. The court reasoned that the employer's immunity at issue in DaFonte derived from an alternate scheme of workers' compensation that did not imply that a negligent employer lacked legal fault. On the other hand, the immunity accorded by Civ. Code § 1714.45 to suppliers of tobacco represented a legislative judgment that such companies had no fault for harm caused by their products. Therefore, such companies were not tortfeasors to whom comparative fault could be assigned. The Court concluded that to the extent Civ. Code § 1714.45 afforded tobacco suppliers immunity from liability in direct actions against them, on grounds that the immunized conduct breached no duty and constituted no tort, the statute also precluded indirect assignment of comparative fault to such entitles for purposes of Civ. Code § 1431 et seq. (14 Cal. 4th 985, 1001) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.71A

§ 115.71A Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Party Liable for Intentional Tort Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages Based on Negligence of Another Party

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

DEFENDANT'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY MUST BE DENIED BECAUSE, UNDER PROPOSITION 51, A DEFENDANT WHOSE LIABILITY IS BASED ON AN INTENTIONAL TORT IS NOT ENTITLED TO APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY FOR NONECONOMIC DAMAGES WHEN ANOTHER PARTY IS ASSIGNED LIABILITY BASED ON NEGLIGENCE.

Liability for Intentional Tort Not Subject to Apportionment. Under Proposition 51 (codified at Civil Code Section 1431.2), an intentional tortfeasor is not entitled to apportionment of liability for noneconomic damages when the negligence of another contributed to the injury, regardless of whether the negligent person is the plaintiff or a third-party tortfeasor (Thomas v. Duggins Construction Co., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1112-1113, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a claim for comparative indemnity for noneconomic damages when the claim for comparative indemnity is made by a party whose liability is based on an intentional tort and the other party's conduct only constituted negligence.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the claim for an apportionment of damages by the defendant is made. It may also be used in an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing that the liability of the defendant making the indemnity claim is based on an intentional tort and that the liability assigned to other parties is based on conduct that was merely negligent. If necessary, counsel should also include facts and argument establishing that the case is governed by Civ. Code § 1431.2.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability for Intentional Tort Not Subject to Apportionment

In Thomas v. Duggins Construction Co., Inc. (2006) 139 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 44 Cal. Rptr. 3d 66 , plaintiffs were two workers injured when a scissor lift they were using tipped over, causing them to fall 20 to 25 feet to a concrete floor. Plaintiffs' employer had purchased the scissor lift two days earlier from a construction company based on representations made by employees of the construction company as to the lift's capabilities. Plaintiffs collected workers' compensation benefits for their injuries and brought suit against the construction company that sold the lift, as well as against several of that company's employees. At trial, the jury found in favor of the plaintiffs on claims for breach of implied warranty, negligence, and intentional misrepresentation, and awarded approximately $1.9 million in damages. The jury assigned 40 percent responsibility to the construction company that sold the lift, 40 percent to plaintiffs' own employer, and 10 percent each to two employees of the construction company. The jury also found that one of the two liable employees had made intentional misrepresentations about the lift to the plaintiffs' employer in connection with the sale. The parties agreed that the employees of the construction company were acting in the course of their employment at all relevant times and that the construction company was vicariously liable for their share of liability. The construction company argued to the court that its liability for noneconomic damages should be reduced in accordance with Proposition 51, under which a tortfeasor is generally only liable for noneconomic damages in proportion to that tortfeasor's share of fault. The trial court disagreed that apportionment under Proposition 51 was required and entered a judgment against the construction company for the entire amount of plaintiffs' damages. The construction company appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court noted that, prior to the passage of Proposition 51, an intentional tortfeasor was not entitled to a reduction of liability for damages based on the fault of other tortfeasors or the plaintiff's own negligence. The court concluded that Proposition 51 did not change this principle. Noting that an intentional actor cannot rely on someone else's negligence to shift responsibility for his or her own conduct, the court held that an intentional tortfeasor is not entitled to apportionment of liability for noneconomic damages when the negligence of another contributed to the injury, regardless of whether the negligent person is the plaintiff or a third-party tortfeasor. Although the construction company's own negligence would ordinarily have warranted apportionment of its liability for noneconomic damages, because the construction company was vicariously liable for the intentional misconduct of one of its employees, the court concluded that the construction company could be held liable for the entire award of noneconomic damages, without apportionment (139 Cal. App. 4th 1105, 1112-1113) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.71B

§ 115.71B Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity [Civ. Code § 1431 et seq.]--Party Vicariously Liable Under Doctrine of Nondelegable Duty for Negligence of Another Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A DEFENDANT WHOSE VICARIOUS LIABILITY FOR THE CONDUCT OF AN INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR IS BASED ON THE NONDELEGABLE DUTY DOCTRINE IS NOT ENTITLED TO APPORTIONMENT OF LIABILITY FOR NONECONOMIC DAMAGES.

Hirer Liable for Nondelegable Duty Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages. Proposition 51 (codified at Civil Code Section 1431.2) does not limit the vicarious liability of the hirer of an independent contractor when the hirer's liability is based on the nondelegable duty doctrine (Koepnick v. Kashiwa Fudosan America, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 32, 35, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 453).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant is entitled to apportionment of liability for noneconomic damages. The basis for the opposition is that because defendant is vicariously liable for the negligence of an independent contractor that defendant hired, no apportionment is required under Proposition 51.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the contention that no apportionment is permitted. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts establishing that defendant's vicarious liability is based on a nondelegable duty.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Hirer Liable for Nondelegable Duty Not Entitled to Apportionment of Liability for Noneconomic Damages

In Koepnick v. Kashiwa Fudosan America, Inc. (2009) 173 Cal. App. 4th 32, 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 453 , plaintiff was injured in an elevator accident after an independent contractor hired by the building's owner to maintain the elevators failed to detect and replace a faulty plastic liner, which caused the elevator cable to loosen and the elevator to stop suddenly. Plaintiff settled with the independent contractor and went to trial against the building owner. At trial, the jury found that the negligence of both the owner and the independent contractor contributed to plaintiff's injury, and it apportioned 75 percent of the fault to the owner and 25 percent to the elevator contractor. The owner argued to the court that Proposition 51 applied to limit its liability for noneconomic damages based on its share of apportioned liability as found by the jury. The court disagreed, concluding that defendant was liable for 100 percent of the noneconomic damages awarded because it was vicariously liable for the contractor's negligence based on the nondelegable duty doctrine. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. Citing a previous court of appeal opinion, the court held that because Proposition 51 does not limit a defendant's vicarious liability for the tortious acts of another, the building owner's vicarious liability for noneconomic damages was not subject to apportionment. Under the nondelegable duty doctrine, the building owner owed a nondelegable duty to maintain its land in a reasonably safe condition, and thus the owner remained answerable for harm caused by the negligent failure of its contractor to maintain the building in a reasonably safe condition. As the owner was vicariously liability for the negligence of the contractor, the owner could be held liable for 100 percent of the noneconomic damages, without apportionment (173 Cal. App. 4th 32, 35-38) . The court also rejected the owner's argument that 2002 amendments to Lab. Code § 7300 et seq. abrogated the nondelegable duty doctrine as applied to elevator maintenance and repair. The court concluded that nothing in those amendments prevented a property owner from continuing to be responsible for elevator maintenance, although proper certification might be required (173 Cal. App. 4th 32, 39-40) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.72

§ 115.72 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Should Be Denied Because of Public Policy or Equitable Considerations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE TO ALLOW A RIGHT OF INDEMNITY UNDER THESE FACTS AND CIRCUMSTANCES WOULD VIOLATE _____ [PUBLIC POLICY or EQUITABLE PRINCIPLES].

[EITHER]

A. Public Policy. A right of comparative indemnity may be denied if there are strong public policy reasons for not permitting it (Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 429-430, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400).

[OR]

A. Equitable Considerations. Because indemnification is an equitable doctrine that exists only to correct potential injustice, indemnity may be denied if there is no such potential (Jaffe v. Huxley Architecture (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1192, 246 Cal. Rptr. 432).

[Optional] B. Attorney-Client Relationship. Public policy prohibits an action for indemnity against the attorney who is representing the tort victim because such an action intrudes on the attorney-client relationship (Goldfisher v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 22-23, 183 Cal. Rptr. 609).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that a right of comparative indemnity that might otherwise be available should be denied because of public policy or equitable considerations. Optional Paragraph B sets forth a particular example of the public policy rule precluding a claim for indemnity from counsel for the injured party.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, in which the public policy or equitable bar to indemnity rights is sought to be established as a matter of law. It may also be used in an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that, under the otherwise applicable law, indemnitee has a cognizable claim for comparative indemnity from indemnitor with regard to liability that has been or may be incurred. Then, the particular facts that establish the public policy or equitable considerations that make allowance of such a right inappropriate should then be developed.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 , is discussed in § 115.69[3][a] and § 115.69[3][c]. An attorney (Munoz) was sued for legal malpractice for failing to file an action against Davis within the time required by the statute of limitations. Munoz cross complained against Davis for equitable indemnity.

As an alternate ground for affirming dismissal of the cross complaint, the court of appeal stated that there are strong public policy reasons for not permitting a negligent attorney to recover equitable indemnity from the client's adversary. The effect of allowing a negligent attorney to recover indemnity from the adversary would be to judicially repeal the statutes of limitation, make every tortfeasor the guarantor of the victim's adequate compensation as well as the malpractice insurer of the victim's attorney, and undermine the fiduciary duty of the nonnegligent attorney to his or her client. If Munoz's cross complaint were permitted, Davis would lose the protection of the statute of limitations and would be required to defend against the charge of negligence handicapped by the disappearance of witnesses, fading memories of the events, loss or destruction of physical evidence--all the impediments that the statutes of limitation are designed to avoid (141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 429-430) .

[b] Equitable Considerations

Jaffe v. Huxley Architecture (1988) 200 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 246 Cal. Rptr. 432 , involved an underlying action by a condominium homeowners association against the developers for construction defects. The developers settled, reserving the right to proceed by way of equitable indemnity against current and former directors and officers of the association, limited to the liability limits of the directors' errors and omissions policy. The developers then filed their cross complaint under the reservation, alleging that the board had negligently managed the complex and had contributed to the damages suffered by the association. The cross defendants' demurrer was granted.

In affirming, the court of appeal stated that, quite simply, equitable indemnification is a matter of fairness. In the great majority of cases, equity and fairness call for an apportionment of loss among wrongdoers in proportion to their relative culpability, rather than by placing the entire loss on one of them. But because indemnification is an equitable doctrine existing only to correct potential injustice, it has no utility if there is no such potential. In the present case, there was no potential for injustice to the developers, and there was no reason to allow them to interfere with the relationship between the association and its present and past boards. In the legal sense, the alleged negligent acts of the board were the acts of the association itself. These acts could have been raised under a defense of comparative negligence or avoidable consequences in the association's action against the developers. Thus, fairness to the developers did not depend on the availability of equitable indemnity against individual board members. To allow indemnity might jeopardize or entangle a special relationship that strong policies dictate be preserved. The specter of personal liability would serve to discourage active and meaningful participation by those most capable of shaping and directing homeowner activities. There is also a potential conflict of interest if third parties are allowed to pit the association against its directors by way of an action for indemnity. The directors might permit their personal potential liability interests to intrude into settlement considerations to the detriment of their fiduciary duty to the association (200 Cal. App. 3d 1188, 1191-1193) .

NOTE:

In a subsequent case, a cross defendant who was sued for comparative indemnity argued that Jaffe should be broadly construed to stand for the proposition that whenever resolution of the main action apportions liability according to fault, a cross complaint for indemnity is improper [Platt v. Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate Servs. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1439, 1446, 266 Cal. Rptr. 601] . The court of appeal rejected the argument, finding that Jaffe should not be extended beyond its facts, which involved the special relationship between homeowners and their association. The court refused to find the same special relationship between a general partner and the limited partners of a real estate venture [Platt v. Coldwell Banker Residential Real Estate Servs. (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1439, 1448-1449, 266 Cal. Rptr. 601] .

[c] Attorney-Client Relationship

Goldfisher v. Superior Court (1982) 133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 183 Cal. Rptr. 609 , was the last of a group of cases, all involving the same issue, that were decided within three years of American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 . Each involved an action (in most cases against an attorney by a former client for legal malpractice) in which a party cross complained for indemnity from the attorney who represented the opposing party in the action [see Pollack v. Lytle (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 931, 175 Cal. Rptr. 81 ; Parker v. Morton (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 751, 173 Cal. Rptr. 197 ; Rowell v. TransPacific Life Ins. Co. (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 818, 156 Cal. Rptr. 679 ; Gibson, Dunn & Crutcher v. Superior Court (1979) 94 Cal. App. 3d 347, 156 Cal. Rptr. 326 ; Commercial Standard Title Co. v. Superior Court (1979) 92 Cal. App. 3d 934, 155 Cal. Rptr. 393 ; see also Held v. Arant (1977) 67 Cal. App. 3d 748, 134 Cal. Rptr. 422] . In each case, the indemnitee alleged some act of counsel that actually caused or contributed to the loss suffered by the client for which indemnity was sought. In Goldfisher, the indemnitee, the client's original attorney, alleged that subsequent (and present) counsel could have successfully defended a prior action for injunctive relief and that the damages that the client claimed were caused by the professional negligence of the original attorney were, in fact, caused by the professional negligence of the subsequent attorney.

The court in Goldfisher canvassed all of the prior cases and found that only Parker v. Morton allowed a party to seek indemnity from the attorney for the injured party. It quoted language from Held v. Arant (actually decided before American Motorcycle), that reasons of public policy peculiar to the tripartite relationship of attorney-client-adversary override the principle of equitable indemnity (133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 15) . It also quoted language from Rowell that re-affirmed the same policy after American Motorcycle. The potential conflict of interest between the client's best interest and the course that the lawyer must take to minimize his or her own exposure to an indemnitee is untenable in view of the lawyer's duty of undivided loyalty to the client (133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 18) .

The court adopted the majority view and directed the respondent court to vacate its order overruling the demurrer to the indemnitee's cross complaint. In so holding, the court determined that public policy should and does prohibit indemnity rights against counsel for the injured party (133 Cal. App. 3d 12, 23) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Equitable Considerations

In Children's Hosp. v. Sedgwick (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725), a hospital brought an action for equitable indemnity against an anesthesiologist, alleging that the doctor negligently administered anesthesia to a patient which caused the patient serious physical injuries. The hospital sought indemnity from the doctor for the settlement payment it made on the patient's behalf in an earlier malpractice action against the hospital. The hospital alleged that the damages were caused primarily and ultimately by the doctor's negligence. The doctor moved for summary judgment, presenting evidence of a favorable judgment in the underlying action concerning her asserted medical negligence and patient's injuries. The trial court granted summary judgment, reasoning that a cause of action for equitable indemnity required the indemnitor to be jointly and severally liable to the injured party. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that equitable considerations supported preclusion of the hospital's equitable indemnity claim. In particular, permitting the hospital to proceed against the doctor would allow recovery for a tortfeasor under circumstances where the injured plaintiff failed to recover following a trial on the merits (45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1787) .

[b] Attorney-Client Relationship

California State Auto. Assn. Inter-Ins. Bureau v. Bales (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 227 , was an insurance bad faith case in which the insurer cross complained against the attorney who originally represented the plaintiff, alleging that his professional negligence in representing her on the claim contributed to her alleged loss. The court of appeal rejected the indemnity claim on public policy grounds. The court stated that the ordinary rules of comparative indemnity in tort do not apply if the claim is made against an attorney, is based on a breach of the attorney's duty to the client, and is brought by an adverse party in litigation that is the same as or related to that in which the alleged professional negligence occurred (221 Cal. App. 3d 227, 230) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.73

§ 115.73 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Comparative Indemnity Is Not Available Because Parties Have Entered Into Express Indemnity Agreement

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE PARTIES HAVE EXPRESSLY CONTRACTED WITH RESPECT TO THEIR RIGHTS AND DUTIES OF INDEMNITY, AND THE EXTENT OF THE DUTY MUST BE DETERMINED FROM THE CONTRACT AND NOT FROM ANY DOCTRINE OF IMPLIED INDEMNITY.

Rights Determined by Contract. If the parties have expressly contracted with respect to a duty of indemnity, the extent of that duty must be determined from the contract and not from the independent doctrine of implied indemnity (Regional Steel Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 529, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 ; Davidson v. Welch (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 220, 232, 75 Cal. Rptr. 676 ; see Markley v. Beagle (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 951, 961, 59 Cal. Rptr. 809, 429 P.2d 129).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that indemnity is not available under principles of comparative fault because the parties have expressly contracted with regard to indemnity rights. The points and authorities set forth in this form involve the same basic issue as those set forth in § 115.30, which asserts that express contractual indemnification is unaffected by comparative negligence. § 115.30, however, is for use by an express indemnitee to defend a claim for contractual indemnity. This form is for use by the same party in the position of implied indemnitor to attack a claim of the express indemnitor for comparative indemnity.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if implied indemnity rights may be determined as a matter of law based on an express indemnity agreement. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the party now seeking comparative indemnity agreed to indemnify the party from whom comparative indemnity is sought from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; and (2) the claim for which comparative indemnity is sought is one that is within the scope of the indemnity agreement.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.63 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rights Determined by Contract

The factual background of Markley v. Beagle (1967) 66 Cal. 2d 951, 59 Cal. Rptr. 809, 429 P.2d 129 , is discussed in § 115.32[3][c]. In discussing the contractors' duty to indemnify the owners, the Supreme Court stated that the duty must be determined from the parties' contract and not from the independent doctrine of equitable indemnity because the parties had expressly contracted with respect to the contractors' duty to indemnify the owners (66 Cal. 2d 951, 961) .

In Regional Steel Corp. v. Superior Court (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 417 , a general contractor (McCarthy) and a subcontractor (Regional Steel) entered into an express indemnity agreement providing for a right of indemnity in favor of McCarthy from Regional Steel. The parties subsequently amended the agreement to include the following language: "Regional Steel Corporation will indemnify others only to the extent that damage is caused in whole by any negligent act or omission by anyone directly employed by or under the control of Regional Steel Corporation."

A worker on the project was injured and filed suit against McCarthy. McCarthy cross complained against Regional Steel for comparative indemnity, but the trial court granted summary judgment for Regional Steel, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court cited the rule that if the parties have expressly contracted with respect to the duty to indemnify, the extent of that duty must be determined from the contract and not by reliance on the independent doctrine of equitable indemnity. The court held that the language "caused in whole by any negligent act or omission by anyone directly employed by or under the control of Regional" (emphasis by the court) meant that McCarthy had bargained away its right to seek comparative indemnity under situations in which both its negligence and that of Regional Steel contributed to the injury (25 Cal. App. 4th 525, 529) .

In Davidson v. Welch (1969) 270 Cal. App. 2d 220, 75 Cal. Rptr. 676 , the owner of certain garage premises (Welch) leased them to an automobile dealership (Arrow), which in turn agreed to employ him to operate a body shop on the premises. The lease agreement provided for a right of indemnity in favor of Welch from Arrow for all liability from any cause while in or on the premises. Welch subsequently got into a fight with a customer on the premises. The customer sued and recovered damages from Welch and also from Arrow, as employer, under the doctrine of respondeat superior.

Arrow cross complained against Welch for implied equitable indemnity on the ground that a vicariously liable employer was entitled to indemnity from a primarily liable employee tortfeasor [see § 115.93]. In turn, Welch claimed a right to express indemnity from Arrow under the indemnity clause in the lease agreement. The trial court ruled against Arrow and in favor of Welch on both indemnity claims.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court construed the indemnity clause and determined that the customer's claim was within the scope of the agreement (270 Cal. App. 2d 220, 228-232) . Because the parties expressly contracted with respect to Arrow's duty to indemnify Welch, the extent of that duty must be determined by the contract and not by the usual rules of implied indemnity that would otherwise govern in the case of employer vicarious liability for the torts of an employee (270 Cal. App. 2d 220, 232) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.74

§ 115.74 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Claim for Comparative Indemnity Against Injured Person's Employer Is Barred Absent Written Agreement [Lab. Code § 3864]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE'S CLAIM FOR COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY IS BARRED BY SECTION 3864 OF THE LABOR CODE BECAUSE THERE IS NO WRITTEN AGREEMENT WITHIN THE EXCEPTION OF THAT SECTION THAT WOULD ALLOW A RIGHT OF INDEMNITY.

A. No Indemnity From Employer of Injured Person in Absence of Written Agreement. One against whom a judgment has been entered or who has settled a claim for personal injury may not seek indemnity from the injured person's employer unless the employer executed a written indemnity agreement prior to the injury (Lab. Code § 3864).

B. Labor Code Section 3864 Applies to Comparative Indemnity. Section 3864 of the Labor Code precludes a third-party tortfeasor from seeking partial indemnification from an injured party's employer under the comparative negligence doctrine (Arbaugh v. Proctor & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 506, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608).

[Optional] C. Requirement That Agreement Be Signed Before Injury. An employer's immunity from indemnity liability as provided by Section 3864 of the Labor Code is not waived by a written agreement that was prepared before an employee was injured, but signed by the parties after the injury, if there was no showing that the employer either knew of his or her rights under the statute or intended to waive them (Solano Concrete Co. v. Lund Constr. Co. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 572, 575, 134 Cal. Rptr. 552 ; see Nielsen Constr. Co. v. International Iron Prods. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 863, 866-869, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497).

[Optional] D. Agreement Not Executed by Performance. An employer's immunity from indemnity liability as provided by Section 3864 of the Labor Code is not waived by an unsigned contract that contains an indemnification clause that was not fully performed on both sides prior to the employee's injury (Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. v. Gilmore Indus., Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 556, 558-560, 185 Cal. Rptr. 409).

[Optional] E. Lab. Code § 3864 Precludes Indemnity From Employer's Public Liability Carrier. The reference in Labor Code Section 3864 to the employer is sufficiently broad to bar any derivative liability of the employer's public liability carrier (Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Morse (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 707, 712, 86 Cal. Rptr. 7).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that Lab. Code § 3864 precludes the indemnitee's right of comparative indemnity because the person whose injury gave rise to the loss for which indemnity is sought is the indemnitor's employee. Lab. Code § 3864 bars indemnity claims against an injured person's employer in absence of a written indemnity agreement executed prior to the injury.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the scope of comparative indemnity rights is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the applicability of Lab. Code § 3864 may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the proceedings in which the validity and scope of an indemnity agreement may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the person whose injury caused a loss to the indemnitee for which it is seeking indemnity was an employee of the indemnitor at the time of the injury; and (2) either there is no agreement between the parties that provides for a right of indemnity in favor of the indemnitee, or, if there is such a contract, it was not executed or fully performed until after the injury in question occurred.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.34 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lab. Code § 3864 Applies to Comparative Indemnity

In Arbaugh v. Procter & Gamble Mfg. Co. (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 145 Cal. Rptr. 608 , a worker (Arbaugh) brought an action against Procter & Gamble (P & G) for personal injuries that he sustained at a warehouse owned by P & G while in the course of his employment for a trucking company (Signal). The jury decided that Arbaugh had not been negligent but that both P & G and Signal were 50-percent responsible under principles of comparative fault. The court then entered judgment against P & G and in favor of plaintiff for the full amount of damages less the amounts of workers' compensation benefits and of a settlement with another party that Arbaugh had previously received. Under principles of joint and several liability, P & G was required to pay 100 percent of the judgment even though it was only 50-percent responsible. This result occurred in this case because of the operation of Lab. Code § 3864, prohibiting indemnity rights against an employer of the injured party in absence of a written agreement.

P & G appealed its liability for more than a 50-percent share of the damages, alleging essentially that the rules of joint and several liability should be dispensed with in a case in which Lab. Code § 3864 prohibited indemnity. While noting the inequitable apportionment, the court of appeal rejected the argument. Under American Motorcycle Ass'n v.

Superior Court (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 582, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 [see § 115.60], it is clear that joint and several liability was unaffected by the adoption of comparative negligence. Also, nothing in the adoption of comparative negligence and comparative indemnity altered the rule of Lab. Code § 3864 (80 Cal. App. 3d 500, 506-507) .

[b] Requirement That Agreement Be Signed Before Injury

Solano Concrete Co. v. Lund Constr. Co. (1976) 64 Cal. App. 3d 572, 134 Cal. Rptr. 552 , was an appeal from a judgment of dismissal entered after the trial court sustained a demurrer to a cross complaint for indemnity without leave to amend. The cross complaint, filed by a contractor, requested a declaration of indemnity rights against a subcontractor, the employer of a deceased party, on the basis of a written agreement signed by the parties after the accident in which the employee was killed. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, ruling that even though the agreement was prepared before the accident, it was signed after the accident and, therefore, did not overcome the indemnity immunity provided employers by Lab. Code § 3864. The court further held that the subsequent signing of the agreement did not waive the benefit of the statute's protection because there was no showing that the subcontractor either knew of its rights under the statute or intended to waive them (64 Cal. App. 3d 572, 574-575) .

In Nielsen Constr. Co. v. International Iron Prods. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 863, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 , an employee of a subcontractor was injured on November 5. An indemnity agreement that would have required the subcontractor-employer to indemnify and defend the general contractor was under negotiation at the time of the injury. It had been signed by the subcontractor on November 2, but the general contractor did not sign until November 20. The injured employee later sued the general contractor, who cross complained against the employer based on the indemnity agreement.

The trial court dismissed the cross complaint and the court of appeal affirmed. Because the proposed indemnitee did not sign until after the injury, there was no agreement executed before the injury, as is required by Lab. Code § 3864. The court rejected the argument that only the party to be charged (the indemnitor) need sign before injury (18 Cal. App. 4th 863, 866-869) .

[c] Agreement Not Executed by Performance

Lockheed Missiles & Space Co. v. Gilmore Indus., Inc. (1982) 135 Cal. App. 3d 556, 185 Cal. Rptr. 409 , was an appeal from a summary judgment entered in an action brought by an owner of a shaker-amplifier system (Lockheed), seeking indemnification from a contractor hired to repair the system (Gilmore). Lockheed's claim was based on a written purchase order sent by Lockheed to Gilmore that contained a clause indemnifying Lockheed against all liability from harm arising out of the repair work. The order provided for acceptance by acknowledgment or commencement of performance. Gilmore did not sign the purchase order, but commenced performance by sending a service representative, who was electrocuted while performing tests on the system. The deceased's heirs brought a wrongful death action against Lockheed. Lockheed settled and sued Gilmore for indemnity.

The court of appeal affirmed the summary judgment, ruling that the purchase order for the repairs containing the indemnification clause was not an executed indemnity agreement under Lab. Code § 3864. "Executed" is defined in Black's Law Dictionary as "completed; carried into full effect; already done or performed." Because it did not appear from the record that the agreement was fully performed on both sides prior to the injury, the agreement was not executed (135 Cal. App. 3d 556, 558-560) . The court further held that even if the purchase agreement had been fully executed in the sense of being performed on both sides, it was not the type of executed agreement intended by Lab. Code § 3864. Such a view would result in a rule that any written contract containing an indemnity provision would be fully enforceable on completion of performance by both parties regardless of whether the indemnitor had signed, read, or even received the written contract. This could not have been the intent of the statute (135 Cal. App. 3d 556, 560) .

[d] Lab. Code § 3864 Precludes Indemnity From Employer's Public Liability Carrier

Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. v. Morse (1970) 6 Cal. App. 3d 707, 86 Cal. Rptr. 7 , was an appeal from a judgment of dismissal in an action for equitable indemnity. An employee of the Flintkote Company was severely injured when a crane that was being operated by a co-employee came in contact with a power line. Pacific Gas & Electric Company settled with the injured party and then brought this action against the co-employee for equitable indemnity and against Flintkote's public liability carrier for a declaration establishing its liability in the claim against the co-employee.

The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal. The court held that Lab. Code § 3864, which eliminates an employer's liability for implied indemnification in absence of a written agreement, was designed to affect the liability of the employer's public liability carrier, and that its reference to the employer was sufficiently broad to bar any derivative liability of the carrier. Whether the nominal defendant is the employer or a co-employee, the claim is barred if the actual target of indemnification is the public liability carrier. The legislative objective should not be defeated by the choice of one conduit rather than another as a means of reaching the insurer (6 Cal. App. 3d 707, 712-713) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.75

§ 115.75 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Collateral Estoppel Principles Preclude Comparative Indemnity Because Indemnitor Was Found to Be Not Liable to Plaintiff in Pretrial Proceeding

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS PRECLUDED FROM SEEKING COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR BECAUSE PURSUANT TO _____ [kind of motion, e.g., A MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT] IN _____ [THIS or ANOTHER] ACTION, IT WAS DETERMINED THAT INDEMNITOR HAD NO LIABILITY TO THE TORT VICTIM.

Comparative Indemnity Precluded by Collateral Estoppel. Collateral estoppel precludes relitigating an alleged tortfeasor's liability to a tort victim in an indemnity action if the matter was resolved by final judgment favorable to the tortfeasor in the same or a prior action to which the indemnitee was a party or in privity with a party (Columbus Line, Inc. v. Gray Line Sight-Seeing Cos. Associated, Inc. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 628-629, 174 Cal. Rptr. 527).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitor's contention that the indemnitee is collateral estopped from seeking comparative indemnity because there is a final judgment under which the indemnitor has no liability to the tort victim. The points and authorities in this form are for use together with alternate Paragraph B of § 115.69, that the parties cannot be jointly and severally liable because the indemnitor has no liability to the tort victim.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which the doctrine of collateral estoppel is invoked. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, to establish a bar of collateral estoppel as a matter of law. It may also be used in an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitor was a defendant who was alleged to be liable to the plaintiff in the instant action or in a prior action; (2) pursuant to a pretrial motion, the indemnitor was found not to be liable to the plaintiff as a matter of law; (3) pursuant to the ruling on that motion, a judgment of dismissal was entered that has become final; and (4) the indemnitee was either a party to or in privity with a party to the action in which the indemnitor's nonliability was determined.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.68 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Precluded by Collateral Estoppel

In Columbus Line, Inc. v. Gray Line Sight-Seeing Cos. Associated, Inc. (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 174 Cal. Rptr. 527 , plaintiffs were passengers on a cruise ship. They had taken a shore excursion in a foreign port of call, during which they were injured in a tour bus accident. They sued Royal Viking (the cruise ship owner), Columbus (the managing agent for shore excursions for Royal Viking), the local bus company (who was beyond the jurisdiction of the court), and Gray Lines, a trade association for the sight-seeing and tour service industry. Gray Lines was alleged to be both directly liable and liable based on an alleged agency relationship between it and the local bus company. Columbus and Royal Viking also cross complained against Gray Lines for comparative indemnity.

Gray Lines moved for summary judgment on the complaint, arguing that it was not negligent toward plaintiff in any manner and that there was no agency relationship with the local bus company as a matter of law. Notice of the motion was served on all parties, and the other defendants were represented by counsel at the hearing. The motion was granted and judgment was entered for Gray Lines on the complaint. The judgment became final, and Gray Lines also moved for summary judgment on all cross complaints for indemnity. The trial court granted the motion.

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the requirements of collateral estoppel had been met. The court said that the application of the doctrine in a given case depends on an affirmative answer to three questions: (1) was the issue decided in the prior adjudication identical with the one presented in the action in question? (2) was there a final judgment on the merits? and (3) was the party against whom the plea is asserted a party or in privity with a party to the prior adjudication? (120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 628) In the case, the issues determined were Gray Lines' direct and vicarious liability to the plaintiff. These were precisely the issues raised by the cross complaints for indemnity. There was no question but that the prior summary judgment was on the merits and had become final (120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 629) .

The principal issue was whether Columbus and Royal Viking were in privity with the plaintiffs with regard to summary judgment on the complaint. The court found such privity based on a commonality of interest in establishing Gray Lines' liability to the plaintiffs. It was incumbent on the cross complainants to protect their own interests by vigorously opposing the summary judgment motion on all possible grounds instead of relying on plaintiffs' opposition. Were collateral estoppel not applied, there could be inconsistent judgments in two phases of the same lawsuit (120 Cal. App. 3d 622, 630-631) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Comparative Indemnity Precluded by Collateral Estoppel

In Children's Hosp. v. Sedgwick (1996) 45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 53 Cal. Rptr. 2d 725 , a hospital brought an action for equitable indemnity against an anesthesiologist, alleging that the doctor negligently administered anesthesia to a patient, causing the patient serious physical injuries. The hospital sought indemnity from the doctor for the settlement payment it made on the patient's behalf in an earlier malpractice action against the hospital. The hospital alleged that the damages were caused primarily and ultimately by the doctor's negligence. The doctor moved for summary judgment, presenting evidence of a favorable judgment in the underlying action concerning her asserted medical negligence and patient's injuries. The hospital argued that barring the hospital from relitigating the doctor's liability offended constitutional principles of due process. The trial court granted summary judgment, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court held that it was fair to apply collateral estoppel and bind the hospital with the prior judgment in the malpractice action against the doctor since the hospital had the opportunity in the prior action to prove that the patient's injuries were caused by the doctor's care (45 Cal. App. 4th 1780, 1788) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.76

§ 115.76 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Partial Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity for Amounts Paid by Indemnitee's Insurer

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A TORTFEASOR MAY NOT RECOVER EQUITABLE INDEMNITY FROM A COTORTFEASOR FOR AMOUNTS THAT THE TORTFEASOR'S INSURER PAID TO THE UNDERLYING PLAINTIFF.

No Right to Indemnity for Amounts Paid by Insurer. If a tortfeasor's insurer has made a payment to the underlying plaintiff on behalf of the insured, that tortfeasor, when seeking equitable indemnity from a cotortfeasor, may only seek indemnity for those amounts actually paid out of the tortfeasor's own pocket, in proportion to the allocation of fault between the tortfeasors (Miller v. Ellis (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 373, 380-382, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to the contention that a tortfeasor seeking equitable indemnity from a cotortfeasor may recover for amounts that were paid by the indemnitee's insurer, rather than actually by the indemnitee.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts showing the amounts that were paid by the indemnitee's insurer to the underlying plaintiff for the indemnitee's liability in the underlying case, and also include facts showing the amounts that were actually paid by the indemnitee out-of-pocket.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Indemnity for Amounts Paid by Insurer

In Miller v. Ellis (2002) 103 Cal. App. 4th 373, 126 Cal. Rptr. 2d 667 , the plaintiff was an attorney seeking equitable indemnity from two other attorneys for their share of liability in a malpractice action brought by a former client for the attorneys' failure to bring the client's suit to trial prior to expiration of a five-year deadline. In the underlying malpractice action, the plaintiff's insurer eventually settled the underlying claim, on behalf of all parties, for $75,000. In conjunction with achieving the settlement, the plaintiff incurred over $13,000 in attorney's fees, of which the plaintiff paid $5,000, which was the deductible amount on his malpractice policy. The plaintiff then brought an indemnity action, which resulted in a finding at trial that the plaintiff and one of the other attorneys were each 50 percent liable for the legal malpractice. Based on the collateral source rule, the trial court entered judgment for the plaintiff and ordered the other attorney to pay $40,000 to the plaintiff, which represented half of the combined amount paid by the plaintiff's insurer to settle the underlying claim and the $5,000 deductible paid by the plaintiff. The indemnifying attorney appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. The court noted first that the trial court erred in applying the collateral source rule to the indemnity claim, because that rule only applies to an injured party who is seeking to recover damages. The plaintiff was not an injured party seeking damages, but a cotortfeasor seeking indemnity, and thus the collateral source rule was inapplicable (103 Cal. App. 4th 373, 378-379) . The court then applied principles of equitable indemnity and concluded that if a tortfeasor's insurer has made a payment to the underlying plaintiff on behalf of the insured, that tortfeasor, when seeking equitable indemnity from a cotortfeasor, may only seek indemnity for those amounts actually paid out of the tortfeasor's own pocket, in proportion to the allocation of fault between the tortfeasors. The tortfeasor may not seek indemnity for the amounts paid by the insurer, although the tortfeasor may seek indemnity for the amount of any deductible that the tortfeasor was required to pay under the insurance policy. A contrary rule would essentially allow the tortfeasor seeking indemnity to benefit financially from his or her own wrongdoing. Thus, the plaintiff was entitled to indemnity in the amount of $2,500, which represented half of the deductible that the plaintiff paid out of his own pocket (103 Cal. App. 4th 373, 380-382) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
1. Partial Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.77-115.89

[Reserved]

§§ 115.77[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.90

§ 115.90 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right to Total Indemnity May Exist Under Principles of Comparative Fault

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER TOTAL INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR BECAUSE A SHIFT OF AN ENTIRE LOSS FROM ONE PARTY TO ANOTHER IS PERMITTED UNDER PRINCIPLES OF IMPLIED EQUITABLE INDEMNITY AND COMPARATIVE FAULT.

A. Implied Total Indemnity. In a comparative indemnity action based on implied equitable principles, a trier of fact may determine that the facts and equities of the case support a complete shifting of a loss from one tortfeasor to another (Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 808, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399).

[Optional] B. Vicarious Liability. A vicariously liable tortfeasor may obtain full indemnity from the party whose acts gave rise to the liability imputed to the indemnitee (E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 376, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is entitled, under principles of implied equitable indemnity and comparative fault, to shift a loss that it has incurred or may incur entirely to the indemnitor. Paragraph A should be used to establish a basic entitlement to total indemnity under current law. It should be combined with other points and authorities that establish the particular basis for total indemnity. Optional Paragraph B expresses the general principle that total indemnity is available with regard to any doctrine under which the indemnitee would be considered to be only vicariously liable for the acts of the indemnitor. For more specific situations justifying total indemnity, see §§ 115.91 (implied contractual indemnity), 115.92 (indemnity implied from a license with a public entity), 115.93 and 115.94 (indemnity implied from principal-agent or employer-employee relationship), and 115.95 (negligent tortfeasor's right to indemnity from intentional joint tortfeasor).

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if rights to implied total indemnity may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party for which the indemnitor is or may also be liable; and (2) there is no express agreement between the indemnitor and the indemnitee that provides for a right of indemnity with regard to the loss in question. The particular basis for a right of implied total indemnity in favor of the indemnitee should then be set forth, such as the facts that would establish that the indemnitee is only vicariously liable for the acts of the indemnitor.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Total Indemnity

In Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 , a condominium association sued the developer (Far West) and the contractors of the condominium project, alleging a number of defects in the project. The developer settled with the association, and cross complained for complete indemnification from the general contractor (D & S). Far West's theory was that it was, at the most, only vicariously liable to the association for the negligence of D & S.

The principal issue in the case was whether D & S's good-faith settlement with the association under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 barred Far West's indemnity rights [see § 115.151]. Far West's position was that total equitable indemnity arising from vicarious liability was a different concept from the doctrine of comparative (or partial) equitable indemnity as enunciated in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578 [see § 115.60] and should not be treated similarly for purposes of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (46 Cal. 3d 796, 806) .

The California Supreme Court rejected this view, but in a manner that reaffirmed the basic right to seek total equitable indemnity under appropriate circumstances. The Court said that there are not two separate equitable indemnity doctrines in California, but a single "comparative indemnity" doctrine, which permits partial indemnification on a comparative fault basis in appropriate cases. To be sure, there is nothing in American Motorcycle that suggests that it would necessarily be improper in a comparative indemnity action for a trier of fact to determine that the facts and equities in a particular case support a complete shifting of a loss from one tortfeasor to another, rather than, for example, a 60 percent/40 percent or 95 percent/5 percent division of the loss. Even if such a total shift of loss may be appropriate, however, the indemnitee's equitable indemnity claim does not differ in its fundamental nature from other comparative equitable indemnity claims. Comparative equitable indemnity includes the entire range of possible apportionments, from no right to indemnity to a right of complete indemnity. Total indemnification is just one end of the spectrum of comparative equitable indemnification (46 Cal. 3d 796, 808) .

CAUTION:

The Court held that a good faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 terminates all equitable indemnity rights, including a right to total equitable indemnity [Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 ; see § 115.151]. Therefore, counsel representing a defendant who claims to be entitled to total indemnity from a settling defendant should make sure that a hearing is held under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to determine the good faith of the settlement at which its claim can be presented [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a)(2) (placing burden of noticing hearing on nonsettling defendants under some circumstances)].

[b] Vicarious Liability

E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879 , was an appellate opinion after remand to the trial court on the California Supreme Court's holding that an indemnitor under an express indemnity agreement (White) could seek implied equitable indemnity from the indemnitee (city) for liability not within the scope of the indemnity agreement [see E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 ; see also § 115.63]. The city had contracted with White, a general contractor, for the construction of certain public improvements that included a storm drain. After construction was completed and the city had accepted the work, the drain malfunctioned and the city arranged for repairs with the particular subcontractor who had constructed it. In the course of repairs, one employee of the subcontractor was killed and another injured, and actions were brought against the city and White. The malfunction was later found to be due to the faulty work of the subcontractor. On remand, the trial court held that White was entitled to total implied equitable indemnity from the city.

The court of appeal affirmed, disagreeing with the city's contention that there can never be full equitable indemnity after American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 . The court concluded that a vicariously liable tortfeasor may still obtain full indemnity even though American Motorcycle allows partial indemnity to be obtained on a comparative fault basis in appropriate cases. The court further found that there was substantial evidence to support the conclusion that White was only vicariously liable for the city's negligence. White, unlike the city, had no personnel at the accident site during the repair operations. It was reasonable to conclude that White was held liable based solely on the peculiar-risk doctrine, which imposes vicarious liability on the employer of an independent contractor for the contractor's negligence. Further, the city had been found actively negligent in the accident [see § 115.40]. Because the city was actively negligent and White was only vicariously liable, White was entitled to full indemnity. The court said that to conclude otherwise would counter basic principles of common-law indemnification between vicariously liable tortfeasors and tortfeasors guilty of the acts and omissions causing the harm (138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 375-376) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.91

§ 115.91 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity May Be Implied From Breach of Contractual Duty

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO TOTAL IMPLIED INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR AS A RESULT OF INDEMNITOR'S BREACH OF A CONTRACTUAL DUTY OWED TO INDEMNITEE THAT RESULTED IN DAMAGE OR INJURY TO A THIRD PERSON FOR WHICH INDEMNITEE _____ [MAY BE or HAS BEEN] HELD LIABLE.

A. Implied Contractual Indemnity as Form of Equitable Indemnity. A right of indemnity may arise from equitable considerations brought into play by contractual language not expressly mentioning indemnification (Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1029, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290).

B. Negligent Performance of Contractual Duty. Implied contractual indemnity is based on the premise that a contractual obligation to perform carries with it an implied agreement to indemnify and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting from negligent performance (Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1237 , disapproved on other grounds, Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; see also West v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 1633, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409).

C. Total Indemnity Implied From Contract. An indemnitee who has incurred liability to a third party because of the indemnitor's negligent performance of a contractual obligation, but who has not otherwise acted negligently or unreasonably, may be awarded total indemnity (Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1237, 1240-1243, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 , disapproved on other grounds, Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is entitled, under the doctrine of implied contractual indemnity, to shift a loss that it has incurred or may incur entirely to the indemnitor. The indemnitee's contention is that the loss was incurred as a proximate result of the indemnitor's negligent performance of a contractual obligation to the indemnitee.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if a right to implied contractual indemnity may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used to oppose confirmation of a settlement entered into between the indemnitor and the plaintiff as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, or in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor, agreed to perform certain obligations to the indemnitee; (2) the agreement did not contain any express right to indemnity in favor of either party; (3) the indemnitor negligently performed its obligations required under the contract; (4) as a result of the indemnitor's negligent performance, the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party; and (5) the indemnitee itself was otherwise blameless in causing the third party's loss.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Contractual Indemnity as Form of Equitable Indemnity

In Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 , current and former owners of condominium units sued the seller of the units (Bay) for fraudulently misrepresenting the total number of parking spaces for the units. Bay then filed a cross complaint for indemnity from the company from which Bay had itself purchased the property (Home). In the cross complaint, Bay asserted that Home had breached an implied warranty in the sales contract between Bay and Home by having previously incorrectly represented the number of parking places to the California Department of Real Estate in the course of preparing a public report on the project. Bay alleged that should it be found liable to the homeowners, Home should be required to totally indemnify Bay under the doctrine of implied contractual indemnity.

The principal issue decided by the California Supreme Court in the case was whether Home's good-faith settlement with the plaintiff unit owners barred Bay's claim for implied contractual indemnity under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b) and 877.6(c) [see § 115.151]. In holding that the indemnity claim was so barred, the Court was required to resolve a conflict at the appellate level concerning the nature of the doctrine of implied contractual indemnity. Some courts had held that implied contractual indemnity was a form of equitable indemnity, and thus within the purview of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 [see Stratton v. Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Co. (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 286, 291-292, 235 Cal. Rptr. 374 ; IRM Corp. v. Carlson (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 94, 109-110, 224 Cal. Rptr. 438 ; Kramer v. Cedu Found., Inc. (1979) 93 Cal. App. 3d 1, 12-13, 155 Cal. Rptr. 552] . Others found the doctrine to be more closely akin to express contractual indemnity [see Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1237-1239, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; County of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 798, 802-804, 202 Cal. Rptr. 444] , which is not affected by any settlement entered into by the indemnitor [see C.L. Peck Contractors v. Superior Court (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 828, 834, 205 Cal. Rptr. 754 ; see also § 115.153[3][a]].

The Court held that implied contractual indemnity is a form of equitable indemnity subject to the rules governing equitable indemnity claims (50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1033) . In reaching this conclusion, the Court relied heavily on language from its earlier opinion in E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 497, 506-507, 146 Cal. Rptr. 614, 579 P.2d 505 . In E.L. White, the Court discussed the various sources from which a duty to indemnify could arise under California law. First, the obligation of indemnity may arise by virtue of express contractual language establishing a duty in one party to save another harmless on the occurrence of specified circumstances. Second, it may find its source in equitable considerations brought into play either by contractual language not specifically dealing with indemnification, or by the equities of the particular case (50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1029) . Thus, there is a distinction between an indemnity claim based on an express contract to indemnity, that is, an express contractual indemnity claim, and an indemnity claim based on contractual language not specifically dealing with indemnification, that is, an implied contractual indemnity claim. Unlike express contractual indemnity, implied contractual indemnity is a form of equitable indemnity (50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1029) .

[b] Negligent Performance of Contractual Duty

Bear Creek Planning Com v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 , was an action by a homeowners association (Bear Creek) against a title company for implied contractual indemnity for damages and attorney's fees assessed against Bear Creek in a prior slander of title action [see Riley v. Bear Creek Planning Comm. (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 500, 131 Cal. Rptr. 381, 551 P.2d 1213] . Bear Creek's liability was imposed because of the title company's failure to have certain covenants, conditions, and restrictions (CC&R's) timely recorded. Because of this failure, a unit was sold free of the CC&R's. When the new owners (Rileys) violated the CC&R's, Bear Creek recorded a notice of violation against them. The Rileys sued to quiet title and for slander of title, and ultimately obtained a judgment against Bear Creek.

In the subsequent indemnity action, judgment was entered for Bear Creek for amounts including damages and attorney's fees awarded against it in the slander of title action. In affirming that portion of the judgment granting indemnity for these amounts, the court of appeal stated that the right to implied indemnity is predicated on the indemnitor's breach of a contract with the indemnitee, the rationale being that a contract under which a party undertakes to do work or perform services necessarily implies an obligation to do the work involved in a proper manner and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting from improper performance absent any participation by the indemnitee in the wrongful act precluding recovery. In short, implied contractual indemnity is based on the premise that a contractual obligation to perform carries with it an implied agreement to indemnify and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting to the indemnitee from the indemnitor's negligent performance (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1237) .

The court found that: (1) the title company was contractually bound to record the CC&R's in a timely manner, and breached its contract by failing to do so; (2) the damage suffered by Bear Creek in being found liable for slander of title was clearly a foreseeable result of that breach; (3) the title company's breach was the sole cause of the invalidity of the CC&R's with respect to the Rileys' unit; (4) in recording the notice of violation, Bear Creek was acting reasonably in fulfillment of its own obligations; and, accordingly, (5) it was foreseeable that Bear Creek would attempt to enforce the CC&R's and thereby be exposed to liability for falsely disparaging the new owners' title (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1240-1241) . The court said that, although plaintiff's actions were essential to the disparagement of the new owners' title, the chain of causation was not broken since Bear Creek's act was reasonably foreseeable at the time of the title company's negligent conduct (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1241) . Accordingly, the court held that the trial court properly determined that the title company was obligated to indemnify Bear Creek on the basis of an implied contract to discharge damages foreseeably sustained by Bear Creek as a result of the title company's negligent performance of a contractual duty (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1243) .

NOTE:

In Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1032 n.12, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 [see § 115.91[3][a]], the California Supreme Court disapproved Bear Creek to the extent that it was inconsistent with the views expressed in Bay Development. In Bear Creek, the court reasoned that implied contractual indemnity was not a form of equitable indemnity, but rather to be analyzed under the rules of express contractual indemnity [Bear Creek Planning Com v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1236-1243, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172] , a view expressly rejected by the Court in Bay Development. However, nothing in Bay Development suggests that a party to a contract may not recover implied indemnity from another party whose breach of the contract causes the nonbreaching party to be liable to a third party. In fact, the Supreme Court clearly confirmed the continuing validity of implied contractual indemnity, albeit as a form of equitable indemnity subject to bar by a good-faith settlement [see Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1034-1035, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290] . Thus, the above discussion of Bear Creek is unaffected by Bay Development.

West v. Superior Court (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 34 Cal. Rptr. 2d 409 , involved an action by buyers of real property against the sellers and the broker who represented both parties in the transaction based on undisclosed subsidence damage to the property. The sellers cross complained against the broker for implied contractual indemnity, alleging that any liability that they might incur to the buyers was the result of the broker's negligent performance of the listing agreement (27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 1628-1630) .

In upholding the right of the sellers to proceed with their indemnity claim, the court reaffirmed the continued validity of Bear Creek. The court stated that the right to implied contractual indemnity is predicated on the indemnitor's breach of contract, the rationale being that a contract under which the indemnitor undertook to do work or perform services necessarily implied an obligation to do the work involved in a proper manner and to discharge foreseeable damages resulting from improper performance. The court then quoted language from Bear Creek that "An action for implied contractual indemnity is not a claim for contribution from a joint tortfeasor; it is not founded upon a tort or upon any duty which the indemnitor owes to the injured third party. It is grounded upon the indemnitor's breach of a duty owing to the indemnitee to properly perform its contractual duties" (emphasis in original). The court then cited Bear Creek as disapproved on other grounds in Bay Development (27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 1633) .

The court went on to hold that the sellers' action for implied contractual indemnity was not barred by the two-year limitation period of Civ. Code § 2079.4 [see § 115.67] and that a cost-waiver-only settlement between the broker and the buyer based on the fact that the buyers' direct action against the broker was time barred was not in good faith within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c) and did not bar the indemnity claim (27 Cal. App. 4th 1625, 1632-1637) .

[c] Total Indemnity Implied From Contract

The facts and principal holding of Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 , are discussed in § 115.91[3][b]. The court of appeal viewed the issue not as one of implied equitable indemnity involving the comparative negligence of joint tortfeasors, but rather as a right to effect a complete shift of the loss from the essentially blameless homeowners association (Bear Creek) to the negligent title company. In the view of the court, Bear Creek had incurred liability not due to any negligent or improper act of its own, but solely because of the title company's breach of its contract to record the covenants, conditions, and restrictions (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1238-1242) . The parties were not joint tortfeasors with regard to the plaintiffs in the slander-of-title action. Implied contractual indemnity was viewed not as a claim for contribution (or equitable indemnity) from a joint tortfeasor; it is not founded on any duty that the indemnitor owes to the injured party. Rather, it is grounded on the indemnitor's breach of a duty owing to the indemnitee to properly perform its contractual duties (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1238-1239) . Therefore, the court of appeal affirmed indemnity to Bear Creek for the entire amount of damages and attorneys' fees incurred in the slander-of-title action (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1243) .

NOTE:

To the extent that it rests on a view that implied contractual indemnity is not a form of equitable indemnity, this analysis of Bear Creek was disapproved by the California Supreme Court in Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1032 n.12, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 [see § 115.91[3][a]]. However, in Bay Development, the Court affirmed a continuing right to total implied contractual indemnity on appropriate facts. In discussing the proper scope of a good-faith settlement confirmation hearing under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, the Court stated that in evaluating a settling defendant's proportionate liability for purposes of determining good faith, the trial court must take into account any contractual relationship between the settling and nonsettling defendants and must consider how each party's performance of its contractual obligations relates to its share of liability. If the court concludes that the nonsettling defendant's liability to the plaintiff is wholly attributable to the settling defendant's contractual breach, the court may decline to find the settlement to be in good faith unless the settlement provides for the dismissal of the action against the nonsettling defendant [Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1034-1035, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 ; see Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 815 n.15, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 (rights of vicariously liable defendant with regard to settlement between actively negligent party and plaintiff); see also § 115.90].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.92

§ 115.92 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity in Favor of Public Entity Indemnitee May Be Implied From Licensor-Licensee Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A RIGHT TO TOTAL INDEMNITY MAY BE IMPLIED IN FAVOR OF A PUBLIC ENTITY AS INDEMNITEE FROM A LICENSOR-LICENSEE RELATIONSHIP WITH THE INDEMNITOR.

Licensor-Licensee Relationship With Public Entity as Basis for Implied Indemnity. A public entity is entitled to total indemnity from a licensee whose negligent performance of its obligations under the license causes the public entity to incur liability to a third party who is injured as a result of the negligence (Alameda County v. Southern Pac. Co. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 479, 484-485, 11 Cal. Rptr. 751, 360 P.2d 327).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a public entity's contention that it is entitled, as an implied indemnitee, to shift a loss that it has incurred or may incur entirely to the indemnitor. The entity's contention is that the loss was incurred as a proximate result of the indemnitor's negligent performance of its obligations under a license agreement with the public entity.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights implied from a license may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the public entity granted a license to the indemnitor for a particular purpose related to the use of public property; (2) the license was either oral or set forth in a writing that did not contain a provision expressly granting the public entity indemnity rights from the licensee; (3) the indemnitor negligently performed its obligations required under the license; and (4) as a result of the indemnitor's negligent performance, the public entity incurred or may incur a loss to a third party.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Licensor-Licensee Relationship With Public Entity as Basis for Implied Indemnity

In Alameda County v. Southern Pac. Co. (1961) 55 Cal. 2d 479, 11 Cal. Rptr. 751, 360 P.2d 327 , County, by resolution, granted a rock and gravel company (Rock) a permit to construct, maintain, and operate, a spur railroad track across a county road from Southern Pacific tracks to its property. The permit required that Rock restore the roadway to its preconstruction condition, but apparently contained no express provisions regarding the maintenance of the crossing. It may also be assumed that there was no written indemnity agreement between the county and Rock arising from the resolution or the permit.

The track was constructed, and Southern Pacific and Rock, subsequently entered into an agreement by which Southern Pacific agreed to operate the track. The crossing fell into disrepair, and County gave notice to Southern Pacific of the need for repair. Southern Pacific gave notice to Rock that it would make them at Rock's expense. No agreement was reached, no repairs were made, and a third party subsequently suffered property damage as a result of the condition of the crossing. The third party recovered a judgment against County and Southern Pacific. County paid half of the judgment and then sued Southern Pacific and Rock for indemnity. Judgment was entered against both defendants and they appealed.

Rock argued that it was under no duty to maintain the crossing under the terms of its permit with County. In rejecting this argument, the Supreme Court stated that Rock, as the property owner that had constructed the track, was under a common-law duty to maintain the crossing in a safe condition for travel. The Court further noted that this right of indemnity extended against any person or corporation placing or maintaining a structure in the highway for his, her, or its own purpose. Southern Pacific, having obtained the right to operate the track from Rock, was under the same duty to maintain the track. The county was entitled to total indemnity from both defendants (55 Cal. 2d 479, 483-485) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.93

§ 115.93 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Against Employee or Agent and in Favor of Indemnitee Who Is Employer or Principal Arises From Employment or Agency Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A RIGHT TO TOTAL INDEMNITY MAY BE IMPLIED IN FAVOR OF _____ [AN EMPLOYER or A PRINCIPAL] AS INDEMNITEE FROM AN _____ [EMPLOYEE or AGENT] AS INDEMNITOR ARISING OUT OF THE _____ [EMPLOYMENT or AGENCY] RELATIONSHIP.

[EITHER]

Employer-Employee Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity. If a judgment has been rendered against an employer for damages caused by the unauthorized negligent act of an employee, the employer has a right to be indemnified by the employee for the loss (Continental Cas. Co. v. Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 423, 428, 296 P.2d 801).

[OR]

Principal-Agent Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity. A principal who is liable for damages caused by the negligent acts of an agent solely because of the relationship of principal and agent may be indemnified by the negligent agent (Herrero v. Atkinson (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 77, 38 Cal. Rptr. 490 ; see Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1353-1356, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an employer's or principal's contention that it is entitled, as an implied indemnitee, to shift a loss that it has incurred or may incur entirely to its employee or agent, as indemnitor. The indemnitee's contention is that the loss was incurred as a sole proximate result of the indemnitor's negligence, for which the indemnitee is liable to the third party under the doctrine of respondeat superior.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights implied from an employment or agency relationship may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) at relevant times, the indemnitor was either the employee or the agent of the indemnitee; (2) the indemnitor acted negligently while in the course and scope of his or her employment or agency; (3) as a result of the indemnitor's negligent conduct, the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party; and (4) the indemnitee was not itself negligent with regard to the third party, but is liable only vicariously through the doctrine of respondeat superior.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms for use with regard to the vicarious liability of an employer for the torts of an employee under the doctrine of respondeat superior, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use with regard to the vicarious liability of a principal for the torts of an agent, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 427, Principal and Agent (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employer-Employee Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

Continental Cas. Co. v. Phoenix Constr. Co. (1956) 46 Cal. 2d 423, 296 P.2d 801 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an action for declaratory relief regarding the respective obligations of insurers. A construction company (Phoenix) and a trucking company (Oilfields) entered into an agreement for certain joint ventures. They then contracted with the State of California to do certain highway construction work. A judgment was subsequently entered against both for liability caused by the negligence of one of Oilfield's employees (Mason). Phoenix's insurer Continental Casualty Company then brought an action against Oilfield and its insurers for a declaration of rights under the various policies.

In reversing the trial court's judgment that liability should be prorated, the Supreme Court held that because Mason bore the primary responsibility in the personal injury suit, Oilfield's insurers must pay the entire award to the personal injury plaintiff. In so holding, the Court noted an employer's right to recoup his or her loss in an action against a negligent employee if the loss was caused by the unauthorized, negligent act of the employee (46 Cal. 2d 423, 428) . Therefore, under equitable principles of subrogation, the employer's insurer who has been compelled to pay the judgment may recover against the negligent employee or the employee's insurer (46 Cal. 2d 423, 429) .

[b] Principal-Agent Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

In Herrero v. Atkinson (1964) 227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 38 Cal. Rptr. 490 , Herrero was involved in an automobile accident with a vehicle in which Lorenzo was a passenger. Eighteen months after the accident, Lorenzo died in the course of surgery related to injuries received in the accident. Lorenzo's estate brought a wrongful death action against Herrero and numerous medical defendants involved in the surgery (doctors). One of the doctors cross complained against the others on the ground that if he were liable to the Lorenzo estate, it would only be because of his vicarious liability for the negligence of the other doctors. The trial court granted a demurrer to this cross complaint.

In reversing and upholding a cause of action on this ground, the court of appeal set forth the rule that a principal, liable for the negligent acts of an agent solely because of the relationship of principal and agent, may have indemnity against the negligent agent. In such a case, the liability of the agent is considered primary and that of the principal as secondary, although both are equally liable to the injured party (227 Cal. App. 2d 69, 77) .

Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. v. Haslam (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1353-1356, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 135 , involved an action for indemnity by an insurance company against one of its agents. A dispute between the insurer and an insured under a fire insurance policy arose from the agent's errors in filling out both the original application for insurance, which contained the wrong address of the insured property, and in filling out a notice of cancellation on discovering the first error, which notice did not have the date of cancellation properly entered. The insurer settled the underlying action with its insured for the $250,000 policy limits and an additional amount of $800,000 in consideration of the insurer's potential liability for bad faith practices (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1350-1353) .

On trial of the indemnity action, the jury allocated 100 percent of the insurer's loss to the agent and entered a judgment of indemnity for the total amount of $1,050,000. On appeal, the agent sought to overturn only that part of the judgment that represented the $800,000 paid on account of possible exposure for bad faith claims practices. However, the judgment was affirmed in its entirety. The court rejected the argument that an agent should not be liable, as a matter of law, for damages that represent the insurer's bad faith. It upheld the jury instruction that allowed the insurer to recover all damages in indemnity for which the agent was the legal cause. The agent's liability arose not from the insurer's bad faith, but from his own negligence (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1354) .

Finally, the agent argued that it should be against public policy to require him to indemnify the insurer because he owed no duty of good faith and fair dealing to the insured. But the court also rejected that argument. The basis of the agent's liability was not any duty toward the insured; rather, he was liable because he breached duties owed directly to the insurer (as principal), which breach caused loss to the principal. Whether or not the agent owed any additional or special duty to the insured was deemed irrelevant because it was not the breach of any such duty that was the basis of liability (29 Cal. App. 4th 1347, 1355-1356) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.94

§ 115.94 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Against Employer or Principal and in Favor of Indemnitee Who Is Employee or Agent Arises From Employment or Agency Relationship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A RIGHT TO TOTAL INDEMNITY MAY BE IMPLIED IN FAVOR OF AN _____ [EMPLOYEE or AGENT] AS INDEMNITEE FROM _____ [AN EMPLOYER or A PRINCIPAL] AS INDEMNITOR ARISING OUT OF THE _____ [EMPLOYMENT or AGENCY] RELATIONSHIP.

[EITHER]

Employee's Right to Indemnity From Employer. An employer must indemnify an employee for all that the employee necessarily expends or loses in direct consequence of the discharge of employment duties or of obedience to the directions of the employer (Lab. Code § 2802; see Douglas v. Los Angeles Herald-Examiner (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 461, 123 Cal. Rptr. 683).

[OR]

Agent-Principal Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity. An agent pursuing the instructions of a principal and acting within the scope of his or her authority, who then becomes personally liable for the performance of the contract made for the principal, can look to the principal for indemnity for the damage sustained (Rimington v. General Accident Group of Ins. Cos. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 394, 397, 23 Cal. Rptr. 40 ; see Fidelity Mortgage Trustee Service, Inc. v. Ridgegate East Homeowners Assn. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 509-511).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an employee's or agent's contention that it is entitled, as an implied indemnitee, to shift a loss that it has incurred, or may incur, entirely to the employer or principal, as indemnitor. The indemnitee's contention is that the loss was incurred in the course of following the directions of the employer or principal.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if indemnity rights implied from an employment or agency relationship may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) at relevant times, the indemnitor was either the employer or the principal of the indemnitee; (2) while acting in the course and scope of his or her employment or agency, the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party; and (3) in incurring the loss, the employee or agent was acting under the instructions of the employer or principal.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms for use with regard to the direct liability of an employer for the acts of an employee, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use with regard to the liability of a principal to an agent for liability incurred while acting within the scope of the agency, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 427, Principal and Agent (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Employee's Right to Indemnity From Employer

In Douglas v. Los Angeles Herald-Examiner (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 123 Cal. Rptr. 683 , Douglas was a reporter and employee of the Herald-Examiner (Herald). A third party brought a federal court action against Douglas for various causes of action based on an article written by Douglas and published in the Herald. Douglas tendered the defense to the Herald, which refused. Douglas then obtained a dismissal of the third-party action and sued the Herald for indemnity for his costs of defending the action, alleging that Lab. Code § 2802 required the Herald to pay these costs. The trial court entered judgment for the Herald, finding that, with regard to the acts Douglas was alleged in the federal court action to have committed, Douglas was not acting within the scope of his employment, the Herald did not authorize or direct the acts, and the Herald had no knowledge of whether or not Douglas actually committed them.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that Lab. Code § 2802 requires an employer to defend or indemnify an employee who is sued by third persons for conduct in the course and scope of employment (50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 461) . The court noted that the Restatement (Second) of Law of Agency § 439(d) provides that a principal is subject to a duty to exonerate an agent for the expenses of defending actions brought by third persons because of the agent's authorized conduct (50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 459-460) . The court concluded that if the federal court suit was brought solely and exclusively because of acts performed for, at the direction of, and with the authorization and approval of the Herald, and the acts were specifically ratified and approved by the Herald, Douglas would be entitled to indemnity from the Herald for the costs and expenses incurred in defending the federal court action (50 Cal. App. 3d 449, 462) .

NOTE:

Douglas involved only a claim for costs of defense and not a claim for indemnity for liability incurred to the third party. Lab. Code § 2802 would seem to embrace two distinct duties of the employer; (1) a duty to defend any claim brought against the employee for an act committed while within the scope of employment; and (2) a duty to indemnify an employee for liability incurred because of an act that was expressly authorized or directed by the employer, similar to the rule expressed in Restatement (Second) of Agency § 439(d). Thus, an employee who is sued for negligent driving while on the employer's business is entitled to a defense but not to indemnity for liability; indeed the indemnity rights in that situation are in favor of the employer [see § 115.93; but see Holt v. Booth (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 1074, 1080 n.6, 2 Cal. Rptr. 2d 727 (dicta in footnote suggesting that statute may require vicariously liable employer to indemnify negligent employee for liability to third party arising from conduct within scope of employment)]. However, if the employee is driving negligently under the express instructions of the employer, such as under an order to make a delivery within a given time regardless of the risk that it might entail to the public, the employee should be entitled to indemnity for any liability to a third party who is injured due to the employee's negligent driving [see Jensen v. Southern Pac. Co. (1954) 129 Cal. App. 2d 67, 70-71, 276 P.2d 703] .

[b] Agent-Principal Relationship as Basis for Implied Indemnity

In Fidelity Mortgage Tr. Serv., Inc. v. Ridgegate E. Homeowners Ass'n (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 , a homeowners association and its property management company hired a foreclosure trustee to foreclose on a lien for unpaid homeowners' fees against a condominium unit. The unit owner brought an action against all three entities for various alleged wrongs committed in the course of the foreclosure. The management company prevailed on summary judgment, and the association and trustee won a complete defense jury verdict at trial. The foreclosure trustee then brought an indemnity action against the association and management company for reimbursement of its costs and attorney's fees incurred in defending the underlying action (27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 506-507) .

The trial court summarily adjudicated that there was no right to indemnity for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 because the prospective indemnitee (foreclosure trustee) had not tendered the defense of the underlying action to the alleged indemnitors (association and management company) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6(b)]. In reversing, the court of appeal found the potential right to indemnity in agency law principles rather than in the statute. It assumed for purposes of the appeal that the trustee was the agent of both indemnitors (see 27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 508 n.6). It cited the general agency rule that an agent is entitled to indemnification by its principal for losses incurred by the agent in the execution of the agency [see Restatement (Second) of Agency, § 438]. For example, an agent that becomes personally liable for the performance of a contract entered into for its principal is entitled to indemnification by the principal for damages sustained because of the breach of that agreement (27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 509) .

The court also cited the agency rule that a principal has a duty to its agent, who is not barred by the illegality of his or her conduct, to indemnify the agent for expenses of defending actions by third persons brought because of the agent's authorized conduct [see Restatement (Second) of Agency § 439(d)]. It held that the scope of indemnity recoverable extended to attorney's fees incurred, and that the agent's failure to notify the principal and tender the defense to the principal meant only that the agent was required to prove that he had made a reasonable defense (27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 510-511) .

Rimington v. General Accident Group of Ins. Cos. (1962) 205 Cal. App. 2d 394, 23 Cal. Rptr. 40 , was an appeal from an order of the superior court striking a cross complaint for declaratory relief and sustaining a demurrer to the cross complaint without leave to amend. Plaintiff company had filed a complaint by which it sought to determine the rights and liabilities of several insurance companies and Rimington, the alleged agent of the insurance companies. Rimington filed a cross complaint against the insurance companies seeking a declaration of his right to indemnification from the insurers for any judgment rendered against him. The trial court granted cross defendants' motions to strike and sustained their demurrers without leave to amend. The court of appeal reversed. The court noted that an agent pursuing the instructions of his or her principal and acting within the scope of his or her authority who becomes personally liable for the performance of the contract made for his or her principal, can look to the principal for indemnity for the damage sustained (205 Cal. App. 2d 394, 397) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Employee's Right to Indemnity From Employer

In Jacobus v. Krambo Corp. (2000) 78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 93 Cal. Rptr. 2d 425 , an employee was sued by a co-worker for sexual harassment, and the employer chose not to tender a defense for the employee. After the employee was found not to be liable, the employee sought indemnification from his employer under Lab. Code § 2802 for the legal costs incurred in defending the suit. The trial court granted summary judgment for the employer, but the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal noted that even though sexual misconduct falls outside the course and scope of employment, the employee's acts were found not to constitute sexual misconduct, the allegedly actionable behavior was simply part of the social intercourse that occasionally occurs in the office setting, and the co-worker's suit was apparently a response to an adverse employment evaluation. Therefore, under these facts, the court held that the employee could recover the expenses incurred in defending the suit from his employer (78 Cal. App. 4th 1096, 1104) .

In Grissom v. Vons Cos., Inc. (1991) 1 Cal. App. 4th 52, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808 , a truck driver who was acting within the scope of his employment was injured in an accident and claimed workers' compensation from his employer. He also sued various parties for his injuries, who, in turn, cross complained against him for their injuries. He demanded that his employer defend him under Lab. Code § 2802 on the cross complaints. The employer provided him with the same counsel who was representing the employer on the workers' compensation claim. The employee rejected this counsel and brought an action for declaratory relief that the employer was required to provide him with independent counsel. The court of appeal determined that whether independent counsel was "necessary" under Lab. Code § 2802 on the facts presented was not adequately pleaded, and remanded for an opportunity to amend the complaint (Cal. App. 4th 52, 57-59).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.95

§ 115.95 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee Is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Right of Total Indemnity Is Available From Intentional Tortfeasor in Favor of Negligent Indemnitee

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS ENTITLED TO RECOVER TOTAL INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR WITH REGARD TO THE LIABILITY AT ISSUE BECAUSE INDEMNITEE'S CONDUCT WAS MERELY NEGLIGENT, WHILE INDEMNITOR ACTED INTENTIONALLY AND WILLFULLY.

Total Indemnity From Intentional Tortfeasor. The entire liability for a loss may be shifted from a tortfeasor who was only negligent to a tortfeasor whose intentional conduct also gave rise to the liability (Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 212-213, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an indemnitee's contention that it is entitled, as an implied indemnitee, to shift a loss that it has incurred, or may incur, entirely to another tortfeasor. The indemnitee's contention is that its conduct toward the injured party was only negligent, while the conduct of the indemnitor was intentional.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which implied indemnity rights are brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if the respective negligent and intentional conduct may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief. For discussion of the procedures by which the validity and scope of indemnity rights may be litigated, see § 115.10.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee incurred or may incur a loss to a third party for which the indemnitor is or may also be liable; (2) the conduct of the indemnitee that may have proximately caused the loss may only be characterized as negligent; (3) conduct of the indemnitor was also a proximate cause of the loss; and (4) the conduct of the indemnitor may only be characterized as intentional.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Total Indemnity From Intentional Tortfeasor

In Cicone v. URS Corp. (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 227 Cal. Rptr. 887 , former clients sued an attorney for legal malpractice arising from his representation in the sale of the clients' business. The attorney cross complained against the buyer of the business and their counsel, alleging various causes of action, including one for fraud based on statements made in the course of negotiations. The attorney also cross complained for both partial and total equitable indemnity. The trial court granted a general demurrer to the cross complaint.

The court of appeal reversed as to all causes of action. With regard to the claim for total equitable indemnity, the court agreed with the court in E.L. White, Inc. v. City of Huntington Beach (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 366, 375-376, 187 Cal. Rptr. 879 [see § 115.90], that a complete shift of loss is still possible under principles of comparative fault. The court stated that indemnity only requires a significant difference in the kind or quality of the conduct of each tortfeasor. Here, the attorney was alleged only to have been negligent, while the buyers were alleged to have intentionally deceived the attorney and the sellers. Should fraud be proved at trial, the entire liability may be shifted to the buyers. On the other hand, if the buyers were to be found to have been only negligent in their representations to the attorney, partial indemnity under principles of comparative negligence would come into play (183 Cal. App. 3d 194, 211-213) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.96

§ 115.96 Supporting Motion by Indemnitee for Award of Attorney's Fees in Action for Implied Total Indemnity [Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR ATTORNEYS' FEES
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A PREVAILING IMPLIED INDEMNITEE MAY BE AWARDED ATTORNEY'S FEES FOR _____ [DEFENSE or PROSECUTION] OF A THIRD-PARTY SUIT IF, ON MOTION, THE COURT FINDS THAT THE INDEMNITOR'S TORT REQUIRED THE INDEMNITEE TO PROTECT ITS INTERESTS BY _____ [BRINGING AN ACTION AGAINST or DEFENDING AN ACTION BY] A THIRD PARTY, THE INDEMNITOR WAS PROPERLY NOTIFIED OF THE DEMAND _____ [TO BRING THE ACTION or PROVIDE THE DEFENSE] AND DID NOT DO SO, AND THE INDEMNITEE _____ [WAS WITHOUT FAULT IN THE PRINCIPAL CASE THAT WAS THE BASIS FOR THE ACTION IN INDEMNITY or HAD A FINAL JUDGMENT ENTERED IN HIS/HER FAVOR GRANTING _____ (A SUMMARY JUDGMENT or A NONSUIT or A DIRECTED VERDICT)].

A. Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending or Bringing Third-Party Suit Allowed to Person Who Prevails on Claim for Implied Indemnity. A court may award attorney's fees to a person who prevails on a claim for implied indemnity if, on motion, the court reviews the evidence in the principal case and finds that (1) the tort of the indemnitor required the indemnitee to act in protection of his or her own interests by bringing an action against or defending an action by a third party; (2) the indemnitor was properly notified of the demand to bring the action or provide the defense and did not do so; and (3) the trier of fact determined that the indemnitee was without fault in the principal case that is the basis for the action in indemnity or that the indemnitee had a final judgment entered in his or her favor granting a summary judgment, a nonsuit, or a directed verdict (Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6).

[Optional] B. Defendant Prevailing in Underlying Action Is Party Prevailing on Claim for Implied Indemnity. If a defendant is found to be without fault and prevails in the underlying action, and therefore does not have occasion to prevail on a claim for indemnity against the party at fault, the defendant is still entitled to seek attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6; in such a case, the defendant is deemed to have "prevailed on a claim for indemnity" (Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 294-296, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; see Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290).

[Optional] C. Defendant Found Liable as Matter of Law for Acts of Indemnitor in Underlying Action Is Without Fault. An implied indemnitee who is liable for the acts of another as a matter of law may be without "fault" in the principal case within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6, and therefore entitled to attorneys' fees incurred in defending the case (Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1245, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 ; see Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 297-301, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787).

[Optional] D. "Principal Case" Is Action in Which Defendant Incurred Attorney's Fees. The "principal case" referred to in Code of Civil Procedure Section 1021.6 is the action that caused the innocent indemnitee to defend itself and thereby incur attorney fees, as distinguished from the action for indemnity in which the Section 1021.6 fees are sought. The reference is not necessarily to the original action brought by a plaintiff, but may refer to a cross complaint triggered by that original action (Wilson, McCall & Daoro v. American Qualified Plans, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1036, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion by a prevailing indemnitee on a claim for total implied indemnity for attorneys' fees incurred in bringing or defending an underlying tort action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6]. The most common situation for this form is one in which the indemnitee was sued by a tort victim based on some legal or alleged responsibility for the indemnitor's acts [see, e.g., Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172] . However, another situation would be one in which the indemnitee was required by the tort of another to bring an action against a third person--for example, an action to quiet title that was made necessary because of a negligently prepared and recorded document [see, e.g., Prentice v. North Am. Title Guar. Corp. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 618, 620, 30 Cal. Rptr. 821, 381 P.2d 645] .

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) because of the indemnitor's tortious conduct, the indemnitee was either required to bring an action against a third party or defend an action brought by a third party in which it was alleged that the indemnitee was responsible for the conduct of the indemnitor; (2) the indemnitor refused the indemnitee's demand to either bring or defend the action on behalf of the indemnitee; and (3) either the indemnitee was determined to be without fault in underlying action, or there is a final judgment in the indemnitee's favor after summary judgment, nonsuit, or directed verdict. If the indemnitee was determined to be without fault, it should be established whether that determination also resulted in no liability to the indemnitee, so as to make moot the actual claim for indemnity, or whether the indemnitee, even though faultless, remains liable to the third party and thus entitled to implied indemnity from the indemnitor.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a form of notice of motion, declaration, and order for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Incurred in Defending or Bringing Third-Party Suit Allowed to Person Who Prevails on Claim for Implied Indemnity

The legislature enacted Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 in 1979 to reverse the Supreme Court's ruling in Davis v. Air Technical Indus., Inc. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 1, 148 Cal. Rptr. 419, 582 P.2d 1010 . Davis was a products liability case in which both Davis and Air Technical were sued on causes of action for negligence, breach of express warranty, and strict liability arising out of defects in an elevator that caused plaintiff's injuries. When Air Technical refused Davis's request to defend him, Davis cross complained against it for indemnity and attorney's fees incurred in defending the principal action. The jury had found both Air Technical and Davis strictly liable, but the trial court had already granted Davis's motion for nonsuit on the breach of warranty and plaintiff had voluntarily dismissed the negligence claim. In a separate trial on the cross complaint, the court found that Davis had not been actively negligent and awarded Davis both indemnification for the amount of the damages ($7,516) and attorney's fees ($19,804.77). On Air Technical's appeal, the Supreme Court ruled that because it was clear that Davis did not defend on Air Technical's behalf but was concerned exclusively with contesting the allegations of his own negligence and breach of warranty, the basic American rule applied that even if vindicated, tort defendants must pay their own attorney's fees. The Court found inapposite the statement in Prentice v. North Am. Title Guar. Corp. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 618, 620, 30 Cal. Rptr. 821, 381 P.2d 645 , that a person who through the tort of another has been required to act in the protection of his interests by bringing or defending an action against a third person is entitled to recover compensation for the reasonably necessary loss of time, attorney's fees, and other expenditures thereby suffered or incurred. In Prentice, the Court had held that plaintiffs were entitled to recover attorney's fees because an escrow holder's negligence in closing a land sale forced plaintiffs to bring a quiet title action against third parties. In Davis, the Court stated that these were exceptional circumstances (the basis for one common-law exception to the application of the American rule) because if plaintiffs had not been entitled to attorney's fees, they would have only recovered their court costs as damages.

The enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 (Stats. 1979, ch. 289) requires an opposite result under the facts of Davis. The tort of Air Technical required Davis to act in his own interests, Air Technical had been requested to defend Davis, and Davis was found not to be at fault in the principal case (although, in fact, the jury did not make such a determination because the warranty and negligence claims against Davis had already been dismissed).

NOTE:

The equitable "tort of another" doctrine as articulated in Prentice is an alternative ground for attorneys' fees apart from the statute. Under the doctrine, one who through the tort of another has been required to act in the protection of his or her own interests by bringing or defending an action against a third person is entitled to recover compensation for attorneys' fees incurred as an element of damages and not as attorneys' fees qua attorneys' fees [Prentice v. North Am. Title Guar. Corp. (1963) 59 Cal. 2d 618, 620, 30 Cal. Rptr. 821, 381 P.2d 645 ; Heckert v. MacDonald (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 832, 836-838, 256 Cal. Rptr. 369] . Proof of a demand to bring or defend the action is not required [see Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6(b)] However, the "tort of another" doctrine applies only when the potential indemnitor owed a legal duty of care to the indemnitee that can serve as a basis for the right to indemnification. It cannot be used by all exonerated defendants in commonplace, multiparty tort litigation to recover attorney's fees from unrelated codefendants who are held liable [Watson v. Department of Transp. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 885, 893-894, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] .

General principles of agency law provide another, alternative route to attorney's fees apart from the statute. The court of appeal has held that an agent may seek indemnity from its principal for expenses incurred in defending a third-party action, and that the agent need not have tendered its defense of the action to the principal as an absolute prerequisite to indemnification [Fidelity Mortgage Trustee Service, Inc. v. Ridgegate East Homeowners Assn. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 503, 509-511, 32 Cal. Rptr. 2d 521 ; see § 115.94[3][b]].

[b] Defendant Prevailing in Underlying Action Is Party Prevailing on Claim for Implied Indemnity

In Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787 , the underlying action was a products liability case in which two farmers sued the manufacturer (Amvac), wholesaler (Leffingwell), and retailer (Helena) of an allegedly defective chemical. The defendants filed cross complaints against one another seeking indemnity and declaratory relief. The jury found in favor of the farmers against Amvac and Leffingwell, but returned a defense verdict in favor of Helena.

In addition, as between Amvac and Leffingwell, the jury determined that Amvac was 100 percent at fault, and that Leffingwell was entitled to total indemnity from Amvac. However, the jury never reached Helena's indemnity claims, having been instructed that this resolution would be irrelevant if it found that the farmers were not entitled to judgment against Helena. After the entry of judgment, Helena and Leffingwell filed motions for attorneys' fees incurred in defending the farmers' action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6.

The court denied Helena's claim on the ground that Helena had not prevailed on a claim for implied indemnity against Amvac as required by the statute because the farmers did not obtain a judgment against Helena in the underlying action. The court of appeal reversed the denial of the motion. It stated that if the trial court's reasoning were correct, the obvious purpose of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 would be thwarted. On one hand, a defendant who is successful at trial and receives a defense verdict on plaintiff's cause of action would not be entitled to attorneys' fees. On the other hand, a defendant who is found liable to the plaintiff under some theory of law, but prevails on its claim for total implied indemnity may recover its attorney's fees incurred in defending against plaintiff's tort claim. The court noted that in amending Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6, the legislature provided for attorneys' fees if the indemnitee had a final judgment entered in his or her favor granting a summary judgment, a nonsuit, or a directed verdict. Thus, the statute contemplates that one may recover attorney's fees after a favorable judgment entered without trial in the principal case. It would be unfair and incongruous to deny the same relief to one who prevailed to the same extent by reason of a verdict. Courts have a duty to interpret statutes in a way that makes them workable and reasonable; a court's interpretation should not frustrate the manifest purposes of the legislation or lead to absurd results (203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 294-296) .

The facts and principal holding of Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 , are discussed in § 115.91[3][a]. Bay's cross complaint for implied contractual indemnity from another defendant (Home) was dismissed after Home's settlement with the plaintiffs was confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. Bay initiated writ proceedings to review the dismissal, and while the proceedings were pending in the court of appeal, plaintiffs proceeded to trial against Bay. Bay was absolved of all liability by the jury. The issue of mootness was then presented in the writ proceeding in that Bay, having no liability, had nothing to be indemnified for.

The California Supreme Court refused to dismiss for mootness. It stated that Bay continued to have a substantial economic interest in proceeding on its indemnity claim because if it were entitled to indemnity, it could recover its attorneys' fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The Court then cited Uniroyal Chemical v. American Vanguard for its holding that a would-be indemnitee may be eligible to recover attorneys' fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 even if it has been absolved of all liability for the plaintiff's injuries, as long as the indemnitee demonstrates that it would have been entitled to indemnity for any judgment that might have been rendered against it (50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1026-1027) .

NOTE:

The court of appeal has clarified that application of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 to the situation in which a claim for indemnity is rendered unnecessary due to a finding that the indemnitee is not liable presupposes that a valid claim for indemnity would have existed. A faultless defendant who cannot show a right to indemnification from the party at fault cannot recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 [Watson v. Department of Transp. (1998) 68 Cal. App. 4th 885, 890-891, 80 Cal. Rptr. 2d 594] .

[c] Defendant Found Liable as Matter of Law for Acts of Indemnitor in Underlying Action Is Without Fault

The facts and procedural background of Bear Creek Planning Com. v. Title Ins. & Trust Co. (1985) 164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 211 Cal. Rptr. 172 , are discussed in § 115.91[3][b]. In the underlying action, the homeowners association (Bear Creek) had been found liable for slander of title due to the negligence of the title company in failing to record certain conditions, covenants, and restrictions. The title company argued that Bear Creek was not entitled to attorneys' fees incurred in defending the slander of title action under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 because the trier of fact determined that Bear Creek was at fault in that action. The trial court disagreed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court construed the statute as referring to the trier of fact in the indemnity action, not in the principal action. It is in the indemnity action in which the trier of fact must determine whether the indemnitee's conduct was of a nature that would preclude recovery of implied indemnity. That the indemnitee was found liable for damages in the principal action forms no basis for denying attorneys' fees in the indemnity action; rather, it is the basis for the indemnity action and the award of attorneys' fees therein (164 Cal. App. 3d 1227, 1245) . Thus, any theory under which the indemnitee is found to be entitled to total implied indemnity (see § 115.90- 95) meets the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6.

The facts of Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787 , are discussed in § 115.96[3][b]. The trial court had denied Leffingwell's motion for attorneys' fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 because the jury had found Leffingwell liable to the farmers in the underlying action, and thus, it could not be said that Leffingwell was without fault (203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 298) .

The court of appeal reversed under the reasoning of Bear Creek. The finding that the indemnitee is without fault is the finding made in the indemnity claim. In this case, although the jury had found Leffingwell to be liable to the farmers, in considering Leffingwell's and Amvac's respective cross complaints for indemnity it had awarded Leffingwell total indemnity. Thus, Leffingwell was determined by the trier of fact to have been without fault (203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 299-301) .

NOTE:

The court in Uniroyal stressed that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 is a discretionary statute. If its requirements are met, the court may award attorneys' fees after reviewing the evidence in the principal case [Uniroyal Chem. Co., Inc. v. American Vanguard Corp. (1988) 203 Cal. App. 3d 285, 301, 249 Cal. Rptr. 787] .

[d] "Principal Case" Is Action in Which Defendant Incurred Attorney's Fees

In Wilson, McCall & Daoro v. American Qualified Plans, Inc. (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 192 , an accounting firm and a law firm were sued for professional negligence based on allegations that they failed to properly advise on the differences between federal and California law when stock was sold through an employee stock ownership plan. The accounting firm and the law firm filed separate cross complaints for indemnity and declaratory relief against each other and against a consulting firm who was not named as a defendant in the professional negligence action. In their individual cross complaints against the consulting firm, both the accounting firm and the law firm alleged that if they were found liable, that liability was the result of the consulting firm's failure to properly advise the malpractice plaintiff of the tax consequences of his stock sale. After unsuccessfully tendering defense of the law firm's cross complaint to the accounting firm, and the accounting firm's cross complaint to the law firm, the consulting firm cross complained against the accounting firm and law firm seeking indemnity and attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The consulting firm then moved for summary judgment on the cross complaints brought against it on the basis that it owed no duty to the malpractice plaintiff and thus could not be liable. The trial court granted summary judgment for the consulting firm on both cross complaints brought against it. The consulting firm then settled the cross complaint that it had brought against the law firm, with the law firm agreeing to pay $30,000 to the consulting firm to help pay for the attorney fees the consulting firm had incurred. The accounting firm then moved for summary judgment on the cross complaint brought against it by the consulting firm. The trial court granted the motion on the grounds that the consulting firm had never paid a judgment or settlement in the litigation, was never adjudicated a joint tortfeasor, and did not bring or defend an action against a third party within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The consulting firm appealed.

The court of appeal reversed with directions to the trial court to entertain the consulting firm's motion for attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The consulting firm argued that, when the accounting firm refused to defend it, it was required to defend at its own expense the cross complaint brought by the law firm and that the need to defend the action was due to the negligence of the accounting firm. As such, it was entitled to attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The accounting firm countered that Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 was inapplicable to the consulting firm's claim for attorney's fees, arguing in part that the "principal case" for purposes of applying Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 was the professional negligence action and that, under that interpretation, the consulting firm was not forced to bring an action against or defend an action brought by a "third party" and thus did not meet the requirements for recovery of attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The court of appeal disagreed with the accounting firm, holding that the "principal case" referred to in Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 is the action that causes the innocent indemnitee to defend itself and thereby incur attorney fees, as distinguished from the indemnitee's action for indemnity in which the Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 fees are sought (70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1036) . The reference does not necessarily mean the original action brought by a plaintiff, and in this case, did not refer to the professional negligence action. A cross complaint is a separate pleading based on an independent cause of action, and since the consulting firm tendered defense of the cross complaint brought against it by the law firm to the accounting firm, and the accounting firm refused to defend the consulting firm, Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 applied to the consulting firm's claim for attorney's fees. For these purposes, the consulting firm was forced to defend an action brought by a "third party" when it was forced to defend the action brought by the law firm. The court rejected the argument that the consulting firm had to have been named as a defendant in the professional negligence action in order to seek attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 (70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1036-1037) . The court noted, however, that the consulting firm would still have to establish on remand that the law firm's cross complaint against the consulting firm arose from the tortious conduct of the accounting firm (70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1038) .

Applying Bay Dev., Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 [see § 115.96[3][b]], the court also rejected the argument that the consulting firm could not recover attorney's fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6 because it never paid a judgment or settlement and was never adjudicated to be a joint tortfeasor in the litigation (70 Cal. App. 4th 1030, 1037-1038) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.97

§ 115.97 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee is Entitled to Total Indemnification Under Principles of Comparative Indemnity--Indemnitor Cannot be Liable for Implied Contractual Indemnity When Indemnitor Has Complete Defense Against Liability to Injured Third Party

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A DEFENDANT CANNOT BE HELD LIABLE FOR IMPLIED CONTRACTUAL INDEMNITY WHEN DEFENDANT HAS A COMPLETE DEFENSE TO DIRECT LIABILITY TO THE INJURED THIRD PARTY.

Implied Contractual Indemnity Barred When Indemnitor Cannot be Held Directly Liable to Injured Third Party. As with any claim for equitable indemnity, in a claim for implied contractual indemnity, the alleged indemnitor does not owe indemnity for liability imposed on the indemnitee if the indemnitor cannot be held liable directly to the injured third party, as, for example, when the indemnitor is statutorily immune from liability to the injured third party (Prince v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1151, 1165, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732, 202 P.3d 1115).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to the contention that defendant may be held liable for implied contractual indemnity. The basis for the opposition is that defendant cannot be held liable for indemnity to a tortfeasor when defendant has a complete defense that would prevent being held directly liable to the injured third party.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which counsel wishes to raise the contention that the claim for implied contractual indemnity must fail. These points and authorities may also be adapted for use in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the point of law stated. Thus, counsel should include facts establishing that defendant has a complete defense to direct liability to the injured third party.

[c] Opposing Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting the contention that implied contractual indemnity may be pursued, see § 115.91.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Implied Contractual Indemnity Barred When Indemnitor Cannot be Held Directly Liable to Injured Third Party

In Prince v. Pacific Gas & Electric Co. (2009) 45 Cal. 4th 1151, 90 Cal. Rptr. 3d 732, 202 P.3d 1115 , a 10-year-old boy was injured when he used a metal pole to try to retrieve his kite from a power line. He filed suit against the landowner, who filed a cross-complaint for implied contractual indemnity against the electric utility company, which had an easement on the land for purposes of erecting and maintaining the power lines. The parties agreed that the utility company could not be directly liable to the boy due to Civ. Code § 846, which generally provides that a landowner owes no duty of care to keep premises safe for entry or use for recreational purposes. The landowner argued, however, that the utility company could be liable to indemnify her for any liability she would incur based on the company's breach of contractual duties owed to her to maintain the power lines in repair. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the utility company on the indemnity claim, concluding that the because the company had a complete defense to direct liability to the injured boy, the company was not jointly and severally liable for the injury and could not owe equitable indemnity, which included implied contractual indemnity, to the landowner. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the utility's contactual duties to the landowner arising from the easement were separate from any duties owed to the boy, and thus were unaffected by the recreational-use immunity of Civ. Code § 846. The utility company appealed.

The California Supreme Court reversed the court of appeal. After reviewing the general principles of indemnity as developed in earlier case law, the Court concluded that implied contractual indemnity has always been a species of equitable, or comparative, indemnity. The Court also noted that, under established case law, a party can recover equitable indemnity only if the indemnitor shares with the indemnitee a joint legal obligation to the injured party (45 Cal. 4th 1151, 1160-1161) . Consistent with these established principles, the Court held that a claim for implied contractual indemnity is subject to the rule that "there can be no indemnity without liability." Thus, because the utility company was immune from liability to the injured boy, the landowner could not recover implied contractual indemnity from the company (45 Cal. 4th 1151, 1165) . The Court also noted that implied contractual indemnity is restitutionary in nature, meaning that the indemnitor would otherwise be unjustly enriched at the expense of the indemnitee when the latter discharges a liability that should be the responsibility of the indemnitor. By recognizing the restitutionary nature of this remedy and requiring a joint liability to the injured third party, the Court stated its intent to prevent parties from turning what would otherwise essentially be contractual claims into vehicles for the recovery of tort damages (45 Cal. 4th 1151, 1166 & n.10). Finally, the Court rejected the landowner's assertions that it would be inequitable to bar indemnity from the utility company. The Court noted that the landowner herself still had a potential defense to liability under Civ. Code § 846, subject to further fact-finding, and that if her defense under that statute failed, it would be solely due to her own conduct in expressly inviting the boy onto the property, thus bringing the boy's claim against her within a statutory exception to immunity. The utility company, however, did nothing to compromise either its own immunity or that of the landowner (45 Cal. 4th 1151, 1168-1169) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
B. Comparative Indemnity
2. Total Indemnity

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.98- 115.109

[Reserved]

§§ 115.98[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.110

§ 115.110 Supporting Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Party to Joint or Joint and Several Obligation Has Paid More Than Proportionate Share of Obligation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party seeking contribution, e.g., PLAINTIFF], ONE OF _____ [number, e.g., TWO] JOINT AND SEVERAL OBLIGORS, HAS PAID _____ [ALL or MORE THAN ITS PROPORTIONATE SHARE] OF THE OBLIGATION AND IS ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION FROM THE OTHER OBLIGOR(S).

Contribution Among Obligors. A party to a joint, or joint and several, obligation who satisfies more than his or her share of the claim against all may require a proportionate contribution from all the parties joined in the obligation (Civ. Code § 1432; see Murchison v. Murchison (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 600, 604, 33 Cal. Rptr. 285).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a right of contribution between nontort obligors resting on other than satisfaction of a judgment. Civ. Code § 1432 provides for such a right. Code Civ. Proc. §§ 881-883 provide a post-judgment procedure for contribution among judgment debtors [see § 115.111].

Unlike Code Civ. Proc. §§ 881-883, Civ. Code § 1432 is not expressly limited to nontort obligations. However, it is the predominant view that apportionment of liability among tortfeasors is to be accomplished under principles of comparative indemnity and not under principles of contribution [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 325-328, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 ; see also §§ 115.04, 115.130[3][a]].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if contribution rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party seeking contribution is one of a number of joint or joint and several obligors under an obligation; (2) the obligation arises other than in tort; and (3) the party has paid the obligation in full or in an amount that exceeds his or her proportionate share. The computation of the proportionate share of each joint obligor should be the same as with joint judgment debtors [see § 115.111[3][a]].

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In appropriate cases, the points and authorities in §§ 115.112 -115.114 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contribution Among Obligors

Murchison v. Murchison (1963) 219 Cal. App. 2d 600, 33 Cal. Rptr. 285 , was a divorce action. After divorce, the husband paid an income tax deficiency under joint returns filed during marriage. He then claimed that he was entitled to offset a part of this payment against the balance due to the wife under the divorce judgment. On the wife's application, a writ of execution on the unpaid amount of the judgment was issued, and the husband moved to quash the writ and enter satisfaction of judgment. The trial court denied the husband's motion, finding, as a question of fact, that there was no agreement between the parties entitling the husband to an offset.

The court of appeal reversed, considering the presence or absence of agreement to be irrelevant. Obligations under a joint income tax return are joint and several. The husband was compelled to make the payment, and the wife benefited from the payment. Under Civ. Code § 1432, the husband was entitled to contribution regardless of whether there was an agreement or contract between the parties with regard to paying the claim. Contribution is an equitable doctrine, and the statute is consistent with the doctrine's equitable origins. Its application is not limited to cases in which consent, express or implied, can be found. When the husband paid the full amount of the parties' joint and several tax obligations, a new claim or cause of action arose by operation of law in his favor against the wife (219 Cal. App. 2d 600, 604-605) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.111

§ 115.111 Supporting Motion for Contribution [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883]--Nontort Judgment Debtor Who Has Satisfied Judgment May Seek Contribution from Judgment Debtor Who Is Jointly Liable for Judgment

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR CONTRIBUTION [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____

_____

A JUDGMENT DEBTOR, OTHER THAN A JOINT TORTFEASOR, WHO HAS PAID MORE THAN ITS SHARE OF A JUDGMENT ON WHICH SEVERAL PERSONS ARE LIABLE IS ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION FROM THE OTHER JUDGMENT DEBTORS.

A. Right to Contribution. If two or more judgment debtors, other than joint tortfeasors, are jointly liable on a money judgment, one who has satisfied more than his or her due proportion of the judgment, whether voluntarily or through enforcement procedures, may compel contribution from another judgment debtor who has satisfied less than his or her due proportion of the judgment (Code Civ. Proc. § 882).

B. Motion for Contribution. A judgment debtor who is entitled to compel contribution may apply on noticed motion to the court that entered the judgment for an order determining liability for contribution (Code Civ. Proc. § 883).

C. Proportionate Liability. If there is no apportionment of joint liability made by the judgment itself, or dictated by the terms of an underlying instrument, the due proportion of the liability of the several judgment debtors must be calculated on a pro rata basis (Young v. Rosenthal (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 130, 260 Cal. Rptr. 369 ; see Tucker v. Nicholson (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 427, 432-434, 84 P.2d 1045 ; Woolley v. Seijo (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 615, 621-623, 36 Cal. Rptr. 762).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a nontort joint judgment debtor's motion for contribution from other judgment debtors [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883]. The motion may be made at any time before the judgment is satisfied in full or within 30 days thereafter [Code Civ. Proc. § 883(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the moving party is one of several debtors under a money judgment; (2) the judgment is for an obligation based on grounds other than tort; and (3) the moving party has satisfied or is about to satisfy the judgment in full or in an amount that exceeds the debtor's proportionate share.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In appropriate cases, the points and authorities in §§ 115.112 -115.114 may be adapted for use to oppose the motion supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Proportionate Liability

Young v. Rosenthal (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 260 Cal. Rptr. 369 , involved two orders for sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 against a client and his counsel for bad-faith litigation tactics. The first order was against the client and the particular attorney who represented him at a hearing. The second order was against the client, the law partnership that was his counsel of record, and the three named partners of the partnership. The attorneys paid the sanctions and then moved for contribution from the client under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882 and 883. The motion was denied.

The court of appeal reversed. It first held that Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882 and 883 applied not only to final judgments, but also to final orders on collateral matters directing the payment of money. Because an award of sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 was such an order, contribution was available (212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 129) .

The court then noted that the Law Revision Commission Comment to the 1982 addition to Code Civ. Proc. § 882 stated that the statute does not determine the proportionate shares of the obligations on the judgment. Each joint judgment debtor's share depends on the circumstances of the case. The court construed the comment to support its view that if no apportionment of joint liability is made in the judgment or order itself, or is dictated by the terms of some underlying agreement, such as a partnership agreement, the due proportion of the liability of the several judgment debtors must be calculated on a pro rata basis (212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 129-130) [cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a) (pro rata share of joint tortfeasors is determined by dividing entire judgment equally among all who are liable)].

With regard to the order against the client and the single attorney, the attorney was entitled to contribution for one-half of the amount of the sanctions ordered. With regard to the other order, it was unclear whether the trial court intended that all of the lawyers should constitute one entity and the client the other, or whether it intended that each named individual partner be considered separately as a different debtor. The court remanded for a clarification of the trial court's intent (212 Cal. App. 3d 96, 130) .

Tucker v. Nicholson (1938) 12 Cal. 2d 427, 84 P.2d 1045 , was an action brought by three plaintiffs who had paid a deficiency judgment that had been entered against them, the defendant, and five other persons following a mortgage foreclosure sale. Following payment of the judgment, the judgment creditor assigned the judgment to plaintiffs' nominee. Plaintiffs then filed a notice of payment and claim to contribution from defendant under former Code Civ. Proc. § 709 [now see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882, 883]. The trial court entered judgment against defendant for one-fourth of the deficiency judgment.

The court of appeal reversed on the ground that the judgment required the defendant to pay too large a portion. The land that was sold in the foreclosure sale was bought by 10 persons. Two of them were interested in the purchase to the extent of a two-twelfths interest each, while the other eight, including the defendant, were interested to the extent of a one-twelfth interest each. The court stated that the liability, as among themselves, of co-makers of a note given for the purchase of land is presumptively proportionate to their interest in the land. If liability is to be apportioned among all ten purchasers, the defendant's share would be one-twelfth. If contribution cannot be obtained from any joint debtor because of insolvency, that debtor's share is to be borne proportionately by the solvent obligors (12 Cal. 2d 427, 432-434) .

Woolley v. Seijo (1964) 224 Cal. App. 2d 615, 36 Cal. Rptr. 762 , was an appeal by the executrix of an estate from a judgment of the trial court in an action brought against the executrix to obtain the estate's share of an admiralty judgment that had been previously entered against the deceased and others. The original admiralty action involved deceased Seijo and 16 other persons who were joint venturers in the ownership and operation of a tuna fishing vessel. Seijo had a 10-percent interest. A mortgage on the vessel had been foreclosed and the boat sold to pay the mortgage and other intervening claims. A deficiency judgment also had been entered against the vessel owners jointly and severally for the balance of the mortgage, and another judgment was entered against them for the amount of other debts asserted by intervening creditors in the admiralty action.

Two of the joint owners then paid the entire amount of the judgment in favor of the intervening creditors and most of the judgment in favor of the mortgagee, and they arranged to have the intervenors' satisfied judgment assigned to the plaintiff as their trustee. The plaintiff then brought the present action on that judgment against the executrix for the total amount of the intervenors' judgment under the theory that this judgment approximated the decedent's proportionate share of the total venture liability discharged by the trust beneficiaries. The trial court entered judgment in favor of the plaintiff for that amount, and the executrix appealed.

The court of appeal ruled that plaintiff was entitled to recover only that portion of the intervenors' judgment that was commensurate with the deceased's percentage interest in the joint venture. The court held that if one of several joint judgment debtors pays more than his or her proportionate share of a judgment, he or she is entitled to obtain a proportionate contribution from those jointly liable with him or her. Because the suit against the executrix was not based on the entire debt discharged by the beneficiaries, but was brought on the intervenors' judgment only, the estate was liable only for its proportionate share of the intervenors' judgment. Seijo had a 10-percent interest in the vessel, and his estate was liable, therefore, for only 10 percent of the intervenors' judgment (224 Cal. App. 2d 615, 621-623) .

NOTE:

The moving party must allege facts that show what the proportion of the indebtedness is as among the joint debtors. It may not be assumed that a pro rata apportionment is appropriate [Stowers v. Fletcher (1948) 84 Cal. App. 2d Supp. 845, 848 , 190 P.2d 338] .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.112

§ 115.112 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--No Showing of Payment on Underlying Joint or Joint and Several Obligation in Excess of Proportionate Share

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party seeking contribution, e.g., PLAINTIFF] IS NOT ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION BECAUSE IT HAS NOT PAID MORE THAN ITS PROPORTIONATE SHARE OF THE UNDERLYING OBLIGATION.

[EITHER]

No Payment. An obligor who has paid nothing on an obligation cannot recover contribution from co-obligors for their proportionate share of the debt (Hosking v. Spartan Props., Inc. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 152, 157, 79 Cal. Rptr. 893).

[OR]

Payment of No More Than Proportionate Share. A debtor who has not paid more than his or her proportionate share of a joint or joint and several obligation may not recover contribution from co-obligors on the obligation (Burstein v. Zelman (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3-4, 5 Cal. Rptr. 829 ; Jackson v. Lacy (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 551, 559, 100 P.2d 313).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a claim for contribution, on the ground that the party seeking contribution has not paid the underlying obligation. The first alternative alleges that the party seeking contribution has made no payment at all on the underlying contribution. The second alternative alleges that the payments made by the party do not exceed that party's proportionate share.

In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.110. The second alternative may also be submitted in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities in § 115.111. The first alternative would not apply to a motion for post-judgment contribution under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 882 and 883, because the motion may be brought before the judgment is satisfied [Code Civ. Proc. § 883(a)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if contribution rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party seeking contribution is one of a number of joint or joint and several obligors under an obligation; (2) the obligation arises other than in tort; and (3) either the party seeking contribution has not paid the obligation or payments on the obligation made by the party do not exceed that party's proportionate share of the obligation. For consideration of the amount of an obligor's proportionate share, see § 115.111[3][a].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Payment

Hosking v. Spartan Props., Inc. (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 152, 79 Cal. Rptr. 893 , was an appeal from an order of the trial court granting a motion to strike a cross complaint. An action was brought on a promissory note against the maker of the note and the guarantors, including appellant. Appellant filed an answer and cross complained for contribution against the other parties who demurred to the cross complaint and moved to have it struck. The trial court granted the motion to strike.

In affirming, the court of appeal stated that the law in California is well settled that an obligor who has paid nothing on an obligation cannot recover from co-obligors for their proportionate share of a debt, citing Civ. Code § 1432. It ruled that because appellant had not alleged his payment of the note and his counsel had admitted that appellant had not yet paid the note, appellant had no right to reimbursement from his co-obligors and had not stated a cause of action for contribution (275 Cal. App. 2d 152, 157) .

NOTE:

Under current law, the defendants could have waited until judgment had been entered and then brought a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 883 for contribution at any time before the judgment was satisfied in full or within 30 days thereafter [see Code Civ. Proc. § 883(a); see also Borba Farms, Inc. v. Acheson (1988) 197 Cal. App. 3d 597, 603-606, 242 Cal. Rptr. 880] .

[b] Payment of No More Than Proportionate Share

Burstein v. Zelman (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 1, 5 Cal. Rptr. 829 was an action brought by a partner against another partner for contribution of the defendant's proportionate share of partnership losses after termination of the partnership. After the initial hearing, the court determined that the defendant had a 27-percent share of the partnership and rendered judgment against him for 27 percent of the losses. Defendant moved for a new trial. The trial judge then concluded that the plaintiff's right of contribution rested on actual payment made in excess of his share. Because there was no evidence in the record to sustain a finding that the plaintiff had paid partnership losses in excess of his share (50 percent), the court vacated the judgment previously made and reopened the case for introduction of additional evidence solely on that point. The court then found that the plaintiff had not paid more than his share and denied contribution. The court of appeal affirmed, stating that the trial judge's conclusion that a right of contribution rests on actual payment in excess of one's share, was correct, citing Civ. Code § 1432 (182 Cal. App. 2d 1, 3-4) .

Jackson v. Lacy (1940) 37 Cal. App. 2d 551, 100 P.2d 313 , was an appeal from a judgment of the trial court after it had sustained a demurrer to an amended and supplemental complaint and dismissed the action. In the complaint, which was based on a series of complicated transactions, plaintiff sought to establish a claim for contribution against an executrix on a note executed to a bank by a corporation on which the executrix's testator was a co-guarantor with plaintiff. Plaintiff's claim to contribution was based on allocation of the proceeds of a foreclosure sale of real property under a mortgage that secured several obligations, including the note in question. The foreclosure sale brought less money than was involved in all the obligations.

The court of appeal stated that it is elementary that a party acquires a right of contribution as soon as he or she pays more than his or her share, but not until then, citing Civ. Code § 1432. The court found that because there was no allegation in the complaint that a particular method of allocation of the proceeds of the sale satisfied the particular debt on which the executrix's testator was also obligated, and the judgment on that obligation remained unsatisfied, plaintiff had not paid more than his proportionate share of the debt, and no right of contribution could possibly arise on the basis of the obligation (37 Cal. App. 2d 551, 559-560) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.113

§ 115.113 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Obligation Is Several Only and Not Joint

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party seeking contribution, e.g., PLAINTIFF] IS NOT ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION BECAUSE THE UNDERLYING OBLIGATION WAS SEVERAL AND NOT JOINT OR JOINT AND SEVERAL.

A. No Right to Contribution on Several Obligation. If the obligation of co-obligors is several and not joint or joint and several, there is no right of contribution among them (Garcia v. Superior Court (1941) 45 Cal. App. 2d 31, 35, 113 P.2d 470 ; see Weinberg Co. v. Heller (1925) 73 Cal. App 769, 779, 239 P. 358).

B. Several Obligation. If two or more parties to a contract promise separate performances, to be rendered respectively by each of them, or if each of them makes only a separate promise that the performance will be rendered, each is severally bound only and is not bound jointly with any others (Douglas v. Bergere (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 267, 270, 210 P.2d 727 ; see George Herz & Co. v. Solt (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180, 72 P.2d 251).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a claim for contribution on the ground that the underlying obligation on which contribution is sought is not a joint or joint and several obligation of the parties. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.110. They may also be adapted for use in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities in § 115.111.

Paragraph A sets forth the basic premise that there is no right of contribution among obligors who are severally liable only. Paragraph B then sets forth the common contractual basis for liability that is several only, that the promisors have agreed to be bound only for a severable part of the performance of the agreement.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if contribution rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties are or may be both liable to the same person under an obligation; (2) the obligation arises other than in tort; and (3) under the express terms of the contract or according to the intent of the parties to be implied from the circumstances, the parties are not jointly liable for the entire obligation, but are each only severally liable for a divisible share of the obligation.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Right to Contribution on Several Obligation

Garcia v. Superior Court (1941) 45 Cal. App. 2d 31, 113 P.2d 470 , was a proceeding in mandate brought to compel the superior court to permit the filing of a cross complaint. A county filed suit against petitioner to obtain reimbursement for welfare payments made and to be made to petitioner's mother, an aged widow without means of support. Petitioner sought leave to file a cross complaint against his three sisters, but leave was denied. Petitioner then brought this proceeding.

The court of appeal stated that the right to cross complain depended on whether the obligation of adult children to support parents was joint or several. If it is several, there could be no contribution from one to the other; if it is joint, one who satisfies more than his or her share might claim contribution from the other, citing Civ. Code § 1432. Further, if different persons are severally, but not jointly obligated, the obligee may sue one or more of them at his or her discretion. The court then held that the obligation to support a parent was a several obligation resting on each child, and that a child named as a defendant in a reimbursement suit by the county had no right to force the trial judge to bring other children into the action as defendants to a cross complaint because the obligations of the children are to their parent and to the county and not to each other (45 Cal. App. 2d 31, 35-36) .

George Herz & Co. v. Solt (1937) 23 Cal. App. 2d 178, 72 P.2d 251 , was an appeal from a judgment of the trial court in an action brought by plaintiff to recover money alleged to be due for street improvements. Plaintiff's assignor had done the work on the basis of a contract signed by defendants as directors of the Fifth Street Improvement Association. Defendants and other residents of the area supported the project by signing subscription lists on which they agreed to pay the amount listed opposite their names. The court of appeal found that these lists created several obligations among the signers and did not create a joint liability (23 Cal. App. 2d 178, 180) .

[b] Several Obligation

Douglas v. Bergere (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 267, 210 P.2d 727 , was an appeal from a judgment of the trial court in an action for damages for the alleged breach of an oral contract to deliver shares of stock. Pursuant to a preorganization agreement between plaintiff Douglas, defendants Bergere and Andrews, and one Stratton, common shares of stock of a corporation were issued to defendants Bergere and Andrews. Later, when the corporation needed additional funds, Douglas and Stratton made an oral contract with Bergere and Andrews whereby Douglas and Stratton agreed to assist in raising additional funds, and Bergere and Andrews each agreed to transfer half of their stock to them. The money was raised, and Bergere transferred the required shares to Stratten, but Douglas did not receive his full share of the stock because Andrews and his limited partner were adjudicated bankrupt. Douglas then brought this action for damages directed at Bergere. The trial court found that the contract created only a several obligation and that Bergere had performed all of his obligations under the contract, and entered judgment for defendants.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first noted that under Civ. Code § 1430, an obligation imposed on several persons may be joint, several, or joint and several. It then noted the presumption of Civ. Code § 1659, that if all the parties who unite in a promise receive some benefit from the consideration, whether past or present, the promise is presumed to be joint and several. However, it further noted that the presumption was rebuttable and may be controverted by evidence to the contrary.

The court then set forth the definition of a several obligation from the Restatement of Contracts § 113: "Where two or more parties to a contract promise separate performances, to be rendered respectively by each of them, or where each of them makes only a separate promise that the same performance shall be rendered, each is severally bound for the performance [that he or she] promises and is not bound jointly with any of the others." In determining whether promises are several or joint and several and uncertainty arises concerning the meaning of a contract, the language used by the parties is to be considered in the light of the surrounding circumstances as shown by their acts and conduct before any controversy has arisen between them (94 Cal. App. 2d 267, 269-270) .

The court then ruled that the evidence was sufficient to rebut the statutory presumption and support the trial court's finding that the contract was several and not joint and several. The evidence supported the conclusion that Bergere and Andrews each promised a separate performance to be rendered respectively by each of them, that is, each was to transfer half of his shares of stock and no more. Failure of Andrews to perform could not enlarge the liability incurred by Bergere. Because Bergere performed his part of the contract, he had no further liability on account of Andrews' bankruptcy (94 Cal. App. 2d 267, 270-271) .

Weinberg Co. v. Heller (1925) 73 Cal. App. 769, 239 P. 358 , was an appeal by defendant from a judgment for plaintiff in an action brought to recover, pursuant to a written agreement between plaintiff and defendant, seven-fifteenths of the costs and expenses incurred in the appeal of a suit plaintiff had brought previously against a third party. The court of appeal found that plaintiff and defendant had contracted concerning the payment of suit costs in actions filed by either of them and that defendant had expressly agreed to pay seven-fifteenths of all costs of suit, including appeal costs (73 Cal. App. 769, 775) . In reply to defendant's contention that plaintiff should have brought an action for contribution rather than the present action, the court stated that a suit for contribution would not have been appropriate because plaintiff's right of action was founded on express contract and not on contribution. Although plaintiff and defendant both had causes of action against the third party, the suit brought by the plaintiff against that party was brought in its name only and was not a joint action with a joint interest. Because the present suit was based not on a joint obligation but rather on the several obligation of the defendant for a specific portion of a debt, there was no action for contribution (73 Cal. App. 769, 777-779) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.114

§ 115.114 Opposing Contention That Nontort Obligor Is Entitled to Contribution [Civ. Code § 1432]--Party From Whom Contribution Is Sought Has Paid Proportionate Share of Joint Obligation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party seeking contribution, e.g., PLAINTIFF] IS NOT ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION BECAUSE _____ [e.g., DEFENDANT] HAS ALREADY PAID ITS PROPORTIONATE SHARE OF THE OBLIGATION.

Payment of Proportionate Share. A defendant who has paid his or her proportionate share of an obligation is absolved from further liability to a joint obligor for contribution (Wray v. Chatterson (1929) 101 Cal. App. 291, 294, 281 P. 628).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a claim for contribution, on the ground that the party from whom contribution is sought has already paid an amount equal to his or her proportionate share of the obligation. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.110. They may also be adapted for use in opposition to the motion supported by the points and authorities in § 115.111.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if contribution rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party seeking contribution is one of a number of joint or joint and several obligors under an obligation; (2) the obligation arises other than in tort; and (3) the party from whom contribution is sought has made a payment on the obligation in an amount that equals or exceeds the party's proportionate share of the obligation. For consideration of the amount of an obligor's proportionate share, see § 115.111[3][a].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Payment of Proportionate Share

Wray v. Chatterson (1929) 101 Cal. App. 291, 281 P. 628 , was an appeal from a judgment of the trial court awarding plaintiffs contribution for defendant's share of a liability claimed under a joint and several obligation entered into by plaintiffs and defendant under a contract. Plaintiffs and defendant were engaged in subdividing and developing certain tracts of land. In order to secure certain street extensions, they entered into a contract with the owners of land needed for the extension. Plaintiffs and Defendant jointly and severally agreed to purchase the land for $2,500 and to complete the extension project. The land was purchased for the amount stated, and the project was completed at an additional cost of $1792.60. The only controversy in the case involved the liability for apportionment of the payments between plaintiffs and defendant. The parties disagreed over whether there was a verbal agreement under which the defendant was to assume half of the obligations under the contract. The trial court found such a verbal agreement and entered judgment for plaintiffs for contribution to achieve a 50-50 division of the $1792.60. The cost of acquiring the land, which had been borne entirely by defendant, was ignored in the court's findings.

The court of appeal reversed without deciding the issue of the verbal agreement. The court assumed, arguendo, that there was such an agreement. However, the parties' obligations under the contract involved both the cost of the land acquisition and the additional costs, a total of $4,292.60. In that defendant had paid the $2,500 for the land, its payment exceeded 50 percent of the total. Therefore, its payments exceeded its proportionate share even under the plaintiffs' alleged verbal agreement, and there was no entitlement to contribution (101 Cal. App. 291, 294-295) .

179 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
1. Contribution Among Nontort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.115- 115.129

[Reserved]

§§ 115.115[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
2. Contribution Among Tort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.130

§ 115.130 Supporting Motion for Contribution [Code Civ. Proc. § 878]--Tort Judgment Debtor Is Entitled to Contribution From Cotortfeasor Judgment Debtors According to Comparative-Fault Principles

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR CONTRIBUTION
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 878]
_____ [name],	)	Date: _____
Defendant.	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

DEFENDANT _____ [name of moving party] IS ONE OF _____ [TWO or more] JUDGMENT DEBTORS IN THIS TORT ACTION AND HAS PAID _____ [THE ENTIRE JUDGMENT or MORE THAN HIS/HER COMPARATIVE SHARE OF THE JUDGMENT] RENDERED FOR PLAINTIFF AND IS ENTITLED TO CONTRIBUTION FROM THE OTHER JUDGMENT DEBTOR(S) IN ORDER TO APPORTION LIABILITY AMONG THEM ACCORDING TO THEIR COMPARATIVE FAULT.

A. Statutory Authority for Contribution Among Joint Tortfeasors. If a money judgment has been rendered jointly against two or more defendants in a tort action, there is a right of contribution among them, and the right of contribution may be enforced after one tortfeasor has, by payment, discharged the joint judgment or has paid more than his or her share of it (Code Civ. Proc. § 875(a), (c)).

B. Statutory Procedure for Enforcing Contribution. Judgment for contribution may be entered by one tortfeasor judgment debtor against other tortfeasor judgment debtors by motion on notice (Code Civ. Proc. § 878).

C. Principles of Comparative Fault Apply to Contribution. A joint tortfeasor debtor who has paid more than the percentage of the judgment that corresponds to his or her percentage of comparative fault may recover the difference from cotortfeasor judgment debtors pursuant to a motion for contribution (Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 325-328, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion by a tortfeasor judgment debtor for contribution from a cotortfeasor judgment debtor if, by the use of special verdicts or jury interrogatories, the jury has allocated responsibility among defendants on a percentage basis and the moving defendant has paid the entire judgment or more than his or her comparative share [see Code Civ. Proc. § 878; Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 328, 334, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441] .

Counsel should insert argument in the forgoing form to show the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Discussion should set forth the apportionment of fault by the finder of fact among all joint tortfeasors found liable to the plaintiff in their percentage shares. It should also disclose all payments that have been made, including whether any of the judgment debtors from whom contribution is sought have paid any part of the judgment.

[b] Motion for Contribution or Action for Comparative Indemnity

The use of a motion for contribution to obtain apportionment of liability according to principles of comparative fault and equitable indemnity as set down in American Motorcycle Association [American Motorcycle Assn v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899] has been accepted by the California Supreme Court and several courts of appeals under the theory that with the advent of comparative negligence, contribution for tort judgments and equitable indemnity have merged as indistinguishable remedies [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 325-328, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 ; Ambriz v. Kress (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 963, 969-970, 196 Cal. Rptr. 417 ; Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 91-93, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531] . These courts have essentially ignored the statutory rule of contribution that states that a joint tortfeasor's pro rata share of a judgment is determined by dividing the entire judgment equally among all tortfeasors [Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a)], because the contribution statutes predate comparative negligence [see Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 92, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531] . However, one court refused to ignore this rule and denied contribution to a defendant whose payment did not exceed its pro rata share under an equal division, although it did exceed its percentage share under comparative fault [see Lamberton v. Rhodes-Jamieson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 748, 750-755, 245 Cal. Rptr. 162] . Another court has held that statutory contribution claims are barred only if a right to indemnity has been established [Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1379, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673] . For this reason, it is usually more advisable for a judgment debtor to proceed by cross complaint or independent action for comparative indemnity rather than by way of a motion for contribution in order to seek apportionment of liability according to principles of comparative fault.

[c] Service of Notice of Motion and Supporting Papers

Notice of the motion for contribution must be given to all parties in the action, including the plaintiff or plaintiffs, at least ten days before the hearing. The notice must be accompanied by an affidavit (or declaration under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) setting forth any information that the moving party may have as to the assets of defendants available for satisfaction of the judgment or claim for contribution [Code Civ. Proc. § 878].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Principles of Comparative Fault Applicable to Contribution

The facts and principal holding of Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 , are discussed in § 115.65[3][a]. The jury apportioned liability for plaintiff's injuries 80 percent to Safeway and 20 percent to Nest-Kart, and each defendant satisfied its percentage share of the judgment. Thereafter, Safeway moved in the trial court under Code Civ. Proc. § 878 for a judgment of contribution to require Nest-Kart to pay an additional 30 percent of the judgment to Safeway so as to achieve an equal 50-50 apportionment between the two tortfeasors. The trial court, while indicating that common sense called for an apportionment of the judgment on a comparative-fault basis, concluded that such an apportionment was not permissible in light of Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a), which requires apportionment of liability under contribution in equal shares (21 Cal. 3d 322, 325-327) .

The California Supreme Court, apparently on direct appeal, reversed the judgment of contribution, restoring the apportionment of liability according to each defendant's comparative percentage of fault. In so holding, the court stated that California's contribution statutes should not be interpreted to preclude the evolution of a common-law doctrine of comparative indemnity. The existing contribution statutes do not, in themselves, necessarily prohibit apportionment of liability among multiple tortfeasors on a comparative fault basis. Thus, even under a motion for a judgment of contribution, the proper allocation of liability is according to comparative fault and not in equal shares. The Court essentially read the equal-share requirement of Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a) out of the law (21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-328) .

NOTE:

Three court of appeal cases [Ambriz v. Kress (1983) 148 Cal. App. 3d 963, 969-970, 196 Cal. Rptr. 417 ; Lyly & Sons Trucking Co. v. State of California (1983) 147 Cal. App. 3d 353, 358-359, 195 Cal. Rptr. 116 ; Paradise Valley Hosp. v. Schlossman (1983) 143 Cal. App. 3d 87, 93, 191 Cal. Rptr. 531 ; see § 115.64] all followed the approach of Safeway v. Nest-Kart and found no distinction between comparative indemnity and contribution among joint tortfeasors after American Motorcycle. However, two court of appeal cases have essentially refused to follow Safeway v. Nest-Kart and instead, under unusual fact situations, applied Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a) to apportion liability on a pro rata basis.

In the first of these two cases, the jury found the plaintiff's employer, who was not a party in the case, to be 40 percent at fault for plaintiff's injuries. Two other defendants were found to be each 25 percent responsible, and a third defendant was found to be 10 percent responsible. To avoid an appeal, the plaintiff offered to settle with each of the three defendants for an amount representing a 14-percent reduction of the dollar amount that corresponded to each defendant's percentage share of liability. The two 25-percent liable defendants accepted, but the 10-percent liable defendant rejected the offer and pursued its appeal. Almost two years later, this defendant abandoned its appeal and settled by paying more than $40,000 in excess of its original 10 percent of the judgment. It then brought a motion for contribution against the other two defendants. The trial court denied the motion without comment [Lamberton v. Rhodes-Jamieson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 748, 245 Cal. Rptr. 162] .

The court of appeal affirmed. Although the parties did not raise the issue, the court applied the pro rata share rule to deny contribution. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a), each defendant's pro rata share for contribution purposes was one-third. Because the amount actually paid by the 10-percent liable defendant did not exceed one-third, there was no right to contribution. In so holding, the court noted Safeway v. Nest-Kart and its contrary result. The court stated, "Safeway does not undertake to rewrite the pro rata statute, but instead manifests a continuing resolve by the Supreme Court to ignore it. Safeway affirms the court's equitable power to refrain from applying the contribution statutes where payment has been made in accordance with comparative responsibility." The court did not explain further any distinctions between the two cases. In the opinion of the court, the language of the pro rata statute was unambiguous and could only be changed by the legislature [Lamberton v. Rhodes-Jamieson (1988) 199 Cal. App. 3d 748, 750-755, 245 Cal. Rptr. 162] .

In the second of these two cases, a motorcyclist was injured when struck by a car on a street next to a Lucky supermarket. The cyclist's view had been obstructed by a Coca-Cola delivery truck parked in a red zone. A Lucky employee had instructed the truck driver to park the truck on the street. Coca-Cola cross complained for equitable indemnity against Lucky in the cyclist's action against Lucky and Coca-Cola. The trial court granted Lucky summary judgment and dismissed the cross complaint on the ground that the illegal parking of the truck was an act for which Lucky bore no responsibility. After trial, a jury returned a verdict against both Coca-Cola and Lucky. It made no apportionment of fault. Coca-Cola paid the entire judgment and then brought an action for contribution against Lucky [Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673] .

The court of appeal held that Coca-Cola was entitled to contribution. The adverse determination on Coca-Cola's right to partial equitable indemnification did not bar the claim for contribution, which was an entirely different right that did not come into existence until the judgment was entered. The court stated that while the doctrine of contribution has been made subordinate to the right of indemnity, it is still available when a defendant who unsuccessfully sought indemnification meets the requirements for contribution set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 875 Coca-Cola Bottling Co. v. Lucky Stores, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1372, 1378-1379, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 673] .

181 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
C. Contribution
2. Contribution Among Tort Obligors

11-115 California Points & Authorities §§ 115.131-115.149

[Reserved]

§§ 115.131[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.150

§ 115.150 Supporting Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)] Bars Claim for Comparative Indemnity or Contribution

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., CROSS COMPLAINANT] IS BARRED FROM SEEKING _____ [COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] FROM _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] BECAUSE _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] HAS ENTERED INTO A SETTLEMENT THAT HAS BEEN JUDICIALLY DETERMINED TO HAVE BEEN IN GOOD FAITH UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 877.6(c).

[EITHER]

A. Effect of Good-Faith Settlement on Comparative Indemnity. A release, dismissal with or without prejudice, or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce a judgment that is given in good faith before verdict or judgment to one or more of a number of tortfeasors claimed to be liable for the same tort discharges the party to whom it is given from all liability for any comparative indemnity to any other party (Code Civ. Proc. § 877(b); see American Motorcycle Assn v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 603-604, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899).

[OR]

A. Effect of Good-Faith Settlement on Contribution. A release, dismissal with or without prejudice, or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce a judgment that is given in good faith before verdict or judgment to one or more co-obligors mutually subject to contribution rights discharges the party to whom it is given from all liability for any contribution to any other party (Code Civ. Proc. § 877(b)).

[CONTINUE]

B. Determination of Good-Faith Settlement. Any party to an action in which it is alleged that two or more parties are joint tortfeasors or co-obligors on a contract debt may seek a judicial determination that a settlement was made in good faith; such a determination bars any other joint tortfeasor or co-obligor from any further claims against the settling tortfeasor for equitable comparative contribution, or partial or comparative indemnity, based on comparative negli gence or comparative fault (Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a), (c)).

[Optional] C. "Joint Tortfeasors" Defined. The term "joint tortfeasors," as used in Section 877.6(c) of the Code of Civil Procedure, means joint, concurrent, and successive tortfeasors (Standard Pac. of San Diego v. A.A. Baxter Corp. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 577, 589-592, 222 Cal. Rptr. 106 ; Turcon Constr., Inc. v. Norton-Villiers, Ltd. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 280, 282-283, 188 Cal. Rptr. 580).

[Optional] D. Claims Barred If Essentially Indemnification Claims. A claim pleaded as something other than as a claim for indemnification, such as a claim for negligence, is barred by a good faith settlement if the claim is essentially a claim for indemnification (Ratcliff Architects v. Vanir Constr. Mgmt., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 595, 607, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1).

[Optional] E. Insurer May Be Precluded From Seeking Equitable Indemnity. An insurer that settles a claim asserted against its insured stemming from allegedly actionable conduct by the insured may not pursue equitable indemnity from other tortfeasors in the action who also settle in good faith with the plaintiff (Mid-Century Ins. Exch. v. Daimler-Chrysler Corp. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 310, 315-316, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880).

[Optional] F. Good Faith of Out-of-State Settlements May Be Determined. If an indemnity action is brought in California following settlement of an underlying tort action brought in another state, a good-faith determination of the out-of-state settlement may be made in the California indemnity action pursuant to Code of Civil Procedure Sections 877 and 877.6 (Nutrition Now, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 209, 213, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 266).

[Optional] G. No Requirement That Tortfeasors Be Defendants in Single Action. There is no requirement that there must have been a single lawsuit in which the joint tortfeasors were sued by the injured party for Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to apply (Bob Parrett Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that a claim for comparative indemnity among tortfeasors or a claim for contribution among nontort obligors is barred because the party from whom indemnity or contribution is sought has entered into a good-faith settlement with the tort victim or contract obligee. These points and authorities are not for use with regard to express contractual indemnity [see § 115.153]. Optional Paragraph D should be used if a claim pleaded as something other than an indemnification claim is essentially a barred claim for indemnification.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court. Commonly, a motion for summary judgment on a cause of action for comparative indemnity or contribution is brought contemporaneously with or immediately following a hearing determining the good faith of a settlement [City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1266, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119 ; Shane v. Superior Court (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1237, 1245, 207 Cal. Rptr. 210] . They may be also used in a memorandum in connection with any other kind of pretrial motion alleging that indemnity or contribution rights are foreclosed as a matter of law by a good-faith settlement. It may also be used in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party using the form was one of multiple parties alleged to be liable, either in tort or on a nontort obligation, to a third party; (2) the party using the form is also a cross defendant or defendant in an action for implied indemnity or contribution with regard to the occurrence giving rise to the liability; (3) the party using the form entered into a settlement with the third party; and (4) the settlement was judicially confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 [see §§ 115.156 -115.162].

[b] Applicability of Form to Contribution

Code Civ. Proc. § 877 discharges liability for contribution among co-obligors mutually subject to contribution rights [Code Civ. Proc. § 877(a), (b)]. However, it does not apply to co-obligors who have expressly agreed in writing to an apportionment of liability for losses or claims among themselves [Code Civ. Proc. § 877(c)]; or to a co-obligor on an alleged contract debt if the contract was made prior to January 1, 1988 [Code Civ. Proc. § 877(d)].

As originally enacted, Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 applied only to settlements by joint tortfeasors. As amended in 1987, it now also applies to settlements by co-obligors on a contract debt [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a)]. This statute bars claims for "equitable comparative contribution" against a co-obligor who has settled in good faith [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c)]. The adjectives "equitable" and "comparative" are generally used to describe rights of implied indemnity among tortfeasors; they have not appeared in the law of contribution among nontort obligors [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 881-883]. Nevertheless, reading Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6 together, it seems clear that a judicially confirmed good-faith settlement bars a claim for contribution from a co-obligor on a nontort obligation, except as limited by Code Civ. Proc. § 877(c) and (d).

[c] Good-Faith Settlements and Proposition 51

There is a good-faith issue with regard to apportionment of a settlement between economic and noneconomic damages under the Fair Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51) [see Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5]. Under the Act, the settling party's indemnity rights against other defendants are limited to the part of a settlement allocated to economic damages, because defendants are not jointly liable for noneconomic damages [Union Pac. Corp. v. Wengert (2000) 79 Cal. App. 4th 1444, 1447-1449 , 95 Cal. Rptr. 2d 68 ; see Civ. Code § 1431.2(a); Munoz v. Davis (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 420, 425, 190 Cal. Rptr. 400 (indemnity requires joint and several liability); see also §§ 115.66[2][b], 115.69]. A settlement that is unreasonably apportioned to economic damages may preserve the settling party's indemnity rights to the inequitable detriment of the nonsettling defendants. Thus, the question arises whether a good-faith determination has any effect on the settling defendant's indemnity rights arising from the apportionment.

There is no statutory authority, either in Proposition 51 or in Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 for consideration of the settling parties' apportionment between economic and noneconomic damages as an element of the good-faith determination. Further, it is not clear that an apportionment made by the settling parties would be controlling, even if made in good faith. An alternate apportionment method is simply to apportion the settlement in the same ratio as that found by the trier of fact after trial. Nevertheless, it could be argued that a settlement that has been apportioned by the parties between economic and noneconomic damages in a manner that distorts the facts is not in good faith and should not be confirmed.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Effect of Good-Faith Settlement

American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578

P.2d 899 , is discussed in § 115.60[3][a]. In fashioning the doctrine of comparative partial indemnity, the California Supreme Court was faced with the question of whether California's contribution statutes [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 875-880], which provided for contribution among tortfeasors on a pro rata (equal) rather than a comparative basis [see Code Civ. Proc. § 876(a)], foreclosed judicially created comparative indemnity. The court concluded that in enacting the 1957 contribution statutes, the legislature did not intend to prevent the judiciary from expanding the common law equitable indemnity doctrine. With regard to Code Civ. Proc. § 877, which provides that a good-faith settlement discharges the settling party from all liability for contribution to any other parties, the court stated that the principle of the statute should be preserved as an integral part of the partial indemnity doctrine. The Court recognized that the statute, by its terms, releases a settling tortfeasor only from liability for contribution and not for partial comparative indemnity. However, it concluded that, from a realistic perspective, the legislative policy underlying the provision dictated that a tortfeasor who has entered into a good-faith settlement with the tort victim must also be discharged from any claim for partial or comparative indemnity that might be pressed by a concurrent tortfeasor (20 Cal. 3d 578, 599-604) .

NOTE:

The effect of American Motorcycle and cases following it has been to effectively limit pro rata contribution to obligations arising other than in tort [see Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Nest-Kart (1978) 21 Cal. 3d 322, 327-332, 146 Cal. Rptr. 550, 579 P.2d 441 ; see also § 115.130] .

[b] "Joint Tortfeasors" Defined

In Standard Pac. of San Diego v. A.A. Baxter Corp. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 577, 222 Cal. Rptr. 106 , plaintiffs were homeowners whose homes were damaged by soil subsidence. Defendant builder originally owned the undeveloped land underlying plaintiffs' homes and contracted with defendant consultants to perform soil testing and engineering and with defendant contractor to perform grading to the consultant's specifications. The builder then sold some of the manufactured lots to the developers, who built single-family residences on the lots and sold them to plaintiffs. The various defendants filed cross complaints against each other for indemnity.

The consultants and contractors then entered into settlement agreements with many of the plaintiffs and sought a judicial determination that those settlements were made in good faith. The trial court approved the settlements as made in good faith and dismissed the cross complaints. The nonsettling defendant appealed on various grounds.

On appeal, the developer contended that Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 did not bar it from seeking equitable indemnification based on strict liability because it is not a tortfeasor within the meaning of the statute. The court disagreed, explaining that the historical meaning of "joint tortfeasor" has been expanded to include joint, concurrent, and successive tortfeasors, and that this broader concept is encompassed within the statute. The court cited several cases that had concluded Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6 were very broad. Indeed, Code Civ. Proc. § 877 applies to "tortfeasors claimed to be liable for the same tort." The court stated that this language was meant to eliminate the distinction between joint tortfeasors and concurrent or successive tortfeasors. Comparative fault principles apply to strict liability cases [see § 115.65], and reason and logic compel the conclusion that, equitably interpreted, the statute's broad language includes those parties whose legal responsibilities are derivative or vicarious in nature (176 Cal. App. 3d 577, 589-592) . The court reversed on other grounds.

Turcon Constr., Inc. v. Norton-Villiers, Ltd. (1983) 139 Cal. App. 3d 280, 188 Cal. Rptr. 580 , arose out of a collision between a motorcycle and an automobile. The injured cyclist sued the car owner, the driver, and the companies allegedly liable for the defective manufacture and design of the motorcycle and its gas tank. The car owner cross complained against the companies for indemnity. Plaintiff first settled with the car owner and the car driver and later with the other defendants. The latter defendants then moved to dismiss the car owner's cross complaint for indemnity on the ground it was barred by their good-faith settlement with plaintiff. The trial court granted the motion.

The car owner appealed, contending, among other things, that the term "joint tortfeasors" should be construed to mean only those who act in concert in causing an injury. As so construed, it and the company were not joint tortfeasors within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c). The court of appeal rejected this contention and affirmed the judgment of dismissal. The court said that although the car owner's contended construction was the historical definition of the term, careless usage has expanded its meaning considerably and that today "joint tortfeasor" is commonly used interchangeably with the term "concurrent tortfeasor" to denote defendants whose negligence has concurred to produce injury. The court said that under accepted principles of statutory construction it had to presume that the legislature had acted in light of the decisions directly bearing on the language at issue and that when the legislature drafted Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c) it was aware that the modern usage of the term embraced joint, concurrent, and successive tortfeasors (139 Cal. App. 3d 280, 282-283) .

[c] Claims Barred If Essentially Indemnification Claims

In Ratcliff Architects v. Vanir Constr. Mgmt., Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 595, 106 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , a school district brought suit against an architect and a construction manager for cost overruns on a school construction project. The school district settled with the construction manager, and the trial court found, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, that the settlement was made in good faith. The architect brought a cross-action against the construction manager, including claims for express contractual indemnity, breach of written contract brought by a third-party beneficiary, and negligence. The negligence claim was based on allegations that the construction manager mismanaged the school construction project, causing the architect to incur additional uncompensated costs, and that this conduct violated a duty of care owed by the construction manager to the architect. The trial court sustained a demurrer for the construction manager, and the architect appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first concluded that the contract claims failed because the contract between the school district and the construction manager did not provide the architect with the right to indemnification and because the contract expressly stated that it did not create rights in third-party beneficiaries (88 Cal. App. 4th 595, 600-604) . Addressing the negligence claim, the court recognized that courts have been hesitant to impose a duty to prevent economic harm to a third party if there is no privity of contract between the parties, unless the third party was an intended beneficiary of a contract between the defendant and another party. However, in this case, the architect was not an intended beneficiary of the contract between the school district and the construction manager (88 Cal. App. 4th 595, 605) . Therefore, the issue was whether or not a duty should be imposed under the circumstances as a matter of public policy. The court concluded that a duty should not be imposed. First noting other policy reasons for not imposing a duty under the circumstances, the court concluded that the most significant reason that the action for negligence should not be allowed was that the negligence claim was essentially a claim for indemnification. Because a claim for indemnification would be barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, allowing the architect to pursue the negligence claim would enable the architect to avoid the consequences of the good faith settlement and subvert the policy of encouraging good faith settlements (88 Cal. App. 4th 595, 607) .

[d] Insurer May Be Precluded From Seeking Equitable Indemnity

In Mid-Century Ins. Exch. v. Daimler-Chrysler Corp. (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 310, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 , an automobile insurer paid its policy limits to an individual injured when the insured's car battery exploded in the individual's face. As part of the claim settlement, the insurer was given a complete release of all claims. The injured individual then brought suit against other parties, including the car manufacturer and the battery manufacturer. The insurer who paid the claim also filed suit for equitable indemnification against those two defendants, and the two actions were consolidated. After eight days of trial, the two defendants settled with the injured individual, and the settlements were determined to be in good faith. Based on these good-faith settlements, the actions were dismissed. The insurer appealed the dismissal of its indemnity claims.

The court of appeal affirmed. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, a settlement in good faith bars any other joint tortfeasor from any further claims for contribution or indemnity based on comparative fault or negligence. An insurer that provides coverage to an alleged or actual tortfeasor steps into the shoes of its insured, and therefore it is entitled to no greater rights than the insured and is subject to the same defenses that may be asserted against the insured (93 Cal. App. 4th 310, 315) . Even though the insured was not a party to the lawsuit, because the insurance claim settled before suit was brought, the insured was an alleged joint tortfeasor under the statute and would have been a named defendant absent the settlement. The issue of whether the insured was actually negligent was irrelevant to the application of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, and the insured's status as a potential tortfeasor was sufficient. Therefore, because the insured could not have recovered indemnity from the other alleged joint tortfeasors who settled in good faith, the insurer standing in the insured's shoes was also precluded from seeking indemnification (93 Cal. App. 4th 310, 315-316) . The court also noted that the insurer had the opportunity to challenge the good faith determination on the grounds that the settlement amount was insufficient, but chose not to do so (93 Cal. App. 4th 310, 316-317) .

[e] Good Faith of Out-of-State Settlements May Be Determined

In Nutrition Now, Inc. v. Superior Court (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 209 ,, a marketer of nutritional supplements was sued in Connecticut by a plaintiff seeking to recover for injuries allegedly caused by nutritional supplement capsules. The marketer settled that Connecticut action for $1.4 million and then brought an action for equitable indemnity and contribution in California against another alleged tortfeasor. That alleged tortfeasor responded by filing a cross-complaint for indemnity against the marketer, who responded in turn by filing a motion for a determination that the Connecticut settlement was made in good faith. The trial court denied the motion without reaching the merits, concluding that the settlement was "too remote."

The court of appeal ordered that a writ of mandate be issued directing the trial court to vacate its order and consider the merits of the motion for a determination of good faith. The court held that if an indemnity action is brought in California following settlement of an underlying tort action brought in another state, a good-faith determination of the out-of-state settlement may be made in the California indemnity action pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6. The court concluded that the place of settlement was irrelevant to the good-faith determination, which turns on the trial court's analysis of the amount of the settlement and whether it is within the reasonable range of the settling tortfeasor's proportionate share of comparative liability for the plaintiff's injuries. The court also noted that generalized valuation criteria recognized by the California personal injury bar, insurance claims departments, and trial courts are presumably the same or similar in other states, and that a California trial court is free to consider a declaration from an expert familiar with the evaluation process in the state where the settlement was made (105 Cal. App. 4th 209, 213) . The court also noted that Connecticut does not have a similar statute for determining the good faith of a settlement, which eliminated the possibility of a conflict of laws issue in this case (105 Cal. App. 4th 209, 214) .

[f] No Requirement That Tortfeasors Be Defendants in Single Action

In Bob Parrett Construction, Inc. v. Superior Court (2006) 140 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 45 Cal. Rptr. 3d 250 , the employees of two corporations were convicted of defrauding the United States government. Although no charges were ever brought against the employing corporations, they settled with the government to avoid potential tort damages and civil fines. One of those corporations then sued the other for indemnity and damages totaling the amount of the plaintiff corporation's settlement payment. Defendant corporation moved for a determination that its settlement with the government was in good faith and barred plaintiff's claims under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 677 and 677.6. The trial court held that those statutes did not apply under the facts of the case and did not determine the merits of the motion. Defendant filed a petition for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to determine the merits of the good-faith motion. Plaintiff argued in part that the good faith settlement statutes did not apply because there was never an action in which the United States alleged that the two corporations were joint tortfeasors or joint obligors on a contract debt, but the court of appeal rejected this argument. The court noted that equitable indemnity claims do not have to be pursued in an action in which the injured party names the tortfeasors as defendants, and in fact there is no requirement that there even has to be a single action in which the joint tortfeasors were sued by the injured party (140 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1187) . So long as the fundamental requirements of the statutes are met, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 677 and 677.6 apply. Although the United States never referred to the two corporations as joint tortfeasors, the corporations separately settled with the government and obtained releases covering their civil liability stemming from their employees' joint efforts to defraud the government. Under these circumstances, the court held that the defendant corporation was entitled to a determination of the good faith of its settlement (140 Cal. App. 4th 1180, 1188) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Claims Barred if Essentially Indemnification Claims

In Gackstetter v. Frawley (2006) 135 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 38 Cal. Rptr. 3d 333 , trust beneficiaries sued a trustee in probate for dereliction of certain trust duties after the attorneys for the trust erroneously transferred certain residential property to the wrong trust and then concealed that error. That suit was settled. The trust beneficiaries also sued the attorneys directly. That suit was also settled, and a good faith determination was made under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The trustee then sued the attorneys for various torts related to the services provided by the attorneys for the trust. All of the claims brought by the trustee against the attorneys alleged essentially that one of the attorneys conveyed the residential property to the wrong trust, that the attorney failed to disclose the error, that the attorney knew or should have known that the trustee would be sued and be subject to possible civil or criminal liability for trust management under the supervision of the attorney, and that as a result of the improper conveyance, the trustee made improper expenditures. Even though few of these claims were labeled as claims for indemnity, the court of appeal held that all of these claims were barred by the attorneys' good faith settlement with the beneficiaries. Most, if not all, of the damages sought by the trustee arose from the improper conveyance of the residential property and its subsequent concealment, and that conduct was also the basis of the suits brought by the beneficiaries (135 Cal. App. 4th 1257, 1274-1279) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.151

§ 115.151 Supporting Contention That Good Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c)] Bars Claim for Total Comparative Indemnity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS BARRED FROM SEEKING TOTAL IMPLIED INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR BECAUSE INDEMNITOR HAS ENTERED INTO A SETTLEMENT THAT HAS BEEN JUDICIALLY DETERMINED TO HAVE BEEN IN GOOD FAITH UNDER CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 877.6(c).

Claim for Total Indemnity. A tort defendant who has entered into a good faith settlement within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c) is absolved of any further liability for all comparative indemnity claims, including claims seeking total equitable indemnity (Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 817, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that a claim for total implied equitable indemnity is barred because the party from whom indemnity is sought has entered into a good faith settlement with the tort victim. These points and authorities are not for use with regard to a right of total indemnity that arises from an express indemnity agreement [see § 115.153].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity is brought before the court [see § 115.150[2]]. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion alleging that indemnity rights are foreclosed as a matter of law by a good-faith settlement. It may also be used in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitor is one of multiple parties alleged to be liable in tort to a third party; (2) the indemnitor is also a cross defendant or defendant in an action for implied indemnity, with regard to the occurrence giving rise to the liability, under which the indemnitee alleges a theory of indemnity that would provide for a complete shift of any loss incurred by the indemnitee to the indemnitor [see §§ 115.90 -115.95]; (3) the indemnitor entered into a settlement with the third party; and (4) the settlement was judicially confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Claim for Total Indemnity

The facts of Far W. Fin. Corp. v. D & S Co. (1988) 46 Cal. 3d 796, 251 Cal. Rptr. 202, 760 P.2d 399 are discussed in § 115.90[3][a]. The issue in the case was whether a judicially confirmed good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 barred a claim for total implied indemnity. Far West's position, as proposed indemnitee, was that it was only vicariously liable for the negligence of others. As such, a settlement entered into by the actively negligent parties should not relieve them of liability for indemnity to those who were only derivatively liable. In essence, Far West contended that the doctrine of comparative partial indemnity as enunciated in American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 , did not apply to a total shift of loss, through implied equitable indemnity, in the case of a vicariously liable defendant.

The California Supreme Court rejected this position. It concluded that the language in § 877.6 referring to "partial or comparative" indemnity claims was not intended to exclude claims for total indemnity. Rather, claims for total indemnity were viewed by the Court as one possible result at the end of the spectrum of comparative equitable indemnification, which ranges from no right to any indemnity to a right of complete indemnity (46 Cal. 3d 796, 808-809) . The Court held that a contrary result would inhibit settlement, because parties could not be sure that a good-faith settlement would end their participation in litigation if they could still be subject to cross complaints for total indemnification (46 Cal. 3d 796, 810-814) . The Court concluded that the proper forum for a party who may be entitled to total indemnity to protect its rights is at the hearing on the good faith of the settlement. At the hearing, a party that claims it is liable only vicariously or derivatively may argue that the settlement does not require the more culpable tortfeasor to bear its fair share of the loss, and if the trial court agrees and holds that the settlement was not in good faith, the equitable indemnity claim will not be barred (46 Cal. 3d 796, 815) . Although in some cases a nonsettling defendant may be required to bear slightly more than its fair share of the loss, the Court held that in order to promote the settlement of litigation, this is the price that nonsettling defendants uniformly bear (46 Cal. 3d 796, 816-817) . Therefore, the Court concluded that a tort defendant who has entered into a good-faith settlement within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c) is absolved of any further liability for all equitable indemnity claims, including claims seeking total equitable indemnity (46 Cal. 3d 796, 817) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.152

§ 115.152 Supporting Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Settlement Made After Jury in Bifurcated Trial Determines Liability but Before Jury Assesses Damages Is "Before Verdict or Judgment"

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., CROSS COMPLAINANT] IS BARRED FROM SEEKING _____ [COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] FROM _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] BECAUSE THE SETTLEMENT, FOUND BY THE COURT TO HAVE BEEN MADE IN GOOD FAITH, WAS MADE BEFORE THE JURY ASSESSED DAMAGES BASED ON ITS FINDING THAT _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] WAS LIABLE TO _____ [party, e.g., PLAINTIFF].

Settlement Made Before Jury in Bifurcated Trial Assesses Damages Based on Finding of Liability Is "Before Verdict or Judgment." A settlement made in a bifurcated trial after the jury has found the settling defendant liable, but before the jury has assessed damages, is "before verdict or judgment" under Code of Civil Procedure Sections 877 and 877.6, and bars claims for indemnity against the settling defendant (Price Pfister, Inc. v. William Lyon Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1647-1650, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 437).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that a claim for equitable comparative contribution, or partial or comparative indemnity, is barred because the party from whom indemnity is sought entered into a good-faith settlement with the tort victim. The specific contention made is that the settlement is within the terms of Code Civ. Proc. § 877, which requires that the settlement was given before verdict or judgment, because the settlement was given before the jury in a bifurcated trial assessed damages, even though it was given after the jury found that the settling tortfeasor was liable [Price Pfister, Inc. v. William Lyon Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1647-1650, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 437] . This contention can be combined with the more general contention in § 115.151.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should discuss facts tending to show that the settlement was in fact made before the jury assessed damages based on its findings regarding liability.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in § 115.154 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Made Before Jury in Bifurcated Trial Assesses Damages Based on Finding of Liability Is "Before Verdict or Judgment"

In Price Pfister, Inc. v. William Lyon Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 437 , a plaintiff was injured when the bathroom ceiling in her home collapsed on her. She brought an action for damages against the owner and developer of the housing tract and against the plumbing contractor. The complaint did not name the manufacturer of the plumbing products as a defendant, but the other defendants cross-complained against the manufacturer; the cross complaints were severed from the plaintiff's action. The trial was bifurcated, and the jury found the developer 100 percent liable. Before the damage phase was completed, both defendants settled with plaintiff; the trial court found the settlement to be in good faith, over the objection of the manufacturer. After the good-faith finding became final, the plaintiff filed an action against the manufacturer; the manufacturer cross complained against the developer and the contractor for indemnity. The trial court granted the cross defendants' motions to strike the cross complaint on the ground that the settlement in the first action barred any subsequent indemnity claim, and the manufacturer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the settlement met the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 877 because it was made before the jury had decided all issues essential to the rendering of a judgment (14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1649) . The court based this conclusion on its determination that the legislature had not considered bifurcated trials when it used the language "before verdict or judgment," but that the legislature was contemplating some kind of finality, which does not exist when a jury has determined liability but not damages in a bifurcated trial (14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1649) . The court also noted that permitting settlement at that point in a birurcated trial advanced the equitable policies encouraging settlement, and encouraging equitable allocation of costs among joint tortfeasors. However, precluding settlement would force all defendants in multiparty tort litigation to litigate to the bitter end, a result the court was unwilling to reach (14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1649) .

The court distinguished Halpin v. Superior Court (1971) 14 Cal. App. 3d 530, 543, 92 Cal. Rptr. 329 , which had construed "before verdict or liability" to mean "before establishment of liability." The court of appeal stated that the result could be rationalized on the ground that the settlement there was not in good faith, and in fact that case was decided before the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1648) . The court also distinguished Southern Cal. White Trucks v. Teresinski (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1405, 236 Cal. Rptr. 159 [see § 115.154[3][a]], on the ground that in that case, a bifurcated trial was not involved; the verdict was final, in that the jury had nothing more to decide (14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1649) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.153

§ 115.153 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6] Does Not Bar Action for Express Contractual Indemnity

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INDEMNITEE IS NOT BARRED FROM SEEKING TOTAL INDEMNITY FROM INDEMNITOR ON ACCOUNT OF A SETTLEMENT AGREED TO BY INDEMNITOR BECAUSE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 877.6(c) DOES NOT APPLY TO INDEMNITY RIGHTS ARISING FROM EXPRESS INDEMNITY AGREEMENTS.

Good-Faith Settlement Does Not Bar Right to Express Contractual Indemnity. An indemnity claim based on express contract survives a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (C. L. Peck Contractors v. Superior Court (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 828, 834, 205 Cal. Rptr. 754).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of an express indemnitee's contention that a good-faith settlement entered into by the express indemnitor does not bar the indemnity claim under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c). The points and authorities in this form may be used together with those in § 115.30, which advances the general principle that comparative fault does not apply to express indemnity agreements.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity is brought before the court [see § 115.150[2]]. It may be used in a memorandum in opposition to a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, alleging that indemnity rights are foreclosed as a matter of law by a good-faith settlement. It may also be used in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the parties entered into an agreement by which the indemnitor agreed to indemnify the indemnitee from loss incurred under certain express contractual conditions; (2) the indemnitor and indemnitee are both alleged to be liable in tort to a third party; (3) the basis of the indemnitee's liability to the third party is within the scope of the indemnity agreement; (4) the indemnitor entered into a settlement with the third party that was judicially confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Settlement Does Not Bar Right to Express Contractual Indemnity

C.L. Peck Contractors v. Superior Court (1984) 159 Cal. App. 3d 828, 205 Cal. Rptr. 754 , arose out of an action by a worker injured at a construction site against the general contractor, the property owner, and a subcontractor. The contract between the general contractor and the subcontractor contained an indemnity clause under which the subcontractor expressly agreed to indemnify the contractor and owner from and against any liability arising out of the performance of the subcontract work. Plaintiff settled his claim against the subcontractor. Pursuant to a Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 hearing, the trial court determined the settlement was made in good faith and, reasoning that all claims for indemnity, even those provided by contract, were extinguished by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c), granted the subcontractor's motion to dismiss the cross complaint against the subcontractor for express contractual indemnity. The contractor and property owner filed a petition for writ of mandate.

The court of appeal granted a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate its order granting the motion to dismiss and to enter an order denying the motion. The court of appeal held that an indemnity claim based on express contract survives a good-faith Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 settlement, that the legislature, by specifying "equitable comparative indemnity" in that statute, evidenced its intention to exclude contractual indemnity, and that Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, by its terms, has no application to contractual indemnity claims (159 Cal. App. 3d 828, 834-835) .

NOTE:

In Bay Dev. Ltd. v. Superior Court (1990) 50 Cal. 3d 1012, 1032, 269 Cal. Rptr. 720, 791 P.2d 290 , the California Supreme Court cited and agreed with the holding in Peck that indemnity rights arising under an express contractual provision are unaffected by a good-faith settlement [see § 115.91].

186 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.154

§ 115.154 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement Made After Verdict or Judgment Does Not Bar Indemnity Rights [Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6]

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., CROSS COMPLAINANT] IS NOT BARRED FROM SEEKING _____ [COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] FROM _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] ON ACCOUNT OF A SETTLEMENT AGREED TO BY _____ [e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] BECAUSE THE SETTLEMENT WAS NOT MADE BEFORE VERDICT OR JUDGMENT.

Settlement Is Required to Be Made Before Verdict or Judgment. A "settlement" under Code of Civil Procedure Section 877.6 is as defined in Code of Civil Procedure Section 877; that is, a release, dismissal with or without prejudice, or a covenant not to sue or not to enforce judgment, given in good faith before verdict or judgment (Southern Cal. White Trucks v. Teresinski (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1405, 236 Cal. Rptr. 159).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a contention that a settlement is not effective under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to bar indemnity rights because the settlement was not entered into before verdict or judgment. The form may be used by an indemnitee tortfeasor seeking comparative indemnity or by a co-obligor seeking contribution.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court [see § 115.150[2]]. It may be used in a memorandum in opposition to a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, alleging that indemnity or contribution rights are foreclosed as a matter of law by a good faith settlement. It may also be used in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party using the form was one of multiple parties alleged to be liable, either in tort or on a nontort obligation, to a third party; (2) the party using the form is also a cross complainant or plaintiff in an action for comparative indemnity or contribution with regard to the occurrence giving rise to the liability; (3) the defendant or cross defendant entered into a settlement with the third party that was judicially confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6; and (4) the settlement occurred after the jury had returned a verdict or a judgment had been entered in the underlying action.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settlement Is Required to Be Made Before Verdict or Judgment

In Southern Cal. White Trucks v. Teresinski (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 236 Cal. Rptr. 159 , plaintiff was injured in an automobile collision with a garbage truck and sued a number of defendants, including the manufacturer and retailer of the garbage truck, and the seller of the automobile. These defendants cross complained against each other for comparative indemnity. Before trial, the manufacturer obtained a summary judgment and was dismissed, and the retailer of the garbage truck settled with plaintiff.

Trial proceeded against the auto seller alone. The jury returned a special verdict against the seller on which a partial judgment was entered. Plaintiff and the seller then entered into a settlement agreement, conditioned on a stipulation that the judgment be vacated. Pursuant to that stipulation, the trial judge vacated the judgment. The seller then moved for a determination that its settlement was in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The trial judge found the settlement to be in good faith and ordered the cross complaints for indemnity dismissed.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the trial court erred in dismissing the cross complaints, because the settlement with plaintiff was entered into after the verdict and judgment (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1400) . The court analyzed Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6 in the context of both statutory framework and case law. Code Civ. Proc. § 877 clearly states it applies when a settlement or other agreement is given "before verdict or judgment." The language is clear and unambiguous, and statutory construction is not necessary (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1402-1405) .

Even though Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 does not contain the same language, the court held that Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 implements Code Civ. Proc. § 877 and does not need to redefine the type of settlement to which it applies. The court concluded that a "settlement" under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 is that which is defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 877 and must be given before verdict or judgment (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1405-1407) . The court explained that it is the establishment of liability that is the crux of the issue. Liability is established either by verdict or judgment, depending on whether trial is by jury or by the court; at that point settlement is no longer covered by Code Civ. Proc. § 877 (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1404-1405) .

The court was not persuaded by the argument that the settlement was entered into before the verdict or judgment because the judgment had been vacated prior to the settlement agreement. It found that the trial court lacked the authority to vacate the judgment; therefore, the verdict and judgment preceded the settlement agreement and Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 did not apply to bar cross complaints for partial indemnity. The court of appeal said that a trial court may set aside a judgment only on motion on statutory grounds or to correct its records; consent to vacate does not give the court power to act if that power is not otherwise provided (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1407-1408) . The court also addressed the "partial" nature of the judgment, noting that it was partial only in the sense that it did not finally determine the amount of the setoff against the damages awarded against cross defendant. The prior jury verdict was the final determination of cross defendant's liability for plaintiff's injuries (190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 1408) .

NOTE:

A subsequent court of appeal case distinguished Southern California White Trucks v. Teresinski. That case involved a bifurcated trial, and the settlement was made after the jury had found the settling defendant liable, but before the damages phase was complete, and the court of appeal in that case held that because no "final" verdict had been entered, the public policies in favor of settlements justified a rule permitting settlement between the liability and damages segments of a bifurcated trial [Price Pfister, Inc. v. William Lyon Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1643, 1647-1650, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 437 ; see § 115.152[3][a]].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Settlement Is Required to Be Made Before Verdict or Judgment

In Jhaveri v. Teitelbaum (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 740, 98 Cal. Rptr. 3d 268 , plaintiffs were judgment creditors after having received a jury verdict in their favor against multiple parties. Plaintiffs then brought a second suit against those parties and their spouses for alleged fraudulent transfers to the defendants' spouses in order to shield assets from being used to satisfy the first judgment. In this second action, plaintiffs reached a $1 million settlement with one defendant from the first action and his spouse, and the scope of the settlement included liability from the first action. Before a judicial determination of good-faith could be made, however, those defendants, having paid only $254,000 of the amount due under the settlement, filed for bankruptcy. After apportioning part of the settlement to the action against the wife, and part to the husband's liability for punitive damages awarded in the first action, the trial court ordered that plaintiffs execute a partial satisfaction of judgment in the amount of $61,000. Non-settling defendants appealed, arguing that under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6, the full $1 million settlement amount should have been offset against their joint liability from the first lawsuit. The court of appeal disagreed, finding that those statutes did not apply under the facts of the case. The court noted that under the clear statutory language, Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877 and 877.6 apply only to settlements entered into before a verdict or judgment has been reached in a case and have no application to a settlement or compromise reached after a judgment has been entered. Thus, regardless of whether the settlement was found to be in good faith, those statutes did not apply to the settlement at issue in relation to the judgment from the first lawsuit (176 Cal. App. 4th 740, 750-751) .

In Be v. Western Truck Exch. (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 527 , plaintiff was badly injured when the wheel of a truck traveling in the opposite direction on the freeway suddenly flew off and landed on the roof of the pickup truck in which he was riding. The roof collapsed, the wheel struck plaintiff's head, fracturing plaintiff's neck and leaving him paralyzed. Plaintiff sued among others, the truck's manufacturer. The manufacturer cross-complained against leasing company for indemnity. The manufacturer settled with plaintiff, and that settlement was found by the trial court to be in good faith. Plaintiff's case went to trial against the other defendants, plaintiff prevailed, and the manufacturer was found to be 10 percent at fault. Judgment was entered and the leasing company filed a motion seeking a determination that a settlement between the leasing company and plaintiff was a good faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877. The trial court found the settlement to be in good faith and dismissed manufacturer's cross-complaint for indemnity against leasing company pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The manufacturer appealed the ruling of the trial court, contending that Code Civ. Proc. § 877 applied only to preverdict settlements. The court of appeal agreed and held that the trial court erred in granting leasing company's motion for good faith settlement and dismissal of the cross-complaint (55 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1142) . The court began by stating that since the issue was one of statutory interpretation and application of the statute to undisputed facts, the question was one of law subject to the court of appeal's independent review. It then said that it agreed with Southern Cal. White Trucks v. Teresinski (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 1393, 236 Cal. Rptr. 159 [see § 115.154[3][a]], that postjudgment settlements were not permitted by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.

The court found that this reading of the statute was supported by the unfair result in this case: leasing company knew when it settled with plaintiff the amount of its exposure in the cross-complaint filed by manufacturer; leasing company also knew that it could no longer be sued by plaintiff; any amount leasing company offered to plaintiff would be a windfall, so plaintiff would not necessarily drive a hard bargain; nevertheless that amount, however small, would protect leasing company from having to pay anything at all against manufacturer. Thus, by paying a small amount of money to plaintiff, leasing company was able to discharge its great potential exposure from the cross-complaint. The leasing company had every advantage over manufacturer when leasing company settled with plaintiff. The court concluded by dismissing leasing company's arguments that Teresinski was not controlling and that it should instead apply the law as stated in two other cases. It found that neither case permitted the trial court to find that the settlement between leasing company and plaintiff was a good faith settlement under Civ. Code §§ 877, 877.6 (53 Cal. App. 4th 1139, 1148) .

In John Hancock Mut. Life Ins. Co. v. Setser (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1524, 50 Cal. Rptr. 2d 413 , an insurance company was named as a defendant in an underlying action for fraud on the basis that the active defendants were its agents and had used its letterhead. The insurance company cross-complained against the active defendants, claiming that it did not know about their tortious conduct. In the underlying action, the insurance company was granted a summary judgment, with the trial court concluding that it neither knew about nor ratified the transaction. The active defendant subsequently served the insurance company with a motion to determine that a settlement in the underlying action was in good faith within Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The insurance company countered this with a motion for attorney fees under Code Civ. Proc. § 1021.6. The trial court granted the motion for good faith settlement, and denied the motion for attorney fees. The court of appeal concluded that the claim for attorney fees was a form of implied equitable indemnity which would be barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 if it was a further claim of a joint tortfeasor against the settling defendants. However, the court reasoned that the insurance company's indemnity claim became established when it obtained summary judgment in the underlying action on the ground that it was without fault and there was no viable theory of vicarious or strict liability (42 Cal. App. 4th 1524, 1534) . Since the claim was not a "further claim," but rather one which had been perfected before the trial court made its good faith determination, the trial court erred in rejecting the application for attorney fees on the ground that it was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.155

§ 115.155 Opposing Contention That Good-Faith Settlement Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6] Is Not Binding on Party Who Had No Opportunity to Be Heard

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., CROSS COMPLAINANT] IS NOT BARRED FROM SEEKING _____ [COMPARATIVE INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] FROM _____ [party, e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] ON ACCOUNT OF A SETTLEMENT AGREED TO BY _____ [e.g., CROSS DEFENDANT] BECAUSE _____ [e.g., CROSS COMPLAINANT] WAS NOT A PARTY TO THE ACTION AT THE TIME WHEN THE SETTLEMENT WAS DETERMINED TO BE IN GOOD FAITH AND DID NOT HAVE AN OPPORTUNITY TO BE HEARD ON THE ISSUE OF THE GOOD FAITH OF THE SETTLEMENT.

Finding of Good-Faith Settlement Not Binding on Unnamed Joint Tortfeasor or Co-Obligor Who Had No Opportunity to Be Heard. Due process dictates that an unnamed joint tortfeasor or co-obligor whose potential liability is known or reasonably should have been known to the settling parties, but who is given no opportunity to be heard on the good faith of a prior settlement, is not bound by a good faith determination made under Section 877.6 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and has a right to challenge that finding once brought into the litigation (Singer Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 875, 881, 890-893, 225 Cal. Rptr. 159 ; see U.S. Const. amend. XIV; Calif. Const. art. I, § 17).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a contention that a settlement is not effective under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to bar indemnity rights because the party against whom the settlement is asserted had no notice nor opportunity to be heard with regard to the judicial determination of good faith. This form may be used by an indemnitee tortfeasor seeking comparative indemnity or by a co-obligor seeking contribution.

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court [see § 115.150[2]]. It may be used in a memorandum in opposition to a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, alleging that indemnity or contribution rights are foreclosed as a matter of law by a good faith settlement. It may also be used in an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the party using the form was one of multiple parties alleged to be liable, either in tort or on a nontort obligation, to a third party; (2) the party using the form is also a cross complainant or plaintiff in an action for comparative indemnity or contribution with regard to the occurrence giving rise to the liability; (3) the defendant or cross defendant entered into a settlement with the third party that was judicially confirmed as in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6; and (4) the party using the form had no notice of nor opportunity to be heard with regard to the question of the good faith of the settlement. The particular facts that establish this lack of opportunity should be developed. For example, the party using the form may not have been made a party to the action until after the good-faith hearing.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Finding of Good-Faith Settlement Not Binding on Unnamed Joint Tortfeasor or Co-Obligor Who Had No Opportunity to Be Heard

In Singer Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 875, 225 Cal. Rptr. 159 , Singer, an unnamed joint tortfeasor, was not initially brought into a personal injury lawsuit. Plaintiff and defendant in that suit entered into a settlement, and the trial court determined that the settlement had been entered into in good faith, pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. At the time, plaintiff and defendant knew or should reasonably have known of the potential liability of Singer, but had not given Singer an opportunity to be heard at the good-faith determination hearing. After the good-faith determination had been made, Singer was served as a cross defendant in the action. Singer answered, and filed a cross complaint for indemnity and contribution against defendant. Singer also sought discovery of evidence relevant to the good-faith determination. Defendant moved to dismiss Singer's cross complaint on the grounds that it was barred by the good-faith determination. The trial court agreed, and dismissed. Singer sought a writ of mandate in the court of appeal.

The court of appeal granted the petition for a peremptory writ of mandate, holding that the good-faith determination was not binding on Singer, and that Singer was entitled to further discovery. Specifically, the court held that due process under U.S. Const. amend. XIV and Calif. Const. art. I, § 17, dictates that an unnamed joint tortfeasor whose potential liability is known, or reasonably should have been known, to the settling parties but who is given no opportunity to be heard on the good faith of a prior settlement is not bound by a good faith determination under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The party has a right to challenge that finding once he or she has been brought into the litigation. Furthermore, the court held that Singer was entitled to engage in limited discovery against the settling defendant to elicit evidence relevant to the determination of good faith as was available at the time of settlement, whether or not the evidence was then actually presented (179 Cal. App. 3d 875, 890-895) .

NOTE:

The proper remedy to afford a party who had no opportunity to be heard with regard to the good-faith determination has been troublesome. In Singer, the court of appeal issued a writ directing the trial court to vacate its order finding that the settlement was in good faith. This order had the effect of at least temporarily reinstating the indemnity rights of Singer with regard to the settling defendant, but apparently did not nullify the settlement itself as between the settling parties. However, Singer was required to proceed to hearing on the issue of whether the settlement was, in fact, in good faith. Thus, the trial court was required to take a second look at the good-faith issue, with Singer's indemnity rights depending on the outcome [Singer Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 179 Cal. App. 3d 875, 895-898, 225 Cal. Rptr. 159] .

In a subsequent court of appeal case, on similar facts involving a party with no meaningful opportunity to be heard on the good-faith issue, the majority fashioned the same remedy as the court in Singer, requiring the trial court to vacate the order finding good faith [Rankin v. Curtis (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 939, 948, 228 Cal. Rptr. 753] . However, according to the dissenting opinion, the settlement was expressly contingent on the court's finding it to be in good faith [Rankin v. Curtis (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 939, 949, 228 Cal. Rptr. 753 (Stanforth, Acting P.J., dissenting)]. Thus, vacating the order finding good faith had the effect of nullifying the settlement between the plaintiff and the settling defendant (apparently unlike the situation in Singer). The dissenting opinion vigorously objected to this disposition, stating that the excluded party had no right to challenge the good-faith determination as between the settling parties. Instead, the dissent argued, the appropriate remedy should be to allow the excluded party to seek indemnity from the settling defendant if pursued to judgment by the settling parties. In other words, the court should simply refuse to give effect to the bar to the excluded party's indemnity rights that would otherwise flow from the good-faith determination under Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b) and 877.6(c) [Rankin v. Curtis (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 939, 950-951, 228 Cal. Rptr. 753 (Stanforth, Acting P.J., dissenting)].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.156

§ 115.156 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement Is Not In Reasonable Range of Settling Party's Liability

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name]	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DENY JUDI-
vs.	)	CIAL CONFIRMATION OF GOOD FAITH OF
_____ [name]	)	SETTLEMENT [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THIS MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS NOT MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE AMOUNT OF THE SETTLEMENT IS NOT IN A REASONABLE RANGE OF _____ [name of settling defendant] LIABILITY TO THE PLAINTIFF.

A. Reasonable-Range Requirement. In determining the good faith of a settlement, the court may inquire, among other things, whether the amount of the settlement is within the reasonable range of the settling tortfeasor's proportional share of comparative liability for the plaintiff's injuries; the defendant's settlement figure must not be grossly disproportionate to what a reasonable person at the time of settlement would estimate the settling defendant's liability to be (Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; Gehl Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 178, 182-183, 228 Cal. Rptr. 19).

[Optional] B. Settlement Involving Dismissal Based On Determination of Lack of Liability. A settlement under which the plaintiff dismisses a defendant from the action for little or no consideration based on an alleged determination that the defendant has no liability is not in good faith if substantial uncontroverted evidence is presented that the defendant is liable (see Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 834-835, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846).

[Optional] C. Computation Involving Error of Law. Computation of a settling party's potential liability to the plaintiff may not be based on an error of law (Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1028-1029, 253 Cal. Rptr. 908).

[Optional] D. Settling Defendant's Potential Culpability Should be Considered. When determining the good faith of a settlement, the court must consider not only the settling defendant's potential liability to the plaintiff, but also the settling defendant's proportionate share of culpability (TSI Seismic Tenant Space, Inc. v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 159, 166, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 751).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for denial of judicial confirmation of a settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 as not in good faith. The ground of the form is that the amount of the settlement is not within a reasonable range of the settling defendant's liability. The form may be used by a joint tortfeasor or co-obligor on a nontort obligation who wishes to preserve rights to comparative indemnity or contribution that will be extinguished if the good faith of the settlement is confirmed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)].

Except in the case of a settlement involving confidentiality, the settling parties may submit an application to the court disclosing the terms and amount of the settlement and a proposed order confirming the settlement as in good faith. Notice must be given to all parties. Nonsettling parties who object to confirmation must notice a hearing within 25 days after the date on which the notice was mailed. If no opposing motion is filed, the court may confirm the good faith of the settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a)(2)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the settling defendant and the party opposing the motion are both alleged to be liable to the plaintiff, either as joint or concurrent tortfeasors or as co-obligors on a nontort obligation; (2) the plaintiff and the settling party have entered into a settlement agreement involving a release and dismissal with prejudice, or other device that will terminate the litigation with regard to the settling party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877]; and (3) the amount that the settling party is to pay to the plaintiff under the settlement does not reflect a reasonable range of the settling defendant's potential liability to the plaintiff. To establish this last point, counsel should be prepared to make some showing of the settling party's potential liability and of the plaintiff's damages.

[b] Burden of Proof and Evidentiary Material

The issue of the good faith of a settlement may be determined by the court on the basis of affidavits, or declarations under Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5, served with the notice of hearing and any counter-affidavits filed in response [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(b)]. However, the party asserting the lack of good faith of a settlement has the burden of proof on the issue [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(d)].

Because many 877.6 applications are uncontested, the papers in support of the application need to contain only minimal information. A "barebones" motion that sets forth the ground of good faith, accompanied by a declaration that gives a brief background of the case, is sufficient [City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1261, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119] . At a minimum, a party seeking confirmation of a settlement must explain: (1) who has settled with whom; (2) the dollar amount of each settlement; (3) if any settlement is allocated and how it is allocated between issues or parties; and (4) what nonmonetary consideration has been included and how the parties to the settlement value the nonmonetary consideration [Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1129, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844] . The opposing party must initiate a contested hearing by filing a motion to establish the lack of good faith. If no such contesting papers are filed, the court may grant the application summarily without considering the Tech-Bilt requirements [see Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; see also § 115.156[3][a]]. If contesting papers are filed, the applying party must then be prepared to meet the arguments made by the opposing party with valid evidence [City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1261-1262, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119 ; see Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 834-835, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846 ; see also § 115.156[3][b]]. The court may, in its discretion, receive evidence at the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(b)].

In some cases, the objecting nonsettlor may not have sufficient information at the time of the hearing to carry its burden of proof regarding lack of good faith. In this event, the objecting nonsettlor may move for a continuance of the hearing for the purpose of conducting discovery to meet its statutory burden of proof [City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1265, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119] .

[c] Applicability of Form to Contribution

Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 applies to settlements by co-obligors on a contract debt, as well as to settlements by joint tortfeasors [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a)]. A finding of good faith then has the effect of terminating any right of contribution of the other obligors [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(c); see § 115.150[2][b]].

The question of whether a contract obligor's settlement is within a reasonable range of liability might arise if the obligee settles with one obligor for less than a pro rata (equal) share of the debt or for a share that is less than that obligor's proportionate share of liability under some other method of apportionment [see Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1028-1029, 253 Cal. Rptr. 908 ; see also §§ 115.111[3][a], 115.156[3][c]]. For example, if there are three solvent obligors, each would be liable for a one-third pro rata share. A settlement with one of them for considerably less than one-third would not be within a reasonable range of liability.

[d] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 115.160 and 115.161 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable-Range Requirement

Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 is the California Supreme Court's landmark delineation of the question of what constitutes a good-faith settlement. In the case, owners of residential property sued the developer, an association of soils engineers, and others to recover damages on various theories for structural defects in their residence. The action against the developer was timely in that it was filed within 10 years after the developer had substantially completed its work [see Code Civ. Proc. § 337.15(a)]. However, the action against the soils engineers appeared to be barred by the 10-year period. Plaintiffs, therefore, accepted their offer to waive any claim against plaintiffs for costs in defending the action if plaintiffs would dismiss their claim against it. The developer, who had not settled with plaintiffs, thereafter filed an amended cross complaint for declaratory relief regarding its right to be indemnified by the soils engineers. The soils engineers then moved for an order to confirm its agreement with plaintiffs as a good-faith settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 and for summary judgment on the cross complaint. The trial court found the settlement to have been made in good faith and granted summary judgment dismissing the cross complaint, and the developer appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed on the ground the settlement was not a good-faith settlement within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. Preliminarily, the Court pointed out that had the soils engineers obtained a summary judgment on plaintiff's claim on the basis of the statute of limitations, it would not have barred the developer's cross complaint against the soils engineers for equitable indemnity [see Valley Circle Estates v. VTN Consol., Inc. (1983) 33 Cal. 3d 604, 189 Cal. Rptr. 871, 659 P.2d 1160 ; see also § 115.67] (38 Cal. 3d 488, 492) . It then concluded that the developer's right to indemnity should not be terminated simply because the soils engineers obtained dismissal by settlement rather than by summary judgment.

In reaching this decision, the Court noted that the major goals of the 1957 tort contribution legislation [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877] were (1) equitable sharing of costs among the parties at fault, and (2) encouragement of settlements. Neither goal should be applied to defeat the other, and courts should review agreements purportedly made under its aegis to insure that they appropriately balance the statute's dual objectives (38 Cal. 3d 488, 494) .

The Court further stated that the formulation of a precise definition of good faith is neither possible nor practicable. However, general equitable principles dictate that a settlement is unfair if it is so poorly related to the value of the case that it imposes a potentially disproportionate cost on the defendant ultimately selected for suit (38 Cal. 3d 488, 495 , quoting River Garden Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1972)26 Cal. App. 3d 986, 997, 103 Cal. Rptr. 498).

The Court then set forth the basic framework of a good-faith determination. In determining whether the settlement was in good faith, the trial court may inquire, among other things, into whether the amount of the settlement is within the reasonable range of the settling tortfeasor's proportional share of comparative liability for the plaintiff's injuries. Bad faith is not necessarily established by a showing that a settling defendant paid less than his or her theoretical proportionate or "fair" share, because such a rule would unduly discourage settlements. Damages are often speculative and the probability of legal liability for them is often uncertain or remote. Even if the claimant's damages are obviously great, and the liability for them certain, a disproportionately low settlement figure is often reasonable in the case of a relatively insolvent and uninsured, or underinsured, joint tortfeasor. Moreover, such a rule would tend to convert the good-faith hearing into a full-scale minitrial (38 Cal. 3d 488, 499) .

However, these considerations do not lead to the conclusion that the amount of a settlement is irrelevant in determining good faith. Rather, the intent and the policies underlying Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 require that a number of factors be taken into account, including a rough approximation of plaintiff's total recovery and the settlor's proportionate liability, the amount paid in settlement, the allocation of settlement proceeds among plaintiffs, and a recognition that a settlor should pay less in settlement than it would if it were found liable after trial. Other relevant considerations include the financial conditions and insurance policy limits of settling defendants, as well as the existence of collusion, fraud, or tortious conduct aimed to injure the interests of nonsettling defendants. Finally, practical considerations obviously require that the evaluation be made on the basis of information available at the time of settlement. A defendant's settlement figure must not be grossly disproportionate to what a reasonable person, at the time of the settlement, would estimate the settling defendant's liability to be. The party asserting the lack of good faith, who has the burden of proof, should be permitted to demonstrate that the settlement is so far "out of the ballpark" in relation to these factors that it is inconsistent with the equitable objectives of the statute (38 Cal. 3d 488, 499-500) .

Gehl Bros. Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 178, 228 Cal. Rptr. 19 , was an action for damages for negligence, strict products liability, and breach of warranty against three manufacturers that had fabricated the finished product that caused serious injury to the plaintiff. Plaintiff settled with one of the manufacturers for $10,000, which represented less than one percent of the total settlement liability, estimated by the trial court to be approximately $1,500,000. The trial court granted a motion for an order declaring the settlement was entered into in good faith.

On petition of one of the other joint tortfeasors, the court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate, directing the trial court to vacate its order. The court considered whether the amount of the settlement was within the reasonable range of the settling tortfeasor's proportional share of comparative liability for plaintiff's injuries, according to the Tech-Bilt factors. The court concluded that the settlement did not meet good-faith requirements, because such a small settlement would require the conclusion that it was a "cost of defense settlement" predicated on no liability as a matter of law (183 Cal. App. 3d 178, 183) . However, liability devolving on a product manufacturer by reason of design defects or failure to warn or to provide a safety device falls in some proportion on all parties who have mutually participated in designing, assembling, and marketing the offending product. Therefore, the manufacturer's potential share of a total settlement liability estimated to be in seven figures would surely exceed by a substantial amount the $10,000 settlement (183 Cal. App. 3d 178, 186) .

[b] Settlement Involving Dismissal Based On Determination of Lack of Liability

Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846 , was a personal injury action originally brought against a motorist for negligent operation of a motor vehicle, and against a city and county based on allegations of negligent design of an intersection. Shortly before trial, the plaintiff dismissed the public entities from the action in exchange for a waiver of costs only. Subsequently, the defendant motorist filed a separate action for partial equitable indemnity against the public entities based on the principles of comparative negligence. The defendant public entities moved for determination that their dismissal from the action constituted a good-faith settlement. The defendant motorist presented expert testimony that the intersection involved was poorly designed, and further evidence that the dismissal had resulted in the suppression of evidence and an inability to make a proper evaluation of the dangerous character of the intersection. The public entities presented only declarations of plaintiff's attorney stating that he had consulted with experts and had determined that the public entities were not liable. The trial court rejected the motorist's evidence as "self-serving," confirmed the settlement as in good faith based on its finding of nonliability of the public entities, and dismissed the motorist's action for equitable indemnity.

The court of appeal found an abuse of discretion and reversed on the issue of good faith. The court found that the motorist had presented competent evidence of the liability of the public entities. In contrast, the declarations of plaintiff's counsel that were relied on by the public entities were found to be lacking a proper factual foundation for the conclusion of nonliability, and therefore insufficient to overcome the motorist's substantial evidence of the public entities' liability (194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 834-835) .

[c] Computation Involving Error of Law

In Minnesota Mining & Mfg. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 253 Cal. Rptr. 908 , the settling defendant (Schwartz) was a 40-percent shareholder in a corporation. Finch owned 20 percent and Pankin owned the remaining 40 percent. Pankin was not a defendant to the suit. Schwartz's liability was dependent on the plaintiff's success in piercing the corporate veil. The settling parties and the trial court calculated the defendant's potential liability as 40 percent of the corporation's debt.

The court of appeal rejected the settlement as not in good faith because it was based on a mistake of law. Under the law, should the corporate veil be pierced, all shareholders would be jointly and severally liable for corporate debts. Schwartz and the court assumed that Pankin and Finch would be required to contribute in proportion to their shares in the corporation and that Schwartz would ultimately pay only 40 percent of any award. However, Pankin was not a named defendant. Thus, the burden would be apportioned only among Schwartz and Finch. Thus, the court erred in basing its determination on a mathematical formula that was based on an incorrect legal assumption (206 Cal. App. 3d 1025, 1028-1029) .

[d] Settling Defendant's Potential Culpability Should be Considered

In TSI Seismic Tenant Space, Inc. v. Superior Court (2007) 149 Cal. App. 4th 159, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 751 , plaintiff developer hired a company to provide geotechnical services prior to the construction of an apartment complex. As part of their contract, plaintiff had agreed to limit any potential liability of this company for negligent performance to $50,000. This company allegedly was negligent in analyzing the soil, resulting in cracking in the complex's stairs and flatwork. Plaintiff sued the geotechnical company, as well as the general contractor and structural engineer on the project. Plaintiff settled with the geotechnical company for the $50,000 limit provided in the limitation of liability agreement, and these parties then sought a judicial determination that the settlement was in good faith. The trial court found that the settlement was in good faith. The non-settling defendants filed petitions for writ of mandate seeking to set aside the finding that the settlement was in good faith.

The court of appeal granted writ of mandate ordering the trial court to vacate its finding of good faith. The court held that when determining the good faith of a settlement, the court must consider not only the settling defendant's potential liability to the plaintiff, but also the settling defendant's proportionate share of culpability and potential claims for indemnity to other liable parties (149 Cal. App. 4th 159, 166) . Even though the settlement amount was only $50,000, plaintiff had claimed that the geotechnical company was responsible for over $3 million in damages. Given this disparity, the trial court abused its discretion in relying solely on the limitation of liability agreement to find that the settlement was in good faith. The court noted, however, that while it was error to find that the settlement was made in good faith, the settling defendant could still ultimately be protected by the plaintiff from further liability pursuant to the limitation of liability clause (149 Cal. App. 4th 159, 167-168) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Reasonable-Range Requirement

In Long Beach Memorial Medical Center v. Superior Court (2009) 172 Cal. App. 4th 865, 91 Cal. Rptr. 3d 494 , plaintiffs brought a medical malpractice action against a hospital, a doctor, and related entities based on alleged negligence when monitoring plaintiff mother and her fetal heart monitors while she was in labor, resulting in birth-related injuries to plaintiff child. During settlement negotiations at which plaintiffs were seeking $8 million, the doctor's attorney discussed the possibility of contributing $1.5 million to a global settlement fund, with a nursing entity contributing another $2 million and the hospital $4 million. After several weeks of talks, plaintiffs threatened to retract their settlement offer and submit a higher offer, prompting the hospital and nursing entity to agree to settle for $5.25 million and $2.5 million respectively. Although the hospital had understood that the doctor's attorney had no settlement authority, the very next day that attorney offered to settle the claims against the doctor for $200,000. Plaintiffs accepted, and the trial court determined that this settlement with the doctor was made in good faith, thereby preventing the other settling defendants from seeking indemnity from the doctor. However, the court of appeal reversed this good-faith determination. Noting that the doctor agreed to settle for $200,000 on a claim valued at $8 million, the court of appeal concluded that the doctor's settlement amount was disproportionately small as the evidence would support a finding that the doctor was substantially liable for the injuries. The doctor was the sole physician responsible for the high-risk labor and delivery, he knew about plaintiffs' abnormal fetal heart tracings for several hours without taking any action, and ongoing readings from the fetal heart monitors were available in multiple locations in the hospital, including the doctor's lounge. Nonetheless, the doctor failed to take timely action to address the problems experienced during the labor. Moreover, during settlement negotiations, the doctor's own attorney effectively admitted that the doctor's fair share of responsibility was around $1.5 million (172 Cal. App. 4th 865, 874) . In reversing the good-faith determination, the court also noted that the doctor's $200,000 settlement amount was only 10 percent of his $2 million insurance coverage limits. Moreover, the timing of the doctor's modest settlement offer, coming one day after the other defendants agreed to settle for much larger amounts, supported the conclusion that the doctor's offer to settle was calculated only to prevent the other settling defendants from seeking a much larger sum from the doctor through exercise of their indemnity rights (172 Cal. App. 4th 865, 875-876) .

[b] Computation Involving Error of Law

In Toyota Motor Sales U.S.A., Inc. v. Superior Court (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 269 Cal. Rptr. 647 , the plaintiff was injured in an collision with a pizza delivery vehicle. She sued the driver, the pizza franchisee for whom the driver was working at the time, and the manufacturer of her vehicle, alleging that a seat belt defect contributed to her injuries. The franchisee settled for an amount far under the plaintiff's damages and moved for good-faith settlement confirmation under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The trial court granted the motion because it was persuaded that the driver was an independent contractor and not the franchisee's employee. As the hirer of an independent contractor, the franchisee would not be vicariously liable for the driver's torts, and thus a low settlement was in good faith (220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 869 n.4). The vehicle manufacturer sought a writ of mandate vacating the good-faith determination order.

The court of appeal issued the writ. It agreed that the trial court was required to resolve the question of the driver's status as employee or independent contractor to make a good-faith determination, but reached the opposite conclusion. On the undisputed facts presented to the trial court, the court of appeal found no substantial evidence to support the finding that the driver was an independent contractor and not an employee. Therefore, the legal basis on which the good-faith determination was made was incorrect, and the order could not stand (220 Cal. App. 3d 864, 870-878) .

NOTE:

For discussion of the substantive law of respondeat superior and the distinction between an employee and an independent contractor, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 248, Employer's Liability for Employee's Torts (Matthew Bender).

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.157

§ 115.157 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement Is Aimed At Injuring Interests of Nonsettling Parties

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 115.156.]

THIS MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS NOT MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE SETTLEMENT IS INTENDED TO INJURE THE INTERESTS OF _____ [name of party opposing settlement].

A. Requirement of Good Faith Extends to Nonsettling Parties. To entitle a settling defendant to discharge from claims for proportional indemnity or contribution by nonsettling defendants under Section 877 of the Code of Civil Procedure, the settlement must be in good faith not only in respect to the settling plaintiff, but also in respect to the nonsettling defendants (Southern Cal. Gas Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1036, 232 Cal. Rptr. 320 ; River Garden Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 986, 996, 103 Cal. Rptr. 498).

B. Intent to Injure Nonsettling Defendants. Among the factors that the court should consider in determining whether a settlement is in good faith is the existence of any collusion, fraud, or tortious conduct aimed to injure the nonsettling defendants (Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; Henderson v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 297, 300, 208 Cal. Rptr. 485).

[Optional] C. Tactical Considerations Unrelated to Liability. A settlement entered into for a tactical reason unrelated to the settling defendant's liability does not necessarily reflect a good-faith determination of relative liabilities (Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 835-836, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for denial of judicial confirmation of a settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 as not in good faith. The ground of the form is that the settlement reflects the intent of the settling parties to injure the nonsettling defendant. The form may be used by a joint tortfeasor, or by a co-obligor on a nontort obligation, who wishes to preserve rights to comparative indemnity or contribution that will be extinguished if the good faith of the settlement is confirmed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the settling defendant and the party opposing the motion are both alleged to be liable to the plaintiff, either as joint or concurrent tortfeasors or as co-obligors on a nontort obligation; (2) the plaintiff and the settling party have entered into a settlement agreement involving a release and dismissal with prejudice, or other device that will terminate the litigation with regard to the settling party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877]; and (3) the settlement involves collusion between the parties to injure the interests of the party opposing the motion.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement of Good Faith Extends to Nonsettling Parties

Southern Cal. Gas Co. v. Superior Court (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 232 Cal. Rptr. 320 involved a settlement that included an assignment to the plaintiffs of the settling defendants' rights under an insurance policy. One person was killed and another seriously injured in a construction accident. Plaintiffs sued numerous defendants, who all cross complained against each other for comparative indemnity. A group of defendants who were insureds under the same insurance policies settled with the plaintiffs for the policy limits of two of the policies. As a part of the settlement, these defendants also assigned plaintiffs their rights under a third policy for which the insurer had denied coverage. The assignment covered causes of action for both breach of contract and insurance bad faith. There was no dollar value assigned to the assignment nor was there any allocation of the rights between the two plaintiffs. The settling defendants moved for a judicial determination that the settlement was in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The nonsettling defendants opposed the motion on the ground that the assignment of rights, being an asset of undetermined value and being unallocated between the plaintiffs and wholly within the power of the plaintiffs to pursue or abandon, deprived the nonsettling defendants of their statutory right to credit for the full value of the settlement against any eventual judgment against them [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877(a)]. The trial court confirmed the settlement as in good faith.

The court of appeal reversed, agreeing with the nonsettling defendants that the trial court should have included in its order provisions that would ensure that the nonsettling defendants would obtain credit for the value of the assigned rights (187 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1035) . The court noted that, if there were ever any question on the matter, it is now clear that to entitle a settling defendant to a discharge of claims for proportional indemnity or contribution by nonsettling defendants under Code Civ. Proc. § 877, the settlement entered into must be in good faith not only in respect to the settling plaintiff but also in respect to the nonsettling defendants, citing Tech-Bilt Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 494-495, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 [see § 115.156] and other cases. The problems that the court saw with the settlement were that (1) the court left the decision whether or not to pursue the assigned rights wholly to the discretion of the plaintiffs; and (2) there was no allocation of any recovery on the assigned rights as between the plaintiffs so as to permit appropriate credit should they both recover judgment against the nonsettling defendants (187 Cal. App. 3d 1030, 1036) .

River Garden Farms, Inc. v. Superior Court (1972) 26 Cal. App. 3d 986, 103 Cal. Rptr. 498 predated the enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 and construed the good-faith clause of Code Civ. Proc. § 877]. The appeal arose out of an action by two minors against four business firms for personal injuries and wrongful death resulting from a fire in which their parents died and the minors were seriously injured. Three of the business firms settled with plaintiffs for both the personal injury and wrongful death claims for a total of $1,290,000 and obtained releases pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877. After receiving court approval of the settlement agreements, the attorneys offered to settle with the nonsettling defendant for $3,850,000 (about twice their original offer for settling with all defendants) less the $1,290,000 received from the other defendants. This would have required the nonsettling defendant to bear about two-thirds of the liability it once shared with three other defendants. The nonsettling defendant sought a writ of mandate, charging that the releases were not given in good faith as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 877. Plaintiffs contended that the duty of good faith was limited to the parties to the settlement and did not extend to nonsettling parties.

The court of appeal rejected the contention. Although it denied the writ as inappropriate under the circumstances, it held that the nonsettling defendant was entitled to assert invalidity of the releases by showing that they did not comply with the statutory good-faith requirement and that, on such a showing, it would be entitled to appropriate relief. In so holding, the court considered the legislative history of Code Civ. Proc. § 877. The good-faith clause in that statute was designed to give the court the power to reject a discharge from liability for indemnity in the case of a settlement involving collusion (26 Cal. App. 3d 986, 995) . The good-faith clause extends the obligation of good faith beyond the parties to the negotiations and embraces an absent tortfeasor. The latter has a financial stake in the amount of the settlement, and thus, a justifiable interest in the question of good faith (26 Cal. App. 3d 986, 995-996) .

[b] Intent to Injure Nonsettling Defendants

Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 is discussed in § 115.156[3][a]. In delineating the factors that a court should take into account in considering whether a settlement is in good faith, the Court stated that relevant considerations include the existence of collusion, fraud, or tortious conduct aimed to injure the interests of nonsettling defendants (38 Cal. 3d 488, 499) .

NOTE:

Prior to Tech-Bilt, courts of appeal had held that the settling parties owe the nonsettling defendants a legal duty to refrain from tortious or other wrongful conduct, but that absent conduct violative of this duty, the settling parties may act to further their respective interests without regard to the effect of their settlement on other defendants [see Dompeling v. Superior Court (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 798, 809-810, 173 Cal. Rptr. 38] . Tech-Bilt broadened the duty of good faith beyond the limited area of wrongful conduct, while retaining the prior standard as one element of the good-faith inquiry.

Henderson v. Superior Court (1984) 162 Cal. App. 3d 297, 208 Cal. Rptr. 485 , involved a claim for personal injuries suffered by one Fallon when one Zimmelman drove his automobile into a group of persons. Zimmelman cross complained against Henderson and Fallon's sister, alleging that he had been attacked by them and was attempting to escape from further assault. Zimmelman was a member of one gang, and Henderson and the Fallons were affiliated with another.

Henderson and Fallon's sister then entered into a settlement with Fallon, even though Fallon asserted no claim against them. There was a question concerning whether the amount of the settlement would actually be paid to Fallon. However, the effect of the settlement would be to foreclose Zimmelman from obtaining indemnity from the settling defendants, should he be found liable to Fallon. The trial court refused to confirm the settlement, and the court of appeal denied mandate. The court found that the settlement involved collusion, which was tantamount to bad faith (162 Cal. App.3d 297, 300) .

[c] Tactical Considerations Unrelated to Liability

The facts of Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846 , are discussed in § 115.156[3][b]. Plaintiff elected to dismiss the public entity defendants and proceed solely against the allegedly negligent motorist and her insurer. At the good-faith determination hearing, plaintiff's counsel conceded that his theory of recovery included an eventual action against the motorist's insurer on a bad-faith theory (194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 833) . In reversing the finding of good faith, the court of appeal stated that the plan could be perceived as evidence of a motivation entirely unrelated to a good-faith determination of relative liabilities. Viewed in this light, the dismissals were simply tactical decisions designed to pave the way for a subsequent bad-faith lawsuit against the insurer. The court noted that although no case addressed the issue of whether this type of motivation constitutes fraudulent, collusive, or tortious conduct aimed to injure the interests of nonsettling defendants, such a purpose does not necessarily reflect a good-faith determination of relative liabilities. The court held that a dismissal designed to avoid complicating a case against a defendant in order to set up a later bad-faith insurance claim is fundamentally unfair to the insured defendant, with whom a plaintiff would have little incentive to settle. Such a dismissal also burdens the courts with more litigation and does not further the equitable policies of Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877, 877.6 (194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 835-836) .

NOTE:

In Torres v. Union Pac. R.R. Co. (1984) 157 Cal. App. 3d 499, 504, 203 Cal. Rptr. 825 , the court stated that it is well settled that certain settlement tactics or motives constitute bad faith. For example, a plaintiff might single out the most unpopular of several codefendants and settle with all other defendants, leaving the unpopular party to face the jury alone. Or, a plaintiff might settle with a defendant capable of providing crucial witnesses, in order to deprive the defense of these witnesses' testimony. Another wrongful tactic is seen in multiple-count lawsuits if a codefendant and plaintiff settle after conspiring to assign a disproportionately large amount of the settlement to the plaintiff's least valuable counts, leaving the nonsettling defendants fully exposed to the plaintiff's most valuable counts.

By contrast, another court has held that a provision of a settlement under which the settling tortfeasor is required to remain as a defendant and participate in the trial to deprive the remaining defendants of the trial tactic of using the "empty chair" to ascribe fault to an actor who is not there to defend himself or herself does not, in itself, preclude a finding of good faith [see Everman v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 466, 470-471, 473, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176 ; see also § 115.162].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Intent to Injure Nonsettling Defendants

In Bobrow/Thomas & Assocs. v. Superior Court (1996) 50 Cal. App. 4th 1654, 58 Cal. Rptr. 2d 626 , the trial court confirmed a settlement as a good faith settlement even though the settlement had the objective of abridging a non-settling defendant's indemnification claims and insurance coverage. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the settlement could not be confirmed without a full explanation of how the agreement would affect the action against the non-settling defendant, and a requirement that plaintiff make a firm commitment to limit its recovery against the non-settling defendant. The matter was thus remanded for presentation of the full details of the settlement, including how the continuing trial was to proceed and what commitments plaintiff had made about its recovery. The court noted that the trial court was entitled to confirm the settlement again if the settlement met the requirements for good faith (50 Cal. App. 4th 1654, 1664) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.158

§ 115.158 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Sliding-Scale Agreement Must Meet Tech-Bilt Standards

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 115.156.]

THIS MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS NOT MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE SETTLEMENT IS A SLIDING-SCALE AGREEMENT THAT DOES NOT MEET THE STANDARDS OF GOOD FAITH AS SET FORTH BY THE CALIFORNIA SUPREME COURT IN TECH-BILT, INC. V. WOODWARD-CLYDE & ASSOCIATES.

Sliding-Scale Settlement Agreements Must Meet Tech-Bilt Standards. A sliding-scale settlement agreement that fails to meet the standards articulated in Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Associates is not in good faith (see Abbott Ford, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 858, 875, 239 Cal. Rptr. 626, 741 P.2d 124).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for denial of judicial confirmation of a settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 as not in good faith. The ground of the form is that the settlement is a sliding-scale agreement that does not meet the standards for good faith as set forth in Tech-Bilt [see Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; see also § 115.156[3][a]]. The form may be used by a joint tortfeasor or co-obligor on a nontort obligation who wishes to preserve rights to comparative indemnity or contribution that will be extinguished if the good faith of the settlement is confirmed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the settling defendant and the party opposing the motion are both alleged to be liable to the plaintiff, either as joint or concurrent tortfeasors or as co-obligors on a nontort obligation; (2) the plaintiff and the settling party have entered into a settlement agreement involving a release and dismissal with prejudice, or other device that will terminate the litigation with regard to the settling party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877]; and (3) the settlement is a "sliding-scale" agreement--that is, one that essentially guarantees the plaintiff a certain recovery, with the settling defendant's payment to be reduced by amounts ultimately recovered from other defendants. The particular way in which the agreement fails the Tech-Bilt standards should then be developed. For example, the agreement may give the settling defendant unreasonable veto power over any subsequent settlement to which the plaintiff might otherwise agree with other defendants.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sliding Scale Settlement Agreements Must Meet Tech-Bilt Standards

In Abbott Ford, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 858, 239 Cal. Rptr. 626, 741 P.2d 124 , plaintiff had sustained serious injuries when the left rear wheel of a van came off and crashed through the windshield of the car that she was driving. Plaintiff sued: (1) the driver of the van (Sneed) for negligent maintenance and continued operation of the van after hearing sounds indicating there might be some difficulty with the wheels; (2) the car dealer (Abbott), which had purchased the van used and customized it by replacing the original wheels and tires with "deep dish mag wheels" and oversized tires and resold it to the driver, for negligence in installing the wheels contrary to the express warnings in the owner's manual provided by the manufacturer, which the dealer had received, and in failing to give the purchaser any warning that because of the installation, the lug nuts would have a tendency to come loose; (3) the manufacturer of the van (Ford), which was also the manufacturer of plaintiff's car, for negligence and strict liability with respect to the van and for strict liability with respect to plaintiff's car because of a defect in the design of the windshield that led it to shatter on impact by the wheel and tire, thereby aggravating plaintiff's injuries; and (4) the company that had serviced the van some three months before the accident (Sears), for negligence.

Sneed's insurer settled with plaintiff for his insurance policy limits of $25,000. At a meeting among the remaining defendants held before the scheduled mandatory settlement conference, Abbott assessed the reasonable settlement value of the case at $2.5 million and offered to contribute 70 percent of that sum (its liability insurance policy provided coverage of $3.25 million); Ford and Sears, maintaining they had only minimal, if any, responsibility for the accident, were unwilling to bear 30 percent ($750,000) of the settlement. At about the same time, plaintiffs offered to settle with Ford and Sears if they would enter into a sliding-scale agreement guaranteeing plaintiff $1.5 million. Both defendants declined the offer. Abbott subsequently entered into a sliding-scale agreement with plaintiff, guaranteeing a recovery of $3 million, if at the conclusion of the lawsuit, she failed to collect the guaranteed amounts from the remaining defendants. In addition, the dealer's insurer agreed to make substantial, periodic, no-interest loans to plaintiffs and their attorneys during the course of the litigation and was obligated to pay the full $3 million, in the form of a no-interest loan, by a specified date if the action was not then terminated.

Abbott subsequently moved for a good-faith determination of the agreement. The trial court ruled the settlement was not a good-faith settlement and Abbott sought review by writ of mandate. The court of appeal held that the agreement constituted a good-faith settlement as a matter of law. The Supreme Court granted a hearing, held the case pending release of its decision in Tech-Bilt [Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159] , which, when issued, disapproved the line of cases relied on by the court of appeal, and then remanded the case to the court of appeal to reconsider it in light of Tech-Bilt. On remand, the court of appeal concluded the good-faith standard enunciated in Tech-Bilt applies to sliding-scale agreements, but held that even under that standard, the agreement constituted a good-faith settlement as a matter of law. The Supreme Court granted review. While review was pending, the case was fully settled. Because important issues of law were involved, the Court, at the parties' urging, retained jurisdiction.

The Court agreed with the court of appeal that Tech-Bilt applies to sliding-scale agreement because neither Code Civ. Proc. § 877 nor Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 exempts them from the good-faith requirement, and nothing in Code Civ. Proc. § 877.5, a provision enacted to protect against the unfair consequences that may flow from undisclosed sliding-scale agreements, indicated that they need not meet the generally applicable good-faith standard (43 Cal. 3d 858, 875) .

The Court, however, declined either to condemn or condone categorically sliding-scale agreements (commonly known throughout the country as "Mary Carter agreements," sometimes referred to as "Gallagher covenants," and occasionally as "guaranteed verdict agreements" (43 Cal. 3d 858, 863 n.1, 869 n.9)) for the following reasons: (1) an enormous variety of contractual arrangements fall within the general rubric of sliding-scale agreements and, although in all such agreements the settling defendant's ultimate liability to the plaintiff is dependent, at least in part, on the amount of money that the plaintiff recovers from the nonsettling defendants, there are a virtually unlimited number of additional provisions that may be included in such an agreement that will often affect substantially the operation and validity of the agreements (43 Cal. 3d 858, 863 n.1, 870) ; (2) the content and effect of the sliding-scale provision itself and the factual background against which the agreement is negotiated frequently vary significantly from case to case, and may also have a significant bearing on the fairness and propriety of a particular agreement (43 Cal. 3d 858, 870-871) ; and (3) a broad ruling on the inherent validity or invalidity of sliding-scale agreements in general is inappropriate because such an agreement may have a variety of effects at different stages of the litigation process--discovery, settlement, trial, or appeal (43 Cal. 3d 858, 871) .

The Court then discussed the Tech-Bilt factors and how they applied to sliding-scale agreements, and held that in order for the nonsettling defendants to be given credit against any judgment against them for the amount of consideration given for the sliding-scale settlement, the plaintiff and the settling tortfeasor would have to agree to a value, which would have to meet Tech-Bilt's "ballpark" standard if it were to constitute a good-faith settlement relieving the settling defendant from any claims for contribution or indemnity by the nonsettling defendants (43 Cal. 3d 858, 871-884) . The Court in sum concluded the following: (1) Tech-Bilt's good-faith standard applies to sliding-scale agreements; (2) to satisfy the statutory objective of a fair apportionment of loss, the "consideration" paid by a defendant who enters into a sliding-scale agreement must fall within the Tech-Bilt "ballpark" and the plaintiffs' claims against the remaining defendants must be reduced by the amount of the "consideration paid" by the settling defendant; (3) any unreasonable or bad-faith conduct of the nonsettling defendants that impeded the settlement process and led to the sliding-scale agreement may be taken into account in determining whether the agreement satisfies the "ballpark" standard; and (4) any provision that purports to give a settling defendant a "veto" over subsequent settlements is valid only if it is limited to settlements that would leave the earlier settling defendant to bear more than its fair share of liability for the plaintiffs' damages (43 Cal. 3d 858, 886-887) . The Court further said that the settling parties had placed no value on the sliding-scale agreement and that, had the case not been settled, it would have ordered the court of appeal to remand it to the trial court for further consideration of this issue (43 Cal. 3d 858, 880) .

NOTE:

In actions based on acts or omissions occurring on or after January 1, 1988, a sliding-scale recovery agreement is not effective unless, at least 72 hours prior to entering into the agreement, a notice of intent to enter into an agreement is served on all nonsignatory alleged defendant tortfeasors. On a showing of good cause, the court or a judge thereof may allow a shorter time for notification. Failure to comply with this notice requirement does not constitute good cause to delay commencement of trial [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.5(c); see Stats. 1987, ch. 1202, § 2 (limiting effectiveness to acts or omissions occurring on or after January 1, 1988)] .

NOTE:

In order to meet its burden of proving that a sliding-scale settlement is not in good faith, a non-settling defendant is entitled to discover all of the provisions of the agreement [J. Allen Radford Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1423,-1424 ; see § 115.159].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.159

§ 115.159 Supporting Motion to Deny Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settling Parties Have Not Provided Sufficient Information Regarding Allocation of Settlement

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 115.150.]

THE SETTLEMENT AT ISSUE CANNOT BE CONFIRMED AS HAVING BEEN MADE IN GOOD FAITH BECAUSE THE PARTIES TO THE SETTLEMENT HAVE NOT PROVIDED THE COURT AND OPPOSING PARTIES WITH ADEQUATE INFORMATION REGARDING THE VALUATION OF THE VARIOUS ELEMENTS OF THE SETTLEMENT AND/OR THE ALLOCATION AMONG THE ISSUES AND/OR PARTIES.

A. Inadequate Information Regarding Settlement's Apportionment of Damages. A settlement agreement that does not completely describe how it allocates amounts between issues or parties, and describe the nature and value of any nonmonetary consideration, cannot be confirmed as having been made in good faith (Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1128-1129, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844).

[Optional] B. Settlement Sought to Be Confirmed Cannot Be Withheld on Confidentiality Grounds. The parties to a settlement may not both seek confirmation of the agreement and withhold the agreement from nonsettling defendants on the grounds of confidentiality (Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1127, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 ; J. Allen Radford Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1423-1424, 265 Cal. Rptr. 535).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to an application pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 for judicial confirmation of a settlement as in good faith. The ground of the form is that the settling parties have not disclosed to the court and to opposing parties sufficient information concerning the terms of the settlement to permit the court to determine whether or not the settlement was made in good faith. The form is appropriate in a case in which defendants are not all potentially liable to plaintiff for the same amount, either because different defendants are alleged to be responsible for different measures of damages, or because different defendants are alleged to be responsible based on different legal theories. The optional paragraph is for use if the settling parties assert that all or part of the settlement agreement is confidential and should not be disclosed to the other parties or to the court. The nonsettling defendant would use this form in order to preserve rights to comparative indemnity or contribution that will be extinguished if the good faith of the settlement is confirmed [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)].

Counsel should insert argument in the form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should establish the apportionment issues that are not addressed by the information on the settlement agreement accompanying the motion to confirm the settlement as in good faith, and should set forth the factors tending to indicate that the confirmation of the settlement would be unfair to the nonsettling party's position in the lawsuit.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inadequate Information Regarding Settlement's Apportionment of Damages

Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 , was an action brought by a homeowners' association against Sears Savings Bank (developer), the developer of a condominium development, and other parties, seeking damages for construction defects. The complaint alleged various defects in the development, including defects in the roofs, gutters, soil, and foundations. The developer cross complained against contractors and subcontractors, including Alcal Roofing & Insulation (roofer), which had also been served with the original complaint. Several settlement conferences followed, under the supervision of a special master, and developer settled with plaintiff for $4.4 million; under the terms of the agreement, all other parties, with the exception of roofer, agreed to contribute $1.3 million of that amount to settle developer's cross complaint. The settling parties agreed that $100,000 of the settlement amount would cover roofing damages. The trial court granted the settling parties' motion to confirm the settlement as in good faith over the objection of roofer, and roofer sought a writ of mandate to vacate the confirmation.

The court of appeal issued the writ. The court noted that the roofer, as the party asserting the lack of good faith, had the burden of proof pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(d) (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1125) . Roofer produced evidence that plaintiff's original settlement demand was for $6 million, of which $2 million was for roofing issues. Developer had argued that roofer had substantial statute of limitations defenses to plaintiff's claims, which justified the low allocation to roofing issues in the settlement. However, the court of appeal noted that the written settlement agreement was not before the trial court (or the court of appeal). Although the written agreement itself need not be before the court, the court and all parties must be timely advised of the important terms of the settlement (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1127) . The court stated that it was not clear whether any of the $1.3 million contributed by the other settling parties should have been offset against roofer's potential liability, and whether a settlement between a subcontractor and developer (that was not a settlement with plaintiff) could be the basis for precluding indemnity from that subcontractor (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1127-1128) .

The court concluded that the roofer's burden to show that the allocation was improper did not arise, because the settling parties failed to present to roofer and to the court a clear and complete picture of the settlement or settlements. At a minimum, a party seeking confirmation must explain to the court and to all other parties: who has settled with whom, the dollar amount of each settlement, if any settlement is allocated, how it is allocated between issues and/or parties, what nonmonetary consideration has been included, and how the parties to the settlement value the nonmonetary consideration (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1129) . Because the court could not determine (1) what settlement or settlements the court approved, (2) when and in what way the subcontractors joined in the settlement, and (3) the value of the assigned rights, the court issued a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to vacate its confirmation of the settlement (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1129) .

[b] Settlement Sought to Be Confirmed Cannot Be Withheld on Confidentiality Grounds

The facts and procedural background of Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844 , are discussed in § 115.159[3][a]. The court relied on J. Allen Radford Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1423-1424, 265 Cal. Rptr. 535 , for the proposition that a party may not both seek confirmation of a settlement agreement and withhold it from nonsettling defendants on grounds of confidentiality (8 Cal. App. 4th 1121, 1127) .

In J. Allen Radford Co. v. Superior Court (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 265 Cal. Rptr. 535 , a lessee and sublessee of commercial property were sued by the lessor for rescission of the lease, ejectment, and an injunction, based on the sublessee's construction that allegedly violated the lease rights of other tenants. The lessee and sublessee cross complained against the lessor and its managing agent and others on various tort and contract causes of action, and entered into a sliding scale settlement agreement with the lessor (who had cross complained against the managing agent). In the motion to confirm the settlement, the lessor disclosed that it would pay the lessee and sublessee a specified amount, which could be reduced (by undisclosed amounts) on the happening of various contingencies. The managing agent argued that it could not adequately oppose the motion without seeing the agreement. The trial court declined to order the agreement produced, and entered an order finding the settlement to have been in good faith. The managing agent petitioned for a writ of mandate.

The court of appeal issued the writ. The court noted that there are valid reasons that parties may wish to maintain the confidentiality of a settlement agreement, but held that they may not claim a privilege of nondisclosure when they move to confirm the good faith of the settlement under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 (216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1423) . No statute allows the moving party under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to refuse to disclose the terms of the settlement agreement that it contends was made in good faith, so the agreement's terms should have been disclosed (216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1423) . The court did state that the lessor remains free to withdraw its motion if it does not wish to disclose the document (216 Cal. App. 3d 1418, 1424) .

NOTE:

There appears to be a split of authority as to whether the written settlement agreement must be revealed in its entirety in order for it to be confirmed as in good faith. In Mediplex of California, Inc. v. Superior Court, the court of appeal held that the agreement itself must be produced, and that it is not sufficient to merely summarize what the settling parties claim to be the important terms. The court noted the possibility of in camera review of the agreement by the court, but neither expressly sanctioned nor rejected this procedure as a way of maintaining a certain amount of confidentiality [Mediplex of Cal., Inc. v. Superior Court (1995) 34 Cal. App. 4th 748, 750 n.2, 750-754, 40 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397] . However, in Alcal Roofing and Insulation v. Superior Court, the court of appeal stated that the agreement itself need not be executed and presented to the court as long as all of the parties are timely advised of the important terms of the settlement [Alcal Roofing & Insulation v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App.

4th 1121, 1127, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 844] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inadequate Information Regarding Settlement's Apportionment of Damages

In Franklin Mint Co. v. Superior Court (2005) 130 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , the plaintiffs brought a malicious prosecution action against the defendants and their former attorneys. The plaintiffs reached a settlement with the defendants, although the attorneys did not settle. Under the terms of the settlement, the defendants agreed to pay $25 million into an escrow account. Of this amount, $1 million would be paid to a charity selected by the plaintiffs in their name. The remaining $24 million would eventually be distributed to charities selected by the defendants, with the charitable donations being made in the name of both the defendants and the plaintiffs. In addition, the defendants would ensure that their CEO testified at trial against their former attorneys and would assist in obtaining the testimony of third-party witnesses. The trial court determined that the settlement was made in good faith and determined that the non-settling defendants, the attorneys, would be allowed to set off $25 million against any recovery made against them. The plaintiffs sought a writ of mandate challenging the amount of the set off, arguing that because only $1 million would be under their control, that should have been the amount of the set off. The court of appeal granted the writ, although the court disagreed with the plaintiff that the amount of the set off should be limited to $1 million. The court held that the trial court erred in determining that the settlement was made in good faith because the parties failed to provide any evidence of intangible elements that materially affected the valuation of the settlement. The court noted that some value must be placed on the intangible benefits that would accrue to both of the parties by virtue of having large donations made in their respective names to various charities. In addition, some value must be placed on the assistance promised to be provided by the defendants' CEO in testifying and obtaining witnesses at the trial against their former attorneys. Although the court recognized that it might be difficult to provide valuation evidence for these elements of the settlement, some valuation was required and the trial court erred in approving a $25 million valuation without taking these elements into consideration (130 Cal. App. 4th 1550, 1558-1561) .

In United Servs. Auto. Ass'n v. Superior Court (2001) 93 Cal. App. 4th 633, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 328 , the plaintiffs suffered a $13 million judgment in an underlying action and then brought suit against their insurer and their attorneys. The attorneys settled with the plaintiffs for $4.5 million, which included a payment of $1 million and an interest-free loan of $3.5 million, with repayment on the loan contingent on the amount of any recovery against the insurer. The settling parties sought and gained a determination that the settlement was in good faith, even though they placed, and the trial court accepted, a total value of only $1 million on the consideration for the settlement. However, the court of appeal, relying primarily on Abbott Ford, Inc. v. Superior Court (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 858, 239 Cal. Rptr. 626, 741 P.2d 124 [see § 115.158], held that the trial court erred in approving the settlement. Rather than trying to assign a fair value to the $3.5 million loan, the parties to the settlement essentially conceded that they used the value of the noncontingent $1 million payment as the value of the settlement consideration. The court held that the loan must be fairly valued and rejected the settling parties' approach as too mechanical to demonstrate any real effort to realize a fair and equitable valuation. Because the settling parties provided no meaningful analysis, expert opinion, or other evidence to support their valuation, the court reversed the good-faith determination (93 Cal. App. 4th 633, 642-644) .

In Brehm Cmtys. v. Superior Court (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 730, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 918 , the plaintiffs were investors who filed a class action lawsuit against dozens of defendants allegedly responsible for a scheme to defraud the plaintiffs in the sale of securities. The plaintiffs settled with a financial investment firm and its three principals, although no money was to be paid to the plaintiffs under the terms of the settlement. Instead, the settlement consisted entirely of unvalued assets and other intangibles, including such items as waivers and transfers of claims, guaranteed access to information and persons in preparation for the litigation against the remaining defendants, and similar items. Although no evidence was produced placing a valuation on the nonmonetary settlement elements, the trial court determined that the settlement was in good faith. The court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal held that even if making a valuation is difficult, a trial court cannot make a determination that a settlement is in good faith without requiring a valuation of nonmonetary settlement elements, based on competent, admissible evidence. A hearsay statement by a retired judge that the settlement terms were fair was not sufficient (88 Cal. App. 4th 730, 735-736) .

192 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.160

§ 115.160 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Amount Represents Reasonable Apportionment Based on Information Available At Time of Settlement

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name]	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR JUDICIAL
vs.	)	DETERMINATION OF GOOD-FAITH SETTLE-
_____ [name],	)	MENT
Defendant.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
		Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE AMOUNT OF THE SETTLEMENT REFLECTS A REASONABLE EVALUATION OF LIABILITY ON THE BASIS OF AVAILABLE INFORMATION.

Time of Evaluation. The evaluation must be made on the basis of information available at the time of settlement ( Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; County of Los Angeles v. Guerrero (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1156, 257 Cal. Rptr. 787).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for judicial confirmation that a settlement was in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The ground of the form is that the amount of the settlement is not disproportionate to what a reasonable person, at the time of the settlement, would estimate the settling defendant's liability to be. The form may be used by a joint tortfeasor or co-obligor on a nontort obligation who wishes to extinguish any potential liability to the nonsettling defendants for comparative indemnity or contribution [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 877(b), 877.6(c)]. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.156.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the settling defendant and the party opposing the motion are both alleged to be liable to the plaintiff, either as joint or concurrent tortfeasors or as co-obligors on a nontort obligation; (2) the plaintiff and the settling party have entered into a settlement agreement involving a release and dismissal with prejudice, or other device that will terminate the litigation with regard to the settling party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877]; and (3) the amount that the settling party is to pay to the plaintiff under the settlement reflects a reasonable range of the settling defendant's potential liability to the plaintiff.

The objecting party bears the burden of proof to establish bad faith [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(d); see § 115.156[2]]. However, if the objecting party puts forth credible evidence that the settlement is not based on a reasonable evaluation of the settling defendant's liability, the settling parties must be prepared to present contrary evidence based on a sufficient factual foundation [see Greshko v. County of Los Angeles (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 822, 834-835, 239 Cal. Rptr. 846 ; see also § 115.156].

When making a determination that a settlement is made in good faith, the trial court may make an initial allocation of settlement proceeds between issues or parties only to change the allocation based on evidence produced at trial against non-settling defendants [see § 115.159]. For example, if the evidence produced at trial shows that the defendants should not be held liable for one claimed category of damage, settlement amounts initially allocated to compensate for that type of damage may be allocated by the trial court to other categories of damage [see, e.g., El Escorial Owners' Assn. v. DLC Plastering, Inc. (2007) 154 Cal. App. 4th 1337, 1351-1352, 65 Cal. Rptr. 3d 524] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Time of Evaluation

Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 , is discussed in § 115.156[3][a]. In delineating the factors that a court should take into account in considering whether a settlement is in good faith, the Court stated that practical considerations obviously require that the evaluation be made on the basis of information available at the time of settlement. A defendant's settlement figure must not be grossly disproportionate to what a reasonable person, at the time of the settlement, would estimate the settling defendant's liability to be (38 Cal. 3d 488, 499) .

The facts of County of Los Angeles v. Guerrero (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 257 Cal. Rptr. 787 , are discussed in § 115.161[3][b]. An underinsured but judgment-proof tortfeasor (Guerrero) entered into a settlement entered for liability insurance policy limits. It was conceded that the amount of the settlement was not within a reasonable range of Guerrero's proportional share of comparative liability. The nonsettling tortfeasor posited that Guerrero might someday win the lottery or receive some other windfall. Because it is conceivable that he might be able, at some point, to satisfy a judgment, he should not be dismissed out of the case. The court of appeal rejected the argument, citing Tech-Bilt for its statement that practical considerations obviously require that the evaluation of good faith be made on the basis of information available at the time of the settlement (209 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1158) .

[4] Additional Authorities

Erreca's v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 156 , involved an action by a homeowners' association and various individuals against the developers and the graders of a residential subdivision. The plaintiffs reached a settlement agreement with the developers and a number of the defendants who had worked on the structures. The settlement agreement apportioned the settlement (which totalled $6.8 million) between "soils" and "non-soils" issues at $1.5 million for soils issues and the rest to non-soils issues, and valued the plaintiff's assigned rights to seek the settling defendants' indemnity rights from the non-settling soils defendant at $300,000. The grader, who was the only defendant not to settle, contested the good faith of the settlement, but the trial court confirmed the settlement as in good faith, and also purported to order that the grader would receive only $500,000 credit on any judgment, based on the $1.5 million soils settlement. The grader sought a writ of mandate to reverse the good-faith determination.

The court of appeal issued the writ to the extent that the good-faith determination granted the grader only $500,000 credit on the $1.5 million soils portion of the settlement, but held that substantial evidence supported the finding that the settlement was otherwise made in good faith (19 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 1496, 1499) . With respect to the valuation of the indemnity rights, the court of appeal rejected the grader's contention that the valuation should await the trial; to do so would eliminate the incentive to accept such indemnity rights as consideration for a pre-trial settlement (19 Cal. App. 4th 1475, 1498-1499) .

193 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.161

§ 115.161 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Settlement With Underinsured Judgment-Proof Tortfeasor for Liability Policy Limits Is in Good Faith Regardless of Whether Settlement Is in Reasonable Range

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 115.160.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE _____ [name of settling defendant] HAS NO ASSETS SUBJECT TO EXECUTION BEYOND THE LIMITS OF HIS/HER LIABILITY INSURANCE POLICY.

A. Financial Condition of Settling Party Is Factor to Be Considered. The financial condition and insurance policy limits of the settling party are relevant considerations in determining whether a settlement was made in good faith (Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 ; City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1265, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119).

B. Underinsured and Judgment-Proof Tortfeasors. A settlement entered into by an underinsured but judgment-proof tortfeasor for insurance liability limits is in good faith (County of Los Angeles v. Guerrero (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 1155-1158, 257 Cal. Rptr. 787 ; Schmid v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 1247-1249, 253 Cal. Rptr. 137).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for judicial confirmation that a settlement was made in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The ground of the form is that the settling defendant is judgment proof except for liability insurance coverage and the policy limits are to be paid in the settlement. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.156.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the settling defendant and the party opposing the motion are both alleged to be liable to the plaintiff; (2) the plaintiff and the settling party have entered into a settlement agreement involving a release and dismissal with prejudice, or other device that will terminate the litigation with regard to the settling party [see Code Civ. Proc. § 877]; and (3) the settlement involves payment of liability insurance policy limits by the settling party; and (4) the settling party is otherwise judgment proof--that is, he or she has no other assets that are subject to process from which a judgment could be satisfied.

The objecting party bears the burden of proof to establish bad faith [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(d); see § 115.156[2]]. However, it may be a relatively simple matter for a nonsettling party to prove that the insurance policy limits are far below the settling party's reasonable range of liability. Therefore, the settling party effectively bears the burden of proving that he or she has no other assets.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Financial Condition of Settling Party Is Factor to Be Considered

Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159 , is discussed in § 115.156[3][a]. In delineating the factors that a court should take into account in considering whether a settlement is in good faith, the Court stated that relevant considerations include the financial conditions and insurance policy limits of settling defendants (38 Cal. 3d 488, 499) .

City of Grand Terrace v. Superior Court (1987) 192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 238 Cal. Rptr. 119 , was a proceeding in mandate to review the propriety of the trial court's order determining that plaintiff's settlement with her defendant-husband had been entered into in good faith. The action was based on a single-car accident in which plaintiff was a passenger and her husband was the driver. The action against the cities of Grand Terrace and Colton was based on the assertion of a dangerous condition in that the roadway was not properly designed, maintained, marked, barricaded, or lighted. Both cities filed cross complaints for indemnity against the husband.

Plaintiff claimed damages of $225,000 in her claim against the public entities. She settled her claim against her husband for $60,000, which her husband's insurer had agreed to pay. The policy limits were $300,000, but coverage was contested by the insurer on the ground that the policy contained a valid family-exclusion clause. The husband had been employed as an airline pilot for 23 years, but neither his salary nor his net worth were before the trial court at the good-faith hearing.

In the mandate proceeding, the cities contended that the husband was primarily liable for the accident, and the settlement did not reflect a reasonable range of his liability for the wife's damages. They claimed that there was insufficient evidence presented concerning the husband's financial condition and the availability of additional money from the insurer, both of which could have been added to the settlement, if available, to make up the husband's proportionate share in settlement.

The court of appeal agreed (192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1263) . In granting the writ of mandate, the court of appeal said that the financial condition of the settling defendant was a relevant factor for the trial court to consider under Tech-Bilt (192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1265) . The court stated that, "Assuming settlor was a person of wealth, at first blush it would appear ridiculous to require him to contribute personal assets to plaintiff, his wife, in order to obtain good faith settlement approval. However, such could be required in order to protect the nonsettlors, who under section 877, subdivision (a), would be entitled to a set-off for amounts previously paid against any judgment ultimately rendered against them" (192 Cal. App. 3d 1251, 1264) .

NOTE:

In Grand Terrace, the court's language suggests that an injured spouse may actually be compelled to execute against the property of his or her tortfeasor spouse pursuant to a settlement. Thus, under the court's view, a nonsettling defendant may compel one spouse to transfer his or her separate property and interest in community property to the other, even if the injured spouse, for reasons related to the marriage relationship, does not wish to proceed against the spouse [see Fam. Code § 781(c) (damages paid by one spouse to another for personal injury are separate property)]. The public-policy concerns of such a rule, involving a possibly unwarranted intrusion into the private marriage relationship, were not considered by the court in Grand Terrace [see Barbara A. v. John G. (1983) 145 Cal. App. 3d 369, 380, 193 Cal. Rptr. 422 (constitutional right of privacy extends to all matters related to marriage, family, and sex)] .

One possible approach that might protect the interests of both the nonsettling defendants and the marital partners is to require the spouse's settlement figure to be within a reasonable range of liability, but to accept a covenant by which the injured spouse agrees not to execute on the tortfeasor spouse's property other than insurance proceeds. In that way, the nonsettling defendants would get a reasonable credit against judgment, but the settlement process would not intrude on the marital relationship and property rights between the spouses.

In any case, the interests of the nonsettling defendants are less prejudiced now than at the time of Grand Terrace because of the Equal Responsibility Act of 1986 (Proposition 51) [see Civ. Code §§ 1431.1-1431.5]. Regardless of the amount of any settlement, a nonsettling defendant will be severally liable only for its comparative share of noneconomic damages as found by the trier of fact at trial [Civ. Code § 1431.2(a); see § 115.09]. The concerns expressed by the court in Grand Terrace are still relevant to economic damages, because tortfeasors are still jointly liable for these damages [Civ. Code §§ 1431, 1431.2(a)]. Thus, an unduly low settlement still leaves a nonsettling tortfeasor to pay a disproportionate share of economic damages.

[b] Underinsured and Judgment-Proof Tortfeasors

In County of Los Angeles v. Guerrero (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 1149, 257 Cal. Rptr. 787 , Russo was severely injured in a collision with an automobile driven by Guerrero. Russo claimed against Guerrero's liability insurance, and the insurer paid the policy limits of $30,000 in exchange for a release of Guerrero. Russo then brought an action against the county, among others (not including Guerrero), alleging negligent maintenance and design of the roadway. The county cross complained against Guerrero for comparative indemnity. Guerrero then filed a motion under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 to confirm the prior settlement as in good faith and to dismiss the cross complaint. In support of the motion, he alleged that, apart from the insurance proceeds, his only assets were his wages ($550 gross weekly), $11,000 equity in his home, two 8-year-old vehicles, and $100 in a checking account. He conceded that the $30,000 settlement was below his probable proportionate liability for damages, but submitted that in view of his limited assets, the settlement was in good faith. The trial court granted the motion, and the county appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It first held that a settlement entered into before suit was filed could be confirmed afterwards. With regard to the conceded failure of the settlement to reach a reasonable range, the court cited Tech-Bilt's language that, even if the claimant's damages are obviously great and the liability certain, a disproportionately low settlement figure is often reasonable in the case of a relatively insolvent, and uninsured or underinsured, joint tortfeasor [see Tech-Bilt, Inc. v. Woodward-Clyde & Assocs. (1985) 38 Cal. 3d 488, 499, 213 Cal. Rptr. 256, 698 P.2d 159] . The court found that Tech-Bilt addressed the very fact situation before it, and that Guerrero's modest financial condition and insurance policy limits were necessarily controlling and effectively overrode the reasonable range requirement. The injustice in the result was no different from any other case involving jointly liable tortfeasors, one of whom was insolvent, leaving the other to pay the entire judgment without a meaningful action for comparative indemnity (204 Cal. App. 3d 1148, 1156-1158) .

Schmid v. Superior Court (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1244, 253 Cal. Rptr. 137 , involved a fact situation very similar to that in County of Los Angeles v. Guerrero. The defendants were the driver of the automobile in which the plaintiff was a passenger, and the county, which was sued on allegations regarding the condition of the highway. The driver, who had been intoxicated at the time of the accident, had no assets other than her insurance policy limits. The plaintiff settled with the driver for the policy limits and moved for confirmation of the settlement as in good faith. In the moving papers, the parties allocated potential liability 10 to 20 percent to the driver and 80 to 90 percent to the county. Despite the fact that the county did not oppose the petition, the trial court rejected the settlement.

On mandate, the court of appeal reversed and issued a writ directing an order granting the motion. The court of appeal agreed with the trial court that the apportionment of fault was "facially preposterous," but nevertheless found the settlement to have been in good faith. The court held that a disproportionately low settlement figure is reasonable in the case of a relatively insolvent and underinsured joint tortfeasor (205 Cal. App.3d 1244, 1248) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.162

§ 115.162 Supporting Motion for Judicial Confirmation of Good Faith of Settlement [Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6]--Provision Requiring Settling Tortfeasor to Participate at Trial Does Not Preclude Finding of Good Faith

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 115.160.]

THE MOTION FOR AN ORDER DETERMINING THAT THE SETTLEMENT OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM AGAINST _____ [name of settling defendant] WAS MADE IN GOOD FAITH SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE THE REQUIREMENT THAT _____ [name of settling defendant] PARTICIPATE IN THE TRIAL IS REASONABLE AND NONCOLLUSIVE AND THE SETTLEMENT IN ALL OTHER RESPECTS SATISFIES THE STATUTORY GOOD-FAITH REQUIREMENT.

A. Settling Defendant May Participate in Trial. A provision in a settlement agreement requiring that the settling tortfeasor participate in the trial (to deprive the remaining defendants of the trial tactic of using the "empty chair" to ascribe fault to an actor who is not there to defend himself or herself) does not preclude a finding that the settlement was in good faith, as long as the jury is informed of the nature and terms of the settlement (Everman v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 466, 471-472, 473, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176).

B. Participation at Trial by Settling Defendants Does Not Deprive Non Settling Defendant's of Fair Trial. The participation of settling defendants at trial does not deprive the nonsettling defendants of a fair trial as long as the nature of their interest is fully disclosed to the jury (Alcala Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1318, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 349).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of a motion for judicial confirmation that a settlement was in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6. The point set forth in the form is for use in cases in which the settlement agreement requires the settling tortfeasor to remain in the case and actively participate as a defendant. The point is intended to counter any argument by nonsettling defendants that such a provision precludes a finding that the settlement is in good faith so as to shelter the settling defendant from liability for comparative indemnity. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.157. It may be combined, in an appropriate case, with the points and authorities set forth in §§ 115.160 and 115.161.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Settling Defendant May Participate in Trial

In Everman v. Superior Court (1992) 8 Cal. App. 4th 466, 471-472, 473, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 176 , a personal injury action arising from an automobile accident, the plaintiff entered into proposed settlements with the driver of the car that struck him and the driver's employer. The city and another driver remained in the action as defendants. Plaintiff's agreement with the driver contained a covenant not to execute on any judgment against the driver and required the driver to participate and be represented at trial. The trial court denied the settling defendants' motion for a determination of good faith on the ground that leaving the driver in the case was inconsistent with the concept underlying Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 that a "settling defendant is then insulated from further litigation and is taken out of the lawsuit" and on the ground that the settlement was collusive because the driver, insulated from liability, was essentially participating on behalf of the plaintiff.

The court of appeal initially denied the settling defendants a writ. Review was granted by the California Supreme Court and the matter was retransferred to the court of appeal with direction to issue an alternative writ. The court of appeal issued the writ. It held that the participation of the driver did not preclude a finding that the settlement was in good faith (8 Cal. App. 4th 466, 473) . The court found that the driver was kept in the trial not as a matter of collusion but simply to deprive the remaining defendants of the trial tactic of using the "empty chair" to ascribe fault to an actor who was not there to defend himself. Any misconception or bias arising from the participation of the settling defendant would be avoided by disclosure to the jury of the nature and terms of the settlement (8 Cal. App.4th 466, 471-472) . The court also concluded that the driver's participation did not defeat the policy goal of finalizing involvement in litigation through settlement, stating that the driver's participation involved no less finality than a settling defendant's participation under a sliding scale agreement (8 Cal. App.4th 466, 472-473) .

[b] Participation at Trial by Settling Defendants Does Not Deprive Non Settling Defendant's of Fair Trial

In Alcala Co. v. Superior Court (1996) 49 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 57 Cal. Rptr. 2d 349 , a homeowners association sued the developers and two general contractors for construction defects in a condominium development. The developers and general contractors in turn filed cross-complaints against the subconcontractors. The developers and one general contractor entered into a sliding scale or "Mary Carter" settlement agreement with the plaintiff which the trial court found to be in good faith. The trial court allowed the settling defendants to remain as defendants in the direct action brought by the association. The nonsettling defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate directing the trial court to vacate this order.

The court of appeal ruled that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in allowing the settling developers and general contractor to continue as defendants in the direct action. Rather, it held that adequate disclosure of the settlement agreement and the true interests of the parties to the jury could adequately protect the interest of the nonsettling parties (49 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1310) . In the course of its ruling the court rejected both of plaintiffs' arguments, that there was no justiciable controversy remaining between the homeowners association and the settling defendants, and that the continued participation of settling defendants was collusive, fraudulent and injurious to the nonsettling cross-defendants since the settling defendants and homeowners association's interests were aligned to maximize the homeowners association's recovery against the settling defendants so that they could all ultimately share in a greater recovery against the nonsettling defendants. The court responded that the settling defendants remained interested parties in the action and that as long as the nature of their interest was fully disclosed to the jury, their presence at trial would facilitate full consideration of all relevant evidence and the determination of the association's damages (49 Cal. App. 4th 1308, 1319) .

195 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.163

§ 115.163 Supporting Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Payment Was Made Voluntarily, Without Regard to Legal Liability

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] IS NOT ENTITLED TO _____ [EXPRESS INDEMNITY or IMPLIED INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] BECAUSE _____ [party, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S] PAYMENT WAS MADE VOLUNTARILY WITHOUT REGARD TO LEGAL LIABILITY.

[EITHER]

No Indemnity for Voluntary Payment. Indemnity against loss does not cover losses for which the indemnitee is not liable to a third person, but nevertheless pays (Southern Cal. Gas. Co. v. Ventura Pipe Line Constr. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 253, 257, 309 P.2d 849).

[OR]

No Contribution for Voluntary Payment. A party is entitled to contribution only if payment was made under a legal obligation and not as a volunteer (Schlitz v. Thomas (1923) 61 Cal. App 635, 638, 216 P. 51).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in opposition to a claim for indemnity or contribution on the ground that the indemnitee or party seeking contribution was a "volunteer." A volunteer has been defined as a mere stranger or intermeddler who has no interest to protect and no moral or legal obligation to pay [see Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 122] .

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee or party seeking contribution has made a payment to a third party that it seeks to recover, entirely or in part; and (2) the payor was under no legal obligation to make the payment at issue.

[b] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the points and authorities in §§ 115.164 and 115.165 may be used to oppose the contention supported by these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Indemnity for Voluntary Payment

The facts and holding of Southern Cal. Gas Co. v. Ventura Pipe Line Constr. Co. (1957) 150 Cal. App. 2d 253, 309 P.2d 849 , are discussed in § 115.39[3][a]. The court held that an express indemnity agreement does not extend to payments that the indemnitee is contractually obligated to make if the indemnitor had no knowledge of the contract at the time when the indemnity agreement is signed. In reaching its conclusion, the court noted that an indemnitee cannot recover beyond the terms of the indemnity contract, and a voluntary payment made by the indemnitee without regard to its legal liability is not recoverable. The general rule is that an indemnity against losses does not cover losses for which the indemnitee is not liable to a third person and for which he or she improperly pays (150 Cal. App. 2d 253, 257) .

CAUTION:

Since the advent of comparative indemnity in 1978 [see American Motorcycle Assn. v. Superior Court of Los Angeles County (1978) 20 Cal. 3d 578, 598, 146 Cal. Rptr. 182, 578 P.2d 899 ; see also § 115.60], the voluntary-payment limitation has often been cited, but almost never applied to deny indemnity [see §§ 115.164, 115.165]. In the modern world of crowded court dockets and public policy favoring settlement, it is questionable whether the rule has much applicability to the comparative indemnity rights of alleged tortfeasors [see § 115.164]. The one case that appears to have applied the rule to deny comparative indemnity did so without reciting it. In Woodward-Gizienski & Assocs. v. Geotechnical Exploration, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68, 255 Cal. Rptr. 800 [see § 115.69[3][d]], the court denied comparative indemnity on the ground that the indemnitee had settled for damages for which it was not legally liable. The court framed its holding, however, in terms of a lack of joint and several liability, rather than as involving a voluntary payment.

[b] No Contribution for Voluntary Payment

In Schlitz v. Thomas (1923) 61 Cal. App. 635, 216 P. 51 plaintiffs were the guarantors of a promissory note executed by a corporation to a bank, and defendants were stockholders of the corporation. The bank brought suit to collect the note, judgment was entered in favor of the bank, and plaintiffs satisfied the judgment. They then brought the instant action for reimbursement. The complaint failed to disclose whether plaintiffs were parties to the prior action in which the judgment was rendered on the note. The defendants contended that the liability of the corporation to pay the note had been extinguished by the statute of limitations, and that therefore, payment was voluntary and gave the plaintiffs no cause of action. The trial court found for plaintiffs and entered judgment accordingly.

The court of appeal reversed, finding that the corporation's liability to pay the $4,000 note had been extinguished by the statute of limitations before the alleged payment by plaintiffs and that the payment was, therefore, voluntary and gave plaintiffs no cause of action against defendants. The court based its decision on the principle that a guarantor or surety is entitled to contribution, reimbursement, or subrogation on account of payments made in behalf of his or her principal only if the payments are made under a legal obligation (61 Cal. App. 635, 638-639) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.164

§ 115.164 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Good-Faith Settlement Does Not Constitute Voluntary Payment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

_____ [Party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] IS NOT PRECLUDED FROM RECOVERING _____ [EXPRESS INDEMNITY or IMPLIED INDEMNITY or CONTRIBUTION] FROM _____ [nonsettling party] BECAUSE _____ [party, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S] PAYMENT TO _____ [settling party] WAS NOT "VOLUNTARY," BUT WAS MADE AS PART OF A GOOD FAITH SETTLEMENT MADE IN THE FACE OF ACTUAL, POTENTIAL, OR REASONABLY APPARENT LIABILITY.

A. Good-Faith Settlement Is Not Voluntary Payment. One acting in good faith in making payment under a reasonable belief that it is necessary to his or her protection is entitled to indemnity, even if it later develops that he or she had no interest to protect (Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1133, 230 Cal. Rptr. 122 ; see Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Whitson (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 757-758, 10 Cal. Rptr. 6).

[Optional] B. Settlement Following Refusal of Tendered Defense. If an indemnitor refuses to defend a third-party action against the indemnitee, the indemnitee may conduct its own defense of the action, and a good-faith settlement of the action creates a presumption as to the indemnitee's liability and the amount of liability (Peter Culley & Assocs. v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1497, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 ; see People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works v. Daly City Scavenger Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 282, 96 Cal. Rptr. 669 ; Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392, 338 P.2d 984 ; Civ. Code § 2778(5)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that indemnity is appropriate because a good-faith settlement is not a voluntary payment. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.163.

The authorities that support the points set forth in this form all involve claims for either express or implied indemnity. The voluntary payment rule has, however, also been applied as a limitation on contribution rights [see, e.g., Schlitz v. Thomas (1923) 61 Cal. App. 635, 216 P. 51 ; see also § 115.163[3][b]]. Therefore, the points set forth in this form may be adapted for use in support of a claim for contribution among nontort obligors [cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a) (co-obligors on contract debt may obtain judicial confirmation of settlement as in good faith)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee or party seeking contribution was alleged to be liable to a third party; (2) in settlement of this alleged liability, the indemnitee or party seeking contribution made the payment for which it now seeks indemnity or contribution; and (3) the settlement was entered into under a good-faith belief of potential liability to the third party. If the settlement has been judicially confirmed as made in good faith under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6, that fact should also be established.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Settlement Is Not Voluntary Payment

In Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 230 Cal. Rptr. 122 , one Burton was severely injured when a scaffolding collapsed while he was working as a carpenter, building a home for Chandler. Burton sued Mullin Lumber under a strict liability theory, alleging that Mullin had sold Chandler the wood that was used in the scaffolding. Chandler initially alleged that he could not find the particular piece of lumber in question. Mullin had supplied 84 percent of the particular kind of lumber in question that was used in constructing the house. Under the assumption that the particular piece was lost, Mullin settled Burton's entire claim and pursued a cause of action for comparative indemnity against Chandler [see § 115.66]. Mullin alleged that Chandler was negligent in using the lumber in a scaffolding, in failing to take other safety precautions to avoid injury to persons using the scaffolding, and in failing to hire competent subcontractors to supervise construction.

After Mullin's opening statement, Chandler revealed that he had found the broken board. Mullin declined the court's invitation to move for a mistrial, contending that the facts as they actually were had no relevance to its indemnity rights as long as there was a probability of liability at the time of settlement. Chandler then moved for nonsuit, contending that Mullin could not recover indemnity unless it could prove its own liability, and it could not prove that it had supplied the board in question. The trial court granted the motion.

The court of appeal reversed. It first held that the policies behind tort law would be undermined if settling defendants were required to prove their own liability in order to recover comparative indemnity. The court noted that the public-policy considerations underlying multiparty tort litigation were (1) the maximization of recovery to the injured party; (2) settlement of the injured party's claim; and (3) equitable apportionment of liability among concurrent tortfeasors. These policies would be seriously impaired if a settling defendant were required to prove its own fault before seeking indemnity against other alleged to have contributed to the plaintiff's injury. The court stated that every effort should be made to foster fair resolution of disputes and to avoid needless, time-consuming litigation. If a defendant concludes, for any of a variety of legitimate reasons, that it is in its best interest to settle with the injured party, it should be encouraged to do so. If a settling defendant must nevertheless prove its own fault to a trier of fact in order to obtain indemnity, it has little incentive to settle. From a defendant's point of view, settlement avoids a finding of fault. It also avoids the publicity, costs, and inconvenience of trial (185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1131-1132) .

The court then found no merit in Chandler's contention that Mullin must prove its own liability or be treated as a mere volunteer not entitled to indemnity. The court noted that a volunteer settlor has been defined as a mere stranger or intermeddler who has no interest to protect and no moral or legal obligation to pay. It recognized the rule that equitable indemnity is not available to a volunteer, but extends only to those who pay in performance of a legal duty in order to protect their own rights or interests. However, it noted the qualification on this rule, that one acting in good faith in making payment under a reasonable belief that it is necessary to his or her protection is entitled to indemnity, even if it develops that he or she, if fact, had no interest to protect. A settling party is not a volunteer if it settled in the face of actual, potential, or reasonably apparent liability. It then held that in an action for equitable indemnity based on comparative fault, a settling defendant need only prove that the settlement was based on a reasonable estimate of its liability at the time of settlement (185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1133-1134) .

NOTE:

The analysis of Mullin Lumber and the policies enumerated by the court have prevailed in a long line of cases involving unsuccessful challenges to settlements as alleged voluntary payments [see White Motor Corp. v. Teresinski (1989) 214 Cal. App. 3d 754, 764, 263 Cal. Rptr. 26 (settlement agreed to by party who had been dismissed from action in consideration of dropped appeal is not voluntary payment); State Farm & Cas. Co. v. Cooperative of Am. Physicians, Inc. (1984) 163 Cal. App. 3d 199, 203-204, 209 Cal. Rptr. 251 (settlement agreed to by premises liability insurer with duty to defend but who disputed coverage with professional liability insurer is not voluntary payment); Teachers Ins. Co. v. Smith (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 862, 864-866, 180 Cal. Rptr. 701 (insurer may settle and then allege insured's nonliability in independent action for indemnity); see also Aetna Life & Cas. Co. v. Ford Motor Co. (1975) 50 Cal. App. 3d 49, 52-53, 122 Cal. Rptr. 852 ; Mabie & Mintz v. B & E Installers (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 491, 496-497, 101 Cal. Rptr. 919 ; Great W. Furniture Co. v. Porter Corp. (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 502, 512, 48 Cal. Rptr. 76] . If the voluntary payment rule has any applicability to settlement, the court in Mullin Lumber found it in the area of a settlement involving payment of damages that the law does not recognize as compensable. The court gave the example of a settlement that encompassed payment for loss of parental consortium [see Nix v. Preformed Line Prods. Co. (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 975, 986, 216 Cal. Rptr. 581] .

An actual application of the voluntary payment limitation on this ground might be found in Woodward-Gizienski & Assocs. v. Geotechnical Exploration, Inc. (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 64, 68, 255 Cal. Rptr. 800 [see § 115.69[3][d]]. Without mentioning the voluntary payment rule, the court held that a settling defendant could not recover indemnity with regard to a settlement that included alleged excessive cost of repairs because, under California law, the settling defendant was liable only for the reasonable cost of repairs. The court framed its holding in terms of a lack of joint and several liability for the amount of the settlement that represented the excessive cost.

Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Whitson (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 10 Cal. Rptr. 6 , involved an express indemnity agreement. A contractor had entered into a written contract with a school district to construct a building. The contractor then asked plaintiff bonding company (Fidelity) to execute and furnish the performance, labor, and material bonds required by law. Defendant Whitson also requested Fidelity to execute the required bonds for and on behalf of the contractor. Whitson contractually agreed to indemnify Fidelity on the bonds. The terms of the agreement gave Fidelity the right to compromise and settle claims on the bonds. After the bonds were issued, the contractor failed to pay the claims of laborers, materialmen, and subcontractors. These claims were asserted against Fidelity, who notified Whitson. All but one of the claims were paid without resort to the bonds. On that last claim, Fidelity settled before trial for $2,500 and then sought reimbursement from Whitson. The trial court entered judgment for Fidelity, and Whitson appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. It noted that an indemnitee is not bound to submit to suit before paying a claim, but if it settles without suit, it must prove its liability for the amount paid in order to recover from the indemnitor. However, if there is no trial and no judgment establishing liability, but a settlement of the litigation is made, the settlement becomes presumptive evidence of the liability and the amount thereof, which may be overcome by evidence submitted at trial. There was no evidence that the settlement was entered into other than as a good-faith effort to resolve the claim and under the honest belief that Fidelity was liable on the bond (187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 757-758) .

NOTE:

In Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler, the court limited its holding to claims for equitable indemnity based on comparative fault. The court distinguished (without citation) contractual indemnity, stating that in such a case, proof of the settling defendant's fault is necessary to trigger the obligation of a third person to indemnify [Mullin Lumber Co. v. Chandler (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 1127, 1134, 230 Cal. Rptr. 122] . This statement is, at best, overbroad. Fidelity v. Whitson essentially reaches the same result as Mullin Lumber with regard to contractual indemnity. Although the court in Fidelity v. Whitson agrees that proof is required, the burden is met by proof that a settlement was made in good faith, essentially the same holding as in Mullin Lumber [see Civ. Code § 2778(5); see also § 115.164[3][b]].

[b] Settlement Following Refusal of Tendered Defense

Peter Culley & Assocs. v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 , concerned an express indemnity agreement by which Culley, a structural engineer hired by architect Kaplan to design foundations for a condominium project, agreed to indemnify Kaplan for any "loss, damage, injury or liability, real or alleged" resulting from Culley's negligent performance of services under the agreement. When Kaplan sued the project developer to collect fees owed on the project, the developer cross-complained, alleging that foundation design flaws had resulted in delays and increased construction costs. Kaplan tendered defense of the cross-complaint to Culley but did not cross-complain against Culley. Culley declined the tender. The developer and Kaplan settled the cross-complaint for $225,000, allocating $200,000 to issues concerning Culley's foundation design work and $25,000 to other issues in the case. Kaplan assigned its indemnity rights to the developer, who brought an action against Culley. Using the Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 procedures applicable to a determination of a good faith settlement in the equitable indemnity context, the trial court found that the settlement, including the allocation of $200,000 to the foundation issue, was in good faith and conclusive against Culley under Civ. Code § 2778(5), which provides that if, after request, the person indemnifying neglects to defend the person indemnified, a recovery against the latter suffered by him or her in good faith is conclusive in his or her favor against the former.

The court of appeal reversed and remanded. It held that a court's good faith determination in a contractual indemnity case is not similar to a good faith determination in Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 proceedings. The court concluded that so far as Civ. Code § 2778(5) makes a "recovery" suffered in good faith conclusive, it refers only to a recovery by judgment against the indemnitee (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1495) . When an indemnitee settles without a trial, the principles concerning the effect of a settlement on an insurer's duty to indemnify come into play [see Isaacson v. California Ins. Guarantee Assn. (1988) 44 Cal. 3d 775, 791] (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1497) . Pursuant to those principles, the indemnitee must show that the liability is covered by the contract, that liability existed, and the extent of liability. The settlement is presumptive evidence of liability of the indemnitee and of the amount of liability, but it may be overcome by proof from the indemnitor that the settlement was unreasonable (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1497) . Presumptive effect will not be given to an allocation in the settlement that is not the product of adverse negotiation (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1497) . The reasonableness of the settlement is to be determined at trial, and not in a separate good faith hearing to confirm the settlement (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1498) .

The court explained that Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392, 338 P.2d 984 ; Mabie & Mintz v. B & E Installers (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 491, 496-497, 101 Cal. Rptr. 919 ; and Safeway

Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 117, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820 , were not in conflict with its decision because in none of those cases did the court enforce an indemnity contract merely because the indemnitee had settled: in Safeway, the trial court had found the indemnitor at fault, and the court of appeal sustained the lower court's determination of the amount of settlement; in Pacific Telephone & Telegraph Co., the trial court found the indemnitor at fault and the amount of settlement was not in question; and in Mabie, the trial court in the indemnity phase of trial had found the settlement to be reasonable (10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 1496-1497) .

The factual background of People ex rel. Dep't of Pub. Works v. Daly City Scavenger Co. (1971) 19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 96 Cal. Rptr. 669 , is discussed in § 115.63[3][a]. In discussing whether the State of California was entitled to implied indemnity, the court of appeal noted that both parties had settled a third-party wrongful death action filed against them, and that the indemnitor had refused to defend the wrongful death action on behalf of the state. The court then ruled that a good-faith settlement of an action after a party refuses a tendered defense entitles the other party to seek indemnity (19 Cal. App. 3d 277, 282) .

Pacific Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Pacific Gas & Elec. Co. (1959) 170 Cal. App. 2d 387, 338 P.2d 984 , was an appeal from a judgment of the superior court in an action brought to recover sums paid by plaintiff to settle a wrongful death action. Following the settlement, plaintiff filed this suit for indemnity on the basis of a written indemnity agreement between the parties. The trial court found that the agreement required complete indemnity and entered judgment accordingly.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that if an indemnitee notifies the indemnitor of a pending claim and the indemnitor denies liability under the indemnity contract and refuses to assume defense of the claim, the indemnitee is in full charge of the matter and may make a good-faith settlement without assuming the risk of being able to prove absolute legal liability or the actual amount of the damage (170 Cal. App. 2d 387, 392) .

NOTE:

This holding is cited in Mabie & Mintz v. B & E Installers (1972) 25 Cal. App. 3d 491, 496-497, 101 Cal. Rptr. 919 (implied indemnity), and Safeway Stores, Inc. v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1962) 202 Cal. App. 2d 99, 117, 20 Cal. Rptr. 820 (express indemnity). The court in Mabie & Mintz rejected the reasoning of Raynolds v. Volkswagenwerk Aktiengesellschaft (1969) 275 Cal. App. 2d 997, 1005, 80 Cal. Rptr. 610 , that the rule applies only to express indemnity agreements and that an implied indemnitee makes a good faith settlement at the peril of later being found not liable.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Settlement Following Refusal of Tendered Defense

In Mel Clayton Ford v. Ford Motor Co. (2002) 104 Cal. App. 4th 46, 127 Cal. Rptr. 2d 759 , a car dealer sought indemnity from a car manufacturer for the costs of settling and defending a third-party personal injury action. The dealer and the manufacturer had an existing contract with an express indemnity provision under which the manufacturer agreed to defend and indemnify the dealer against claims for injury caused solely by a product or design defect attributable to the manufacturer. However, when the dealer submitted defense of the underlying claim to the manufacturer, the manufacturer refused the tender because the underlying plaintiff had alleged that the dealer was also negligent in its maintenance of the car involved in causing the underlying injury. The dealer eventually settled the underlying claim. The trial court in the indemnity action found that the settlement was in good faith and awarded the dealer the costs of its defense and settlement in the underlying action. The court of appeal reversed. Relying on established case law, including Peter Culley & Assocs. v. Superior Court (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624 [see § 115.164[3][b]], the court of appeal held that a good-faith settlement finding under Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6 could not be used offensively to establish conclusively an amount owed under an express indemnity provision. Because the manufacturer in this case agreed to defend and indemnify only if the dealer was not also negligent, the dealer could not establish its right to indemnity under the contract unless it could prove that any negligence on its part was not a cause of the underlying personal injury (104 Cal. App. 4th 46, 56-60) .

CC-Cal. Plaza Assocs. v. Paller & Goldstein (1996) 51 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 59 Cal. Rptr. 2d 382 , arose after a contractor settled a claim by a building owner on a construction contract. This settlement occurred after the subcontractor indemnitor had failed to defend the action by the owner against the contractor. As part of the settlement, the contractor assigned its indemnity rights to the owner, and the owner then prosecuted those rights against the subcontractor. After trial had begun, the trial court granted the subcontractor's motion for nonsuit on the ground that the assigned indemnity rights had no value because proof of damages was impossible. The trial court based its ruling on Peter Culley & Assocs. v. Superior Court (1992)10 Cal. App. 4th 1484, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 624. The court of appeal reversed, stating that the rule from Peter Culley is that a settlement by an indemnitee with a party asserting a claim is presumptive evidence of liability and of the amount of liability, although this evidence may be overcome by proof from the indemnitor that the settlement was unreasonable. The court concluded that there was no principle to support a ruling depriving the owner its right to prove its assigned indemnity claim, and that, on the contrary, the case supported the opposite conclusion (51 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1053).

197 of 197 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 115 INDEMNITY AND CONTRIBUTION
PART II. FORMS
D. Effects of Settlement

11-115 California Points & Authorities § 115.165

§ 115.165 Opposing Contention That Indemnitee's Payment Precludes Indemnity or Contribution--Waiver of Statute of Limitations Does Not Constitute Voluntary Payment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

A RIGHT TO INDEMNITY MAY ARISE, EVEN IF THE RIGHT IS BASED ON A THIRD-PARTY CLAIM ON WHICH AN ACTION WAS FILED AGAINST THE INDEMNITEE AFTER THE PERIOD OF LIMITATION HAD PASSED, IF THE STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS DEFENSE WAS WAIVED BY THE INDEMNITEE FOR A VALID PURPOSE.

Valid Waiver of Statute of Limitations Does Not Result in Voluntary Payment. An action for indemnity may be based on a payment pursuant to an action filed against the indemnitee after the statute of limitations has run if the indemnitee waived the limitation of time in furtherance of a duty to minimize the loss (Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Whitson (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 758, 10 Cal. Rptr. 6).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form may be submitted in support of the contention that indemnity is appropriate even though the third-party claim on which the right is based was potentially barred by a statute of limitations. The proposition of the form is that a valid waiver of the statute granted by the indemnitee to the third party does not make any subsequent payment of the claim a voluntary payment for which indemnity is foreclosed. In an appropriate case, this memorandum may be submitted in opposition to the contention supported by the points and authorities in § 115.163.

The authority that supports the point set forth in this form involves a claim for express indemnity. The voluntary payment rule has, however, also been applied as a limitation on contribution rights in a case involving a limitations-barred claim [see Schlitz v. Thomas (1923) 61 Cal. App. 635, 216 P. 51 ; see also § 115.163[3][b]].

Therefore, the points and authorities set forth in this form may be adapted for use in support of a claim for contribution among nontort obligors [cf. Code Civ. Proc. § 877.6(a) (co-obligors on contract debt may obtain judicial confirmation of settlement as in good faith)].

This form may be combined with points and authorities pertaining to the specific procedural context in which a right to indemnity or contribution is brought before the court. It may be used in a memorandum in connection with a pretrial motion, such as a demurrer or motion for summary judgment, if rights may be determined as a matter of law. It may also be used in a trial or an appellate brief.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. It should be established that: (1) the indemnitee or party seeking contribution was alleged to be liable to a third party; (2) pursuant to the indemnitee's waiver of the defense, the third party did not bring an action on the claim until after the applicable statute of limitations had run; (3) in settlement of this alleged liability, the indemnitee or party seeking contribution then made the payment for which it now seeks indemnity or contribution. The reasons why the indemnitee was justified in waiving the limitations defense should then be set forth.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Valid Waiver of Statute of Limitations Does Not Result in Voluntary Payment

The factual background of Fidelity & Deposit Co. v. Whitson (1960) 187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 10 Cal. Rptr. 6 , is discussed in § 115.164[3][a]. The court of appeal discussed the fact that the underlying claim was, in fact, filed against the indemnitee after the statute of limitation had run. It was conceded that the indemnitee was subject to the third-party suit only because of its waiver of the limitations defense. The indemnitor argued that, under these circumstances, the indemnitee's subsequent payment of the claim made it a volunteer and thus barred it from seeking indemnity [see § 115.163].

The court of appeal rejected the argument. The indemnitee was faced with numerous claims on bonds issued in connection with the construction project. Under the applicable law, the claimants would have been entitled to attorneys' fees if successful after trial. Thus, it was sound practice to waive the statute of limitations and attempt to resolve as many of the claims as possible without litigation. The indemnitor was under a duty to minimize the loss that was subject to indemnity, and, in fact, all claims except the one were resolved without the necessity of filing suit. Under these circumstances, the conduct of the indemnitee's counsel in waiving the statute of limitations was reasonable and did not make the indemnitee a volunteer (187 Cal. App. 2d 751, 758) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS

11-116 California Points & Authorities 116.syn

§ 116.syn Synopsis to Chapter 116: INJUNCTIONS

§ 116.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 116.02 Governing Statutes

§ 116.03 Use of Points and Authorities

[1] Supporting Issuance of TRO or Preliminary Injunction

[2] Preserving Relief Already Granted

[3] Defending Against Preliminary or Permanent Injunction

§ 116.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 116.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 116.06-116.19 [Reserved]

§ 116.20 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Right to Relief Apparent From Complaint and Relief Consists in Restraining Commission or Continuance of Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restraining Commission or Continuance of Act

§ 116.21 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Would Produce Waste, or Great or Irreparable Injury to Party During Litigation [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

§ 116.22 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Tending to Render Judgment Ineffectual [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rendering Judgment Ineffectual

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rendering Judgment Ineffectual

§ 116.23 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Monetary Compensation (Damages) Inadequate or Unascertainable [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4), (5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Monetary Compensation Inadequate or Unascertainable

[b] Insolvency of Defendant

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Monetary Compensation Inadequate or Unascertainable

[b] Insolvency of Defendant

§ 116.24 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings

§ 116.25 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Obligation Arising From Trust [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obligation Arising From Trust

§ 116.26 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Preservation of Status Quo

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preservation of Status Quo

[b] Continuance of Regular and Usual Procedures

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preservation of Status Quo

§ 116.27 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Action by Municipal Corporation or Inferior Board or Tribunal in Excess of Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action in Excess of Jurisdiction and Without Authority

§ 116.28 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

[b] Disregard of Intention to Discontinue Transgressions

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

§ 116.29 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Changed Factual Situation Requires Issuance of Previously Denied Preliminary Injunction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changed Factual Context

§ 116.30 Supporting Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal by Party Denied Injunctive Relief

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Pending Appeal From Judgment

[b] Injunction Pending Appeal From Order Denying Preliminary Injunction

§ 116.31 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Would Destroy Potential Evidence Pending Discovery Order

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Protect Potential Evidence

§ 116.32 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Stay Judicial Proceeding Pending at Commencement of Action [Civ. Code § 3423(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stay of Pending Judicial Proceeding Prohibited

[b] Multiplicity of Proceedings Not Present

[c] Enjoining of Federal Actions Prohibited

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stay of Pending Judicial Proceeding Prohibited

§ 116.33 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Exercise of Public or Private Office [Civ. Code § 3423(f); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Exercise of Public or Private Office

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Exercise of Public or Private Office

§ 116.34 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injuction Not Issued to Prevent Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation [Civ. Code § 3423(g); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation

§ 116.35 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Absence of Factual Showing of Grounds on Which Preliminary Injunction May Be Granted [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Grounds for Preliminary Injunction

§ 116.36 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Completed Acts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Completed Acts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Completed Acts

§ 116.37 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Preliminary Injunction Not Issued If Plaintiff Has Not Shown Either Existing or Threatened Irreparable Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

[b] Taxpayer Must Demonstrate Actual or Threatened Harm

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

§ 116.38 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff's Laches

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Laches

§ 116.39 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff's Unclean Hands

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Unclean Hands

§ 116.40 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--No Cause of Action Stated

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action Prohibits Issuance of Preliminary Injunction

§ 116.41 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages as Adequate Legal Remedy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages as Adequate Legal Remedy

§ 116.42 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Mandate

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate as Adequate Legal Remedy

§ 116.43 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Quo Warranto

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Quo Warranto as Adequate Legal Remedy

§ 116.44 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Claim and Delivery

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Claim and Delivery as Adequate Legal Remedy

§ 116.45 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Public Interest

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Interest

§ 116.46 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Changed Circumstances

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changed Circumstances

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Changed Circumstances

§ 116.47 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff Not Likely to Prevail on Merits at Trial, and Balance-of-Hardships Weighs in Defendant's Favor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Must Consider Likelihood That Plaintiff Will Prevail and Balance Hardships of Parties

[b] Plaintiff's Recovery Doubtful

[c] Plaintiff's Recovery Impossible

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Must Consider Likelihood That Plaintiff Will Prevail and Balance Hardships of Parties

[b] Plaintiff's Recovery Doubtful

[c] Plaintiff's Recovery Impossible

§ 116.48 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued if Restraint Interferes With Freedom of Speech

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Freedom of Speech

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Freedom of Speech

§ 116.49 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

§ 116.50 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--No Acts Threatened to Be Committed in Future

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Acts Threatened to Be Committed in Future

§ 116.51 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

§ 116.52 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--No Cause of Action Stated for Injunctive Relief

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Cause of Action for Injunctive Relief

[b] Complaint Shows on Its Face That Damages Provide Adequate Remedy

§ 116.53 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted if Complaint Contains Only Unsupported General Conclusions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

§ 116.54 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted If Injury Alleged in Complaint Does Not Appear Irreparable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

§ 116.55 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted if Complaint Contains Only Unsupported General Conclusions of Irreparable Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Conclusions Concerning Irreparable Injury Not Sufficient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

§ 116.56 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Preliminary Injunction Granted Without Notice to Party Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When No Notice Given

§ 116.57 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Preliminary Injunction Granted Without Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When Undertaking Not Required

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When Undertaking Not Required

§ 116.58 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Bond Furnished in Support of Preliminary Injunction Is Deficient

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction Supported by Deficient Bond

§ 116.59 Supporting Motion for Dissolution or Modification of Preliminary Injunction or Temporary Restraining Order--Required by Change in Facts or Law, or to Serve Ends of Justice [Code Civ. Proc. § 533]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances

§ 116.60 Supporting Motion for Dissolution or Modification of Permanent Injunction--Required by Change in Facts or Law, or to Serve Ends of Justice [Civ. Code § 3424(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances

§ 116.61 Supporting Motion for Stay of Permanent Injunction Pending Appeal From Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stay of Injunction Pending Appeal

§ 116.62 Opposing Application for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Undertaking Waived or Forfeited by Party to Be Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party to be Enjoined Waived or Forfeited Undertaking Requirement

§§ 116.63-116.79 [Reserved]

§ 116.80 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unconstitutional or Invalid Statute or Ordinance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional or Invalid Enactment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional or Invalid Enactment

§ 116.81 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Actions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Conduct

§ 116.82 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unconstitutional Application of Facially Valid Statute

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional Application of Statute

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional Application of Statute

§ 116.83 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Execution of Public Statute or Ordinance for Public Benefit [Civ. Code § 3423(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Execution of Public Statute

[b] Enjoining Valid Public Statute or Ordinance as Excess of Jurisdiction

[c] No Showing of Irreparable Harm

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Execution of Public Statute

§ 116.84 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Is Not Issued to Enforce Criminal Law Unless Nuisance Demonstrated or as Otherwise Provided by Law [Civ. Code § 3369]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcing Criminal Law Prohibited

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcing Criminal Law Prohibited

§§ 116.85-116.99 [Reserved]

§ 116.100 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Contract Capable of Specific Enforcement [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Can Be Specifically Enforced

[b] Terms of Contract Provide for Specific Enforcement

§ 116.101 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation

[b] Minimum Compensation Satisfied When Party Has Exclusive Control of Production Costs

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation

§ 116.102 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Restrictive Covenant in Deed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Restrictive Covenant

§ 116.103 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Breach of Contract That Would Not Be Specifically Enforced [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Breach of Contract

[b] Affirmative and Negative Covenants in Contract

[c] Exception for Unique Personal Services Not Applicable

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Breach of Contract

[b] Affirmative and Negative Covenants in Contract

[c] Exception for Unique Personal Services Not Applicable

§§ 116.104-116.119 [Reserved]

§ 116.120 Supporting Petition for Injunction and Temporary Restraining Order to Prevent Harassment [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Opposing Memoranda

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Harassment Defined

§ 116.121 Opposing Petition for Injunction and Temporary Restraining Order to Prevent Harassment [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6]--No Course of Conduct Shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Course of Conduct Defined

[b] Constitutionally Protected Activity

[c] Single Incident Is Not Course of Conduct

§ 116.122 Opposing Petition for Temporary Restraining Order and Injunction to Prevent Violence Against Employer's Employees at the Workplace [Civ. Proc. § 527.8]--No Unlawful Violence or Credible Threat of Violence, or No Threat of Future Harm [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Probability That Wrongful Acts Will Be Repeated In Future Required

[b] Single Incident Insufficient For Injunctive Relief

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.01

§ 116.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains general forms of memoranda of points and authorities for use in supporting [see §§ 116.20 -116.31] and opposing [see §§ 116.32 -116.51] applications for preliminary injunctions and related temporary restraining orders. These general forms also include memoranda that may be used in supporting demurrers to complaints that seek injunctive relief [see §§ 116.52 -116.55], as well as motions for the dissolution or modification of a preliminary or permanent injunction [see §§ 116.56 -116.60]. In addition, a memorandum in support of a stay of a permanent injunction pending appeal is included [see § 116.61].

This chapter also contains forms of memoranda for use in supporting [see §§ 116.80 -116.82] and opposing [see §§ 116.83 -116.84] applications for temporary restraining orders and preliminary injunctions concerning the application of statutes, as well as forms supporting [see §§ 116.100 -116.102] and opposing [see § 116.103] injunctions for the enforcement of contractual rights. The chapter also contains memoranda supporting [see § 116.120] and opposing [see §§ 116.121, 116.122] petitions for an injunction prohibiting harassment.

For injunctive relief dealing with specific subjects treated elsewhere in this publication [see § 116.05].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.02

§ 116.02 Governing Statutes

The granting of injunctive relief is governed generally by Civ. Code § 3420 et seq. and by Code Civ. Proc. § 525 et seq. There are, however, many additional statutes governing injunctive relief that are related to the specific underlying subject matter of the action. For a listing of the most frequently encountered of these in general civil litigation, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions, § 303.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.03

§ 116.03 Use of Points and Authorities

[1] Supporting Issuance of TRO or Preliminary Injunction

With a few exceptions, a memorandum must be included (served and filed) with any noticed motion for a preliminary injunction [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)]. A memorandum is not required for a petition for an injunction prohibiting harassment or a petition for an injunction prohibiting workplace violence [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114(a)(7), (a)(9)].

In addition, a memorandum should, and possibly must, be included with an application for a temporary restraining order (TRO) and order to show cause for a preliminary injunction. Although this requirement is not expressly set forth by statute or court rule regarding applications for a TRO and order to show cause, it can reasonably be implied from the Code of Civil Procedure and California Rules of Court. Under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a), a party filing a motion, except for a motion listed in Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114, must serve and file a memorandum.

Code Civ. Proc. § 527(d) sets forth additional relevant provisions that pertain to the issuance of a TRO without notice to an opposing party. In those circumstances, the party who obtained the TRO must serve on the opposing party, within five days from the date the TRO is issued or two days prior to the hearing, whichever is earlier (and subject to an order shortening time), a copy of the complaint if not previously served, the order to show cause, any affidavits to be used in the application, and a copy of the memorandum in support of the application. When the matter first comes up for hearing, if the party who obtained the TRO is not ready to proceed or failed to effect service of the above items, the court must dissolve the TRO [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(d)(2), (3)].

In short, the applicant's counsel should plan on serving and filing a memorandum regardless of whether the moving papers are a notice of motion or application for an order to show cause for a preliminary injunction, or involve an application for a TRO coupled with an order to show cause for a preliminary injunction. One notable exception to the filing requirement involves those special proceedings in which a memorandum is specifically excepted by statute or rule [see, e.g., Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114(a)(7), (a)(9) (memorandum not required for petition for injunction prohibiting harassment or petition for injunction prohibiting workplace violence)].

For further discussion of utilizing memoranda including a discussion of applicable page limitations [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)], see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For a complete discussion of rules and procedures for obtaining injunctive relief, including forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[2] Preserving Relief Already Granted

A plaintiff who has already obtained a temporary restraining order may be faced with having either to oppose a defendant's demurrer, motion for summary judgment, or petition for a writ of prohibition, or to oppose a motion to dissolve or modify the temporary restraining order (or preliminary injunction). In these situations, although an opposing memorandum is not expressly required, the plaintiff may desire to serve and file one. In general, once the moving party has filed a memorandum, it is not only good practice, but is usually a tactical necessity for the opponent to also do so in order to present a balanced view of the issues to the court.

[3] Defending Against Preliminary or Permanent Injunction

The Code of Civil Procedure does not require that a defendant prepare a memorandum to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction. However, when there is a defense available, or when the plaintiff (applicant) has misstated a legal point in the memorandum served on defendant, counsel for defendant should prepare a memorandum in opposition to the application for the preliminary injunction. From a tactical standpoint, use of the memorandum also may be necessity.

In addition, because memoranda are generally required when filing demurrers and motions [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(a)], counsel should refer to the memoranda in this chapter that oppose the issuance of injunctive relief in preparing demurrers, motions for summary judgment, petitions for a writ of prohibition, or to plead affirmative defenses. Also, if the defendant notices a motion for an order either to dissolve or modify a temporary restraining order, preliminary injunction, or permanent injunction, the notice of motion must be accompanied by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(k)].

The same authority that is used to defend against provisional injunctive relief usually may, with appropriate modifications in the wording, be used to defend against actions for permanent injunctive relief. That is, the memoranda in this chapter that supply authorities for opposing applications for preliminary injunctions may be transformed into (1) memoranda supporting demurrers to complaints for permanent injunctive relief if the defects are shown on the face of the complaint, (2) affirmative defenses for use in answers, (3) memoranda supporting motions for summary judgment, or (4) memoranda in support of petitions for writs of prohibition.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsElementsGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPermanent InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsCivil ProcedureRemediesWritsCommon Law WritsProhibition

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.04

§ 116.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion, procedural checklists, and forms for use in applying for or in opposing injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For forms for use in particular factual situations involving injunctive relief, see the following chapters in that publication:

- Ch. 11, Adjoining Landowners.
- Ch. 13, Adverse Possession.
- Ch. 14, Advertising.
- Ch. 19, Alcoholic Beverages: Civil Liability.
- Ch. 23, Animals: Civil Liability.
- Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration.
- Ch. 59, Assemblies, Meetings, and Demonstrations.
- Ch. 61, Associations and Clubs.
- Ch. 62, Attachment.
- Ch. 110, Churches and Religious Organizations.
- Ch. 112, Civil Rights: Government-Funded Programs and Activities.
- Ch. 113, Civil Rights: The Post -Civil War Civil Rights Statutes.

- Ch. 114, Civil Rights: Prisoners' Rights.
- Ch. 115, Civil Rights: Employment Discrimination.
- Ch. 116, Civil Rights: Discrimination in Business Establishments.
- Ch. 117, Civil Rights: Housing Discrimination.
- Ch. 117A, Civil Rights: Interference With Civil Rights by Threats, Intimidation, Coercion, or Violence.
- Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery.
- Ch. 124, Condominiums and Other Common Interest Developments.
- Ch. 127, Consumer Contracts and Loans.
- Ch. 160, Corporations.
- Ch. 183, Dedication.
- Ch. 184, Deeds.
- Ch. 221, Dissolution of Marriage: Procedure.
- Ch. 240, Easements.
- Ch. 243, Elections.
- Ch. 254, Executions and Enforcement of Judgments.
- Ch. 256, Explosives.
- Ch. 266, Fences.
- Ch. 268, Food.
- Ch. 293, Harassment And Domestic Violence.
- Ch. 294, Homesteads.
- Ch. 307, Insolvency.
- Ch. 314, Interpleader.
- Ch. 315, Irrigation.
- Ch. 333, Landlord and Tenant: Eviction Actions.
- Ch. 344, Life Estates and Remainders.

- Ch. 349, Literary Property and Copyright.
- Ch. 357, Malicious Prosecution and Abuse of Process.
- Ch. 364, Minors: Claims and Property of Minors.
- Ch. 365, Minors: Contract Actions.
- Ch. 366, Minors: Court Consent for Medical Care or Enlistment.
- Ch. 367, Minors: Disaffirmation of Judgements.
- Ch. 367A, Minors: Tort Actions.
- Ch. 391, Nuisance.
- Ch. 393, Oil and Gas.
- Ch. 406, Partnerships: Dissolution.
- Ch. 411, Patents and Inventions.
- Ch. 418, Pollution and Environmental Matters.
- Ch. 429, Privacy.
- Ch. 464, Public Entities and Officers: California Tort Claims Act.
- Ch. 465, Public Entities and Officers: Civil Claims Arising from Criminal Acts.
- Ch. 466, Public Entities and Officers: Taxpayer's Actions.
- Ch. 467, Public Entities and Officers: Enforcement of Judgements Against Public Entities.
- Ch. 468, Public Entities and Officers: False Claims Actions.
- Ch. 469, Public Entities and Officers: Conflicts of Interest.
- Ch. 480, Public Utilities.
- Ch. 484, Radio and Television.
- Ch. 503, Sales: Secured Transactions.
- Ch. 504, Sales: Consumers Legal Remedies Act.
- Ch. 512, Schools.
- Ch. 527, Social Services.

- Ch. 528, Specific Performance.
- Ch. 531, Statutes and Ordinances.
- Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings.
- Ch. 549, Trademarks and Trade Names.
- Ch. 550, Trespass.
- Ch. 555, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages.
- Ch. 560, Trusts.
- Ch. 565, Unfair Competition.
- Ch. 568, Usury.
- Ch. 575, Waters.
- Ch. 579, Zoning and Planning.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.05

§ 116.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related forms of memoranda of points and authorities that may prove useful in particular factual situations in which injunctive relief is being sought or opposed may be found in the following chapters:

- Ch. 14, Advertising.
- Ch. 24, Attorneys at Law: Substitution, Withdrawal, Disqualification, and Authority to Appear.
- Ch. 24A, Attorneys at Law: Malpractice.
- Ch. 35, Civil Rights: Unruh Civil Rights Act.
- Ch. 35A, Civil Rights: Equal Protection.
- Ch. 41, Class and Representative Actions.
- Ch. 95, Eminent Domain.
- Ch. 112, Homesteads.
- Ch. 131, Judgments.
- Ch. 155, Motions After Trial.
- Ch. 167, Nuisance.
- Ch. 170, Partnerships and Joint Ventures.
- Ch. 230, Trust Deeds and Real Property Mortgages.

- Ch. 235, Unfair Competition.
- Ch. 236, Unlawful Detainer.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-116 California Points & Authorities §§ 116.06-116.19

[Reserved]

§§ 116.06[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.20

§ 116.20 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Right to Relief Apparent From Complaint and Relief Consists in Restraining Commission or Continuance of Act [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS
	)	AND AUTHORITIES IN
_____ [name],	)	SUPPORT OF Plaintiff,	)	APPLICATION
vs.	)	FOR [TEMPORARY
_____ [name],	)	RESTRAINING ORDER
Defendant.	)	AND] PRELIMINARY
	)	INJUNCTION
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____
	)

_____

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED IF PLAINTIFF'S RIGHT TO RELIEF IS APPARENT

FROM THE COMPLAINT AND THE RELIEF CONSISTS IN RESTRAINING THE COMMISSION OR CONTINUANCE OF THE ACT COMPLAINED OF. IN THIS CASE, PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT DEMONSTRATES THAT _____ [set forth facts from complaint showing basis for injunctive relief]. THEREFORE, THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE RELIEF REQUESTED.

Restraining Commission or Continuance of Act. An injunction may be granted when it appears by the complaint that the plaintiff is entitled to the relief demanded and the relief, or any part thereof, consists in restraining the commission or continuance of the act complained of, either for a limited period or perpetually (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1); Dingley v. Buckner (1909) 11 Cal. App. 181, 183-184, 104 P. 478 ; see Southern Christian Leadership Conference v. Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 223, 281 Cal. Rptr. 216).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when a plaintiff's right to relief is apparent from the complaint and the relief consists in restraining the commission or continuance of an act [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone, or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption, with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth those facts in the complaint that clearly give rise to injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1) (authorizing injunctive relief based on grounds apparent from complaint)]. If a TRO is being sought, counsel should point out any particular facts that show the need for such immediate relief. Note that if notice to the opposing party has not been given in connection with an ex parte application for a TRO, special pleading and certification requirements must be met [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527(c)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Restraining Commission or Continuance of Act

In Dingley v. Buckner (1909) 11 Cal. App. 181, 104 P. 478 , plaintiffs were owners of equipment that was necessary for conducting a creamery business. They purchased cream from neighboring farmers and dairymen, manufactured it into butter, and shipped it to Los Angeles for sale. The complaint alleged that defendant sheriff was threatening to take possession of the building in which their creamery business was conducted and close it under a writ of attachment unless he was restrained from doing so. The superior court had dissolved a preliminary injunction, but the court of appeal stated that the complaint presented one of the most unquestioned grounds for the writ of injunction. Thus, it reversed the order dissolving the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal stated that no proceeding at law could afford an adequate remedy for the destruction of one's business. It quoted from former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd. (1) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(1)), and stated that not only a part, but virtually all of the relief demanded by plaintiffs consisted in "restraining the continuance of the act complained of," namely, the possession of the property, and thereby, an interference with the operation of the plant and the consequent destruction of the business. Defendant's suggestion that plaintiffs could go out into the market and replace the equipment was refuted with the court's statement that it would be just as legitimate to argue that the plaintiffs might lease other premises or go into some other business. The court observed that if the fundamental rights of the individual to liberty and the possession of property are to be regarded, plaintiffs obviously could not be precluded by a trespasser from conducting that particular business at that particular place and with the equipment of their own choosing (11 Cal. App. 181, 183-184) .

In Southern Christian Leadership Conference v. Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 281 Cal. Rptr. 216 , plaintiff brought an action for damages for anticipatory breach of contract involving the renting of an auditorium on a specified date. The complaint also sought specific performance, a temporary restraining order, and a preliminary and a permanent injunction. The trial court granted a preliminary injunction enjoining defendants from using or allowing any person other than plaintiffs to use the auditorium on the specified date. However, before the specified date, the injunction was dissolved and vacated on the stipulation of the parties. Judgment was for plaintiffs, and defendants appealed, contending, among other things, that plaintiffs should not have been permitted under the election-of-remedies doctrine to proceed to trial for damages based on anticipatory breach, because plaintiffs had elected to seek relief based on specific performance and obtained a preliminary injunction to defendants' injury.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment, rejecting the defendants' contentions. The court of appeal said that if the main action seeks another remedy, a preliminary injunction simply forms a provisional or auxiliary remedy to preserve the status quo until a final judgment. With regard to the injunction, the court explained that a plaintiff is not required to wait until he or she suffers actual harm but may seek injunctive relief against threatened infringement of the plaintiff's rights. In ruling on a motion for a preliminary injunction, the trial court considers whether a greater injury will result to the defendant from granting the injunction than to the plaintiff from refusing it. The trial court considers the probability of the plaintiff's ultimately prevailing in a trial on the merits and will deny a preliminary injunction unless there is a reasonable probability that plaintiff will successfully assert his or her rights. The granting or denial of a preliminary injunction on a verified complaint, together with oral testimony or affidavits, rests in the trial court's discretion. Here, the fact that the action was for breach of contract did not preclude issuance of a preliminary injunction (230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 223) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.21

§ 116.21 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Would Produce Waste, or Great or Irreparable Injury to Party During Litigation [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED IF AN ACT WOULD PRODUCE WASTE, OR GREAT OR IRREPARABLE INJURY TO A PARTY DURING LITIGATION. IN THIS CASE, AS SHOWN BY THE _____ [COMPLAINT and/or AFFIDAVITS or DECLARATIONS], PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER SUCH HARM BECAUSE _____ [set forth factual basis for alleging waste or great/irreparable injury]. THEREFORE, THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE RELIEF REQUESTED.

Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste. An injunction may be granted when it appears by the complaint or affidavits (or declarations) that the commission or continuance of some act during the litigation would produce waste, or great or irreparable injury to a party to the action (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526(a)(2), 2015.5; Volpicelli v. Jared Sydney Torrance Memorial Hosp. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 167 Cal. Rptr. 610 ; Smith v. Smith (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 716, 718-719, 122 P.2d 346). The term "irreparable injury" means that species of damages, whether great or small, that ought not to be submitted to on the one hand or inflicted on the other (Wind v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 276, 285, 8 Cal. Rptr. 817). This definition warrants the use of the injunctive power of the court against a wrong that a trial judge deems insufferable because it constitutes an overbearing assumption by one person of superiority and domination over the rights and property of others (Fretz v. Burke (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746, 55 Cal. Rptr. 879).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when an act would produce waste, or great or irreparable injury to a party during litigation [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth specific facts from the verified complaint, or in any accompanying affidavits or declarations, that establish how the commission or continuance of some act by the defendant during the litigation will result in waste, or in great or irreparable injury to a party unless injunctive relief is granted [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 526(a)(2), 2015.5].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

In Volpicelli v. Jared Sydney Torrance Memorial Hosp. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 167 Cal. Rptr. 610 , a trial court granted a preliminary injunction in a case involving the termination of plaintiff physician from the defendant hospital's medical staff due to a dispute over staff dues. Plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to be temporarily reinstated to the staff pending adequate notice and hearing on the matter. Defendants argued, however, that injunctive relief was not proper because plaintiff failed to show irreparable injury. Defendants contended that plaintiff's fundamental right to practice his profession was not impaired because plaintiff still retained staff membership at two other hospitals.

The court of appeal upheld the injunction, reasoning that plaintiff had the right to fully and capably practice his profession, and an exclusion from one hospital out of three could substantially bear on plaintiff's right to fully practice. Furthermore, defendant hospital had a unique burn center. Because it was clear that plaintiff may have been deprived of a valuable right without due process of law, the court concluded that there was a sufficient showing of irreparable injury, thereby justifying the issuance of the preliminary injunction (109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 248) .

In Smith v. Smith (1942) 49 Cal. App. 2d 716, 122 P.2d 346 , appellant contended that the trial court did not have jurisdiction to order him to remove himself from the family home pending the trial of a divorce action. The complaint had alleged that appellant had committed acts of violence about the residence, had threatened the life of respondent and the children, and had destroyed property. There was also testimony that appellant had on one occasion discharged firearms in the home, destroyed property, and threatened the lives of his family to the extent that it was necessary to summon the police to disarm him.

In affirming the order, the court of appeal stated that the trial court acted within its jurisdiction in entering an order in the nature of a preliminary injunction excluding appellant from the residence during the pendency of the action because power to issue such an order is specifically granted to the courts by statute (citing former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (2); now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(2) (49 Cal. App. 2d 716, 718-719) .

Note that, while the Smith case validly illustrates the concept of irreparable injury, the specific form of injunctive relief obtained in that case, a dwelling exclusion order, is now governed by Fam. Code §§ 6321, 6340. For a complete discussion of the requirements for obtaining such an order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence (Matthew Bender).

In Wind v. Herbert (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 276, 8 Cal. Rptr. 817 , the superior court had granted a preliminary injunction ancillary to an accounting, declaratory relief, and dissolution of a limited partnership. The defendants argued in appealing the order granting the injunction that plaintiffs had failed to show that a preliminary injunction was necessary to prevent irreparable injury to the partnership assets. They contended that any conceivable future injury would be readily ascertainable and could be compensated by money damages and that there was no claim that defendants could not respond in damages.

In affirming the preliminary injunction, the court of appeal stated that this argument was without merit. It explained that the concept of irreparable injury does not concern itself entirely with injury beyond the possibility of repair or beyond possible compensation in damages. Rather, as defined by Civ. Code § 3422, an injunction properly issues in any case in which it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation that would afford adequate relief. Quoting from Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 834, 243 P.2d 497 , it defined the term "irreparable injury" as meaning that species of damages, whether great or small, that ought not to be submitted to on the one hand or inflicted on the other.

It further stated that the argument that there is no "irreparable damage" would not be so often used by wrongdoers if they would take the trouble to observe that the word "irreparable" is a very unhappily chosen one used in expressing the rule that an injunction may issue to prevent wrongs of a repeated and continuing character or which occasion damages estimable only by conjecture and not by any accurate standard. Thus, because in the instant case the wrongs complained of were obviously of a repeated and continuing character, the preliminary injunction was properly issued by the trial court (186 Cal. App. 2d 276, 285) .

In Fretz v. Burke (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 55 Cal. Rptr. 879 , plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction requiring defendants to pay their respective shares of profits of a corporation. They appealed from this part of the order, and one of the points that defendant argued was that plaintiffs did not show any irreparable injury.

The court of appeal rejected this argument and affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It quoted the definition of "irreparable injury" set forth in Anderson v. Souza (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 825, 834, 243 P.2d 497 , as that species of damages, whether great or small, that ought not to be submitted to on the one hand or inflicted on the other. The court rejected the assertion by defendants that under this definition all injuries approach the status of "irreparability." The court stated that this definition should be deemed as warranting the use of the injunctive power of the court against a wrong that a trial judge deems insufferable because it constitutes an overbearing assumption by one person of superiority and domination over the rights and property of others (247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Great or Irreparable Injury or Waste

In Rudel v. Los Angeles County (1897) 118 Cal. 281, 50 P. 400 , plaintiff brought an action to restrain the supervisors of Los Angeles County from diverting the waters of the Rubio Canyon and causing them to flow into and through the Eaton Canyon. The Supreme Court affirmed a judgment so restraining the defendants. It stated that the facts entitled plaintiff to an injunction under the provision of Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (2), and brought the case within the scope of the general rules under which courts of equity restrain the doing of wrongful acts which necessarily result in irreparable injury to others (118 Cal. 281, 289) .

In Brookshire Oil Co. v. Casmalia etc. Co. (1907) 151 Cal. 577, 91 P. 383 , defendant had torn up an oil pipeline on the assertion that he held paramount title to the property through which the line passed. Plaintiff alleged that he was entitled to an easement for his pipeline and that, therefore, defendant should be enjoined from interfering with the pipeline. The superior court granted a preliminary injunction to restrain the defendant from interfering with the relaying and reestablishment of the pipeline. The defendant appealed to the Supreme Court after the trial court denied its motion to dissolve the preliminary injunction. The Supreme Court affirmed the order denying the motion. It stated that the continuance of the use of the pipeline would not materially interfere with defendant's use of the land, even if it ultimately prevailed, but that if plaintiff prevailed and the preliminary injunction had been dissolved, it would have suffered great and irreparable damages (151 Cal. 577, 580) .

Ketchens v. Reiner (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 239 Cal. Rptr. 549 involved a plaintiff charged with violation of certain Education Code provisions pertaining to verbal and related abuse of teachers. Plaintiff claimed that the statutes under which she was cited were unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. Although a TRO was initially granted, after an order to show cause hearing, a preliminary injunction was denied, and the TRO was dissolved. The court of appeal reversed. It said that trial courts should evaluate two interrelated factors in deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction: (1) the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial, (2) the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction were denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the preliminary injunction were issued (194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 474) . The court held that it was likely that plaintiff would prevail at trial and the loss of First Amendment freedoms (freedom of speech) for even minimal periods of time unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury (194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 480) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.22

§ 116.22 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Tending to Render Judgment Ineffectual [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN A PARTY'S ACT WOULD TEND TO RENDER THE JUDGMENT INEFFECTUAL. IN THIS CASE, THE _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] IS/HAS _____ [specify act that is ongoing/threatened/otherwise about to take place], AND THIS WILL RENDER THE JUDGMENT PRAYED FOR INEFFECTUAL BECAUSE _____ [state reason].

Rendering Judgment Ineffectual. An injunction may be granted when it appears, during the litigation, that a party to the action is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the rights of another party to the action respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3); Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 136 ; Lenard v. Edmonds (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 764, 769, 312 P.2d 308 ; Rossi v. Rossi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 639, 641, 286 P.2d 563).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when a defendant is doing or threatening to do an act that would tend to render the judgment ineffectual [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts from the complaint or from plaintiff's affidavits or declarations [see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] that establish what actions the defendant has done, or is about to do, that would tend to render ineffectual the judgment prayed for in the underlying complaint.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Rendering Judgment Ineffectual

In Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177 , plaintiff stockholders in Walt Disney Productions sued to recover the payoff in the "greenmailing" of Disney. Defendants were Disney directors who paid the "greenmail," and the "Steinberg Group" was the "greenmailer" to whom the money was paid. Plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction that, in effect, imposed a constructive trust on the profit from the Disney-Steinberg transaction, and required the Steinberg Group to render periodic accountings of the proceeds. The Steinberg Group appealed from the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of the preliminary injunction. The profits were made by defendants (Steinberg Group) when, after posing a threat to take over Disney, they sold their stock in Disney back to Disney at a healthy profit. Plaintiffs established a reasonable probability that, in so doing, defendants breached a fiduciary duty owed to the corporation. The court held that the preliminary injunction was necessary to protect plaintiffs' right to the remedy of a constructive trust. If the profits of the sale were intermingled with other assets of the defendants or were dissipated, there would be no res to constitute the body of the constructive trust, and a subsequent judgment granting a constructive trust would thus be rendered ineffectual (168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 136) .

In Lenard v. Edmonds (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 764, 312 P.2d 308 , plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction that restrained defendant from disposing of certain third-party promissory notes and deeds of trust, and also restraining him from taking any action under a notice of default and election to sell given on the deed of trust involved. The superior court continued the preliminary injunction in effect after the jury returned a verdict for the plaintiffs. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and the granting of the injunction. It observed that defendant was threatening to sell the property that was the basis of the action and threatening to transfer the third-party notes given in partial payment for the property. If these acts were allowed to be completed, it noted, defendant might well have rendered himself unable to pay the judgment, if one were secured, and deprive plaintiffs not only of the fruits of the judgment but also of the property. Thus, the precise situation contemplated by former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (3) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)) was present (151 Cal. App. 2d 764, 769) .

In Rossi v. Rossi (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 639, 286 P.2d 563 , plaintiff sued for the rescission of an executed contract under which he and another person relinquished and transferred fractional portions of their stockholdings in the corporation. Defendant answered and filed a cross complaint seeking specific performance of the contract and an injunction to restrain plaintiff and others from holding a directors' meeting. The superior court granted a preliminary injunction restraining plaintiff and other persons from acting as directors of the corporation on the basis that they were not legally qualified directors.

The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's order. It stated that the injunction prevented interlopers from interfering with the orderly procedure of admittedly qualified directors of the corporation. Thus, the superior court had jurisdiction to issue the preliminary injunction pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 526 (134 Cal. App. 2d 639, 641-642) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Rendering Judgment Ineffectual

Farnum v. Clarke (1906) 148 Cal. 610, 84 P. 166 , involved an action for a permanent injunction to restrain defendants from breaching a contract by disposing of property they had agreed to acquire and sell to plaintiff. The superior court had originally issued a preliminary injunction that restrained defendants from dealing in any manner with the land and premises described, or in any manner interfering with or disposing of the selections involving the land, but it later issued an order that vacated and dissolved the preliminary injunction. The plaintiffs appealed, and the Supreme Court ultimately reversed the order. It stated that it was the duty of the superior court to continue in force the preliminary injunction because, if it were not so continued, plaintiffs' efforts to obtain the relief that the complaint showed they were entitled to would be abortive. If unrestrained, the threatened breach of the contract could be committed by defendants, irreparable injury would follow, and any judgment obtained would be ineffectual (148 Cal. 610, 620-622) .

In Wilkins v. Oken (1958) 157 Cal. App. 2d 603, 321 P.2d 876 , plaintiffs had instituted an action against defendants for rescission of a sale of real property. The superior court granted an order restraining the parties from taking possession of those portions of an eminent domain award to which they were held to be entitled in an eminent domain proceeding. Defendants appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It stated that former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (3) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)) authorized the injunction because plaintiffs contended that the defendants could and would secure and misapply and disburse the funds resulting from the condemnation award. Thus, if the plaintiffs prevailed in the recission action, any judgment would not adequately protect their rights insofar as the specific funds were concerned and, afterward, they would be relegated to the position of common creditors of the defendants (157 Cal. App. 2d 603, 606-607) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.23

§ 116.23 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Monetary Compensation (Damages) Inadequate or Unascertainable [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4), (5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED IF _____ [MONETARY COMPENSATION IN THE FORM OF DAMAGES IS AN INADEQUATE REMEDY or IT WOULD BE EXTREMELY DIFFICULT TO ASCERTAIN AN AMOUNT OF MONETARY COMPENSATION THAT WOULD AFFORD ADEQUATE RELIEF]. IN THIS CASE, MONETARY DAMAGES _____ [IS AN INADEQUATE REMEDY or CANNOT BE ASCERTAINED WITHOUT EXTREME DIFFICULTY] BECAUSE _____ [state reason, e.g., DEFENDANT IS INSOLVENT].

A. Monetary Compensation Inadequate or Unascertainable. An injunction may be granted when pecuniary compensation would not afford adequate relief (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4)) or when it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation that would afford adequate relief (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(5); Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270-271, 86 P.2d 127).

[Optional] B. Insolvency of Defendant. The insolvency of a defendant may justify a court in granting a preliminary injunction because, in such a situation, plaintiff obviously would not be able to recover any damages (West Coast Constr. Co. v. Oceano Sanitary Dist. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 693, 700, 95 Cal. Rptr. 169 ; Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 272, 86 P.2d 127).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when the remedy of monetary damages is inadequate, or when the amount of monetary damages required to afford adequate relief is extremely difficult to ascertain [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4), (5)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction. Optional Paragraph B may be utilized when the insolvency of the defendant makes the remedy of monetary damages inadequate.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish the reason why monetary damages are an inadequate remedy under the circumstances, or cannot otherwise be ascertained without extreme difficulty [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4), (5)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Monetary Compensation Inadequate or Unascertainable

In Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 86 P.2d 127 , defendants' slant-drilling of an oil and gas well was the basis for a permanent injunction against their maintenance or operation of an oil and gas well below a certain depth. They also had been ordered to plug and abandon all of the well below that depth. Defendants contended on appeal that the damages were too trifling and inconsequential to justify the granting of injunctive relief.

The court of appeal rejected the contention and affirmed the judgment. It stated that the trespass involved was a subsurface trespass in an oil- and gas-producing area and that plaintiffs had conceded at trial that they could not make a showing as to actual damage that would justify an award of damages in any specific amount. The court held that the evidence brought the case within Civ. Code § 3422(2), which, like Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(5), permits injunctive relief when it would be extremely difficult to ascertain the amount of compensation that would afford adequate relief (30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270-271) .

[b] Insolvency of Defendant

In West Coast Constr. Co. v. Oceano Sanitary Dist. (1971) 17 Cal. App. 3d 693, 95 Cal. Rptr. 169 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant district and others in which it demanded damages and an injunction to prevent the district from expending or disbursing any monies for the construction of a sewer system except as it would be necessary to maintain it in its current condition. The superior court granted plaintiff a preliminary injunction, and a number of months thereafter the injunction was expanded on plaintiff's motion to enjoin the district during the pendency of the action from expending monies from a certain construction fund, either for payments to any contractor other than plaintiff or for the costs inherent to the current litigation between plaintiff and defendant. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. One of the principles it noted was that mere monetary loss is not irreparable for purposes of the remedy of an injunction unless there is an averment or a showing that the parties causing the loss are insolvent or in any manner unable to respond in damages. Hence, the asserted insolvency of the defendant is a proper matter for a court's consideration. In the present litigation, plaintiff's counsel filed a declaration stating that defendant was insolvent by reason of its alleged indebtedness to plaintiff. Hence, the trial court was justified in balancing the equities in favor of plaintiff and in granting it the preliminary injunction (17 Cal. App. 3d 693, 700) .

The facts and procedural background of Union Oil Co. v. Domengeaux (1939) 30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 86 P.2d 127 , are discussed in § 116.23[3][a]. In that case, a judgment was entered that enjoined defendants from maintaining or operating an oil and gas well below a certain depth and required them to plug and abandon all of the well below that depth. In affirming the judgment, the appellate court commented that, under the circumstances of the case, and in giving consideration to the fact that the persons who had actually drilled the well were insolvent, there was no doubt that the superior court properly granted the injunction (30 Cal. App. 2d 266, 272) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Monetary Compensation Inadequate or Unascertainable

Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240 , was an action for declaratory relief and an injunction to require a hospital to provide rape victims with information and access to estrogen pregnancy prophylaxis, including the "morning after" pill, or to discontinue the treatment of rape victims. Plaintiff sought no monetary damages. In her appeal from a stipulated judgment for defendant, she contended that the trial court erred in sustaining a demurrer against her complaint. Although the appellate court affirmed the judgment, it stated the following general principles with respect to obtaining injunctive relief. The elements of a cause of action for injunctive relief are a tort or other wrongful act constituting a cause of action, and irreparable injury, that is, a factual showing that the wrongful act constitutes an actual or threatened injury to property or personal rights that cannot be compensated by an ordinary damages award (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 410) . In this case, the court concluded that plaintiff could have filed an action for damages under the circumstances (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 414) .

[b] Insolvency of Defendant

In De Groot v. Peters (1899) 124 Cal. 406, 57 P. 209 , plaintiff sued his alleged partner for dissolution of the partnership and for an accounting. Defendant answered and filed a cross complaint for an injunction to restrain plaintiff's conduct, in which he alleged that plaintiff was hired as a salesman and was not a copartner. Defendant also sought a preliminary injunction to restrain plaintiff from entering his business. The superior court granted the preliminary injunction to defendant, and plaintiff then appealed from the order granting it. The Supreme Court affirmed the order. It stated that ejectment of the plaintiff from the business premises would not necessarily prevent the continuance of his conduct and that, because plaintiff was admittedly insolvent, an action by defendant for damages would not afford adequate relief to him (124 Cal. 406, 408) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.24

§ 116.24 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN THE RESTRAINT IS NECESSARY TO PREVENT A MULTIPLICITY OF JUDICIAL PROCEEDINGS. IN THIS CASE, THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PRAYED FOR SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE, IN THE ABSENCE OF SUCH RELIEF, _____ [state consequences relating to existence of multiple court actions regarding same underlying subject matter].

Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings. An injunction may be granted when the restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6); Rynsburger v. Dairymen's Fertilizer Coop., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 269, 279, 72 Cal. Rptr. 102 ; Aldrich v. Transcontinental Land & Water Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 796-797, 281 P.2d 362).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief in order to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings from occurring [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts demonstrating why a mulitiplicity of legal actions will be filed in the absence of the injunctive relief requested and why the existence of multiple actions poses adverse consequences.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings

In Rynsburger v. Dairymen's Fertilizer Coop., Inc. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 269, 72 Cal. Rptr. 102 , plaintiffs were homeowners who resided in close proximity to defendant's fertilizer plant. They filed suit in the superior court of Orange County for an injunction to abate a nuisance. The court granted an ex parte temporary restraining order prohibiting defendant from conducting fertilizer operations on the new site, but that order was dissolved and a preliminary injunction denied on the ground that any harm to plaintiffs was outweighed by the sanitary utility of defendant's function in removing the daily manure deposits of the thousands of cattle maintained in the community and its environs.

Several months later, plaintiff's counsel appeared before several city councils and requested that an action be initiated by the municipalities to abate defendant's operations. The cities agreed and filed two actions that were consolidated into one action. After a month-long trial, the San Bernardino superior court determined that defendant's operation had not created, and did not constitute a public nuisance. Thereafter, plaintiffs took steps to reactivate their first action in Orange County, but they were enjoined from doing so by the San Bernardino court. They appealed from that injunction and contended that the determination that defendant's operations did not constitute a public nuisance was not res judicata in a suit by private property owners for abatement of a private nuisance.

The court of appeal held that the San Bernardino court had jurisdiction to make such orders as were necessary to preserve its jurisdiction so as to prevent impairment of its judgment, to avoid conflicting regulations and vexatious litigation, and to make a complete adjudication of the controversy. It observed that the propriety of injunctive relief to prevent conflicting or vexatious litigation has long been established, citing Civ. Code § 3422 and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (6) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)). Thus, when there exist two or more actions involving the same subject matter or the same facts or principles, restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings; restraint is also necessary to avoid unseemly conflict between courts that might arise if they were free to make contradictory decisions relating to the same controversy. In summary, the court of appeal noted that the San Bernardino superior court's action in restraining the Orange County suit was fully justified because its judgment was res judicata on the nuisance issue and because it was empowered to make such orders as necessary to prevent impairment of its judgment and to avoid conflicting regulations and vexatious litigation (266 Cal. App. 2d 269, 279) .

In Aldrich v. Transcontinental Land & Water Co. (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 281 P.2d 362 , the superior court granted a preliminary injunction that enjoined defendants from prosecuting certain municipal court actions or bringing further actions against plaintiffs in the superior court action involving the contracts that were the subject of the pending superior court action. Defendants appealed and contended that the superior court did not have jurisdiction to enjoin them from proceeding in the municipal court actions.

The court of appeal rejected this contention. It held that the superior court had jurisdiction of the subject matter, and therefore also had jurisdiction to enjoin defendants from proceeding with the municipal court actions. It reasoned that (1) the causes of action presented questions of law and fact common to all parties, (2) the causes of action arose out of the same series of transactions, (3) the causes within the municipal court's jurisdictional amount were properly joined with those within the superior court's jurisdictional amount, and (4) there was no misjoinder of parties plaintiff. It stated that jurisdiction was proper under former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (3) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)). It also noted that when it is essential to promote the ends of justice that an entire controversy be determined in one proceeding, so that the rights and duties of all interested parties may be finally settled, it may be necessary to restrain other suits to prevent the pendency of two or more actions involving the same subject matter, to prevent a partial litigation of the controversy, or to prevent a multiplicity of suits that depend on the same facts or principles (131 Cal. App. 2d 788, 796-797) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Prevent Multiplicity of Judicial Proceedings

In Glade v. Glade (1995) 38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 45 Cal. Rptr. 2d 695 , a wife commenced a marital dissolution action in the family law court. Thereafter, a foreclosure action was instituted by a trustee of a trust (hereafter trust) concerning a community property residence owned by the spouses. The wife then moved the family law court to consolidate the foreclosure action with the marital dissolution action because of overlapping issues and later moved the family law court to join the trust and others as parties in the marital dissolution action. The trust then moved for summary judgment in the foreclosure action. Before the hearing on the summary judgment motion, the wife filed an application in the family law court seeking an order to stay further prosecution of the foreclosure action based on among other grounds that failure to grant a stay would force needless and duplicative litigation of overlapping issues in the two actions leading to the possibility of inconsistent results. Ultimately, the family law court joined the trust and others in the marital dissolution action and stayed the foreclosure action except to discovery. At the hearing on the trust's motion for summary judgment in the foreclosure action the next day, however, the wife's counsel appeared five minutes after the matter had been called and after the court had granted the summary judgment motion without plaintiff's counsel having advised the court as to the stay order issued the day before. The same judge thereafter denied the wife's motion for reconsideration under Code Civ. Proc. § 1008 based on the reasoning that the family court had no authority to issue a stay and such an order was invalid because the judge's court and the family law court were of equal jurisdiction.

The court of appeal reversed the orders denying the motion for reconsideration and granting of summary judgment because the existence of a triable material fact issue precluded summary judgment and the family law court's joinder and stay order barred the judge from proceeding further with the foreclosure action (38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1449) . With regard to the latter point, the court noted that an injunction is proper under Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a) when necessary to prevent a multiplicity of judicial proceedings (38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1455) . The court concluded that a threat of multiple actions and inconsistent verdicts that could undermine the family law court's ability to characterize and dispose of community existed. Because the dissolution action was pending first, which vested the family law court with jurisdiction over alleged community property before the foreclosure was commenced, the family law court had priority of jurisdiction and its stay order of the foreclosure action was proper (38 Cal. App. 4th 1441, 1456) .

In Dennis v. Overholtzer (1957) 149 Cal. App. 2d 101, 307 P.2d 1012 , plaintiff commenced an action in which she asked for the specific performance of an alleged contract to sell certain real property or, in the alternative, for damages. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction under which it restrained defendants from commencing or maintaining any action or proceeding in unlawful detainer against one of the cross defendants, for ejectment or eviction of him from the property held by him under the relevant lease, or for the recovery of possession of that property from him. Defendants appealed and among other things, contended that equity cannot enjoin an action at law when the issues involved in the equity suit can be adjudicated in such action. The court of appeal replied that this rule does not apply when the equity court has first obtained jurisdiction. In order to avoid a multiplicity of actions, it may then enjoin the initiation and prosecution of a suit at law involving the same issues. Therefore, it affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction (149 Cal. App. 2d 101, 105) .

In Wellborn v. Wellborn (1945) 67 Cal. App. 2d 540, 155 P.2d 95 , a former wife instituted an action against her former husband and others to determine the right to certain real estate and the rentals therefrom. Plaintiff had already obtained a judgment that established her title to the property, but defendants instituted unlawful detainer actions against plaintiff's tenants in the justice court. The defendants' only claim to the title to the property was through a void execution sale to the former husband. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction based on its equitable power to try, in a single action, the issues involved in a multitude of actions at law and to put an end to unnecessary and vexatious litigation. The court of appeal affirmed the order. It stated that the various unlawful detainer actions against plaintiff's tenants were indirectly against plaintiff. They were even more vexatious from the fact that plaintiff was not in a position to defend them. The basic controversy was not within the jurisdiction of the justice court, and it was proper to stay the hand of that court until the question of title had been decided as between plaintiff and the defendants in the instant case (67 Cal. App. 2d 540, 544) .

In Lincoln v. Superior Court (1942) 51 Cal. App. 2d 61, 124 P.2d 179 , the superior court of Madera County entered a preliminary injunction that prohibited defendants from prosecuting or taking any further steps for the prosecution of certain actions pending in the superior court of Los Angeles County and in the municipal court of the City of Los Angeles. Defendants petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court of Madera County from continuing in force the preliminary injunction. The court of appeal denied the petition. It stated that the objective of the suit filed in Madera County was to dissolve the partnership involved and to revest the partnership property that had been held in trust in the persons entitled to it. The purpose of the preliminary injunction was to keep the partnership property intact until the dissolution of the partnership could be effected. The court of appeal concluded that a multiplicity of proceedings was involved and that, therefore, the Madera County superior court had properly exercised its power in restraining the suits filed in Los Angeles County (51 Cal. App. 2d 61, 68-69) .

In Taylor v. Hawley (1935) 6 Cal. App. 2d 576, 45 P.2d 226 , the superior court issued a final judgment restraining defendants from interfering with the plaintiff's title and right of possession by maintaining litigation or otherwise. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment and stated that injunctive relief incident to a decree quieting title is an ancient remedy growing out of what has been termed the "bill of peace in a court of chancery." It is a proper inherent remedy to terminate expensive and troublesome interference with the ownership and right of possession of property by one who has been regularly determined by a court of equity to be entitled thereto. It stated that former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (6) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)) authorized an injunction in such a situation (6 Cal. App. 2d 576, 580) .

In Gardner v. Superior Court (1929) 97 Cal. App. 713, 276 P. 363 , four actions had been pending in the superior court, all of which in some way related to the title or right of possession to certain real property. The court issued an order that restrained certain persons from interfering, hindering, or molesting plaintiff in the peaceable and quiet possession of the premises. The petitioner violated that order, was found guilty of contempt, and was sentenced to five days' imprisonment in the county jail. He sought, by a writ of certiorari, to have the judgment annulled by the court of appeal on the ground that the superior court had no jurisdiction to pronounce the judgment. One of the arguments advanced in support of that contention was that the original restraining order, which he was claimed to have violated, was void on its face because it attempted to enjoin the exercise of a legal right. The court of appeal rejected this argument and held that former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (6) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)) authorized the restraining order. It observed that it was plainly apparent that the court intended to enjoin the petitioner and the other persons from cluttering the courts with further proceedings--not actions but mere attempts to secure possession pendente lite--until their claim of title and of right to possession should be determined in the actions then pending. It was neither intended nor stated that the petitioner and other persons enjoined should be precluded from asserting their rights in the actions (97 Cal. App. 713, 716-717) .

In Harlow v. Feder (1928) 89 Cal. App. 435, 264 P. 782 , plaintiff sued defendant for injunctive relief and damages arising out of a breach of contract for the development of a patent. The trial court granted preliminary and permanent injunctions that enjoined defendant from operating under a certain company name; from making, using, and operating certain apparatus, machines, and parts thereof; and from selling or otherwise disposing of the same. It also awarded damages to plaintiff. Defendant argued on appeal that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law in that he could bring an action for money had and received, an action for damages, and also an action for claim and delivery. The court of appeal rejected this argument. It stated that the trial court had found that, as a result of defendant's breach of the contract, plaintiff had suffered substantial injury in a number of different ways, the redress of which would require several actions. This alone, it concluded, justified the issuance of the judgment granting the permanent injunction under former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd. (6) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(6)) (89 Cal. App. 435, 439-440) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.25

§ 116.25 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Obligation Arising From Trust [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN THE OBLIGATION ARISES FROM A TRUST. IN THIS CASE, THE OBLIGATION CONSISTS OF _____ [specify trust nature of obligation], AND A FIDUCIARY RELATIONSHIP EXISTS BETWEEN _____ [specify involved individuals/entities]. THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PRAYED FOR IS NECESSARY _____ [specify reason, e.g., IN ORDER TO PREVENT THE DEFENDANT FROM ENTERING INTO UNAUTHORIZED TRANSACTIONS THAT DEPLETE THE PLAINTIFF'S FINANCIAL RESOURCES].

Obligation Arising From Trust. An injunction may be granted when the obligation arises from a trust (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7); St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 360-361, 287 P.2d 387 ; see Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 136, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when an obligation arises from a trust [Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7)]. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should present facts establishing the nature of the trust relationship involved and why injunctive relief is necessary in the context of that relationship, such as, for example, to prevent the breach of a fiduciary duty [see, e.g., St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 360, 287 P.2d 387 (on church's behalf, four church trustees sued fifth trustee to enjoin him from breach of fiduciary duty)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions . For discussion and forms related to trusts generally, see Ch. 560, Trusts in that publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Obligation Arising From Trust

In St. James Church v. Superior Court (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 287 P.2d 387 , plaintiff was a religious corporation and defendant was one of five trustees of the plaintiff corporation. A complaint, brought in superior court by the four other trustees, sought to enjoin defendant from representing that he was authorized to act on behalf of the plaintiff and its trustees. The superior court refused to hear the action on the assumption that the municipal court had exclusive jurisdiction over the matter. Plaintiff then sought a writ of mandate from the court of appeal to compel the superior court to assume jurisdiction over the action.

The appellate court granted the writ. In discussing the reasons why the superior court had jurisdiction over the action, the court of appeal stated that the relation of the defendant to the plaintiff, its trustees, and its members was of a fiduciary nature. Because the action was brought by four of the plaintiff's trustees against the fifth to enjoin him from committing a breach of trust, the court of appeal held that the complaint clearly and unmistakably pleaded a cause of action for equitable relief. The court cited Civ. Code § 3422(4) which, like former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd (7) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(7)), provides that an injunction may be granted to prevent the breach of an obligation existing in favor of the applicant when the obligation arises from a trust. The court then quoted from the Restatement of Trusts: "If there are several trustees, one or more of them can maintain a suit against another to compel him to perform his duties under the trust, or to enjoin him from committing a breach of trust, or to compel him to redress a breach of trust committed by him. A trustee is not precluded from maintaining such a suit by the fact that he himself participated in the breach of trust, since the suit is on behalf of the beneficiary" [Restatement of Trusts, § 200, comment d.] (135 Cal. App. 2d 352, 360) .

The facts and procedural background of Heckmann v. Ahmanson (1985) 168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 214 Cal. Rptr. 177 , are discussed in § 116.22[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's grant of a preliminary injunction against "greenmailers" of a corporation (Disney). The profits were made by defendants (Steinberg Group) when, after posing a threat to take over Disney, they sold their stock in Disney back to Disney at a healthy profit. Plaintiffs established a reasonable probability that, in so doing, defendants breached a fiduciary duty owed to the corporation. The court held that the preliminary injunction was necessary to protect plaintiffs' right to the remedy of a constructive trust. If the profits of the sale were intermingled with other assets of the defendants or were dissipated, there would be no res to constitute the body of the constructive trust and a subsequent judgment granting a constructive trust would thus be rendered ineffectual (168 Cal. App. 3d 119, 136) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.26

§ 116.26 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Preservation of Status Quo

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED IN ORDER TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO UNTIL A FINAL DETERMINATION OF THE MERITS OF THE ACTION. IN THIS CASE, THE STATUS QUO, NAMELY _____ [specify factual situation jeopardized by actual/threatened action of other party], WILL BE DISRUPTED TO THE DETRIMENT OF _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] PENDING THE OUTCOME OF THE ACTION UNLESS INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IS GRANTED, BECAUSE _____ [specify reason].

A. Preservation of Status Quo. A preliminary injunction may be granted to preserve the status quo until a final determination of the merits of the action (Continental Baking Co. v. Katz (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 512, 528, 67 Cal. Rptr. 761, 439 P.2d 889 ; People v. Black's Food Store (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 59, 62, 105 P.2d 361 ; O'Connell v. Superior Court (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1471, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 147).

[Optional] B. Continuance of Regular and Usual Procedures. Preserving the status quo may encompass a court order that continues regular and usual procedures as well as an order that compels inaction (Fretz v. Burke (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746, 55 Cal. Rptr. 879).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief that is sought in order to preserve the status quo until a hearing on the merits of the underlying action. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

This memorandum may be of use to counsel in a variety of situations, and may be combined with other memoranda in this chapter, as appropriate.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish (1) what the status quo is, and (2) why injunctive relief is necessary to preserve it, including the adverse consequences posed to counsel's client if the relief sought is not granted.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preservation of Status Quo

In Continental Baking Co. v. Katz (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 512, 67 Cal. Rptr. 761, 439 P.2d 889 , both parties sought injunctive relief with respect to an easement. The superior court granted plaintiff a preliminary injunction restraining defendants from interfering with plaintiff's use of the easement, and defendants appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The Court noted that the general purpose of a preliminary injunction is the preservation of the status quo until a final determination of the merits of the action. In this case, the Supreme Court determined, the superior court had properly evaluated the reasonable probability of plaintiff's success and correctly balanced the equities of the parties in favor of plaintiff after a consideration of the injuries that each might incur as a result of the denial of their respective motions. Thus, the Court found no abuse of discretion in the granting of the preliminary injunction to plaintiff (68 Cal. 2d 512, 528) .

In People v. Black's Food Store (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 59, 105 P.2d 361 , the superior court granted preliminary injunctions in two consolidated actions that restrained defendants from selling products as loss leaders for the purpose of injuring competitors and destroying competition in violation of the Unfair Practices Act [see generally Ch. 235, Unfair Competition in this publication].

The Supreme Court affirmed the orders granting the preliminary injunctions. It stated that the superior court did not abuse its discretion in issuing the orders. The orders did not determine the merits of the controversies. Rather, they had the effect of merely maintaining the status quo until the cases were decided on their merits (16 Cal. 2d 59, 62) .

In O'Connell v. Superior Court (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 47 Cal. Rptr. 3d 147 , plaintiff students claimed it was a violation of the state constitution's Equal Protection Clause to apply the California high school exit exam (CAHSEE) diploma requirement, Ed. Code § 60851(a), to students who had passed all the course requirements for graduation, but who had not passed the CAHSEE. The trial court issued a preliminary injunction restraining the California Board of Education from denying diplomas to members of the 2006 graduating class at California public high schools who were otherwise eligible to graduate, but who had not passed the CAHSEE. The defendants sought a writ of mandate to vacate the order.

The court of appeal granted the defendants' request and vacated the trial court's order. One issue the court examined was whether the injunction maintained the status quo while the litigation was pending. The plaintiffs argued that the injunction preserved the status quo, premised on their definition of the status quo as the historical practice of granting students diplomas based on their completion of local school district requirements, without requiring them to pass a statewide test (141 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1472) . The court held that ordering that the plaintiffs be given diplomas did not maintain the status quo, but in fact ended the litigation. Surely, the court held, the trial court did not expect that if defendants ultimately prevailed in the litigation, plaintiffs would give back the diplomas they had received under the mandate of the court's preliminary injunction. The court of appeal held that by failing to consider the effect of its interim relief on the status quo of the litigation, the trial court ignored the foundational legal principle that the general purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending a final adjudication of the claims on the merits (141 Cal. App. 4th 1452, 1472) .

[b] Continuance of Regular and Usual Procedures

The facts and procedural background of Fretz v. Burke (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 55 Cal. Rptr. 879 , are discussed in § 116.21[3][a]. In Fretz, the superior court granted preliminary and partial injunctive relief to plaintiffs pending final judgment in an action for dissolution of a partnership. Defendants were required to pay their respective shares of the profits of a corporation, but a specified amount was ordered retained in trust for plaintiffs. In addition, defendants were ordered to pay plaintiffs their proportionate shares of all future profits of the corporation. The defendant general partner appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction, but the court of appeal affirmed the order. It stated that it regarded the order granting the injunction as preserving the status quo, namely the procedure of disbursing profits as that procedure had existed before commencement of the action. It noted that the term "status quo" does not necessarily refer to inaction and that it may encompass the continuing of regular and usual procedures (247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 746) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preservation of Status Quo

In Nyman v. The Desert Club (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 63, 240 P.2d 37 , plaintiffs brought an action for a declaration of their rights in the defendant club, for damages for being deprived of such claimed rights, and for injunctive relief. A superior court granted a preliminary injunction that restrained defendants from interfering with the plaintiffs' full use and enjoyment of the club facilities pending a determination of the case on its merits. The injunction was conditioned on the plaintiffs conducting themselves properly in the use of the club's facilities while the injunction was in effect. Defendants appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It stated that the purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo until the merits of the action can be determined. Thus, because the injunction served this purpose and the superior court did not abuse its discretion in granting the injunction, the order granting it was affirmed (109 Cal. App. 2d 63, 66-67) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.27

§ 116.27 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Action by Municipal Corporation or Inferior Board or Tribunal in Excess of Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN DEFENDANT IS ACTING IN EXCESS OF ITS JURISDICTION AND WITHOUT AUTHORITY. IN THIS CASE, THE DEFENDANT _____ [specify nature of public entity, e.g., A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION] IS EXCEEDING ITS JURISDICTION AND AUTHORITY BY _____ [specify grounds, e.g., DIRECTING EMPLOYEES OF ITS PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT, ON AN ONGOING BASIS, TO FORCIBLY ENTER PRIVATE DWELLINGS UNANNOUNCED AT ANY HOUR FOR THE PURPOSE OF CONDUCTING BUILDING INSPECTIONS], [IN VIOLATION OF _____(specify constitution, statute, ordinance, or other law violated)].

Action in Excess of Jurisdiction and Without Authority. A preliminary injunction may be granted in cases in which a municipal corporation or an inferior board or tribunal is acting, or proposing to act, in excess of its jurisdiction and without authority (San Ysidro Irr. Dist. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 708, 720, 16 Cal. Rptr. 609, 365 P.2d 753).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when plaintiff is seeking to restrain action by a municipal corporation or an inferior board or tribunal that is in excess of its jurisdiction and without authority. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the defendant's ongoing (or imminent) conduct exceeds (or will exceed) its lawful authority, and how the injunctive relief being sought addresses that situation.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Action in Excess of Jurisdiction and Without Authority

In San Ysidro Irr. Dist. v. Superior Court (1961) 56 Cal. 2d 708, 16 Cal. Rptr. 609, 365 P.2d 753 , the City of San Diego brought an action against the San Ysidro Irrigation District and its board of directors for a declaration to the effect that the district was dissolved by operation of law when it was annexed to the city. The city also sought a preliminary and a permanent injunction enjoining the district and its directors from entering into any contracts for the construction of any new water lines and facilities and from disposing of any assets of the district. A superior court issued a temporary restraining order against the district and its directors that enjoined them from constructing water facilities and from disposing of the district's cash and assets pending a further hearing on an order to show cause as to why a preliminary injunction to the same effect should not be issued. The district and its directors moved to dissolve the temporary restraining order on the ground that the court lacked jurisdiction to enjoin legislative and administrative acts of public officers until it was judicially determined that the district had been dissolved. The court denied the motion and then granted the city's request for a preliminary injunction. The district and its directors then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition, claiming that unless restrained by the appellate court the superior court would proceed to trial on the merits and enforce the preliminary injunction to petitioners' irrevocable injury. The petitioners argued, among other things, that issuance of the temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction was in excess of the superior court's jurisdiction because it prohibited substantially all of the legislative functions of the district's directors.

The court of appeal rejected this argument. It stated that the situation could involve one in which the district's actions were in excess of its jurisdiction; that is, if the district was in fact dissolved by operation of law by its annexation to the city, then all activities of the district's directors would be in excess of their jurisdiction. Therefore, the court of appeal denied the petition for a writ of prohibition because the case came within the principle that a court of equity is justified in interfering when municipal corporations or inferior boards or tribunals are acting, or proposing to act, in excess of their jurisdiction and without authority (56 Cal. 2d 708, 720) .

16 of 108 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.28

§ 116.28 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN EVIDENCE INDICATES THAT COMPLETED ACTS WILL PROBABLY RECUR. IN THIS CASE, THE _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] HAS _____ [specify completed act(s) complained of] AND THERE IS A SUBSTANTIAL PROBABILITY THAT THESE ACTS WILL RECUR BECAUSE _____ [specify reason(s)].

A. Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur. An injunction may be granted in cases in which evidence exists that completed acts will probably recur (Rosicrucian Fellow. v. Rosicrucian Etc. Ch. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 144, 245 P.2d 481 ; Feminist Women's Health Center v. Blythe (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1543, 1555, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 ; Phipps v. Saddleback Valley Unified School Dist. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1110, 1117-1119, 251 Cal. Rptr. 720).

B. Great or Irreparable Injury. [See § 116.21.]

[Optional] C. Disregard of Intention to Discontinue Transgressions. When a guilty party retains the means of so continuing his or her transgressions, a court is not required to accept his or her statement that he or she no longer intends to do so (Wood v. Peffer (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 116, 124, 130 P.2d 220).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when the evidence indicates that, even though the acts complained of have already occurred, they will probably recur. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish the nature of the acts complained of and why it is highly probable that they will recur unless the injunctive relief sought is granted.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

Rosicrucian Fellow. v. Rosicrucian Etc. Ch. (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 245 P.2d 481 , involved a controversy between religious societies with regard to the use of property as well as the exercise of other rights. Plaintiff filed an action to enjoin the use of a name in response to which defendants filed a cross complaint for declaratory relief.

The Supreme Court modified and affirmed the superior court's judgment for defendants. Part of the judgment granted defendants the declaratory relief they were seeking and restrained plaintiff from doing certain specified things. Plaintiff objected to the propriety of the injunctive provisions, but the Supreme Court affirmed the injunctive part of the judgment except for one provision that it held violated the guarantee of freedom of speech. The Court stated that, while it is true that an injunction is ordered against past acts only if there is evidence that they will probably recur, it noted that the record sufficiently indicated that the acts enjoined would probably recur and that it was not unreasonable to suppose that future assertions of claims to the contested property would be injurious to the defendants (39 Cal. 2d 121, 144) .

In Feminist Women's Health Center v. Blythe (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1543, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 184 , the trial court granted a permanent injunction imposing time, place, and manner restrictions on the activities of anti-abortion demonstrators at a women's health clinic. On appeal defendants contended, among other things, that a permanent injunction was inappropriate because no evidence had been presented at trial that the conduct supporting the temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction would be resumed if not permanently enjoined. In support of this claim, the defendants pointed out that there was no evidence of any prohibited conduct for over a year before trial. The appeals court affirmed the injunctive relief on grounds that it did not violate the demonstrators First Amendment rights and held that, while the injunctive remedy should not be exercised unless there is a reasonable probability that the acts complained of will recur, the divisive and passionate nature of the abortion issue made it reasonable for the trial court to conclude that the prohibited conduct would continue unless permanently enjoined (17 Cal. App. 4th 1543, 1555-1556) .

In Phipps v. Saddleback Valley Unified School Dist. (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1110, 251 Cal. Rptr. 720 , a trial court issued a permanent injunction against a school district compelling it to allow a hemophiliac student who had tested positive for the Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) virus to remain in school in regular attendance. The district had required the student to study at home while it formulated a policy relating to AIDS, and allowed the student to return to class only after the trial court had issued a preliminary injunction compelling it to do so. The trial court had found that whether or not the district school board would correctly perform its duties or abuse its discretion in the future was a matter of speculation, and the trial court would not so speculate.

The court of appeal, in affirming the judgment, explained that an injunction is an extraordinary power that is to be exercised always with great caution and rarely, if ever, in a doubtful case. If at the time of the order or judgment there is no reasonable probability that past acts complained of will recur, injunctive relief will be denied. The court said that injunctive power is not used as punishment for past acts and is ordered against them only if there is evidence they will probably recur, and that a court of equity will not afford an injunction to prevent in the future that which in good faith has been discontinued in the absence of any evidence that the acts are likely to be repeated in the future. The court nevertheless pointed out that the district had not voluntarily decided to abandon its closed-door policy and allow the student to attend regular classes, and that the issuance of the preliminary injunction compelling it to do so played a crucial role. The court further pointed out that the district, though faced with an extremely delicate situation, had acted unreasonably in delaying, at the student's expense, formulation of its policy as to how it would handle students with AIDS, and that while the student was back in school by the time of trial, there was no guarantee the district would not change its practices. The court concluded that, simply stated, the record suggested the student's attendance was permitted solely because it was mandated by the preliminary injunction (204 Cal. App. 3d 1110, 1117-1119) .

[b] Disregard of Intention to Discontinue Transgressions

Wood v. Peffer (1942) 55 Cal. App. 2d 116, 130 P.2d 220 , involved an action for an injunction against unfair competition and for damages. Plaintiff was the administratrix of the estate of her late husband who, during his lifetime, had conducted a profitable household and electrical appliance business. Defendant was an electric refrigerator dealer who had acquired a number of the refrigerators that comprised a part of the business of plaintiff's husband. Defendant unfairly advertised on the radio that plaintiff had no refrigerators to sell because he had purchased her entire stock and that he was selling them at a reduced price. The superior court gave judgment for plaintiff that enjoined defendant from committing acts of unfair competition. Defendant appealed and, among other things, argued that the superior court was not justified in granting the injunction because, inasmuch as defendant had testified that all the refrigerators had already been sold, the transaction was completed before the injunction was granted.

The court of appeal rejected this contention. The court observed that the record showed that three refrigerators remained in defendant's possession at the time judgment was rendered. It stated that this fact alone negated the argument that the transaction was necessarily completed and that defendant no longer possessed the means of continuing in his course of conduct. It commented that when a guilty party retains the means of so continuing his transgressions, a court is not required to accept his statement that he no longer intends to do so (55 Cal. App. 2d 116, 124) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Completed Acts That Will Probably Recur

In Feminist Women's Health Center v. Blythe (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 1641, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 189 , the trial court issued a permanent injunction imposing time, place, and manner restrictions on the activities of antiabortion demonstrators at plaintiff's clinic. Defendants contended that a permanent injunction was inappropriate because no evidence was presented suggesting that the conduct supporting the temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction would be resumed if not permanently enjoined. The court of appeal determined, however, that it was reasonable for the trial court to conclude that the prohibited conduct would resume unless permanently enjoined because of (1) the intensely divisive nature of the issue involved, (2) the persistent and prolonged nature of the defendants' activities at the clinic before issuance of the temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction, and (3) that the prior conduct was discontinued at least in part because of the legal prohibition (32 Cal. App. 4th 1641, 1658-1659) .

The facts and procedural background of Volpicelli v. Jared Sydney Torrance Memorial Hosp. (1980) 109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 167 Cal. Rptr. 610 are discussed in § 116.21[3][a]. In Volpicelli, a trial court granted a preliminary injunction in a case involving the termination of plaintiff physician from the medical staff due to a dispute over staff dues. The injunction ordered plaintiff's reinstatement to the staff, pending adequate notice and hearing on the matter. Because plaintiff had already been terminated, the defendants argued that an injunction should not be granted to give redress to a completed act. However, the court of appeal noted that the hospital's continuing pattern of conduct brought the case within the exception to the completed acts rule. The record disclosed that the hospital, in an effort to prevent plaintiff from returning to the staff, continued to harass plaintiff. Because the wrongful acts were likely to be repeated, the appellate court upheld the trial court's order (109 Cal. App. 3d 242, 251) .

The facts and procedural background of Fretz v. Burke (1967) 247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 55 Cal. Rptr. 879 , are discussed in § 116.21[3][a]. In Fretz, the superior court granted preliminary and partial injunctive relief to plaintiffs pending final judgment in an action for dissolution of a partnership. Defendants were required to pay their respective shares of the profits of a corporation, but a specified amount was ordered retained in trust for plaintiffs. In addition, defendants were ordered to pay plaintiffs their proportional shares of all future profits of the corporation. The defendant general partner appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction. He argued that an injunction is to be granted only to direct or to prevent future acts or omissions, not to undo what has been done because this is the function of other actions, such as one for damages. The court of appeal concluded that there was no merit to this argument. It stated that, while it is true that the office of injunction is preventive rather than remedial, an injunction may be granted as to past acts that will probably recur. Reviewing the evidence, the court stated that the injunction properly directed that the part of the profits that belonged to the plaintiffs should be paid to them and not held by the defendant in a suspense account. Because the superior court was enjoining defendant to pay future installments of profits, it could order disbursed to the owners the simple transfer of funds theretofore placed in suspense by the unilateral act of the defendant (247 Cal. App. 2d 741, 744) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.29

§ 116.29 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Changed Factual Situation Requires Issuance of Previously Denied Preliminary Injunction

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED WHEN THE FACTUAL CONTEXT HAS CHANGED TO SUCH AN EXTENT AS TO REQUIRE THE ISSUANCE OF A PREVIOUSLY DENIED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION. IN THIS CASE, WHEN _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] INITIALLY APPLIED FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION, _____ [describe pertinent facts existing when injunction first denied]. SINCE THAT TIME, _____ [describe changed situation]. IN VIEW OF THESE CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES, THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PRAYED FOR SHOULD BE ISSUED.

A. Changed Factual Context. A preliminary injunction may be granted when a factual situation has changed to such an extent as to require the issuance of a preliminary injunction that was previously denied (Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Harrah's Club (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 764, 772, 62 Cal. Rptr. 505).

B. Great or Irreparable Injury. [See § 116.21.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when, following an initial denial of the relief requested, the factual context has changed to such an extent as to now more clearly merit that relief. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish the nature of change in the applicant's situation that has occurred since the time the injunctive relief was first denied and that demonstrates his or her entitlement to that relief. In other words, counsel must show why the court should reexamine the situation and now grant relief that was previously denied.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changed Factual Context

In Brunzell Constr. Co. v. Harrah's Club (1967) 253 Cal. App. 2d 764, 62 Cal. Rptr. 505 , plaintiff brought an action in Los Angeles based on a contract involving the construction of a casino for defendant in Reno, Nevada. One month later, defendant filed an action in Reno against plaintiff and an insurance company as its surety. After a number of legal maneuvers in both California and Nevada by both parties, the Los Angeles court granted a preliminary injunction to plaintiff that it had previously denied. This injunction restrained defendant from prosecuting the Nevada case against plaintiff and its surety.

The main appeal (the second appeal involved the denial of defendant's application to require plaintiff to arbitrate) was from the order granting this preliminary injunction. The court of appeal affirmed the order. It noted the principle that, when there has been a change in the controlling facts on which an injunction was granted or the law has been changed, modified, or extended, or when the ends of justice would be served by modifying or vacating a previous order granting or denying injunctive relief, the court has inherent power to vacate or modify its previous order when the circumstances and situation of the parties have so changed as to render such action just and equitable. It stated that this case presented a classic example of a factual situation having changed to such an extent as to require the issuance of a preliminary injunction that was previously denied. When the court originally made its order denying the preliminary injunction sought by plaintiff in California, there was still in force in the Nevada action a preliminary injunction enjoining plaintiff from proceeding with the Los Angeles action (253 Cal. App. 2d 764, 772) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.30

§ 116.30 Supporting Motion for Injunction Pending Appeal by Party Denied Injunctive Relief

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS
_____ [name]	)	AND AUTHORITIES IN Plaintiff,	)	SUPPORT OF
vs.	)	APPLICATION
_____ [name],	)	FOR INJUNCTION
Defendant.	)	PENDING APPEAL
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Trial Date: _____
	)

_____

[EITHER]

AN INJUNCTION MAY BE GRANTED TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO WHEN A PARTY WHO WAS DENIED INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PLANS TO APPEAL FROM THE JUDGMENT. IN THIS CASE, THE COURT

DENIED _____ [specify party's, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S] REQUEST FOR _____ [specify nature of injunctive relief requested] ON _____ [date], AND _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] HAS FILED A NOTICE OF APPEAL FROM THE JUDGMENT DENYING THAT RELIEF. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IS REQUIRED TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO PENDING THIS APPEAL BECAUSE _____ [state reason].

Injunction Pending Appeal From Judgment. When a court has entered a judgment denying injunctive relief and the party denied relief plans to appeal from the judgment, the court may, in order to preserve the status quo between the parties, enjoin the adverse party from committing the acts against which injunctive relief is being sought until such time as the appeal is determined. This may be accomplished either by continuing in force a preliminary injunction previously granted or by making an original order restraining the successful party (City of Pasadena v. Superior Court (1910) 157 Cal. 781, 783-797, 109 P. 620 ; see Addiego v. Hill (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 289-290, 73 Cal. Rptr. 901).

[OR]

AN INJUNCTION MAY BE GRANTED TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO WHEN A PARTY WHO WAS DENIED PRELIMINARY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF PLANS TO APPEAL FROM THE ORDER DENYING THE PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION. IN THIS CASE, THE COURT DENIED _____ [specify party's, e.g., PLAINTIFF'S] REQUEST FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION ON _____ [date], AND _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] HAS FILED A NOTICE OF APPEAL FROM THE ORDER DENYING THAT RELIEF. INJUNCTIVE RELIEF IS REQUIRED TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO PENDING THIS APPEAL BECAUSE _____ [state reason].

Injunction Pending Appeal From Order Denying Preliminary Injunction. When a court has made an order denying preliminary injunctive relief and the party denied relief plans to appeal from the order, the court may, in order to preserve the status quo between the parties, enjoin the adverse party from committing the acts against which injunctive relief is being sought until such time as the appeal is determined (American Trading Co. v. Superior Court (1923) 192 Cal. 770, 771-772, 222 P. 142).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for an injunction pending appeal when either an order or a judgment has been entered denying the injunctive relief sought by the moving party [see generally Code Civ. Proc. §§ 904.1(a)(6), 904.2(g) (right to appeal from denial of injunction)]. For a form of caption that may be adapted for use in presenting a memorandum of points and authorities in support of such a motion, see § 116.20.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish the need to preserve the status quo pending the outcome of the appeal. In other words, even though the court has previously denied injunctive relief, counsel must show that despite this denial, the facts are compelling enough to merit the issuance of an injunction pending an appeal.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms related to appeals from judgments and orders of the superior court in civil actions, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 41, Appeal: Review Standards and Appellate Rules of Law (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Injunction Pending Appeal From Judgment

In City of Pasadena v. Superior Court (1910) 157 Cal. 781, 109 P. 620 , plaintiff telephone and telegraph companies brought an action against the City of Pasadena to restrain the city from enforcing one of its municipal ordinances regarding the use of its streets by plaintiffs. A temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction were issued, but after the trial of the action the superior court entered an order that directed a judgment for the city for costs and specified that the preliminary injunction previously issued was dissolved. Immediately thereafter, the city began to destroy the companies' telephone system in the city by cutting 12 of their cables and disconnecting 2,400 subscribers, three exchanges, and four toll lines. The superior court then granted plaintiffs' motion to restore and continue in force the preliminary injunction pending the final determination of the action. The court stated that it believed that the preliminary injunction was necessary to maintain the status quo between the parties pending that determination. Defendant city applied for a writ of prohibition, contending that the superior court lacked the power to continue the injunction pending appeal. The Supreme Court denied the writ.

The Supreme Court stated that the main question was whether a superior court in an action brought to obtain a final injunction can, by an order made concurrently with the granting of the final judgment in the action denying the injunction, continue in force a preliminary injunction or make an original order restraining the successful party, pending an appeal by his adversary against whom the judgment denying a right to any injunction whatever runs. After examining the relevant authorities, the Court held that it was hardly open to serious question but that the superior court had that power. It stated that a superior court has the power, in its final judgment, to continue in force a preliminary injunction so as to maintain the status quo of the subject matter of litigation pending an appeal, notwithstanding that the right to a perpetual injunction that was the primary object of the action may have been denied by the judgment itself (157 Cal. 781, 783-797) .

In Addiego v. Hill (1968) 268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 73 Cal. Rptr. 901 , plaintiffs brought an action for specific performance of a written agreement to sell stock in a closed corporation. A trial court granted a preliminary injunction against the sale of stock by defendants to a third party, and later entered judgment for plaintiffs, which included, in part, a permanent injunction that enjoined the defendants from selling their shares in the corporation (to anyone but plaintiffs). The trial court denied defendants' new trial motion and, after it was learned that defendants had declared a stock dividend over plaintiffs' objection, later issued a postjudgment injunction that restrained defendants from all activities in relation to the corporation. This injunction was issued to preserve the status quo until the judgment became final. Defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. With respect to the postjudgment injunction, the appellate court stated that the trial court had authority to take whatever steps were necessary to preserve the corporation and its assets during the pendency of the defendants' appeal. Otherwise, in view of the defendants' actions in calling a corporate board meeting and declaring a dividend (by exercising their controlling interests), they could easily have drained all the cash out of the corporation pending the appeal. Thus, it concluded that issuance of the postjudgment injunction was proper and in no way constituted an abuse of discretion (268 Cal. App. 2d 280, 289-290) .

[b] Injunction Pending Appeal From Order Denying Preliminary Injunction

In American Trading Co. v. Superior Court (1923) 192 Cal. 770, 222 P. 142 , petitioner sought a writ of certiorari (review) to annul an order of the superior court that had continued in force a restraining order even though the application for a preliminary injunction had been denied. The parties conceded at oral argument that the superior court had authority to grant an injunction pending the appeal in order to preserve the status quo. Petitioner's contentions were that the order granting the injunction was void because no notice of the application was given and because the bond did not protect it.

The court of appeal rejected these contentions. It held that sufficient notice was afforded petitioner by the notice and hearing of the application for the preliminary injunction and that, because the court was acting pursuant to its inherent power to preserve the status quo pending the appeal and not acting under Code Civ. Proc. § 527, it was not necessary that petitioner be protected by a bond (192 Cal. 770, 771-772) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.31

§ 116.31 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Act Would Destroy Potential Evidence Pending Discovery Order

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO PROTECT POTENTIAL EVIDENCE PENDING A DISCOVERY ORDER. IN THIS CASE, AS SHOWN BY THE _____ [COMPLAINT and/or AFFIDAVITS or DECLARATIONS], PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER IRREPARABLE HARM BECAUSE _____ [set forth factual basis for alleging waste or great/irreparable injury]. PLAINTIFF HAS NO ADEQUATE REMEDY AT LAW INSOFAR AS THE CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE DOES NOT PROVIDE A MECHANISM FOR PRESERVING EVIDENCE. THEREFORE, THE COURT SHOULD GRANT THE RELIEF REQUESTED.

Protect Potential Evidence. An injunction may be granted when it appears, during the litigation, that a party to the action is doing, or threatens, or is about to do, or is procuring or suffering to be done, some act in violation of the rights of another party to the action respecting the subject of the action, and tending to render the judgment ineffectual (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(3)). The purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending a determination on the merits of the claim, i.e., the right to discovery (Dodge, Warren & Peters Insurance Services, Inc. v. Riley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1418, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 385 (court affirms preliminary injunction requiring preservation of electronic evidence by prohibiting defendants from destroying, deleting or secreting from discovery any of their electronic storage media)).

No Adequate Remedy at Law. The Code of Civil Procedure does not provide a mechanism for preserving evidence [see Code of Civ. Proc. § 2019 (Code of Civ. Proc. § 2019.010 effective July 1, 2005)]. The availability of sanctions for misuse of the discovery statutes does not establish an adequate remedy at law for preserving evidence (Dodge, Warren & Peters Insurance Services, Inc. v. Riley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 385).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when an act would destroy evidence pending a discovery order. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth specific facts in any accompanying affidavits or declarations that establish how the commission or continuance of some act by the defendant during the litigation will destroy evidence to which the plaintiff is entitled.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form for a complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as will as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

For discussion of the duty to preserve electronic evidence and sanctions for e-discovery abuses, as well as other issues arising in e-discovery, see Ch. 80, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing, § 80.03A. For more detailed discussion of e-discovery generally, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 190, Discovery: Scope, Regulation, and Timing (Matthew Bender). For a step-by-step guide to responding to e-discovery requests, see Matthew Bender(R) Practice Guide: California Civil Discovery, Ch. 5, Discovery of Electronic Information .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Protect Potential Evidence

In Dodge, Warren & Peters Insurance Services, Inc. v. Riley (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 130 Cal. Rptr. 2d 385 , a trial court granted a preliminary injunction in a case involving an employer suing former employees for misappropriation of trace secrets and unfair business practices. The plaintiff employer claimed the defendants obtained copies of documents maintained in the employer's files and computer storage media. The defendant sought an ex parte application seeking to freeze defendants' electronically stored data so that it would be available for future discovery, if appropriate, and claimed that even defendants' innocent use of the media could result in the destruction of potential evidence. Prior to requesting the injunction, plaintiff had served defendants with requests for production, seeking to obtain the computer and other electronic storage media that were the subject of the injunction.

The court of appeal upheld the injunction, reasoning that the purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo pending a determination on the merits of the claim. The court clarified that it was not dealing with a determination on the merits of, or a final judgment on, the entire action. Rather, the claim was the right to discovery (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1418) . The court of appeal also reasoned that the Code of Civil Procedure did not provide an adequate remedy at law for destruction of evidence and that the availability of sanctions for discovery abuses did not create an adequate remedy at law (105 Cal. App. 4th 1414, 1419) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.32

§ 116.32 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Stay Judicial Proceeding Pending at Commencement of Action [Civ. Code § 3423(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO APPLICA-Plaintiff,	)	TION FOR PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name],	)	Time: _____
Defendant.	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED TO STAY A JUDICIAL PROCEEDING PENDING AT THE COMMENCEMENT OF THE ACTION IN WHICH THE INJUNCTION WAS DEMANDED UNLESS IT IS NECESSARY TO PREVENT A MULTIPLICITY OF SUCH PROCEEDINGS. IN THIS CASE, _____ [describe factual situation, e.g., THERE IS ONLY ONE LEGAL PROCEEDING INVOLVED]. THEREFORE, ISSUANCE OF A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION WOULD BE IMPROPER.

A. Stay of Pending Judicial Proceeding Prohibited. An injunction cannot be granted to stay a judicial proceeding pending at the commencement of the action in which the injunction is demanded unless such restraint is necessary to prevent a multiplicity of such proceedings (Civ. Code § 3423(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1); Spreckels v. Hawaiian Comm. and Sugar Co. (1897) 117 Cal. 377, 378-382, 49 P. 353 ; Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 744-745, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482).

B. Multiplicity of Proceedings Not Present. Injunctions are issued to prevent a multiplicity of actions in only two general classes of cases: first, those cases in which many claims that have not been adjudicated are brought into equity to be made the subject of a single trial and decree and, second, those that are enjoined because they are shown to be vexatious suits on causes of action that have been settled by former adjudication (Verdier v. Verdier (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 724, 735, 22 Cal. Rptr. 93 ; Bartholomew v. Bartholomew (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 216, 225, 132 P.2d 297).

An injunction is not available to prevent multiple suits absent evidence that the controversy involves the same parties, subject matter, or facts (Planned Parenthood Golden Gate v. Foti (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 358, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46).

[Optional] C. Enjoining of Federal Actions Prohibited. State courts do not have the power to prevent litigants from filing and prosecuting pending or prospective actions in the federal courts (General Atomic Co. v. Felter (1977) 434 U.S. 12, 16-19, 98 S. Ct. 76, 54 L. Ed 2d 199 ; see also Civ. Code § 3423(b); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(2)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief has been sought to stay judicial proceedings that were pending at the commencement of the action [see Civ. Code § 3423(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1)]. In particular, they may be submitted in opposition to the points and authorities set out in § 116.24.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

Optional Paragraph C should be included if the opposing party is attempting to enjoin a pending federal court action, since California courts are entirely without power to enjoin such actions [see General Atomic Co. v. Felter (1977) 434 U.S. 12, 16-19, 98 S. Ct. 76, 54 L. Ed 2d 199 ; see also Civ. Code § 3423(b); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(2)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law

stated. Thus, counsel should state, for example, that, except for the present case, there are no other proceedings pending that affect the outcome of the litigation [see Civ. Code § 3423(a); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms for use in obtaining a writ of prohibition, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stay of Pending Judicial Proceeding Prohibited

In Spreckels v. Hawaiian Comm. and Sugar Co. (1897) 117 Cal. 377, 49 P. 353 , a corporate defendant had commenced an action in a Hawaiian court at the time plaintiff brought the instant action in the San Francisco County Superior Court. In the San Francisco action, plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction that restrained the corporate defendant from further prosecuting the action in Hawaii and restrained the other defendants, as directors of the corporate defendant, from furthering the prosecution of that action. Defendants moved to dissolve the preliminary injunction, but the superior court refused to dissolve it. Defendants appealed the order refusing to dissolve the preliminary injunction, and the Supreme Court reversed.

Defendants argued on appeal that former Civ. Code § 3423(1) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(a)) applied only to California courts, but the Supreme Court disagreed. It stated that this statute was not so limited, that it was a general rule of universal application. The Court rejected the defendants' contention that other subsections of the statute would be useless if former Civ. Code § 3423(1) had universal operation. The Court stated that the first three subdivisions of Civ. Code § 3423 constitute a harmonious whole and are constitutional (117 Cal. 377, 378-382) .

Stearns v. Los Angeles City School Dist. (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 53 Cal. Rptr. 482 , involved a complex series of proceedings ultimately involving, on appeal, a judgment for plaintiffs in an action in Mendocino County to quiet title to certain real property as well as a judgment dismissing defendants' cross complaints after demurrers thereto were sustained. One of the defendant school districts' contentions on appeal was that the complaint did not contain a prayer for injunctive relief and that, therefore, such relief was not proper.

The court of appeal rejected that argument, but it noted that of more serious concern was the fact that the judgment by its terms would restrain the further prosecution of prior Los Angeles County action by defendants. The court stated that it was error on the part of the Mendocino County Superior Court to word the injunction so broadly as to restrain the prosecution of an action already pending. It noted the general statutory rule that one court cannot enjoin the prosecution of an action that is pending in a court of concurrent jurisdiction (citing former Civ. Code § 3423(1) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (1), which have been relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(a) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(1)). It also observed the statutory exception that this prohibition does not apply when there is a multiplicity of cases. Because one court had to decide whether the issues raised in the second action in Mendocino County barred the first action in Los Angeles County, the proper court to do that was the Los Angeles court. Any judgment properly obtained in the Mendocino County action could be presented in the prior Los Angeles action for a determination of its effect on the issues pending therein (244 Cal. App. 2d 696, 744-745) .

[b] Multiplicity of Proceedings Not Present

Planned Parenthood Golden Gate v. Foti (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 involved a permanent injunction that plaintiff Planned Parenthood Association of San Mateo County obtained limiting demonstration activity outside its clinic. The injunction was entered against two named parties, Operation Rescue of California and Robert Cochran. According to its terms, the injunction applied to: "Defendants and their agents, employees, representatives and all persons acting in concert or participation with them, or either of them, and all persons with actual notice of this judgment." About six years later, plaintiff sought a declaration that the injunction applied to certain other named individuals, the defendants in the present action. Those individuals challenged the injunction, claiming that it did not apply to them because they were not specifically named in it and were not parties to the action in which it was issued. Plaintiff argued that the injunction applied to the defendants because they had actual notice of it. Plaintiff also argued that the defendants should be subject to the injunction in order to uphold the policy against multiplicity of lawsuits. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeal held that the policy against multiplicity of judicial proceedings was intended to prevent conflicting or vexatious litigation. However, it held that this policy was not effectuated by the actual notice provision which purports to bind a nonparty to a judgment solely on the basis that the nonparty has notice of the judgment. The court of appeal held that, absent evidence that the defendants acted together with or on behalf of parties enjoined by the injunction, the controversy between the defendants and plaintiff did not involve the same parties, subject matter, or facts which supported the judgment pursuant to which the injunction was entered (107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 358) .

Verdier v. Verdier (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 724, 22 Cal. Rptr. 93 , involved, in part, an appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction that prohibited plaintiff from prosecuting an action for divorce in France. The French action was based on a cause of action for divorce for adultery and had been filed before commencement of the California action. In the California action, a judgment of dismissal had been entered that denied judgment of a divorce to plaintiff, but that judgment had been premised on a cause of action for divorce based on extreme cruelty.

The court of appeal held that the policy to prevent multiplicity of actions was not available to support the preliminary injunction for two reasons: first, the California action had not been settled or adjudicated because the judgment of dismissal stemmed from plaintiff's attempted withdrawal from the action and, second, even if it had been adjudicated, the judgment pertained to a different cause of action than that involved in the French action. Thus, the court reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court of appeal recognized the rule stated in Bartholomew v. Bartholomew (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 216, 225, 132 P.2d 297 , the facts and procedural background of which are discussed below: "There are two general classes of cases in which injunctions are issued to prevent a multiplicity of actions, namely, those in which many claims which have not been adjudicated are brought into equity to be made the subject of a single trial and decree, ... and those that are enjoined because they are shown to be vexatious suits upon causes of action that have been settled by former adjudication." The court of appeal stated that the case did not fall within the first class and that it did not meet the requisite of the second class that the proceedings in which the injunction issues must have been settled or, in other words, that there has to have been a former adjudication of the issues involved (203 Cal. App. 2d 724, 735) .

Counsel should note that the Verdier case was decided before the passage of legislation eliminating "fault" as a ground for marital dissolution [see former Civ. Code § 4501 et seq. (superseded on and after January 1, 1994, by Fam. Code § 2300 et seq.)]. Nevertheless, the case still serves to illustrate the reasoning process a court will undertake in applying the "mulitiplicity of proceedings" concept.

In Bartholomew v. Bartholomew (1942) 56 Cal. App. 2d 216, 132 P.2d 297 , defendants appealed from a judgment that permanently enjoined them from further prosecuting certain litigation against a minor plaintiff and his guardian as well as from commencing, prosecuting, or suffering to be prosecuted any other actions or proceedings in which it would be asserted that defendants or either of them had any interest in the assets of the plaintiff's estate or in which it would be asserted that any of the proceedings theretofore taken in the matter of the guardianship of the minor or the adoption proceeding were procured by fraud, collusion, conspiracy, or false testimony, or that the same were made or taken by the court without jurisdiction.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. It stated that there are two general classes of cases in which injunctions are issued to prevent a multiplicity of actions, namely those in which many claims that have not been adjudicated are brought into equity to be made the subject of a single trial and decree and those that are enjoined because they are shown to be vexatious suits on causes of action that have been settled by former adjudication. An injunction enjoining a multiplicity of actions cannot stand unless it falls into one of these two classes. The judgment involved did not belong to the first class because of the nature of the relief applied for and that was granted; and it did not belong in the second class because the matters in issue had not been adjudicated between the parties and, thus, the principle of res judicata was not applicable (56 Cal. App. 2d 216, 225) .

[c] Enjoining of Federal Actions Prohibited

In General Atomic Co. v. Felter (1977) 434 U.S. 12, 98 S. Ct. 76, 54 L. Ed 2d 199 , a New Mexico state court issued an injunction restraining litigants from filing and prosecuting actions against each other in federal court.

The U.S. Supreme Court held that state courts do not have the power to prevent litigants from filing and prosecuting pending or prospective actions in the federal courts (434 U.S. 12, 16-19) .

Note that another case arose out of the same litigation and raised similar issues, but involved arbitration questions [see General Atomic Co. v. Felter (1978) 436 U.S. 493, 496, 98 S. Ct. 1939, 56 L. Ed. 2d 480] .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stay of Pending Judicial Proceeding Prohibited

In Wright v. Superior Court (1941) 43 Cal. App. 2d 181, 110 P.2d 529 , the petitioner was general partner in a limited partnership who brought an action in San Francisco to dissolve the partnership and to require the sale and distribution of its assets. All members of the partnership, including another partner (Morrison), answered and joined in the relief sought. The superior court in San Francisco ordered the dissolution of the partnership and the sale of the assets. Morrison attempted to persuade the court to stay its order, but the court refused. He then filed an action in the Calaveras County superior court seeking to enjoin the sale that the San Francisco superior court had ordered and asking that a receiver be appointed. A temporary restraining order and order to show cause were issued by the Calaveras County court, and they were served on petitioners shortly before the time for the sale of the property. An ex parte application was made by petitioners to vacate the temporary restraining order on the ground that the court was without jurisdiction, but the application was refused and the matter set for a hearing on its merits. Petitioners then sought a writ of prohibition from the court of appeal.

The court of appeal granted the writ. It stated that the superior court in San Francisco acquired and had exclusive jurisdiction over the matters involved in the partnership dissolution. It stated that the San Francisco court was qualified to afford all the relief sought, and that no proceeding to enjoin the execution of an order or judgment of one court may be brought in a court of coordinate jurisdiction; any relief must be sought in the court whose order or command is involved. Hence, if Morrison felt aggrieved by the action of the superior court in San Francisco, the court of appeal was the proper forum to consider his complaint (43 Cal. App. 2d 181, 183-184) .

In Associated Plumbing Contractors of Marin etc. Counties, Inc. v. F. W. Spencer & Son, Inc. (1963) 213 Cal. App. 2d 1, 28 Cal. Rptr. 425 , plaintiffs filed an action in the superior court of Marin County by which they sought to enjoin defendant from the further prosecution of an action pending before the superior court of San Mateo County, in which defendant was seeking damages for breach of contract. The superior court of Marin County denied the injunctive relief sought by plaintiffs, and defendant appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It stated that the superior court had correctly denied plaintiff request for an injunction because an injunction will not be granted to stay judicial proceedings already pending (213 Cal. App. 2d 1, 7) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.33

§ 116.33 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Exercise of Public or Private Office [Civ. Code § 3423(f); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED TO PREVENT THE EXERCISE OF A PUBLIC OR PRIVATE OFFICE IN A LAWFUL MANNER BY THE PERSON IN POSSESSION. IN THIS CASE, THE APPLICANT IS SEEKING TO ENJOIN _____ [specify action that is sought to be enjoined, e.g., CERTIFICATION OF AN INITIATIVE FOR THE BALLOT IN THE GENERAL ELECTION], WHICH IS A LAWFUL ACTION TAKEN IN THE EXERCISE OF THE OFFICE OF _____ [state public or private office involved, e.g., SECRETARY OF STATE]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Preventing Exercise of Public or Private Office. An injunction cannot be granted to prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession (Civ. Code § 3423(f); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6); Somo v. Superior Court (1933) 135 Cal. App. 584, 586, 27 P.2d 790 ; Purviance v. Compton (1928) 94 Cal. App. 277, 280, 271 P. 120).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is being sought to prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession [Civ. Code § 3423(f); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6)].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

For related points and authorities that concern execution of of a public statute or ordinance for public benefit [see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4), see also § 116.83].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the conduct that is sought to be enjoined is being (or about to be) performed in the lawful exercise of a public or private office. When the right of the office holder to perform the conduct is clear but the manner of carrying it out is subject to dispute, counsel should explain why the method proposed to perform the conduct is lawful or otherwise proper under the circumstances.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Exercise of Public or Private Office

In Somo v. Superior Court (1933) 135 Cal. App. 584, 27 P.2d 790 , the incumbent president and secretary of a water company faced the prospect of having to surrender their offices and corporate equipment to two other men who were asserting a right to act in those capacities on the basis of a referendum election as well as a meeting of the corporate stockholders. This was to be accomplished by the issuance of a writ of mandate and, incidental thereto, a preliminary injunction. The president and secretary answered the petition for the writ of mandate and the application for injunctive relief by denying every issue of fact. They then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition to prevent the superior court from issuing either a temporary restraining order or preliminary injunction. The court of appeal granted the writ.

The court referred to former Civ. Code § 3423(6) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (6) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(f); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6), respectively). These sections provide that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession. Because many issues of fact as well as questions of law were involved in the proceeding, and the petitioners were currently in possession of the respective offices, the statutes mentioned above were so clearly applicable that they indicated a lack of jurisdiction in the superior court. The court of appeal, therefore, granted a writ of prohibition by which the superior court was prohibited from making or issuing or entering any order by which the petitioners would be restrained or prevented from exercising the duties of their offices (135 Cal. App. 584, 586) .

In Purviance v. Compton (1928) 94 Cal. App. 277, 271 P. 120 , plaintiff was a chiropractor who sought to enjoin defendant members of the State Board of Chiropractic Examiners from trying plaintiff's right to practice chiropractic medicine in California. Defendants' demurrer to the complaint was sustained, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the demurrer. It noted that defendants had been appointed to the board by the governor, had entered into the duties and held indicia of that office, and were actually serving the public as members of the board when plaintiff sought relief by injunction. The court held that they were at least de facto officers and that, therefore, even if they were not qualified as such, the functioning of the office and the officers could not be controlled by an action for an injunction (94 Cal. App. 277, 280) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Exercise of Public or Private Office

In Randolph v. County of Stanislaus (1919) 44 Cal. App. 322, 186 P. 625 , plaintiff taxpayers brought an action to enjoin the Stanislaus County board of supervisors from calling an election for directors of a proposed public utility district and from expending any county monies for that purpose. After trial, the court refused to issue the injunction and entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. Plaintiffs claimed that the district had been illegally formed and that no election of directors should have been held for several reasons. However, the court of appeal noted the principles set forth in former Civ. Code § 3423(4), (6) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d), (f)). The court stated it agreed with defendants' position that the proceeding was one to prevent officers of the law, namely the board of supervisors, from executing a public statute passed for the public benefit. They were simply threatening to perform a duty enjoined on them by law; that was, to call an election of directors of a public utility district, the creation of which had already been declared by the board of supervisors and by the Secretary of State (44 Cal. App. 322, 325-326) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.34

§ 116.34 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injuction Not Issued to Prevent Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation [Civ. Code § 3423(g); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED TO PREVENT A LEGISLATIVE ACT BY A MUNICIPAL CORPORATION. IN THIS CASE, THE ACT SOUGHT TO BE ENJOINED CONSISTS OF _____ [describe act], WHICH IS OF A LEGISLATIVE NATURE AND WITHIN THE PURVUE OF _____ [describe public entity involved, e.g., THE CITY COUNCIL]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Preventing Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation. An injunction cannot be granted to prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation (Civ. Code § 3423(g); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7); Glide v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 21, 24-26, 81 P. 225 ; Agnew v. City of Los Angeles (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 820, 828, 12 Cal. Rptr. 507).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is being sought to prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation [Civ. Code § 3423(g); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7)].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

For related points and authorities concerning execution of a statute or ordinance for public benefit, see § 116.83.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish that the act sought to be enjoined is of a legislative nature and properly within the authority of the municipal corporation involved.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation

In Glide v. Superior Court (1905) 147 Cal. 21, 81 P. 225 , plaintiff had commenced an action to restrain the Yolo County board of supervisors from acting on petitioner Glide's application for the formation of a reclamation district out of a tract of land that belonged to him. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction to that effect, and then petitioner sought a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court to prohibit the superior court from proceeding any further with the trial of the action for the injunction.

The Supreme Court issued the writ. It noted the principle that legislative discretion, whether rightfully or wrongfully exercised, is not subject to interference by the judiciary and stated that this principle is crystallized in former Civ. Code § 3423(7) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(g)). The Court had no doubt but that the jurisdiction over the matters involved was primarily vested with the board of supervisors and that so long as the board was acting within the scope of its jurisdiction, judicial interference with its proceedings was improper and could not be tolerated (147 Cal. 21, 24-26) .

In Agnew v. City of Los Angeles (1961) 190 Cal. App. 2d 820, 12 Cal. Rptr. 507 , plaintiff was a licensed electrical contractor who brought suit to enjoin the enforcement of certain ordinances of defendant city on the ground that they conflicted with general law and were thus unconstitutional. The superior court sustained defendants' demurrer, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal noted the principle of former Civ. Code § 3423(4), (7) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subds (4), (7) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d), (g); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4), (7)), that an injunction will not issue to prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation unless a showing of invalidity is made. Because the court held that the ordinances did not conflict with general laws and that, therefore, they were valid, the demurrer to the complaint was properly sustained (190 Cal. App. 2d 820, 828) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Legislative Act by Municipal Corporation

In Cooke v. Superior Court (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 401, 261 Cal. Rptr. 706 , a trial court denied a preliminary injunction that had been sought to enjoin a county from failing to provide dental care to indigent county residents that complied with the county's statutory duty. In denying a writ of mandate that was sought to compel the county to provide such care (on the ground that the subsequent enactment by the county of a resolution, on its face, provided a level of care sufficient to satisfy the requirements of the statutes), the court of appeal said that in an ordinary case it would simply review the trial court's exercise of discretion in refusing the preliminary injunction. However, here, the county's subsequent resolution had to be considered in determining whether to grant a writ of mandate. The court pointed out that the separation of powers doctrine prohibits judicial interference with legislative action, including the legislative function of a local body, in the absence of fraud, corruption, or action exceeding legislative powers, and ruled that because the county had made a reasonable effort to comply with its statutory duty, the court would not interfere (213 Cal. App. 3d 401, 418) .

In Harbor Center L. Co. v. Richmond (1918) 38 Cal. App. 315, 176 P. 50 , plaintiff brought two actions for an injunction restraining the City of Richmond and its officers from removing the municipal offices from a certain building situated on lands that the plaintiff claimed were donated to the city by it for use as a city hall, as well as from entering into a contract for the erection of a city hall. Judgment was entered for defendant, and the court of appeal affirmed. It stated that the injunction was properly refused by the superior court because under former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (7) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7)) an injunction cannot be granted to prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation that is within the scope of its powers. Moreover, no act could be more clearly within the scope of the powers of defendant than the selection of a location for its city hall (38 Cal. App. 315, 317) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.35

§ 116.35 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Absence of Factual Showing of Grounds on Which Preliminary Injunction May Be Granted [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE APPLICANT HAS FAILED TO MAKE ANY VERIFIED FACTUAL SHOWING OF ANY GROUNDS ON WHICH IT MAY BE GRANTED. IN THIS CASE, THE APPLICANT HAS _____ [summarize assertion of applicant], BUT HAS FAILED TO SET FORTH FACTS THAT ESTABLISH A RIGHT TO INJUNCTIVE RELIEF. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Absence of Grounds for Preliminary Injunction. A preliminary injunction may be granted at any time before judgment if the verified complaint or affidavits show satisfactorily that sufficient grounds exist therefor (Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)). If an applicant for a preliminary injunction fails to make such a verified factual showing that grounds for the granting of such relief exist, a court is not authorized to issue a preliminary injunction (Levy v. City of Santa Monica (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1262, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507 ; San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 438, 441-444, 216 Cal. Rptr. 462 ; Harlan v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 902, 904-905, 211 P.2d 942).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when the applicant has failed to make any verified factual showing that sufficient grounds exist for it as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a).

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that demonstrate how the applicant's moving papers fail to establish any grounds for relief. This might be done, for example, by showing that the applicant has simply made a claim without setting forth a factual basis for that claim, or that the nature of the claim is such that, even if supported by facts, it does not constitute a recognized basis for injunctive relief.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Absence of Grounds for Preliminary Injunction

In Levy v. City of Santa Monica (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507 , the plaintiffs were homeowners who built a large playhouse in their backyard. The plaintiffs' neighbor complained to the defendant City of Santa Monica about the playhouse. After the Levy's modified the playhouse to meet city requirements, the neighbor again complained to the City's building and safety department. She also complained to defendant Ken Genser, her city council representative, who was also the mayor. In response, Genser sent an e-mail to the City's director of planning and community development, that said, "[C]ould you look into this? Is this structure being built without permits? And could it be built with a permit? Please feel free to contact [the neighbor] directly."

A section of the city charter stated that "Except for the purpose of inquiry, the City Council and its members shall deal with the administrative service under the City Manager solely through the City Manager and neither the City Council nor any member shall give orders to any subordinates of the City Manager, either publicly or privately." In light of this, the plaintiffs filed a complaint for injunctive relief against the City and Genser. They sought a permanent injunction precluding city council members from engaging in acts designed to influence City administrative staff through direct communication regarding zoning enforcement matters. The City filed a motion to strike the lawsuit under "SLAPP" (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16). The trial court held in favor of the plaintiffs and granted the injunction. The City appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that the plaintiffs did not meet their evidentiary burden for injunctive and declaratory relief. Their complaint alleged an ongoing "pattern of intervention" by council members in "City staff's performance." However, the court held, the plaintiffs made these general allegations on information and belief and did not produce admissible evidence to support them. Their declarations were insufficient because they relied on conclusory statements, hearsay, and speculation (114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1262) .

In San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co. v. Superior Court (1985) 170 Cal. App. 3d 438, 216 Cal. Rptr. 462 , a trial court issued an injunction pendente lite restraining defendant newspaper publisher from terminating the dealership of a deceased dealer. The plaintiff, widow of the deceased dealer, had sought a declaration that the agreement between the deceased and SFNA survived his death and that she be substituted as dealer. She also charged that the agreement was a restraint of trade and an unfair business practice.

The court of appeal, on petition from defendant, ordered the trial court to dissolve the injunction. The court reasoned that there was no evidence as to decedent's expectation, if any, that the contract survive him. The contract had an unambiguous nonassignability clause and required decedent to find a temporary replacement acceptable to defendant if ever he was unable to perform his obligations under the contract (170 Cal. App. 3d 438, 443-444) . The allegations of the complaint that supported an inference that the nonassignability clause was unenforceable as adhesive were made on information and belief, and as such, were inadequate as a matter of law. Further, because the widow was not a party to the contract, her declaration regarding her expectation that she would succeed her husband as dealer was irrelevant (170 Cal. App. 3d 438, 441-442) .

In Harlan v. Superior Court (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 902, 211 P.2d 942 , plaintiff sought an order to require her husband to show cause why he should not be required to pay support and be restrained from molesting or interfering with plaintiff or the minor child of the parties. An order to show cause was issued to that effect. The husband filed an affidavit in which he alleged that he desired that his wife be restrained from doing certain things, but there was no showing by answer, cross complaint, or affidavit that his wife had committed or threatened to commit all or any of the acts that the husband wished to restrain. No order to show cause was issued and no notice was given the wife with respect to any application for an injunction. Nevertheless, the superior court issued a preliminary injunction that enjoined both parties from doing the things the husband had requested. In addition, plaintiff was ordered to return all of her husband's personal effects and business records to him. Plaintiff was subsequently held in contempt for violating the preliminary injunction, and she petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from her conviction of contempt. The court of appeal granted the writ.

The court stated that the adjudication was void because the superior court was not authorized to issue the preliminary injunction and because no facts were found that would constitute willful violation of a court order. With respect to the first reason, it stated that the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527 were not complied with because the record disclosed a complete absence of any factual showing by pleading or affidavit on which the court could have based a finding of existence or nonexistence of grounds for granting the preliminary injunction. Moreover, because there was no verified showing, which is indispensable to the exercise of injunctive power, the procedural prerequisites of Code Civ. Proc. § 527 were not met. Therefore, it had no jurisdiction to render an order, on the basis of the alleged violation of which the petitioner was adjudged guilty of contempt. And because disobedience of a void order does not constitute contempt, the court of appeal issued the writ of prohibition (94 Cal. App. 2d 902, 904-905) .

Counsel should note that the grounds for issuing restraining orders involving personal conduct and the disposition of property in the context of domestic relations proceedings are presently governed by the Family Code. However, the underlying reasoning of the Harlan case with respect to the need for a factual basis for issuing a preliminary injunction, appears to remain viable.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.36

§ 116.36 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Completed Acts

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN THE COMMISSION OF COMPLETED ACTS. IN THIS CASE, THE _____ [specify party applying for injunction, e.g., PLAINTIFF] HAS SOUGHT TO ENJOIN _____ [specify subject of injunctive relief sought],AN EVENT THAT PREVIOUSLY OCCURRED AND IS NOT LIKELY TO RECUR. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Completed Acts. A preliminary injunction may not be granted to restrain the commission of acts that have already been completed (Gold v. Los Angeles Democratic League (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 365, 372-373, 122 Cal. Rptr. 732 ; McManus v. KPAL Broadcasting Corp. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 558, 563-564, 6 Cal. Rptr. 441).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when the applicant is attempting to enjoin acts that have already been completed. They specifically oppose the contentions made in § 116.28.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should establish that the event or action that the opposing party is seeking to enjoin has already occurred, and that it is not probable it will recur [cf. § 116.28].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Completed Acts

In Gold v. Los Angeles Democratic League (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 365, 122 Cal. Rptr. 732 , a trial court sustained a demurrer to a complaint, without leave to amend, brought by an unsuccessful candidate for the office of Los Angeles City Controller. One of the counts in the complaint alleged an Elections Code violation. The section allegedly violated provided that no candidate or committee, in his or her behalf, may misrepresent that the candidate has the support of a county or state central committee of a party with which he or she is not affiliated. That section also provided that any member of a county or state central committee may commence an action to enjoin the acts prohibited by the statute.

The court of appeal affirmed the demurrer with regard to that count. It reasoned that an injunction lies only to prevent threatened injury and has no application to wrongs that have been completed. Therefore, because the complaint showed on its face that the acts sought to be enjoined were committed by defendants in connection with a municipal election that took place a year before the present action was commenced, and plaintiff did not allege that defendants threatened to repeat such acts, there was no basis on which the superior court could have granted any injunctive relief (49 Cal. App. 3d 365, 372-373) .

In McManus v. KPAL Broadcasting Corp. (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 558, 6 Cal. Rptr. 441 , plaintiff land owners sought to permanently enjoin defendant from constructing or proceeding with construction of a radio transmitting tower on land that adjoined theirs. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction to that effect, and defendant moved to vacate the order granting it. The superior court denied that motion, and defendant appealed from the order issuing the preliminary injunction and the order denying its motion to vacate. One of the grounds on which defendant appealed was the assertion that a preliminary injunction will not lie to prevent a completed act and, therefore, such relief should not be granted in this case because the tower had been erected before any order was issued.

The court of appeal agreed with defendant and reversed the orders. It stated that, as a general rule, an injunction lies to prevent threatened injuries and has no application to completed wrongs for the redress of which the plaintiff is relegated to an action at law. Obviously, a completed wrong cannot be corrected by a preliminary injunction, the purpose of which is to preserve the status quo until after final judgment. Because it affirmatively appeared that the construction of the tower was completed before any order of restraint was served, the orders were reversed (182 Cal. App. 2d 558, 563-564) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Completed Acts

In Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 , an employer petitioned for an injunction to prohibit defendant from harassing its employees under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8. At the temporary restraining order (TRO) hearing, defendant appeared ex parte and obtained an order vacating the TRO pending the order to show cause hearing. The court conditioned the order on defendant's representation that defendant would stay away from the employer's facilities pending the hearing. At the conclusion of the evidentiary hearing, the court imposed a three year permanent injunction barring defendant from contacting any of the employer's employees or coming within 500 yards of its facility or institution unless defendant had a medical emergency and was taken to the employer's facility. Defendant appealed (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 327-331) . The court of appeal, in holding that the injunction was improperly issued, noted that injunctive relief lies only to prevent threatened injury and has no application to completed wrongs. It should neither serve as punishment for past acts, nor be exercised in the absence of any evidence establishing the reasonable probability the acts will be repeated in the future. Indeed, a change of circumstances at the time of the hearing, rendering injunctive relief moot or unnecessary, justifies denial of the request. Moreover, not only can injunctive relief be denied when the defendant has voluntarily discontinued the wrongful conduct, there exists no equitable reason for ordering it when the defendant has in good faith discontinued the proscribed conduct. Thus, to authorize the issuance of an injunction, it must appear with reasonable certainty that the wrongful acts will be continued or repeated (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 332-333) .

In Griffith v. Dept. of Public Works (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 848, 345 P.2d 469 , plaintiff brought an action to enjoin defendants from constructing a freeway through a park in Los Angeles in which he asserted a contingent remainder interest. The superior court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment. It stated that it appeared that the state had already taken possession of all of the subject property and had duly completed or partially completed on it the freeway in question. Thus, an injunction against erecting the freeway would then be useless. Defendant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. It noted the principle that an injunction will not generally be issued to prohibit a completed act. Hence, it followed that the superior court was correct in its determination that an injunction against erecting the freeway involved should not have been issued at that time (52 Cal. 2d 848, 854) .

In Blackmore Investment Co. v. Johnson (1931) 213 Cal. 148, 1 P.2d 978 , plaintiff corporation purchased some real property from defendants. A portion was paid in cash and the balance was assumed in the form of a promissory note executed by the president and secretary of the corporation and was secured by a deed of trust on the property that was also executed by those two officers. Plaintiff defaulted, and when the trustee noticed the property for sale, plaintiff commenced an action to enjoin the sale on the ground that the officers had not been duly authorized to execute the deed of trust in question. No preliminary injunction was obtained, and the sale took place on the date fixed, more than one year before the action came to trial. After trial, the superior court entered judgment for defendants. They appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. It noted that it is elementary that an injunction cannot be granted to stay an act that has already been committed (213 Cal. 148, 150-151) .

In Flood v. Goldstein Co. (1910) 158 Cal. 247, 110 P. 916 , plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction that enjoined defendants from wrecking and removing a building as well as from removing plaintiff's implements and furniture from the building. Defendant moved to have the preliminary injunction dissolved, and the superior court granted the motion. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed the order. It observed that the building had been completely dismantled, the roof was gone, the doors, windows, and floors removed, and access to it was rendered dangerous by the excavation. Thus, the principle that rights already lost and wrongs already perpetrated cannot be corrected by injunction applied. The party so aggrieved must seek some other remedy (158 Cal. 247, 251-252) .

In Gardner v. Stroever (1889) 81 Cal. 148, 22 P. 483 , defendant had constructed a building across a road that obstructed plaintiff's access to his place of business. Plaintiff brought an action to restrain defendant from obstructing a road by erecting a building over it. Plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction that commanded that defendant and his agents desist and refrain from obstructing or interfering with the road. Defendant moved to dissolve the injunction, but the superior court denied the motion. The Supreme Court held that the motion should have been granted for two reasons. First, the preliminary injunction was mandatory and, therefore, required a very strong and urgent case in order to justify its issuance. Such a case was not present in the instant situation. Second, a preliminary injunction must not be retained when the acts, the performance of which is sought to be restrained, have been performed before the order for the injunction is made or served (81 Cal. 148, 151) .

In Engle v. City of Oroville (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 266, 47 Cal. Rptr. 630 , plaintiff obtained a judgment that permanently enjoined defendant city from discharging sewage effluent from its sewage plant into the Feather River and awarded damages to plaintiffs. The court of appeal reversed the judgment. It stated that the question involved concerning the injunctive portion of the judgment was that when, during the course of litigation, and before final judgment, the conditions on a previously issued injunction no longer exist and cannot recur, should the injunction be dissolved? The court answered that question affirmatively. It noted that an injunction will not be granted when, at the time of the hearing, conditions have so changed that no unlawful act is threatened. Moreover, injunctive power is not wielded as punishment for past acts. It will be exercised only when there is evidence that the acts enjoined will probably recur (238 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270) .

In People v. Paramount Citrus Asso. (1957) 147 Cal. App. 2d 399 , the attorney general brought an action to enjoin the violation of lemon marketing orders by defendant. The superior court granted plaintiff a judgment that granted both mandatory and preventive relief. The defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed that portion of the judgment granting mandatory injunctive relief but affirmed that portion of the judgment that granted preventive relief. It stated that an injunction lies only to prevent injury and has no application to wrongs that have been completed. Further, it observed that while a court of equity has power to issue a mandatory injunction when the wrong is continuing in character and can only be remedied by requiring affirmative action on the part of the wrongdoer (such as nuisances, continuing trespasses, and encroachments on easements), in this situation the wrongs that the court sought to correct were not continuing ones but completed ones. Because the prohibitory provisions of the injunction adequately prohibited defendant from a repetition of those wrongs, it was error to grant the mandatory portion of the judgment (147 Cal. App. 2d 399, 411-413) .

In Anderson v. Fay Improvement Co. (1955) 134 Cal. App. 2d 738, 286 P.2d 513 , plaintiffs brought an action against defendants for an injunction to compel the removal of a public street and for damages. The superior court granted a judgment to that effect, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed the portion of the judgment that granted injunctive relief to plaintiffs. It stated that it was quite clear that the injunctive provisions of the judgment were erroneous because they purported to compel the contractors and subdividers to remove a completed and accepted public street that had been built according to government-approved plans and specifications. This, the court held, could not be done legally (134 Cal. App. 2d 738, 743-744) .

In Allen v. Hotel & Restaurant etc. Alliance (1950) 97 Cal. App. 2d 343, 217 P.2d 699 , plaintiffs were expelled from defendant unions. Two months later, they brought an action to compel defendants to restore them to membership because they contended that they had been expelled from the union without due process. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction to compel defendants to advise plaintiffs' last employers that they could employ plaintiffs as well as to suspend the expulsion orders. The injunction also prohibited defendants from interfering with plaintiffs' employment or jobs. The court of appeal affirmed this latter prohibitory portion of the order granting the injunction but reversed the mandatory portions. It noted the principle that an injunction cannot be granted to stay an act already committed and has no application to wrongs that have been completed. Here, when the defendants had sent notices of expulsion to plaintiffs before the action was commenced, and there was no evidence that more notices would be sent to other union members, the acts complained of had been completed and the mandatory portions of the injunction could not be sustained (97 Cal. App. 2d 343, 348-349) .

In Thome v. Honcut Dredging Co. (1941) 43 Cal. App. 2d 737, 111 P.2d 368 , plaintiffs brought an action to enjoin defendants from polluting the water of a creek and its upper tributary streams by depositing therein mining debris. They recovered such a judgment against some of the defendants, but the superior court rejected that relief against three of the defendants on the ground that they had ceased mining operations and had not subsequently threatened to resume those enterprises. Plaintiffs appealed from that portion of the judgment denying injunctive relief against those three defendants, but the court of appeal affirmed. The court noted the principle that an injunction should issue for wrongful acts that have been completely performed when it appears that they are likely to be repeated or continued. When the act complained of has been fully performed, the injured party is ordinarily compelled to seek redress in a suit for damages. In order to authorize the issuing of an injunction, it should appear with reasonable certainty that the wrongful acts will be continued or repeated. If there is no showing that such action is being continued or repeated, or that defendant is threatening or intending to repeat the injury, the injunction should be denied. Because the three defendants in this situation had not conducted their mining enterprises for several months and there was no evidence to indicate they intended to continue to pollute the stream in the manner alleged, the superior court was warranted in refusing to apply the injunction against them (43 Cal. App. 2d 737, 740) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.37

§ 116.37 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Preliminary Injunction Not Issued If Plaintiff Has Not Shown Either Existing or Threatened Irreparable Injury

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN PLAINTIFF HAS FAILED TO DEMONSTRATE EITHER EXISTING OR THREATENED IRREPARABLE INJURY. IN THIS CASE, PLAINTIFF HAS ALLEGED ONLY THAT _____ [summarize moving party's alleged harm], WHICH, EVEN IF TRUE, DOES NOT CONSTITUTE AN EXISTING OR THREATENED IRREPARABLE INJURY. PLAINTIFF'S REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD THEREFORE BE DENIED.

A. No Irreparable Injury. A preliminary injunction cannot be granted when plaintiff has not shown that either existing or threatened irreparable injury will result from defendants' conduct (Tahoe Keys Property Owners' Ass'n v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1459, 1472 ; Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 138, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 ; 7978 Corporation v. Pitchess (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 46, 115 Cal. Rptr. 746).

[Optional] B. Taxpayer Must Demonstrate Actual or Threatened Harm. A court may not find that the "balance of interim harm" is in favor of a taxpayer suing in a representative capacity under Code of Civil Procedure Section 526a when the taxpayer claims no further actual or threatened harm to himself or herself and fails to show that other persons in the community at large feel imminently threatened by defendant's conduct (Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 447, 453-455, 225 Cal. Rptr. 114 ; see Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 277, 286-290, 219 Cal. Rptr. 467, 707 P.2d 840).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when plaintiff has not shown that either existing or threatened irreparable injury will result from defendant's conduct. Specifically, they may be presented in opposition to the contentions set forth in § 116.21.

Note that when defendant is attacking a complaint seeking a permanent injunction that fails to state a cause of action because it does not appear from the complaint that defendant's conduct will cause plaintiff any irreparable injury, § 116.54 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint that fails to state a cause of action because plaintiff has alleged only general conclusions and not specific facts regarding the irreparable injury to be suffered, § 116.55 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts demonstrating that the harm alleged by the plaintiff, even if true (a matter counsel may not otherwise want to concede), does not amount to an irreparable injury, either presently or prospectively.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

In Tahoe Keys Property Owners' Ass'n v. State Water Resources Control Bd. (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1459 , a property owners' association brought an action against state agencies seeking various forms of relief for allegedly unlawful mitigation fees charged as a condition of obtaining building permits. The trial court denied the association's request for a preliminary injunction which would have prevented the continued collection of mitigation fees and prevented expenditures from the fund created by collection of the mitigation fees. The court of appeal affirmed the denial of the preliminary injunction. In concluding that there was little risk of irreparable injury to the owners' association, the court of appeal pointed out that "if the plaintiff may be fully compensated by the payment of damages in the event he prevails, then preliminary injunctive relief should be denied." The court noted that continued collection of the mitigation fees did not preclude property owners from utilizing their property and that in the event the owners' association prevailed legal damages would be easily ascertainable (23 Cal. App. 4th 1459, 1472) .

In Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 , a trial court granted a preliminary injunction prohibiting the State of California and others from contacting all present and certain former employees of plaintiff in connection with civil and criminal proceedings defendants were prosecuting against the plaintiff for alleged unlawful disposal of hazardous wastes.

In reversing the order granting the injunction, the court of appeal said that before a trial court can exercise its discretion to grant a preliminary injunction, the applicant must make a prima facie showing of entitlement to injunctive relief. The applicant must demonstrate a real threat of immediate and irreparable injury due to the inadequacy of legal remedies. It noted that the existence of other effective judicial remedies may compel denial of injunctive relief (213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 138) .

In 7978 Corporation v. Pitchess (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 115 Cal. Rptr. 746 , plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction that restrained the sheriff of Los Angeles County from enforcing certain sections of a county licensing ordinance involving public dancing and live public entertainment. Defendant sheriff appealed, contending that a preliminary injunction was not an appropriate remedy in this situation.

The court of appeal agreed with defendant and reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It pointed out that to qualify for preliminary injunctive relief, a plaintiff must show either existing or threatened irreparable injury. In this case, plaintiffs had failed to show any pressing injury that would result from delay in obtaining relief. Rather, they had merely asserted their desire to engage in the business of conducting dancing and presenting entertainment during hours prohibited under the licensing ordinance. Hence, there was no showing of any irreparable injury and the order granting the relief was reversed (41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 46) .

For forms of contentions related specifically to the enforcement of statutes [see §§ 116.83 -116.84].

[b] Taxpayer Must Demonstrate Actual or Threatened Harm

In Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 447, 225 Cal. Rptr. 114 , a taxpayer and an attorney filed a taxpayers' action under Code Civ. Proc. § 526a, seeking a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of a San Francisco city ordinance requiring escort services and their employees to obtain permits from the city to operate.

On appeal of the decision in favor of defendants, plaintiffs contended that the policy requiring liberal construction of Code Civ. Proc. § 526a to achieve its purpose of allowing taxpayers to challenge illegal government activity without a showing of special damage to the particular taxpayer, requires that the court conclusively presume irreparable injury and a balance of interim harm in their favor. All that is required to trigger the presumption, plaintiffs claimed, is a bare showing that public funds are about to be expended in an unconstitutional or otherwise illegal manner.

Rejecting this contention, the court of appeal pointed out that this proposed standard would automatically equate illegal spending with a right to preliminary injunctive relief. Citing Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 277, 219 Cal. Rptr. 467, 707 P.2d 840 (discussed below), the appellate court noted that the Supreme Court requires a court to consider interim harm as a related but distinct question from the underlying merits of the challenge. Accordingly, the proposed rule would leave only the consideration of illegality, and the balance of harms would automatically follow in every case. In addition, treating the balance of interim harms as a conclusive presumption leaves no room for a true balancing, thereby requiring a court to issue a preliminary injunction in every case in which some illegality appeared no matter how strong the countervailing showing of harm. The court concluded that in the case at bench, plaintiffs could not prevail under the balance of interim harm test by virtue of their taxpayers' status alone. Moreover, they were not otherwise entitled to interim relief, because they had neither claimed further actual or threatened harm to themselves nor shown that persons in the community at large felt imminently threatened by defendant's conduct (178 Cal. App. 3d 447, 454-455) .

In Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 277, 219 Cal. Rptr. 467, 707 P.2d 840 , the Supreme Court addressed the issue of whether a local ordinance was preempted by state law. It then retransferred the case to the court of appeal for an opinion on whether the trial court abused its discretion in implicitly finding for the city on the "interim harm" and "likelihood of prevailing on the merits" factors. The court of appeal in the earlier opinion had failed to employ an abuse-of-discretion analysis.

In its analysis, the Supreme Court stated that when a trial court denies an application for a preliminary injunction, it implicitly determines that plaintiffs have failed to satisfy either or both of the factors. On appeal, the question becomes whether the trial court has abused its discretion in ruling on both factors. On retransfer, the Court explained, if it is determined that the trial court abused its discretion on the "interim harm" factor, the only remaining question will be whether the court abused its discretion on the "likelihood of prevailing on the merits" factor. The Court concluded that, because appellant's claim constituted a facial attack on the ordinance and presented only questions of law, the court of appeal on retransfer could then determine the constitutionality of the ordinance as though the case had proceeded to trial (40 Cal. 3d 277, 286-290) . The court of appeal opinion above resulted after the retransfer.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

In Lezama v. Justice Court (1987) 190 Cal. App. 3d 15, 235 Cal. Rptr. 238 , the court of appeal upheld a trial court ruling denying injunctive or declaratory relief against a justice court. The justice court had assessed attorney's fees against indigent defendants for the costs of appointed legal counsel but had given no notice of hearing and had not advised defendants of their right to contest the fees as required by state and federal statutes. Defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate to have the fee assessments set aside, for a declaration that the justice court had violated the statutes involved, for an injunction against further violations of the statutes, and for an award of attorney's fees. The superior court sustained a demurrer to the writ petition and after trial set aside the assessment of fees, but denied the injunctive and declaratory relief, and denied attorney's fees. The court of appeal held that because the county had deferred collection of the fees, there was no showing of irreparable harm as required for injunctive relief. Additionally, appellants had an adequate remedy at law in that they could have appealed or moved to vacate or set aside the judgments (190 Cal. App. 3d 15, 21) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.38

§ 116.38 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff's Laches

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN PLAINTIFF HAS BEEN GUILTY OF LACHES. IN THIS CASE, THE ALLEGED CONDUCT CONCERNING WHICH PLAINTIFF COMPLAINS OCCURRED, IF AT ALL, _____ [state date or other time reference], AND PLAINTIFF DID NOT COMMENCE THIS ACTION UNTIL _____ [state time differential]. IN THE INTERIM, _____ [specify interim events that now make plaintiff's action unreasonable], WHICH MAKES PLAINTIFF'S ACTION UNREASONABLE. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Plaintiff's Laches. An injunction cannot be granted when plaintiff has been guilty of laches prior to initiating an action against defendant (Holt v. County of Monterey (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 797, 801, 180 Cal. Rptr. 514 ; Vesper v. Forest Lawn Cemetery Asso. (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165-166 ; Los Angeles Athletic Club v. Long Beach (1932) 128 Cal. App. 427, 433, 17 P.2d 1061).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by plaintiff's laches in bringing the action. In an appropriate case, the contentions set forth in § 116.36 may be combined with those set forth in this form.

In addition, these points and authorities may, with appropriate modifications, be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish why the plaintiff's delay in seeking relief is unreasonable under the circumstances.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction, and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Laches

In Holt v. County of Monterey (1982) 128 Cal. App. 3d 797, 180 Cal. Rptr. 514 , plaintiff brought an action for mandamus and injunctive relief to compel a county to set aside its decision approving a specific plan for development of a subdivision and granting of a use permit for the first phase of construction. The trial court denied relief, upholding several affirmative defenses raised by the county, including laches.

The court of appeal affirmed, stating that the issue of laches was dispositive. Plaintiff knew of the proposed project and its approval by the county for over 2 1/2 years prior to filing suit, and during that time the developers expended over $4 million in development costs in reliance on the county's earlier approval of the plan. The court found that plaintiff's delay in filing suit was unreasonable and that the developers substantially and justifiably relied to their detriment on the adoption of the specific plan. Therefore, because the unjustified delay caused injury to another, the defense of laches was properly sustained, even though plaintiff's suit was brought within the statutory time limits (128 Cal. App. 3d 797, 800-801) .

In Vesper v. Forest Lawn Cemetery Asso. (1937) 20 Cal. App. 2d 157 , plaintiff brought an action for an injunction to prevent defendants from engaging in the undertaking business in a particular building. Defendants demurred to the complaint, and the superior court sustained the demurrer, denied plaintiff's motion to reconsider and for permission to file an amended complaint, and then entered a judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed on two grounds. First, it stated that the complaint indicated on its face that plaintiff had not sustained any injury. Second, it noted that the superior court had the right to consider the laches of plaintiff in passing on the request for the injunction. Plaintiff had not commenced his action against defendants until nearly two years after the lease was entered into, under which the lessor agreed to build a structure to be used exclusively as a mortuary, and more than a year after the business of the funeral parlor was instituted. Plaintiffs had stood by while defendants had constructed and occupied a large building to carry on the business of a funeral parlor and for a considerable period of time had made no complaint while the business was being operated. Therefore, plaintiff could not, after having passively permitted defendants to spend money and effort, then enjoin defendants from carrying on their business. The court also noted that something more was present in this case than mere delay on plaintiff's part; defendants had expended large sums of money in equipping the building as well as carrying on long and expensive litigation concerning the mortuary (20 Cal. App. 2d 157, 165-166) .

In Los Angeles Athletic Club v. Long Beach (1932) 128 Cal. App. 427, 17 P.2d 1061 , plaintiff maintained a club building on oceanfront property that was adjacent to a lot owned by defendant city on which the city had constructed a crescent-shaped breakwater and, within this breakwater, a fill on which it was planning to construct a municipal auditorium. Plaintiff brought an action in which it sought to compel the city to abate and remove the breakwater and the fill or, in the alternative, erect some type of work to adequately protect plaintiff's property. Defendant's demurrer to the first amended complaint was sustained by the superior court, which then entered a judgment of dismissal. Plaintiff appealed from this dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court observed that the breakwater was constructed more than six months prior to the filing of the complaint. The complaint indicated that plaintiff had stood by and done nothing during the entire course of construction as well as during the more than six months after the breakwater was completed. Hence, because plaintiff had failed to plead facts legally excusing this inaction, plaintiff's laches and conduct amounted to an estoppel that appeared on the face of the complaint. Thus, the judgment of dismissal was affirmed (128 Cal. App. 427, 433) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.39

§ 116.39 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff's Unclean Hands

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN PLAINTIFF IS BARRED BY THE DOCTRINE OF UNCLEAN HANDS. IN THIS CASE, PLAINTIFF _____ [describe conduct amounting to unclean hands], WHICH BRINGS PLAINTIFF'S CONDUCT WITHIN THE UNCLEAN HANDS DOCTRINE. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Plaintiff's Unclean Hands. A party seeking the interposition of a court of equity must come into court with clean hands. When plaintiff's conduct shows that he or she has unclean hands, a preliminary injunction will be denied (London v. Marco (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 450, 453, 229 P.2d 401).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by plaintiff's unclean hands.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish unclean hands on the part of the plaintiff, including any facts that show that defendant was prejudiced by plaintiff's actions.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Unclean Hands

In London v. Marco (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 450, 229 P.2d 401 , defendants had sold a single-family dwelling to plaintiffs. Because of plaintiffs' failure to pay one of the installments of the promissory note that secured the deed of trust on the property, defendants published a notice of trustee's sale. Shortly before the date fixed for the sale, plaintiffs filed an action to restrain the sale in the Los Angeles branch of the Los Angeles County superior court. Plaintiffs also sought a preliminary injunction to that effect. At the hearing on the order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not issue, plaintiffs' counsel stated that all property taxes, including those due the preceding April, had been paid. The court issued an order granting a preliminary injunction that enjoined the sale of the property and directed that plaintiffs make all payments of taxes assessed or payable against the property when the same were required and due. Several weeks after the issuance of the preliminary injunction, defendants ascertained that the taxes had not been paid and that an income tax lien had been filed against the property. Defendants then moved to dissolve the preliminary injunction on the ground that plaintiffs had misrepresented essential facts to the court with reference to the taxes. That motion was granted on the ground that plaintiffs had perpetrated a fraud on the court. Thereafter, another notice of sale was published by the trustee. This time, plaintiffs filed a dismissal of the Los Angeles action and simultaneously filed another nearly identical action in the Santa Monica branch of the Los Angeles County superior court. They did not, however, disclose the facts that the former action had been heard in the Los Angeles branch and that the preliminary injunction had been dissolved because of the fraud perpetrated on the court. On defendants' motion, the Santa Monica action was transferred for hearing before the court in Los Angeles. There, plaintiffs' application for a preliminary injunction was denied. Plaintiffs appealed from that order denying a preliminary injunction to restrain the foreclosure sale under the deed of trust.

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying the preliminary injunction. It noted the familiar rule that one who seeks the interposition of a court of equity must come into court with clean hands. It further noted that plaintiffs' hands were more than slightly soiled (1) by the false statements made in the first action concerning the payment of taxes, and (2) by the dismissal of the first action and the filing of the second in a branch court in the same jurisdiction without disclosing that the former action had been dismissed and that the first court had dissolved the preliminary injunction by reason of the false statements. Given this record, the court of appeal could not say that the superior court had abused its discretion in denying a preliminary injunction for plaintiffs (103 Cal. App. 2d 450, 453) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.40

§ 116.40 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--No Cause of Action Stated

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT PROPERLY BE ISSUED WHEN THE COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION. IN THIS CASE, THE COMPLAINT ALLEGES ONLY THAT _____ [summarize allegations of complaint], WHICH, EVEN IF TRUE, IS INSUFFICIENT TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION. THEREFORE, THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Failure to State Cause of Action Prohibits Issuance of Preliminary Injunction. A preliminary injunction is not warranted if there is not on file a complaint that states facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for injunctive relief of the character embraced in the preliminary injunction (Moreno Mut. Irr. Co. v. Beaumont Irr. Dist. (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 766, 778, 211 P.2d 928).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in response to a temporary restraining order and order to show cause why a preliminary injunction should not be granted or in opposition to a motion for preliminary injunction. Additional points and authorities should be added showing that the specific facts alleged fail to constitute a cause of action. For the essential elements of a cause of action for injunctive relief [see § 116.52; see also §§ 116.53 -116.55].

If the defendant is opposing the preliminary injunction on the ground that the complaint contains no factual showing of irreparable injury, § 116.37 should be used. If the opposition is grounded on the objection that the complaint shows on its face that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law for damages, § 116.41 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that even if the allegations of the complaint are true (for the sake of argument only), they fail to state a cause of action on the basis of which injunctive relief can be granted.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to State Cause of Action Prohibits Issuance of Preliminary Injunction

In Moreno Mut. Irr. Co. v. Beaumont Irr. Dist. (1949) 94 Cal. App. 2d 766, 211 P.2d 928 , plaintiff brought an action to quiet title to alleged water rights and to set aside a prior stipulated judgment between plaintiff and the defendants. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that prohibited defendants from enforcing portions of the stipulated judgment. Defendants appealed. They contended that the prior judgment controlled the entire situation and that, therefore, no cause of action had been stated in the complaint that would have permitted the court to issue the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal agreed with this contention. It observed that a preliminary injunction is warranted only if there is on file a complaint that states a sufficient cause of action for injunctive relief of the character embraced in the preliminary injunction. Because the prior judgment was not void on its face, there could be no collateral attack on its validity. Hence, the order granting the preliminary injunction prevented the enforcement of the stipulated judgment and was not authorized. Thus, the order had to be reversed (94 Cal. App. 2d 766, 778) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.41

§ 116.41 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Damages

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE LEGAL REMEDY OF DAMAGES IS AVAILABLE TO PLAINTIFF. IN THIS CASE, INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE EVEN IF THE ALLEGATIONS OF PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT ARE TRUE, THE REMEDY OF DAMAGES IS ADEQUATE TO FULLY COMPENSATE PLAINTIFF, GIVEN THE TYPE OF INJURY ALLEGED, NAMELY _____ [describe plaintiff's purported injury].

Damages as Adequate Legal Remedy. An injunction cannot be granted when damages would afford an adequate legal remedy to plaintiff (Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 410, 414, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240 ; Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 306-307, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; Pellissier v. Whittier Water Co. (1922) 59 Cal. App. 1, 6-7, 209 P. 593).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by the fact that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, namely, monetary damages. In particular, they may be submitted in opposition to the contentions made in § 116.23.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that, even if plaintiff's allegations are true (for the sake of argument), the remedy of damages is clearly adequate in view of the type of injury alleged.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Damages as Adequate Legal Remedy

The facts and procedural background of Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240 , are discussed in § 116.23[4][a]. In that case, plaintiff sought, in part, an injunction to require a hospital to provide rape victims with information and access to estrogen pregnancy prophylaxis, including the "morning after" pill.

Acting on plaintiff's appeal, the appellate court affirmed the judgment for defendant, and stated the following general principles with respect to obtaining injunctive relief. The elements of a cause of action for injunctive relief are a tort or other wrongful act constituting a cause of action, and irreparable injury, that is, a factual showing that the wrongful act constitutes an actual or threatened injury to property or personal rights that cannot be compensated by an ordinary damages award (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 410) . In this case, the court concluded that plaintiff could have filed an action for damages under the circumstances (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 414) .

In Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 , plaintiff automobile dealer brought an action for specific performance of a dealership contract and for damages. Plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction against defendant corporation that enjoined defendant from terminating the dealership agreement existing between the two parties. Defendant appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction.

One of its three contentions with which the court of appeal agreed was that plaintiff had an adequate remedy at law for damages and that, consequently, an injunction, the effect of which was to decree specific performance, should not have been issued. The court of appeal thus reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court stated that specific performance of a contract will not be compelled when an adequate remedy exists at law; it also stated that if monetary damages afford adequate relief and are not extremely difficult to ascertain, an injunction cannot be granted. It noted that, generally, when damages afford an adequate remedy by way of compensation for breach of a contract, equitable relief will be denied. It observed, moreover, that an automobile dealer's remedy at law for damages for the breach of a distributorship contract ordinarily affords adequate relief (255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 306-307) .

In Pellissier v. Whittier Water Co. (1922) 59 Cal. App. 1, 209 P. 593 , plaintiff brought an action against defendants to have the court declare that, by reason of a contract entered into between his predecessor and the defendant water company, he was entitled to a preferential water rate. Prior to a trial on the merits, plaintiff sought a preliminary injunction to restrain either of the defendants from shutting off his water supply or disconnecting his water lines from defendants' conduit or ditch so long as he paid the preferential rate to the defendants. The superior court denied the preliminary injunction, and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying the injunction. It stated that injunctive relief will ordinarily be granted only when there can be no adequate pecuniary compensation because it would be difficult or impossible to ascertain the damages resulting from an act; in such a case, the legal remedy fails. But when damages can be accurately measured and will fully compensate for any loss that may be suffered by plaintiff, an injunction is not proper. In this case, the damages that plaintiff would have suffered could have been accurately measured and would have fully compensated for any loss that he might have suffered. Hence, the superior court's order denying the preliminary injunction was affirmed (59 Cal. App. 1, 6-7) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Damages as Adequate Legal Remedy

In Cox Cable San Diego, Inc. v. Bookspan (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 22, 240 Cal. Rptr. 407 , the court of appeal affirmed a trial court's denial of a preliminary injunction to a cable television company to allow it to reconnect subscribers at an apartment complex after the owner of the complex had disconnected them, in breach of contract. The court of appeal said that when money damages would be adequate, the cable company had no First Amendment right to connect its equipment, and the permanent physical intrusion required for reconnection would be more harmful to the complex owner and a competing cable company than exclusion would be to plaintiff (195 Cal. App. 3d 22, 25-32) .

In Parker v. Pacific G. & E. Co. (1920) 50 Cal. App. 264, 195 P. 60 , plaintiff brought an action for an injunction to restrain defendants from discharging water from a dam over plaintiff's property. Plaintiff also sought a preliminary injunction to the same effect, but the superior court issued an order denying it. Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the order. It noted that plaintiff had failed to show that defendants were insolvent or unable to respond in damages. In fact, if plaintiff suffered any monetary loss it would be negligible and defendants would be able to respond in damages. In addition, there was no showing that any damages could not be readily ascertained. Therefore, the superior court did not abuse its discretion in denying plaintiff the preliminary injunction that he sought (50 Cal. App. 264, 268) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.42

§ 116.42 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Mandate

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE LEGAL REMEDY OF A WRIT OF MANDATE IS AVAILABLE TO PLAINTIFF. IN THIS CASE, THE NATURE OF RELIEF SOUGHT BY PLAINTIFF, NAMELY, _____ [describe type of relief sought] MAY BE OBTAINED BY SECURING A WRIT OF MANDATE, IN VIEW OF THE PRIMA FACIE REQUIREMENTS FOR ISSUANCE OF THAT WRIT. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Mandate as Adequate Legal Remedy. An injunction cannot be granted when a writ of mandate would afford an adequate legal remedy to plaintiff (Moore v. Superior Court (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 421, 423-424, 57 P.2d 1314).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by the fact that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, namely a writ of mandate.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the type of relief being sought is consistent with that afforded by issuance of a writ of mandate, and that any related statutory prerequisites to issuance of the writ (apart from the writ petition itself) are satisfied.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion, procedural checklist, and forms for use in obtaining a writ of prohibition or mandate, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 358, Mandate and Prohibition (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandate as Adequate Legal Remedy

In Moore v. Superior Court (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 421, 57 P.2d 1314 , at issue was a statute that authorized the Fish and Game Commission to grant permits for the taking of fish for reduction or extraction purposes. Under the statute, the commission was required to limit the taking of fish in order to prevent waste or depletion of a species. In granting permits to various persons during the seasons of 1933-1934 and 1934-1935, the commission made equal allotments among the various plants. For the 1935-1936 season, however, the commission determined that permittees who had not previously engaged in the business should be permitted to take only half the amount allowed to those previously operating. Three new plants brought an action to enjoin the members of the commission from enforcing the terms of their permits; they alleged that the action of the commission amounted to an arbitrary and unjustifiable discrimination against them. A superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained the commission from interfering with the operations of the plants so long as they did not take a certain amount of fish during the season in question. The members of the commission applied for a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court to restrain the superior court from enforcing the preliminary injunction. The Supreme Court issued the writ.

The Court stated that if a review of the commission's determination was desired, it had to be in a proper proceeding. That proceeding was a proceeding in mandamus to compel the granting of the permits sought. Hence, an appropriate legal remedy was available, and the equitable remedy of an injunction was not proper (6 Cal. 2d 421, 423-424) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.43

§ 116.43 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Quo Warranto

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE LEGAL REMEDY OF QUO WARRANTO IS AVAILABLE TO PLAINTIFF. IN THIS CASE, THE NATURE OF RELIEF SOUGHT BY PLAINTIFF, NAMELY, _____ [describe type of relief sought] MAY BE OBTAINED IN AN ACTION FOR QUO WARRANTO. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Quo Warranto as Adequate Legal Remedy. An injunction cannot be granted when quo warranto would afford an adequate legal remedy to plaintiff (Hallinan v. Mellon (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 342, 344-348, 32 Cal. Rptr. 446).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by the fact that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, namely, an action for quo warranto.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the relief sought by the plaintiff is of a kind that is appropriately sought by utilizing a quo warranto action rather than by applying for an injunction. Note that special requirements must be met in order to utilize a quo warranto action [see generally Code Civ. Proc. § 803 et seq.].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the situations in which quo warranto is an appropriate remedy, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 483, Quo Warranto (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Quo Warranto as Adequate Legal Remedy

In Hallinan v. Mellon (1963) 218 Cal. App. 2d 342, 32 Cal. Rptr. 446 , plaintiff brought a taxpayer's action against a police commissioner and his surety to enjoin the alleged wrongful payment of monies and for the return of monies allegedly wrongfully procured. Defendants demurred on the grounds that plaintiff lacked legal capacity to sue and that the court lacked jurisdiction over the subject matter. The superior court sustained the demurrer for the reason that quo warranto was the only legal method of determining title to office. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal affirmed. It observed that, while a taxpayer may attack the legality of the office, he may not attack the right of an incumbent to an office; this was what plaintiff was attempting in this situation. Because the right to receive salary is an incident to the title to the office and not an incident to the exercise of its duties, an action to determine the de facto officer's right to salary is, therefore, an action to try title to the office. Thus, the action was actually one to try title to the defendant's office of police commissioner, something that could only be done by quo warranto. For this reason, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment of dismissal (218 Cal. App. 2d 342, 344-348) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.44

§ 116.44 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Adequate Legal Remedy--Claim and Delivery

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE LEGAL REMEDY OF AN ACTION FOR CLAIM AND DELIVERY IS AVAILABLE TO PLAINTIFF. IN THIS CASE, THE NATURE OF PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM, NAMELY, _____ [summarize plaintiff's claim for relief] IS APPROPRIATELY ADDRESSED, IF AT ALL, BY AN ACTION FOR CLAIM AND DELIVERY. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Claim and Delivery as Adequate Legal Remedy. An injunction cannot be granted when an action for claim and delivery would afford an adequate legal remedy to plaintiff (Richards v. Kirkpatrick (1879) 53 Cal. 433, 434-435) .

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by the fact that plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law, namely, an action for claim and delivery.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish why plaintiff's claim, assuming its validity (for the sake of argument), is appropriately addressed by an action for claim and delivery rather than through injunctive relief.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms related to actions for possession of personal property, as well as to the provisional remedy of claim and delivery, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 119, Claim and Delivery (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Claim and Delivery as Adequate Legal Remedy

In Richards v. Kirkpatrick (1879) 53 Cal. 433 , one of the defendants had obtained a judgment against a person named Ivy and had caused a writ of execution to be issued on the personal property in question. The other defendant was a constable who had levied the execution on the property and was about to sell it in satisfaction of the execution. Two days after the levy, the plaintiff in Richards commenced an action for claim and delivery against the constable in order to recover the property; process was issued, and the sheriff took possession of the property. Then, another two days thereafter, Richards commenced an action to restrain the sale of the property under the execution of the action in which the writ of execution had issued. The trial court issued a preliminary injunction, and defendants demurred to the complaint and sought to have the preliminary injunction dissolved. The trial court overruled the demurrer and denied the motion to dissolve the injunction. Defendants appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Supreme Court noted that a person is not entitled to an injunction in a case when he has a plain, speedy, and adequate remedy at law. Here, there was no reason given why the plaintiff could not obtain all the relief to which he was entitled in the pending claim and delivery action. While the property was being held by the sheriff under the process in that action, the constable could not sell it. Moreover, should the property be redelivered by the sheriff to the constable on his execution of the statutory undertaking, that undertaking was presumptively sufficient protection to the plaintiff if he recovered a judgment in that action (53 Cal. 433, 434-435) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.45

§ 116.45 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Public Interest

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN ITS ISSUANCE WOULD BE CONTRARY TO THE PUBLIC INTEREST. IN THIS CASE, THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SOUGHT BY THE PLAINTIFF WOULD BE INJURIOUS TO THE PUBLIC INTEREST BECAUSE _____ [specify reason]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Public Interest. An injunction cannot be granted when its issuance would be contrary to public policy and the public interest (Loma Portal Civic Club v. American Airlines, Inc. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 582, 588-591, 594, 39 Cal. Rptr. 708, 394 P.2d 548 ; Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 144-145, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief would be contrary to public policy and the public interest.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

For related points and authorities utilizing public interest grounds in opposing an injunction against execution of a statute, see § 116.83.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts and legal argument establishing why issuance of an injunction would be injurious to the public interest or otherwise against public policy, as opposed to the narrow interest of a party.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Interest

In Loma Portal Civic Club v. American Airlines, Inc. (1964) 61 Cal. 2d 582, 39 Cal. Rptr. 708, 394 P.2d 548 , plaintiffs were owners of property near the San Diego public airport who brought an action to enjoin certain flight operations as a claimed nuisance. The superior court granted defendants' motion for summary judgment, and plaintiffs appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. It noted that under the pleadings and the uncontradicted affidavits filed by the defendants, there was no substantial issue to be tried. Hence, summary judgment was appropriate. The Supreme Court observed that when a prima facie case has otherwise been made out, an injunction will be granted only when such a remedy is appropriate; in determining the availability of injunctive relief, the court must consider the interests of third persons and of the general public.

In this situation, the national interest in commerce, transportation, and defense was being furthered by the operation of scheduled passenger, freight, and postal jet carriage into and out of San Diego. The people of San Diego and of California were benefitting from these operations, and plaintiffs did not contend that defendants' operations were not in furtherance of the public interest. Defendants' jet services were in the public interest, and the public had come to rely on and have a substantial stake in the continuation of that service. Therefore, it was clear to the Supreme Court that it would be contrary to the policy of California to grant an injunction against flight operations in the vicinity of a public airport, conducted by regularly scheduled, certificated airlines, not alleged to be conducted in violation of federal orders and regulations or in an imminently dangerous manner and not alleged to be carried on in a manner inconsistent with the public interest inhering in the continuation of such service. Hence, an injunction was not available to plaintiffs (61 Cal. 2d 582, 588-591) .

The facts and procedural background of Triple A Machine Shop, Inc. v. State of California (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 261 Cal. Rptr. 493 , are discussed in § 116.37[3][a]. In that case, the court of appeal said that overriding public interests may compel denial of injunctive relief. Although the court reversed because the specific grounds relied on in granting the injunction did not exist, the court said the most significant effect of the injunction lay in its impact on the investigation and prosecution of criminal charges in that case; and that the separation of powers doctrine requires judicial restraint in enjoining criminal investigations or prosecutions. It said that the prosecutor's authority stems from the executive branch of government, and the investigation and gathering of evidence relating to criminal offenses is the prosecutor's responsibility and rests solely within his or her discretion; that the discretionary authority vested in the district attorney to investigate and prosecute criminal conduct is considered too vital to the interest of public order to be subjected to prior restraint by the courts except under extraordinary circumstances, and that the balance between the executive and judicial branches would be profoundly upset if the judiciary assumed superintendence over the law enforcement activities of the executive branch on nothing more than a vague fear or suspicion that its officers will be unfaithful to their oaths or unequal to their responsibility (213 Cal. App. 3d 131, 144-145) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.46

§ 116.46 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Changed Circumstances

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN CIRCUMSTANCES HAVE SO CHANGED AFTER THE FILING OF THE COMPLAINT THAT NO UNLAWFUL ACT IS THREATENED OR THAT INJUNCTIVE RELIEF WOULD BE UNNECESSARY. IN THIS CASE, EVEN IF PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT INITIALLY MADE OUT A PRIMA FACIE SHOWING OF ENTITLEMENT TO INJUNCTIVE RELIEF, THE CIRCUMSTANCES HAVE SO CHANGED SINCE THE COMPLAINT WAS FILED AS TO MAKE THE ISSUANCE OF AN INJUNCTION INAPPROPRIATE. THESE CHANGED CIRCUMSTANCES INCLUDE _____ [specify facts showing changed circumstances]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DENIED.

Changed Circumstances. An injunction cannot be granted when circumstances have so changed after the filing of the complaint that no unlawful act is threatened or that injunctive relief would be unnecessary (Engle v. City of Oroville (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270, 47 Cal. Rptr. 630 (no unlawful act threatened); Mallon v. City of Long Beach (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 178, 186-190, 330 P.2d 423 (injunctive relief unnecessary)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when circumstances have so changed after the filing of the complaint that no unlawful act is threatened and that injunctive relief would be unnecessary.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the circumstances of the parties have changed since the complaint was first filed and why this change removes the need for injunctive relief.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Changed Circumstances

In Engle v. City of Oroville (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 266, 47 Cal. Rptr. 630 , plaintiff obtained a judgment that permanently enjoined defendant city from discharging sewage effluent from its sewage plant into the Feather River and that awarded damages to plaintiffs.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. Concerning the injunctive portion of the judgment, the court stated when, during the course of litigation and before final judgment, the conditions on which a previously issued injunction no longer exist and cannot recur, the injunction should be dissolved. It noted that an injunction will not be granted when, at the time of the hearing, conditions have so changed that no unlawful act is threatened. In the present situation, the city had been guilty of no bad faith and had abated the nuisance as governmental process would permit. There was no possibility that the nuisance would or could recur. Therefore, the court reversed the judgment (238 Cal. App. 2d 266, 270) .

In Mallon v. City of Long Beach (1958) 164 Cal. App. 2d 178, 330 P.2d 423 , plaintiff brought an action to enjoin defendant city from using certain oil and gas revenues, other than for trust purposes, that had been developed on tide and other submerged lands deeded to the city in trust. After the time that the complaint was filed, a Supreme Court decision, a legislative enactment, and a final stipulated judgment in an action between the city and state had settled, once and for all, the dispute between the defendants over the ownership of the funds accrued and accruing. These events foreclosed defendants' further use of the funds in question for the city's general use, and the city consequently filed an amended answer that stated that it would no longer continue to use the monies in the ways that it had previously done.

The superior court took notice of these changed circumstances and ruled that there was no reasonable expectation or probability that the acts complained of would be either repeated or continued and that no necessity for granting the injunctive relief existed at that time. Thus, it denied plaintiff a permanent injunction and entered judgment accordingly. Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed.

The court stated that a court of equity will not afford an injunction to prevent in the future that which in good faith has been discontinued in the absence of any evidence that the acts are likely to be repeated in the future. Accordingly, when events occur after the filing of the complaint that render an injunction unnecessary, it will ordinarily be refused. In the present situation, there was nothing in the record to indicate a probability of either a disposition of or an opportunity for the city in the future to abandon its declared intention to abide by the legislative enactment and the Supreme Court decision. Without such a probability, an injunction is not necessary. Thus, the superior court did not abuse its discretion denying the injunctive relief sought (164 Cal. App. 2d 178, 190) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Changed Circumstances

In East Bay Mun. Utility Dist. v. Department of Forestry & Fire Protection (1996) 43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 51 Cal. Rptr. 2d 299 , plaintiff, a water district, brought a mandamus action against a defendant, an administrative agency, to challenge its approval under the Z'Berg-Negedly Forest Protect Act of 1973 (Pub. Res. Code § 5411 et seq.) of a particular timber harvest plan and a separate declaratory relief action which sought to challenge the legality of the administrative agency's practice or policy under the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA). Plaintiff sought in the declaratory relief action to establish that the defendant was following a pattern and practice of improperly approving other timber harvest plans, all of which were submitted by an intervener in the action. Plaintiff alleged in its first cause of action in its complaint for declaratory relief that the defendant had a pattern and practice of improperly assessing the cumulative impacts of logging and was as a consequence improperly issuing timber harvest permits in the Mokelumne River watershed and thus improper logging practices posed a risk to downstream fisheries and to plaintiff's drinking water supplies. The second cause of action alleged that recently adopted cumulative impact assessment regulations governing the defendant were void because they were inconsistent with the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA). The writ action had been filed the day before the declaratory relief action and the proceedings were coordinated. Ultimately, the writ action was tried and a writ of mandamus was issued, the trial court concluding that the defendant had abused its discretion in approving the particular timber harvest plan in that, among other things, the intervener had not provided sufficient information about reasonably foreseeable future projects. The defendant did not appeal. Subsequently, the first cause of action in the declaratory relief action was tried and thereafter the second cause of action was resolved by summary adjudication, the court finding that the cumulative impact rules were consistent with CEQA. As to the first cause of action, the court concluded that the defendant had impermissibly used guidelines for watershed assessment areas that had not been formally adopted under the Administrative Procedures Act (Gov. Code § 11500 et seq.) and directed the agency to comply with the act. However, the court declined to enjoin the defendant's use of them in the interim. The court concluded that the agency's cumulative impacts analysis was legally adequate despite the agency's improper use of the guidelines (43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 1120) .

Plaintiff appealed raising may claims of error, one of which concerned the trial court's conclusion concerning the watershed assessment guidelines and another concerning the trial court's denial of declaratory relief or injunctive relief. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment. With regard the watershed assessment guidelines, the court of appeal pointed out that after the trial court issued its tentative decision in which it found the guidelines to be illegal underground regulations, the agency's director sent a mailing to all licensed timber operators and all professional foresters which informed them that the guidelines would not be used as the criteria for judging whether assessment areas are correct in the timber harvest plan, but would be based on other criteria (43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 1125-1126) . The court noted that an injunction properly issues only when the right to be protected is clear, injury is impending and so immediately likely that issuance of an injunction is the only way to avoid it. A corollary to this rule is that denial of an injunction is justified when changed circumstances render injunctive relief unnecessary. An injunction should not issue as a remedy for past acts that are not likely to recur. Here the defendant publicly announced that the guidelines would no longer be used to evaluate the adequacy of watershed assessment areas as defined in the timber harvest plans submitted to it. Plaintiff made absolutely no showing to the trial court that in the past the defendant had been duplicitous nor was there any evidence to suggest that for some reason the defendant would begin to measure the adequacy of watershed assessment areas solely against the guideline standards. Under these circumstances the court of appeal could not say that the trial court abused its discretion in refusing to enjoin future application of watershed assessment area guidelines that the defendant had expressly disavowed (43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 1126) . With regard to claimed error in the trial court not having issued a declaratory judgment or declining to grant injunctive relief to force the defendant to require disclosure of future plans and of emergency harvest notices, the court pointed out that the trial court at the conclusion of the writ action had issued a proposed statement of decision to the effect that the interveners failure to provide at least the public information concerning reasonably foreseeable probable future projects and the defendant's failure to gather the information itself supported the conclusion that the defendant did not proceed in the manner required by law. However, by the time the declaratory relief action was tried the defendant had changed its requirements and accordingly at the trial's conclusion the trial court stated in effect that defendant had imposed certain informational requirements in its timber harvest plan decision and in light of the courts conclusion that the defendant had changed its policies and that there was no of evidence to show that defendant would continue to commit the error once it was pointed out, the trial court saw no bases for issuing an injunction (43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 1131) . The court of appeal noted that the function of a declaratory relief action is to resolve an on going controversy and that the trial court could reasonably conclude that once the defendant had change its policy no ongoing controversy still existed because the challenged practice had been abandoned. Moreover, although injunctive relief is appropriate when unlawful conduct is likely to recur, the court of appeal must presume that the defendant agency will follow the law. Thus, the trial court did not abuse its discretion by declining to exercise its equitable powers to direct policy changes already implemented by the defendant (43 Cal. App. 4th 1113, 1132) .

In Cisneros v. U. D. Registry, Inc. (1995) 39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 574, 46 Cal. Rptr. 2d 233 , plaintiffs brought suit against a corporation and its president for alleged violations of the federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (15 U.S.C. §§ 1681-1681t), the California Consumer Credit Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code § 1785.1 et seq.) and the Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies Act (Civ. Code § 1786 et seq.). The corporation gathered information regarding residential renters and sold that information to its subscribers, mainly landlords and their agents, who screened applicants to fill a vacancy. Plaintiffs sought damages and injunctive relief. In addition, plaintiffs sought injunctive relief for violation of the Unfair Business Practices Act (Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200 et seq.) and damages for intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. The trial court sustained a demurrer without leave to amend to plaintiffs' Unfair Business Practices Act and negligent infliction of emotional distress claims. Plaintiffs' remaining claims were tried before the court which ultimately found for the defendants on all but two claims. Both sides appealed.

The court of appeal in affirming in part, reversing in part and remanding the case for retrial of plaintiffs' claims under the Unfair Business Practices Act and for retrial of certain other claims discussed several issues that plaintiffs raised on appeal. Plaintiffs, among other points raised, contended that the trial court should have granted an injunction prohibiting the defendant corporation from reporting unlawful detainer or other action that only possibly related to a consumer ("possibles"). The trial court by an order prior to the trial date had granted summary adjudication in plaintiffs' favor on this pertinent issue which provided in part that defendants could not make a report about a consumer unless defendants had positively identified that consumer as the party involved in the unlawful detainer or other action. At trial the court refused to grant injunctive relief, in part, because the evidence at trial showed that since the corporation had received the preliminary order it had ceased reporting or discussing possibles. Although a permanent injunction was involved, in affirming the trial court's determination the appellate court noted that a denial of an injunction is justified when changed circumstances render injunctive relief moot or unnecessary. Injunctive relief should not be granted as punishment for past acts in the absence of any evidence that the acts are likely to recur in the future. Injunctive relief can be denied when defendant's wrongful conduct voluntarily ceases. Thus, implicit in the trial court's determination in denying the injunction was that the acts were not likely to recur and that a permanent injunction would have no impact other than as punishment for past acts (39 Cal. App. 4th 548, 573-574) .

Donald v. Cafe Royale, Inc. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 266 Cal. Rptr. 804 , was an action by a disabled person against a restaurant for (1) damages for noncompliance with equal access statutes; (2) damages pursuant to Civ. Code § 54.3 for interference with a disabled person's admittance to or enjoyment of a public facility; and (3) an injunction pursuant to Civ. Code § 55 prohibiting the defendant restaurant from operating in violation of the statutory regulations. With regard to the injunction cause of action, the superior court had determined it would be an idle act to invoke such a remedy against the defendant because the defendant was insolvent, no longer in business, and had dissolved as a corporation. The court of appeal affirmed this portion of the judgment. Although the case involved a permanent, rather than a preliminary, injunction, the court said that (1) a change in circumstances, rendering injunctive relief moot or unnecessary, justifies the denial of an injunction; (2) injunctive relief will be denied when, at the time of the order or judgment, no reasonable probability exists of the recurrence of the past acts; and (3) an injunction should not be granted as punishment for past acts when it is unlikely that they will recur (218 Cal. App. 3d 168, 184) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.47

§ 116.47 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Plaintiff Not Likely to Prevail on Merits at Trial, and Balance-of-Hardships Weighs in Defendant's Favor

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN IT IS UNLIKELY THAT PLAINTIFF WILL PREVAIL ON THE MERITS, AND THE COMPARATIVE HARM TO BE SUFFERED BY DEFENDANTS IF THE INJUNCTION IS ISSUED IS GREATER THAN THE HARM TO PLAINTIFFS IF THE INJUNCTION IS DENIED. IN THIS CASE, IT IS UNLIKELY THAT PLAINTIFF WILL PREVAIL ON THE MERITS BECAUSE _____ [specify reason]. FURTHERMORE, THE HARM TO DEFENDANTS IF THE INJUNCTION IS ISSUED, NAMELY _____ [specify harm], IS GREATER THAN THAT PLAINTIFFS WOULD PURPORTEDLY SUFFER IN THE ABSENCE OF INJUNCTIVE RELIEF, NAMELY _____ [specify harm]. THEREFORE, THE INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DENIED.

A. Court Must Consider Likelihood That Plaintiff Will Prevail and Balance Hardships of Parties. In exercising its discretion, the trial court must consider two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood that plaintiffs will prevail on the merits of the case at trial, and (2) the harm to be suffered by plaintiffs if the injunction does not issue as compared to the harm to be suffered by defendants if it does (Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 441-442, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610 ; King v. Meese (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1226, 240 Cal. Rptr. 829, 743 P.2d 889 ; Right Site Coalition v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 336, 341-344, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 678 ; Board of Supervisors v. McMahon (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295, 268 Cal. Rptr. 219).

[Optional] B. Plaintiff's Recovery Doubtful. An injunction cannot be granted when plaintiff's ultimate right to relief is doubtful (Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 305, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; West v. Lind (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 563, 569, 9 Cal. Rptr. 288).

[Optional] C. Plaintiff's Recovery Impossible. When, as a matter of law, there is no possibility that the relief sought by the plaintiff can be properly granted after a trial on the merits, the preliminary injunction should be denied (Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 443, 447, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction on the ground that the plaintiff is not likely to prevail on the merits at trial, and that the defendant will suffer greater harm if the injunction is issued than the plaintiff will if it is not [see King v. Meese (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1226, 240 Cal. Rptr. 829, 743 P.2d 889] , or that there is no possibility that plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial [Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 443, 447, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610] .

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

These points and authorities may also be modified for use in an appellate brief regarding whether a trial court abused its discretion in granting or denying a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. For example, counsel should discuss facts regarding comparative harm to the defendant on issuance of the injunction, as opposed to harm to the plaintiff if it is denied.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court Must Consider Likelihood That Plaintiff Will Prevail and Balance Hardships of Parties

Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610 , was an action by a county taxpayer and several voting rights organizations. Plaintiffs sought declaratory relief, a writ of mandate, and a preliminary and permanent injunction requiring a county to implement its voter outreach program by deputizing as voter registrars certain county employees who had frequent contact with low-income and minority citizens. Plaintiffs contended that the county had not complied with Elections Code provisions that required counties to develop and implement voter outreach programs, hence authorizing county clerks to deputize citizens as deputy registrars. The trial court granted a preliminary, mandatory injunction requiring the county to deputize as voting registrars certain county employees who had frequent contact with low-income and minority citizens. The preliminary injunction was affirmed by the court of appeal.

In reversing the court of appeal and directing it to remand the matter to the trial court with directions to vacate the preliminary injunction, the Supreme Court pointed out that it was unnecessary to reach the question whether plaintiffs had standing to seek an injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 526a, because the ultimate relief sought in the action included a writ of mandate compelling adoption of the employee deputization program. Accordingly, it was unnecessary for plaintiffs to show a separate basis for standing to obtain a preliminary injunction, distinct from the basis for their standing to seek a writ of mandate at a trial on the merits. With respect to the preliminary injunction, the Court said that in deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction, a trial court must evaluate two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood that the party seeking the injunction will ultimately prevail on the merits of his or her claim, and (2) the balance of harm presented, that is, the comparative consequences of the issuance and nonissuance of the injunction (49 Cal. 3d 432, 439-442) .

In King v. Meese (1987) 43 Cal. 3d 1217, 240 Cal. Rptr. 829, 743 P.2d 889 , several licensed drivers who were unable to afford automobile insurance in a high-premium area brought an action against various government officials regarding enforcement of the 1984 Robbins-McAlister Financial Responsibility Act (Stats. 1984, ch. 1322). The Act required that a motorist show proof of insurance when issued a citation, and provides that failure to do so is itself an infraction. The trial court denied plaintiffs' request for a temporary restraining order enjoining the operation of the Act, then denied their motion for a preliminary injunction, on the ground that a balancing of hardships favored defendants. Plaintiffs unsuccessfully petitioned the court of appeal, then successfully petitioned the Supreme Court for review.

The Supreme Court initially stayed the enforcement of the Act, and transferred the appeal from the court of appeal. In an unusual determination, the Court decided the case on its merits, and ultimately affirmed the trial court's denial of the injunction (43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1225-1235) . The Court reasoned that an order denying a preliminary injunction must be affirmed unless the trial court abused its discretion in making its determination. In exercising its discretion, a trial court must consider two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood that plaintiffs will prevail on the merits at trial, and (2) the harm to be suffered by plaintiffs if the injunction does not issue as compared to the harm to be suffered by defendants if it does (43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1226) . The trial court did not err in finding that the balance of hardships favored defendants, after weighing the burden on victims of accidents caused by noninsured drivers against the ramifications of enforcement of the act on plaintiffs.

However, the trial court must also determine the likelihood of plaintiff prevailing on the merits. Although consideration of this issue does not entail final adjudication of the ultimate rights in controversy, it does affect the showing necessary to a balancing-of-hardships analysis. That is, the more likely it is that plaintiffs will ultimately prevail, the less severe must be the harm that they allege will occur if the injunction does not issue. This is especially true when the requested injunction maintains, rather than alters, the status quo. In the instant case, an injunction would have maintained the status quo. On review, a trial court's order regarding a preliminary injunction may be affirmed if either the balance-of-hardships analysis or plaintiffs' likelihood of success considerations would alone support the ruling. If, however, the trial court relies on only one of the foregoing, the reviewing court must determine whether that reliance conclusively supports the trial court's determination regardless of the remaining considerations. Normally, it would be appropriate to remand the case to the trial court for consideration of the remaining issue. Because, however, there were no contested factual questions necessary to resolve the case, and the legal issues had been exhaustively briefed, the Court proceeded to determine the case on its merits (43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1227-1228) . After determining that the Act comports with all procedural due process and delegation-of-power requirements, the Court concluded that plaintiff would not prevail on the merits, and affirmed the trial court's denial of the motion for injunction (43 Cal. 3d 1217, 1235) .

In Right Site Coalition v. Los Angeles Unified School Dist*. (2008) 160 Cal. App. 4th 336, 341-344, 72 Cal. Rptr. 3d 678* , the plaintiff sought a preliminary injunction preventing the defendant school district from demolishing 49 units of housing to make way for a new school. At the hearing on the preliminary injunction, the trial court denied the plaintiff's motion stating "I just can't see the harm in this situation," thus, ruling that the balance of hardships favored the defendant. The trial court refused to consider the likelihood of the plaintiff's success on the merits, stating "I don't think it's necessary." The plaintiff appealed, arguing that the trial court erred in denying the motion for preliminary injunction without considering the likelihood the Coalition will prevail on the merits of its case at trial. The court of appeal reviewed the record and held that the trial court's denial of the preliminary injunction, without any consideration of the potential merit of the plaintiff's claims, was clearly erroneous (160 Cal. App. 4th 336, 343-344) . The court of appeal remanded the matter to the trial court.

Board of Supervisors v. McMahon (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 286, 268 Cal. Rptr. 219 , was an appeal by the Director of the state Department of Social Services and others from a preliminary injunction granted a county in a dispute involving the state's power to require the county to contribute local funds to a state-mandated program (Aid to Families with Dependent Children--AFDC).

The court of appeal reversed, concluding that the trial court erred by finding that the county would probably prevail on its claim (219 Cal. App. 3d 286, 296-303) . The court stated the often-repeated rule that trial courts should evaluate two interrelated factors when deciding whether or not to issue a preliminary injunction. The first is the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial. The second is the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction is denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the preliminary injunction is issued. In general, the appellate court explained, by balancing the respective equities of the parties, a trial court determines whether, pending a trial on the merits, the defendant should or should not be restrained from exercising the right claimed by him or her. An appellate court must reverse an order granting a preliminary injunction if it determines that either of the two interrelated factors does not support the trial court's order (219 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295-296) . The court added that when the preliminary injunction mandates an affirmative act that changes the status quo, the appellate court scrutinizes it even more closely for an abuse of discretion (219 Cal. App. 3d 286, 295) .

[b] Plaintiff's Recovery Doubtful

In Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 , plaintiff automobile dealer brought an action for specific performance of a dealership contract and for damages. Plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction against defendant corporation that enjoined defendant from terminating the dealership agreement existing between the two parties. Defendant appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. One of defendant's three contentions with which the court of appeal agreed was that plaintiff had failed to make a showing of probable ultimate success in the action and that such a showing is a necessary condition to the issuance of a preliminary injunction. The court noted that the relief that plaintiff sought in the action was primarily specific performance of a dealership contract, and it was obvious to the court that plaintiff would not be successful in obtaining any permanent equitable relief. Because a preliminary injunction will not issue in a doubtful case, the denial of a preliminary injunction is amply justified when it is doubtful what the outcome may be on a final hearing of the action. Hence, because it appeared that all that plaintiff could ultimately recover were damages, the order granting the preliminary injunction was reversed (255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 305-307) .

In West v. Lind (1960) 186 Cal. App. 2d 563, 9 Cal. Rptr. 288 , plaintiff Mae West sought, in part, a preliminary injunction that would have restrained defendant Marie Lind from using the name "Diamond Lil" and the corporate defendant from billing and advertising defendant Lind as "Diamond Lil" or "The One and Only Diamond Lil." After an order to show cause hearing, a trial court denied the preliminary injunction. It found that the designation "Diamond Lil" involved words of common usage in the public domain that would not be susceptible of appropriation by the plaintiff in the manner she asserted. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order denying the preliminary injunction. The court noted that it was doubtful, both on the evidence and considering California law, that plaintiff had a property right in the title "Diamond Lil" and that she could thus prevail on the merits. Because an injunction should rarely, if ever, be issued in a doubtful case, the order denying the preliminary injunction was not an abuse of discretion (186 Cal. App. 2d 563, 569-570) .

[c] Plaintiff's Recovery Impossible

The facts and procedural background of Common Cause v. Board of Supervisors (1989) 49 Cal. 3d 432, 261 Cal. Rptr. 574, 777 P.2d 610 , are discussed in § 116.47[3][a]. In reversing the court of appeal and directing it to remand the matter to the trial court with directions to vacate the preliminary injunction, the Supreme Court said that the scope of available preliminary relief is necessarily limited by the scope of the relief likely to be obtained at trial on the merits (49 Cal. 3d 432, 442) . The Court explained that the ultimate relief sought in plaintiffs' complaint included an injunction and a writ of mandate to compel the county to fulfill its duties under the Elections Code, but that mandamus, rather than mandatory injunction, is the traditional remedy for the failure of a public official to perform a legal duty, that an order after trial requiring the implementation of an employee deputization program, even if entitled an injunction, would be identical in purpose and function to a writ of mandate, and that the Court therefore evaluated the merits of plaintiffs' claim for this relief in light of the legal principles governing mandamus actions (49 Cal. 3d 432, 442) .

The Court held that the Elections Code does not require the deputization of county employees as voting registrars, even if such deputization would substantially further the statutory goal of maximum registration (49 Cal. 3d 432, 443) , and that because, as a matter of law, there was no possibility that the relief sought could be properly awarded after a trial on the merits, such relief could not be awarded on a provisional basis (49 Cal. 3d 432, 443) . The Court said that whether counties have a ministerial duty to implement voter outreach programs or to deputize qualified citizens as registrars, the Elections Code provision at issue is, in essence, enabling legislation that authorizes counties to deputize their employees should they decide to do so, and that the decision whether to take advantage of the authority granted by the Elections Code is not an administrative, but a quasi-legislative decision entrusted solely to local elected officials (49 Cal. 3d 432, 445) . The Court explained that the likelihood of success on the merits and the balance-of-harm analysis are ordinarily interrelated factors in the decision whether to issue a preliminary injunction, that the presence of each factor is usually a matter of degree, and that if the party seeking the injunction can make a sufficiently strong showing of likelihood of success on the merits, the trial court has discretion to issue the injunction notwithstanding that party's inability to show that the balance of harms tips in his or her favor. In the present case, however, there was no likelihood that plaintiffs would prevail on their claim for specific injunctive relief under either theory asserted, and a preliminary injunction could not issue without some showing of potential entitlement to such relief (49 Cal. 3d 432, 447) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Court Must Consider Likelihood That Plaintiff Will Prevail and Balance Hardships of Parties

In Teachers Ins. & Annuity Assn. v. Furlotti (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 , a dead-end alley ran between the plaintiff's property, a residential apartment building, and the defendant's property, a commercial building. The alley constituted a boundary between the commercial zone to the south and the residential zone to the north. A previous owner of both properties had executed a declaration of reciprocal easement (hereafter DRE) covering the alley which specified specific service areas to be used for installation and storage of loading trucks, trash collection bins, and the like, and for access to and use of such equipment by service personnel, vendors and suppliers. Beginning in 1987, the commercial building's use of the alley for deliveries, pickup and trash collection combined with smoking and noisy workmen in the area between midnight and 4:00 a.m., created such noise, smoke and dirt that the defendants, on behalf of the residents of the apartment complex, complained to the managers of the commercial property. Frustrated with the increasing noise and the magnitude of the use of the commercial property, defendants announced their intention to construct a fence in the alley. The managers of the commercial property responded that such a fence would violate the easement and demanded that defendants desist. Nonetheless, the defendants constructed a chain link fence down the center of the alley. Thereafter, plaintiff sued defendants for damages for breach of the DRE, nuisance and trespass. The defendants also sought declaratory and injunctive relief. Simultaneously, plaintiff applied for a preliminary injunction to require removal of the fence and repair of the easement area to return it to the condition it was in before erection of the fence. Plaintiff's application was made on the ground that the DRE was an enforceable agreement that entitled the parties to use the easement area for access, but was violated by the defendants when they constructed the fence. Plaintiff also made a showing as to irreparable harm. Defendants' position was that the DRE was void ab initio and therefore illegal because it purported to allow use for commercial purposes on that portion of the alley that was zoned for residential use only and therefore violated the Los Angeles municipal code. After a hearing, the trial court found that plaintiff suffered harm and ordered an injunction to issue, among other things, ordering the defendants to remove the fence (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1489-1492) .

The court of appeal reversed the order (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1499) . The court noted that trial courts must evaluate two interrelated factors in determining whether to grant a preliminary injunction application. The first is the reasonable probability that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial. The second is the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction were denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the preliminary injunction were issued (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1493, 1498) . The relationship of these factors is such that an injunction should not issue when there is no possibility of success even though issuance might prevent irreparable harm. Trial courts must evaluate the possibility of success on the merits (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1498) . The court, based on the Los Angeles municipal code and case law, initially concluded that the plaintiff's use of the residential half of the alley was commercial in nature and thus violated the municipal code. Therefore, plaintiff could not rely on the DRE to use the residential half of the alley (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1496) . Accordingly, the court ultimately concluded that the trial court abused its discretion in ordering the injunction to issue without considering the likelihood of plaintiff's success on the merits (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1497) . Plaintiff had not demonstrated a reasonable probability that it would prevail on the merits at trial (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1489) . Moreover, even if defendants resorted to self-help, if plaintiff could not prevail on the merits at trial the injunction application should not have been granted (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1497-1498) .

14859 Moorpark Homeowner's Assn. v. VRT Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712 , involved the purported conveyance of a condominium complex, including the common areas, to a third party developer (hereafter purchaser) without obtaining a judicial partition pursuant to Civ. Code § 1359. The complex had been damaged in an earthquake. Its covenants, conditions and restrictions gave the homeowner's association an irrevocable power of attorney to sell the complex "when partition of the [complex] may be had" under Civ. Code § 1359, but only after recordation of a certificate setting forth compliance with the foregoing condition. After agreeing to sell the complex to a developer, the association and its president initiated an action for partition and sought injunctive relief against the owners and several mortgage holders including VRT Corporation (hereafter VRT) barring the foreclosure on first deeds of trust on units in the complex. Before resolution of the partition action, the association recorded a deed conveying the complex to the purchaser. The purchaser brought an action to quiet title as well as for injunctive and declaratory relief. Willis Investment Group (hereafter Willis), an affiliate of VRT, cross-complained for quiet title, alleging it owned two units in the complex.

In the partition action, the trial court granted the association's and its president's request for a preliminary injunction, and VRT appealed. In the quiet title action, Willis sought a preliminary injunction precluding the purchaser and the association from asserting the validity or effectiveness of the grant deed by which the purchaser allegedly took title to the complex. The trial court denied Willis's request for a preliminary injunction and Willis appealed. The appeals were consolidated (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1400-1402) .

The court of appeal reversed the order granting the association's request for a preliminary injunction in the partition action and reversed the order denying Willis's request for a preliminary injunction in the quiet title action (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1411) . In reaching its conclusion, the court noted that in determining whether to grant a preliminary injunction the trial court considers two related factors: (1) the likelihood plaintiff will prevail on the merits of its case at trial, and (2) the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction is denied as compared to harm the defendant is likely to suffer if court grants preliminary injunction. The latter factor involves consideration of such things as the inadequacy of other remedies, the degree of irreparable harm, and the necessity of preserving the status quo. The determination whether to grant a preliminary injunction generally rests in the sound discretion of the trial court. Discretion abused when a court exceeds the bounds of reason or contravenes uncontradicted evidence (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1402) . The more likely it is that the plaintiff will ultimately prevail, the less severe must be the harm that the plaintiff alleges will occur if injunction does not issue. This is especially true when the requested injunction maintains rather than alters, the status quo. Thus, if the party seeking an injunction can a make sufficiently strong showing of the likelihood of success on the merits, the trial court has discretion to issue an injunction notwithstanding that party's inability to show that the balance of harms tips in his or her favor (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1407) .

With regard to the denial of the preliminary injunction in the quiet title action, the court concluded that the association's attempt to sell the complex was barred by Civ. Code §§ 1358 and 1359 (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1406) , so that there was no likelihood that the purchaser would ultimately prevail on the merits of its claim for quiet title (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1407) . The court noted that when the party seeking the injunction will not succeed on the merits, an injunction should not issue even thought its issuance might prevent irreparable harm, because there is no justification in delaying that harm where, although irreparable, it is also inevitable (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1408) . This case presents a different but closely related issue, namely, whether an injunction should issue because the purchaser, which opposed the injunction, could not prevail on the strength of its title, even though the purchaser's assertion of its manifestly infirm title would prevent damage by a third party (threatened demolition of the complex by the city). The court applied the same reasoning as above. Because the purchaser's title is infirm and the potential damage to the complex is avoided solely by the purchaser's flimsy assertion of that title, there is no justification in delaying harm which, although perhaps irreparable, is also inevitable. Accordingly, the trial court abused its discretion in denying Willis's request for injunctive relief (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409) .

With regard to the grant of the preliminary injunction in the partition action, because VRT did not dispute that the association has a reasonable likelihood of success in the partition action, the key issue is whether the association established that the balance of harms favored it. On this matter the association argued that VRT intended to foreclose on liens, take control of the association and prevent the sale to the purchaser. Absent injunctive relief, the parties holding interests in the complex would lose not only proceeds from the sale to the purchaser, but also their equity and security because the city planned to demolish the complex if the purchaser halted repairs. The association's showing thus hinges on the key legal issue presented by the purchaser's claim to the complex in the quiet title action, namely whether the association could convey the complex to the purchaser in the absence of judicial partition. As already explained, the purchaser's claim to the complex must fail. Because the association's attempt to protect this sale has no reasonable probability of success, there is no justification in barring foreclosures by VRT, even though the foreclosures may cause irreparable harm. The lienholder's interest cannot be impaired on the grounds presented by the association. Accordingly, the trial court abused its discretion in granting the preliminary injunction (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1409-1411) .

In Shoemaker v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 774 , plaintiff had been a university faculty member with an academic appointment as a professor of surgery and also had been a civil service employee for the county medical center employed as a physician specialist. The university was affiliated with a county medical center and had a department of emergency medicine that conducted a residency training program at the medical center whereby residents from the university helped staff the medical center's emergency medicine services department. In 1991 plaintiff was appointed to fill vacant administrative positions of chairman of the university's department of emergency medicine and chief of the medical center's emergency medicine services department. However, in 1993, a review committee concluded that the plaintiff was not sufficiently qualified for the positions he held and that the Accreditation Council intended to withdraw accreditation of the residency program effective June 30, 1995, but the Council gave the program officials until January 4, 1994, to respond to the proposed loss of accreditation. By separate letters from the university and medical center plaintiff was thereafter removed from plaintiff's administrative positions at the university and medical center effective January 3, 1994, but plaintiff retained plaintiff's previous status as a professor of surgery with the university and as a physician specialist with the medical center. On plaintiff's application, the trial court granted plaintiff's application for a preliminary injunction, ordering defendants to (1) refrain from removing plaintiff from the administrative positions at the university and medical center unless and until defendant complied with due process and complied with civil service rules; (2) refrain from appointing a replacement for plaintiff unless and until plaintiff was properly removed from plaintiff's positions; and (3) rescind all orders removing plaintiff from plaintiff's administrative posts. Defendants appealed.

In reversing the trial court's order granting the preliminary injunction based on the trial court having abused its discretion, the court of appeal noted that when deciding whether or not to issue a preliminary injunction trial courts should evaluate two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial; and (2) the interim harm likely to be sustained by plaintiff if the injunction is denied compared with the harm likely to be suffered by defendant if the preliminary injunction were issued (37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 624-625) . The Court of Appeal further noted that it must reverse if the trial court abused its discretion as to either factor (37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 625) . Under the facts the court concluded that plaintiff was not likely to prevail on the causes of action supporting the injunction (although the court had no occasion to evaluate plaintiff's likelihood of success on plaintiff's substantive claims) and the factors of interim harm favored the defendants.

In Abrams v. St. John's Hospital & Health Center (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 603 , a medical doctor and a medical corporation sued a hospital for breach of contract. The plaintiffs sought a preliminary injunction prohibiting the hospital from terminating a contract for the operation of the hospital's pathology department without first complying with certain contract provisions, hospital bylaws and case law relating to due process hearing rights. The trial court denied the motion for preliminary injunction. In affirming the trial court's denial of the preliminary injunction, the court of appeal pointed out that in considering whether or not to issue a preliminary injunction the trial court considers two factors; (1) the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits and (2) the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction is denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the court grants a preliminary injunction (25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 635-636) .

The facts and procedural background of Southern Christian Leadership Conference v. Al Malaikah Auditorium Co. (1991) 230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 281 Cal. Rptr. 216 , are discussed in § 116.20[3][a]. In that case, defendants appealed the granting of a preliminary injunction and contended, among other things, that plaintiffs should not have been permitted under the election-of-remedies doctrine to proceed to trial for damages based on anticipatory breach of contract, because plaintiffs had elected to seek relief based on specific performance and obtained a preliminary injunction to defendants' detriment.

In rejecting the contention and affirming the judgment, the court of appeal said that if the main action seeks another remedy, a preliminary injunction simply forms a provisional or auxiliary remedy to preserve the status quo until a final judgment. The court said: (1) the grant or denial of a preliminary injunction does not adjudicate the ultimate rights in controversy, but merely reflects the court's determination, after balancing the respective parties' equities, that pending a trial on the merits the defendant should or should not be restrained from exercising a right claimed by that defendant; (2) the preliminary injunction does not create a right, but merely undertakes to protect a right from unlawful or injurious interference; and (3) the fate of a preliminary injunction, having a strictly adjunct character, depends on the main action. The court explained that in ruling on a motion for a preliminary injunction, the trial court considers whether a greater injury will result to the defendant from granting the injunction than to the plaintiff from refusing it. The trial court considers the probability of the plaintiff's ultimately prevailing in a trial on the merits and will deny a preliminary injunction unless there is a reasonable probability that plaintiff will successfully assert his or her rights (230 Cal. App. 3d 207, 223) .

Savage v. Trammell Crow Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 273 Cal. Rptr. 302 , was an action against a shopping center and its security service for preventing plaintiff from placing religious tracts on automobiles in the center's parking lot. Plaintiff claimed that defendants' conduct violated his constitutional rights. In opposing plaintiff's application for a preliminary injunction, the shopping center submitted the declaration of one of its partners showing that litter and traffic problems created by distributing leaflets in the parking lot justified the prohibition. The application was denied and plaintiff appealed. In affirming the order, the court of appeal said that in seeking a preliminary injunction, plaintiff bears the burden of demonstrating both likely success on the merits and the occurrence of irreparable harm before a final judgment can be entered. Quoting Cohen v. Board of Supervisors (1985) 40 Cal. 3d 277, 286-287, 219 Cal. Rptr. 467, 707 P.2d 840 , the court explained that when a trial court denies an application for a preliminary injunction, it implicitly determines that the plaintiffs have failed to show interim harm or the likelihood of prevailing on the merits, or both; that on appeal the question becomes whether the trial court abused its discretion in ruling on both factors; and that even if the appellate court finds that the trial court abused its discretion regarding one of the factors, it nevertheless may affirm the trial court's order if it finds no abuse of discretion regarding the other. The court held that the partner's declaration in opposition to the application for preliminary injunction was sufficient to defeat plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction, because it demonstrated that plaintiff was not likely to succeed in establishing a right to distribute his tracts, and that the ban on parking-lot leafletting was a valid regulation of the time, place, or manner of activity otherwise protected by the California and federal constitutions (23 Cal. App. 3d 1099, 1571) .

Counsel should note, however, that the appellate court reversed the judgment of dismissal following the trial court's sustaining of a demurrer without leave to amend, on the ground that the complaint could be amended to state a cause of action under Cal. Const., art. I, § 2(a) (relating to liberty of speech or press), with respect to the center's prohibition against the distribution of any matter other than political matter in other parts of the center (223 Cal. App. 3d 1562, 1576-1581) .

In Lubavitch Congregation v. City of Long Beach (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1388, 266 Cal. Rptr. 513 , in affirming an order denying a preliminary injunction in an action by religious organizations challenging a municipal ordinance prohibiting "break-open bingo," in which participants purchase a sealed bingo card that is a predetermined winner or loser, the court of appeal said that the general purpose of a preliminary injunction is the preservation of the status quo pending a final determination on the merits of the action. Accordingly, in deciding whether such an injunction should issue the trial court must evaluate two interrelated factors: (1) the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial and (2) the interim harm that plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction is denied compared to the harm that defendant is likely to suffer if the injunction is issued (217 Cal. App. 3d 1388, 1391-1392) . The court pointed out that Penal Code § 326.5 was enacted in 1975 in anticipation of the approval by the electorate of Cal. Const., art. IV, § 19(c), which was approved in 1976, and that provides that the Legislature by statute may authorize cities and counties to provide for bingo games, but only for public purposes (217 Cal. App. 3d 1388, 1392) .

The court held that, even though Penal Code § 326.5 permits charitable organizations to conduct bingo games and defines bingo as including break-open bingo, it does not require that if a city or county provides for bingo it must permit bingo in both of the forms defined by the statute, and it was therefore not likely that plaintiffs would prevail on the merits (217 Cal. App. 3d 1388, 1394) . The court further noted that, while the trial court's order was based on the foregoing ground, there was uncontradicted evidence supporting the trial court's implied finding that the city (that is, residents of the city) would suffer greater harm if the injunction were granted than would the plaintiff if it were denied (217 Cal. App. 3d 1388, 1392 n.4).

In Loder v. City of Glendale (1989) 216 Cal. App. 3d 777, 265 Cal. Rptr. 66 , the appellate court reversed an order granting a preliminary injunction restraining defendant city from enforcing its drug testing program pending trial, on the ground that plaintiff had presented insufficient evidence on the necessary element of interim harm to support the granting of the preliminary injunction (216 Cal. App. 3d 777, 786) . The court of appeal said trial courts should evaluate two interrelated factors when deciding whether or not to issue a preliminary injunction. The first is the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial. The second is the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction is denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the preliminary injunction is issued. The theory behind this two-pronged test is that by balancing the respective equities of the parties the court concludes that, pending a trial on the merits, the defendant should or should not be restrained from exercising the right claimed by him or her. The court added that to qualify for preliminary injunctive relief, a plaintiff must show irreparable injury, either existing or threatened (216 Cal. App. 3d 777, 782) .

[b] Plaintiff's Recovery Doubtful

The facts and procedural background of Willis v. Lauridson (1911) 161 Cal. 106, 118 P. 530 , are discussed in § 116.53[3][a]. In that case, plaintiff stockholder brought an action against defendant association and other individual stockholders to enjoin the voting of certain allegedly illegal certificates at a board of directors election. A court issued a preliminary injunction, and defendants moved to dissolve it. The superior court refused, and they appealed. The Supreme Court reversed the order. It observed that to issue an injunction is the exercise of a delicate power requiring great caution and sound discretion that rarely, if ever, should be exercised in a doubtful case (161 Cal. 106, 117) .

In Scaringe v. J.C.C. Enterprises, Inc. (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 1536, 253 Cal. Rptr. 344 , the court of appeal pointed out that the granting of a preliminary injunction does not constitute a final adjudication of the controversy and said that a trial court should grant a preliminary injunction only if the plaintiff would prevail at trial and would suffer more harm from its denial than the defendant would suffer from its grant (205 Cal. App. 3d 1536, 1542-1543) . Holding that there was no reasonable probability that plaintiffs would prevail at trial in their attempt to enforce a certain declaration of conditions, covenants, and restrictions on real property, the appellate court reversed the trial court's order granting a preliminary injunction halting all construction of a home that would obstruct the plaintiff homeowners' view (205 Cal. App. 3d 1536, 1547) .

In Hueneme etc. Ry. v. Fletcher (1924) 65 Cal. App. 698, 224 P. 774 , plaintiff brought an action for the purpose of enjoining defendants from taking plaintiff's property in a right-of-way without the commencement of an eminent domain action in order to condemn it. The superior court issued a temporary restraining order, but at the hearing on the order to show cause it denied plaintiff's application for a preliminary injunction. Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the order denying the preliminary injunction. The court stated that it is well settled that a preliminary injunction will not issue in a doubtful case. Such injunctive relief will not issue when the right that the plaintiff seeks to have protected is in doubt, when the right to the relief asked is doubtful, or except in a clear case of right. Considering all the matters of fact and of law that were contained in the record, it appeared that the superior court was amply justified in refusing the preliminary injunction on the ground that it was doubtful what the outcome may have been on a final hearing of the action. Therefore, the court of appeal could not say that the superior court had abused its discretion in issuing the order denying the preliminary injunction (65 Cal. App. 698, 703-704) .

[c] Plaintiff's Recovery Impossible

In Hunt v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 984, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 236, 987 P.2d 705 , plaintiffs brought a class action for declaratory and injunctive relief and a writ of mandate to preclude a county from implementing a new eligibility standard for medical care for indigent residents that would reduce the number of eligible recipients. The trial court entered a preliminary injunction precluding the county from implementing the eligibility standard, or any other standard that failed to consider a resident's financial ability to pay the actual costs of obtaining subsistence medical care (21 Cal. 4th 984, 990, 995) . The court of appeal, however, concluded that plaintiffs had no likelihood of success on the merits and directed the trial court to dissolve the injunction (21 Cal. 4th 984, 990, 1000-1001) . The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the court of appeal erred in concluding that the plaintiffs had no likelihood of success on the merits of their claims and that the trial court had not abused its discretion in issuing the preliminary injunction (21 Cal. 4th 984, 1006, 1015) . In discussing the standard of review the Court noted that a trial court may not grant a preliminary injunction regardless of the balance of harm unless there is some possibility that the plaintiff would ultimately prevail on the merits of claim (21 Cal. 4th 984, 999) .

The facts and procedural background of Teachers Ins. & Annuity Assn. v. Furlotti (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 , are discussed in § 116.47[4][a]. In reversing an order granting a preliminary injunction, the court of appeal noted that an injunction should not issue when there is no possibility of success even though issuance might prevent irreparable harm. Trial courts must evaluate the possibility of success on the merits (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1498) .

The facts and procedural background of 14859 Moorpark Homeowner's Assn. v. VRT Corp. (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 712 , are discussed in § 116.47[4][a]. In reversing the granting of injunctive relief in the partition action and reversing the denial of injunctive relief in the quiet title action, the court found that there was no likelihood that the purchaser would ultimately prevail on the merits of its claim for quiet title (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1407) . The court noted that when the party seeking the injunction will not succeed on the merits, an injunction should not issue even thought its issuance might prevent irreparable harm, because there is no justification in delaying that harm where, although irreparable, it is also inevitable (63 Cal. App. 4th 1396, 1408) .

In Pro-Family Advocates v. Gomez (1996) 46 Cal. App. 4th 1674, 54 Cal. Rptr. 2d 600 , the trial court modified an existing preliminary injunction that it had issued to bar enforcement of a 1995 administrative regulation excluding certain classified prisoners from participating in an overnight family visiting program. The Director of the State Department of Corrections appealed. The court of appeal limited its inquiry into the constitutionality of the challenged regulation, that is, whether the regulation constituted an ex poste facto law in violation of the state or federal constitution, or violated the equal protection clauses of the state or federal constitution. In reversing the trial court's order modifying the preliminary injunction the court of appeal noted, among other things, that the decision to grant a preliminary injunction rests in the trial court's sound discretion. An abuse of discretion occurs if the trial court exceeds the bounds of reason or contravenes uncontradicted evidence. If no issue of fact is involved, the reviewing court determines as a matter of law whether the granting of the preliminary injunction was error. Trial courts evaluate the following two interrelated factors when deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction: (1) the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits, and (2) the likely interim harm that plaintiff will suffer if the injunction is denied compared to the likely harm defendant will suffer if the injunction is granted. The trial court by balancing the respective equities should conclude whether or not an injunction should be granted restraining the defendant's rights pending the trial. The question on a typical appeal from an order granting a preliminary injunction is whether both the likelihood of prevailing on the merits and irreparable harm are established. Thus, if the party that sought the preliminary injunction has no likelihood of prevailing at trial, the trial court has committed an error of law and the reviewing court must reverse the order granting the preliminary injunction (46 Cal. App. 4th 1674, 1680-1681) . The court of appeal held that the regulation neither constituted an ex post facto law nor did it violate equal protection (46 Cal. App. 4th 1674, 1679) . Thus, because there was no likelihood of prevailing at trial on the merits of the ex post facto or equal protection causes of action, the trial court necessarily erred in granting the motion for a preliminary injunction and the order modifying the preliminary injunction was reversed (46 Cal. App. 4th 1674, 1687) .

The facts and procedural background of Abrams v. St. John's Hospital & Health Center (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 603 , are discussed in § 116.47[4][a]. In affirming the trial court's denial of a preliminary injunction the court of appeal considered the likelihood of plaintiffs' success on the merits. The court noted that the due process requirements for terminating the staff privileges of a doctor do not apply when the termination is made incidental to a hospital's administrative decision rather than an adjudicatory decision (25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 636) . Because the plaintiff doctor had been terminated incidental to an administrative decision of the hospital and the doctor had waived his rights to hearing under hospital bylaws the court found that the plaintiffs could not prevail against the hospital on their breach of contract cause of action for denying the doctor a hearing on terminating his privileges (25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 638) . The court of appeals then stated that having determined that plaintiffs had no likelihood of prevailing on the merits of their breach of contract cause of action it could affirm the trial court's denial of the preliminary injunction without considering the trial court's alternative reason for denying the injunction (25 Cal. App. 4th 628, 639) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.48

§ 116.48 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued if Restraint Interferes With Freedom of Speech

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE ISSUED WHEN IT WOULD INTERFERE WITH FREEDOM OF SPEECH. IN THIS CASE, ISSUANCE OF AN INJUNCTION WOULD UNREASONABLY INTERFERE WITH _____ [specify party's, e.g., DEFENDANT'S] RIGHT TO FREE SPEECH UNDER THE FEDERAL AND STATE CONSTITUTIONS BECAUSE _____ [state reason(s)]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Interference With Freedom of Speech. An injunction cannot be granted when it would interfere with the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech (U.S. Const., amend. I; Cal. Const., art. I, § 2; Rosicrucian Fellow. v. Rosicrucian Fellow. Non-Sectarian Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 145, 245 P.2d 481 ; Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1166, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 ; Planned Parenthood Golden Gate v. Foti (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 354-355, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 ; Chico Feminist Women's Health Center v. Scully (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 230, 247-248, 256 Cal. Rptr. 194).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief would interfere with the constitutional guarantees of freedom of speech [see U.S. Const., amend. I; Cal. Const., art. I, § 2].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how issuance of a preliminary injunction would unreasonably interfere with the free speech rights of his or her client.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Interference With Freedom of Speech

Rosicrucian Fellow. v. Rosicrucian Fellow. Non-Sectarian Church (1952) 39 Cal. 2d 121, 245 P.2d 481 , involved a controversy between religious societies with regard to the use of property as well as the exercise of other rights. Plaintiff filed an action to enjoin the use of a name in response to which defendants filed a cross complaint for declaratory relief.

The Supreme Court modified and affirmed the superior court's judgment for defendants. Part of the judgment granted defendants the declaratory relief they were seeking and restrained plaintiff from doing certain specified things. Plaintiff objected to the propriety of the injunctive provisions, and the Supreme Court ordered stricken that portion of the judgment that restrained plaintiff from making either oral or written statements that the individual defendant was untruthful, had a selfish purpose in organizing the defendant corporation, or that defendant corporation was an outlaw organization or otherwise was doing acts to deter followers from becoming members of the defendant corporation. After noting the principle that an injunction will not be granted when the restraint interferes with freedom of speech, the Court held that this portion of the judgment was too broad and impinged on freedom of speech. This was true especially when the Court considered that religious controversies were also concerned (39 Cal. 2d 121, 145) .

In Evans v. Evans (2008) 162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 76 Cal. Rptr. 3d 859 , a deputy sheriff sued his ex-wife for harassment, defamation, and breach of privacy. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for preliminary injunction, enjoining the defendant publishing "false and defamatory statements" about the plaintiff on the Internet and publishing "confidential personal information" about the plaintiff on the Internet. The defendant appealed the preliminary injunction, arguing that it was an unconstitutional prior restraint on speech, vague and ambiguous, and overbroad.

The court of appeal held that the trial court's preliminary injunction prohibiting the defendant from publishing any "false and defamatory" statements on the Internet was constitutionally invalid because there had been no trial and no determination on the merits that any statement the defendant made was defamatory (162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1167-1168) . The court further held that this portion of the order was also invalid as unconstitutionally vague and overbroad because it failed to adequately delineate which of the defendant's future comments might violate the injunction and lead to contempt of court (162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1169) .

The court of appeal also held that the portion of the order preventing the defendant from placing any "confidential personal information" about the plaintiff on the Internet was vague, overbroad, and not narrowly tailored (162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1169). On remand, the court held, the trial court should conduct a balancing test to determine whether there is a compelling reason that such information be kept private, such as facts showing the disclosure of information would jeopardize the personal safety of the plaintiff or his family and/or would lead him to fear for his or his family's personal safety (162 Cal. App. 4th 1157, 1171-1172).

Planned Parenthood Golden Gate v. Foti (2003) 107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 132 Cal. Rptr. 2d 46 , involved a permanent injunction that plaintiff Planned Parenthood Association of San Mateo County obtained limiting demonstration activity outside its clinic. The injunction was entered against two named parties, Operation Rescue of California and Robert Cochran. According to its terms, the injunction applied to: "Defendants and their agents, employees, representatives and all persons acting in concert or participation with them, or either of them, and all persons with actual notice of this judgment." About six years later, plaintiff sought a declaration that the injunction applied to certain other named individuals, the defendants in the present action. Those individuals challenged the injunction, claiming that it did not apply to them because they were not specifically named in it and were not parties to the action in which it was issued. The defendants also argued that the injunction violated their First Amendment right to protest outside an abortion clinic. Plaintiff argued that the injunction applied to the defendants because they had actual notice of it. Plaintiff also argued that the defendants should be subject to the injunction in order to uphold the policy against multiplicity of lawsuits. The trial court granted plaintiff's motion for summary judgment.

The court of appeal held that as a general matter, protestors enjoy full constitutional protection for the expression and communication of their views concerning the public issue of abortion. The court held that this was particularly true when these protected activities occur on public streets and sidewalks, traditionally viewed as the quintessential public forum. The court held that an injunction curtailing protected expression will be upheld only if the challenged provisions of the injunction burden no more speech than necessary to serve a significant governmental interest. In this case, the court held, the actual notice provision could not satisfy this requirement; because it purported to enjoin all demonstrators in addition to the enjoined parties, the restriction was overbroad on its face (107 Cal. App. 4th 345, 354) .

In Chico Feminist Women's Health Center v. Scully (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 230, 256 Cal. Rptr. 194 , plaintiff brought an action to enjoin picketing in front of an abortion clinic. A trial court issued an order granting a preliminary injunction that precluded the defendants from photographing or otherwise harassing patrons of the clinic and imposed other restrictions on defendants in the vicinity of the clinic. The injunction was later modified, and both the plaintiff and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the order as modified, and dismissed plaintiff's appeal from the original preliminary injunction as untimely. The court reasoned, in part, that the defendants' right to free speech was implicated in their picketing activities, and the extent to which their free speech rights could be curtailed required analysis of the "forum" used to communicate with the clinic patrons. Here, the "public forum" doctrine was involved and mandated a high level of scrutiny of any abridgement of speech. Ample alternative means of communication must be afforded before speech in a public forum can be restricted. Ample alternative means do not exist if a speaker's "target audience" is altogether insulated from the speaker's message, which was the case here. Abortions at the center were performed only on Saturdays and the plaintiff made no showing that defendants had any means of reaching their target audience, women seeking abortions, if defendants were excluded from the vicinity of the center on Saturdays. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a) it was incumbent on plaintiffs to show "satisfactorily that sufficient grounds exist" for issuance of the injunction. Because the availability of alternative means of communication with patrons of the center was indispensable to the injunctive relief sought by plaintiffs, it was plaintiff's burden to show the available alternative. The appellate court concluded that the plaintiffs had not met this burden. Therefore, the trial court had not abused its discretion in declining to enjoin all communication between defendants and the center's patrons and by fashioning narrower orders aimed specifically at the causes of the patrons' emotional distress (208 Cal. App. 3d 230, 245-248) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Interference With Freedom of Speech

In Levy v. City of Santa Monica (2004) 114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 8 Cal. Rptr. 3d 507 , the plaintiffs were homeowners who built a large playhouse in their backyard. The plaintiffs' neighbor complained to the defendant City of Santa Monica about the playhouse. After the Levy's modified the playhouse to meet city requirements, the neighbor complained again to the City's building and safety department. She also complained to defendant Ken Genser, her city council representative, who was also the mayor. In response, Genser sent an e-mail to the City's director of planning and community development, that said, "[C]ould you look into this? Is this structure being built without permits? And could it be built with a permit? Please feel free to contact [the neighbor] directly."

A section of the city charter stated that "Except for the purpose of inquiry, the City Council and its members shall deal with the administrative service under the City Manager solely through the City Manager and neither the City Council nor any member shall give orders to any subordinates of the City Manager, either publicly or privately." In light of this, the plaintiffs filed a complaint for injunctive relief against the City and Genser. They sought a permanent injunction precluding city council members from engaging in acts designed to influence City administrative staff through direct communication regarding zoning enforcement matters. The City filed a motion to strike the lawsuit under "SLAPP" (Strategic Lawsuit Against Public Participation) (Code Civ. Proc. § 425.16). The trial court held in favor of the plaintiffs and granted the injunction. The City appealed.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that the neighbor's act of contacting her representative and the councilperson's act of contacting planning staff were petitions for grievances against the government protected by the First Amendment. Under the First Amendment, the court held, legislators are given broad latitude to express their views and there are no stricter free speech standards on them than on the general public. Laws that restrict that freedom must be narrowly construed. City officials have First Amendment protection when they respond to inquiries from the public about the city's actions on construction projects. The plaintiffs sought to enjoin council members from advocating their constituents' positions, applying "direct pressure" or "engaging in acts designed to influence" City administrative staff. The court held that was an overly broad restraint on speech which would inhibit constitutionally protected activity (114 Cal. App. 4th 1252, 1261-1262) .

In San Diego Unified Port Dist. v. U.S. Citizens Patrol (1998) 63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 364 , defendant was an association of citizens concerned about problems associated with illegal immigration in San Diego County. The organization was formed to monitor whether commercial airlines at San Diego airport were complying with a Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) requirement that airlines check passengers' photographic identification before allowing them to board airplanes or check baggage. Members of the defendant, wearing tee shirts bearing defendant's name, observed the various airlines' baggage check-in and boarding procedures. When they observed noncompliance they brought it to the attention of the noncomplying ticket agents or other airline representatives. The defendant limited its activities in the airport to walking through the terminals and speaking with airline employees. They did not contact any other people in the airport. Members of the Chicano Federation (Federation) held a press conference in one of the airport terminals to protest the defendant's activities. When one of the defendant's members walked over to the area where the press conference was being held, members of the Federation moved toward him and began shouting, chanting and clapping in a loud and disruptive manner and followed him when he left the area continuing to chant and shout at him in a threatening manner in a disturbance that continued until he departed the terminal area. The next day San Diego Unified Port District filed a complaint for injunctive relief seeking to restrain the Federation and defendant from causing further disturbance at the airport. The trial court granted the application for a temporary restraining order and later granted the plaintiff's motion for a preliminary injunction. Defendant appealed challenging two paragraphs of the preliminary injunction (63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 967-969) .

The court of appeal reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction as to the two challenged paragraphs. Those paragraphs were vacated and the order otherwise affirmed (63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 967-973) . The court noted that the right to free speech is constitutionally protected from censorship by hostile reaction, sometimes referred to as a "heckler's veto." The plaintiff did not contend that defendant engaged in any conduct that was in and of itself enjoinable, improper, or illegal nor did the record reflect it. The injunction of the defendant was based solely on the Federation's hostile reaction to the defendant's presence at the airport. The preliminary injunction attempts to prevent future disruptions by casting too fine a net. Defendant, engaging in lawful and passive conduct, was scooped up with the Federation, some of whose supporters aggressively confronted a member of the defendant. Because the injunction subjects the defendant's right to engage in protected speech to the censorship of a group who disagrees with its content, it constitutes an impermissible "heckler's veto" of defendant's protected speech (63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 970-971) . Moreover, even if there is a basis to enjoin certain conduct by defendant's members, the injunction goes much further than necessary to provide the relief sought by the plaintiff. The challenged portions of the preliminary injunction unnecessarily burden defendant's speech (63 Cal. App. 4th 964, 971) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.49

§ 116.49 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION CANNOT BE ISSUED WHEN THE COURT LACKS PERSONAL JURISDICTION OVER THE PARTY TO BE ENJOINED. IN THIS CASE, THE COURT DOES NOT HAVE PERSONAL JURISDICTION OVER _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] BECAUSE _____ [state grounds]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Lack of Personal Jurisdiction. An injunction cannot be granted when the court lacks personal jurisdiction over the party sought to be enjoined by the injunction (Rothschild v. Erda (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 750, 753-756, 66 Cal. Rptr. 209).

[Add points and authorities supporting contention that no personal jurisdiction exists over party to be enjoined. For examples of such points and authorities, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is barred by the fact that the court lacks personal jurisdiction over the party sought to be enjoined. With appropriate modifications, the same principle could be used in support of a motion to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction [see Code Civ. Proc. § 418.10(a)(1)].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts and legal arguments that establish why the court lacks jurisdiction over the party sought to be enjoined. For points and authorities pertaining to jurisdiction over the person, see Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum .

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion of personal jurisdiction generally and discussion and forms pertaining to motions to quash service of summons for lack of personal jurisdiction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 323, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction, Inconvenient Forum, and Appearances (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Lack of Personal Jurisdiction

In Rothschild v. Erda (1968) 258 Cal. App. 2d 750, 66 Cal. Rptr. 209 , a temporary administrator of a New York estate made a special appearance at a hearing in a California superior court in order to contest the court's jurisdiction to hear an application for a preliminary injunction in a quiet title action involving securities located in California. Nevertheless, the superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained the administrator from prosecuting all suits or claims in the probate proceedings that the administrator had instituted in New York. The administrator appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction on the ground that the superior court lacked personal jurisdiction over him.

The court of appeal reversed the order. The court stated that there were no statutory or constitutional grounds by which personal jurisdiction over the defendant had been obtained. Thus, because an order granting a preliminary injunction is a decree in personam and because plaintiff had made only a special appearance for the purpose of challenging the jurisdiction of the superior court, that court did not have jurisdiction over the administrator's person. Therefore, it was precluded from granting the preliminary injunction (258 Cal. App. 2d 750, 753-756) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.50

§ 116.50 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--No Acts Threatened to Be Committed in Future

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY NOT BE GRANTED TO RESTRAIN THE COMMISSION OF ACTS WHEN NO SIMILAR ACTS HAVE BEEN COMMITTED IN THE PAST, NONE ARE THREATENED TO BE COMMITTED IN THE FUTURE, AND IT REASONABLY APPEARS THAT THEY WILL NOT BE COMMITTED. IN THIS CASE, _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SEEKS TO ENJOIN _____ [specify type of conduct/activity sought to be enjoined], BUT THERE IS NO EVIDENCE THAT _____ [specify opposing party, e.g., DEFENDANT] HAS ENGAGED IN THIS CONDUCT/ACTIVITY, OR THREATENED TO DO SO, AND THERE IS NO REASONABLE POSSIBILITY THAT _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] WILL DO SO HEREAFTER. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

No Acts Threatened to Be Committed in Future. An injunction cannot be granted to restrain the commission of acts in the future unless there is good reason to believe that they will be committed if there is no restraint. When no similar acts have been committed in the past and none are threatened to be committed in the future and when it appears reasonable to believe that they will not be committed, there is no occasion for an injunction and no right to one (De Haviland v. Warner Bros. Pictures (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 225, 238, 153 P.2d 983).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is being sought to restrain acts in the future, but when such acts have not been committed in the past and none are threatened to be committed in the future.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

For related points and authorities, see § 116.37.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the moving party is seeking relief pertaining to conduct or activity of a kind that the other party has neither engaged in, threatened to engage in, or with respect to which there is no reasonable likelihood he or she will engage in thereafter. In an appropriate case, this may entail describing how the party's past or ongoing conduct or activity differs significantly from that sought to be enjoined.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Acts Threatened to Be Committed in Future

In De Haviland v. Warner Bros. Pictures (1944) 67 Cal. App. 2d 225, 153 P.2d 983 , plaintiff brought an action seeking a declaration that a contract for her services as a motion picture actress was terminated. Plaintiff obtained a judgment to that effect, and defendant producer appealed.

The court of appeal declared that the sole question on appeal was whether certain provisions in the contract by which defendant could suspend the operation of the contract were lawful and effective insofar as they purported to bind plaintiff beyond seven years from the date her services were commenced. The court answered that question negatively and held that a provision of the Labor Code prevented her from being bound to the contract beyond seven years after her services commenced. Thus, it affirmed the judgment insofar as it granted plaintiff the declaratory relief she was seeking.

However, the court of appeal observed that the portion of the judgment that enjoined defendant from interfering with plaintiff's rendition of services for persons, firms, or corporations other than defendant was not justified. It pointed out that there was nothing in the record that would justify a belief or even a suspicion that defendant would not respect and abide by the final declaration of the court as to the rights of the parties. It noted that an injunction is not proper to restrain the commission of acts in the future unless there is good reason to believe that they will be committed if there is no restraint. When no similar acts have been committed in the past and none are threatened to be committed in the future, and when it appears reasonable to believe that they will not be committed, there is no occasion for an injunction and no right to one. Thus, the court of appeal modified the judgment by striking out that portion of it that granted plaintiff injunctive relief (67 Cal. App. 2d 225, 238) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.51

§ 116.51 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A MANDATORY PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION WILL RARELY ISSUE WHEN ITS EFFECT IS TO GRANT PLAINTIFF ALL OF THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF REQUESTED AND TO ACCOMPLISH THE MAIN PURPOSE OF THE ACTION IN ADVANCE OF A TRIAL ON THE MERITS. IN THIS CASE, IF A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION IS GRANTED, THE _____ [specify party sought to be enjoined, e.g., DEFENDANT] WILL BE REQUIRED TO _____ [specify action/conduct prospectively required], AND DOING SO ESSENTIALLY AFFORDS _____ [specify other party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] ALL THE RELIEF HE/SHE/IT COULD OTHERWISE OBTAIN BY A JUDGMENT ON THE MERITS. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued. A mandatory preliminary injunction will rarely issue when its effect is to grant plaintiff all of the injunctive relief requested in the complaint and to accomplish the main purpose of the action in advance of a trial on the merits (City of Santa Monica v. Superior Court (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 223, 227, 41 Cal. Rptr. 824 ; Paramount Pictures Corp. v. Davis (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 827, 838-839, 39 Cal. Rptr. 791).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a mandatory preliminary injunction on the ground that granting the injunction will afford the moving party with essentially all the relief he or she could otherwise obtain after a trial on the merits of the action.

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the nature of the relief being sought by means of a preliminary injunction will obviate the need for obtaining a judgment on the merits, because the moving party will have essentially secured the relief that a judgment would otherwise provide.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

In City of Santa Monica v. Superior Court (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 223, 41 Cal. Rptr. 824 , plaintiff commenced an action against defendant city and some of its officials seeking declaratory, as well as, preliminary and permanent injunctive, relief against the enforcement of certain of the city's gambling ordinances. The complaint alleged that plaintiff had operated a cocktail lounge and bar business in the city for many years and desired to conduct on its premises a game of cards commonly called "Panguingui" that would be played for money. Plaintiff alleged that the ordinances it was challenging were unconstitutional and that, because of the threatened enforcement of them, it was not able to determine the legality of its conducting such card games. Plaintiff did not allege that, while awaiting a trial on the merits, it would suffer any irreparable injury. Despite this omission, the superior court announced that it would issue a preliminary injunction restraining defendant city from enforcing the ordinances in question. The issuance of a formal preliminary injunction was stayed to enable the city to petition the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition.

The court of appeal issued a writ of prohibition that compelled the superior court to refrain from issuing the preliminary injunction. It noted that with all presumptions favoring the validity and constitutionality of the enactments of various legislative bodies, it should be only under extraordinary circumstances that anyone challenging the validity of a law should be granted the ultimate relief sought prior to any trial on the merits. It also noted that even in the case of an ordinary civil action in which no attack is made on the validity of a duly enacted ordinance, rarely will a mandatory preliminary injunction issue when its effect is to grant plaintiff all of the injunctive relief requested in the complaint and to accomplish the main purpose of the action in advance of a trial on the merits. The court of appeal further pointed out that, in this situation, the plaintiff not only had failed to allege any injury of an irreparable type, it had not even represented that it was either suffering from or threatened with substantial harm of any kind (231 Cal. App. 2d 223, 227) .

In Paramount Pictures Corp. v. Davis (1964) 228 Cal. App. 2d 827, 39 Cal. Rptr. 791 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant actress to compel her performance of a contract. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained her from rendering her services in connection with any motion picture other than the one contracted for unless she filed a statement with the court to the effect that she would render her services for plaintiff at plaintiff's studios in connection with the taking of an added scene for the motion picture for which she had contracted. Defendant moved for a stay of the preliminary injunction pending appeal, but the superior court denied the motion. Defendant never filed the required statement, so the preliminary injunction became effective subject to subsequent stays issued by the superior court and the court of appeal. Defendant then petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of supersedeas to stay the enforcement of the preliminary injunction pending an appeal.

The court of appeal issued a writ of prohibition regarding mandatory portions of the preliminary injunction, but refused to issue the writ regarding the prohibitory portions. The court first observed that the portion of the preliminary injunction that would have commanded defendant to perform additional services for plaintiff was automatically stayed on appeal, whereas the portion that was prohibitory was not stayed. With regard to the mandatory portion, the court of appeal noted that its effect was to grant plaintiff all of the injunctive relief requested in its complaint and to accomplish the main purpose of the action in advance of a trial on the merits. It observed that rarely will such a mandatory injunction issue. However, whether or not the circumstances of the particular situation involved justified such a mandatory preliminary injunction was a question to be determined on appeal. Both parties, the court stated, had presented strong arguments in support of their respective positions. However, because the mandatory portion of the injunction was stayed during appeal, the court of appeal did not believe it necessary to resolve those arguments in determining whether to issue the writ of supersedeas. It did issue the writ with respect to the mandatory portion of the preliminary injunction so that there would be no confusion regarding it. With regard to the prohibitory portions of the preliminary injunction, defendant had made no showing as to why they should be stayed. Therefore, the court of appeal refused to issue the writ with regard to those portions (228 Cal. App. 2d 827, 838-839) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Mandatory Preliminary Injunction Rarely Issued

The facts and procedural background of Teachers Ins. & Annuity Assn. v. Furlotti (1999) 70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 83 Cal. Rptr. 2d 455 , are discussed in § 116.47[4][a]. In reversing an order granting a mandatory preliminary injunction, the court of appeal noted that a court will rarely grant such an injunction and on appeal a stricter review will be applied. The granting of a mandatory injunction pending trial is not permitted except in extreme cases where the right thereto is clearly established (70 Cal. App. 4th 1487, 1493) .

The facts and procedural background of Shoemaker v. County of Los Angeles (1995) 37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 43 Cal. Rptr. 2d 774 , are discussed in § 116.47[4][a].

The court of appeal reversed the trial court's order granting the preliminary injunction based on the trial court having abused its discretion. The court concluded that plaintiff was not likely to prevail on the causes of action supporting the injunction (although the court had no occasion to evaluate plaintiff's likelihood of success on plaintiff's substantive claims) and the factors of interim harm favored the defendants (37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 626) . In discussing the preliminary injunction, the court of appeal noted that it was undoubtedly mandatory in nature in that defendants were ordered to take affirmative steps to restore plaintiff to the administrative positions and that it changed the status quo in that plaintiff had already been removed from the positions at the time of the trial court's order granting the preliminary injunction (37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 625 n.4). A court will seldom grant a preliminary mandatory injunction. A preliminary injunction that mandates affirmative acts that change the status quo is subject to stricter appellate review, it being scrutinized even more closely for an abuse of discretion. A mandatory injunction pending trial is not permitted to be granted except in extreme circumstances when the right for such relief is clearly established (37 Cal. App. 4th 618, 625) .

In Bo Kay Chan v. Gerdon Land Co. (1951) 103 Cal. App. 2d 724, 230 P.2d 1 , plaintiffs were lessees who had obtained leased premises from defendant company that owned the real property involved. Plaintiffs brought an action for preliminary and permanent injunctive relief to restrain defendants' alleged breach of their implied covenant of quiet enjoyment as well as defendants' alleged invasion of their rights as lessees. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that enjoined defendants from interfering with plaintiffs' rights; it also ordered them to remove all structures and other buildings that they had constructed that covered up plaintiffs' lightwell and ordered them to restore the lightwell to its previous condition. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal reversed that portion of the preliminary injunction that was mandatory in effect. The court noted that it was well settled that a very strong and urgent case is required to justify a mandatory preliminary injunction. A clear case of prospective injury for which the plaintiff will have no adequate remedy at law is indispensable. Because there was no such showing in the present situation, the court of appeal reversed the mandatory portion of the injunction (103 Cal. App. 2d 724, 727-728) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.52

§ 116.52 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--No Cause of Action Stated for Injunctive Relief

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COM-
_____ [name],	)	PLAINT FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER TO THE COMPLAINT SHOULD BE SUSTAINED [WITHOUT LEAVE TO AMEND] BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT, WHICH ALLEGES ONLY _____ [summarize allegation], FAILS TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF [AND SHOWS ON ITS FACE THAT IT CANNOT BE AMENDED TO STATE ONE].

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object, by demurrer, as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.30, to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)). When any ground for objection to a complaint appears on the face thereof or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, the objection on that ground may be taken by a demurrer to the complaint (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.30(a)).

B. Elements of Cause of Action for Injunctive Relief. The elements of a cause of action for injunctive relief are (1) a tort or other wrongful act constituting a cause of action, and (2) irreparable injury, that is, a factual showing that the wrongful act constitutes an actual or threatened injury to property or personal rights that cannot be compensated for by an ordinary damage award (Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 410, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240).

[ADD point and authority showing that complaint is insufficient, such as the following:]

C. Complaint Shows on Its Face That Damages Provide Adequate Remedy. A complaint that shows on its face that plaintiff's remedy is an action for damages and that damages provide an adequate remedy fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for injunctive relief (Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 414, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief when the complaint fails to allege facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action for injunctive relief based on a tort or other wrongful act. If the complaint shows on its face that it cannot be amended to state such an action, defendant may request that the demurrer be sustained without leave to amend.

If plaintiff's failure to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action is raised as an objection to the issuance of a preliminary injunction, § 116.40 should be used either in conjunction with Paragraphs B and C in this form, or in conjunction with §§ 116.52-116.55, or in conjunction with other points and authorities showing why the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

For a form of caption that may be modified for use with these points and authorities, see § 116.32.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that, even if the allegations of the complaint are true (for the sake of argument only), the complaint fails to state a cause of action for injunctive relief. If counsel's position is that the complaint fails to state any underlying cause of action in tort, counsel should add points and authorities pertaining to the underlying tort cause of action that support this position. Counsel should consult the appropriate substantive chapter in this publication containing points and authorities pertaining to the underlying tort action [see, e.g., Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit ; Ch. 167, Nuisance , and Ch. 225, Trespass].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion and forms of demurrer, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 206, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For points and authorities supporting and opposing demurrers generally, see Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings in this publication.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Elements of Cause of Action for Injunctive Relief

The facts and procedural background of Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240 , are discussed in § 116.23[4][a]. In that case, judgment for defendant was entered pursuant to stipulation after the trial court had sustained defendant's demurrer to the complaint with leave to amend for failure to state a cause of action for injunctive or declaratory relief. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal said that the elements of a cause of action for injunctive relief are (1) a tort or other wrongful act constituting a cause of action, and (2) irreparable injury, that is, a factual showing that the wrongful act constitutes an actual or threatened injury to property or personal rights that cannot be compensated for by an ordinary damage award (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 410) .

[b] Complaint Shows on Its Face That Damages Provide Adequate Remedy

The facts and procedural background of Brownfield v. Daniel Freeman Marina Hospital (1989) 208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 256 Cal. Rptr. 240 , are discussed in § 116.23[4][a]. In affirming the judgment, the court of appeal held that the complaint stated neither a cause of action under the Unfair Practices Act nor a cause of action for tortious breach of contract (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 411-412) .

The court concluded that when a rape victim can allege that a skilled practitioner of good standing would have provided her with information concerning and access to estrogen pregnancy prophylaxis under similar circumstances, that if such information had been provided to her she would have elected such treatment, and that damages have proximately resulted from the failure to provide her with information concerning this treatment option, the rape victim can state a cause of action for damages for medical malpractice. Having concluded that a rape victim who was denied the requested information may file an action for damages, the court said that it necessarily follows that plaintiff did not and could not allege facts demonstrating that she or the general public had, or would, suffer injuries that could not be compensated for by an award of damages (208 Cal. App. 3d 405, 414) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.53

§ 116.53 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted if Complaint Contains Only Unsupported General Conclusions

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.52.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF BECAUSE IT CONTAINS ONLY GENERAL CONCLUSIONS, NAMELY _____ [summarize complaint's conclusions], WHICH ARE NOT SUPPORTED EITHER BY FACTS IN THE COMPLAINT OR BY AFFIDAVITS/DECLARATIONS. THEREFORE, DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 116.52[1], Paragraph A.]

B. General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction. A verified complaint, not supported by affidavits, is tested by the same rules that are applicable to oral testimony. Conclusions that might stand as a matter of pleading are not competent to justify the issuance of an injunction (Bank of America v. Williams (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 21, 23, 200 P.2d 151). Unless a statement that is in the nature of a conclusion is supported by the facts or circumstances on which it rests, it is insufficient to sustain an application for an injunction (Willis v. Lauridson (1911) 161 Cal. 106, 108, 118 P. 530).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint seeking injunctive relief when the complaint on file does not state a cause of action because it contains only general conclusions that are not supported by facts. The memorandum may be used when defendant is attacking a cause of action that is seeking a preliminary injunction and a permanent injunction or is seeking only a permanent injunction.

When defendant is attacking only an application for a preliminary injunction on the ground that no allegations of irreparable injury are contained therein, § 116.37 should be used. When defendant is attacking an application for a preliminary injunction because the complaint does not state a cause of action in general, § 116.52 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint for injunctive relief because it appears that defendant's conduct will not cause plaintiff any irreparable injury, § 116.54 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint for injunctive relief for failure to state a cause of action because it contains only general conclusions that plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury from defendant's conduct without supporting those conclusions with facts, § 116.55 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts, based on allegations in the complaint, demonstrating that the complaint only contains unsupported conclusions.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

In Bank of America v. Williams (1948) 89 Cal. App. 2d 21, 200 P.2d 151 , plaintiff bank had brought an action to have certain partnership properties standing in the defendants' names as well as a certain check declared to be the property of defendant Williams. It also sought to have this property applied to the payment of two judgments previously obtained by the plaintiff against defendant Williams on which Williams had made no payments. No affidavits were filed by any of the parties. The superior court issued an order granting plaintiff a preliminary injunction that enjoined defendants from paying to Williams any of the partnership assets involved and that also restrained defendants Williams and Fruhling from disposing of Williams' interest in any of the property involved. The order granting the preliminary injunction was subsequently modified, but Williams' general and special demurrers to the complaint were overruled. Williams' motion to dissolve and vacate the order granting the preliminary injunction was denied. Williams appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court of appeal first noted the law applicable to the appeal. While it is permissible to grant a preliminary injunction based solely on the allegations of a verified complaint, it is improper to grant an injunction based on those allegations if the complaint does not state a cause of action. Furthermore, if the complaint is the sole basis for the order and is treated as an affidavit, its sufficiency must be tested by the same rules applicable to oral testimony. Conclusions that might stand as a matter of pleading are not competent to justify the issuance of a preliminary injunction.

Tested by these standards, the court of appeal held that the complaint was insufficient to support the preliminary injunction. It noted that unless the complaint alleged that Williams had property during the five-year period after the last judgment involved and either had made false statements concerning the property or had concealed it during that period, the action was barred by a limitations statute, which provided that actions on judgments are normally barred within five years from their rendition. In this situation, the plaintiff's complaint had obviously refrained from making any positive statement with regard to Williams owning or possessing property prior to the time when the statute of limitations ran on the last judgment; it had also refrained from making any allegations that defendant Williams had made representations that were false and fraudulent prior to the time the statute of limitations had run on the last judgment. Hence, the court of appeal reversed the orders that granted the preliminary injunction and that denied the motion to vacate it (89 Cal. App. 2d 21, 23) .

In Willis v. Lauridson (1911) 161 Cal. 106, 118 P. 530 , plaintiff stockholder brought an action to restrain defendant cooperative association and certain stockholders from voting alleged illegal shares at the association's annual meeting to elect a board of directors. After the election, plaintiff's complaint alleged, the elected directors would vote into effect an illegal plan to declare a dividend to certain illegal shareholders. The superior court granted a preliminary injunction based on plaintiff's verified complaint; there were no affidavits filed in support of the complaint. Defendants moved to dissolve the preliminary injunction, but the superior court issued an order refusing to dissolve it. Defendants appealed from this order, and the Supreme Court reversed it.

Before examining the complaint, the Supreme Court stated some of the rules that govern the sufficiency of a complaint on which a preliminary injunction has issued. It observed that when a verified complaint is the basis for the relief sought, it takes the place of an affidavit and must be treated as such. The facts stated in such a complaint must stand the test to which oral testimony would be subjected. Averments that are but conclusions of law are not competent testimony even though they might stand as a matter of pleading. Unless a statement that is in the nature of a conclusion is supported by the facts or circumstances on which it rests, it is insufficient to sustain an application for an injunction. If the complaint otherwise unsupported is open to attack on a general demurrer, it is insufficient.

Even though the complaint alleged that defendants' acts would cause plaintiff great and irreparable injury and that no compensation could afford plaintiff adequate relief, the Supreme Court held that it failed to state facts sufficient to determine how plaintiff's property would be injured by the acts complained of. The Court pointed out that general conclusions as to the multiplicity of suits and irreparable injury that would be caused to plaintiff by defendant's acts do not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action (161 Cal. 106, 108) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

In Provident L. Corp. v. Provident I. Dist. (1937) 22 Cal. App. 2d 105, 79 P.2d 392 , plaintiff was a holder of bonds issued by defendant district. It brought an action to restrain defendant from entering into a certain lease. The superior court issued a temporary restraining order based on the complaint, but at the hearing on the order to show cause it dissolved that order and sustained the defendant's demurrer to the amended and supplemental complaints filed by plaintiff. It then entered a judgment of dismissal. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment, but the court of appeal affirmed. It observed that plaintiff's complaint contained only general allegations. Absolutely no specific facts were stated from which the court could infer that the conclusions drawn by the plaintiff were correct. Hence, the complaint was insufficient either to justify the issuance of an injunction or to state a cause of action therefor and, thus, the demurrer was properly sustained (22 Cal. App. 2d 105, 106-109) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.54

§ 116.54 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted If Injury Alleged in Complaint Does Not Appear Irreparable

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.52.]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF BECAUSE IT APPEARS FROM THE FACE OF THE COMPLAINT THAT DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT WILL NOT CAUSE PLAINTIFF ANY IRREPARABLE INJURY. FAIRLY READ, THE COMPLAINT STATES ONLY THAT _____ [summarize allegations regarding defendant's conduct], AND THE CONDUCT DESCRIBED, EVEN IF TRUE, WOULD NOT REASONABLY LEAD TO IRREPARABLE INJURY TO PLAINTIFF. THEREFORE, DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 116.52[1], Paragraph A.]

B. No Irreparable Injury. A complaint does not state a cause of action for an injunction when it does not appear therefrom that plaintiff would be irreparably damaged by the conduct of defendant (Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall (1882) 62 Cal. 416, 417-419 ; Duvall v. White (1920) 46 Cal. App. 305, 307-308, 189 P. 324).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint seeking injunctive relief when it appears from the complaint that defendant's conduct will not cause plaintiff any irreparable injury. This form may be used when defendant is attacking a cause of action that is seeking a preliminary injunction and a permanent injunction or is seeking only a permanent injunction.

When defendant is attacking only an application for a preliminary injunction on the ground that the application contains no sufficient allegations of irreparable injury, § 116.37 should be used. When defendant is attacking an application for a preliminary injunction because the complaint does not state a cause of action in general, § 116.52 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint that does not state a cause of action for injunctive relief because it contains only general conclusions that are not supported by facts, § 116.53 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint for injunctive relief for failure to state a cause of action because it contains only general conclusions that plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury from defendant's conduct without supporting those conclusions with facts, § 116.55 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts from the complaint demonstrating that even if the allegations are true (for the sake of argument), the conduct described by the complaint would not reasonably lead to irreparable injury to the plaintiff.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Irreparable Injury

In Mechanics' Foundry v. Ryall (1882) 62 Cal. 416 , plaintiff brought an action for an injunction and for damages to enjoin a former employee from trespassing on its premises. The superior court awarded a judgment in which it permanently restrained the employee from intruding into plaintiff's shop and awarded plaintiff damages. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Court stated that the complaint failed to state facts sufficient to warrant the interposition of a court of equity. Only by inference did the complaint charge defendant with committing a trespass. Moreover, it did not state that plaintiff's trespasses constituted irreparable injury or were destructive of plaintiff's property in its nature and substance. The Court held that plaintiff's remedies at law were adequate. Thus, the judgment was reversed (62 Cal. 416, 417-419) .

In Duvall v. White (1920) 46 Cal. App. 305, 189 P. 324 , plaintiffs brought an action to enjoin defendants from obstructing, diverting, or in any way interfering with the flow of oil away from plaintiffs' property. Defendants demurred, and the superior court sustained the demurrer and then entered judgment for defendants. Plaintiffs appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court held that the complaint failed to state a cause of action for an injunction. It did not appear from the complaint that the plaintiffs would be irreparably damaged by the threatened acts of the defendants. To the contrary, the complaint showed that plaintiffs would lose oil every day of the value of $15. Mere monetary loss is not ordinarily irreparable in the contemplation of the remedy of injunction, at least in situations when there is no showing that the parties causing the loss are insolvent or in any manner unable to respond in damages. In this situation, nothing in the complaint was inconsistent with the view that an action at law would afford a complete remedy for any injury that had been or would be suffered by plaintiffs (46 Cal. App. 305, 307-308) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.55

§ 116.55 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10]--Injunctive Relief Not Warranted if Complaint Contains Only Unsupported General Conclusions of Irreparable Injury

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.52[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF BECAUSE IT CONTAINS ONLY GENERAL CONCLUSIONS THAT PLAINTIFF WILL SUFFER IRREPARABLE INJURY FROM DEFENDANT'S CONDUCT WITHOUT SUPPORTING THOSE CONCLUSIONS EITHER BY FACTS IN THE COMPLAINT OR BY AFFIDAVITS/DECLARATIONS. THEREFORE, DEFENDANT'S DEMURRER SHOULD BE SUSTAINED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 116.52[1], Paragraph A.]

B. General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction. [See § 116.53[1], Paragraph B.]

C. General Conclusions Concerning Irreparable Injury Not Sufficient. General statements in a complaint that "great and irreparable injury will result" from the acts described are not sufficient. Such averments, standing alone, have no probative force and cannot be made the basis for injunctive relief. Facts concerning the irreparable injury that allegedly will result to the plaintiff unless injunctive relief is extended to him or her must be pleaded in order that the court may consider whether the plaintiff's apprehensions are well founded. A mere allegation that such injury will result is not sufficient (E. H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint seeking injunctive relief when the complaint on file does not state a cause of action because it contains only general conclusions that plaintiff will suffer irreparable injury from defendant's conduct without supporting those conclusions with facts. This form may be used when the defendant is attacking a cause of action that is seeking a preliminary injunction and a permanent injunction or is seeking only a permanent injunction.

When defendant is attacking only an application for a preliminary injunction on the ground that no allegations of irreparable injury are contained in it, § 116.37 should be used. When defendant is attacking an application for a preliminary injunction because the complaint does not state a cause of action in general, § 116.52 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint that does not state a cause of action for injunctive relief because it contains only general conclusions that are not supported by facts, § 116.54 should be used. When defendant is attacking a complaint for injunctive relief because it appears from it that defendant's conduct will not cause plaintiff any irreparable injury, § 116.53 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should establish, by reference to matters contained in the complaint, that the allegations of irreparable injury are actually unsupported by any facts in the complaint or in any accompanying affidavits or declarations. Therefore, counsel will be demonstrating that the complaint merely alleges general conclusions about irreparable injury.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] General Conclusions Concerning Irreparable Injury Not Sufficient

In E. H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 106 P.2d 1 , plaintiff corporation brought an action to restrain defendants from picketing its place of business and from conducting a secondary boycott by representing to plaintiff's customers that it was "unfair to organized labor." No affidavits were filed in support of the complaint. On the basis of the verified complaint and oral testimony at the hearing on the order to show cause, the superior court issued a preliminary injunction to that effect. Defendants appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction, and the Supreme Court reversed.

The Supreme Court observed that neither the complaint nor the oral testimony included facts showing that the plaintiff had suffered or would suffer any damage as a result of defendant's action. The Court declared that it is not enough to prove that one person did certain acts with an intent to injure another person. In order to entitle a plaintiff to injunctive relief, the burden is on the plaintiff to prove actual or threatened injury; a court may not infer this from mere proof of acts intended to harm. This omission is not cured by general statements in a complaint "that great and irreparable injury will result" from the acts described by the plaintiff. It has always been the rule in California that such averments, standing alone, have no probative force and cannot be made the basis for injunctive relief. Facts concerning the irreparable injury that, it is asserted, will result to the complainant unless protection is extended to him or her must be pleaded in order that the court may consider whether the plaintiff's apprehensions are well founded. A mere allegation that such injury will result is not sufficient. A complaint that alleges only general conclusions, not warranted by any pleading of facts, does not state a cause of action to enjoin the acts complained of. Hence, the Supreme Court reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction (16 Cal. 2d 369, 373) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] General Conclusions in Complaint Not Sufficient to Issue Injunction

In California etc. Co. v. Union etc. Co. (1898) 122 Cal. 641, 55 P. 591 , plaintiff brought an action to restrain defendant from making landings by vessel on certain real property bordering on the San Joaquin River and then receiving and delivering freight and passengers. Defendant interposed a general demurrer that was sustained by the superior court. After plaintiff refused to amend, the superior court entered judgment for defendant. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The Court observed that the complaint contained only a general averment as to the injury that had been or would be caused by defendant's acts. No facts were set out showing how or why the supposed injury would be irreparable. The Court stated, though, that in order to obtain an injunction when irreparable injury is relied on as the basis for granting it, such a showing is necessary. An injunction is never granted unless the complaint shows some vested right in the plaintiff that is likely to suffer great or irreparable injury from the act complained of. The mere allegation of such injury is insufficient. The facts stated must satisfy the court that such apprehension is well founded (122 Cal. 641, 643) .

In Golden Gate S. T., Inc., v. San Francisco (1937) 21 Cal. App. 2d 582, 69 P.2d 899 , plaintiff brought an action that sought to restrain the defendant city from enforcing a certain ordinance. Defendant's general demurrer to the complaint was sustained by the superior court, and a judgment of dismissal was entered. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment, but the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal noted that plaintiff had attempted to state a cause of action for injunctive relief by alleging that it would suffer irreparable injury if the ordinance were enforced. However, the court of appeal declared that merely using the expression "irreparable injury" is not sufficient. In this situation, plaintiff was not an established business. Hence, it could not suffer any irreparable injury because of the ordinance. Therefore, the demurrer was properly sustained (21 Cal. App. 2d 582, 586) .

In Martin v. Danziger (1913) 21 Cal. App. 563, 132 P. 284 , plaintiffs brought an action to obtain the right to possession of certain real property and ownership of the mineral deposits on it; the possession of the property was asserted on the basis of a mining claim. Defendants also asserted the right to possess the real property on the basis of a mining claim. The superior court granted a preliminary injunction on the basis of a verified complaint, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court noted that the complaint consisted of mere conclusions and that a mere allegation of irreparable injury does not constitute a ground for granting an injunction. Facts must be stated from which the court itself may see that irreparable injury will follow unless the commission thereof is restrained. The court pointed out that it was impossible to conceive how the plaintiffs could be irreparably injured by defendants' actions pending a determination of the merits of the action. Defendants only had been in possession of the real property and had been erecting an oil drilling rig thereon; they were not extracting or threatening to extract or take oil from the ground. Therefore, the order granting the preliminary injunction was reversed (21 Cal. App. 563, 564-566) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.56

§ 116.56 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Preliminary Injunction Granted Without Notice to Party Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR DISSOLU-
_____ [name],	)	TION OF PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION
Defendant.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION GRANTED WITHOUT PRIOR NOTICE TO THE OPPOSITE PARTY AS REQUIRED BY CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 527(a) IS VOID. IN THIS CASE, PLAINTIFF _____ [specify action taken, e.g., OBTAINED AN ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE FOR ISSUANCE OF A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION], BUT NEVER SERVED DEFENDANT WITH THE MOVING PAPERS OR OTHERWISE NOTIFIED DEFENDANT OF THE APPLICATION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF. THEREFORE, THE PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DISSOLVED.

Preliminary Injunction Void When No Notice Given. No preliminary injunction can be granted without notice to the opposite party (Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a)). A preliminary injunction that is granted without the prior notice required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 527(a) is void (Oksner v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 687, 40 Cal. Rptr. 621 ; Thompson & Holmes v. Superior Court (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 306, 307, 7 Cal. Rptr. 386).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in supporting a motion to dissolve a preliminary injunction when that relief has been granted without the prior notice required by Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a).

[B] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish a lack of proper notice of the moving party's application for injunctive relief to the other party.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of a notice of motion for an order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction and a form of such an order, see California Forms Of Pleadings And Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When No Notice Given

In Oksner v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 40 Cal. Rptr. 621 , the superior court had issued a preliminary injunction that enjoined the sale of a note and trust deed in an action to set aside a fraudulent conveyance. The preliminary injunction was granted on oral motion in open court without any previous notice as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a). The right to notice was not waived because the motion was made on the spur of the moment and without any information given to the party enjoined and its attorney prior to their appearing in court. Therefore, a judgment of contempt that subsequently had issued was annulled by the court of appeal. The court also issued a writ of mandate ordering the superior court to vacate the order granting the preliminary injunction (229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 687) .

In Thompson & Holmes v. Superior Court (1960) 184 Cal. App. 2d 306, 307, 7 Cal. Rptr. 386 , the superior court had issued a preliminary injunction that restrained the sale of certain real property under a deed of trust. The preliminary injunction was made on the court's own motion and not on notice as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 527(a). The persons restrained sought a writ of prohibition from the court of appeal to prevent the superior court from enforcing the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal noted that the preliminary injunction was void because it had not been made with the required notice. It observed that because the preliminary injunction was void, there was nothing to prohibit. However, because it was possible that further matters might arise under the order granting the preliminary injunction and because petitioners had shown a basis for relief, it issued a writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate the order granting the preliminary injunction (184 Cal. App. 2d 306, 307) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.57

§ 116.57 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Preliminary Injunction Granted Without Undertaking [Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.56.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION GRANTED WITHOUT THE UNDERTAKING REQUIRED BY CODE OF CIVIL PROCEDURE SECTION 529(a) IS VOID. IN THIS CASE, _____ [specify details involving lack of undertaking, e.g., THE INJUNCTION WAS GRANTED BUT NO UNDERTAKING WAS REQUIRED BY THE COURT AND THE CASE DOES NOT OTHERWISE COME WITHIN AN EXCEPTION TO THE UNDERTAKING REQUIREMENT]. THEREFORE, THE PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DISSOLVED.

Preliminary Injunction Void When Undertaking Not Required. On granting a preliminary injunction, the court or judge must require a written undertaking on the part of the applicant, with sufficient sureties, to the effect that the applicant will pay to the party enjoined any damages, not exceeding an amount to be specified, that the enjoined party may sustain as a result of the injunction if the court finally decides that the applicant was not entitled to the injunction (Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)). A preliminary injunction that is granted without the undertaking required by Code of Civil Procedure Section 529(a) is void (Oksner v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 687, 40 Cal. Rptr. 621 ; Miller v. Santa Margarita Land etc. Co. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 764, 765-766, 31 Cal. Rptr. 866) and must be dissolved on the motion of the party enjoined (Casitas Inv. Co. v. Charles L. Harney, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 811, 815, 21 Cal. Rptr. 821).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in supporting a motion to dissolve a preliminary injunction when that relief has been granted without the undertaking required by Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a).

Counsel should note that certain types of proceedings are exempt from the undertaking requirement, and that the undertaking may be waived for indigent persons [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 529(b), 995.240].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish that the court failed to require an undertaking, and the case does not fall within a statutory exception to the undertaking requirement. Reference to the order granting the injunction should be made to show the court's failure to require an undertaking.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of a notice of motion for an order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction and a form of such an order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When Undertaking Not Required

The facts and procedural background of Oksner v. Superior Court (1964) 229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 40 Cal. Rptr. 621 , are discussed in § 116.56[3][a]. In that case, although the superior court had issued a preliminary injunction to enjoin the sale of a note and trust deed, it did not require plaintiff to post a bond, something that plaintiff had earlier stated to the court that he would be unable to do.

The court of appeal held that, without the required bond, the preliminary injunction was a nullity. Therefore, a judgment of contempt that subsequently had issued was annulled by the court. It also issued a writ of mandate ordering the superior court to vacate its order granting the preliminary injunction that had enjoined the party from disposing of the note and trust deed (229 Cal. App. 2d 672, 687) .

In Miller v. Santa Margarita Land etc. Co. (1963) 217 Cal. App. 2d 764, 31 Cal. Rptr. 866 , plaintiff brought an action to quiet his title to an easement in a roadway over defendant's real property as well as to restrain that defendant and other defendants from interfering with the plaintiff's use of the road. The superior court issued an order that continued in effect a previously dissolved temporary restraining order that had enjoined defendants from interfering with plaintiff's use of the road. Defendants appealed from the order continuing in effect the temporary restraining order. The court of appeal treated the order as an order granting a preliminary injunction. It observed that the order was of no effect because it did not require the undertaking on the part of the plaintiff that is required by Code Civ. Proc. § 529. Hence, the order was reversed (217 Cal. App. 2d 764, 765-766) .

In Casitas Inv. Co. v. Charles L. Harney, Inc. (1962) 203 Cal. App. 2d 811, 21 Cal. Rptr. 821 , plaintiff brought an action to recover damages from one defendant for loss of lateral support of plaintiff's land and for a mandatory injunction ordering that defendant to provide satisfactory lateral support along the boundaries adjoining plaintiff's property. The action also sought to enjoin two other defendants from selling their property without first providing satisfactory support for plaintiff's land. The superior court issued a temporary restraining order against the two defendants as requested; it required a $10,000 bond when it originally issued the temporary restraining order against them. After the hearing on the order to show cause, the superior court issued preliminary injunctions that required the first defendant to provide the support necessary to stabilize the plaintiff's property and that required the other two defendants to permit access to and use of their property to accomplish the stabilization. However, the superior court failed to make any further reference to a bond when it dissolved the temporary restraining order after the hearing on the order to show cause; it also failed to mention a bond when it issued the preliminary injunction against the first defendant. The superior court later attempted to remedy that oversight by issuing a nunc pro tunc order that provided that the $10,000 bond filed pursuant to the temporary restraining order against the two defendants would continue in effect as security for the mandatory injunction against the first defendant.

On appeal from the order granting the mandatory preliminary injunction, the first defendant contended that the order had to be set aside because the superior court had issued the preliminary injunction without the bond or undertaking required by Code Civ. Proc. § 529. The court of appeal agreed with this contention. It noted the well-established rule that a preliminary injunction issued pending final determination of the cause of action must be supported by a bond or undertaking and, in the absence of such a bond, must be dissolved on the application of the party involved. It also observed that a bond given on the issuance of a temporary restraining order is not sufficient to support a preliminary injunction that is subsequently issued without requiring a new bond. Hence, it held that the trial court's nunc pro tunc order was clearly ineffectual to extend the bond to the mandatory preliminary injunction against defendant. Therefore, it reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction (203 Cal. App. 2d 811, 815-816) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preliminary Injunction Void When Undertaking Not Required

In Condor Enterprises, Ltd. v. Valley View State Bank (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 734, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 613 , the trial court granted a preliminary injunction in favor of plaintiff, a junior lienholder, to redeem property from defendant, a senior lienholder bank. The trial court neglected to require a bond in accordance with Code Civ. Proc. § 529. When the defendant failed to obey the injunction the trial court found it in contempt but declined to hold it in contempt because of the earlier failure to require a bond. Regardless of the acknowledged nullity of the injunction the trial court awarded sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 to plaintiff for the failure of the defendant to comply with the preliminary injunction. The court of appeal reversed the order for sanctions. The court held that the defendant could not commit a "punishable wrong" subject to sanctions under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 for refusing to obey an injunction which was invalid and void because of the failure to require a bond (25 Cal. App. 4th 734, 741-742) .

In City of South San Francisco v. Cypress Lawn Cemetery Ass'n (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 916 , a trial court issued a temporary restraining order on the complaint of plaintiff city and required it to provide an undertaking under Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a). Plaintiff complied, but later, the trial court dissolved the TRO and denied plaintiff's request for a preliminary injunction. After plaintiff dismissed the complaint, defendant association moved for an order to enforce the surety's liability on the city's undertaking, to the extent of the association's economic loss because of a construction delay caused by the TRO. A trial court granted the motion and entered a money judgment against the surety despite the city's and surety's objection that the court never had authority to require the city to provide the undertaking [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 529(b)(3), 995.220]. Although the court of appeal reversed the judgment, thereby upholding the policy that creates an exemption from the undertaking requirement for public entities, it noted that the purpose of requiring security is to afford compensation to the party wrongly enjoined or restrained, and that a trial court possesses inherent power to condition the issuance of an injunction in favor of a private party on the posting of security; however, the Legislature regulates the operation of that power (11 Cal. App. 4th 916, 920-923) .

In Neumann v. Moretti (1905) 146 Cal. 31, 79 P. 512 , plaintiff brought an action to secure the cancellation of a certain note and mortgage executed by plaintiff to defendant. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained defendant and his agents from assigning or transferring or disposing of the promissory note and mortgage. Defendant moved to dissolve the preliminary injunction on the ground that the court had failed to require a written undertaking as required by statute. The superior court issued an order refusing to dissolve the preliminary injunction, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court reversed that order. It noted that it was the duty of the court to require an undertaking pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 529, and that a preliminary injunction will be dissolved in case of a failure to give such an undertaking. It stated that, if a preliminary injunction is improperly issued without complying with Code Civ. Proc. § 529, a defendant has the right to have it dissolved. Hence, the Supreme Court reversed the order refusing to dissolve the preliminary injunction (146 Cal. 31, 33-34) .

In Federal Automotive Services v. Lane Buick Co. (1962) 204 Cal. App. 2d 689, 22 Cal. Rptr. 603 , plaintiff brought an action against defendant for tortious interference with its contractual relations by falsely representing to many of plaintiff's customers that plaintiff was unreliable, insolvent, and unable to perform its contracts for delivery of automobiles, thereby inducing the customers to breach their contracts or to refrain from doing business with plaintiff and to purchase automobiles from defendant on the further representation by defendant that it would secure a refund of any down payment that had been made to plaintiff under the contracts involved. Plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction that enjoined defendant from interfering with plaintiff's customers or prospective customers by making representations, through its agents or employees, that plaintiff was insolvent and could not furnish goods and services contracted for, and from persuading and inducing plaintiff's customers to breach and cancel their contracts with plaintiff by making false and malicious representations for the purpose of injuring competitors and destroying competition. Defendant appealed, and the court of appeal reversed. The court observed that the order granting the preliminary injunction did not provide for a bond as required by Code Civ. Proc. § 529. Hence, the court held that the preliminary injunction issued was inoperative and of no effect because it did not provide for the required bond (204 Cal. App. 2d 689, 694-695) .

In Griffin v. Lima (1954) 124 Cal. App. 2d 697, 269 P.2d 191 , plaintiff filed a complaint for specific performance of an alleged collective bargaining agreement and for preliminary and permanent injunctions. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction as prayed for in the complaint. Defendants appealed, and the court of appeal reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. One of the defendants' contentions was that the order granting the preliminary injunction was void and inoperative because no bond was required from plaintiffs pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 529. The court of appeal agreed with this contention. It noted that it is clear that a preliminary injunction does not become operative until a bond is furnished and that such a bond is expressly required. Hence, the court held that the order granting the preliminary injunction was inoperative and of no effect (124 Cal. App. 2d 697, 699-700) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.58

§ 116.58 Supporting Motion for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Bond Furnished in Support of Preliminary Injunction Is Deficient

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.56.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION THAT IS SUPPORTED BY A DEFICIENT BOND OR UNDERTAKING MUST BE DISSOLVED. IN THIS CASE, ALTHOUGH THE COURT ORDERED THAT AN UNDERTAKING BE POSTED IN THE AMOUNT OF $_____, THE _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] POSTED AN UNDERTAKING IN THE AMOUNT OF $_____, WHICH IS CLEARLY DEFICIENT AND NOT IN COMPLIANCE WITH THE COURT'S ORDER. THEREFORE, THE INJUNCTION SHOULD BE DISSOLVED.

Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction Supported by Deficient Bond. A preliminary injunction that is supported by a bond that is deficient because it does not equal the amount required by the court must be dissolved on motion of the enjoined party (Rees v. Gardner (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 469, 471, 17 Cal. Rptr. 93).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in supporting a motion to dissolve a preliminary injunction when that relief has been granted without the full amount of the undertaking required by the court. In other words, the bond supporting the preliminary injunction is deficient. If no undertaking was ordered at all, the points and authorities in § 116.57 should be used.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish the amount of the undertaking ordered by the court and the amount of the undertaking, if any, actually furnished.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as a form of a notice of motion for an order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction and a form of such an order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction Supported by Deficient Bond

In Rees v. Gardner (1961) 197 Cal. App. 2d 469, 17 Cal. Rptr. 93 , plaintiffs brought an action for an injunction and for damages. They also sought a preliminary injunction requiring reinstatement of two of defendant's employees. Defendant cross complained and also sought a preliminary injunction to prohibit plaintiffs' picketing of his business. The superior court granted both preliminary injunctions. The employees were ordered reinstated, and the number and location of pickets were restricted. The court required bonds in the amount of $1,000 on each injunction. Defendant subsequently moved for a preliminary injunction against all picketing under a then-recent decision of the Supreme Court. The superior court granted this preliminary injunction as well. It required a $3,000 bond that was later reduced to $2,000. Defendant, however, only posted a $1,000 bond. Plaintiff moved to vacate the preliminary injunction on the ground that the bond had been tardily posted and was insufficient. This motion was denied, and plaintiffs appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction as well as the order denying the motion to vacate it.

One of plaintiffs' contentions on appeal was that the bond posted in support of the preliminary injunction was insufficient. The court of appeal agreed and reversed the orders. The court observed that defendant did not account for the fact that only a bond of $1,000 was posted in response to the order fixing a bond at $2,000. Hence, the bond was deficient and the motion to dissolve the preliminary injunction should have been granted on that ground. Therefore, the preliminary injunction was ineffective because of the defendant's failure to comply with its terms as to the bond required. Thus, the court of appeal reversed both orders (197 Cal. App. 2d 469, 471) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to Alter & AmendCivil ProcedureJudgmentsRelief From JudgmentMotions to VacateCivil ProcedureRemediesInjunctionsPreliminary & Temporary InjunctionsLabor & Employment LawCollective Bargaining & Labor RelationsStrikes & Work Stoppages

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.59

§ 116.59 Supporting Motion for Dissolution or Modification of Preliminary Injunction or Temporary Restraining Order--Required by Change in Facts or Law, or to Serve Ends of Justice [Code Civ. Proc. § 533]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR _____ [DISSOLUTION or MODIFICATION] OF _____ [(PRELIMINARY) INJUNCTION or TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER]
vs.	)
_____ [name],	)
Defendant.	)
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

THE COURT MAY _____ [MODIFY or DISSOLVE] A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION OR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER ON A SHOWING THAT _____ [THERE HAS BEEN A MATERIAL CHANGE IN FACTS and/or THE LAW HAS CHANGED and/or THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE SERVED]. IN THIS CASE, _____ [set forth applicable changes in facts or law or other reasons why justice would be served by modifying or dissolving the injunction or restraining order]. THEREFORE, UNDER

THE CIRCUMSTANCES, THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE BEST SERVED BY _____ [MODIFYING or DISSOLVING] THE _____ [PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION or TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER] IN THIS ACTION.

A. Dissolution or Modification of Preliminary Injunction or Temporary Restraining Order. In any action, the court may on notice modify or dissolve an injunction or temporary restraining order upon a showing that there has been a material change in the facts upon which the injunction or temporary restraining order was granted, that the law upon which the injunction or temporary restraining order was granted has changed, or that the ends of justice would be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction or temporary restraining order (Code Civ. Proc. § 533).

[Optional] B. Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances. A trial court has the inherent power to dissolve or modify a preliminary injunction in order to preserve the status quo when there has been a change in circumstances after the time it was originally issued (Union Interchange, Inc. v. Savage (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 601, 604, 342 P.2d 249 ; Lee v. Gates (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 989, 994, 190 Cal. Rptr. 682 ; Harbor Chevrolet Corp. v. Machinists Local Union 1484 (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 380, 384, 343 P.2d 640).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memoranda is for use in supporting a motion for the dissolution or modification of a preliminary injunction or temporary restraining order based on a showing that there has been a material change in the facts on which the injunction or temporary restraining order was granted, that the law on which the injunction or temporary restraining order was granted has changed, or that the ends of justice would be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction or temporary restraining order [Code Civ. Proc. § 533].

The form in § 116.60 should be used to seek dissolution or modification of a permanent injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the facts or law on which the injunction or temporary restraining order was granted have changed, how the change merits modification or dissolution of the preliminary injunction or temporary restraining order, or how the ends of justice would otherwise be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction or temporary restraining order. Note that the party moving to dissolve the injunction has the burden of proof on these issues [Loeffler v. Medina (2009) 174 Cal. App. 4th 1495, 1504, 95 Cal. Rptr. 3d 343].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the dissolution or modification of injunctions and for forms of notice for an order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction, as well as such an order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances

In Union Interchange, Inc. v. Savage (1959) 52 Cal. 2d 601, 342 P.2d 249 , plaintiffs filed a complaint for declaratory relief and an injunction. They sought a declaration that their business operations were outside the scope of certain amendments to the Business and Professions Code relating to the regulation of real estate and business opportunities transactions. In the alternative, they sought a declaration that those sections were unconstitutional. They sought a preliminary injunction to stay enforcement of the amendments pending the action for declaratory relief and a permanent injunction restraining such enforcement after hearing and decision on the merits. The superior court granted the preliminary injunction. Nearly two years later, defendants presented a motion to vacate the preliminary injunction, together with supporting affidavits and points and authorities. The motion was based on the grounds that plaintiffs' activities were unlawful under legislation enacted before the effective date of the amendments and that there had been a recent decision in another state holding plaintiffs' activities unlawful. The trial court denied the motion to vacate the preliminary injunction, and the defendants appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed the order.

The Supreme Court rejected plaintiffs' contention that the order had to be affirmed on the ground that the trial court lacked jurisdiction to vacate the preliminary injunction pending the trial on the merits. It held that the principle first enunciated in Sontag Chain Stores Co. v. Superior Court (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 92, 94-95, 113 P.2d 689 , discussed in § 116.60[3][a], was applicable to preliminary injunctions as well as permanent injunctions. Under that principle, a trial court has inherent power to modify or vacate a permanent preventive injunction on a showing that there has been a change in the controlling facts on which the injunction rested, or the law has been changed, modified, or extended, or when there the ends of justice would be served by modification. Applying this principle to preliminary injunctions, the Court stated that whether a preventive injunction is permanent or preliminary in form is not significant. Unforeseeable circumstances necessitating modification or dissolution of the injunction may occur in either case. When the decree is continuing in nature, directed at future events, it must be subject to adaptation as events may shape the need. In the case of a preliminary injunction, there may be need for adaptability to maintain the status quo pending final determination of the matter in controversy.

Nevertheless, the Supreme Court concluded that the superior court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to vacate the preliminary injunction pending a hearing on the merits. Such decisions rest in the sound discretion of the trial court on a consideration of all the particular circumstances of each individual case, and they will not be modified or dissolved on appeal except for an abuse of discretion (52 Cal. 2d 601, 604-606) .

In Lee v. Gates (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 989, 190 Cal. Rptr. 682 , the trial court had granted plaintiffs a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of city ordinances banning nude dancing. While the case was on appeal, the California Supreme Court decided the case of Morris v. Municipal Court (1982) 32 Cal. 3d 553, 186 Cal. Rptr. 494, 652 P.2d 51 , holding such ordinances unconstitutional, and transferred this case again to the court of appeal for reconsideration in light of Morris. Defendants argued that, because they had ceased to enforce the now unconstitutional ordinances, the case should be dismissed and the preliminary injunction dissolved. The court of appeal reversed and ordered the case dismissed.

The court noted the differences between the federal and California rules for mootness, primarily the federal requirement that the effects of the alleged violation be completely and irrevocably eradicated by the changed circumstances, a requirement not adopted by the California authorities [citing County of Los Angeles v. Davis (1979) 440 U.S. 625, 99 S. Ct. 1379, 59 L. Ed. 2d 642 (federal rule), and People v. National Association of Realtors (1981) 120 Cal. App. 3d 459, 476, 174 Cal. Rptr. 728 (California rule)] . As the city had in good faith discontinued enforcement of the ordinances, and as there was no indication that the acts would probably recur, the court held that under California law the action was moot. Under the circumstances, the court concluded that dismissal of the action was the proper result given the changed circumstances caused by the Morris decision and the city's response to it (141 Cal. App. 3d 989, 993-994) .

In Harbor Chevrolet Corp. v. Machinists Local Union 1484 (1959) 173 Cal. App. 2d 380, 343 P.2d 640 , plaintiff corporation brought an action for breach of contract against defendant unions. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction enjoining defendants from picketing in violation of their alleged agreement with plaintiff. The court of appeal observed that the preliminary injunction was obviously granted by the court for the purpose of preventing injury to plaintiff's business pending an early trial. After eight months had passed, the superior court granted defendants' motion to dissolve the preliminary injunction.

Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the order dissolving the preliminary injunction. It noted that the general purpose of a preliminary injunction is to preserve the status quo until the merits of the action can be determined. Further, the granting of a preliminary injunction is within the discretion of the trial court; its action with respect to the denying or dissolving of a preliminary injunction theretofore granted will not be disturbed on appeal except when it appears that the trial court has abused its discretion. In the present case, there was no such abuse of discretion because plaintiff could show no effort on its part to have the matter set for trial even though the preliminary injunction had been in effect for eight months (173 Cal. App. 2d 380, 384) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.60

§ 116.60 Supporting Motion for Dissolution or Modification of Permanent Injunction--Required by Change in Facts or Law, or to Serve Ends of Justice [Civ. Code § 3424(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.59.]

THE COURT MAY _____ [MODIFY or DISSOLVE] A FINAL INJUNCTION ON A SHOWING THAT _____ [THERE HAS BEEN A MATERIAL CHANGE IN FACTS and/or THE LAW HAS CHANGED and/or THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE SERVED. IN THIS CASE, _____ [set forth applicable changes in facts or law or other reasons why justice would be served by modifying or dissolving the injunction]. THEREFORE, UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, THE ENDS OF JUSTICE WOULD BE BEST SERVED BY _____ [MODIFYING or DISSOLVING] THE INJUNCTION IN THIS ACTION.

A. Dissolution or Modification of Final Injunction. Upon notice and motion, the court may modify or dissolve a final injunction upon a showing that there has been a material change in the facts upon which the injunction was granted, that the law upon which the injunction was granted has changed, or that the ends of justice would be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction (Civ. Code § 3424(a)).

[Optional] B. Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances. A trial court has the inherent power to dissolve or modify a permanent injunction when the circumstances and situations of the parties have so changed as to render such action just and equitable. This power may be exercised either when there has been a change in the controlling facts on which the injunction rested, when the law has been changed, modified, or extended, or when the ends of justice would be served by modification (Sontag Chain Stores Co. v. Superior Court (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 92, 95, 113 P.2d 689 ; Welsch v. Goswick (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 398, 404-405, 181 Cal. Rptr. 703 ; Little v. Schwartz (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 594, 597-598, 6 Cal. Rptr. 40).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities are for use in supporting a motion for either the dissolution or the modification of a permanent injunction based on a showing that there has been a material change in the facts on which the injunction was granted, that the law on which the injunction was granted has changed, or that the ends of justice would be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction [Civ. Code § 3424(a)]. Note that this provision does not apply to any final injunction issued pursuant to the Family Code [Civ. Code § 3424(c)].

§ 116.59 should be used to seek dissolution or modification of a preliminary injunction or temporary restraining order.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the facts or law on which the injunction was granted have changed, how the change merits modification or dissolution of the injunction, or how the ends of justice would otherwise be served by the modification or dissolution of the injunction.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the dissolution or modification of injunctions and for a form of notice for an order dissolving or modifying a preliminary injunction as well as a form of such an order, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Court's Inherent Power When There Has Been Change in Circumstances

In Sontag Chain Stores Co. v. Superior Court (1941) 18 Cal. 2d 92, 113 P.2d 689 , plaintiff brought an action to restrain defendant labor unions from picketing its place of business. It obtained a judgment to that effect, and several months later defendant unions moved the superior court to vacate or set aside the injunction. When the court indicated its intention to entertain the motion and act on it, plaintiff petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition. The basis of the petition was plaintiff's contention that the decree granting the injunction was a final judgment that could not later be vacated or modifed.

The Supreme Court rejected this argument and therefore refused to issue the writ. It held that such a decree is always subject, on a proper showing, to modification or dissolution by the court that rendered it. A trial court has the inherent power to vacate or modify a judgment granting an injunction when the circumstances and situation of the parties have so changed as to render such action just and equitable. This power may be exercised either when there has been a change in the controlling facts on which the injunction rested, when the law has been changed, modified, or extended, or when the ends of justice would be served by modification (18 Cal. 2d 92, 95) .

In Welsch v. Goswick (1982) 130 Cal. App. 3d 398, 181 Cal. Rptr. 703 , the owners of a plot of land had stipulated to a permanent injunction enforcing a land use prohibition in a restrictive covenant. The court of appeal stated that while a court's decision to continue, modify, or dissolve a permanent injunction will not be set aside on appeal absent a showing of abuse of discretion, sound judicial discretion calls for modification of a stipulated injunction decree when circumstances of law existing at the time of issuance have changed, making the original decree inequitable. In the present case, the court held that due to a change in circumstances of law, the reasonable interpretation of the restrictive covenant on which the injunction was based had changed, making enforcement of the prohibition against the owners of the plot inequitable. Thus, the court held that the trial court had abused its discretion in declining to modify the stipulated injunction (130 Cal. App. 3d 398, 404-405, 408) .

In Little v. Schwartz (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 594, 6 Cal. Rptr. 40 , plaintiff brought a quiet title action against defendant. Plaintiff recovered a judgment quieting his title to a right-of-way passing over defendant's real property and also enjoining defendant from maintaining a lock on the gates of his property. Ten years after plaintiff recovered this judgment, defendant moved the superior court to modify the injunctive portion of the judgment to permit him to lock the gates to the driveway on the basis of a change of circumstances that had resulted in considerable damage to his property over which the right of way passed. The superior court denied the motion on the ground that there was no way in which the modification could lawfully be effected. Defendant appealed and contended that any kind of permanent preventive injunction--even one incorporated in a quiet title judgment--may be modified on an adequate showing of a change of circumstances. It noted the principle that the trial court has the inherent power to modify a permanent, preventive injunction on a showing that there has been a change in the controlling facts on which the injunction rested, when the law has been changed, modified, or extended, or when the ends of justice would be served by modification.

The court of appeal noted that the record demonstrated without question a change in the controlling facts (from relatively uninhabited ranch land to relatively populated subdivisions) on which the injunction rested. Because the sole purpose for which defendant desired to install locks was to keep trespassers off his property and was not to interfere with plaintiff's use of the right-of-way, the court of appeal held that the injunction portion of the original judgment was subject to modification to serve the ends of justice and that the superior court had the power to change or amend that judgment (182 Cal. App. 2d 594, 597-598) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.61

§ 116.61 Supporting Motion for Stay of Permanent Injunction Pending Appeal From Judgment

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)
Plaintiff,	)	NO. _____
vs.	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name],	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR STAY OF Defendant.	)	PERMANENT INJUNCTION PENDING APPEAL
	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
		Dept.: _____

_____

A PERMANENT INJUNCTION MAY BE STAYED BY THE COURT ON MOTION OF THE PARTY AFFECTED BY THE INJUNCTION TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO PENDING AN APPEAL OF THE JUDGMENT GRANTING THE INJUNCTION. IN THIS CASE, A STAY OF THE INJUNCTION IS NEEDED TO PRESERVE THE STATUS QUO, BECAUSE _____ [specify reason(s)]. THEREFORE, THE MOTION FOR A STAY SHOULD BE GRANTED.

Stay of Injunction Pending Appeal. When a court has entered a judgment granting injunctive relief and the party affected by the judgment plans to appeal from the judgment, the court may, in order to preserve the status quo between the parties, stay the effect of the judgment granting the injunction until such time as the appeal is determined (City of San Diego v. Southern etc. Tel. Corp. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 110, 120, 266 P.2d 14 ; Tulare Irr. Dist. v. Superior Court (1925) 197 Cal. 649, 665, 242 P. 725).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for a stay of a permanent injunction pending appeal from the judgment.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish why a stay should be granted to preserve the status quo pending appeal.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms for use in obtaining a stay of enforcement of a superior court judgment, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 43, Appeal: Stay of Proceedings (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stay of Injunction Pending Appeal

In City of San Diego v. Southern etc. Tel. Corp. (1954) 42 Cal. 2d 110, 266 P.2d 14 , plaintiff city and defendant company were involved in a controversy over the amount that the company had to pay the city for the use of its public streets. The superior court had issued a judgment that computed the amount owed to the city by the company; it also had issued a conditional injunction. The injunction had been conditioned on the company's paying, under the terms of an expired franchise, for the use of the city's streets pending determination of the appeal. Even though the court of appeal reversed the method of computation utilized by the superior court, it held that the type of conditional injunction issued by the superior court was proper. It rejected the city's contention that the superior court did not have the power to stay the injunction unless it required the company to continue to use the same method of accounting that it had used previously. The court of appeal stated that the superior court's jurisdiction was not so limited. It noted that a superior court may protect the parties on appeal by providing that its injunction or order is stayed under conditions that protect the appellant by preserving the subject matter of the appeal pending the outcome thereof and, at the same time, that protect the respondent by saving to it the benefits of the judgment in the event of an affirmance (42 Cal. 2d 110, 120) .

In Tulare Irr. Dist. v. Superior Court (1925) 197 Cal. 649, 242 P. 725 , plaintiffs had commenced an action against defendant irrigation district to obtain a permanent injunction restraining it from pumping water from certain property for use in its district. The superior court had decided to enter a judgment granting the injunction, but on motion of defendant it also decided to enter an order staying the injunction pending appeal. Plaintiffs petitioned the court of appeal for a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from making the order.

The court of appeal stated that the question before it was whether the superior court had the power, in the exercise of sound discretion, to suspend the operation of the injunction to which it had decided the plaintiff was entitled pending an appeal from the judgment. After examining the relevant authorities, the court answered that question in the affirmative and thus denied the writ. It noted that to recognize the constitutional right of a defendant to appeal from a judgment and at the same time deny the right of a trial court to prevent the appeal from becoming nugatory would be, in effect, to deny the right to appeal itself (197 Cal. 649, 673) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.62

§ 116.62 Opposing Application for Dissolution of Preliminary Injunction--Undertaking Waived or Forfeited by Party to Be Enjoined [Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.56 .]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY BE WAIVED OR FORFEITED BY THE PARTY TO BE ENJOINED. IN THIS CASE, THE _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] WAIVED AN UNDERTAKING BY _____ [specify details involving waiver, e.g., FAILING TO _____].

Preliminary Injunction May be Granted Without Undertaking When Undertaking Waived. On granting a preliminary injunction, the court or judge must require a written undertaking on the part of the applicant, to the effect that the applicant will pay to the party enjoined any damages, not exceeding an amount to be specified, that the enjoined party may sustain as a result of the injunction if the court finally decides that the applicant was not entitled to the injunction (Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a)). However, the undertaking may be waived or forfeited by the party to be enjoined (Smith v. Adventist Health System/West (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 729, 740-744, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 318).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This form is for use in opposing a motion to dissolve a preliminary injunction when that relief has been granted without the undertaking required by Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a).

Counsel should further note that certain types of proceedings are exempt from the undertaking requirement, and that the undertaking may be waived for indigent persons [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 529(b), 995.240].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish that the party to be enjoined waived the requirement of an undertaking in by Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Party to be Enjoined Waived or Forfeited Undertaking Requirement

In Smith v. Adventist Health System/West (2010) 182 Cal. App. 4th 729, 740-744, 106 Cal. Rptr. 3d 318 , the plaintiff and the defendants had ongoing disputes about the plaintiff's privileges and medical staff membership at the defendant hospitals. When the plaintiff reapplied to the defendants for privileges, the defendants rejected the application because the plaintiff did not satisfy a 36-month waiting period. The plaintiff filed an action for a preliminary injunction, a permanent injunction, and damages. The plaintiff's brief in support of the preliminary injunction stated that a bond was unnecessary. The defendants' opposing briefs did not mention the bond issue. During the hearing on the injunction, the parties argued the merits of the plaintiff's claims, but did not discuss the injunction bond issue. The trial court granted the injunction and held that an injunction bond was not required. On appeal, the defendants argued that pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 529(a), the injunction was invalid if not accompanied by a bond.

The court of appeal first noted that Civil Code § 3513 provides that "Any one may waive the advantage of a law intended solely for his benefit" [182 Cal. App. 4th 729, 740] . The court then noted that there are exceptions to the bond requirement as set forth in Civil Code § 995.230 (consent to bond in lesser amount) and § 995.240 (waiver of bond for indigents) [182 Cal. App. 4th 729, 740] . Thus, the court concluded that waiver or forfeiture of the bond requirement is possible. On the facts of the case, the court concluded that the defendants were aware of the plaintiff's position regarding the bond, but did not oppose that position in writing or at the hearing. Therefore, the court concluded, substantial evidence supported the trial court's implied finding that the defendants waived the bond requirement [182 Cal. App. 4th 729, 745-747].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
A. Injunctive Relief in General

11-116 California Points & Authorities §§ 116.63-116.79

[Reserved]

§§ 116.63[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.80

§ 116.80 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unconstitutional or Invalid Statute or Ordinance

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN THE EXECUTION OF AN UNCONSTITUTIONAL OR INVALID STATUTE OR ORDINANCE. IN THIS CASE, THE _____ [STATUTE or ORDINANCE] IS CLEARLY UNCONSTITUTIONAL BECAUSE _____ [specify grounds]. THEREFORE, THE APPLICATION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE GRANTED.

Unconstitutional or Invalid Enactment. A preliminary injunction may be granted to restrain the execution of an unconstitutional or invalid statute or ordinance (Conover v. Hall (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 842, 849-850, 114 Cal. Rptr. 642, 523 P.2d 682 ; Hillman v. Britton (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 810, 826, 168 Cal. Rptr. 852).

[Add points and authorities supporting argument that statute or ordinance at issue is unconstitutional or otherwise invalid.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief in order to restrain the execution of an unconstitutional or invalid statute or ordinance. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts and legal arguments establishing that the statute or ordinance in question is unconstitutional, or otherwise in contravention of supervening legal authority. If any prior cases have already held the particular statute or ordinance unconstitutional, counsel should cite those cases in the argument.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional or Invalid Enactment

In Conover v. Hall (1974) 11 Cal. 3d 842, 114 Cal. Rptr. 642, 523 P.2d 682 , the superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained defendant state officials from implementing Welf. & Inst. Code § 11451.6 [repealed by Stats. 1997, ch. 270, § 139], insofar as the action would result in the imposition of a $50.00 maximum allowance on work-related expenses exclusive of child care.

The Supreme Court affirmed the issuance of the preliminary injunction. Defendants argued that former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd, (4) and former Civ. Code § 3423(4) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4) and Civ. Code § 3423(d), respectively) prohibited the superior court from enjoining the administration of a duly-enacted statute. The Supreme Court observed, however, that many cases interpreting those sections hold that their provisions do not apply to an unconstitutional or invalid statute or ordinance and that courts have full authority to enjoin the execution of such enactments. Thus, because the superior court had properly found that the challenged statute was invalid under federal law, it had jurisdiction to restrain its execution (11 Cal. 3d 842, 849-850) .

In Hillman v. Britton (1980) 111 Cal. App. 3d 810, 168 Cal. Rptr. 852 , a Fresno municipal ordinance prohibited charitable or religious solicitations without a license. Violations were subject to misdemeanor prosecution. When plaintiffs engaged in charitable solicitations to support their church without having first obtained a license, they were threatened with criminal prosecution. They requested a preliminary injunction to enjoin enforcement of the ordinance, alleging that it was unconstitutional. However, the trial court denied their request.

On appeal, respondents contended that appellants lacked standing to bring the action because they never applied for or were denied a license, nor were they under arrest for engaging in solicitation. However, the court of appeal held that plaintiffs had standing because the threat of imminent criminal prosecution if they asserted their First Amendment rights was an adequate showing of irreparable injury. The court also held that the ordinance violated plaintiffs' procedural due process rights since it contained no limitation on the time period in which the controller could approve or deny the license. Procedural due process, it explained, required a prompt administrative decision and reasonably prompt access to the courts. This ordinance, they noted, provided neither. The court also found that plaintiffs' substantive due process rights were violated since the ordinance failed to provide narrow, objective standards to guide the controller's decisions. Since many of the standards enumerated in the ordinance were vague and overbroad, the controller had excessive discretion in determining which application would gain approval.

Based on the constitutional defects in the ordinance, the court concluded that there was a substantial likelihood that plaintiffs would prevail on the merits. Since irreparable injury was shown, the court reversed and remanded to the trial court with directions that a preliminary injunction be issued (111 Cal. App. 3d 810, 826) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional or Invalid Enactment

In Wheeler v. Herbert (1907) 152 Cal. 224, 92 P. 353 , the Legislature had passed a statute providing that, on the passing of a proposition at a special election, a portion of the territory in Fresno County would be transferred to Kings County. Plaintiff was a resident and taxpayer in the territory that would be subject to this transfer, and he brought suit to enjoin defendant public officials from proceeding any further under authority of the statute, which, he alleged, was unconstitutional and void. The superior court issued a judgment as prayed, and defendants appealed to the Supreme Court. They contended that former Civ. Code § 3423(4), (6) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d), (f)), prohibited the issuance of the injunction.

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment, but enunciated several principles concerning injunctions against statutes. It stated that defendants' argument necessarily assumed that the statute had validity and created public offices, the incumbents of which were authorized to perform the acts complained of. The statutes refer solely to injunctions against the execution of valid statutes and the exercise of offices having a legal existence. The Court stated that a suit for injunctive relief by a person specially interested to prevent the attempted execution of a void statute and the exercise of an office claimed to have been created thereby but, in fact and in law, nonexistent, is a proper remedy to obtain the relief required. However, the Court concluded that the statute was valid and that the superior court should not have enjoined the execution of it (152 Cal. 224, 227-228, 241) .

Hunter v. City of Whittier (1989) 209 Cal. App. 3d 588, 257 Cal. Rptr. 559 , was an action by homeowners to enjoin enforcement of a city ordinance regulating installation of satellite television receiving antennas on residentially owned property. The basis for the action was that that local regulation was preempted by regulations of the Federal Communications Commission unless local law met specific standards set forth in the regulations, and the local ordinance, enacted prior to adoption of the federal regulations, did not comply with those regulations.

In affirming the trial court's order granting a preliminary injunction, the court of appeal said that although ordinarily an appeal from the granting of a preliminary injunction involves a very limited review of the trial court's exercise of discretion concerning two factors (likelihood that plaintiffs will ultimately prevail and interim harm plaintiffs will sustain if preliminary injunction is denied compared to interim harm defendant will suffer if injunction is granted), occasionally the likelihood of prevailing on the merits depends on a question of pure law rather than on evidence to be introduced at a subsequent full trial. The court said the issue can arise, for example, when it is contended that an ordinance or statute is unconstitutional on its face and that no factual controversy remains to be tried. If such a question of pure law is presented, it can sometimes be determinative over the other factor as, for example, when the defendant shows that the plaintiff's interpretation is wrong as a matter of law and thus the plaintiff has no possibility of success on the merits. The court explained that even when the question of law is not entirely determinative, it may be appropriate for an appellate court to express its opinion in order to clarify or narrow the issues for trial. The court concluded that this was such a case and that the city ordinance did not comply with the federal regulations (209 Cal. App. 3d 588, 595-599) .

The facts and procedural background of Ketchens v. Reiner (1987) 194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 239 Cal. Rptr. 549 are discussed in § 116.21[3][a]. In that case, plaintiff was charged with violation of certain Education Code provisions and requested that prosecution cease on the ground that the provisions were unconstitutionally vague and overbroad. Plaintiff (and a co-plaintiff taxpayer) moved for a preliminary injunction, and their application for a temporary restraining order was granted. However, after the hearing on the order to show cause, a preliminary injunction was denied and the temporary restraining order was dissolved.

The court of appeal reversed. The court said that trial courts should evaluate two interrelated factors when deciding whether to issue a preliminary injunction. The first is the likelihood that the plaintiff will prevail on the merits at trial. The second is the interim harm that the plaintiff is likely to sustain if the injunction were denied as compared to the harm that the defendant is likely to suffer if the preliminary injunction were issued (194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 474) . After concluding that the statutes were both unconstitutionally overbroad and vague, the court held that it was likely that plaintiffs would prevail at trial and that the loss of First Amendment freedoms (freedom of speech) for even minimal periods of time, unquestionably constitutes irreparable injury. Thus, said the court, plaintiffs satisfied both elements necessary for the issuance of a preliminary injunction, and found that the trial court abused its discretion in denying their motion (194 Cal. App. 3d 470, 478-480) .

In American Booksellers Assn., Inc. v. Superior Court (1982) 129 Cal. App. 3d 197, 181 Cal. Rptr. 33 , two cities passed ordinances, aimed at protecting minors, that restricted the display of sexually explicit material in retail stores. The ordinances imposed various requirements on merchants to seal, cover, or place the materials out of reach of minors. Merchants who chose not to comply with the ordinance had to exclude minors that were unaccompanied by an adult. The court of appeal granted a preliminary injunction staying the enforcement of both ordinances because it concluded that they were overbroad and had a pervasive chilling effect on the exercise of free speech (129 Cal. App. 3d 197, 206-207) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.81

§ 116.81 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Actions

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO PROHIBIT THE INTERFERENCE WITH OR PROSECUTION OF A PERSON UNDER COLOR OF A STATUTE WHEN THAT STATUTE IS INAPPLICABLE TO THE PERSON'S CONDUCT. IN THIS CASE, _____ [specify circumstances of plaintiff's prosecution/interference]. HOWEVER, THE STATUTE UNDER THE AUTHORITY OF WHICH THE DEFENDANT IS TAKING THESE ACTIONS IS CLEARLY INAPPLICABLE TO PLAINTIFF'S CONDUCT, BECAUSE _____ [specify reason(s)]. THEREFORE, THE INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE GRANTED.

Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Conduct. A preliminary injunction may be granted to restrain defendant public officials from interfering with or prosecuting criminal or other actions against plaintiff when there is no statute that renders plaintiff's acts unlawful (Svenson v. Engelke (1931) 211 Cal. 500, 501-502, 506, 296 P. 281).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when the defendant is attempting to enforce a statute against plaintiff that is not applicable to plaintiff's conduct and, therefore, there is no statute that renders plaintiff's acts unlawful. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish how the plaintiff's conduct falls outside the scope of the statute sought to be enforced, and therefore why interference with or prosecution of plaintiff is unlawful or otherwise inappropriate.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Conduct

In Svenson v. Engelke (1931) 211 Cal. 500, 296 P. 281 , plaintiffs were commercial salmon fishermen and defendants were members and officers of the Fish and Game Commission. Plaintiffs commenced the action to restrain defendants from interfering with or prosecuting criminal or other actions against the plaintiffs on account of the transportation or possession by the plaintiffs of fresh salmon caught on the high seas and in the course of being transported over and across certain fish and game districts in which the taking or possession of fresh salmon was at the time prohibited by state law. The superior court issued a temporary restraining order and, after a hearing, issued a preliminary injunction that granted the relief sought pendente lite. Defendants appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed.

Defendant's first contention was that under former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (4) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)) an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit. The Supreme Court noted that the difficulty with this contention was that it assumed the existence of a fact that was the very fact in controversy in the proceeding, namely, whether or not there was an existing public statute covering the situation presented by plaintiffs' complaint and that defendants, as officers of the law, were attempting or were threatening to enforce at the time the preliminary injunction was sought and obtained by the plaintiffs. The principle that statutory offenses that officers of the law are engaged in enforcing, and which the persons against whom such enforcement is sought are seeking to evade prosecution on the showing either that they are not guilty of such statutory offense or that the law defining the same does not apply to such a person or class of persons, had no application to the present situation. Here, plaintiffs were contending that there was no statute that rendered unlawful the acts of the plaintiffs in seeking to transport the salmon that they had lawfully taken on the high seas and that, at the time of their attempted or threatened prosecution, they were engaged in transporting to a place in which they were lawfully entitled to possess and sell the fish thus lawfully taken.

The Supreme Court concluded that at the time of the commencement of the present action there was no existing statute that prohibited or rendered unlawful the possession or transportation of salmon lawfully taken or caught on the high seas across any of the fish and game districts referred to. Moreover, the fish could be carried to the City of Eureka in which it could, at that time, be lawfully possessed and sold. Hence, the granting of the preliminary injunction was not erroneous (211 Cal. 500, 501-502, 506) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statute Not Applicable to Plaintiff's Conduct

In Novar Corp. v. Bureau of Collection & Investigative Services (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 1, 206 Cal. Rptr. 287 , the court of appeal affirmed the issuance of a preliminary injunction by the trial court in an action for declaratory relief. Plaintiff was seeking a declaration that it was not an alarm company operator, and an injunction to restrain defendant from making statements that plaintiff was required to be licensed as an alarm company operator pursuant to the appropriate licensing statute governing such operators. After reviewing the general rules concerning injunctive relief, the court noted that injunctive relief may be granted against illegal enforcement of valid statutes. The court rejected defendant's argument that former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 first subd. (4) and former Civ. Code § 3423(4) (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 526(a)(4) and Civ. Code § 3426(d)) prevent the issuance of an injunction to prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit. The court stated that those sections do not apply when the conduct sought to be enjoined does not fall within the terms of the statutes (160 Cal. App. 3d 1 , p.6).

In MacLeod v. City of Los Altos (1960) 182 Cal. App. 2d 364, 6 Cal. Rptr. 326 , plaintiffs were officers of and sued on behalf of a local political association affiliated with the Democratic Party. Defendants were the City of Los Altos and some of its officials. Plaintiffs obtained a judgment by which defendants were enjoined from applying or enforcing, or attempting to apply or enforce, a particular ordinance against defendants. Defendants appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed. It held that former Civ. Code § 3423(4) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d), Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)) do not apply when the activity sought to be enjoined by public officials is an attempt to apply a statute or ordinance to conduct not within its terms. An injunction issues in such a case because the public officials are not enforcing a public statute but, rather, are acting without authority. They act without authority in such situations not because of the claimed invalidity of the statute or ordinance but because it does not by its own terms apply to the plaintiffs. Because the plaintiffs' conduct was not covered by the ordinance in the instant situation, the judgment was affirmed (182 Cal. App. 2d 364, 369-370) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.82

§ 116.82 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unconstitutional Application of Facially Valid Statute

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO RESTRAIN THE UNCONSTITUTIONAL APPLICATION OF A STATUTE EVEN THOUGH IT IS VALID ON ITS FACE. IN THIS CASE, ALTHOUGH _____ [specify statute or ordinance at issue] APPEARS VALID ON ITS FACE, ITS APPLICATION IS ACTUALLY UNCONSTITUTIONAL BECAUSE _____ [specify grounds]. THEREFORE, THE APPLICATION FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE GRANTED.

Unconstitutional Application of Statute. A preliminary injunction may be issued to restrain the unconstitutional application of a statute valid on its face (Brock v. Superior Court (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 605, 610, 86 P.2d 805).

[Add points and authorities supporting argument that defendant's enforcement of the statute or ordinance at issue is unconstitutional.]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief that is sought to restrain an unconstitutional application of a statute even though the statute is valid on its face. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts and legal argument that establish how the application of the statute or ordinance involved, which is facially valid, is unconstitutional. This may entail, for example, showing that its application unreasonably burdens a particular class of persons without an adequate showing of a state interest.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional Application of Statute

In Brock v. Superior Court (1939) 12 Cal. 2d 605, 86 P.2d 805 , plaintiffs brought an action against defendant officers of the Department of Agriculture to enjoin the enforcement of a plan for the regulation of intrastate marketing of grapefruit. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction to that effect, and the defendants petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to compel the superior court to dissolve the injunction. They contended that the validity of the statute in question had been upheld by the Supreme Court in an earlier opinion and that the current action by defendants presented no new questions of fact.

The Supreme Court denied the petition for the writ. It noted that, while certain provisions of the statute under which petitioners had acted had been upheld in its earlier opinion, nevertheless a statute valid on its face may be unconstitutionally applied. Hence, if the complaint in the present action by plaintiffs showed that petitioners threatened to enforce an unconstitutional law against them, or that their acts in the attempted application of a valid law violated rights guaranteed to all citizens by either the federal or state Constitutions, then the superior court had jurisdiction to issue a preliminary injunction. After examining the complaint, the Supreme Court stated that the allegations of the plaintiffs' complaint tendered as an issue of fact the question whether the marketing of certain grapefruit was an agricultural trade or industry distinctly different from that of marketing other products and, also, whether the producers of grapefruit were being discriminated against to the profit and advantage of the orange growers and their property taken without due process of law. Therefore, the Court held that plaintiffs were entitled to findings by the trial court on those issues and the Court denied the petition for writ of prohibition (12 Cal. 2d 605, 610) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unconstitutional Application of Statute

In Midget Products, Inc. v. Jacobsen (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 517, 295 P.2d 542 , plaintiff intended to manufacture and sell a dessert topping that contained no milk or milk fat. Defendant Director of Agriculture was of the opinion that the plaintiff's product was an imitation milk product and, thus, statutorily required to be labeled as such and that plaintiff was statutorily required to obtain a license. Plaintiff brought an action for declaratory relief with respect to the issue in controversy and for an injunction to restrain defendant from enforcing the relevant statutes against it. Plaintiff contended that the statutes were not applicable to its product and that, if they were applicable thereto, they were unconstitutional. The superior court made findings for plaintiff and issued a judgment that enjoined defendant from prosecuting plaintiff or any other person for distributing, marketing, or selling plaintiff's product as well as restraining defendant from interfering with the distribution, use, or sale of the product. Defendant appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court of appeal held that to require the plaintiff to label its product an "imitation" when it is not an imitation of any milk product would be an unconstitutional application of the relevant statutes (140 Cal. App. 2d 517, 520-523) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.83

§ 116.83 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Execution of Public Statute or Ordinance for Public Benefit [Civ. Code § 3423(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION CANNOT BE ISSUED TO PREVENT THE EXECUTION OF A PUBLIC _____ [STATUTE or ORDINANCE] BY OFFICERS OF THE LAW FOR THE PUBLIC BENEFIT. IN THIS CASE, EXECUTION OF _____ [specify statute/ordinance], A LAWFUL ENACTMENT OF _____ [state enacting entity], IS FOR THE PUBLIC BENEFIT [AND GRANTING AN INJUNCTION CONTRAVENES PUBLIC POLICY]. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

A. Preventing Execution of Public Statute. An injunction cannot be granted to prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit (Civ. Code § 3423(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4); City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 423, 430, 333 P.2d 745 ; Alfaro v. Terhune (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 492, 500-501, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 ; Xiloj-Itzep v. City of Agoura Hills (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 620, 635-636, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879 ; 7978 Corporation v. Pitchess (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 46, 115 Cal. Rptr. 746).

B. Enjoining Valid Public Statute or Ordinance as Excess of Jurisdiction. A court that attempts to enjoin the enactment or enforcement of a valid public statute or ordinance acts in excess of its jurisdiction (City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 423, 430, 333 P.2d 745).

[Optional] C. No Showing of Irreparable Harm. Even if the statute or ordinance is invalid, an injunction may not be issued to prevent its execution when there is no showing that the plaintiff will suffer irreparable harm if injunctive relief is denied (Leach v. City of San Marcos (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 660-661, 261 Cal. Rptr. 805).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be used in opposition to an application for injunctive relief when that relief is being sought to prevent the execution of a public statute or ordinance by officers of the law for the public benefit [see Civ. Code § 3423(d); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction supported by the points and authorities set out in § 116.80.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish that the statute or ordinance was lawfully enacted and is being executed under authority vested in the public officers responsible for carrying out its terms. If counsel concedes that the statute or ordinance is not valid, but its execution will not cause irreparable injury to plaintiff, facts should be set forth that establish why no such injury will occur.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Execution of Public Statute

In City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 423, 333 P.2d 745 , the city council adopted an ordinance that authorized execution of a contract between the city and the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball club that provided, among other things, for the exchange of certain properties and for the ball club to erect a stadium and procure the transfer of the franchise from Brooklyn to Los Angeles. After the filing of a referendum petition, the city council voted to place the ordinance on the ballot for approval or disapproval by the voters; at the ensuing referendum election a majority of the voters favored adoption of the ordinance. Thereafter, plaintiff taxpayers brought suit to enjoin certification of the result of the election. In that action, the superior court granted a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction restraining the city council from declaring the result of the referendum election. The city sought a writ of prohibition to restrain the superior court from enforcing the preliminary injunction or from taking further action in the suit. The Supreme Court agreed with the city and issued the writ as prayed.

The Court pointed out that former Civ. Code § 3423(7) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526, second subd. (7) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(g) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(7)), provide that an injunction cannot be granted to "prevent a legislative act by a municipal corporation" and that former Code Civ. Proc. § 3423(4) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526, second subd. (4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)), similarly provide that an injunction cannot be granted to "prevent the execution of a public statute by officers of the law for the public benefit." The Court stated that the basis for these statutory provisions is found in the doctrine of separation of powers of government into three independent departments. Because only legal issues and no questions of fact were involved, a writ of prohibition was available to test the validity of the ordinance. Because the Court found the contract and the ordinance adopted to authorize the execution of the contract to be valid, it issued the writ (51 Cal. 2d 423, 430-438) .

In Alfaro v. Terhune (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 492, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 197 , plaintiffs were female death row inmates who tried to obtain a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of a state act that required prisoners convicted of certain crimes to submit blood samples, saliva samples, thumbprints, and palm prints to a DNA data bank. The plaintiffs argued that the act was an unconstitutional search and seizure as applied to them because one of the key purposes justifying the act, the deterrence of future crimes, was inapplicable. They also argued that the act could not be implemented without further regulations. The trial court granted the State's demurrer to the cause of action seeking the preliminary injunction on the ground that the act was facially valid, but denied the State's motion for summary judgment on the cause of action regarding the regulations.

The court of appeal agreed with the State and reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It held that the rule against enjoining the execution of a public statute (Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4); Civ. Code § 3423(d)) is subject to four judicially recognized exceptions: (1) where the statute is unconstitutional and there is a showing of irreparable injury; (2) where the statute is valid but is enforced in an unconstitutional manner; (3) where the statue is valid but, as construed, does not apply to the plaintiff; and (4) where the public official's action exceeds his or her authority. The court limited its inquiry to the second and fourth exceptions, i.e., whether applying the act to plaintiffs without implementing administrative regulations would be unconstitutional or would exceed the authority of defendants. It held that the test is whether, giving due deference to the discretion of the agencies charged with implementing the act, it can be said that the act is too vague and indefinite to be implemented without administrative regulations. Applying that test, the court held that the act was comprehensive, detailed, and specific (98 Cal. App. 4th 492, 500-504) .

In Xiloj-Itzep v. City of Agoura Hills (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 620, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 879 , plaintiffs tried to gain a preliminary injunction against the enforcement of a city ordinance that regulated the solicitation of day laborers by people in vehicles on city streets. The stated purpose of the ordinance was to alleviate the traffic hazards caused by persons seeking day laborers. The trial court denied the preliminary injunction. The court of appeal affirmed, finding the ordinance constitutional and pointing out that it is well settled that courts lack jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of a validly adopted, constitutional ordinance (24 Cal. App. 4th 620, 635-636) .

In 7978 Corporation v. Pitchess (1974) 41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 115 Cal. Rptr. 746 , plaintiffs obtained a preliminary injunction that restrained the sheriff of Los Angeles County from enforcing certain sections of a county licensing ordinance involving public dancing and live public entertainment. Defendant sheriff appealed, and one of his contentions was that a preliminary injunction was not an appropriate remedy in this situation.

The court of appeal agreed with defendant and reversed the order granting the preliminary injunction. It noted that, under former Civ. Code § 3423(4) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)), a preliminary injunction is not an appropriate remedy to prevent the execution of a public statute, by officers of the law, for the public benefit; in addition, under former Civ. Code § 3423(6) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (6) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(f) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(6)), it is not proper to prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession. The court of appeal observed that while these general strictures do not preclude the issuance of preliminary injunctive relief when the constitutionality of a statute or ordinance is challenged, nevertheless trial courts should be extremely cautious prior to a trial on the merits to enjoin law enforcement officials from enforcing an ordinance obviously approved and adopted by duly elected representatives of the people for the purpose of promoting and protecting public morality (41 Cal. App. 3d 42, 46) .

[b] Enjoining Valid Public Statute or Ordinance as Excess of Jurisdiction

The facts and procedural background of City of Los Angeles v. Superior Court (1959) 51 Cal. 2d 423, 333 P.2d 745 , are discussed in § 116.83[3][a]. In ordering the issuance of a writ of prohibition restraining the superior court from enforcing a preliminary injunction against the city, the Supreme Court said that a court acts in excess of its jurisdiction if it attempts to enjoin a valid public statute or ordinance (51 Cal. 2d 423, 430) .

[c] No Showing of Irreparable Harm

Leach v. City of San Marcos (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 261 Cal. Rptr. 805 , was an action for injunctive relief by a taxpayer challenging the validity of a redevelopment plan adopted by defendant city. Two years after the complaint was filed, plaintiff moved for a preliminary injunction preventing the city from taking any further action to implement the disputed plan. Although plaintiff presented evidence that suggested that the plan might not conform with the Community Redevelopment Law, he presented no evidence that an injunction was necessary to prevent irreparable harm pending a trial on the merits of his claim. The trial court denied the preliminary injunction.

The appellate court affirmed. The court of appeal said that in seeking injunctive relief before a trial on the merits, a taxpayer must demonstrate both a likely violation of law and the likelihood that he or she will suffer irreparable harm. The court said that under Code Civ. Proc. § 526, second subd. (4), and former Civ. Code § 3423(4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)), an injunction cannot be granted to prevent execution of a public statute but that, nevertheless, an injunction may issue when the statute or ordinance is invalid and a showing is made of irreparable injury to property or business (213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 660-661) . Quoting E. H. Renzel Co. v. Warehousemen's Union (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 369, 373, 106 P.2d 1 , the court explained that facts concerning the irreparable injury that allegedly will result to the complainant unless protection is extended to him or her must be pleaded in order that the court may consider whether his or her apprehensions are well founded, that a mere allegation that such injury will result is insufficient, and that a complaint for an injunction that alleges only general conclusions, not warranted by any pleading of facts, does not state a cause of action to enjoin the acts complained of. The court concluded that because plaintiff had not demonstrated any harm he might suffer pending disposition of his case on the merits, and because harm may not be presumed when the plaintiff is not a governmental agency, plaintiff was not entitled to a preliminary injunction (213 Cal. App. 3d 648, 661-663) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Execution of Public Statute

In Carson Mobilehome Park Owners' Assn. v. City of Carson (1983) 35 Cal. 3d 184, 197 Cal. Rptr. 284, 672 P.2d 1297 , plaintiff had obtained a preliminary injunction against enforcement by defendant city of a rent-control ordinance. The Supreme Court, after discussing the issue at length, held the ordinance to be constitutional on its face. The court then stated that it is well settled that courts lack jurisdiction to enjoin the enforcement of a validly adopted constitutional ordinance and on this ground reversed the trial court's order granting the preliminary injunction (35 Cal. 3d 184, 195) .

In Moore v. Superior Court (1936) 6 Cal. 2d 421, 57 P.2d 1314 , the Legislature had enacted a statute that authorized the Fish and Game Commission to grant permits for the taking of fish for reduction or extraction purposes. Under the statute, the commission was required to limit the taking of fish in order to prevent waste or depletion of a species. In granting permits to various persons during the seasons of 1933-1934 and 1934-1935, the commission made equal allotments among the various plants. For the 1935-1936 season, however, the commission determined that permittees who had not theretofore engaged in the business should be permitted to take only half the amount allowed to those previously operating. Three new plants brought an action to enjoin the members of the commission from enforcing the terms of their permits; they alleged that the action of the commission amounted to an arbitrary and unjustifiable discrimination against them. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction that restrained the commission from interfering with the operations of the plants so long as they did not take a certain amount of fish during the season in question. The members of the commission applied for a writ of prohibition from the Supreme Court to restrain the superior court from enforcing the preliminary injunction. The Supreme Court ordered issuance of the writ.

The Court stated that, under former Civ. Code § 3423(4) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)), an injunction cannot be issued to prevent the enforcement of a public statute. The preliminary injunction clearly operated to defeat the statute involved because it increased the fish allotment of the three parties who obtained it without reducing the amount allotted to other applicants who were not before the court with the result that the total amount permitted for the season was beyond the limit found by the commission as the maximum permissible without depletion or waste. Hence, because the superior court lacked jurisdiction to grant the preliminary injunction, the Court ordered that a writ of prohibition issue restraining the respondents from taking any further proceedings against petitioners on the basis of the complaint (6 Cal. 2d 421, 424) .

In Reclamation District v. Superior Court (1916) 171 Cal. 672, 154 P. 845 , the plaintiff was Sutter County and the defendant was a reclamation district. Plaintiff instituted an action by which it sought to enjoin the district and its trustees from constructing certain levees or completing their construction. The statute that created the district made the construction of the levee in question the duty of the district. Nevertheless, the superior court issued a preliminary injunction restraining the construction of the greater part of the levee work despite the district's objections that the court did not have jurisdiction in undertaking to restrain the acts complained of on the basis of former Civ. Code § 3423(4) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(4)). Defendant district then petitioned the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to restrain further prosecution of the action.

The Supreme Court agreed with petitioner district. The Court held that the statute creating the district and imposing on it to build the levee was constitutional, that the injunction sought by the plaintiff was prohibited by former Civ. Code § 3423(4) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(d)), and that the superior court was exceeding its jurisdiction in entertaining the application for the permanent injunction. Thus, the Court ordered issuance of a writ for the purpose of prohibiting the further prosecution of the action (171 Cal. 672, 676-683) .

In Sundance Saloon, Inc. v. City of San Diego (1989) 213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 261 Cal. Rptr. 841 , plaintiffs sought a preliminary injunction to restrain enforcement pendente lite of a city ordinance requiring cabarets, with certain exceptions, to close between the hours of two and six a.m., on the ground that the ordinance violated the free speech guaranties of both the federal and state constitutions. In affirming an order denying the injunction, the court of appeal, citing Civ. Code § 3423 and Code Civ. Proc. § 526, said that in general a preliminary injunction may not be issued to prevent the execution of a public statute, by officers of the law, for the public benefit or to prevent the exercise of a public or private office, in a lawful manner, by the person in possession (213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 812) . The court added that while these general strictures do not preclude the issuance of preliminary injunctive relief when the constitutionality of a statute or ordinance is challenged, nevertheless trial courts should be extremely cautious to enjoin law enforcement officials from enforcing, before a trial on the merits, an ordinance obviously approved and adopted by duly elected representatives of the people for the purpose of promoting and protecting public morality. The court held that plaintiff had failed to show that it would suffer irreparable harm by the denial of the injunction or that plaintiff was likely to prevail at the trial on the merits. In other words, it was the opinion of the court that the validity of the ordinance would be upheld at trial (213 Cal. App. 3d 807, 813-818) .

In DeMott v. Board of Police Commissioners (1981) 122 Cal. App. 3d 296, 175 Cal. Rptr. 879 , the court of appeal reversed an order granting a preliminary injunction preventing enforcement of a city ordinance that regulated the operation of picture arcades operated by respondent. Relying on City of Santa Monica v. Superior Court (1964) 231 Cal. App. 2d 223, 226, 41 Cal. Rptr. 824 , the court noted that trial courts should be extremely cautious when asked to enjoin law enforcement officials from enforcing an ordinance obviously approved and adopted by duly-elected representatives of the people for the purpose of promoting and protecting public morality prior to a trial on the merits. With all presumptions favoring the validity and constitutionality of such enactments, it should be only under extraordinary circumstances that anyone challenging the validity of such a law should immediately be granted the ultimate relief he or she seeks prior to any trial on the merits (122 Cal. App. 3d 296, 300) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.84

§ 116.84 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Is Not Issued to Enforce Criminal Law Unless Nuisance Demonstrated or as Otherwise Provided by Law [Civ. Code § 3369]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32[1].]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION CANNOT BE ISSUED TO ENFORCE THE CRIMINAL LAW EXCEPT IN THE CASE OF A NUISANCE, OR AS OTHERWISE PROVIDED BY LAW. IN THIS CASE, THE STATUTE AT ISSUE, NAMELY _____ [specify statute or ordinance] DOES NOT INVOLVE NUISANCE AND NO OTHER PROVISION OF LAW AUTHORIZES ISSUANCE OF AN INJUNCTION TO ENFORCE IT. THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

Enforcing Criminal Law Prohibited. Preventive relief cannot be granted to enforce a penalty or forfeiture in any case, nor to enforce a penal law except in the case of nuisance or as otherwise provided by law (Civ. Code § 3369). This statutory enactment is but the expression of the fundamental rule that courts of equity are not concerned with criminal matters, and they cannot be resorted to for the prevention of criminal acts except when property rights are involved (Perrin v. Mountain View Mausoleum Assn. (1929) 206 Cal. 669, 671, 674, 275 P. 787 ; People v. Steele (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 206, 208-213, 40 P.2d 959).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

CAUTION:

Although the above authorities still appear to be valid in a general sense, in many cases injunctive relief against conduct that violates a criminal statute may now be obtained under Bus. & Prof. Code § 17203, which broadly permits injunctive relief against "unfair competition." "Unfair competition" for this purpose is defined as including "any unlawful, unfair or fraudulent business act or practice" [see Bus. & Prof. Code § 17200]. For points and authorities pertaining to such injunctive relief, see Ch. 235, Unfair Competition , in this publication.

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is being sought to enforce a criminal statute or ordinance and does not fall within the exception provided for nuisances or for other statutes expressly permitting enforcement by injunction [see Civ. Code § 3369].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish that the statute or ordinance at issue does not involve the enforcement of nuisance laws, and point out the absence of any other provisions of law that authorize injunctive relief for the conduct in question.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Enforcing Criminal Law Prohibited

In Perrin v. Mountain View Mausoleum Asso. (1929) 206 Cal. 669, 275 P. 787 , plaintiff brought an action to obtain an injunction restraining defendants from continuing to construct, maintain, and operate on property owned by defendant association any tombs, crypts, and niches for the interment of bodies of dead human beings and for the recovery of $5,000 damages alleged to have been caused to plaintiff's adjoining property. The superior court granted a judgment dismissing the action after sustaining defendant's objection to the introduction of any evidence on the ground that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

It stated that, basically, plaintiff was seeking by his action to enforce certain ordinances that purported to establish a residence district in a portion of Los Angeles County, any violation of which was a misdemeanor. It then observed that Civ. Code § 3369 expresses the fundamental rule that courts of equity are not concerned with criminal matters and they cannot be resorted to for the prevention of criminal acts except when property rights are involved. Moreover, because the mausoleum was not a nuisance per se, and because plaintiff had not indicated facts that would indicate that he had suffered some exceptional damages other than that suffered by the public generally, property rights were not involved. Hence, the judgment was affirmed (206 Cal. 669, 671-674) .

In People v. Steele (1935) 4 Cal. App. 2d 206, 40 P.2d 959 , defendants were licensed chiropractors. They were appealing from a judgment that enjoined them from practicing or attempting to practice or advertising or holding themselves out as practicing certain designated modes of treating the sick and afflicted. The state had successfully argued to the superior court that a license to practice under the Chiropractic Act did not authorize the use by the licensed person of any of the modes of treatment enumerated in the injunction and that, consequently, the practice of such modes of treatment by defendants constituted a public nuisance that could be enjoined by the state. Phrased differently, the state contended that the practice of medicine without a license was a menace to public health and, hence, a public nuisance capable of being enjoined. Defendants appealed and contended that there was no basis for the superior court's finding that the practices enjoined constituted a nuisance; therefore, they asserted that an injunction was not available to the state.

The court of appeal agreed with defendants and reversed the judgment. It observed the general rule that the violation of a penal statute (in this case practicing medicine without a license) does not constitute a nuisance unless the doing of the prohibited acts constitutes a nuisance in the absence of a statute. The court held that the practicing of a healing art without a statutorily required license was not a nuisance per se merely because it violated a penal statute. Therefore, it reversed the judgment (4 Cal. App. 2d 206, 208-213) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Enforcing Criminal Law Prohibited

In Carter v. Chotiner (1930) 210 Cal. 288, 291 P. 577 , plaintiffs owned property adjacent to defendants' cemetery. They brought an action to restrain and enjoin defendants from using certain real property for cemetery purposes on the ground that such use would be a nuisance and cause irreparable injury and damages to the premises and health of plaintiffs. They pleaded that defendants were violating two ordinances that required that a permit be obtained prior to the operation of cemeteries located within certain areas of Los Angeles County. Violation of the ordinances was made a misdemeanor. The superior court issued a preliminary injunction, but after a lengthy trial the court dismissed the injunction and denied the application of the plaintiffs for a permanent injunction to prohibit defendants from operating a cemetery at all. It did, however, enjoin defendants from interring any bodies within a strip of land 40 feet wide encircling the cemetery grounds. Plaintiffs appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the judgment.

The court of appeal noted that the ordinances were penal in nature. Furthermore, it stated, it is elementary that the violation of a penal ordinance does not of itself create a private nuisance per se and that, in the absence of special injury, an injunction will not be granted on the application of a private individual merely to prevent violation of a penal statute. Hence, the main question involved was whether the superior court's findings that the maintaining of the cemetery would not constitute a nuisance were supported by the evidence. Determining that they were so supported, the court of appeal affirmed the judgment (210 Cal. 288, 291-292) .

In People v. Seccombe (1930) 103 Cal. App. 306, 284 P. 725 , the district attorney and city attorney brought an action to obtain an injunction restraining the defendant from continuing to pursue the occupation of a usurer. Defendant's demurrer was sustained, and the superior court entered a judgment of dismissal. Plaintiffs appealed. They contended that the injunction was justified by Code Civ. Proc. § 731, which permits the bringing of a civil action to abate a public nuisance as defined by Civ. Code § 3480. Specifically, they contended that defendant's activities constituted a public nuisance under a statute that defined a public nuisance as anything that is an obstruction to the free use of property. Moreover, they argued that defendant had committed two separate misdemeanors and intended to commit further crimes of the same type. The court of appeal rejected this reasoning, however, and affirmed the judgment of dismissal.

The court noted that criminal conduct may be coupled with the maintenance of a nuisance, that a nuisance may exist without a concomitant crime, and that criminality may exist without the criminal act or course of conduct constituting a nuisance as defined by the laws of California. Hence, when an action is for abatement of a nuisance by injunction or otherwise, facts that bring the act or course of conduct within the definition of a nuisance must be pleaded; it is not sufficient to allege merely that the defendant has committed and intends to commit additional criminal acts. The court also noted that while equity will not withhold the remedy of injunctive relief merely because the acts constituting a nuisance are also of a criminal nature, it must appear that the act, condition of property, or course of conduct complained of falls within the definition of a nuisance as stated by statute; it must also appear that the injury is, and if the wrong is persisted in will continue to be, of a tangible character affecting (when property is involved) some designated property (103 Cal. App. 306,309-311).

57 of 108 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
B. Injunctive Relief Against Statutes

11-116 California Points & Authorities §§ 116.85-116.99

[Reserved]

§§ 116.85[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief Involving Contracts and Covenants

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.100

§ 116.100 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Contract Capable of Specific Enforcement [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED BECAUSE THE CONTRACT IS CAPABLE OF BEING SPECIFICALLY ENFORCED. THE CONTRACT IS SUBJECT TO SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT BECAUSE _____ [specify reason(s), e.g., IT EXPRESSLY PROVIDES FOR SUCH ENFORCEMENT].

A. Contract Can Be Specifically Enforced. The prohibition stated in Civil Code Section 3423(e) and Code of Civil Procedure Section 526(b)(5) against injunctive relief to enforce a contract does not apply when the performance of the subject contract is capable of being specifically enforced (see Zakaria v. Lincoln Property Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 510, 229 Cal. Rptr. 669 ; Nadell & Co. v. Grasso (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 420, 427, 346 P.2d 505).

[Optional] B. Terms of Contract Provide for Specific Enforcement. The contention that an injunction cannot be granted because of Civil Code Section 3423(e) and Code of Civil Procedure Section 526(b)(5) lacks merit when the agreement itself provides that in the event of default a party may proceed in law or equity to require the defendant to perform his or her obligations (see Zakaria v. Lincoln Property Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 510, 229 Cal. Rptr. 669).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for a preliminary injunction, or for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, when it has been asserted that an injunction cannot be issued to prevent the breach of a contract that would not be specifically enforced, pursuant to Civ. Code § 3423(e) or Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5).

These points and authorities may also be presented in reply to a party's opposition to an initial application for injunctive relief. For tactical purposes, they may be more commonly used as part of such a reply, because they address an issue that an opponent would likely raise. In addition, they may be used in opposition to a demurrer or as part of a respondent's brief on appeal. In an appropriate case, they may be combined with the points and authorities set out in § 116.101.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts that establish why a particular contract is capable of specific enforcement, in order to overcome the statutory limitations on preventing breaches of contract by using injunctive relief [see Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion of the situations in which specific performance may and may not be granted, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 528, Specific Performance (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 116.103 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose an application supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Contract Can Be Specifically Enforced

In Zakaria v. Lincoln Property Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 229 Cal. Rptr. 669 , plaintiff, an applicant for federally subsidized ("Section 8") housing, sued the defendant owners of an apartment building for breach of a contract between defendants and the city, of which plaintiff was a third-party beneficiary, seeking preliminary injunctive relief to enjoin defendants from renting the next available unit during the course of litigation and to order defendants to rent it to plaintiff on plaintiff's prevailing in the action. The trial court granted the injunction. Defendants appealed, contending that the court erred because, under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e)), an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced.

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction. The court stated that defendants' contention lacked merit, because the agreement provided that in the event of default, the city was permitted to proceed by mandamus or by other proceeding in law or equity to require the defendants to perform their obligations. Thus, said the court, the contract could be specifically enforced (185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 510) .

In Nadell & Co. v. Grasso (1959) 175 Cal. App. 2d 420, 346 P.2d 505 , plaintiff, a trader of goods damaged in transit, sued a purchaser of goods who acquired the damaged goods with a proviso that the goods not be resold in their original containers. The defendant indicated his intention to resell the goods without regard to the restriction imposed by plaintiff. A trial court granted a permanent injunction. Defendant appealed, arguing that a prohibitory injunction will not lie to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, and because the duty to be performed is a long, continuous one, requiring constant court supervision, specific enforcement would not be granted.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment granting the permanent injunction. The court suggested that the contract could, in fact, be specifically enforced, stating that because the merchandise involved would ordinarily be capable of disposal in one transaction, or at most a very few transactions, defendant's reliance on former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (5) (now relettered as Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)) was misplaced (175 Cal. App. 2d 420, 426) .

[b] Terms of Contract Provide for Specific Enforcement

In Zakaria v. Lincoln Property Co. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 500, 229 Cal. Rptr. 669 , is discussed in § 116.100[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief Involving Contracts and Covenants

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.101

§ 116.101 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED TO _____ [specify conduct sought to be enjoined, e.g., TO PREVENT DEFENDANT FROM RECORDING HIS NEW SONG WITH ACME RECORDING COMPANY]. THE INJUNCTION SHOULD BE GRANTED BECAUSE (1) THE CONTRACT BETWEEN _____ [specify contracting parties, e.g., PLAINTIFF AND DEFENDANT] IS A WRITTEN CONTRACT FOR PERSONAL SERVICE OF A SPECIAL, UNIQUE, UNUSUAL, EXTRAORDINARY, OR INTELLECTUAL CHARACTER, NAMELY _____ [specify type of contract, e.g., A CONTRACT TO RECORD MUSIC], (2) THE LOSS OF THE PROMISED SERVICE CANNOT BE ADEQUATELY COMPENSATED IN DAMAGES, AND (3) THE CONTRACT GUARANTEES AT LEAST THE MINIMUM ANNUAL COMPENSATION REQUIRED BY STATUTE, NAMELY $_____.

A. Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation. Although, in general, an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, a person may be enjoined from rendering personal service to another when (1) the person is a party to a contract in writing for the rendition or furnishing of personal service from one to another; (2) the contract guarantees the person the minimum annual compensation as established by Civil Code Section 3423(e) and Code of Civil Procedure Section 526(b)(5); and (3) the promised service is of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law (see Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5); MCA Records, Inc. v. Newton-John (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 22, 153 Cal. Rptr. 153).

[Optional] B. Minimum Compensation Satisfied When Party Has Exclusive Control of Production Costs. An injunction is not improperly granted under the requirement that the agreement guarantee payment of the statutory minimum amount when, under the terms of the agreement, the exclusive control of production costs remained in defendant's hands at all times, and defendant could have performed at costs that would net the defendant the statutory minimum compensation (MCA Records, Inc. v. Newton-John (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 22, 153 Cal. Rptr. 153).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for a preliminary injunction, or for a temporary restraining order and a preliminary injunction, to prevent breach of a contract involving personal services of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character [see Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)].

These points and authorities may also be presented in reply to a party's opposition to an initial application for injunctive relief. For tactical purposes, they may be more commonly used as part of such a reply, because they address an issue that an opponent would likely raise. They may also be used in opposition to a demurrer or as part of a respondent's brief on appeal. In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be combined with the points and authorities set out in § 116.100.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that the contract is in writing for unique personal services; why an award of damages would be inadequate compensation; and how the contract meets the statutory requirements for minimum compensation [see Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief, as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities set out in § 116.103 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose an application supported by the points and authorities in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation

In MCA Records, Inc. v. Newton-John (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 153 Cal. Rptr. 153 , plaintiff record company sought and obtained a preliminary injunction against defendant singer, restraining defendant from recording for anyone other than plaintiff while plaintiff's action was pending. Defendant appealed, asserting that the injunction was improperly granted, because the agreement failed to guarantee payment of the minimum compensation then required by statute, namely, $6,000, under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5), and providing differing minimal amounts, depending on the date of contracting).

The court of appeal affirmed the order granting the preliminary injunction (after an unrelated modification). The court, citing the above sections, stated that a party to a personal service contract may not be enjoined from rendering personal services to others unless, under the terms of the contract, he or she is guaranteed the statutory minimum annual compensation (at that time, $6,000). Defendant argued that she was advanced $200,000 to produce recordings and the cost of production exceeded $194,000; hence, her net compensation became less than $6,000. The court agreed with the trial court's finding that (1) the "minimum compensation" referred to in the statute does not mean "net profits"; and (2) even if it did, a suitable recording could be made at costs that would net defendant the minimum compensation of $6,000 a year. The court considered as decisive the fact that under the terms of the agreement, exclusive control of production costs remained in defendant's hands at all times. Defendant's interpretation of the minimum-compensation statutes, the court reasoned, would allow her to nullify her contract at any time merely by increasing her production expenses. It did not believe the Legislature intended to sanction such a one-sided bargain (90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 22) .

[b] Minimum Compensation Satisfied When Party Has Exclusive Control of Production Costs

MCA Records, Inc. v. Newton-John (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 153 Cal. Rptr. 153 , is discussed in § 116.101[3][a], [4][a].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unique Personal Service Contract With Statutory Minimum Compensation

In Leach v. Drummond Medical Group, Inc. (1983) 144 Cal. App. 3d 362, 192 Cal. Rptr. 650 , plaintiffs brought an action against a hospital and medical group for various civil rights and other violations based on the hospital's notice that it would no longer service plaintiffs' family after plaintiffs wrote to the state Health Services concerning the hospital's emergency room practices. Plaintiffs' complaint sought injunctive relief and damages. Defendants demurred, arguing that plaintiffs could never amend their complaint so as to be entitled to injunctive relief, because the physician-patient relationship is characterized as one requiring personal services. The demurrer was sustained without leave to amend and plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal reversed, stating that the basis for strictures against judicial compulsion of personal service contracts did not exist in the case, because the defendants were two interrelated corporations with medical doctors as employees, and defendants could be compelled to provide medical services to plaintiffs without the court ordering performance of such service by a specific doctor (144 Cal. App. 3d 362, 368-369) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief Involving Contracts and Covenants

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.102

§ 116.102 Supporting Application for Temporary Restraining Order and Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Restrictive Covenant in Deed

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.20.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION MAY BE ISSUED TO ENJOIN VIOLATION OF RESTRICTIVE COVENANT. IN THIS CASE, _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] ACQUIRED THE PROPERTY WITH KNOWLEDGE THAT A COVENANT IN THE DEED TO THE PROPERTY _____ [specify restriction, e.g., PRECLUDED USE OF THE PROPERTY FOR THE RETAIL SALE OF GROCERIES]. NEVERTHELESS, HE/SHE/IT _____ [specify conduct that is subject of injunctive relief sought that would violate covenant]. THEREFORE, THE INJUNCTION SHOULD BE ISSUED.

Violation of Restrictive Covenant. An injunction should be issued to prevent the violation by a grantee with notice of a restrictive covenant in a deed (Mullally v. Ojai Hotel Co. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 9, 11-14, 71 Cal. Rptr. 882 ; Doo v. Packwood (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 752, 755-757, 71 Cal. Rptr. 477).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an application for injunctive relief when a defendant grantee is violating a restrictive covenant, of which he or she has notice, in a deed. Counsel may submit these points and authorities with (1) an application for a temporary restraining order and preliminary injunction; (2) an application for a preliminary injunction alone; or (3) after appropriate modification of the caption (see § 116.20), with a motion for a preliminary injunction.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing the nature of the restrictive covenant, the defendant's knowledge of it, and his or her conduct that is violative of the covenant.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a general form of complaint for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as other forms for use in obtaining provisional injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender). For discussion and forms relating to litigation involving restrictive covenants, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 184, Deeds (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Violation of Restrictive Covenant

In Mullally v. Ojai Hotel Co. (1968) 266 Cal. App. 2d 9, 71 Cal. Rptr. 882 , plaintiffs were the owners of lots in a subdivision that protruded onto defendant's property on which it operated a hotel. Defendant owned several lots in the subdivision that defendant caused to be annexed to the City of Ojai on the condition that it grant defendant a conditional use permit that allowed defendant to operate tennis courts on two of the lots as an integral part of its business. The lots, however, were subject to a covenant covering the subdivision that restricted the use of the lots to single-family residences. In addition, defendant owned a private residence on several additional lots in the subdivision. The manager of the hotel used the residence as his home, but occasionally rooms in the residence were rented to hotel guests. Plaintiffs sued to enjoin the hotel from violating the restrictive covenant by constructing tennis courts on some of the lots and by using the residence for hotel guests. The superior court granted a judgment as prayed, and the court of appeal affirmed.

The court of appeal disagreed with defendant's contention that Code Civ. Proc. § 731a forbids the use of the injunctive process against a land use permitted by city zoning. The court stated that it is a matter of common knowledge that restrictive covenants quite frequently forbid land uses that, if permitted, would make the property far more valuable (266 Cal. App. 2d 9, 11-14) .

In Doo v. Packwood (1968) 265 Cal. App. 2d 752, 71 Cal. Rptr. 477 , plaintiffs were partners in the retail grocery business. They were building a larger and more modern market and, thus, anticipated the sale of one of their stores on the same street. They executed a deed to defendants that proscribed the use of the property or any of the buildings on it for use in the retail sale of groceries. Soon after the deed was executed, defendants leased the property to another defendant who began to operate a retail grocery business on the property. The superior court rendered a judgment by which the plaintiffs recovered nothing, and they appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment for defendants. The court observed that the plaintiffs intended to protect themselves through the restrictive covenant against competition in the retail grocery business in the neighborhood of the lot that they sold. It noted that this desire was legitimate and was protected by the restrictive covenant set forth in the deed. Therefore, plaintiffs should have been entitled to an injunction preventing defendants and their lessee and anyone succeeding defendants as a grantee with notice of the restriction in the title from carrying on a retail grocery business on the premises. In addition, they were entitled to such damages arising out of the operation of such retail grocery business in the lot conveyed to the defendants as might be proved (265 Cal. App. 2d 752, 755-757) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief Involving Contracts and Covenants

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.103

§ 116.103 Opposing Application for Preliminary Injunction [Code Civ. Proc. § 527]--Injunction Not Issued to Prevent Breach of Contract That Would Not Be Specifically Enforced [Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 116.32.]

A PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION CANNOT BE ISSUED TO PREVENT ACTIONS IN PURPORTED BREACH OF CONTRACT IF THE CONTRACT IS OF A KIND THAT IS NOT SUBJECT TO SPECIFIC ENFORCEMENT. IN THIS CASE, _____ [specify party, e.g., PLAINTIFF] SEEKS TO ENJOIN _____ [specify party, e.g., DEFENDANT] FROM _____ [specify action that applicant seeks to enjoin]. HOWEVER, THE UNDERLYING CONTRACT _____ [state defense, e.g., IS NOT ONE FOR UNIQUE PERSONAL SERVICES]. [IN ANY EVENT, THE ACTIONS COMPLAINED OF DO NOT AMOUNT TO A BREACH OF CONTRACT.] THEREFORE, THE REQUEST FOR INJUNCTIVE RELIEF SHOULD BE DENIED.

A. Preventing Breach of Contract. An injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract, the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, except for certain contracts involving unique personal services (Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5); Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303-305, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 ; Adams v. Williams Resorts, Inc. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 456, 462-463, 26 Cal. Rptr. 656).

[Optional] B. Affirmative and Negative Covenants in Contract. When a contract contains both affirmative and negative covenants, equity will not interfere to prevent a breach of the negative covenant when the affirmative covenant is of such a nature that it cannot be specifically enforced (Long Beach Drug Co. v. United Drug Co. (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 158, 168-172, 88 P.2d 698 ; Anderson v. Neal Institutes Co. (1918) 37 Cal. App. 174, 177-179, 173 P. 779).

[Optional] C. Exception for Unique Personal Services Not Applicable. The prohibition against an injunction being granted to prevent the breach of a contract, the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, does not apply to a contract in writing for the rendition or furnishing of personal services from one to another when the minimum compensation for such service is at the rate set forth in Civil Code Section 3423(e) and Code of Civil Procedure Section 526(b)(5), and when the promised service is of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it peculiar value, the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages in an action at law (Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)). In order to qualify for this exception, the contract in question must specifically guarantee the person furnishing such services at least the amount required by statute per year and satisfy a minimum standard of fairness as set forth in Civil Code Section 3391(2) (Motown Record Corp. v. Brockert (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 123, 135-140, 207 Cal. Rptr. 574 ; Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 235-236, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to an application for a preliminary injunction when that relief is being sought to prevent the breach of a contract. They are based on the premise that the contract is one that would not be specifically enforced, and that it does not otherwise qualify for injunctive relief under the exception for written contracts for rendition of certain unique personal services and guaranteeing at least the statutory minimum amount of compensation for those services [see Civ. Code § 3423(e); Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)].

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used (1) in support of a demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief [see Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)], (2) as an affirmative defense in an answer to such a complaint [see Code Civ. Proc. § 431.30(b)(2)], (3) in support of a motion for summary judgment in such an action [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], or (4) in support of a petition for a writ of prohibition [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1102, 1103] seeking to restrain a court from enforcing injunctive relief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing why the nature of the contract is such that its purported breach cannot be enjoined. If counsel claims that no breach actually occurred (or will occur), facts establishing why the conduct complained of does not amount to a breach should also be included.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the various methods of opposing applications for provisional and permanent injunctive relief as well as for a form of declaration to oppose an application for a preliminary injunction and a form of demurrer to a complaint for injunctive relief, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 303, Injunctions (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Preventing Breach of Contract

In Thayer Plymouth Center, Inc. v. Chrysler Motors Corp. (1967) 255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 63 Cal. Rptr. 148 , plaintiff automobile dealer brought an action for specific performance of a dealership contract and for damages. Plaintiff obtained a preliminary injunction against defendant corporation that enjoined defendant from terminating the dealership agreement existing between the two parties. Defendant appealed from the order granting the preliminary injunction.

The court of appeal reversed the order. One of its three contentions with which the court of appeal agreed was that the dealership agreement was a contract that required continuing, cooperative performance by the parties and, thus, was not subject to specific performance. Hence, under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)), which state that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract, the performance of which would not be specifically enforced, the preliminary injunction was improperly issued. The court stated that a contract that requires a continuing series of acts and demands cooperation between the parties for the successful performance of those acts is not subject to specific performance. Because the dealership contract provided for the maintenance of extensive and continuous transactions between the parties, the contract necessarily had to be continuous in nature. Thus, the order granting the preliminary injunction had to be reversed (255 Cal. App. 2d 300, 303-305) .

In Adams v. Williams Resorts, Inc. (1962) 210 Cal. App. 2d 456, 26 Cal. Rptr. 656 , plaintiffs were licensed real estate brokers. They brought an action against defendant, a corporation engaged in the business of subleasing lots as home sites, on the basis of a written contract entitled "Agreement of Exclusive Agency and Sublease." The superior court granted plaintiffs a judgment that declared the rights of the parties under the contract, awarded them damages, and enjoined defendant from breaching the contract. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment except that portion of the judgment that granted the injunctive relief. Defendant had contended that the superior court erred in granting plaintiffs a prohibitory injunction because, as to plaintiffs, the contract was one for personal services that could not be specifically enforced indirectly by an injunction against its breach. Plaintiffs, on the other hand, had contended that the agreement was a sublease and hence a proper subject for specific performance. The court of appeal agreed with defendant. It examined the contract and observed that the main purpose of defendant in entering into the agreement was to secure the services of plaintiffs even though as an incident it bore some aspects of a sublease. The court also noted the rule under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd. (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)) that, with exceptions not relevant to the case, an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract that would not be specifically enforced (210 Cal. App. 2d 456, 462-463) .

[b] Affirmative and Negative Covenants in Contract

In Long Beach Drug Co. v. United Drug Co. (1939) 13 Cal. 2d 158, 88 P.2d 698 , plaintiff and defendant entered into a written agreement under which plaintiff was appointed the exclusive agent in Long Beach for the sale of defendant's drug products. Defendant gave notice that it would no longer be bound by the agreement and started to sell to other drug stores in Long Beach; later, it refused to make further sales to plaintiff. Plaintiff then brought an action for an accounting, for damages found due to it by the accounting, and for a permanent injunction to enjoin defendant from directly or indirectly selling its drug products to any dealer in Long Beach other than plaintiff and its agents. The superior court rendered judgment as prayed, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court held that the contract was a valid one not void for uncertainty, but it held that the contract was not specifically enforceable and, hence, could not support the granting of permanent injunctive relief.

The Court noted the rule of former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)), that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced. It also noted the doctrine that when a contract contains both affirmative and negative stipulations, equity will not interfere to prevent a breach of the negative covenant when the affirmative covenant is of such a nature that it cannot be specifically enforced. The Court noted that the contract in question was not wholly negative in character; it also contained affirmative covenants that required defendant to sell to plaintiff as its special agent and on the part of plaintiff to purchase from defendant and have available for resale a sufficient supply of its drug products to meet the demands of the retail trade as well as to uphold all of the products to the full list retail prices set by defendant. These covenants would not be specifically enforced because courts of equity will not decree the specific performance of contracts which by their terms stipulate for a succession of acts whose performance cannot be consummated by one transaction, but rather, will be continuous and require protracted supervision and direction. Thus, it was clear to the Court that the contract was specifically unenforceable and that plaintiff was not, therefore, entitled to the injunction (13 Cal. 2d 158, 168-172) .

In Anderson v. Neal Institutes Co. (1918) 37 Cal. App. 174, 173 P. 779 , plaintiff and defendant entered into a contract by which defendant granted to plaintiff the exclusive right to advertise and use its remedies and method of drug and alcoholic treatment in Northern California. Plaintiff established an institute for such treatment in San Francisco, but several years thereafter defendant established a similar institute in San Francisco in violation of the contract. After defendant established its institute, defendant also refused to furnish any of its remedies to plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action for an accounting and an injunction. The superior court entered judgment for defendant after sustaining defendant's demurrer to the complaint. Plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It noted the principle under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)), that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract the performance of which would not be specifically enforced. The contract in this situation could not be specifically enforced for two reasons. First, its enforcement would have required defendant to prepare the remedies used in the treatment of patients at plaintiff's institute; such service is of a character that a court could not make an effective decree for its performance. Second, even though the contract contained both affirmative and negative covenants, because of the statutory principle quoted above a court of equity will not interfere to prevent a breach of the negative covenant when the affirmative covenant is of such a nature that it cannot be specifically enforced by judicial decree (37 Cal. App. 174, 176-179) .

[c] Exception for Unique Personal Services Not Applicable

In Motown Record Corp. v. Brockert (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 123, 207 Cal. Rptr. 574 , defendant entered into a contract as a recording artist with plaintiff record companies. Defendant's contract contained an exclusivity clause providing that she could not perform similar services for another employer. The contract further provided plaintiffs with the option, exercisable at any time, to pay defendant compensation at the rate of not less than $6,000 per annum. Defendant later became a successful recording artist and gave written notice of rescission, after which plaintiffs sued for breach of contract and injunctive relief. Plaintiffs then exercised their options to pay defendant. The trial court granted a preliminary injunction restraining defendant from performing for any one other than plaintiffs. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the order granting a preliminary injunction. The court framed the issue as whether a clause in a personal services contract giving the employer the option to pay the employee a minimum of $6,000 a year satisfies the (then applicable) statutory minimum compensation requirement for an injunction restraining breach of contract. Concluding that such an option clause did not satisfy the statutory requirement of minimum compensation, the court reviewed the history of the minimum compensation requirement of former Civ. Code § 3423(5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e)). It also discussed MCA Records Inc. v. Newton-John (1979) 90 Cal. App. 3d 18, 153 Cal. Rptr. 153 , discussed in § 116.101[3][a], and Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896 (discussed below). The court in Motown noted that many record companies responded to those decisions by including a clause in their contracts giving the company the right at any time during the contract to agree to pay the artist a minimum compensation of $6,000 a year. The company would then exercise its option to pay only if the artist was successful, to stop the artist from jumping to another label. The court said that to be subject to specific enforcement, a contract must have as one of its terms a compensation provision providing for payment at the minimum rate of $6,000 per year. But agreeing to payment of the minimum compensation is not a condition precedent to the granting of injunctive relief; it is a threshold requirement for admission of the contract into the class of contracts subject to injunctive relief under the statute. Former Civ. Code § 3423(5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e)) must be read in conjunction with Civ. Code § 3391(2) (no specific performance enforced against party as to whom contract is not just and reasonable). The two statutes demand a minimum standard of fairness as a condition on equitable enforcement of an exclusivity clause in a personal services contract (160 Cal. App. 3d 123, 135, 139) .

In Foxx v. Williams (1966) 244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 52 Cal. Rptr. 896 , plaintiff entertainer brought an action against defendants for a declaration of rights, an accounting, and for other relief under a written contract. The corporate defendant cross complained to recover money paid by mistake, for damages, and for an injunction to prohibit plaintiff from breaching the contract. After a court trial, judgment was entered declaring the rights of the parties, awarding a money judgment in favor of the cross complainant for overpayments, and enjoining plaintiff from making records for any other entity so long as the royalties earned by plaintiff under the contract equalled or exceeded $3,000 for the specified six-month periods. Plaintiff appealed, and the court of appeal reversed.

The court noted the provision of former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)) which then provided, in part, that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract unless it is a contract in writing for the rendition or furnishing of personal services when the minimum compensation for such service is at the rate of not less than $6,000 per year and when the promised service is of a special, unique, unusual, extraordinary, or intellectual character that gives it peculiar value the loss of which cannot be reasonably or adequately compensated in damages. The court also recognized the familiar rule that a contract to render personal services cannot be specifically enforced. Thus, it followed that the breach of such a contract may not be enjoined except in cases falling within the statutory exception under which a contract guarantees the person furnishing such personal services at least $6,000 per year. Because the royalty contract in question did not meet the then-applicable statutory requirement that plaintiff receive such a sum each year, the court deleted that portion of the judgment that enjoined plaintiff (244 Cal. App. 2d 223, 235-236) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Preventing Breach of Contract

In Poultry Producers etc. v. Barlow (1922) 189 Cal. 278, 208 P. 93 , plaintiff was a corporation organized by poultrymen for cooperative effort in marketing their products. The stockholders of the corporation were all producers holding one share of stock each for every thousand hens owned. Each stockholder was obligated, under what was termed a produce sale agreement, to sell all eggs produced from his poultry through plaintiff. Plaintiff brought an action against one of the contracting stockholders by which it recovered a judgment that awarded certain stipulated damages for breach of contract by reason of the sale of eggs to other purchasers; the judgment also required the specific performance of the produce sale contract to sell and deliver eggs to plaintiff during the unexpired term covered by the contract and enjoined him from making sales of his product to other persons. Defendant appealed, and the Supreme Court affirmed the judgment's award of damages but reversed that portion of it that decreed specific performance and the injunction. The Court noted that under former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)) an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract when its performance would not be specifically enforced. Because the contract lacked a mutuality of remedy, required the rendering of personal services, and would require constant personal supervision and oversight by the Court if it were to be enforced, the Court reversed the granting of specific performance and injunctive relief (189 Cal. 278, 281-283) .

In Lovelace v. Free (1934) 140 Cal. App. 264, 35 P.2d 342 , plaintiff brought an action for an injunction to enforce an alleged agreement between defendant and plaintiff by which defendant agreed to devise to plaintiff certain real property and to continue in force a certain joint policy of life insurance issued on the lives of the parties in return for personal services rendered by plaintiff. Defendant demurred to the complaint, and after plaintiff's failure to amend, a judgment was entered in favor of defendant. Plaintiff appealed, but the court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It stated that it was clear that plaintiff would not have been entitled to specific performance of the agreement because the agreement was one under which plaintiff engaged to render personal services to defendant. Thus, it was likewise clear that an injunction to restrain a threatened breach of the contract alleged in the complaint would not be authorized because former Civ. Code § 3423(5) and former Code Civ. Proc. § 526 second subd (5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e) and Code Civ. Proc. § 526(b)(5)) provide that an injunction cannot be granted to prevent the breach of a contract whose performance is not specifically enforceable (140 Cal. App. 264, 269) .

[b] Affirmative and Negative Covenants in Contract

In Whipple Rd. Quarry Co. v. L.C. Smith Co. (1952) 114 Cal. App. 2d 214, 249 P.2d 854 , plaintiff had leased property from defendant; the property was to be operated as a rock quarry. Defendant gave notice of the termination of the lease, after which plaintiff brought an action for declaratory relief and for an injunction enjoining the removal of rock crushing material from the quarry that it had leased from defendant. It applied for a preliminary injunction that the superior court denied, and it then appealed from the order denying the preliminary injunction. The court of appeal affirmed the order. It stated that the case was governed by the rule that when a contract contains both affirmative and negative stipulations, equity will not interfere to prevent a breach of the negative covenant when the affirmative covenant is of such a nature that it cannot be specifically enforced. The court examined the affirmative covenants relevant to the case and noted that they were covenants to operate the property as a commercial quarry, to sell to the public at prevailing rates, and to pay royalties to plaintiff. Thus, they were covenants that fell within the rule that courts of equity will not decree the specific performance of contracts that by their terms stipulate for a succession of acts whose performance cannot be consummated by one transaction but will be continuous and require protracted supervision and direction (114 Cal. App. 2d 214, 216) .

[c] Exception for Unique Personal Services Not Applicable

In Beverly Glen Music, Inc. v. Warner Communications, Inc. (1986) 178 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 224 Cal. Rptr. 260 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's denial of an injunction preventing another recording company from hiring an artist who was contractually bound to plaintiff. The court reasoned that since plaintiff's contract did not guarantee the performer the $6,000 annual minimum then required by former Civ. Code § 3423(5) (now relettered as Civ. Code § 3423(e)) and the performer could therefore not be enjoined from working for the defendant company, an injunction against the competitor would achieve the same coercive effect and was similarly prohibited (178 Cal. App. 3d 1142, 1145) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
C. Injunctive Relief Involving Contracts and Covenants

11-116 California Points & Authorities §§ 116.104-116.119

[Reserved]

§§ 116.104[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. Injunctive Relief Against Harassment

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.120

§ 116.120 Supporting Petition for Injunction and Temporary Restraining Order to Prevent Harassment [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
Petitioner,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF PETITION FOR vs.	)	[TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER AND] IN-
_____ [name],	)	JUNCTION AGAINST HARASSMENT
Respondent.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

AN INJUNCTION [AND TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER] SHOULD BE ISSUED BECAUSE PETITIONER HAS SUFFERED HARASSMENT BY RESPONDENT AS SET FORTH IN PETITIONER'S DECLARATION, [AND GREAT and/or IRREPARABLE HARM WOULD RESULT TO HIM/HER IF A TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER WAS NOT ISSUED, BECAUSE _____ (describe prospective harm)].

A. TRO and Injunction Available for Harassment. A person who has suffered harassment, as that term is defined in Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.6(b), may seek a temporary restraining order and an injunction prohibiting harassment (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(a)).

B. Harassment Defined. "Harassment," for purposes of Code of Civil Procedure Section 527.6, is unlawful violence, a credible threat of violence, or a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at a specific person that seriously alarms, annoys, or harasses the person, and that serves no legitimate purpose. The course of conduct must be such as would cause a reasonable person to suffer substantial emotional distress, and must actually cause substantial emotional distress (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b); Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1412-1414, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609).

[Optional] C. Temporary Restraining Order. A temporary restraining order may be issued with or without notice on an affidavit (or declaration) that, to the satisfaction of the court, shows reasonable proof of harassment of the plaintiff by defendant, and that great or irreparable harm would result to the plaintiff (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c); see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5 (use of declaration in lieu of affidavit)).

[Optional] D. Inclusion of Family or Household Members Residing With Plaintiff. In the court's discretion, and on a showing of good cause, a temporary restraining order or injunction issued under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 may include other named family or household members who reside with the plaintiff (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c)).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Petitioner _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a petition for an injunction prohibiting harassment and an application for a temporary restraining order [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6].

Memoranda are not required on a petition and application for temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c), unless otherwise ordered [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(b)]. In addition, a supporting memorandum is not required for an injunction prohibiting harassment [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1114(a)(7)]. Memoranda are not expressly forbidden, however, and there may be circumstances in which their inclusion could assist the court and may otherwise be desirable. With appropriate modifications, the points and authorities in this form may be used in an appellate brief in support of an injunction.

Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 does not apply to conduct that is covered by the Domestic Violence Prevention Act (Fam. Code § 6200 et seq.) [see Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(k)]. For discussion of procedures and forms for obtaining injunctive relief against domestic violence, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, §§ 293.10 et seq., 293.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

In 1994, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was enacted to establish parallel provisions to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. It authorizes any employer, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(d), to pursue a temporary restraining order and an injunction on behalf of its employees to prevent threats or acts of violence by either another employee or a third person [Robinzine v. Vicory (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 1416, 1423-1424, 50 Cal. Rptr. 3d 65 ; USS-Posco Industries v. Edwards (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 436, 442-443, 4 Cal. Rptr. 3d 54 (section 527.8 does not require threats of violence to be against particular employee); Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 333, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 ; see § 116.122[3][a]]. Accordingly, this form memorandum of points and authorities may be modified so as to comply with Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 when an employer, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(d), seeks a temporary restraining order and an injunction on behalf of its employee under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a) to prohibit further unlawful violence or threats of violence by an individual.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing the nature of the conduct that constitutes harassment and, when a TRO is sought, why the conduct sought to be restrained would otherwise cause great or irreparable harm.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the procedure for obtaining a temporary restraining order and injunction against harassment, as well as an illustration of the Judicial Council forms of petition for injunction, application for temporary restraining order, order to show cause, and proof of service, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, §§ 293.10 et seq., 293.100 et seq. (Matthew Bender).

[d] Opposing Memoranda

In an appropriate case, the memoranda set out in § 116.121 may be used to oppose the petition supported by this memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Harassment Defined

In Brekke v. Wills (2005) 125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 23 Cal. Rptr. 3d 609 , a mother sought an injunction against her 16-year-old daughter's boyfriend. The mother had told her daughter and the daughter's boyfriend that they could no longer see each other because the mother believed the boyfriend was causing the daughter's behavior problems. The boyfriend then wrote three nasty letters to the daughter, anticipating that the mother would read them, including one that contemplated killing the mother. The trial court granted the injunction, ordering the boyfriend to stay at least 100 yards away from the family, except at school where he must stay at least 20 feet away. The boyfriend appealed.

The court of appeal upheld the injunction. It first found that the injunction did not violate the boyfriend's constitutional rights. Specifically, the court held that there was no free-speech concern because the speech involved was purely private (125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1409) . The court also held that the boyfriend's freedom of association rights were not weightier than the parents' right and responsibility to control their minor daughter and that the boyfriend had no right of privacy in letters to the girlfriend (125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1410-1411) .

The court also held that the injunction met the requirements of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. The court held that the boyfriend's actions constituted a "credible threat of violence," which is defined as "a knowing and willful statement or course of conduct that would place a reasonable person in fear for his or her safety, or the safety of his or her immediate family, and that serves no legitimate purpose" (125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1412) . A "course of conduct" that seriously alarms, annoys, or harasses a person and serves no legitimate purpose is defined as "a pattern of conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose, including following or stalking an individual, making harassing telephone calls to an individual, or sending harassing correspondence to an individual by any means, including, but not limited to, the use of public or private mails, interoffice mail, fax, or computer e-mail" (125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1412) . While the boyfriend claimed his threat to kill his girlfriend's parents was a joke, the plaintiff testified that she took the threat seriously. The court held that in the post-Columbine High School world, threats that once were taken lightly now cause reasonable persons to pause and become fearful (125 Cal. App. 4th 1400, 1413) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. Injunctive Relief Against Harassment

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.121

§ 116.121 Opposing Petition for Injunction and Temporary Restraining Order to Prevent Harassment [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6]--No Course of Conduct Shown [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b)]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION
Petitioner,	)	FOR [TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER
vs.	)	AND] PRELIMINARY INJUNCTION AGAINST
_____ [name],	)	HARASSMENT
Respondent.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

PLAINTIFF'S PETITION FOR AN INJUNCTION PROHIBITING HARASSMENT [AND APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE HAS BEEN NO "UNLAWFUL VIOLENCE," "CREDIBLE THREAT OF VIOLENCE," OR "COURSE OF CONDUCT" CONSTITUTING HARASSMENT ON DEFENDANT'S PART, AS THAT TERM IS DEFINED BY STATUTE. [DEFENDANT HAS, IN FACT, NOT COMMITTED ANY ACTS OF HARASSMENT].

A. Unlawful Violence. "Unlawful violence" is any assault or battery, or stalking as prohibited in Penal Code § 646.9, but does not include lawful acts of self-defense or defense of others (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b)(1)).

B. Credible Threat of Violence. "Credible threat of violence" is a knowing and willful statement or course of conduct that would place a reasonable person in fear of his or her safety, or the safety of his or her immediate family, and that serves no legitmate purpose (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b)(2)).

C. Course of Conduct Defined. "Course of conduct" is a pattern of conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose including following or stalking an individual, making harassing telephone calls to an individual, or sending harassing correspondence to an individual by any means, including, but not limited to, the use of the public or private mails, interoffice mail, fax or computer e-mail (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b)(3); Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253).

[EITHER]

D. Constitutionally Protected Activity. Constitutionally protected activity is not included within the meaning of "course of conduct" (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b); Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 ; Smith v. Silvey (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 400, 406, 197 Cal. Rptr. 15).

[AND/OR]

E. Single Incident Is Not Course of Conduct. When the evidence shows only a single incident, it is insufficient to meet the statutory requirement of a course of conduct (Russell v. Douvan (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 399, 402-404, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 137 ; Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to a petition for injunction prohibiting harassment and application for temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. Although the California Rules of Court provide that memoranda are not required to obtain a temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(c) unless otherwise ordered, neither the statute nor the California Rules of Court specify any procedure for a defendant who wishes to submit an opposing memoranda [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(b)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 does provide, however, that a defendant in a lawsuit to prohibit harassment may file a response that explains, excuses, justifies, or denies the alleged harassment or may file a cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(d)]. In addition to the response, the defendant may file and serve declarations. It seems logical, therefore, that a memorandum, applying the law to the facts stated in the response and declarations, could also accompany the defendant's response. Counsel should consult the local court rules and policies regarding the submission of points and authorities in these cases.

In an appropriate case, these memoranda may be used to oppose an application for injunctive relief that is supported by the memorandum set out in § 116.120.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should set forth facts establishing that his or her client's behavior does not amount to a "knowing and willful course of conduct," as that term is used in Code Civ. Proc. § 526.7(b), that harasses another person.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For discussion of the procedure for responding to a petition for injunction prohibiting harassment, as well as an illustration of the Judicial Council forms of a response to a petition for injunction, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 293, Harassment and Domestic Violence, §§ 293.14, 293.103 (Matthew Bender).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Course of Conduct Defined

In Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 , a former employer filed a petition under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 against a former employee for a temporary restraining order and an injunction prohibiting harassment. At the hearing, the trial court enjoined both the former employer and the employee from contacting or harassing each other at home and at work. The former employee appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment. The former employee urged that the evidence showed only a single incident in which the former employee went to the employer's place of business and shouted obscenities at her, and that this is insufficient to meet the statutory requirement of a course of conduct. The court concluded that the employee was correct, citing the statute's definition of "course of conduct" as a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose (212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4) .

[b] Constitutionally Protected Activity

The facts and procedural background of Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 , are discussed in § 116.121[3][a]. In considering whether there was a course of conduct within the meaning of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(a), the only evidence of conduct other than an incident at the appellant's former workplace was a lawsuit filed in federal court. In reversing the judgment granting an injunction to prohibit harassment, the court did not consider this, however, because the employee had a constitutional right to petition the court for redress of grievances and the statute does not include constitutionally protected activity within the term "course of conduct" (212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4-5) .

In Smith v. Silvey (1983) 149 Cal. App. 3d 400, 197 Cal. Rptr. 15 , a mobile home park owner sought and obtained an injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 against a former resident of the park that restrained the former resident from initiating complaints with public agencies against plaintiff and from contacting any residents of the park. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment and dissolved the injunction. The court of appeal stated that the defendant had a fundamental right to petition the government for redress of grievances and that the trial court's order prohibiting the defendant from "contacting" any of the residents of the mobile home park was infirm as unconstitutionally overbroad, because its vague wording appeared to prohibit lawful as well as unlawful activity. The court cited Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6(b), which states that constitutionally protected activity is not included within the meaning of "course of conduct" (149 Cal. App. 3d 400, 406-407) .

[c] Single Incident Is Not Course of Conduct

In Russell v. Douvan (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 399, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 137 , after a court appearance, one lawyer followed an opposing lawyer into an elevator and forcefully grabbed his arm. The plaintiff filed a petition for an injunction prohibiting harassment under Civ. Proc. § 527.6. The trial court granted the injunction, despite testimony that the plaintiff no longer represented a party in the underlying action and the lawyers did not regularly do business with each other or oppose each other.

The court of appeal reversed. It held that injunctive relief lies only to prevent threatened injury. It has no application to wrongs that have been completed. The court held that it should neither serve as punishment for past acts, nor be exercised in the absence of any evidence establishing the reasonable probability the acts will be repeated in the future (112 Cal. App. 4th 399, 401) .

Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 , is discussed in § 116.121[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 116 INJUNCTIONS
PART II. FORMS
D. Injunctive Relief Against Harassment

11-116 California Points & Authorities § 116.122

§ 116.122 Opposing Petition for Temporary Restraining Order and Injunction to Prevent Violence Against Employer's Employees at the Workplace [Civ. Proc. § 527.8]--No Unlawful Violence or Credible Threat of Violence, or No Threat of Future Harm [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PETITION
Petitioner,	)	FOR [TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER
vs.	)	AND] INJUNCTION TO PREVENT VIOLENCE
_____ [name],	)	AGAINST EMPLOYEES AT THE WORKPLACE
Respondent.	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Dept.: _____
	)	Judge: _____
		Date Action Filed: _____
		Trial Date: _____

_____

[EITHER]

PLAINTIFF'S PETITION FOR AN INJUNCTION TO PREVENT VIOLENCE AGAINST PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYEES AT THE WORKPLACE [AND APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THERE HAS BEEN NO "UNLAWFUL VIOLENCE," OR "CREDIBLE THREAT

OF VIOLENCE," ON DEFENDANT'S PART, AS THOSE TERMS ARE DEFINED BY STATUTE. [DEFENDANT HAS, IN FACT, NOT COMMITTED ANY UNLAWFUL VIOLENCE OR CREDIBLE THREATS OF VIOLENCE AGAINST ANY OF PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYEES].

A. Unlawful Violence. "Unlawful violence" is any assault or battery, or stalking as prohibited in Penal Code § 646.9, but does not include lawful acts of self-defense or defense of others (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(1)).

B. Credible Threat of Violence. "Credible threat of violence" is a knowing and willful statement or course of conduct that would place a reasonable person in fear of his or her safety, or the safety of his or her immediate family, and that serves no legitimate purpose (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(2)).

C. Course of Conduct Defined. "Course of conduct" is a pattern of conduct composed of a series of acts over a period of time, however short, evidencing a continuity of purpose, including following or stalking an employee to or from the place of work; entering the workplace; following an employee during hours of employment; making telephone calls to an employee; or sending correspondence to an employee by any means, including, but not limited to, the use of the public or private mails, interoffice mail, fax or computer e-mail (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(b)(3)).

[Optional] D. Constitutionally Protected Activity. Nothing in Code of Civil Procedure § 527.8 shall be construed to permit a court to issue a temporary restraining order or injunction prohibiting speech or other activities that are constitutionally protected, or otherwise protected by Code of Civil Procedure § 527.3 or any other provision of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(c)).

[OR]

PLAINTIFF'S PETITION FOR AN INJUNCTION TO PREVENT VIOLENCE AGAINST PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYEES AT THE WORKPLACE [AND APPLICATION FOR TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF CANNOT ESTABLISH A THREAT OF FUTURE HARM TO PLAINTIFF'S EMPLOYEES

A. Reasonable Probability That Wrongful Acts Will Be Repeated In Future Required. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e), a plaintiff may obtain a temporary restraining order if it files an affidavit (or declaration, see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5) establishing reasonable proof an employee has suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence by defendant and that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee. This latter requirement requires plaintiff to show to the satisfaction of the court it is likely that harm will occur from future unlawful violence in the absence of a restraining order. Similarly, to obtain a permanent injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f), a plaintiff must establish by clear and convincing evidence not only that a defendant engaged in unlawful violence or made credible threats of violence, but also that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee if a prohibitory injunction were not issued due to the reasonable probability unlawful violence will occur in the future (Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 334-335, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86).

[Optional] B. Single Incident Insufficient For Injunctive Relief. A single incident of harassment does not constitute a course of conduct entitling the applicant to injunctive relief (Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 333, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 ; see Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253).

[CONTINUE]

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Respondent _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in opposition to an employer's petition for injunction and application for temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 to prohibit further unlawful violence or threats of violence against its employees by an individual. If the facts warrant, this form may be modified to combine the points of law stated. Although the California Rules of Court provide that memoranda are not required to obtain a temporary restraining order under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e) unless otherwise ordered, neither the statute nor the California Rules of Court specify any procedure for a defendant who wishes to submit an opposition memorandum [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1152(b)].

Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 does provide, however, that a defendant in a lawsuit by an employer to prohibit further unlawful violence or threats of violence against its employees may file a response that explains, excuses, justifies, or denies the alleged unlawful violence or credible threats of violence or may file a cross complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f)]. In addition to the response, the defendant may file and serve declarations. It seems logical, therefore, that a memorandum, applying the law to the facts stated in the response and declarations, could also accompany the defendant's response. Counsel should consult the local court rules and policies regarding the submission of memoranda in these cases.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, e.g., counsel should set forth facts establishing his or her client's behavior does not amount to "unlawful violence" or a "credible threat of violence" as those terms are used in Code Civ. Proc. § 526.8(b).

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Reasonable Probability That Wrongful Acts Will Be Repeated In Future Required

In Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 , defendant's mother was a patient in plaintiff's hospital. After she had undergone cardiac surgery, defendant objected to her discharge from the hospital. Defendant filed a complaint with the Medical Review Board in Sacramento alleging the hospital was attempting to dump his mother from the hospital. Thereafter defendant went with his father to drop off the complaint. A hospital employee contacted them and attempted to arrange a discussion regarding the discharge plans for defendant's mother. Defendant at that time was unable to do so because he was on his way to court to be appointed guardian ad litem for his mother. Defendant and his father returned in the afternoon and requested a meeting advising he intended to record the meeting. After a brief initial meeting with two of the hospital's employees the defendant and his father and the two employees entered into an empty patient room to conduct the hearing at which time defendant produced a tape recorder and repeated his intent to record the meeting. One of the employees told defendant she would not permit the meeting to be recorded. Defendant put away the tape recorder declaring that they would take care of this in writing and started to walk out of the room at which point the other employee closed the door to the room and stated "We need to discuss your mother." She positioned herself between defendant and the door rendering it impossible for defendant to leave the room. Defendant responded that there was nothing to talk about and that he was going to open the door. Again the employee stated "We really need to discuss your mother." Defendant pulled the door open striking the employee and pushing her into the wall. Defendant, visibly angered, left the premises with his father. The employees notified security and one of the employees announced she intended to get a restraining order against defendant. On May 23, 1997, plaintiff petitioned for an injunction to prohibit defendant from harassing its employees under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 alleging that defendant had struck its employee with the door. Plaintiff concurrently applied for a temporary restraining order (TRO), ex parte, under that section alleging defendant may continue to assault or batter an employee of plaintiff. A TRO and an order to show cause were issued on May 23, with a hearing set for June 5. On May 27, defendant appeared ex parte and obtained an order vacating the TRO pending the order to show cause hearing. In doing so, the court relied on defendant's representation that maintenance of the TRO could jeopardize his security clearance. The court, however, conditioned its order on defendant's representation he would stay away for plaintiff's facilities pending the factual hearing. For the next two months, no restraining order was in effect and there was no acts or threats of violence by defendant at any time during this period. During this period defendant's mother was again taken to a plaintiff's facility and remained overnight before being discharged. Thereafter, defendant's mother transferred her health insurance rendering it unlikely she would have to return as a patient to a plaintiff facility. On July 24, the evidentiary hearing was held. At the conclusion of the hearing the court imposed a three year permanent injunction against defendant enjoining him from contacting any of plaintiff's employees or coming within 500 yards of any plaintiff facility or institution unless defendant had a medical emergency and was taken to a plaintiff facility. Defendant appealed (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 327-331, 336) .

The court of appeal reversed (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 336) . In holding that the injunction was improperly issued, the court noted that injunctive relief lies only to prevent threatened injury and has no application to completed wrongs. It should neither serve as punishment for past acts, nor be exercised in absence of any evidence establishing reasonable probability the acts will be repeated in the future. Indeed, a change of circumstances at the time of the hearing, rendering injunctive relief moot or unnecessary, justifies denial of the request. Moreover, not only can injunctive relief be denied when defendant voluntarily discontinued the wrongful conduct, there exists no equitable reason for ordering it when defendant has in good faith discontinued the proscribed conduct. Thus, to authorize issuance of an injunction, it must appear with reasonable certainty that the wrongful acts will be continued or repeated (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 332-333) .

The legislature has declared the availability of injunctive relief in particular situations in a series of statutes such as Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 (threat of harm due to harassment) or Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 (violence towards employees at the workplace). In 1994, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was enacted to establish parallel provisions to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. It authorizes any employer, as defined in Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(d), to pursue a temporary restraining order and an injunction on behalf of its employees to prevent threats or acts of violence by either another employee or third person. Given Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 only allowed injunctive relief for natural persons (see Diamond View Limited v. Herz (1986) 180 Cal. App. 3d 612, 618-619), Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was enacted to allow a corporate employer to bring such an action on behalf of an employee. Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was thus intended to enable employers to seek the same remedy as Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 provides for its employee. The express intent of the author of the legislation was to address the growing phenomenon in California of workplace violence by providing employers with injunctive relief so as to prevent such acts of workplace violence (72 App. 4th 324, 333-334). Consistent with the foregoing, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a) expressly declares the Legislative's intent to provide employers with traditional prohibitory injunctive relief on behalf of their employees who have suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of such violence from facing more in the future. Under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e), a plaintiff may obtain a temporary restraining order if it files an affidavit [or declaration, see Code Civ. Proc. § 2015.5] establishing reasonable proof an employee has suffered unlawful violence or a credible threat of violence by defendant and that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee. This latter requirement requires plaintiff to show to the satisfaction of the court it is likely that harm will occur from future unlawful violence in the absence of a restraining order. This interpretation of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(e) is consistent with the express language of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(a) and the cited underlying legislative intent (72 App. 4th 324, 334).

Similarly, review of the underlying legislative history and documents relevant to enactment of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 has disclosed no evidence of a legislative intent to alter the traditional nature of prohibitory injunctive relief in this setting. Accordingly, to obtain a permanent injunction under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8(f), a plaintiff must establish by clear and convincing evidence not only that a defendant engaged in unlawful violence or made credible threats of violence, but also that great or irreparable harm would result to an employee if a prohibitory injunction were not issued due to the reasonable probability unlawful violence will occur in the future (72 App. 4th 324, 335). Thus, a permanent injunction could only issue in this case if the evidentiary record established the reasonable probability defendant's wrongful acts would be repeated in the future. There was no such evidence (72 App. 4th 324, 336).

[b] Single Incident Insufficient For Injunctive Relief

The facts and procedural background of Scripps Health v. Marin (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 86 , are discussed in § 116.122[3][a]. The court noted that at the time Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was enacted, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 prevented harassment when there has been a knowing and willful course of conduct directed at a specific person which annoys or harasses the person and serves no legitimate purpose. The reasonable construction of this harassment provision required the applicant to establish a course of conduct giving rise to a threat of future harm necessitating injunctive relief. In other words, the course of conduct must be ongoing at the time the injunction is sought, as a single incident of harassment does not constitute a course of conduct entitling the applicant to injunctive relief. The court cited Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 , as authority for this point (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 333) . The court further noted that in 1994, Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 was enacted to establish parallel provisions to Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6. Indeed, the early version of Assembly Bill No. 68 (1993-1994 First Ex. Sess.) in 1994 paralleled the precise language, terminology and process in Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6, including the definition of "harassment" and "[c]ourse of conduct" (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 333 n.8). Code Civ. Proc. § 527.6 was amended in 1998 to parallel the provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8 regarding the definitions of "[u]nlawful violence," "[c]redible threat of violence," and "[c]ourse of conduct" (Stats. 1998, ch. 581, § 2) (72 Cal. App. 4th 324, 333 n.7). Thus, presumably the holding in Leydon also applies when injunctive relief is sought by an employer under Code Civ. Proc. § 527.8.

Leydon v. Alexander (1989) 212 Cal. App. 3d 1, 260 Cal. Rptr. 253 , is discussed in § 116.121[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS

11-117 California Points & Authorities 117.syn

§ 117.syn Synopsis to Chapter 117: INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS

§ 117.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 117.02 Governing Statutes

§ 117.03 Rules of Court

§ 117.04 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

§ 117.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 117.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 117.07-117.19 [Reserved]

§ 117.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Shows Existence of Probable Cause to Detain Person as Mentally Disordered [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5150, 5278]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complaint Showing Probable Cause Fails to State Cause of Action

[b] Probable Cause as a Matter of Law

[c] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

§ 117.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Public Entity or Employee Diagnosing Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 855.8(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity From False Imprisonment Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity From False Imprisonment Liability

§ 117.22 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity Defendant Immune From Direct Liability [Gov. Code § 854.8(d)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Direct Suit Against Public Entity Not Permitted

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Direct Suit Against Public Entity Not Permitted

§ 117.23 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity or Employee Determining Whether to Confine Person for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856(a)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity of Therapist Failing to Confine Patient

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity of Therapist Failing to Confine Patient

§ 117.24 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity or Employee Determining Whether to Release Person From Confinement for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity From Liability for Release of Patient

§ 117.25 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity Defendant Immune From Liability for Escape of Person Confined for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856.2]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immmunity of Public Entity From Liability for Injuries to Escaping Mental Patient

§ 117.26 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Professional Person, Designee, or Peace Officer Releasing Person Before End of 72-Hour Detention

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

[b] Demurrer on Ground of Immunity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

§ 117.27 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Defendant Relatives Caring for Mentally Disordered Person Not Dangerous to Self or Others

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Caring for Nondangerous Relative at Home

§ 117.28 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Shows Failure to Serve Order and Petition for Commitment [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5208]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply With Statutory Prerequisites

[b] Liability for Failure to Serve Order and Petition

§ 117.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Alleges Detention Without Process, Plaintiff's Confinement, and Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Complaint for False Imprisonment

[b] Defendant to Prove Justification for Arrest

[c] Detention for Mental Illness

§ 117.30 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Complaint Alleges Failure to Predict, and Warn of, and Protect From Patient's Threatened Violent Behavior After Patient Communicated to Psychotherapist Serious Threat of Physical Violence Against Reasonably Identifiable Victim or Victims [Civ. Code § 43.92]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Psychotherapist to Reasonably Identifiable Victims

[b] Duty to Others Who Are Close to Victim

[c] No Immunity for Failure to Warn by Public Employee

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Duty of Psychotherapist to Reasonably Identifiable Victims

§ 117.31 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Against Public Employee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy of Liability for Negligence

[b] Diagnosis or Failure to Diagnose Mental Illness or Addiction

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.01

§ 117.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities for use in supporting [see §§ 117.20 -117.27] and opposing [see §§ 117.28 -117.31] a demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment or negligence concerning a mental patient.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersHealthcare LawTreatmentIncompetent, Minor & Mentally Disabled PatientsGeneral OverviewHealthcare LawTreatmentIncompetent, Minor & Mentally Disabled PatientsInstitutionalizationTortsIntentional TortsFalse ImprisonmentGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.02

§ 117.02 Governing Statutes

The involuntary commitment of mentally disordered persons to hospitals and institutions is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq. The detention and treatment of mentally disordered juveniles is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 6550-6552. Receipt of services by developmentally disabled (mentally retarded) persons is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 4500-4846, and the judicial commitment of mentally retarded persons to state hospitals is governed by Welf. & Inst. Code § 6500 et seq.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Healthcare LawTreatmentIncompetent, Minor & Mentally Disabled PatientsGeneral OverviewHealthcare LawTreatmentIncompetent, Minor & Mentally Disabled PatientsInstitutionalizationPublic Health & Welfare LawHealthcareMental Health ServicesCommitmentGeneral OverviewPublic Health & Welfare LawSocial ServicesGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.03

§ 117.03 Rules of Court

Cal. Rules of Ct., Rules 8.304-8.450 and 8.508 govern appeals from orders establishing conservatorships under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5350 et seq., except when otherwise expressly provided by Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.480 [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 8.480(a)].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.04

§ 117.04 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements of memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.05

§ 117.05 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in actions and proceedings involving mentally disordered, developmentally disabled, and other incompetent persons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms for use in particular cases involving mentally disordered and other incompetent persons, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice:

- Ch. 257, False Imprisonment.
- Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians.
- Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators.
- Ch. 282, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Temporary Guardians and Conservators.
- Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds.
- Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice.
- Ch. 285, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Care of Ward or Conservatee.
- Ch. 290, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Maintenance of Ward or Conservatee.
- Ch. 290H, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Termination of Guardianships and Conservatorships.
- Ch. 291, Guardians Ad Litem.

- Ch. 292, Habeas Corpus.
- Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.06

§ 117.06 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda of points and authorities that may be useful in particular actions and proceedings concerning insane and incompetent persons may be found in the following chapters:

- Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions.
- Ch. 13, Adverse Possession.
- Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.
- Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations.
- Ch. 106, Guardianship and Conservatorship.
- Ch. 110, Habeas Corpus.
- Ch. 118, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Capacity to Contract.
- Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-117 California Points & Authorities §§ 117.07-117.19

[Reserved]

§§ 117.07[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.20

§ 117.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Shows Existence of Probable Cause to Detain Person as Mentally Disordered [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5150, 5278]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER
Plaintiff,	)	TO COMPLAINT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Time: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT APPEARS ON THE FACE OF THE COMPLAINT THAT THERE WAS PROBABLE CAUSE TO DETAIN PLAINTIFF AS A MENTALLY DISORDERED PERSON DANGEROUS TO _____ [HIMSELF/HERSELF or OTHERS].

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object by demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action when this ground appears on the face of the complaint [or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.30(a), 430.10(e)).

B. Complaint Showing Probable Cause Fails to State Cause of Action. When the complaint for false imprisonment shows on its face that there was probable cause for the detention of the plaintiff under Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5150, in that there was probable cause to believe that plaintiff was, as a result of mental disorder, a danger to _____ [himself/herself or others], the complaint fails to state a cause of action (Heater v. Southwood Psychiatric Center (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1083, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880).

Persons and entities, such as hospitals and clinics, authorized to detain a mentally disordered person for a 72-hour period may not be held criminally or civilly liable for exercising this authority in accordance with the law (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278). This immunity applies to institutions and agencies with which health care professionals are associated, affiliated, or employed (Cruze v. National Psychiatric Services, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 54-57, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65). Immunity also extends to peace officers, members of attending staff at designated facilities, members of a mobile crisis team, and other professionals designated by the county (Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 74, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9).

To eliminate any concern for possible liability related to the decision to detain a person involuntarily for 72 hours, Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5278 affords immunity to those individuals who exercise the authority to detain in accordance with the law. This immunity allows those individuals to make the decision to impose a 72-hour hold for treatment and evaluation, without fear of exposure to criminal or civil liability. The immunity applies to individuals or entities that make the decision to detain, when that decision is supported by probable cause (Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 76, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9).

The immunity provided by Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5278 is not absolute (Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 77, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9). It extends to claims based on circumstances that are inherent in the involuntary detention, evaluation, and treatment, but it does not confer blanket immunity for any act or omission occurring during the 72-hour hold, no matter how negligent, wrongful, or criminal (Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78-79, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9 (rejecting hospital's suggestion that liability should be limited to extreme or outrageous acts not rationally related to a therapeutic purpose of necessary to maintain detention for required period)). For example, the statute does not insulate from liability negligent medical treatment that falls below the standard of professional care (Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 79 fn. 3, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 9).

C. Probable Cause as a Matter of Law. In an action for false imprisonment, the question of probable or reasonable cause is ordinarily one for the court and not the jury. When the facts are admitted or are beyond controversy, the question is to be determined by the court alone (Whaley v. Jansen (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 222, 227, 25 Cal. Rptr. 184).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a general demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment when the demurrer asserts that the complaint fails to state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action in that it appears on the face of the complaint, or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice, that the complaint alleges facts sufficient to show that there was probable cause for the detention of the person as mentally disordered under to Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for summary judgment in an action for false imprisonment where the defendant can show that there was probable cause for the detention as a matter of law.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints and affirmative defenses for use in actions for false imprisonment, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Complaint Showing Probable Cause Fails to State Cause of Action

In Heater v. Southwood Psychiatric Center (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 , the plaintiff was placed on a 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. In accordance with doctors' orders, the plaintiff was medicated because he was struggling and was highly agitated (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1076) . After his release, the plaintiff sued the hospital and its staff for false imprisonment, assault and battery, and medical malpractice. The trial court rules that the defendants were immune from liability under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 and entered judgment for them on all causes of action (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1078) .

On appeal, the plaintiff asserted that (1) he was falsely imprisoned because he was admitted to the hospital without a doctor's order, (2) the defendants committed a battery because he did not consent to having a tranquilizer administered to him, and (3) the immunity conferred by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 does not apply to medical malpractice (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1079) . In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal held that the uncontradicted evidence demonstrated that the plaintiff had been properly detained under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150, and therefore no false imprisonment had occurred (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081) . As to the battery, the court held that an involuntary detainee need not consent to administration of the type of medication the plaintiff received. In any event, administering medication under the particular circumstances of this case was within the scope of the immunity conferred by § 5278 (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1081-1083) . Finally, the court held that under the circumstances of this case, the immunity afforded by § 5278 also applied to the plaintiff's medical malpractice claim. It stated that this immunity extends to the detention of persons for treatment and evaluation. When read together with Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152, which mandates that treatment be provided to involuntary detainees, no other conclusion is possible than that § 5278 means precisely what it says it means, and that civil liability, whether for false imprisonment, battery, or medical malpractice is precluded insofar as the detention is in accordance with the law (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1083) .

In Whaley v. Jansen (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 222, 25 Cal. Rptr. 184 , plaintiff brought an action in propria persona for false imprisonment against defendants, police officers and their supervisors and employing government entities. Plaintiff alleged in the complaint the facts of his detention, including the fact that he carried a letter from house to house which alleged wrongdoing in government and listed his grievances against various officials, that police officers approached plaintiff and arrested him for vagrancy and took him to the county psychiatric unit, and that plaintiff was released from the psychiatric unit without being charged with a crime or with mental illness. Although plaintiff alleged that there was no probable cause for the detention, defendants demurred to the complaint on the ground that its allegations showed probable cause for the arrest and detention of plaintiff. The trial court sustained the demurrer without further leave to amend and dismissed the complaint as to all defendants. Plaintiff appealed from the judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's actions. In upholding the demurrer, the court found that the question of the existence of probable cause is ordinarily a question for the court rather than the jury and that when the facts are admitted or are beyond controversy, the question is to be determined by the court alone. Basing its determination on the facts as alleged in the complaint as a whole, the court found that the complaint showed probable cause in its allegations which showed the behavior of plaintiff and that the complaint, therefore, failed to state a cause of action for false imprisonment.

This case was decided under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 5050.3, which provided that when any person becomes so mentally ill as to be likely to cause injury to himself or others and to require immediate care, treatment, or restraint, a peace officer who has reasonable cause to believe that such is the case may take the person into custody. Welf. & Inst. Code § 5050.3 was the predecessor to present Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150, which authorizes the detention for 72-hour treatment and evaluation of persons who are, as a result of mental disorder, a danger to themselves or to others or gravely disabled, on probable cause for a police officer to believe that such is the case. The change in the statute should not affect the validity of the case, since detention is still justified by the existence of reasonable cause or probable cause. Any difference between the standard for the existence of reasonable cause and that for probable cause should likewise not affect the usefulness of the case, since the court of appeal found that the complaint showed both reasonable and probable cause for the detention on its face.

[b] Probable Cause as a Matter of Law

Whaley v. Jansen (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 222, 25 Cal. Rptr. 184 , is discussed under § 117.20[3][a].

[c] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

Cruze v. National Psychiatric Services, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 was a medical malpractice action against a hospital arising out of the plaintiff's commitment to the hospital for a 72-hour hold and psychiatric evaluation under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The plaintiff's physician, who was concerned that the plaintiff might be suicidal, contacted the hospital, which dispatched a licensed clinical social worker who was a member of its staff authorized to evaluate and assess persons for possible psychiatric intervention. After conferring with the physician and speaking with the plaintiff, the social worker concluded there was probable cause to believe the plaintiff was a danger to herself or others and, therefore, authorized her admission to the hospital. After admission, the plaintiff was evaluated by a registered nurse and a psychiatrist, who were both on the hospital's staff, and who both concluded the plaintiff met the criteria for involuntary commitment under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The plaintiff was released the next day (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 50-52) .

The trial court granted the hospital's motion for summary judgment, concluding that it was immune from suit under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278. On appeal, the plaintiff asserted that this immunity did not apply to the hospital because it was not an "individual" as that term is used in the statute (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 53-54) . In affirming the summary judgment, the appellate court held that the term "individual" applied to the hospital, even though it was not a natural person, because nothing in the statute suggests that the legislature intended to limit immunity to natural persons. The word "individual" embraces corporations, partnerships, and associations, unless the context indicates otherwise (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 55-56) . Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 includes within its plain meaning individual entities such as hospitals and clinics (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 56) . In addition, the purpose of the procedures under the LPS Act would be defeated if immunity only applied to individual professionals, but not to the institutions with which they are affiliated or employed (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 56) .

Jacobs v. Grossmont Hospital (2003) 108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 133 Cal. Rptr. 2d 218 was an action for professional negligence and premises liability brought against a hospital by a patient who sustained injuries when she fell during a 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 71-72) . The trial court granted summary judgment for the hospital on the ground that the immunity afforded by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 applies to all civil tort liability related to an admission under a lawful Section 5150 hold and that if the initial detention was lawful, that is supported by probable cause, there could be no civil liability for anything that might occur during the detention (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 72-73) .

The court of appeal reversed. It concluded that to effectuate the legislature's purpose of obtaining prompt evaluation and treatment for persons detained under a 72-hour hold, the immunity of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 applies to individuals who initiate and maintain a detention under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. However, Section 5278 does not confer immunity for negligent or other wrongful conduct that may occur in evaluating or treating involuntarily detained patients (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 72) . The court of appeal was unwilling to give the statute the broad interpretation advocated by the defendant, i.e., that the scope of the immunity provided by the statute is not limited to the decision to detain, but includes all acts or omissions rationally related to providing treatment and evaluation, or reasonably incidental to maintain the hold (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 76) . Instead, the court concluded that Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 does not immunize from liability any act or omission that may occur during a lawfully initiated 72-hour holder under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. Interpreting Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 to confer absolute immunity would not protect, but would instead expose to the possibility of abuse, the mentally disordered (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 77) . The immunity of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 extends only to claims based on circumstances that are inherent in an involuntary detention under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 was intended to provide immunity for claims based on conduct that is expressly authorized by the LPS Act, but that would otherwise constitute a civil or criminal wrong; a plaintiff who is properly detained in accordance with the Act may not assert any civil claim based solely on the fact that he or she was detained, evaluated, or treated without his or her consent (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78) . Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 does not, however, confer blanket immunity for any act or omission that might occur during a 72-hour hold, no matter how negligent, wrongful, of even criminal. The court specifically rejected the defendant's assertion that liability should be limited to extreme or outrageous acts not rationally related to either a therapeutic purpose or necessary to maintain the detention for the required period, finding that such a construction of the statute would subvert the intent of the LPS Act to protect the mentally disordered by exposing them to the possibility of grossly negligent or intentional mistreatment, with no legal recourse (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78) . A more reasonable interpretation of the statute compels the conclusion that immunity under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 extends to claims based on facts that are inherent in an involuntary detention under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. If there is probable cause for the detention, the statute provides immunity for the decision to detain, as well as for the detention and its inherent attributes, including the fact that a patient must necessarily be evaluated and treated without his or her consent. Because these are all inherent aspects of the statutory scheme, they cannot provide the basis for a civil suit (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78) . However, immunity does not extend to other negligent acts, intentional torts, or criminal wrongs committed during the course of detention, evaluation, or treatment (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 78-79) . The court concluded that Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 does not provide immunity for injuries proximately caused by negligence or other wrongful acts or omissions that may occur during the course of an otherwise valid detention, and that the legislature did not intend to exonerate health care providers from all liability, including liability for injuries proximately caused by their negligent or criminal acts or omissions in implementing the terms and conditions of a 72-hour hold (108 Cal. App. 4th 69, 79) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.21

§ 117.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Public Entity or Employee Diagnosing Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 855.8(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

NEITHER A PUBLIC ENTITY NOR A PUBLIC EMPLOYEE ACTING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT IS LIABLE FOR INJURY RESULTING FROM DIAGNOSING THAT A PERSON IS AFFLICTED WITH MENTAL ILLNESS OR ADDICTION.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Immunity of Public Entity or Employee. Neither a public entity nor a public employee acting within the scope of employment is liable for injury resulting from diagnosing that a person is afflicted with mental illness or addiction (Gov. Code § 855.8(a)).

C. Immunity From False Imprisonment Liability. Section 855.8(a) of the Government Code immunizes a government employee from liability for false imprisonment resulting from a diagnosis of mental illness which results in the confinement of the plaintiff as a mental patient (Fish v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 327, 333-334, 54 Cal. Rptr. 656).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment brought against a public employee or public entity when the public employee has diagnosed that the plaintiff has a mental illness or addiction and the diagnosis has resulted in the confinement of the plaintiff.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For a discussion and forms for complaints for false imprisonment against a public employee, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity From False Imprisonment Liability

Fish v. Regents of Univ. of Cal. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 327, 54 Cal. Rptr. 656 , was an action for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution by a person who had been detained in a mental hospital for evaluation and released because there was insufficient reason for commitment. Defendants in the false imprisonment action were the doctor who had given certain information to a doctor who had committed plaintiff, the committing doctor, and the public entity employer of the doctors. Defendant moved for a nonsuit, and the trial court granted the motion. Plaintiff appealed. After finding that the action for malicious prosecution was barred by Gov. Code § 821.6, providing that a public employee is not liable for instituting a judicial or administrative proceeding, the court of appeal considered whether the nonsuit had been properly sustained by the trial court. As for the doctor who had reported the information which had led to plaintiff's detention, the court of appeal found that the reporting of facts which precipitate a detention does not constitute false imprisonment, even if the information is mistakenly given and even though it is the principal cause of the detention (in the absence of bad faith and where the doctor did not take an active part in the detention). The court then found that the doctor who had recommended the detention was not liable for false imprisonment. In part, the court based the finding on the immunity granted by Gov. Code § 820.2 for a public employee's act or omission which was the result of the exercise of discretion vested in him or her, whether or not the discretion was abused. The court found, however, that even if that section did not confer immunity, Gov. Code § 855.8, which provides immunity for injury resulting from diagnosing or failing to diagnose mental illness, precluded liability on the part of the doctor. The court further found that Gov. Code § 855.8 confers immunity for a preliminary diagnosis of mental illness which results in the detention of a person for observation and diagnosis.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity From False Imprisonment Liability

In Gonzalez v. Paradise Valley Hospital (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 735, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 903 , the appellate court held that in the plaintiffs' action against a psychiatrist and a hospital for professional negligence arising from their son's death after he escaped from the hospital's psychiatric unit during an involuntary 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. § 5150, the trial court erred in ruling that under Heater v. Southwood Psychiatric Center, discussed below, the defendants were immunized by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 from any breaches of the applicable standards of care during the detention. The appellate court held that Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 is inapplicable to actions for negligence stemming from acts or omissions in evaluation or treatment during a 72-hour hold. Protected conduct is confined to the exercise of statutory authority to detain, evaluate, and treat against a patient's wishes; immunity does not extend to the manner in which evaluation and treatment are conducted (111 Cal. App. 4th 735, 741-742) .

In Heater v. Southwood Psychiatric Center (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 , a young man whose brother had been murdered became withdrawn and despondent and began to drink to excess. After he began to cry and told his mother that he needed help, his mother and stepfather brought him to the defendant psychiatric center, where he told an intake counselor that he wanted to get the people who had murdered his brother. He also expressed suicidal thoughts. The intake counselor contacted the center's medical director and relayed the facts to him, after which the director ordered that the young man be detained for 72 hours under the authority of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. Some time later, the young man attempted to force his way out of the center, but a nurse prevented him from leaving by closing the door. After other hospital employees were called to the scene, the young man threatened them with violence. He was physically restrained, and the nurse injected him with a tranquilizer. After examining the young man and consulting with his mother and stepfather, two other doctors certified that he met the criteria for a 14-day hold. At a court hearing, the doctors testified that they no longer believed he was a danger to himself or others and could be safely released. After the court released the young man, he filed a civil complaint against the psychiatric center, the doctors, and others, alleging false imprisonment, assault and battery, negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, medical malpractice, libel, and conspiracy. The court found that he had been detained in accordance with the legal requirements of the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act and concluded that the individual defendants were immune from liability under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278, which states that individuals authorized to detain will not be held either criminally or civilly liable for exercising this authority in accordance with the law. The court held that this immunity extends to all forms of civil liability, including liability for medical malpractice (42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 1083) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.22

§ 117.22 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity Defendant Immune From Direct Liability [Gov. Code § 854.8(d)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

UNDER SECTION 854.8(d) OF THE GOVERNMENT CODE, A PUBLIC ENTITY CANNOT BE DIRECTLY SUED TO ENFORCE ITS LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE OR THE WRONGFUL ACT OR OMISSION OF ITS EMPLOYEE.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Immunity of Public Entity From Liability. Although a public employee is not exonerated from liability except as provided in Government Code Section 854.8(a) for injury proximately caused by his/her negligent or wrongful act or omission, a public entity is required only to pay judgment, as provided in Government Code Sections 825 through 825.6 (indemnification of public employees), based on a claim against a public employee who is lawfully engaged in the practice of one of the healing arts under any law of this state for malpractice arising from an act or omission in the scope of his/her employment, and to pay any compromise or settlement of a claim or action based on the malpractice, to which the public entity has agreed (Gov. Code § 854.8(a), (d)).

C. Direct Suit Against Public Entity Not Permitted. Under Government Code Section 854.8(d), the public entity employing a negligent public employee defendant cannot be sued directly to enforce its liability for that negligence. There must first be a _____ [judgment or settlement to which the public entity has agreed] (Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 844, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]

Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages against a public entity employer of an allegedly negligent employee arising out of the injury of a mental patient or caused by a patient in a mental institution.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in an action against a public entity for the negligence of an employee to support defendant public entity's motion for judgment on the pleadings or motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Direct Suit Against Public Entity Not Permitted

In Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868 , petitioner, the County of Los Angeles, sought a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from proceeding further with an action brought by the real party in interest, a former patient in a mental hospital, who had alleged in a complaint that she had suffered injuries caused by the negligence of the employees of the county hospital in failing to protect her from injury as her condition warranted. The county contended that the action should be dismissed insofar as it purported to go directly against the county because it was barred by Gov. Code § 854.8(d). Although Gov. Code § 854.8(d) was subsequently amended, the provisions relevant to the case with respect to the liability of a public entity for the negligence of a public employee and any judgment entered against a public employee remain substantially the same as those set forth in Paragraph C of this form.

The Supreme Court found that Gov. Code § 854.8 and other sections of the Government Code concerning mental institutions reflect the policy of the Legislature that provides immunity for diagnosing, treating, confining, and releasing the mentally ill but makes clear that public entities and employees are liable for injuries caused by negligent or wrongful acts or omissions in administering or failing to administer prescribed treatment or confinement. Although the Court found that the acts of the employees were negligent in this case and that the employees were, therefore, liable, the Court held that the public entity could not be directly sued to enforce its liability for that negligence under the provisions of Gov. Code § 854.8(d). The Court held that there must first be a judgment against the employees in order for the public entity to be required to pay. The Court also considered and rejected the plaintiff's contention that Gov. Code § 854.8 was a denial of equal protection of the laws to mental patients. The Court found a rational basis for the distinction between mental patients and other patients. The Court, therefore, issued the peremptory writ of mandate as prayed by the county.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Direct Suit Against Public Entity Not Permitted

In Hata v. Los Angeles County Harbor/UCLA Medical Center (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1791, 1804, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 630 , the court held that the failure to raise the immunity set forth in Gov. Code § 854.8(d) as an affirmative defense does not waive the immunity, because the immunity is jurisdictional and may be raised at any time.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.23

§ 117.23 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity or Employee Determining Whether to Confine Person for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856(a)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

NEITHER A PUBLIC ENTITY NOR A PUBLIC EMPLOYEE ACTING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT IS LIABLE FOR ANY INJURY RESULTING FROM DETERMINING IN ACCORDANCE WITH ANY APPLICABLE ENACTMENT WHETHER TO CONFINE A PERSON FOR MENTAL ILLNESS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Decision Whether to Confine. Neither a public entity nor a public employee acting within the scope of employment is liable for any injury resulting from determining in accordance with any applicable enactment whether to confine a person for mental illness or addiction (Gov. Code § 856(a)(1)).

C. Immunity of Therapist Failing to Confine Patient. A therapist who fails to recommend that a patient be confined for mental illness is immune pursuant to Government Code Section 856(a) from liability to a person harmed by the patient after the failure to confine the person for mental illness and a demurrer of a defendant therapist to a complaint by a person injured by the person who was not confined will be sustained (Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 448, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

This memorandum may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment when the complaint alleges that a public employee is liable for false imprisonment as a result of a determination whether to confine a person for mental illness, a determination concerning the terms of the confinement, or a decision whether to release, parole, or grant a leave of absence to the person.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, this memorandum may be used to support a demurrer to a complaint for damages for negligence against a therapist who has made one of the enumerated determinations concerning a patient who has then injured a third party.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity of Therapist Failing to Confine Patient

In Tarasoff v. Regents of the University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 , plaintiffs' daughter had been killed by the patient of defendant psychotherapist. The plaintiffs brought an action for wrongful death against the treating psychotherapist, other psychotherapists at the university hospital where the patient was treated, the university employer of the therapists, and the police officers who had released the patient from confinement after an attempt to confine him for mental illness. Plaintiffs alleged in the complaint that the patient threatened to kill their daughter and confided his intention to the therapist treating him as an outpatient; that the campus police briefly detained the patient at the therapist's request but released him when he appeared rational; that the therapist's superior ordered that no further action be taken to detain the patient; and that no one warned the daughter of the danger to her. The superior court sustained defendants' demurrers to plaintiffs' second amended complaints without leave to amend. Plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court found that plaintiffs could amend their complaint to state a cause of action if they alleged that, regardless of the therapists' unsuccessful attempt to confine the patient, since they knew the patient was at large and dangerous, their failure to warn the daughter or other person likely to inform her of the danger constituted a breach of the therapists' duty to exercise reasonable care to protect the daughter. Although the Court thus found that there was liability for the therapists' failure to warn, it found that Gov. Code § 856 insulated them from liability for failing to confine the patient. In reaching this conclusion, the Court determined that the immunity provided by the statute is not limited to those public employees designated by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 as authorized finally to adjudicate a patient's confinement. The Court found that Gov. Code § 856 covers any government employee who requests or initiates confinement, not only an employee who makes the final determination whether to confine the patient. The action of the therapist's supervisor, in recommending that the patient not be confined, therefore, fell within the statutory immunity as interpreted by the Court. As a result, the Court upheld the demurrer to the complaint to the extent that it alleged a cause of action based on the therapists' failure to confine the patient (17 Cal. 3d 425, 448) .

NOTE:

In response to Tarasoff, the legislature enacted Civ. Code § 43.92, which provides immunity to psychotherapists for liability in failing to warn of and protect from a patient's threatened violent behavior, or in failing to predict and warn of and protect from a patient's violent behavior, except when the patient has communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim or victims. When there is a duty to warn and protect under these limited circumstances, a psychotherapist discharges this duty by making reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victim or victims and to a law enforcement agency. No monetary liability or cause of action can be brought against a psychotherapist who discharges his or her duty to warn [Code § 43.92(b)].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity of Therapist Failing to Confine Patient

Bragg v. Valdez (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 804 was an action for damages by the surviving heirs at law of a decedent against two psychotherapists who had undertaken the care and treatment of an individual who was subject to a 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 and to a subsequent 14-day hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5250. This individual was released because he did not have medical insurance. Following his release, he killed the decedent (111Cal. App. 4th 421, 425-427) . The court held that the plaintiffs alleged two viable legal theories that would support a cause of action against the defendants: (1) the defendants' failure to advise the individual being treated and his family of the grave consequences that could occur if he were to discontinue his antipsychotic medications; and (2) the defendants' release of this individual who was a danger to himself and others for a non-medical reason, lack of insurance, without taking steps to protect the public (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 429) . The court held that an action by a person the patient injures based on a psychiatrist's failure to comply with the duties imposed under the involuntary commitment procedures of the LPS Act is not barred by Civ. Code § 43.92 or by Tarasoff. It noted that the complaint in this case did not allege a failure to warn a known victim, but instead alleged a negligent release based on factors other than the professional judgment that is required when a psychiatrist treats an individual who is a danger to self or others (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 433-435) .

Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864 was an action by a victim's parents against a therapist for wrongful death based on professional negligence, alleging that the therapist's patient posed a foreseeable danger to the victim and the therapist failed to discharge his duty to warn the victim or a law enforcement agency as required by Civ. Code § 43.92. Following the patient's release from the hospital, he murdered the victim and then committed suicide. The issue was whether the therapist's duty to warn could be based on a communication the patient's father made to the therapist to the effect that his son had expressed an intention to harm the victim. The appellate court held that a communication made by a member of the patient's family to the patient's therapist for the purpose of advancing the patient's therapy is a patient communication within the meaning of Civ. Code § 43.92. Thus, a therapist's duty to warn a victim arises if the information communicated by the family member leads the therapist to believe or predict that the patient poses a serious risk of grave bodily injury to this individual (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 817-820) . The statute only applies, however, to statements by family members of a threat made by the patient, not to statements of a mere belief that the patient poses a danger (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 820 fn.12).

The court also held that a therapist has a duty to warn if, and only if, the threat the therapist has learned--whether from the patient or a family member--actually leads the therapist to believe the patient poses a risk of grave bodily injury to another person (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 821) . A threat to take another's life, if believed, is sufficient to trigger a therapist's duty to warn the intended victim and a law enforcement agency. The duty to warn can also arise if the therapist becomes aware that the patient intends to commit an act of grave bodily injury, akin to "mayhem" as defined by Pen. Code § 203 or "serious bodily injury" as defined by Pen. Code § 243(f)(4) (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 821, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864).

Calderon v. Glick (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 707 was an action against two psychotherapists for wrongful death and personal injuries based on failure to warn and professional malpractice. Their patient shot and killed three members of his former girlfriend's family and wounded two more. Summary judgment was granted to the defendants on the cause of action for failure to warn, based on the court's conclusion that liability was precluded by Civ. Code § 43.92(a) because the patient had not communicated to the defendants any threats of physical violence against the former girlfriend or members of her family (131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 230-232) . Summary judgment also was granted to the defendants on the cause of action for professional malpractice, because the defendants did not owe a duty of care to the plaintiffs. The transaction between the defendants and the patient was not intended to affect or benefit the plaintiffs in any way, but was intended to benefit the patient by providing him with therapy for his mental problems. The defendants could not have reasonably foreseen that their patient would harm members of his former girlfriend's family because they had no information indicating that he had been violent in the past, he always insisted that he did not intend to harm his former girlfriend or anyone else, and his family never indicated to the defendants that he might harm another person. Although the plaintiffs unquestionably suffered injury, the connection between the defendants' conduct and the injury was not sufficiently close to impose on the defendants a duty of care to the plaintiffs. Their patient inflicted the injuries because of his mental illness and his delusional belief that his former girlfriend had deliberately infected him with HTLV (human T-cell lymphotropic virus). The defendants were not responsible for his mental illness or delusional belief, which existed before he entered therapy (131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 232-234) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.24

§ 117.24 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity or Employee Determining Whether to Release Person From Confinement for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856(a)(3)]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

NEITHER A PUBLIC ENTITY NOR A PUBLIC EMPLOYEE ACTING WITHIN THE SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT IS LIABLE FOR ANY INJURY RESULTING FROM DETERMINING IN ACCORDANCE WITH ANY APPLICABLE ENACTMENT WHETHER TO _____ [PAROLE or GRANT A LEAVE OF ABSENCE TO or RELEASE] A PERSON CONFINED FOR MENTAL ILLNESS OR ADDICTION.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Parole, Leave of Absence, or Release. Neither a public entity nor a publicemployee acting within the scope of employment is liable for any injury resulting from determining in accordance with any applicable enactment whether to parole, grant a leave of absence to, or release a person confined for mental illness or addiction (Gov. Code § 856(a)(3)).

C. Immunity From Liability for Release of Patient. Government Code Section 856(a)(3) creates an absolute immunity in a public entity and its employees for injuries which result from a determination to release a person from confinement in a medical facility for mental illness. Hence, a demurrer of defendant public employees and entities to a complaint brought by persons injured by a person released from confinement for mental illness should be sustained (Hernandez v. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 895, 899, 90 Cal. Rptr. 205).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages against a public employee or public entity based on the determination to parole, grant a leave of absence to, or release a person confined for mental illness or addiction.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity From Liability for Release of Patient

Hernandez v. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 895, 90 Cal. Rptr. 205 , was an action for damages for negligence brought by the heirs of a person killed by a mental patient released from a state institution. Plaintiffs alleged that the employees of the institution had a duty to maintain proper records of the treatment, care, and testing of inmates and that, if they perform that duty negligently, they are liable for damages to a person injured as a result. Plaintiffs further contended that whenever negligent maintenance of records deprives the releasing authority of full information about the true condition of an inmate and results in release of the inmate in a dangerous condition, the state and its employees are liable in damages for injuries to third persons brought about by the release. The state demurred to plaintiffs' complaint on the ground of the immunity conferred by Gov. Code §§ 856 and 855.8. The trial court sustained the demurrer and dismissed the action. The court of appeal affirmed and found that Gov. Code § 856(a)(3), which creates an absolute immunity in a public entity and its employees for injuries which result from a determination to release a person from confinement in a medical facility for mental illness, specifically controlled the issue of liability in this case. The court further rejected plaintiffs' attempt to circumvent the immunity provided by that statute by arguing that the public employees were liable for failure to maintain records adequately, resulting in the premature release of the patient. The court found that Gov. Code § 856 provides a broad immunity covering all those involved in the process leading to release and that its protection is not restricted to the custodial officer who makes the final decision to release. The court considered that the legislative policy was to protect a patient from malpractice and not to protect the patient or the public from unwarranted release from confinement. It explained that the Legislature intended to encourage a policy of free release from confinement and that adoption of a system of liability for improper release would have some inhibiting effect on the speed and frequency with which inmates are released from confinement. Thus, the order of dismissal of the trial court was affirmed.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.25

§ 117.25 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Public Entity Defendant Immune From Liability for Escape of Person Confined for Mental Illness [Gov. Code § 856.2]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

UNDER GOVERNMENT CODE SECTION 856.2(a)(2), A PUBLIC ENTITY IS NOT LIABLE FOR INJURY CAUSED BY OR TO AN ESCAPED PERSON WHO HAS BEEN CONFINED FOR MENTAL ILLNESS.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Immunity of Public Entity From Liability for Injuries Caused by Escaping Mental Patient. A public entity is not liable for an injury caused by an escaping or escaped person who has been confined for mental illness (Gov. Code § 856.2(a)(1)).

[AND/OR]

C. Immunity of Public Entity From Liability for Injuries to Escaping Mental Patient. A public entity is not liable for an injury to, or the wrongful death of, an escaping or escaped person who has been confined for mental illness (Gov. Code § 856.2(a)(2); Los Angeles County-U.S.C. Medical Center v. Superior Court (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 454, 460-463, 202 Cal. Rptr. 222).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for negligence when the complaint alleges that a public entity is liable for damages as a result of negligence in allowing a person confined for mental illness to escape from custody [see Gov. Code § 856.2(a)].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to suppport a defendant's motion for summary judgment [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immmunity of Public Entity From Liability for Injuries to Escaping Mental Patient

In Los Angeles County-U.S.C. Medical Center v. Superior Court (1984) 155 Cal. App. 3d 454, 202 Cal. Rptr. 222 , plaintiff was injured after escaping from a county medical center where she was receiving tests after being held at a county mental health unit. In plaintiff's action against the mental health unit and the medical center for negligence, the center moved for summary judgment on the ground that it was immunized under Gov. Code § 856.2 from injuries to escaped persons confined for mental illness. The trial court denied the motion on the ground that a triable issue of material fact existed whether or not plaintiff was confined when she left the facility. Defendant petitioned for a writ of mandate to vacate the trial court order.

The court of appeal issued a peremptory writ of mandate, directing the trial court to vacate its order denying defendant's motion and enter a new order granting the motion. Plaintiff had first been placed on a 72-hour detention for evaluation at a county mental health unit before being transferred to defendant medical center for tests. The court held that this detention constituted a confinement within the meaning of Gov. Code § 856.2 (155 Cal. App. 3d 454, 460-461) . The court then held that defendant's negligence in restraining plaintiff did not serve to vitiate the escape immunity under Gov. Code § 856.2 (155 Cal. App. 3d 454, 461-463) . The court also held that the immunity is not limited to escapes from a licensed mental health facility (155 Cal. App. 3d 454, 463) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.26

§ 117.26 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Professional Person, Designee, or Peace Officer Releasing Person Before End of 72-Hour Detention

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

_____ [THE PROFESSIONAL PERSON IN CHARGE OF THE FACILITY PROVIDING 72-HOUR TREATMENT and/or THE PROFESSIONAL PERSON'S DESIGNEE and/or THE MEDICAL DIRECTOR OF THE FACILITY and/or THE MEDICAL DIRECTOR'S DESIGNEE and/or THE PSYCHIATRIST DIRECTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PERSON'S TREATMENT and/or THE PSYCHOLOGIST WHO HAS PERSONALLY EVALUATED THE PERSON and/or THE PEACE OFFICER RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PERSON'S DETAINMENT] SHOULD NOT BE HELD CIVILLY LIABLE FOR ANY ACTION BY A PERSON RELEASED _____ [BEFORE THE END or AT THE END] OF 72 HOURS PURSUANT TO WELFARE AND INSTITUTIONS SECTIONS 5150-5156.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

[EITHER]

B. Immunity for Mental Health Professional. Notwithstanding Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5113, if the provisions of Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5152 have been met, the professional person in charge of the facility providing 72-hour treatment and evaluation, his or her designee, the medical director of the facility or his or her designee described in Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5152, and the psychiatrist or psychologist directly responsible for the person's treatment may not be held civilly or criminally liable for any action by a person released before the end or at the end of 72 hours (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154(a), (b); see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152(a) (psychologist who has personally evaluated or examined person, and who has collaborative relationship with psychiatrist, may authorize early release after consulting with psychiatrist); Lowe v. County of San Diego (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 527-530, 228 Cal. Rptr. 139). This immunity applies to institutions and agencies with which health care professionals are associated, affiliated, or employed (Cruze v. National Psychiatric Services, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal.

App. 4th 48, 54-57, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65).

[AND/OR]

C. Immunity for Peace Officer. The peace officer responsible for the detainment of the person shall not be civilly or criminally liable for any action by a person released at or before the end of 72 hours (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154(c)).

[CONTINUE]

D. Demurrer on Ground of Immunity. The demurrer of a defendant entitled to the immunity provided by Section 5154 of the Welfare and Institutions Code from civil liability for actions by a person released at or before the end of 72 hours to a complaint brought by a plaintiff injured by the action of a person so released will be sustained on the ground of the immunity (Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 449-450, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages for negligence brought by a person injured by a person released at or before the end of a 72-hour detention for evaluation and treatment pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5150-5156. Defendant demurs on the ground that the immunity provided by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 is applicable.

Similar immunities are provided by Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5173 (detention of inebriates), 5259.3 (release of person certified for intensive treatment at or before the end of 14 days), 5267 (release of person held for further intensive treatment at or before end of 14 days), 5270.50 (release of person held for further intensive treatment at or before end of 30 days), 5306 (release of person held for 90-day involuntary treatment at or before the end of 90 days), and 5278 (immunity for exercise of authority to detain person in accordance with law). In appropriate instances this form may be adapted to support demurrers based on these similar statutes.

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. Thus, counsel should argue that Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 is applicable to the facts, that is, he or she should show that the medical professional or peace officer is within the class of persons immunized from liability and that the allegedly negligent conduct is within the range of acts immunized [see Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 461-463, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

Lowe v. County of San Diego (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 228 Cal. Rptr. 139 , was a negligence action brought by a guardian on behalf of a child against defendant county, based on the failure of a county-employed physician to warn or otherwise use reasonable care to protect the child's mother from the child's father. The father had stated to police officers that he wanted to kill the mother. The officers involuntarily committed the father to a mental facility operated by the county. A physician at the facility released the father the following day, prior to the end of the 72-hour treatment and evaluation period allowed under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152 for involuntary commitments. The releasing physician had knowledge of the father's desire to kill the mother, and was aware that another physician at the clinic had diagnosed the father as having a latent type of schizophrenia. Approximately one month after the father's release, the father shot and killed the mother and then shot and killed himself. The trial court granted a nonsuit regarding the county's liability and plaintiff appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court first addressed the issue of whether the treating physician owed a duty to the mother, noting the rule in Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 (see § 117.30[3][a]), that a psychotherapist must take steps to protect a third party when the psychotherapist knows that a patient poses a serious danger of violence to another (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 522) . Concluding that the Tarasoff duty applied, the court found that the trier of fact should be allowed to determine whether reasonable protective steps were taken (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523, 524) . The court then analyzed the applicability of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 to the psychotherapist's conduct. Plaintiff contended that the father's commitment was voluntary, and that consequently Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 did not immunize the conduct of the treating physicians (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 525) . Rejecting this argument, the court found that there was no evidence of a voluntary commitment (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 526) . The court also noted that, according to plaintiff's opening statement, the father's release tracked the requirements of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152 for early release from 72-hour confinements, and that the releasing physician was acting as the professional person in charge of the mental facility or as the designee of such a person, and was therefore entitled to immunity under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 528) . Plaintiff argued that Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 was inapplicable because plaintiff's claims were not based on the father's postrelease action (killing the mother) but on the releasing physician's failure to do anything to protect the mother from danger. The court rejected this argument, noting that a policy behind the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.) is to prevent inappropriate, indefinite, and ivoluntary commitment of mentally disordered persons and others. The court stated that immunization of the shooting without immunization of the activities that "loaded the gun" would defeat the purpose of the act, which is to encourage early release (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 530) .

Cruze v. National Psychiatric Services, Inc. (2003) 105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 129 Cal. Rptr. 2d 65 was a medical malpractice action against a hospital arising out of the plaintiff's commitment to the hospital for a 72-hour hold and psychiatric evaluation under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The plaintiff's physician, who was concerned that the plaintiff might be suicidal, contacted the hospital, which dispatched a licensed clinical social worker who was a member of its staff authorized to evaluate and assess persons for possible psychiatric intervention. After conferring with the physician and speaking with the plaintiff, the social worker concluded there was probable cause to believe the plaintiff was a danger to herself or others and, therefore, authorized her admission to the hospital. After admission, the plaintiff was evaluated by a registered nurse and a psychiatrist, who were both on the hospital's staff, and who both concluded the plaintiff met the criteria for involuntary commitment under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The plaintiff was released the next day (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 50-52) .

The trial court granted the hospital's motion for summary judgment, concluding that it was immune from suit under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278. On appeal, the plaintiff asserted that this immunity did not apply to the hospital because it was not an "individual" as that term is used in the statute (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 53-54) . In affirming the summary judgment, the appellate court held that the term "individual" applied to the hospital, even though it was not a natural person, because nothing in the statute suggests that the Legislature intended to limit immunity to natural persons. The word "individual" embraces corporations, partnerships, and associations, unless the context indicates otherwise (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 55-56) . Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 includes within its plain meaning individual entities such as hospitals and clinics (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 56) . In addition, the purpose of the procedures under the LPS Act would be defeated if immunity only applied to individual professionals, but not to the institutions with which they are affiliated or employed (105 Cal. App. 4th 48, 56) .

[b] Demurrer on Ground of Immunity

The facts of Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 , are discussed in § 117.23[3][a].

In that case, the trial court had also sustained the demurrer of the campus police officer defendants to the complaint, on the ground that the campus police were immunized from liability for acts of the patient whom they had failed to confine pursuant to the order of the therapist. The officers had determined when they detained the patient that he was rational and had released him. The Supreme Court upheld the trial court's sustaining of the demurrer of the campus police defendants and found that the immunity provided by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 covered the decision of peace officers to release a person as not suitable for 72-hour detention for mental disorder and that the campus police officers, although not technically within the definition then set forth by statute [see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5008(i); former Penal Code §§ 830.1, 830.2], were immune under the terms of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 because plaintiffs sought to charge them with the duty set forth under the Welfare and Institutions Code and they were, therefore, entitled to the applicable immunities. The Court found that the plaintiffs had failed on appeal to show that the trial court erred in sustaining the demurrer of the peace officers without leave to amend.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Immunity for Mental Health Professional

Coburn v. Sievert (2005) 133 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 35 Cal. Rptr. 3d 596 was an action for damages by a patient and his father against a psychiatrist who had treated and released the patient early from an involuntary 72-hour detention under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The day after his release, the patient had a violent outburst on an airplane with his father. The patient and the father alleged causes of action for negligent treatment and premature release and sought damages arising from the acts the patient committed on the airplane. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the psychiatrist on the ground that under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154(a), the psychiatrist was immune from liability as a treating psychiatrist who authorized early release based on his personal observations of the patient (133 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1488-1489) .

The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the psychiatrist had satisfied the conditions imposed by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152(a) for an early release, including having a subjective belief that the patient no longer required evaluation or treatment. Summary judgment was properly granted because the patient failed to show a triable issue of fact regarding the psychiatrist's subjective belief (133 Cal. App. 4th 1483, 1498-1505) .

Bragg v. Valdez (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 804 was an action for damages by the surviving heirs at law of a decedent against two psychotherapists who had undertaken the care and treatment of an individual who was subject to a 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 and to a subsequent 14-day hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5250, and who killed the decedent following his release. During the detention period, this individual communicated several serious threats of physical violence against third parties, struck a security guard, and threatened to hurt himself. He was physically restrained and was prescribed antipsychotic medications. This individual was discharged at the beginning of the 14-day hold because he did not have medical insurance. Immediately following his release, he stopped taking his prescribed medications. Within days, he attacked and killed the decedent (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 425-427) .

The court held that the plaintiffs had alleged two viable legal theories that would support a cause of action against the defendants: (1) the defendants' failure to advise the individual being treated and his family of the grave consequences that could occur if he were to discontinue his medications; and (2) the defendants' release of this individual who was a danger to himself and others for a non-medical reason--lack of insurance--without taking steps to protect the public ( 111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 429) . A treating psychiatrist who releases a patient who has been involuntarily committed under the LPS Act, merely because the patient does not have insurance, may be liable to the patient and any person the patient injures. The immunities for treating psychiatrists contained in the Act are not applicable, unless the treating psychiatrist complies with the requirements of the Act before releasing a patient, i.e., the psychiatrist must believe, based on his or her own personal observations, that the patient is no longer a danger (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 425, 433) . A psychiatrist's decision to release a patient under the Act must be made on medical, not monetary, grounds (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 431-432) . An action by a person the patient injures based on a psychiatrist's failure to comply with the duties imposed under the involuntary commitment procedures of the LPS Act is not barred by Civ. Code § 43.92 or Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 , which preclude a cause of action against a psychotherapist for failing to warn of a patient's threatened violent behavior unless the patient has made a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 433-435) .

Ford v. Norton (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 974, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 776 was a medical malpractice action against a psychiatrist and a psychologist. The plaintiff had been involuntarily detained in the intensive care unit of a psychiatric hospital under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150. The following morning, after spending 30 to 40 minutes with the plaintiff, the defendant psychologist determined that the plaintiff should be released from involuntary detention. The psychologist phoned the psychiatrist on call, who wrote the plaintiff a prescription for an anti-psychotic medication and medically cleared him for discharge. The psychologist then discharged the plaintiff, less than 12 hours after his detention. Within five hours of his discharge, the plaintiff returned to his apartment and stabbed his roommate, seriously injuring him.

The trial court granted the defendants' motion for nonsuit based upon their immunity under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154. The court ruled that wherever the term "psychiatrist" is found in Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5152 and 5154, it must be replaced with "psychologist or psychiatrist." The appellate court reversed. Under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154, immunity applies only if the provisions of Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152 are met. That section provides that an early release may occur only if "the psychiatrist directly responsible for the person's treatment believes, as a result of his or her personal observations, that the person no longer requires evaluation or treatment." Thus, a psychiatrist must make the decision to release the individual. In this case, this requirement was not met. As a result, neither the psychologist who recommended early release, nor the psychiatrist who authorized the release, qualified for immunity.

NOTE:

After Ford v. Norton was decided, the legislature amended Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152(a) to provide that if both a psychiatrist and a psychologist have personally evaluated or examined the person and there is a collaborative treatment relationship between them, either may authorize the person's release, but only after they have consulted with each other. In the event of a clinical or professional disagreement about an early release, the 72-hour hold must be maintained unless the facility's medical director overrules the decision of the psychiatrist or psychologist who opposes the release. Both the psychiatrist and the psychologist must enter their findings, concerns, or objections into the person's medical record [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5152(a)].

For discussion of Heater v. Southwood Psychiatric Center (1996) 42 Cal. App. 4th 1068, 49 Cal. Rptr. 2d 880 , which held that a psychiatric center, doctors, and others were immune under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5278 from liability in an action by the detained person alleging false imprisonment, assault and battery, negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, medical malpractice, libel, and conspiracy, see § 117.21[4][a].

In Michael E.L. v. County of San Diego (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 228 Cal. Rptr. 139 , the court held that the immunity afforded by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 does apply in a case in which a psychiatrist fails to warn an individual of a patient's specific threats of harm against that individual, and the patient harms the individual, as long as the psychiatrist authorized release of the patient in accordance with the required statutory findings, i.e., that the patient no longer posed a threat to self or others. A psychiatrist owes a duty under Tarasoff to take reasonable care to protect an intended victim from the danger of serious violence he or she perceives in a person placed under a 72-hour hold for evaluation and treatment, but is immune from liability if the person's release complies with the statutory requirements (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523-524, 527, 530) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.27

§ 117.27 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Defendant Relatives Caring for Mentally Disordered Person Not Dangerous to Self or Others

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.20[1].]

A COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES BY A PERSON INJURED BY A MENTALLY DISORDERED RELATIVE FOR WHOM DEFENDANT IS CARING DOES NOT STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IF NO FACTS ARE ALLEGED SHOWING THAT THE MENTALLY DISORDERED PERSON WAS SUFFICIENTLY DANGEROUS TO HIMSELF/HERSELF OR OTHERS THAT A PETITION FOR EVALUATION OR COMMITMENT UNDER THE LANTERMAN-PETRIS-SHORT ACT WOULD BE GRANTED.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 117.20]1], Paragraph A.]

B. Caring for Nondangerous Relative at Home. The demurrer of a defendant may be sustained where the complaint by a plaintiff injured by the act of a mentally disordered person and brought against relatives caring for the person in their home does not allege ultimate facts showing that the mentally disordered person was dangerous to himself/herself or others at least sufficient to warrant a reasonable assumption that a petition for evaluation or commitment under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act (see Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5200-5213) would be granted. The assumption of a moral obligation to care for an ill relative should not be equated to a guarantee and indemnification agreement with respect to the ill person's conduct on or off the relatives' premises (Alva v. Cook (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 899, 909, 123 Cal. Rptr. 166).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,

_____ [firm name, if any]

By: _____ [signature]

_____ [typed name]

Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint for damages for injury to a third person resulting from the negligence of defendants in caring for a mentally disordered relative on their premises, when the complaint does not allege ultimate facts showing that the mentally disordered person was dangerous to himself or herself or others at least sufficient to warrant a reasonable assumption that a petition for evaluation or commitment under Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5200-5213 would be granted.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used to support a motion by defendant for summary judgment when there are no ultimate facts showing that the mentally disordered person for whom defendant was caring was dangerous to himself or herself or others.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Caring for Nondangerous Relative at Home

In Alva v. Cook (1975) 49 Cal. App. 3d 899, 123 Cal. Rptr. 166 , plaintiffs' decedent was shot and killed by defendants' brother while turning his car around in the driveway of defendants' home. Defendants' brother had been mentally disordered for many years but had not previously injured anyone or shown a tendency to be violent. The complaint alleged that defendants owned and managed the premises on which the incident occurred; that the mentally disordered person was the brother of defendants; that the brother was unable to care for himself due to mental illness which gave him the impression that the ordinary acts of others were a danger to him; that the brother had an extreme propensity to injure others; and that respondents, with knowledge of these propensities and knowledge that the brother had a high-powered rifle, voluntarily assumed care and custody of the brother in their home, knowing that the brother had a history of injuring persons. Plaintiffs then alleged that defendants failed to supervise or control the brother so that he could not commit a violent act, specifically by failing to control his access to the rifle, and that the defendants negligently failed to have the brother committed to a proper custodial facility. The trial court sustained defendants' demurrer to the complaint. The court of appeal found that the allegations that the brother suffered from mental illness were supported only by conclusionary allegations and that there was no allegation that the brother had ever before injured or attempted to injure others due to his mental illness or had ever before used or brandished the rifle in his possession. The court of appeal found that there was no allegation from which defendants or anyone else could have had the brother committed or even detained for evaluation as a mentally disordered person dangerous to himself or others under the Lanterman-Petris-Short Act [Welf. & Inst. Code §§ 5000-5404.1 (now Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.)]. In the absence of allegations showing that the defndants knew or should have known that the brother was dangerous to himself or others so that a petition for his detention for evaluation or for his commitment could have been granted or that they could foresee or should have been able to foresee that the brother would, while he was their charge, with or without a firearm, inflict injuries on a person who came on the premises, the demurrer was properly sustained. The court of appeal also considered the fact that the plaintiffs' decedent was a trespasser on the premises and the fact that the brother had a legal right to possess the rifle. That relatives should be encouraged to care for ill members of their families was also considered by the court to be a matter of public policy. In reaching its decision, the court also took individual notice of the superior court file, which showed that the brother was not violent before the incident which killed plaintiffs' decedent and that the brother had been found sane at a sanity hearing prior to sentencing. There was little in the record of the brother's previous hospitalization for mental illness which suggested violence. Therefore, the court of appeal upheld the trial court's decision sustaining the demurrer without leave to amend (49 Cal. App. 3d 899, 909) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.28

§ 117.28 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Shows Failure to Serve Order and Petition for Commitment [Welf. & Inst. Code § 5208]

[1] FORM

	)
SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,	)
COUNTY OF _____	)
_____ [name]	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO DEMURRER TO COM-
_____ [name(s)],	)	PLAINT
Defendant(s).	)
	)

THE FAILURE TO STRICTLY COMPLY WITH EACH STATUTORY PREREQUISITE FOR MAINTENANCE OF A SPECIAL CIVIL PROCEEDING RENDERS ANY DETENTION OF A PERSON AS A RESULT OF SUCH PROCEEDING WRONGFUL FOR PURPOSES OF A FALSE IMPRISONMENT ACTION.

A. Failure to Comply With Statutory Prerequisites. Where a person is imprisoned or detained pursuant to a special civil proceeding in which jurisdiction to proceed depends on strict compliance with each of the statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding, the failure of the defendants to so comply renders the detention wrongful for purposes of a false imprisonment action (Culbertson v. County of Santa Clara (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 274, 275-276, 67 Cal. Rptr. 752).

[Optional] B. Liability for Failure to Serve Order and Petition. The failure of the sheriff to effect service of the order and petition on a person allegedly mentally disordered prior to the detention of the person pursuant to the provisions in Sections 5200 through 5213 of the Welfare and Institutions Code for court-ordered evaluation of allegedly mentally disordered persons, as specifically required by Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5208, will, if proven, necessarily render wrongful the detention of the person (Culbertson v. County of Santa Clara (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 274, 276, 67 Cal. Rptr. 752 (decided under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 5050.2).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These memorandum of points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment where plaintiff has alleged in the complaint the failure of defendant to comply with the statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the civil commitment or detention proceedings.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications these points and authorities may be used to support a motion for summary judgment in an action for false imprisonment when the defendant has failed to comply with the statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the special civil detention proceeding.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

For forms of complaints and affirmative defenses for use in actions for damages for false imprisonment, see Ch. 257, False Imprisonment in California Forms of Pleading and Practice.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Comply With Statutory Prerequisites

In Culbertson v. County of Santa Clara (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 274, 67 Cal. Rptr. 752 , plaintiff brought an action for false imprisonment against defendant, the county which employed the deputy sheriff who filed a petition for the examination and detention of plaintiff as a mentally ill person and who detained plaintiff in a state hospital. The complaint alleged that, on the filing of a petition by the deputy sheriff for the examination and detention of plaintiff, plaintiff was taken into custody at his home and delivered to a state hospital where he was held for some days and that a hearing was noticed and held at which plaintiff was released and the proceedings dismissed without a finding of mental illness. The county demurred to the complaint, and the trial court sustained the demurrer without leave to amend. Plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal found that the allegation that plaintiff was never served with any order of detention or petition for his examination and the concession that neither was any friend or relative of plaintiff's served created a cause of action in plaintiff. The court stated that service of a notice of hearing is essential to a valid detention order in the mental illness proceeding in question. The sheriff, the court stated, had a duty specifically imposed on him by statute to serve the notice of hearing and the petition. The court noted that jurisdiction for the proceeding depended on strict compliance with each of the specific statutory prerequisites for maintenance of the proceeding, since the proceeding was a special civil proceeding for the detention of plaintiff. The failure of the deputy sheriff to serve the order and petition, the court found, therefore necessarily rendered wrongful the detention of plaintiff. Thus, the court of appeal reversed the trial court's ruling sustaining the demurrer to the plaintiff's complaint insofar as it stated a count for false imprisonment against the county.

Defendant had argued that the order of detention itself was valid on its face and that there could, therefore, be no liability for its execution by the deputy sheriff. The court found, however, that the defect alleged was not in the court order but rather in the failure of the deputy sheriff to perform the duty specifically imposed by statute to serve on the plaintiff the order and petition prior to the detention.

It should be noted that the case was decided under former Welf. & Inst. Code § 5050.2. However, this should not affect its continued validity since that statute has been replaced by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5208, which imposes a substantially similar requirement for service.

[b] Liability for Failure to Serve Order and Petition

Culbertson v. County of Santa Clara (1968) 261 Cal. App. 2d 274, 67 Cal. Rptr. 752 , is discussed under § 117.28[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.29

§ 117.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for False Imprisonment--Complaint Alleges Detention Without Process, Plaintiff's Confinement, and Damages

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.28[1].]

A COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR FALSE IMPRISONMENT, EVEN THOUGH IT DOES NOT ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING NO PROBABLE CAUSE EXISTED FOR PLAINTIFF'S DETENTION WHEN IT ALLEGES THAT DEFENDANT ARRESTED OR DETAINED PLAINTIFF WITHOUT PROCESS, THAT THE DETENTION WAS AN INVOLUNTARY CONFINEMENT OF PLAINTIFF, AND THAT PLAINTIFF SUFFERED DAMAGES AS A RESULT.

A. Sufficient Complaint for False Imprisonment. A cause of action for false imprisonment is stated where the complaint alleges that there was an arrest without process, followed by imprisonment and damages (Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 471, 289 P.2d 428).

B. Defendant to Prove Justification for Arrest. Where plaintiff shows arrest without process, plaintiff's imprisonment, and damages, the burden is on defendant to prove justification for the arrest or that probable cause existed (Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 471-472, 289 P.2d 428).

C. Detention for Mental Illness. When a detention for mental illness without process is shown, together with the other elements of an action for false imprisonment, the burden is on defendant to show justification for the detention, for example, that probable cause existed (Collins v. Jones (1933) 131 Cal. App. 747, 750-751, 22 P.2d 39).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for false imprisonment when the demurrer is based on plaintiff's failure to allege in the complaint that there was no probable cause for the detention of plaintiff for mental disorder.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Sufficient Complaint for False Imprisonment

In Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428 , plaintiff brought an action for damages for false imprisonment against police officers who had arrested him without a warrant. Defendants did not demur, but when the case came on for trial they objected to the introduction of evidence on the ground that the complaint did not state a cause of action. The objection was sustained, and defendants' motion for judgment on the pleadings was granted without leave to amend. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that the complaint stated a cause of action. The Court held that a police officer who makes an arrest without a warrant and without justification may be liable for false arrest and imprisonment and that a cause of action for false imprisonment based on unlawful arrest is stated where it is alleged that there was an arrest without process, followed by imprisonment and damages. The Court also found that the burden is on defendants to prove justification for the arrest. The judgment of the trial court was, therefore, reversed.

[b] Defendant to Prove Justification for Arrest

Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 289 P.2d 428 , is discussed under § 117.29[3][a].

[c] Detention for Mental Illness

Collins v. Jones (1933) 131 Cal. App. 747, 22 P.2d 39 , was an action for false imprisonment brought by a person confined in a mental hospital at the request of a police officer who believed that she was mentally ill because she would not accept as her lost son a boy thought by the officer to be her returned son. Plaintiff was held in the hospital for three days without a warrant or any other process. The case was tried by jury, and a verdict was returned in favor of plaintiff. Defendant appealed after denial of his motion for a new trial. The court of appeal upheld the judgment, although it reduced the amount of damages. The court found that there was no evidence or claim that plaintiff had committed any offense or that she was disordered mentally to an extent that would or might render her dangerous either to herself or to others and that she had, nevertheless, been held at the mental hospital for several days. Since the arrest had been shown, the court found, the burden was on the defendant to show justification for the detention. The trial court had found, as a matter of law, that there was no probable cause for the detention.

Although the court stated that lack of probable cause is not an element of a cause of action for false imprisonment, and it is true that lack of probable cause for arrest is not one of the elements required to be pleaded by plaintiff to state a cause of action for false imprisonment resulting from arrest without a warrant [see Dragna v. White (1955) 45 Cal. 2d 469, 471, 289 P.2d 428] , probable cause for a detention for mental disorder would be a defense which could be raised to an action for false imprisonment brought by a person detained pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 for 72-hour evaluation of mental condition. That statute allows detention on probable cause to believe that a person is, as a result of mental disorder, a danger to himself or herself or others or is gravely disabled.

There are statements in Whaley v. Kirby (1962) 208 Cal. App. 2d 232, 25 Cal. Rptr. 50 and in Wilson v. Los Angeles County (1971) 21 Cal. App. 3d 308, 315, 98 Cal. Rptr. 525 which indicate that plaintiff must plead and prove lack of probable cause for a detention or arrest without process. The court of appeal said, by way of dictum, that the weight of authority is that the establishment of lack of probable or reasonable cause is a necessary element of an action for false arrest or imprisonment, overruling Collins. The court of appeal in Whaley also found that there was reasonable and probable cause for the detention and psychiatric examination which were the subject of the suit. The dictum in Whaley appears to be based on Coverstone v. Davies (1952) 38 Cal. 2d 315, 319, 239 P.2d 876 , in which a nonsuit was granted at the close of plaintiff's case in an action for false arrest on a misdemeanor charge and affirmed on appeal. The Supreme Court in Coverstone, above, said that, while for the purposes of pleading it has been held that the illegality of an arrest is presumed from allegations of an arrest without a warrant and a subsequent confinement, such presumption cannot warrant submission of the case to the jury where the record demonstrates the legality of the arrest. The holding in Coverstone, above, therefore concerned not the pleading of the case for false imprisonment but whether the evidence showed the existence of probable cause. That case also concerned the fact that warrantless arrest was justified for a misdemeanor offense.

The Wilson case likewise concerned a motion by defendants to dismiss at the close of plaintiff's case rather than a demurrer to the complaint for false imprisonment. Its holding was relevant to the court's determination that it was not error for the trial court to have considered evidence of probable cause under Evid. Code § 776 on defendant's motion to dismiss, which the court of appeal considered as if it were a motion for nonsuit. In considering whether plaintiff had given evidence which showed the existence of probable cause which would have justified the arrest as a matter of law, the court of appeal upheld the dismissal of the action and stated that it is now recognized that the establishment of lack of probable or reasonable cause is a necessary element in an action for false arrest or imprisonment and cited Whaley for that proposition.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.30

§ 117.30 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Complaint Alleges Failure to Predict, and Warn of, and Protect From Patient's Threatened Violent Behavior After Patient Communicated to Psychotherapist Serious Threat of Physical Violence Against Reasonably Identifiable Victim or Victims [Civ. Code § 43.92]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.28[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THAT THE PATIENT COMMUNICATED TO DEFENDANT A SERIOUS THREAT OF PHYSICAL VIOLENCE AGAINST A VICTIM REASONABLY IDENTIFIABLE AS PLAINTIFF, AND THAT DEFENDANT FAILED TO MAKE REASONABLE EFFORTS TO COMMUNICATE THE THREAT TO PLAINTIFF AND A LAW ENFORCEMENT AGENCY.

A. Duty of Psychotherapist to Reasonably Identifiable Victims. A psychotherapist, as defined in Section 1010 of the Evidence Code, does have a duty to warn of and protect from a patient's threatened violent behavior or to predict and warn of and protect from a patient's violent behavior if the patient has communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim or victims (Civ. Code § 43.92(a); see also Hedlund v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 695, 700-701, 194 Cal. Rptr. 805, 669 P.2d 41 ; Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 436-437, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 (cases decided prior to enactment of Civ. Code § 43.92).

B. Duty Not Discharged If No Reasonable Efforts Made to Communicate Threats. In order for the duty to warn and protect a reasonably identifiable victim to be discharged pursuant to Section 43.92(b) of the Civil Code, the psychotherapist must make reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victim or victims and to a law enforcement agency (Civ. Code § 43.92(b)).

[Optional] C. Duty to Others Who Are Close to Victim. A therapist who negligently fails to fulfill his or her duty to warn an identifiable potential victim that a patient has threatened violence may also be liable to that person's young child who may be injured if the threat is carried out because it is foreseeable as a matter of law that a young child will not be far from his or her mother and may be injured or suffer emotional trauma on witnessing the event (see Hedlund v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 695, 705-706, 194 Cal. Rptr. 805, 669 P.2d 41 (case decided prior to enactment of Civ. Code § 43.92).

[Optional] D. No Immunity for Failure to Warn by Public Employee. When the therapist is a public employee, there may be immunity from any liability arising from a failure to have the patient detained or committed for mental illness pursuant to Section 856 of the Government Code, but there is no immunity from liability for failure to warn the third person victim (see Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 444-445, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 (no immunity granted by Gov. Code § 820.2).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for damages based on the harm inflicted on a third person victim by a patient of a psychotherapist, when the demurrer is on the ground that the complaint fails to state a cause of action in that there is no duty of the therapist to notify the victim or a law enforcement agency. The ground for opposing the demurrer is that the psychotherapist did have a duty to the patient because the patient communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against plaintiff, who was the reasonably identifiable victim, and that the psychotherapist failed to take reasonable steps to communicate the threat to plaintiff and to a law enforcement agency [see Civ. Code § 43.92].

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty of Psychotherapist to Reasonably Identifiable Victims

It should be noted that both Hedlund and Tarasoff (discussed below) were decided before the enactment of Civ. Code § 43.92 in 1985. That section establishes a statutory immunity for psychotherapists (as defined in Evid. Code § 1010) for failure to warn and protect unless the patient has communicated to the psychotherapist a serious threat of physical violence against a reasonably identifiable victim or victims [Civ. Code § 43.92(a)]. Even then, the psychotherapist may discharge the duty to warn and protect by making reasonable efforts to communicate the threat to the victim or victims and to a law enforcement agency [Civ. Code § 43.92(b)]. The statutory duty controls over the cases to any extent the cases may imply a broader duty or require the therapist to do more to discharge the duty.

No monetary liability or cause of action can be brought against a psychotherapist who discharges his or her duty to warn [Code § 43.92(b)].

Hedlund v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 695, 194 Cal. Rptr. 805, 669 P.2d 41 , was an action for professional malpractice against two psychotherapists by a woman and her minor child for injuries inflicted by a patient of the psychotherapists. The suit was based on the negligent failure of the psychotherapists to diagnose and warn the woman of the threat of danger to her by the patient. The suit by the child was based on mental distress from witnessing the event. The suit alleged that the patient told his therapists of his intent to commit serious injury on plaintiff in the course of his counseling and treatment and that defendants did not take steps to notify plaintiff of the danger. Subsequently, the patient seriously injured plaintiff by shooting her with a shotgun. At the time of the shooting, plaintiff's two-year-old son was sitting next to plaintiff, who threw herself over the child to prevent him from getting hurt. Defendants' demurrer to the complaint was overruled by the trial court. Defendants petitioned for a writ of mandate to compel the trial court to vacate its order and sustain their demurrer on the ground that the action was barred by Code Civ. Proc. § 340(3), which established a one-year statute of limitations (now a two-year statute of limitations under CCP § 335.1) for actions for personal injury. The Supreme Court held that the applicable statute of limitations is the three-year period set forth in Code Civ. Proc. § 340.5 for actions for professional negligence (34 Cal. 3d 695, 705) .

The Court first analyzed whether the failure to comply with the duty enunciated in Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 (discussed below), to predict whether a patient poses a serious danger to others and then to exercise reasonable care to protect the foreseeable victim of the danger, constitutes ordinary or professional negligence. Defendants had argued that professional negligence involves only acts in the course of diagnosis or treatment, and that a failure to warn is ordinary negligence. The Court concluded that the negligence involved was professional negligence because the warning aspect of the duty is inextricably interwoven with the diagnostic function. The Court said that the diagnosis and prediction of danger is an essential element of a cause of action for failure to warn and that it is not separate and severable from the duty to take steps to warn. The Court further stated that the decision to warn and the manner in which the warning is given may also involve professional judgment (34 Cal. 3d 695, 703) . With regard to the son's cause of action, the Court held that the therapists' duty extended to the son because there could be no reasonable difference of opinion that the risk of harm to him was foreseeable (34 Cal. 3d 695, 705) . The Court compared the situation to that in Dillon v. Legg (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 728, 69 Cal. Rptr. 72, 441 P.2d 912 , which allowed recovery to a mother in an action in which the mother was mentally distressed from witnessing the death of her child, and held that it is equally foreseeable that a small child of a person who is injured will not be far from his or her mother. The Court stated that it is not unreasonable to recognize the existence of a duty to persons in close relationship to the object of a patient's threat, and that the therapist must consider the existence of those persons both in evaluating the seriousness of the dange posed by the patient and in determining the appropriate steps to be taken to potect the named victim (34 Cal. 3d 695, 705-706) .

The facts of Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 , are discussed in § 117.23[3][a]. In considering whether the complaint could state a cause of action, the Supreme Court found that a therapist, by virtue of the relationship of therapist and patient, owes a duty to foreseeable victims of a patient to protect them from the conduct of a patient whom the therapist knew, or should reasonably have known, was violent. Although the Court noted that predictions of violence by psychotherapists are frequently inaccurate, the Court held, first, that the therapist who in fact knows of the dangerousness of the patient owes a duty to the foreseeable victim and, second, that the therapist is not required, in making a determination of dangerousness, to perform perfectly, but need only exercise that reasonable degree of skill, knowledge, and care ordinarily possessed and exercised by members of that professional specialty under similar circumstances (17 Cal. 3d, 425, 438) . Further, the Court held that, since the reasonable steps which may be taken to protect the victim may include such steps as warning the victim, which do not interfere with the liberty of the patient, the possibility that unnecessary warnings may be given is a reasonable price to pay for the lives of possible victims that may be saved (17 Cal. 3d, 425, 439-440) . Thus, the judgment of dismissal by the superior court based on the sustained demurrer of defendants was reversed by the Supreme Court insofar as it dismissed the action against the psychotherapists and their employing public entity. The Court held that plaintiffs could amend their complaint to state a cause of action by alleging that defendants in fact determined that the patient presented a serious danger of violence to the victim, or pursuant to the standards of their profession should have so determined, but nevertheless failed to exercise reasonable care to protect her from that danger (17 Cal. 3d, 425, 450) .

[b] Duty to Others Who Are Close to Victim

The facts of Hedlund v. Superior Court (1983) 34 Cal. 3d 695, 194 Cal. Rptr. 805, 669 P.2d 41 , are discussed under § 117.30[3][a].

[c] No Immunity for Failure to Warn by Public Employee

The facts of Tarasoff v. Regents of University of California (1976) 17 Cal. 3d 425, 131 Cal. Rptr. 14, 551 P.2d 334 , are discussed in §§ 117.23[3][a], 117.30[3][a]. In determining that the plaintiffs could state a cause of action against the defendant therapists, the Supreme Court also considered defendants' contention that liability for failure to warn the victim was precluded by the Gov. Code § 820.2 immunity from liability for public employees performing discretionary acts. The Court concluded that the statute supplies immunity only for basic policy decisions and does not supply immunity for the failure of a public employee therapist to warn the foreseeable victim of a patient. The statutory immunity did not, therefore, prevent plaintiffs from amending their complaint to state a cause of action. Note, however, that this case was decided prior to the enactment of Civ. Code § 43.92. However, it appears that the Court's holding as to the applicability of the government immunity for discretionary acts may still apply.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Duty of Psychotherapist to Reasonably Identifiable Victims

Calderon v. Glick (2005) 131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 31 Cal. Rptr. 3d 707 is discussed in § 117.23[4]. In Calderon, the court held that two psychotherapists were not liable for a failure to warn their patient's former girlfriend and members of her family, whom the patient shot, because the patient had not communicated to the defendants any threats of physical violence against the former girlfriend or members of her family. Thus, liability was precluded by Civ. Code § 43.92(a) (131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 230-232) . The psychotherapists also were not liable for professional malpractice, because they did not owe a duty of care to the plaintiffs. They could not have reasonably foreseen that their patient would harm members of his former girlfriend's family because they had no information indicating that he had been violent in the past, he always insisted that he did not intend to harm his former girlfriend or anyone else, and his family never indicated to the defendants that he might harm another person. Although the plaintiffs unquestionably suffered injury, the connection between the defendants' conduct and the injury was not sufficiently close to impose on the defendants a duty of care to the plaintiffs (131 Cal. App. 4th 224, 232-234) .

Ewing v. Goldstein (2004) 120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 15 Cal. Rptr. 3d 864 is discussed under § 117.23[4][a]. In Ewing, the court held that a therapist's duty under Civ. Code § 43.92 to warn a victim arises if information communicated by the family member leads the therapist to believe or predict that the patient poses a serious risk of grave bodily injury to this individual (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 817-820) . The statute only applies, however, to statements by family members of a threat made by the patient, not to statements of a mere belief that the patient poses a danger (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 820 fn.12). The court held that a therapist has a duty to warn if, and only if, the threat the therapist has learned--whether from the patient or a family member--actually leads the therapist to believe the patient poses a risk of grave bodily injury to another person (120 Cal. App. 4th 807, 821) .

Bragg v. Valdez (2003) 111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 804 was an action for damages by the surviving heirs at law of a decedent against two psychotherapists who had undertaken the care and treatment of an individual who was subject to a 72-hour hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5150 and to a subsequent 14-day hold under Welf. & Inst. Code § 5250. This individual was released because he did not have medical insurance. Following his release, he killed the decedent (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 425-427) . The court held that the plaintiffs alleged two viable legal theories that would support a cause of action against the defendants: (1) the defendants' failure to advise the individual being treated and his family of the grave consequences that could occur if he were to discontinue his antipsychotic medications; and (2) the defendants' release of this individual who was a danger to himself and others for a non-medical reason, lack of insurance, without taking steps to protect the public (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 429) . The court held that an action by a person the patient injures based on a psychiatrist's failure to comply with the duties imposed under the involuntary commitment procedures of the LPS Act is not barred by Civ. Code § 43.92 or by Tarasoff. It noted that the complaint in this case did not allege a failure to warn a known victim, but instead alleged a negligent release based on factors other than the professional judgment that is required when a psychiatrist treats an individual who is a danger to self or others (111 Cal. App. 4th 421, 433-435) .

In Barry v. Turek (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 267 Cal. Rptr. 553 , plaintiff, a hospital office manager, brought a negligence action against a psychiatrist whose office was on the same floor as hers, after she was sexually assaulted by one of the psychiatrist's patients. The trial court granted summary judgment for defendant based on the immunity provided under Civ. Code § 43.92, and plaintiff appealed. The court of appeal determined that based on the patient's previous pattern of making sexual advances to women on plaintiff's floor, plaintiff was a "reasonably identifiable victim" to whom defendant would owe a duty of care if defendant had reason to believe that patient posed a serious threat of physical violence. The court affirmed the judgment, however, concluding that the patient's conduct prior to the assaults did not constitute a "serious threat of physical violence" for the purposes of establishing an exception to the immunity provided by Civ. Code § 43.92 (218 Cal. App. 3d 1241, 1245-1246) .

In Michael E.L. v. County of San Diego (1986) 183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 228 Cal. Rptr. 139 , the court held that the immunity afforded by Welf. & Inst. Code § 5154 applies in a case in which a psychiatrist fails to warn an individual of a patient's specific threats of harm against that individual, and the patient harms the individual, as long as the psychiatrist authorized release of the patient in accordance with the required statutory findings, i.e., that the patient no longer posed a threat to self or others. A psychiatrist owes a duty under Tarasoff to take reasonable care to protect an intended victim from the danger of serious violence he or she perceives in a person placed under a 72-hour hold for evaluation and treatment, but is immune from liability if the person's release complies with the statutory requirements (183 Cal. App. 3d 515, 523-524, 527, 530) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 117 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: ACTIONS INVOLVING MENTAL PATIENTS
PART II. FORMS

11-117 California Points & Authorities § 117.31

§ 117.31 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Damages for Negligence--Against Public Employee

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 117.28[1].]

ALTHOUGH PUBLIC EMPLOYEES IN MENTAL INSTITUTIONS ARE PROVIDED IMMUNITY FOR DIAGNOSING, TREATING, CONFINING, AND RELEASING THE MENTALLY ILL, THEY ARE LIABLE FOR INJURIES CAUSED BY NEGLIGENT OR WRONGFUL ACTS OR OMISSIONS IN ADMINISTERING OR FAILING TO ADMINISTER PRESCRIBED TREATMENT.

A. Policy of Liability for Negligence. Government Code Sections 854 through 856.4, concerning mental institutions, reflect the policy of the Legislature to provide immunity for diagnosing, treating, confining, and releasing the mentally ill, but make clear that public entities and employees are liable for injuries caused by negligent or wrongful acts or omissions in administering or failing to administer prescribed treatment or confinement, such as medical malpractice (Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 843-844, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868 ; Hernandez v. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 895, 899, 90 Cal. Rptr. 205).

[Optional] B. Negligent Administration of Treatment. Although a public entity is not liable for an injury proximately caused by a patient of a mental institution or for an injury to an inpatient of a mental institution, nothing in the section providing for this immunity exonerates a public employee from liability for injury proximately caused by his/her negligent or wrongful act or omission (Gov. Code § 854.8(a), (d)).

[Optional] C. Examination for Purpose of Treatment. Although public entities and public employees are exempted from liability for injury caused by the failure to make a physical or mental examination for the purpose of determining whether the person has a disease or mental condition that would constitute a hazard to the health or safety of himself/herself or others, liability arising from an examination or diagnosis for the purpose of treatment is excepted from this immunity (Gov. Code § 855.6).

[Optional] D. Diagnosis or Failure to Diagnose Mental Illness or Addiction. Although neither a public entity nor a public employee acting within the scope of employment is liable for injury resulting from diagnosing or failing to diagnose that a person is afflicted with mental illness or addiction or from failing to prescribe for mental illness or addiction, and although a public employee acting within the scope of employment is not liable for administering with due care the treatment prescribed for mental illness or addiction, a public employee who has undertaken to prescribe for mental illness or addiction is not exonerated from liability for injury proximately caused by his/her negligence or by his/her wrongful act in so prescribing, and a public employee is not exonerated from liability for injury proximately caused by his/her negligent or wrongful act or omission in administering any treatment prescribed for mental illness or addiction (Gov. Code § 855.8; Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 844, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868).

[Optional] E. Negligence or Wrongful Act or Omission in Carrying out or Failing to Carry out Determinations. Although neither a public entity nor a public employee acting within the scope of employment is liable for any injury resulting from determining in accordance with any applicable enactment whether to confine a person for mental illness or addiction or whether to parole, grant a leave of absence to, or release such a person, or for carrying out with due care such a determination, nothing in the section so providing exonerates a public employee from liability for injury proximately caused by his/her negligent or wrongful act or omission in carrying out or failing to carry out a determination to confine or not to confine a person for mental illness or addiction or the terms and conditions of confinement of a person so confined or a determination to parole, grant a leave of absence to, or release a person so confined (Gov. Code § 856).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint against a public employee or public entity based on the negligence of the public employee resulting in damages to plaintiff in administering or failing to administer prescribed treatment.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy of Liability for Negligence

Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868 , is discussed in § 117.22[3][a].

Hernandez v. California (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 895, 90 Cal. Rptr. 205 is discussed in § 117.24[3][a].

[b] Diagnosis or Failure to Diagnose Mental Illness or Addiction

Los Angeles County v. Superior Court (1965) 62 Cal. 2d 839, 44 Cal. Rptr. 796, 402 P.2d 868 , is discussed in § 117.22[3][a].

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

11-118 California Points & Authorities 118.syn

§ 118.syn Synopsis to Chapter 118: INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT

§ 118.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 118.02 Governing Statutes

§ 118.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

§ 118.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

§ 118.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

§§ 118.06-118.19 [Reserved]

§ 118.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint to Recover Sums Paid Pursuant to Contract--No Allegation of Plaintiff's Incapacity to Make Contract in Question [Civ. Code §§ 38-40]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Plead Incapacity to Contract

§ 118.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Cancellation of Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]--Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Was Entirely Without Understanding [Civ. Code § 38]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Related Uses

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Plaintiff Entirely Without Understanding

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Plaintiff Entirely Without Understanding

§ 118.22 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Complaint Alleging Void Contract--Good Faith of Competent Party Not a Defense to Action to Declare Contract Void

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Faith of Competent Party Immaterial

§ 118.23 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Action Based on Contract--Civ. Code § 38 Cannot Be Invoked by Competent Party Against Incompetent Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person of Sound Mind

§ 118.24 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Action Based on Contract--Civ. Code § 39 Cannot Be Invoked by Competent Party Against Incompetent Party

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person of Sound Mind

§ 118.25 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Plaintiff--Action to Have Contract or Conveyance Declared Void or Cancelled [Civ. Code § 3412]--Incapacity of Plaintiff Judicially Determined [Civ. Code § 40]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incompetency Adjudicated

[b] Establishment of Probate Code Conservatorship

[c] LPS Conservatee Found Incompetent to Contract

[d] Person Found Incompetent in Sister State

§ 118.26 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant in Action to Set Aside Conveyance of Property at Trustee's Sale--Supervening Insanity of Debtor Does Not Deprive Trustee of Power to Convey Title to Property in Trustee's Sale Pursuant to Civ. Code § 2924

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Supervening Insanity

[b] Order of Commitment Not Constructive Notice

[c] Summary Judgment for Purchaser

§ 118.27 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Cancellation of Deed Obtained From Incompetent Person [Civ. Code § 38]--Deed Void If Plaintiff Totally Without Understanding

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action Stated for Cancellation of Deed

§ 118.28 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Rescission of Contract [Civ. Code § 1689(b)] Based on Undue Influence [Civ. Code § 1575(2)]--Weakness of Mind of Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undue Influence

[b] Undue Susceptibility

[c] Taking Advantage of Weakness of Mind as Undue Influence

[d] Weakness of Mind and Inadequacy of Consideration or Undue Influence

§ 118.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] Based on Rescission of Contract or Conveyance--Civ. Code § 39 Authorizes Rescission

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Not Entirely Without Understanding but of Unsound Mind

[b] Person Substantially Unable to Manage Own Financial Resources, or to Resist Fraud or Undue Influence

[c] Partial Incapacity Sufficient for Rescission

§ 118.30 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Void Contract--Plaintiff Estopped to Assert That Contract Is Void

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel to Assert That Contract Is Void

§ 118.31 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Have Contract Declared Void Pursuant to Civ. Code § 40--Insanity Commitment Proceedings Are Not Judicial Determination of Incapacity

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Judicial Determination of Incapacity

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Judicial Determination of Incapacity

§ 118.32 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Rescind Contract Pursuant to Civ. Code § 39--Insanity Commitment Proceedings Are Not Judicial Determination of Incapacity or of Unsoundness of Mind

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Unsound Mind

§ 118.33 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Rescind Contract Pursuant to Civ. Code § 39--Diagnosis of Mental or Physical Disorder Is Insufficient to Support Determination of Unsound Mind or Lack of Capacity--Evidence of Deficit in One or More Specific Mental Functions Required [Prob. Code § 811]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Evidence of Deficit in Mental Functions

§ 118.34 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract With Person Entirely Without Understanding--Person Entirely Without Understanding Liable for Necessaries [Civ. Code § 38]

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Person Entirely Without Understanding for Necessaries

[b] Legal Services for Restoration of Capacity

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.01

§ 118.01 Scope of Chapter

This chapter contains points and authorities for use in supporting [see §§ 118.20, 118.21] and opposing [see §§ 118.27 -118.29] a demurrer to a complaint to cancel a contract for incapacity; in supporting a demurrer to an answer to an action to have a contract declared void [see § 118.22]; in supporting a demurrer to an answer to an action based on a contract [see §§ 118.23, 118.24]; in supporting motions for partial summary judgment with respect to capacity [see § 118.25]; and in supporting a motion for summary judgment on the validity of a trustee's sale [see § 118.26]. This chapter also contains memoranda for use in opposing a motion for summary judgment based on incapacity to contract [see §§ 118.30 -118.34].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProceduresPleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProceduresPleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProceduresSummary JudgmentOppositionGeneral OverviewCivil ProceduresSummary JudgmentPartial Summary JudgmentsCivil ProceduresSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.02

§ 118.02 Governing Statutes

Vitiation of contracts by persons of unsound mind is governed by Civ. Code § 38 et seq. Tort liability of persons of unsound mind is governed by Civ. Code § 41.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeDefenses, Demurrers & ObjectionsDemurrersCivil ProcedurePleading & PracticeMotion PracticeOpposing MemorandaCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentPartial Summary JudgmentsCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.03

§ 118.03 Page Limits on Points and Authorities

Generally, a supporting or opposing memorandum must not exceed 15 pages in length, or in the case of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, 20 pages in length. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages in length [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(e)]. For further discussion of the page limitations under Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113, and of other basic format requirements for memoranda, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs, § 1.05.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.04

§ 118.04 Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a discussion and forms for use in actions and proceedings involving mentally disordered, developmentally disabled, and other incompetent persons, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 304, Insane and Other Incompetent Persons (Matthew Bender).

For discussion and forms for use in particular cases involving mentally disordered and other incompetent persons, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice:

- Ch. 107, Cancellation of Instruments.
- Ch. 140, Contracts.
- Ch. 280, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Guardians.
- Ch. 281, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Appointment of Conservators.
- Ch. 282, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Temporary Guardians and Conservators.
- Ch. 283, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Bonds.
- Ch. 284, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Notice.
- Ch. 285, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Care of Ward or Conservatee.
- Ch. 286, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Inventory and Appraisal.
- Ch. 287, Guardianship and Conservatorship: General Management Powers.
- Ch. 288, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Independent Exercise of Powers.

- Ch. 289, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Management of Community Property.
- Ch. 290, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Maintenance of Ward or Conservatee.
- Ch. 290A, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Asset Management and Investment.
- Ch. 290B, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Substituted Judgment.
- Ch. 290C, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Actions and Disputed Claims.
- Ch. 290D, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Actions Against Guardians, Conservators, and Sureties.
- Ch. 290E, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Accounts.
- Ch. 290F, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Compensation of Guardian or Conservator.
- Ch. 290G, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Removal or Resignation of Guardians and Conservators.
- Ch. 290H, Guardianship and Conservatorship: Termination of Guardianships and Conservatorships.
- Ch. 415, Physicians: Medical Malpractice.
- Ch. 440, Probate.
- Ch. 490, Rescission and Restitution.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.05

§ 118.05 Related Points and Authorities Chapters

Related memoranda of points and authorities that may be useful in particular actions and proceedings concerning insane and incompetent persons may be found in the following chapters in this publication:

- Ch. 10, Abatement and Survival of Actions.
- Ch. 13, Adverse Possession.
- Ch. 71, Demurrers and Motions for Judgment on the Pleadings.
- Ch. 81, Discovery: Privileges and Other Discovery Limitations.
- Ch. 106, Guardianship and Conservatorship.
- Ch. 110, Habeas Corpus.
- Ch. 117, Insane and Incompetent Persons: Actions Involving Mental Patients.
- Ch. 132, Jurisdiction: Personal Jurisdiction and Inconvenient Forum.
- Ch. 133, Jurisdiction: Subject Matter Jurisdiction.
- Ch. 143, Limitation of Actions.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART I. INTRODUCTION

11-118 California Points & Authorities §§ 118.06-118.19

[Reserved]

§§ 118.06[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.20

§ 118.20 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint to Recover Sums Paid Pursuant to Contract--No Allegation of Plaintiff's Incapacity to Make Contract in Question [Civ. Code §§ 38-40]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO COMPLAINT
vs.	)	[Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)]
_____ [name(s)],	)	Date: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE COMPLAINT TO RECOVER SUMS PAID BY PLAINTIFF TO DEFENDANT PURSUANT TO A CONTRACT ON THE GROUND OF PLAINTIFF'S INCAPACITY TO CONTRACT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT PLAINTIFF FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING HIS/HER INCAPACITY TO MAKE THE CONTRACT.

A. Objection by Demurrer. The party against whom a complaint has been filed may object by demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it does not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause of action when this ground appears on the face of the complaint [or from any matter of which the court is required to or may take judicial notice] (Code Civ. Proc. §§ 430.30(a), 430.10(e)).

B. Failure to Plead Incapacity to Contract. When the plaintiff in an action to recover payments made to defendant on the ground of plaintiff's incapacity to contract both fails to allege in the complaint facts showing his/her total incapacity to contract so as to come within the provisions of Civil Code Section 38 or Civil Code Section 40, and fails to allege that at the time of making the instrument in question, he/she was lacking in understanding and did not comprehend the meaning of his/her acts, so as to come within the provisions of Civil Code Section 39, defendant's demurrer to the complaint should be sustained (Fetterley v. Randall (1928) 92 Cal. App. 411, 416-417, 268 P. 434).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint which seeks to recover sums paid by plaintiff to defendant pursuant to a contract on the ground that plaintiff lacked capacity to make the contract and that it is therefore void [Civ. Code §§ 38, 40; see §§ 118.21 -118.23, 118.27, 118.30, 118.34, 118.25, 118.26, 118.31, respectively] or voidable [Civ. Code § 39].

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[A] Failure to Plead Incapacity to Contract

In Fetterley v. Randall (1928) 92 Cal. App. 411, 268 P. 434 , plaintiff had been committed to a state hospital for the insane pursuant to the procedures authorized by former Political Code §§ 2168-2170 [now Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.], with a hearing by jury. Some time before that hearing, plaintiff had made and delivered to defendant a bank draft as payment to defendant of attorney's fees for the hearing. Plaintiff brought an action for the return of the fees on the ground that at the time he drew the check or draft, he was legally incapacitated to enter into a contract. The trial court gave judgment for plaintiff on the ground that plaintiff had been judged insane at the time he delivered the draft. Defendant appealed. The court of appeal noted that the complaint failed to allege that plaintiff was insane when he made and delivered the bank draft and that no evidence was received by the court that plaintiff was insane. The trial judge had decided that plaintiff was incompetent on the basis of plaintiff's commitment pursuant to the Political Code. In deciding that defendant's general demurrer to the complaint, which the trial court had overruled, should have been sustained, the court of appeal found that the commitment proceeding was a summary proceeding for the purpose of determining whether or not the person charged with being insane is, in fact, in such a mental condition as to justify the state in depriving him or her of liberty andaffording him or her treatment. Such a proceeding, the court held, is not a conclusive determination of sanity or insanity. Since the plaintiff had not, therefore, shown that he had been adjudged incompetent, and since plaintiff had not alleged in the complaint that he was lacking in understanding and did not comprehend the meaning of his acts, the court of appeal found that there was no basis for finding that plaintiff lacked capacity to make the draft. Plaintiff, the court found, had not been judicially determined to be incompetent within the meaning of Civ. Code § 40, or to be totally without understanding so as not to have the power to make a contract of any kind, within the meaning of Civ. Code § 38. He would, therefore, have had to show that when he made the draft, he was lacking in understanding and did not comprehend the meaning of the acts, so as to come within the provisions of Civ. Code § 39. The court stated that a person may be insane in the general meaning of the term and yet not be entirely without the power of knowing and understanding the nature of ordinary business transactions, so that the insanity will not render the person legally incapable of entering into a valid contract. Thus, the court of appeal reversed the judgment of the trial court (92 Cal. App. 411, 416-417) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.21

§ 118.21 Supporting Demurrer to Complaint for Cancellation of Instrument [Civ. Code § 3412]--Failure to Allege That Plaintiff Was Entirely Without Understanding [Civ. Code § 38]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.20[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE A CAUSE OF ACTION IN THAT IT FAILS TO ALLEGE FACTS SHOWING THAT PLAINTIFF WAS ENTIRELY WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING SO THAT THE DEED WAS VOID UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 38.

A. Objection by Demurrer. [See § 118.20[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Failure to Allege Plaintiff Entirely Without Understanding. In an action to cancel a deed on the ground that plaintiff was of unsound mind when it was executed, the complaint fails to state a cause of action if it fails to allege that plaintiff was entirely without understanding, when the incompetence of plaintiff has not been judicially determined within the meaning of Civil Code Section 40 and it is not alleged that the deed is voidable under the provisions of Civil Code Section 39 (More v. Calkins (1890) 85 Cal. 177, 190, 24 P. 729).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to a complaint to have a deed or contract cancelled on the ground that the plaintiff was entirely without understanding, when the plaintiff fails to allege that he or she was entirely without understanding.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[b] Related Uses

With appropriate modifications, these points and authorities may be used in an action based on a contract or instrument to support a demurrer to a defendant's answer, when the answer alleges the defendant's incapacity to execute the contractor instrument but fails to allege that the defendant was entirely without understanding.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Plaintiff Entirely Without Understanding

In More v. Calkins (1890) 85 Cal. 177, 24 P. 729 , plaintiff sought an accounting of funds from a property subject to a deed of trust made to defendant and sought to have the deed declared void due to his mental incompetency. Defendant's demurrer to plaintiff's count to declare the deed void was sustained. In affirming the sustaining of the demurrer, the Supreme Court found that the complaint had been based on Civ. Code §§ 38 and 39, allowing avoidance of a deed executed when a person is of unsound mind. The Court found, however, that the plaintiff had not alleged that he was "entirely without understanding" when the deed was executed and, therefore, had not stated facts sufficient to show that the deed was void pursuant to Civ. Code § 38 [see §§ 118.21 -118.23, 118.30, 118.34]. Since the mental incompetency was not alleged to be of that degree, the most plaintiff would have been entitled to would have been rescission pursuant to Civ. Code § 39 [see §§ 118.23 -118.24, 118.29, 118.32], but plaintiff had not pleaded the necessary prerequisites for such relief. The Court therefore affirmed the judgment of the trial court with regard to the count to have the deed declared void (85 Cal. 177, 190) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Failure to Allege Plaintiff Entirely Without Understanding

In Maionchi v. Nicholini (1905) 1 Cal. App. 690, 82 P. 1052 , the complaint alleged that plaintiff was the owner and holder of a note executed and delivered to him, that he had endorsed and delivered the note to defendant, and that at the time of the endorsement plaintiff was old, infirm, feeble in mind and body, and unable to attend to his property or to attend to any business affairs without independent advice due to weakness of mind. The complaint further alleged that defendant fraudulently procured and induced plaintiff to indorse and deliver the note, that plaintiff had never received any value for the note, and prayed that defendant be restrained from collecting the note. After the action was begun, plaintiff was adjudged insane and a guardian ad litem was appointed. The trial court found against the defendant on the issues and rendered judgment that the plaintiff was the owner of the note. After judgment plaintiff amended the complaint to allege that he was entirely without understanding at the time of delivery to defendant of the note and that he was of unsound mind and entirely without the capacity to understand and comprehend the nature of the transaction. Defendant contended on appeal that the complaint as amended did not conform to the proof at the trial and that the judgment was not supported by the evidence. The court of appeal noted that Civ. Code §§ 38 and 39 emphasize the difference between contracts made by persons of unsound mind who are entirely without understanding and contracts by persons of unsound mind who are not entirely without understanding (made before incapacity has been judicially determined, so as to bring them within the provisions of Civ. Code § 40). The court found that the original complaint had stated only a sufficient cause of action for rescission pursuant to Civ. Code § 39 and that the evidence in the trial supported only the conclusion that plaintiff came within the terms of Civ. Code § 39 covering persons of unsound mind but not entirely without understanding. The court therefore found that plaintiff was entitled only to rescission of the note and not to have the note declared void, which had been the effect of the trial court's judgment. The amendment to the pleadings was therefore improper, and the court of appeal reversed the judgment.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.22

§ 118.22 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Complaint Alleging Void Contract--Good Faith of Competent Party Not a Defense to Action to Declare Contract Void

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
vs.	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF DEMURRER TO ANSWER
_____ [name(s)],	)	Date: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

THE ANSWER TO THE COMPLAINT FAILS TO STATE FACTS SUFFICIENT TO CONSTITUTE A DEFENSE IN THAT THE GOOD FAITH OF DEFENDANT COMPETENT PARTY TO THE CONTRACT IS IMMATERIAL TO THE VALIDITY OF A VOID CONTRACT.

A. Objection by Demurrer to Answer. A party against whom an answer has been filed may object, by demurrer as provided in Code of Civil Procedure Section 430.3, to the answer on the ground that the answer does not state facts sufficient to constitute a defense (Code Civ. Proc. § 430.20(a)).

B. Good Faith of Competent Party Immaterial. When a contract is void under the terms of Civil Code Section 38, the good faith of the other party to the contract is immaterial to the validity of the contract, since the contract is completely void (Jacks v. Estee (1903) 139 Cal. 507, 512-513, 73 P. 247).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to the answer to a complaint to have a contract declared void or cancelled when the answer attempts to raise as a defense the good faith of the competent party to the contract.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good Faith of Competent Party Immaterial

In Jacks v. Estee (1903) 139 Cal. 507, 73 P. 247 , plaintiff brought an action to foreclose a mortgage on the property of an intestate. Defendant sought by filing a cross complaint to have the mortgage and note declared void on the ground that the intestate was, at the date of their alleged execution, unable to understand the transaction or any other transaction on account of age and mental infirmity. The trial court found that the instruments were void due to lack of capacity of the intestate as alleged by defendant. On appeal by plaintiff, the Supreme Court found that the findings of the trial court were sufficient to support the conclusion that the intestate was entirely without understanding within the meaning of Civ. Code § 38, providing that contracts made by such persons are void. The Court discussed the meaning of the term "entirely without understanding" as used in Civ. Code § 38 and found that the term "understanding" is used to mean not the act of understanding but the capacity or faculty of doing so and that the expression "without understanding" is understood to refer to persons without such capacity. The expression, the Court found, is not intended to be used in its literal and extreme sense, for even the most insane person has some degree of understanding, but is intended to be restricted to the subject matter to which the section relates, that of contracts, and hence as applying to all persons who are entirely without the capacity of understanding or comprehending such transactions. The Court further found that the cross complaint sufficiently alleged the general incapacity of the intestate. The findings of the trial court did not seem to the Court to go as far as total incapacity within the terms of Civ. Code § 38, but the Court found that the facts found were sufficient to support the conclusion that the intestate was not competent to understand transactions in general within the meaning of that statute. The Court therefore found that he good faith of the plaintiff was immaterial to the validity of the contracts, since they were void and there were therefore no contracts. Although the Court stated that judgment for the defendant on the cross complaint would ordinarily be proper in this case, the Court reversed the judgmentfor the defendant because necessary parties to the action had not been joined (139 Cal. 507, 512-513) .

96 of 108 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.23

§ 118.23 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Action Based on Contract--Civ. Code § 38 Cannot Be Invoked by Competent Party Against Incompetent Party

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.22[1].]

CIVIL CODE SECTION 38 WAS ENACTED FOR THE BENEFIT OF PERSONS ENTIRELY WITHOUT CAPACITY TO COMPREHEND THE NATURE OF A CONTRACT AND CANNOT BE INVOKED BY A PERSON OF SOUND MIND TO AVOID A CONTRACT WHICH HE/SHE MAY HAVE WITH A PERSON OF UNSOUND MIND.

A. Objection by Demurrer to Answer. [See § 118.22[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Person of Sound Mind. Civil Code Section 38, which provides that a person entirely without understanding has no power to make a contract of any kind, was enacted for the benefit and protection of persons who are entirely devoid of capacity to comprehend the nature and substance of a contract, and it cannot be invoked by a person of sound mind in an attempt to avoid a contract which he/she may have with a person subsequently ascertained to be of unsound mind (San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 Cal. App. 212, 215, 122 P. 964).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to an answer to a complaint based on a contract which a person of sound mind may have with a person of unsound mind where the person of unsound mind seeks relief and the answer attempts to assert the incapacity of plaintiff under Civ. Code § 38 as a defense.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person of Sound Mind

San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 Cal. App. 212, 122 P. 964 , was an action on a promissory note in which the plaintiff recovered judgment against the defendant and from which judgment the defendant appealed. Plaintiff's assignor of the note had been committed to a private insane asylum shortly before the note was made and delivered. Defendant had pleaded as a defense to the action on the note that the payee was mentally ill prior to and at the time the note was made so that he was incompetent and incapable of entering into a contract of any kind. The court of appeal found, however, that Civ. Code § 38 was enacted for the benefit and protection of persons who are entirely without capacity to comprehend the nature and subject of a contract, and that it cannot be invoked by a person of sound mind in an attempt to avoid a contract which he or she may have with a person subsequently found to be of unsound mind. Even assuming that the evidence showed plaintiff's assignor to have been completely without understanding within the meaning of Civ. Code § 38, the court found that that fact could not be properly pleaded and proven as a legal defense to the note. The court further found that the right to rescind a contract entered into with a person of unsound mind pursuant to Civ. Code § 39 [see §§ 118.23 -118.24, 118.29, 118.32] is likewise for the benefit of the person of unsound mind and that it may be exercised solely by the person of unsound mind or his or her representatives and not by the other party (18 Cal. App. 212, 215) . The court therefore affirmed the judgment of the trial court.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.24

§ 118.24 Supporting Demurrer to Answer to Action Based on Contract--Civ. Code § 39 Cannot Be Invoked by Competent Party Against Incompetent Party

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.22[1].]

CIVIL CODE SECTION 39 WAS ENACTED FOR THE BENEFIT OF INCOMPETENT PERSONS AND CANNOT BE INVOKED BY A PERSON OF SOUND MIND TO AVOID A CONTRACT WHICH HE/SHE MAY HAVE WITH A PERSON OF UNSOUND MIND.

A. Objection by Demurrer to Answer. [See § 118.22[1], Paragraph A.]

B. Person of Sound Mind. Civil Code Section 39, which provides that a contract or conveyance of a person of unsound mind but not entirely without understanding, made before incapacity has been judicially determined, is subject to rescission, cannot be invoked by a person of sound mind in support of an answer to a complaint based on a contract which that person may have with a person of unsound mind. The provisions of Civil Code Section 39 are solely for the benefit of the person of unsound mind, and, until that person exercises the right, the contract is binding on the party of sound mind (San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 Cal. App. 212, 217-218, 122 P. 964 (dictum)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for _____ [party's status and name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a demurrer to an answer to a complaint based on a contract that a person of sound mind may have with a person of unsound mind, when the person of unsound mind seeks relief and the answer attempts to assert the incapacity of plaintiff under Civ. Code § 39 as a defense.

Counsel should insert argument in the form showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person of Sound Mind

San Francisco Credit Clearing-House v. MacDonald (1912) 18 Cal. App. 212, 122 P. 964 , is discussed in § 118.23[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.25

§ 118.25 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Plaintiff--Action to Have Contract or Conveyance Declared Void or Cancelled [Civ. Code § 3412]--Incapacity of Plaintiff Judicially Determined [Civ. Code § 40]

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-
_____ [name], Plaintiff,	)	IES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR SUMMARY
vs.	)	JUDGMENT
_____ [name(s)], Defendant(s).	)	Date: _____
	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
		[Trial Date: _____]

_____

A JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF INCOMPETENCY IS NOTICE TO THE WORLD OF PLAINTIFF'S INCAPACITY TO MAKE A VALID CONTRACT, AND NO FURTHER EVIDENCE IS REQUIRED TO SHOW THAT THE CONTRACT SUED IS VOID UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 40.

A. Summary Judgment. A plaintiff may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if the plaintiff contends that there is no defense to the action or proceeding (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)). The material factual claims put in issue by the pleadings are not in dispute, and the plaintiff is entitled to judgment as a matter of law (see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(c)).

B. Void Contract. Subject to Probate Code Section 1871, and to Welfare and Institutions Code Section 5000 et seq., after his or her incapacity has been judicially determined, a person of unsound mind can make no conveyance or other contract, nor delegate any power or waive any right, until his or her restoration to capacity (Civ. Code § 40).

C. Incompetency Adjudicated. When a court has adjudged a person to be incompetent and to lack the mental capacity to understand the nature and effect of a contract, that person thereby becomes incapable of making a valid contract. Thecontract is void because the decree of incompetency is notice to the world of the person's incapacity to make a valid contract, and no further evidence of mental incapacity is required to show that the contract is void under Civil Code Section 40 (Hellman Commercial T. & S. Bank v. Alden (1929) 206 Cal. 592, 604-605, 275 P. 794 ; Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 276, 251 P.2d 1003).

[Optional] D. Establishment of Probate Code Conservatorship. Subject to Probate Code Sections 1873 through 1876, the establishment of a conservatorship under Probate Code Sections 1400 through 2808 is a judicial determination of the incapacity of the conservatee (Civ. Code § 40). The appointment of a conservator of the estate is an adjudication that the conservatee lacks the legal capacity to enter into or make any transaction that binds or obligates the conservatorship estate Prob. Code § 1872(a).

[Optional] E. LPS Conservatee Found Incompetent to Contract. The report of the LPS conservatorship investigation must recommend for or against the restriction of the proposed conservatee's right to enter into contracts (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5357(b)). The officer preparing the report may recommend against the proposed conservatee having the right to enter specified types of transactions or transactions in excess of specified money amounts (Welf. & Inst. Code § 5357(b)).

[Optional] F. Person Found Incompetent in Sister State. A finding and adjudication of incompetency in a sister state is entitled to the same faith and credit it receives in the state where it was made as to the issues decided. When a person has been found by a sister state to be a person in need of a guardian of the estate or to be incompetent, with the effect that he/she is incompetent to enter into contracts, that adjudication will be effective in California (Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 275, 251 P.2d 1003).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a motion for summary judgment in an action to void or cancel a contract or conveyance where the motion asserts that plaintiff is entitled to a determination as a matter of law on the issue of his or her incapacity to contract since incapacity has been judicially determined.

A plaintiff may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if the plaintiff contends that there is no defense to the action or proceeding [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)]. The summary judgment procedure is statutory [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c], and strict compliance with the statute is required [Bahl v. Bank of America (2001) 89 Cal. App. 4th 389, 394-395, 107 Cal. Rptr. 2d 270] .

A summary judgment motion must be supported by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1350(c)(3)]. The memorandum may not exceed 20 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A memorandum is not a substitute for the separate statement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(1) [Blackman v. Burrows (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 889, 894-895, 238 Cal. Rptr. 642] . Representations of fact in the memorandum do not constitute evidence in support of a summary judgment motion and may not be considered by the court [Vaughn v. Dame Construction Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 144, 146-147 fn.2, 272 Cal. Rptr. 261] . A party moving for summary judgment is not required to repeat in the memorandum specific citations to the record, which are noted in the party's separate statement [Basich v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1118, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153] . A party moving for summary judgment is not entitled to rely on its own pleadings, even if verified, to support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o)], but instead must support the motion with affidavits, declarations, discovery responses, or matters of which judicial notice must or may be taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(1)].

The notice of motion for summary judgment and supporting papers must be served on all other parties at least 75 days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Incompetency Adjudicated

In Hellman Commercial T. & S. Bank v. Alden (1929) 206 Cal. 592, 275 P. 794 , a petition had been filed to have a person declared an incompetent person and for the appointment of a guardian of his person and estate. In that proceeding, the court had found the person to be unable to care for himself and to be a person likely to be imposed upon by designing and artful persons and, therefore, had appointed a guardian. Thereafter, a bank issued to the ward a cashier's check payable to the ward. The ward then endorsed the cashier's check without receiving any value and delivered it to a company which endorsed and delivered the check to plaintiff bank. Plaintiff gave the company a credit in the amount of the check on their account. Plaintiff then allowed the company to withdraw half of that amount from their account. When the ward's bank refused to honor the cashier's check, plaintiff brought suit to recover the amount withdrawn by the company from the ward's bank and from the company. The guardian interposed an answer to the company and was substituted for the ward's bank as a party defendant.

The trial court found that plaintiff should recover nothing from the ward's estate on account of the incompetency. The plaintiff appealed from that part of the judgment. Plaintiff contended on appeal that the ward's incompetency to endorse the check had not been properly determined at trial. Defendant rested the claim of incompetency solely on the determination that an adjudication of incompetency had been made and was in force at the time of the endorsement of the check.

The Supreme Court found that, although the trial court did not specifically find that the incompetent lacked understanding of the nature or effect of the endorsement or that the transaction was void, it did find that the ward received nothing of value for the check and that he was unable to care properly for himself and his property and was likely to be imposed on by designing and artful persons. The Court further found that a guardian of the person and estate of the ward was appointed and qualified. The Court stated that, in the absence of an adjudication of incompetency, it is necessary to allege and prove that the transaction was void for lack of understanding of its nature and effect.

The test in such a case is whether the party was mentally competent to deal with the subject before him with a full understanding of his rights or whether he actually understood the nature, purpose, and effect of the contract. However, the Court stated that when a court has regularly adjudged a person to be incompetent, he becomes incapable of making a valid contract, simply because the decree of incompetency is notice to the world of his incapacity to make a valid contract.

Civ. Code § 40 was found by the Court to apply not only to insane persons but to all those for whom a guardian has been appointed. The Court stated that no further evidence of incapacity is required than evidence of an adjudication of incapacity and the appointment of a guardian. Appellant further contended that rescission was the proper remedy for avoiding the check in question. Although the Court found that rescission is a proper remedy where a contracting party is of unsound mind but not entirely without understanding, before the party's incapacity has been judicially determined, the Court also found that this is not the only remedy.

When affirmative relief is sought, the Court stated that a defense to an action on a contract may be made by setting up fraud, undue influence, or mental incapacity, without the necessity of showing rescission (206 Cal. 592, 605) . The Court finally determined that the endorsement of the check after the adjudication of incompetency was totally void and that the trial court's finding of the existence of the adjudication of incompetency was equivalent to holding that the transaction was void for lack of capacity. Since it found that the check was endorsed while the endorser was under a guardianship, the judgment of the trial court was thus affirmed (206 Cal. 592, 608-609) .

In Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 251 P.2d 1003 , plaintiff brought an action for a decree that a conveyance made by him was void. Plaintiff had been adjudged by a New Mexico court to be a person of unsound mind, insane, and incompetent to look after his own affairs, and the court had appointed a guardian for him. After the making of the conveyance, the probate court of California found that plaintiff was incompetent and appointed a guardian. The New Mexico decree was in effect at the time of the conveyance. Plaintiff's guardian did not join in the deed, and no court order was ever made authorizing its execution. The grantee of plaintiff conveyed the property to defendant. At trial, the court found the facts stated and rendered judgment for plaintiff quieting his title in the realty. Defendant was granted a new trial, but the plaintiff appealed from the order granting the new trial.

The court of appeal found that, as a matter of law, there was no evidence to support a judgment for defendant. The incompetency finding of the New Mexico court was entitled to the same faith and credit in California that it would have received in the state where the findings were made (115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 275) . Since the New Mexico finding appeared to deprive the plaintiff of the ability to make a contract, the court of appeal found that the New Mexico decree operated to deprive plaintiff of power to make the conveyance in question in California as well. Under Civ. Code § 40, providing that after incapacity has been judicially determined, a person of unsound mind can make no conveyance or other contract until his restoration to capacity, the plaintiff could not validly make the conveyance in question. The contract or conveyance, in such a case, the court found, is deemed void, not because the incompetent person is unable, unassisted, properly to care for his or her property, or lacks understanding of the nature and effect of the particular transaction, but because the decree of incompetency is notice to the world of his incapacity to make a valid contract. The court stated that the decree of incompetency may be relied on alone to establish incapacity as a matter of law. Further, the court found that the judgment that a person is incompetent constitutes notice to all the world of the incapacity of the person to make a valid conveyance. Since the conveyance is void, it passes no title and cannot be made the foundation of a good title even under the doctrine of bona fide purchaser (115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 275-276) . Since the court was unable to find any basis for the conclusion that the evidence was insufficient to support the findings and found that, in fact, there was no evidence at all to support a judgment for defendants, the court reversed the order of the superior court granting a new trial (115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 277) .

NOTE:

When mental competence or capacity is at issue, counsel needs to be aware that a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one or more specific mental functions and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and thedecision or acts in question [see Prob. Code § 811(a)]. The diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is not sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind [Prob. Code § 811; see Prob. Code § 810(c) (legislative declaration); see also Prob. Code § 810(a) (rebuttable presumption that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their own acts or decisions)]. For additional discussion, see § 118.33[2][b].

[b] Establishment of Probate Code Conservatorship

Except as otherwise provided in the order of the court, the appointment of a limited conservator does not limit the conservatee's legal capacity to enter into transactions [Prob. Code § 1872(b)].

[c] LPS Conservatee Found Incompetent to Contract

Although the establishment of a Probate Code conservatorship is an adjudication that the conservatee lacks the legal capacity to enter into a contract [see Civ. Code § 40; Prob. Code § 1872], it appears that the conservatee in an LPS conservatorship proceeding pursuant to Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq. retains the right to enter into contracts unless such right is restricted by the court. As noted by the California Supreme Court in Board of Regents v. Davis (1975) 14 Cal. 3d 33, 42, 120 Cal. Rptr. 407, 533 P.2d 1047 (dictum), a case decided before the enactment of current Civ. Code § 40 and Prob. Code § 1872, Welf. & Inst. Code § 5357 would be inappropriate if the conservatee were presumed incapable of contracting, since it provides that the LPS conservatorship report must recommend for or against restricting the proposed conservatee's right to contract. Furthermore, Civ. Code § 40 does not state that the establishment of a conservatorship under the Welfare and Institutions Code is a judicial determination of the incapacity of the conservatee.

[d] Person Found Incompetent in Sister State

Gibson v. Westoby (1953) 115 Cal. App. 2d 273, 251 P.2d 1003 , is discussed under § 118.25[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.26

§ 118.26 Supporting Motion for Summary Judgment--By Defendant in Action to Set Aside Conveyance of Property at Trustee's Sale--Supervening Insanity of Debtor Does Not Deprive Trustee of Power to Convey Title to Property in Trustee's Sale Pursuant to Civ. Code § 2924

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name],	)	NO. _____
Plaintiff,	)	MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF MOTION FOR
vs.	)	SUMMARY JUDGMENT
_____ [name(s)],	)	Date: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Time: _____
	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

SUMMARY JUDGMENT FOR DEFENDANT IS PROPER BECAUSE PLAINTIFF SEEKS RELIEF FROM A TRUSTEE'S SALE OF HIS/HER PROPERTY ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF HAS BEEN JUDICIALLY COMMITTED FOR INSANITY BETWEEN THE TIME OF THE EXECUTION OF THE TRUST DEED ON WHICH THE SALE WAS BASED AND THE TIME OF THE TRUSTEE'S SALE, WHICH IS NOT GROUNDS FOR SETTING ASIDE A TRUSTEE'S SALE.

A. Summary Judgment. A defendant may move for summary judgment in any action or proceeding if it is contended that the action has no merit. The motion must be granted if all of the papers submitted show that there is no triable issue as to any material fact and that the defendant is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law (Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a), (c)).

B. Supervening Insanity. The insanity of a property owner supervening between the time of either the purchase of property subject to a deed of trust or the execution of a deed of trust and the default of the owner on the mortgage payments does not deprive the trustee of the power to convey title to the propertyin a trustee's sale in accordance with Civil Code Section 2924 and the terms of the deed of trust (Civ. Code §§ 1216, 2356; Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 553, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69).

C. Order of Commitment Not Constructive Notice. Since actions and judgments directly affecting the title to real property do not constitute constructive notice unless recorded in the office of the recorder, an order of commitment for mental incompetency or insanity does not, in the absence of recordation, constitute constructive notice to a purchaser of real property at a trustee's sale who is not dealing with and has never dealt with the person affected by the order who formerly owned the property (Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 555-556, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69).

D. Summary Judgment for Purchaser. Summary judgment for defendant purchaser of real property at a trustee's sale is proper where plaintiff alleges an adjudication of his/her incompetency after the assumption or execution of the deed of trust pursuant to which the property was sold at the trustee's sale and where the defendant purchaser did not deal with and never dealt with the person allegedly incompetent and the order of commitment was not recorded in the office of the recorder (Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 550, 556, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of defendant's motion for summary judgment when plaintiff brings an action for quiet title and damages against defendant who purchased the property from a trustee on a deed of trust taken from plaintiff before there was any adjudication of plaintiff's incompetency or insanity where defendant was without notice of plaintiff's infirmity.

A summary judgment motion must be supported by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1350(c)(3)]. The memorandum may not exceed 20 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A memorandum is not a substitute for the separate statement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(1) [Blackman v. Burrows (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 889, 894-895, 238 Cal. Rptr. 642] . Representations of fact in the memorandum do not constitute evidence in support of a summary judgment motion and may not be considered by the court [Vaughn v. Dame Construction Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 144, 146-147 fn.2, 272 Cal. Rptr. 261] . A party moving for summary judgment is not required to repeat in the memorandum specific citations to the record, which are noted in the party's separate statement [Basich v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1118, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 153] .

A party moving for summary judgment is not entitled to rely on its own pleadings, even if verified, to support the motion [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(o)], but instead must support the motion with affidavits, declarations, discovery responses, or matters of which judicial notice must or may be taken [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(1)].

The notice of motion for summary judgment and supporting papers must be served on all other parties at least 75 days before the hearing [Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(a)].

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Supervening Insanity

In Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69 , plaintiff sought to quiet title to real property and damages against defendants Ontario Savings and Loan, Ontario Title, and an individual who had purchased the property at the trustee's sale. Plaintiff had purchased the apartment property and assumed an existing promissory note and deed of trust in favor of Ontario Savings and Ontario Title as trustee. Plaintiff defaulted in making payments due on the promissory note and deed of trust. In keeping with Civ. Code § 2924 and the terms of the deed of trust, a notice of default was recorded and notice of sale was posted and published. The property was then sold by the trustee to Ontario Savings. By grant deed, Ontario Savings sold the property to the individual defendant through a real estate broker. Neither the broker nor the individual defendant had any legal relationship to Ontario Savings or to Ontario Title, nor did they have any knowledge of plaintiff. The complaint alleged that before defaulting on payments plaintiff became legally insane and that he was afterwards arrested and incarcerated. The trial court took judicial notice of plaintiff's arrest for felony bad check charges and that proceedings were then instituted under Penal Code § 1368, by which plaintiff was committed to a state hospital as unable to assist counsel in his defense. Plaintiff alleged that the Savings and Loan and Title Company defendants had constructive and actual knowledge of plaintiff's alleged legal disabilities but nevertheless collected rentals on the property and refused to apply those rentals to the payment of the promissory note and deed of trust and proceeded with the foreclosure and sale. Plaintiff contended that because both Ontario Savings and Ontario Title had constructive and actual knowledge of plaintiff's alleged legal disabilities, the trustee's sale was invalid, and that thesubsequent sale to the individual defendant conveyed no title. Plaintiff further contended that the individual defendant was chargeable with constructive notice of plaintiff's adjudication of insanity. Defendant contended that he was a bona fide purchaser for value and had obtained valid title to the property, that the adjudication under Penal Code § 1368 of incompetency to stand trial was not an adjudication of incompetency, and that he was not chargeable with notice of it in any case. The trial court granted a motion for summary judgment by the individual defendant.

In affirming the trial court's judgment, the court of appeal found it unnecessary to determine the rights and liabilities of plaintiff against the Ontario Savings and Ontario Title defendants or to determine the effect of the Penal Code § 1368 determination. The court found that the individual defendant was not chargeable with notice of plaintiff's alleged legal disability, that he was a bona fide purchaser without notice of any fraud, and that the sale was, therefore, not avoidable by plaintiff. The court found that plaintiff's alleged supervening insanity would not deprive the trustee of the power to convey title to the property in a trustee's sale in accordance with Civ. Code § 2924 and the terms of the deed of trust [see Civ. Code §§ 1216, 2356]. The court further found that Civ. Code § 40, providing that, after incapacity has been judicially determined, a person of unsound mind can make no conveyance or other contract, nor delegate any power or waive any right, until restoration to capacity, was inapplicable, since, even if the commitment pursuant to Penal Code § 1368 constitutes an adjudication of incapacity within the meaning of Civ. Code § 40, plaintiff in this case made no conveyance or other contract nor delegated any power nor waived any right after the order of commitment. The deed of trust, the court stated, existed before plaintiff purchased the property. Even if the Ontario Savings and Ontario Title defendants were guilty of some fraud or imposition on plaintiff, the subsequent sale to the individual defendant was valid. The court further found that even if Penal Code § 1368 determinations were adjudications of insanity, a purchaser could not be charged with constructive notice of such a proceeding, since no notice of such a proceeding was recorded in the office of the county recorder, and since the defendant had never dealt with the plaintiff. Thus, the judgment of the trial court rendering a summary judgment for the individual defendant was affirmed.

[b] Order of Commitment Not Constructive Notice

Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69 , is discussed under § 118.26[3][a].

[c] Summary Judgment for Purchaser

Strutt v. Ontario Sav. & Loan Assn (1970) 11 Cal. App. 3d 547, 90 Cal. Rptr. 69 , is discussed under § 118.26[3][a].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.27

§ 118.27 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint--For Cancellation of Deed Obtained From Incompetent Person [Civ. Code § 38]--Deed Void If Plaintiff Totally Without Understanding

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____

_____ [name]	)
Plaintiff,	)
vs.	)	NO. _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORIT-Defendant(s).	)	IES IN OPPOSITION TO DEMURRER TO COM-)	PLAINT
	)

_____

A COMPLAINT STATES A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR CANCELLATION OF A VOID DEED WHEN' THE COMPLAINT ALLEGES FACTS SHOWING THAT DEFENDANT HAD PURCHASED THE PROPERTY FROM A GRANTOR WHO PROCURED HIS/HER DEED FROM THE PLAINTIFF AT A TIME WHEN THE PLAINTIFF WAS TOTALLY WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING.

Cause of Action Stated for Cancellation of Deed. Where plaintiff alleged that one defendant had procured from her without consideration a deed for property at a time when plaintiff was totally without understanding and by fraud so that plaintiff did not know that he/she was executing a deed and had then conveyed the property by deed for consideration to another defendant, plaintiff has stated a cause of action against the defendant who finally bought the property, because the initial deed was void and passed no title to the defendant even if the defendant was a bona fide purchaser (Erickson v. Bohne (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 553, 557, 279 P.2d 619).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer toa complaint for cancellation of a deed and reconveyance of property when the action is brought against a bona fide purchaser of the property which was purchased from a person who obtained the property by a void conveyance from plaintiff who was without the capacity to convey.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Cause of Action Stated for Cancellation of Deed

In Erickson v. Bohne (1955) 130 Cal. App. 2d 553, 279 P.2d 619 , plaintiff filed a complaint against defendants who had procured from her a deed to property while she was incompetent and totally without understanding of the transaction and by fraud. She also complained against a third person defendant who had purchased the property from the other defendants after the deed had been recorded. She sought money damages for the purchase price from the first defendants and cancellation of the deed against the other defendant. Defendants demurred to the complaint and filed a motion for change of venue on the ground that no cause of action had been stated against the third person defendant and that there was, therefore, no proper venue in the county where the action had been filed since the defendant third party was the basis for venue in that county. The trial court overruled the demurrer and denied the motion for change of venue, and defendants appealed. The court of appeal found that plaintiff had stated a cause of action against the third person defendant. Since the deed was allegedly completely void under Civ. Code § 38, providing that the contract of a person completely without understanding is void, the court found that the deed could pass no interest at all to the third person, even if she were a bona fide purchaser. A good cause of action for cancellation of the deed had therefore been stated against her, and the court affirmed the orders of the trial court.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.28

§ 118.28 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint for Rescission of Contract [Civ. Code § 1689(b)] Based on Undue Influence [Civ. Code § 1575(2)]--Weakness of Mind of Plaintiff

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.27[1].]

WHEN RESCISSION PURSUANT TO SECTION 1689(b) OF THE CIVIL CODE IS SOUGHT ON THE GROUND THAT PLAINTIFF'S CONSENT TO THE CONTRACT WAS OBTAINED THROUGH UNDUE INFLUENCE, PLAINTIFF ALLEGES SUFFICIENT FACTS TO SHOW MENTAL WEAKNESS BY ALLEGING FACTS WHICH SHOW THAT PLAINTIFF HAD A LESSENED CAPACITY TO MAKE A FREE CONTRACT.

A. Undue Influence on Person of Weak Mind. Undue influence consists of taking an unfair advantage of another's weakness of mind (Civ. Code § 1575(2)).

B. Rescission for Undue Influence. A party to a contract may rescind the contract if the consent of the party rescinding was obtained through undue influence, exercised by or with the connivance of the party as to whom he/she rescinds or of any other party to the contract interested with the party (Civ. Code § 1689(b)(1)).

C. Undue Influence. Undue influence means persuasion which tends to be coercive in nature, which overcomes the will without convincing the judgment, and which works on a mental, moral, or emotional weakness to such an extent that it approaches the boundaries of coercion (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 130, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

D. Undue Susceptibility. The undue susceptibility of the plaintiff which is one of the elements of undue influence in the formation of a contract may consist of total weakness of mind which leaves the person entirely without understanding or of a lesser weakness which destroys the capacity of a person to make a contract even though he or she is not totally incapacitated, or of a still lesser weakness which provides sufficient grounds to rescind the contract for undue influence. This lesser weakness need not be long-lasting or wholly incapacitating, but may be merely a lack of full vigor due to age, physical condition, emotional anguish, or a combination of factors (Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 131, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533).

[Optional] E. Taking Advantage of Weakness of Mind as Undue Influence. In the absence of an allegation that plaintiff was actually of unsound mind or incompetent, an allegation that plaintiff was suffering from weakness of mind which made plaintiff unfit to transact business coupled with an allegation of lack of consideration for the transaction or grossly inadequate consideration so that itwill be inferred that the defendant took unfair advantage of plaintiff's weakness of mind states a cause of action against defendant to avoid the transaction (Moore v. Moore et al. (1880) 56 Cal. 89, 94) .

[Optional] F. Weakness of Mind and Inadequacy of Consideration or Undue Influence. When there is weakness of mind arising from old age, sickness, intemperance, or other cause, coupled with plain inadequacy of consideration, or where there is weakness of mind and circumstances of undue influence and advantage, a contract may be set aside (Hays v. Gloster (1891) 88 Cal. 560, 566, 26 P. 367).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for rescission of a contract where defendant contends that plaintiff has inadequately shown grounds for rescission for undue influence because plaintiff has shown inadequate mental susceptibility.

When appropriate, counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Undue Influence

In Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , plaintiff had been employed as a teacher by the school district and was under a contract with the defendant district to continue as a teacher the following year as a permanent employee. Plaintiff had been arrested on criminal charges, and, during his release on bail and before he had a chance to consult a lawyer, defendant's employees persuaded him to sign a resignation. The criminal charges were dismissed, but plaintiff was denied reemployment by defendant. Plaintiff then filed suit for declaratory and other relief and sought to rescind his resignation on the ground that his consent had been obtained through duress, menace, fraud, undue influence, or mistake. Plaintiff's complaint alleged that his consent to the resignation was given at a time when he lacked capacity to make a valid contract because he was under severe mental and emotional strain, having just completed the process of arrest, questioning by the police, booking, and release on bail, and having gone for 40 hours without sleep. The complaint also alleged that, while plaintiff was in this condition, defendant's employees came to his apartment and persuaded him that he should resign immediately to avoid public exposure and that there was no time to consult an attorney before signing the resignation letter, and that because of his faith and confidence in defendant's employees' representations they were able to substitute their will and judgment in place of his own and thus to obtain his signature to the resignation. Defendant demurred to the complaint, and the trial court sustained the demurrer to the amended complaint without further leave to amend. Although the court of appeal found that the facts in the amended complaint were insufficient to state a cause of action for duress, menace, fraud, or mistake, the court found that they did set out sufficient elements to justify rescission of consent on the ground of undue influence. The hallmark of undue influence, the court found, is high pressure persuasion which works on mental, moral, or emotional weakness to such an extent that it approaches the boundaries of coercion. Undue susceptibility may consist of total weakness of mind which leaves the person entirely without understanding or of a lesser weakness which destroys the capacity of the person to make a contract even though he is not totally incapacitated. It may also consist of a still lesser weakness which provides sufficient grounds to rescind a contract for undue influence. This latter weakness, the court found, need not be long-lasting or wholly incapacitating, but may be merely a lack of full vigor due to age, physical condition, emotional anguish, or a combination of such factors. The court found that plaintiff had pleaded such weakness at the time he signed the resignation and thus had pleaded sufficient allegations to state a case for rescission. The court of appeal, therefore, reversed the judgment of the trial court.

[b] Undue Susceptibility

Odorizzi v. Bloomfield School Dist. (1966) 246 Cal. App. 2d 123, 54 Cal. Rptr. 533 , is discussed under § 118.28[3][a].

[c] Taking Advantage of Weakness of Mind as Undue Influence

In Moore v. Moore et al. (1880) 56 Cal. 89 , plaintiff sought to avoid a conveyance of all of her property which she had made to defendants on the second day after the burial of her husband. The complaint alleged that plaintiff was unfit in her body and mind due to shock from the death of her husband to transact business but that the brothers and two brothers-in-law of her deceased husband, accompanied by an attorney and a notary, approached her two days after her husband's burial and requested her to sign instruments conveying all of her property. She did so but then sought to avoid the instruments by this complaint. The complaint also alleged that there was no consideration for the transfer, that it was made without negotiation or explanation, that the time chosen by defendants for the transfer was inappropriate and that plaintiff was suffering from the illeffects of her husband's death. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint on the ground that it did not state a cause of action was sustained. On appeal by plaintiff, the Supreme Court held that the complaint did state a cause of action. The Court stated that it is not necessary to show that the plaintiff was insane or in such a state of mental incapacity as to render her entirely incapable of executing a valid contract or deed. It was sufficient to show that, from her sickness or infirmity, she had been at the time in a condition of great mental weakness and that there had been gross inadequacy of consideration. From those circumstances, imposition or undue influence could be inferred so that plaintiff could obtain relief in equity from the contract or conveyance. Therefore, the Court reversed the judgment of the trial court.

[d] Weakness of Mind and Inadequacy of Consideration or Undue Influence

In Hays v. Gloster (1891) 88 Cal. 560, 26 P. 367 , plaintiff brought an action to have a trust declared on property and for an accounting and reconveyance and related relief. The complaint alleged that plaintiff was owner of the property but was in poor health and feeble mentally and physically, that his mind was so far deranged that he was entirely incompetent to transact any business, and that defendant knew of this weakness. The complaint further alleged that defendant falsely represented that he was plaintiff's friend and would pay plaintiff's debts if plaintiff would turn over to defendant his property and that, in reliance on that promise and representation, plaintiff conveyed the property to defendant. Defendant was then alleged to have failed to perform the promises and to have reconveyed the property. Although defendant did not demur to the complaint, the trial judge refused all of plaintiff's offered evidence, discharged the jury, and found for defendant. In reversing the judgment on appeal and remanding the case for a new trial, the Court considered the complaint as if a demurrer had been made by defendant, since the trial judge had refused plaintiff's evidence on grounds which were tantamount to holding that the complaint failed to state a cause of action. The Supreme Court then found that the alleged mental weakness of plaintiff, coupled with inadequacy of consideration or coupled with undue influence and advantage, showed a case for setting aside the conveyance.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.29

§ 118.29 Opposing Demurrer to Complaint [Code Civ. Proc. § 430.10(e)] Based on Rescission of Contract or Conveyance--Civ. Code § 39 Authorizes Rescission

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.27[1].]

PLAINTIFF HAS STATED A CAUSE OF ACTION FOR RELIEF BASED ON RESCISSION BECAUSE HE/SHE WAS A PERSON OF UNSOUND MIND WHO WAS NOT ENTIRELY WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING BUT WAS ENTITLED TO RESCIND THE CONTRACT PURSUANT TO CIVIL CODE SECTION 39.

A. Relief by Rescission. A conveyance or other contract of a person of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, made before his or her incapacity has been judicially determined, is subject to rescission as provided in Civil Code Section 1688 et seq., governing rescission (Civ. Code § 39(a)).

B. Person Not Entirely Without Understanding but of Unsound Mind. When the complaint alleges that the plaintiff was a person of unsound mind, although not entirely without understanding, and that plaintiff has met the other requirements for rescission, the complaint states a cause of action for relief based on rescission (Wilson v. Moriarty (1888) 77 Cal. 596, 600, 20 P. 134).

C. Person Substantially Unable to Manage Own Financial Resources, or to Resist Fraud or Undue Influence. For purposes of Civil Code Section 39, there is a rebuttable presumption that a person is of unsound mind if the person is substantially unable to manage his or her own financial resources or resist fraud or undue influence (Civ. Code § 39(b)).

D. Partial Incapacity Sufficient for Rescission. To make use of the relief based on rescission provided for by Civil Code Section 39, it is not necessary for a person to be incompetent to make any kind of a contract or to transact any business. Rather, the test is whether the party was mentally competent to deal with the subject before him or her at the time with a full understanding of his or her rights or whether the person could understand the nature, purpose, and effect of the contract (Pomeroy v. Collins (1926) 198 Cal. 46, 69, 243 P. 657).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Plaintiff _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a demurrer to a complaint for relief based on the rescission of a contract made by a person of unsound mind on the ground that Civ. Code § 39 entitles the plaintiff to relief by rescission.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Person Not Entirely Without Understanding but of Unsound Mind

In Wilson v. Moriarty (1888) 77 Cal. 596, 20 P. 134 , plaintiff sought to have a lease rescinded. Defendant demurred to the complaint on the ground that it did not state a cause of action. The complaint alleged that plaintiff was an illiterate and ignorant woman of weak understanding and unable to fix her attention on or to understand the effect of legal documents who had been deceived by defendant, a person of greater than average business ability, into leasing to defendant her property for a rental far below the rental value of the property for a long period of time. Defendant, the complaint further alleged, had acted on plaintiff through her husband, who was a person ignorant of business and had a relationship of friendship with defendant. Plaintiff had found out from friends how she had been deceived and had notified the defendant that she was rescinding the contract at once. The trial court sustained the demurrer, but the Supreme Court reversed, finding that the complaint was not subject to demurrer for uncertainty and stated a cause of action for rescission of the contract, since it alleged the lease which gave plaintiff a rental far below value, that the plaintiff, although not totally incapacitated, was of great mental weakness, and that the lease was executed under the influence of defendant acting with fraudulent intent (77 Cal. 596, 600) . The case was remanded for further proceedings.

[b] Person Substantially Unable to Manage Own Financial Resources, or to Resist Fraud or Undue Influence

For purposes of the rebuttable presumption created by by Civ. Code § 39(b) [see Paragraph C of form], "substantial inability" may not be proved solely by isolated instances of negligence or improvidence [Civ. Code § 39(b)]. Moreover, a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one or more specific mental functions and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question [see Prob. Code § 811(a)]. The diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is not sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind [Prob. Code § 811(d); see Prob. Code § 810(c) (legislative declaration); see also Prob. Code § 810(a) (rebuttable presumption that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their own acts or decisions)]. For additional discussion, see § 118.33[2][b].

[c] Partial Incapacity Sufficient for Rescission

In Pomeroy v. Collins (1926) 198 Cal. 46, 243 P. 657 , the executor of a person who had executed trust instruments brought an action to compel the cancellation and annulment of those instruments on the ground that the person who had executed them was, at the time he did so, mentally incompetent and of unsound mind. The trial court annulled the instruments, and defendant appealed. The Supreme Court found that the judgment was supported by the evidence. The Court also found that to make use of the remedy of rescission provided by Civ. Code § 39, which provides that a conveyance or other contract of a person of unsound mind but not entirely without understanding made before incapacity has been judicially determined is subject to rescission, it is not necessary for the person to be incompetent to make any kind of a contract or to transact any kind of business, however simple. Rather, the test is whether the person was mentally competent to deal with the subject before him or her with a full understanding of his or her rights. The test may also be stated as whether the person understood the nature, purpose, and effect of the contract (198 Cal. 46, 69) . The Court found that there was sufficient evidence to support the trial court's conclusion that the maker of the instruments lacked capacity to do so. The Court therefore upheld the judgment of the trial court cancelling the instruments.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.30

§ 118.30 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Void Contract--Plaintiff Estopped to Assert That Contract Is Void

[1] FORM

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA,
COUNTY OF _____ _____

	)
	)	NO. _____
_____ [name],	)	MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO MOTION
Plaintiff,	)	FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT
vs.	)	Date: _____
_____ [name(s)],	)	Time: _____
Defendant(s).	)	Location: _____
	)	[Judge: _____]
	)	Date Action Filed: _____
	)	[Trial Date: _____]

_____

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF IS ESTOPPED FROM RELYING ON PLAINTIFF'S INCAPACITY AS GROUNDS FOR AVOIDING THE CONTRACT UNDER CIVIL CODE SECTION 38.

Estoppel to Assert That Contract Is Void. The doctrine of estoppel, which is properly pleaded as a special defense, is applicable to prevent the contract which was made by a person who was entirely without understanding from being declared void and therefore unenforceable under Civil Code Section 38. The doctrine will be applied when the person formerly without understanding has acted, after the disability has ended, towards the other party to the contract in such a way as to make the doctrine of estoppel applicable to prevent an injustice to the other party (Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 209 Cal. 717, 724-725, 290 P. 15).

Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment on an action to have declared void a contract entered into between plaintiff and defendant when the defendant asserts that plaintiff is estopped to assert its voidness due to acts on his or her part after the incapacity to contract due to incompetency has ended.

Opposition to a summary judgment motion must be supported by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1350(e)]. The memorandum may not exceed 20 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A memorandum is not a substitute for the separate statement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(3) [Blackman v. Burrows (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 889, 894-895, 238 Cal. Rptr. 642] . Representations of fact in the memorandum do not constitute evidence in opposition to a summary judgment motion and may not be considered by the court [Vaughn v. Dame Construction Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 144, 146-147 fn.2, 272 Cal. Rptr. 261] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Estoppel to Assert That Contract Is Void

In Dool v. First Nat'l Bank of Calexico (1930) 209 Cal. 717, 290 P. 15 , plaintiffs were the executors of the estate of a deceased person. They began an action to have declared void a set of promissory notes and a deed of trust to secure them which had been executed by deceased, on the ground that at the time of their execution the deceased had been of unsound mind and entirely without understanding. Defendants appealed from a judgment in favor of plaintiffs concerning the notes in question. The Supreme Court found that the deceased had affirmed the notes and deeds after he had regained competency and was therefore estopped to assert that the notes and deed were void. Plaintiffs had contended that the doctrine of estoppel was not applicable, since the contracts in question were absolutely void and not merely voidable or rescindable, but the Court rejected that contention and found that, whereas the doctrine of ratification is not applicable to such contracts, the doctrine of estoppel may be invoked. In this case, the Court found, deceased and the plaintiffs had induced defendant to believe that the contracts would be honored and were, therefore, estopped to deny their validity (209 Cal. 717, 724-725) . The Court reversed the judgment of the trial court.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.31

§ 118.31 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Have Contract Declared Void Pursuant to Civ. Code § 40--Insanity Commitment Proceedings Are Not Judicial Determination of Incapacity

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.30[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE COMMITMENT PROCEEDINGS FOR INSANITY ARE NOT A JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF INCAPACITY TO CONTRACT WITHIN THE MEANING OF CIVIL CODE SECTION 40.

Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Judicial Determination of Incapacity. Commitment proceedings for insanity are summary proceedings instituted for a particular purpose, and do not constitute a judicial determination of incapacity within the meaning of Civil Code Section 40 (Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 766, 108 P.2d 420 , cert. denied, 314 U.S. 611, 62 S. Ct. 74, 86 L. Ed. 491 (decided under former Political Code provisions; now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment brought by a plaintiff who is seeking to cancel a contract on the ground that the contract is void under Civ. Code § 40 because there has been a judicial determination of incapacity, when the basis for the claim of incapacity is based on the fact that plaintiff has been committed for insanity. The grounds for opposition to the motion are than commitment proceedings do not constitute a judicial determination of incapacity for purposes of Civ. Code § 40.

Opposition to a summary judgment motion must be supported by a memorandum [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1350(e)]. The memorandum may not exceed 20 pages [Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 3.1113(d)]. A memorandum is not a substitute for the separate statement required by Code Civ. Proc. § 437c(b)(3) [Blackman v. Burrows (1987) 193 Cal. App. 3d 889, 894-895, 238 Cal. Rptr. 642] . Representations of fact in the memorandum do not constitute evidence in opposition to a summary judgment motion and may not be considered by the court [Vaughn v. Dame Construction Co. (1990) 223 Cal. App. 3d 144, 146-147 fn.2, 272 Cal. Rptr. 261] .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Judicial Determination of Incapacity

In Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 108 P.2d 420 , cert. denied, 314 U.S. 611, 62 S. Ct. 74, 86 L. Ed. 491 , plaintiff brought an action against her husband and other defendants for various forms of relief. As to the husband, the complaint sought cancellation of a deed, a declaration of trust as to all property described in the complaint, an accounting, a decree quieting title, and a money judgment. As to the other defendants, it sought an injunction restraining the foreclosure of a deed of trust and a decree cancelling the deed of trust which had been executed by plaintiff. A trial of the action resulted in a judgment for plaintiff and against her husband quieting her title to the several parcels of property described in the complaint and awarding her a money judgment. No appeal was taken from those portions of the judgment. The judgment also provided that plaintiff take nothing against the other defendants and that one parcel of the property was subject to the deed of trust which was given to secure a note. During the action, the deed of trust was foreclosed and the property sold. Plaintiff appealed from that portion of the judgment which held that the deed of trust was valid. Plaintiff's claim of invalidity was based on certain proceedings relating to her competency at the time of the signing of the deed of trust. Plaintiff had been at one time committed to a mental hospital pursuant to the former Political Code. An incompetency proceeding had also been commenced against her, and she had been found incompetent and a guardian had been appointed for her under former Code Civ. Proc. §§ 1763-1767 [now see Prob. Code § 1801 et seq.]. The day before the signing of the deed of trust, however, plaintiff had been restored to mental competency by the probate court. Some time after the signing of the deed of trust, the court dismissed the proceedings against her pursuant to the former Political Code [now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.]. On appeal, plaintiff contended that the insanity proceeding pursuant to the former Political Code [now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.] was a judicial determination of her incapacity to contract under Civ. Code § 40, providing that once incapacity has been judicially determined, the incompetent person can make no contract or conveyance. The Supreme Court found that it is settled law that proceedings for commitment pursuant to the former Political Code [now see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.] are not determinations of incapacity for purposes of Civ. Code § 40 (16 Cal. 2d 761, 766) . The Court further found that the allegation ofcommitment proceedings is insufficient even to bring into play Civ. Code § 39, providing that the conveyance or contract of a person of unsound mind, but not entirely without understanding, made before incapacity has been judicially determined, is subject to rescission, in the absence of allegation or proof that the plaintiff had in fact been of unsound mind at the time of the execution of the deed of trust in question (16 Cal. 2d 761, 766-767) .

NOTE:

A determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one or more specific mental functions and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question [see Prob. Code § 811(a)]. The diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is not sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind [Prob. Code § 811(d); see Prob. Code § 810(c) (legislative declaration); see also Prob. Code § 810(a) (rebuttable presumption that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their own acts or decisions)]. For additional discussion, see § 118.33[2][b].

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Judicial Determination of Incapacity

Hitch v. Superior Court (1934) 2 Cal. App. 2d 406, 38 P.2d 190 , was a proceeding in mandate to compel the respondent superior court to set a divorce case for trial. The wife had filed an action for divorce on the ground of extreme cruelty. Defendant in that action had filed an answer and added a cross complaint also seeking divorce. No default or other judgment was entered. After the filing of that action, the wife was committed by respondent court to a state hospital for the insane. She was later released in the custody of her husband, although no discharge was ever filed. Later the wife filed another action for divorce, which was tried in respondent court. The wife was denied relief. In the meantime, petitioner for the writ of mandate, the brother of the wife, was appointed guardian ad litem of the wife by reason of the previous insanity proceedings. He sought the writ of mandate to compel the court to set the original divorce action for trial contending, in part, that the wife's commitment to the state hospital rendered her incompetent to commence and carry on litigation in courts. Respondent court demurred. In denying the writ, the court of appeal stated in response to petitioner's contention, that it had been clearly decided that it is of no material consequence that the wife had been committed to a state hospital and that such a commitment is not a judicial determination of insanity so as to make a person incompetent to make contracts within the meaning of Civ. Code § 40. The court therefore found that she had not been incompetent to commence litigation in the courts (2 Cal. App. 2d 406, 410) .

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.32

§ 118.32 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Rescind Contract Pursuant to Civ. Code § 39--Insanity Commitment Proceedings Are Not Judicial Determination of Incapacity or of Unsoundness of Mind

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.30[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE COMMITMENT PROCEEDINGS FOR INSANITY ARE NOT A JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF INSANITY OR OF UNSOUNDNESS OF MIND AT THE TIME OF EXECUTION OF THE INSTRUMENT OR CONTRACT SUFFICIENT TO SHOW THAT THE PERSON IS ENTITLED TO RESCIND THE CONTRACT ON THAT BASIS.

Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Unsound Mind. The special proceedings for the purpose of commitment of a person for mental illness or insanity are not a judicial determination of incapacity or unsoundness of mind for purposes of Civil Code Section 39, in the absence of allegation or proof that the person committed was in fact of unsound mind at the time of execution of the instruments that are the subject of the action (Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 766-767, 108 P.2d 420 , cert. denied, 314 U.S. 611 (decided under former Political Code provisions; see Welf. & Inst. Code § 5000 et seq.).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment made by the plaintiff in an action for relief based on rescission of a contract pursuant to Civ. Code § 39, when the plaintiff asserts as a basis for the rescission that he or she has been committed pursuant to civil commitment proceedings for insanity.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insanity Commitment Proceedings Insufficient to Show Unsound Mind

Carroll v. Carroll (1940) 16 Cal. 2d 761, 108 P.2d 420 , cert. denied, 314 U.S. 611 , is discussed in § 118.31[3][a].

NOTE:

A determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one or more specific mental functions and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question [see Prob. Code § 811(a)]. The diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is not sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind [Prob. Code § 811(d); see Prob. Code § 810(c) (legislative declaration); see also Prob. Code § 810(a) (rebuttable presumption that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their own acts or decisions)]. For additional discussion, see § 118.33[2][b].

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.33

§ 118.33 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action to Rescind Contract Pursuant to Civ. Code § 39--Diagnosis of Mental or Physical Disorder Is Insufficient to Support Determination of Unsound Mind or Lack of Capacity--Evidence of Deficit in One or More Specific Mental Functions Required [Prob. Code § 811]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.30[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE THE FACT THAT PLAINTIFF HAS BEEN DIAGNOSED AS HAVING A PARTICULAR MENTAL OR PHYSICAL CONDITION, EVEN IF TRUE, IS INSUFFICIENT TO PROVE THAT PLAINTIFF IS OF UNSOUND MIND OR LACKS THE CAPACITY TO CONTRACT.

A. Diagnosis of Mental or Physical Disorder Does Not Prove Unsound Mind. The mere diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder is not sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind of lacks the capacity to do a certain act (Prob. Code § 811(d)).

B. Evidence of Deficit in One or More Specified Mental Functions Required to Show Unsound Mind or Lack of Capacity. A determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to make a decision or do a certain act, including the capacity to contract, must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one of the mental functions specified in Probate Code Section 811(a) and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question. Such a deficit may be considered only if the deficit, by itself or in combination with one or more other mental function deficits, significantly impairs the person's ability to understand and appreciate the consequences of his or her actions with regard to the type of act or decision in question (Prob. Code § 811(a), (b)).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment made by the plaintiff in an action for relief based on rescission of a contract under Civ. Code § 39, when the plaintiff asserts as the basis for rescission that he or she had been diagnosed with a mental or physical disorder, but fails to allege or offer evidence that he or she suffered from a deficit in one or more of the specific mental functions listed in Prob. Code § 811 that significantly impaired his or her ability to understand and appreciate his or her actions with regard to the type of act or decision question, and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question.

These points and authorities may also be used in other situations in which an individual's capacity to contract is at issue and a question exists as to whether the allegations or evidence are sufficient to support a finding of incapacity. The party using these points and authorities should add argument showing that no allegations or evidence of a specified mental deficit sufficient to support a finding of incapacity were presented.

[b] Evidence of Deficit in Mental Functions

The diagnosis of a mental or physical disorder will not be sufficient in and of itself to support a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to contract [Prob. Code § 811(d); see also Prob. Code § 810(c) (legislative declaration); see also Prob. Code § 810(a) (rebuttable presumption for purposes of Prob. Code § 810 et seq. that all persons have the capacity to make decisions and to be responsible for their own acts or decisions)]. Prob. Code § 811 provides that a determination that a person is of unsound mind or lacks the capacity to make a decision or do a certain act, including the incapacity to contract, must be supported by evidence of a deficit in at least one of the following mental functions, and evidence of a correlation between the deficit and the decision or acts in question [Prob. Code § 811(a)]:

(1) Alertness and attention, including, but not limited to:

(a) Level of arousal or consciousness.

(b) Orientation to time, place, person, and situation.

(c) Ability to attend and concentrate.

(2) Information processing, including, but not limited to:

(a) Short- and long-term memory, including immediate recall.

(b) Ability to understand or communicate with others, either verbally or otherwise.

(c) Recognition of familiar objects and familiar persons.

(d) Ability to understand and appreciate quantities.

(e) Ability to reason using abstract concepts.

(f) Ability to plan, organize, and carry out actions in one's own rational self-interest.

(g) Ability to reason logically.

(3) Thought processes. Deficits in these functions may be demonstrated by the presence of:

(a) Severely disorganized thinking.

(b) Hallucinations.

(c) Delusions.

(d) Uncontrollable, repetitive, or intrusive thoughts.

(4) Ability to modulate mood and affect. Deficits in this ability may be demonstrated by the presence of a pervasive and persistent or recurrent state of euphoria, anger, anxiety, fear, panic, depression, hopelessness or despair, helplessness, apathy, or indifference, which is inappropriate in degree to the individual's circumstances.

A deficit in the mental functions listed above may be considered only if the deficit, by itself or in combination with one or more other mental function deficits, significantly impairs the person's ability to understand and appreciate the consequences of his or her actions with regard to the type of act or decision in question [Prob. Code § 811(b)]. In determining whether a person suffers from a deficit in mental function so substantial that the person lacks the capacity to do a certain act, the court may take into consideration the frequency, severity and duration of periods of impairment [Prob. Code § 811(c)].

Prob. Code § 811 does not alter the statutory definition of the circumstances under which a person is deemed to lack the capacity to contract under Civ. Code § 39. However, it does prescribe a minimum level of evidence that must be presented to support a determination that person is of unsound mind.

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
CHAPTER 118 INSANE AND INCOMPETENT PERSONS: CAPACITY TO CONTRACT
PART II. FORMS

11-118 California Points & Authorities § 118.34

§ 118.34 Opposing Motion for Summary Judgment--In Action on Contract With Person Entirely Without Understanding--Person Entirely Without Understanding Liable for Necessaries [Civ. Code § 38]

[1] FORM

[Caption. See § 118.30[1].]

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE EVEN A PERSON ENTIRELY WITHOUT UNDERSTANDING WHOSE CONTRACTS ARE VOID PURSUANT TO CIVIL CODE SECTION 38 IS NEVERTHELESS LIABLE FOR THE REASONABLE VALUE OF THINGS FURNISHED FOR HIS/HER SUPPORT OR THE SUPPORT OF HIS/HER FAMILY.

A. Liability of Person Entirely Without Understanding for Necessaries. An insane person entirely without understanding under Civil Code Section 38 is liable for the reasonable value of things furnished to him or her that are necessary for his or her support (Estate of Yturburru (1901) 134 Cal. 567, 568, 66 P. 729).

[Optional] B. Legal Services for Restoration of Capacity. Legal services rendered to an incompetent person in proceedings to restore his or her capacity are necessaries within the meaning of Civil Code Section 38, so that a contract to pay the reasonable value of such services will be implied by law and may be enforced in suitable proceedings (Stone v. Conkle (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 348, 351, 88 P.2d 197).
Dated: _____

Respectfully submitted,
_____ [firm name, if any]
By: _____ [signature]
_____ [typed name]
Attorney for Defendant _____ [name]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted by a plaintiff in opposition to a motion for summary judgment made by a defendant in an action for the reasonable value of necessaries furnished for his or her support or the support of his or her family, when defendant contends that the contract under which the necessaries were furnished is void because defendant was entirely without understanding under Civ. Code § 38.

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship betweenthe facts of the case and the points of law stated.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability of Person Entirely Without Understanding for Necessaries

In Estate of Yturburru (1901) 134 Cal. 567, 66 P. 729 , the guardian of an insane person appealed from an order of the superior court directing the guardian to pay the state hospital where the insane person was held for the care and support of the person at the hospital. In rejecting the guardian's contention that the statutes providing that an insane person's estate is liable to the hospital were unconstitutional, the Supreme Court found that an insane person is always liable for the reasonable value of necessary things furnished to him or her, pursuant to Civ. Code § 38 and to the common law. The Court further found that those things, such as care at a state hospital, which are required by law to be furnished to an insane person, are necessaries within the meaning of the statute (134 Cal. 567, 568) .

[b] Legal Services for Restoration of Capacity

In Stone v. Conkle (1939) 31 Cal. App. 2d 348, 88 P.2d 197 , plaintiff brought an action for payment of attorney's fees incurred by a formerly incompetent person in a proceeding in which she had been restored to competency. Although an expert testified at the trial that the attorney had been hired for the purpose of the restoration to capacity and as to the reasonable value of the services, the trial court granted defendant's motion for nonsuit as to all legal services rendered to her prior to restoration to competency. The court of appeal reversed the judgment of nonsuit and found that the attorney's fees for the proceeding for restoration of competency were necessaries for which the law implies a promise and creates an obligation on the part of the incompetent to pay the reasonable value. Whether these necessaries are requested by the incompetent or by a third party, the court found that the estate of the incompetent is liable for them (31 Cal. App. 2d 348, 351) .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 11 Chapters 110-119 HABEAS CORPUS---to---INSANE PERSONS
Chapter 119 RESERVED

11-119 California Points & Authorities Chapter 119

RESERVED

Chapter 119RESERVED

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE

12-120 California Points & Authorities 120.syn

§ 120.syn Synopsis to Chapter 120: INSURANCE

§ 120.01 Scope of Chapter

§ 120.02 Governing Law

§ 120.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

§ 120.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[2] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 120.05-120.09 [Reserved]

§ 120.10 Insurer Is Not Bound by Unauthorized Oral Representations of Soliciting Agent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unauthorized Oral Statements or Agreements Not Binding

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unauthorized Oral Statements or Agreements Not Binding

§ 120.11 Application for Insurance Negated Apparent Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application for Insurance Negated Apparent Authority

§ 120.12 Parties Agreed That Insurance Would Not Be Effective Until Policy Issues

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement That Insurance Is Not Effective Until Policy Issues Binding on Parties

§ 120.13 Mere Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create Contractual Insurance Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create a Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create a Contract

§ 120.14 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Agreement to Insure Loss

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Insurance Contracts Valid

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Insurance Contracts Valid

§ 120.15 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Binder Pending Issuance of Written Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Binder Is Enforceable

[b] Insurer Is Bound Even Though Policy Not Yet Delivered

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Binder Is Enforceable

§ 120.16 Insurer Is Bound by Continuing, Collateral, Oral Contract to Insure

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Bound by Continuing Contract to Insure

§ 120.17 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Agreement to Renew Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Contract to Renew Policy Valid

§ 120.18 Actions By Agents Outside Scope of Actual Authority

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Bound by Agent Acting Outside Scope of Actual Authority

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Bound by Agent Acting Outside Scope of Actual Authority

§ 120.19 Insurer Unreasonably Delayed Acting on Application

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Acting on Insurance Application

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Acting on Insurance Application

§ 120.20 Personal Representative of Life Insurance Applicant May Assert Prejudice From Delay in Acting on Application

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standing by Personal Representative of Deceased Applicant for Life Insurance

§§ 120.21-120.29 [Reserved]

§ 120.30 Liability Is Excluded From Coverage or Not Covered by Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Defend Is Not Absolute

[b] No Potential Relief Within Policy Coverage

[c] Causal Connection Required Between Policy and Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Potential Relief Within Policy Coverage

§ 120.31 Occurrence Outside Policy Period Is Not Covered

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Occurrence Outside Policy Period Not Covered

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Occurrence Outside Policy Period Not Covered

§ 120.32 Standard California Land Title Association Policy Does Not Cover Defects That Survey Can Disclose

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standard California Land Title Association Policy Does Not Cover Defects That Survey Can Disclose

§ 120.33 Business Owner's Comprehensive Liability Policy Does Not Cover Off-Premises Accident

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Owner's Comprehensive Liability Policy Does Not Cover Off-Premises Accident

§ 120.34 Commercial General Liability Policy Excludes Or Does Not Cover Faulty Workmanship

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comprehensive Liability Policy Excludes Coverage for Faulty Workmanship

[b] Commercial General Liability Policy Does Not Cover Insured's Faulty Workmanship

§ 120.35 Specialty Business Insurance Policy Excludes Coverage of Criminal Acts of Employees

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specialty Business Insurance Policy Excludes Coverage of Criminal Acts of Employees

§ 120.36 Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

§ 120.37 Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

§ 120.38 Policy Covering Only "Accidents" Does Not Cover Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Covering Only "Accidents" Does Not Cover Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

§ 120.39 Predecessor Corporation's Product Is Not "Named Insured Product" Under Successor Corporation's Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Predecessor Corporation's Product Is Not "Named Insured Product" Under Successor Corporation's Policy

§ 120.40 No Duty to Defend When Coverage Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend When Coverage Precluded as Matter of Law

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend When Coverage Precluded as Matter of Law

§ 120.41 No Duty to Defend Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend Against Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend Against Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

§ 120.42 "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion in Comprehensive General Liability Policies Applies Only to Environmental Pollution

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion Limited to Environmental Pollution

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion Limited to Environmental Pollution

§ 120.43 Insured Has Not Shown That "Sudden and Accidental" Exception to "Qualified Pollution Exclusion" in Comprehensive General Liability Policy Applies

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden Is on Insured to Establish That "Occurrence" Is Covered Under Policy

[b] Burden Shifts to Insurer to Prove Exclusion After Insured Shows That "Occurrence" Is Covered

[c] After Insurer Shows That General Pollution Exclusion Applies in Comprehensive General Liability Policy, Insured Bears Burden of Showing That Pollution Was "Sudden and Accidental"

[d] No Coverage if "Sudden and Accidental" Exception Does Not Apply

[e] "Sudden and Accidental" Has Temporal Meaning

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] After Insurer Shows That General Pollution Exclusion Applies in Comprehensive General Liability Policy, Insured Bears Burden of Showing That Pollution Was "Sudden and Accidental"

[b] "Sudden and Accidental" Has Temporal Meaning

§ 120.44 Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

§ 120.45 Commercial General Liability Policy Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Is Limited to Money Ordered by Court

[1] Form

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Is Limited to Money Ordered by Court

[b] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Does Not Require Insurer to Indemnify for Administratively Required Expenses Pursuant to Environmental Statute

§§ 120.46-120.49 [Reserved]

§ 120.50 Liability Partially or Wholly Within Potential Coverage of Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Defend Against Claim Potentially Within Policy Coverage

[b] Insurer Ascertained Facts Giving Rise to Potential Liability

[c] Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Defend Against Claim Potentially Within Policy Coverage

[b] Insurer Ascertained Facts Giving Rise to Potential Liability

[c] Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify

§ 120.51 One of Several Causes of Action Alleged in Third-Party Complaint Was Covered by Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] One of Several Causes of Action Alleged in Third-Party Complaint Covered by Policy

[b] Obligation to Defend Extends to Entire Action Involving Covered and Uncovered Claims

§ 120.52 Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

§ 120.53 Insurer May Not Deny Recovery Without Investigating Facts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Duty to Investigate Facts

§ 120.54 Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

§ 120.55 Potential Liability Is Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Potential Liability Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Potential Liability Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

§ 120.56 Duty to Defend Is Implied, and Not Expressly Excluded, in Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Does Not Explicitly Exclude Implied Duty to Defend

[b] Policy Does Not Explicitly Waive Implied Duty to Defend

§ 120.57 Duty to Defend Extends to Prosecuting Appeal of Adverse Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Appeal Adverse Judgment

§ 120.58 The Policy Does Not Explicitly Preclude Duty to Appeal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Policy Does Not Explicitly Preclude Duty to Appeal

§ 120.59 Insurer Not Exonerated When Conduct Was Mere Negligence

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Not Exonerated From Liability for Insured's Negligence

§ 120.60 Commercial General Liability Policy Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Not Limited to Tort Damages

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Not Categorically Limited to Tort Damages

§§ 120.61-120.69 [Reserved]

§ 120.70 User of Vehicle Was Excluded From Coverage Under Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of Named Person From Coverage

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusion of Named Person From Coverage

§ 120.71 Exclusion of Named User Driving Without Permission

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of User Driving Without Permission

[b] Insured Cannot Ratify Nonpermitted Use of Vehicle

§ 120.72 Exclusion of User From Coverage When Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of User From Coverage When Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Business

§§ 120.73-120.79 [Reserved]

§ 120.80 Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

[b] Judgment Creditor Has Standing to Sue

[c] Permissive User Liability Exclusion Unenforceable if Inconspicuously Located in Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

§ 120.81 No Exclusion May Be Based on Insured's Incidental Business

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Exclusion May Be Based on Insured's Incidental Business

§ 120.82 [Reserved]

§ 120.83 Insurer Must Defend or Indemnify Person Legally Responsible for Use of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Must Defend or Indemnify Person Legally Responsible for Use of Vehicle

[b] Employee's Motor Vehicle Policy Fulfills Public Entity's Statutory Obligation

§ 120.84 Commercial Policy Cannot Exclude Driver Based on Nonserious Personal Traffic Violations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial Policy Cannot Exclude Driver Based on Nonserious Personal Traffic Violations

[b] Prohibition Against Exclusion Is Not Limited to Any Particular Type of Policy

§ 120.85 Exclusion of Named Person Does Not Apply to "Motor Vehicle Liability Policy" for Commercial Passenger Vehicles

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

§§ 120.86-120.89 [Reserved]

§ 120.90 Insurer Has No Duty to Defend/Indemnify Insured When Liability or Loss Results From Willful Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Exclusion Is Implied in Every Policy

[b] Intentional Act Is Excluded by Policy Language

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Exclusion Implied in Every Policy

[b] Intentional Act Is Excluded by Policy Language

§ 120.91 Agreements Waiving Fraud or Willful Injury Are Illegal

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreements Waiving Fraud or Willful Injury Are Illegal

§ 120.92 Policy Purporting Coverage for Willful Acts Is Prohibited

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Purporting Coverage for Willful Acts Is Prohibited

§ 120.93 Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Precluded as Matter of Law

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Precluded as Matter of Law

§ 120.94 Coverage for Sanctions Imposed for Bad-Faith Litigation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Sanctions Imposed for Bad-Faith Litigation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

§ 120.95 Coverage for Criminal Fines or Restitution Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Criminal Fines or Restitution Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

§ 120.96 Coverage for Intentional Sexual Harassment Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Intentional Sexual Harassment Precluded as a Matter of Law

§ 120.97 Coverage for Inducing Patent Infringement Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Inducing Patent Infringement Precluded as a Matter of Law

§§ 120.98-120.99 [Reserved]

§ 120.100 Policy Language Led Insured to Expect Defense in Third-Party Action Based on Willful Act

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Policy Led Insured to Reasonably Expect Coverage

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Policy Led Insured to Reasonably Expect Coverage

§ 120.101 Statutes Forbidding Indemnification Do Not Preclude Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Prohibitions Do Not Apply

[b] Duty to Defend Does Not Conflict Policy of Statutes

§ 120.102 Liability of Insured Was Vicarious Only

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ins. Code § 533 Does Not Apply to Vicarious Liability

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ins. Code § 533 Does Not Apply to Vicarious Liability

§ 120.103 Local Public Entity Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Local Public Entity Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[b] Public Entity May Insure Against Intentional Tort

§ 120.104 State Agency Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] State Agency Insured Against Expense of Defending Third-Party Action

[b] Agency May Insure Against Intentional Tort

§ 120.105 Insurer Failed to Meet its Burden of Proving Willful Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Meet its Burden of Proving Willful Conduct

§ 120.106 Insurer Has Failed to Establish Preconceived Design to Inflict Injury

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Failed to Establish Preconceived Design to Inflict Injury

§ 120.107 Insured's Conduct Is Not Inherently Wrongful and Insurer Has Failed to Show Intent

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Conduct Is Not Inherently Wrongful and Insurer Has Failed to Show Intent

§ 120.108 Insured Acted in Self-Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Acted in Self-Defense

§ 120.109 Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Alleged Misconduct Was Independent of Any Proven Sexual Molestation

§ 120.110 Unauthorized and Nonratified Act of Insured's Agent Does Not Preclude Recovery Under Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unauthorized and Nonratified Act of Insured's Agent Does Not Preclude Recovery Under Policy

§ 120.111 Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Is Ambiguous and Therefore Inapplicable to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguous Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Does Not Apply to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ambiguous Exclusion for "Illegal Act" Does Not Apply to Insured's Unintentional Conduct

§§ 120.112-120.114 [Reserved]

§ 120.115 Insurer Has No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages Portion of Third-Party Judgment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Indemnify Insured for Punitive Damages

§§ 120.116-120.119 [Reserved]

§ 120.120 Limitations Period Under Homeowner's Policy Tolled From Notification to Denial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Inception of Loss Is Based on Occurrence of Appreciable Damage

[b] Limitations Period Was Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Inception of Loss Is Based on Occurrence of Appreciable Damage

[b] Limitations Period Was Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

§ 120.121 Manifestation Rule Applies When Loss Occurs Over Multiple Policy Periods

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Manifestation Rule Applies When Loss Occurs Over Multiple Policy Periods

§ 120.122 Under Title Insurance Policy, Limitations Tolled From Notification to Denial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Limitations Period Tolled on Notice of Damage to Insurer

§§ 120.123-120.129 [Reserved]

§ 120.130 Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Under Continuous Injury Trigger of Coverage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Under Continuous Injury Trigger of Coverage

§§ 120.131-120.139 [Reserved]

§ 120.140 Loss In Progress Rule Does Not Apply When Insured Had No Legal Obligation to Third Party at Inception of Policy Period

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Risk Is Insurable Because Insured Had No Legal Obligation to Third Party at Inception of Policy Period

§§ 120.141-120.149 [Reserved]

§ 120.150 Comprehensive General Liability Policy Requires Defense/Indemnification Because "Damages" Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Damages" Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs in Absence of Narrower Policy Definition

[b] "Damages" Includes Reimbursement of Government Response Costs

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Damages" Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy Includes Environmental Cleanup Costs in Absence of Narrower Policy Definition

§§ 120.151-120.159 [Reserved]

§ 120.160 Improved Property Is Nonvacant Land for Purposes of Coverage Under Homeowner's Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Beneficial Use or Improvement of Property Rendered Property Nonvacant

§ 120.161 Artificial Structures on Untenanted Property

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Artificial Structures Render Untenanted Property Nonvacant

§ 120.162 Improvement Caused Damage That Is Subject of Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Improvement Caused Damage That Is Subject of Claim

§§ 120.163-120.164 [Reserved]

§ 120.165 Insurer Estopped From Raising Limitations Period Defense for Failure to Notify Insured of Relevant Policy Terms

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Must Notify Insured of Policy Terms

[b] Estoppel to Assert Limitations Defense After Failing to Notify Insured of Policy Terms

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Estoppel to Assert Limitations Defense After Failing to Notify Insured of Policy Terms

§§ 120.166-120.169 [Reserved]

§ 120.170 Liability Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Implied Covenant of Good Faith When

Not Party to Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent or Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Agent or Employee Is Not Liable for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith

§ 120.171 Covenant Extends Only to Limits of Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Covenant Extends Only to Limits of Contract

§ 120.172 Plaintiff Lacks Standing to Bring Action Because He/She Is Neither Insured Nor Intended Third-Party Beneficiary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff Fails to Satisfy Basic Requirement for Standing

[b] Parties Did Not Intend to Make Plaintiff Third-Party Beneficiary

[c] Incidental Reference or Benefit Is Insufficient to Confer Standing

§ 120.173 Plaintiff Judgment Creditor's Collusion With Insured Renders Underlying Judgment Unenforceable

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff's Agreement With Insured Constitutes Collusion

[b] Insurer May Raise Defense of Collusion in Suit to Recover Under Policy

§ 120.174 Casualty Insurer's Handling of Claim Was Reasonable as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Casualty Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant of Good Faith

[b] Insurer Is Not Liable For Mere Negligent Handling of Claim

[c] Insurer Is Not Liable For Negligent Handling of Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Casualty Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant of Good Faith

[b] Reasonableness Appears as Matter of Law

§ 120.175 Claim Preempted by ERISA

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] ERISA Preempts Insured's State Law Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] ERISA Preempts Insured's State Law Claim

§ 120.176 Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant By Failing to Investigate Loss That Was Not Covered

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Did Not Breach Covenant By Failing to Investigate Loss That Was Not Covered

§ 120.177 Insurer's Precontractual Conduct Does Not Support Bad Faith Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Precontractual Conduct Not Actionable

§ 120.178 "Bad Faith" Action Is Actually Fire Policy Action Barred by Statute of Limitations

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Claim Is Barred by Statute of Limitations

[b] So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Fire Insurance Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] So-Called "Bad Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Fire Insurance Policy

§ 120.179 Property and Multi-Peril Policy Action Is Barred by Policy Limitations Clause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Claim Is Barred by Policy Limitations Clause Based on Ins. Code § 2071

[b] So-Called "Bad-Faith Claim" Is Essentially Claim on Underlying Policy

§ 120.180 Defensive Pleading Was Absolutely Privileged

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Defensive Pleading Is Absolutely Privileged

§ 120.181 [Reserved]

§ 120.182 Insurer Acted Unreasonably by Denying or Delaying Benefit Payments

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Covenant of Good Faith

[b] Insurer Failed to Consider Insured's Interests

[c] Insurer is Liable for Failing to Pay Loss

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Covenant of Good Faith

[b] Insurer Failed to Consider Insured's Interests

§ 120.183 No Affirmative Defense of Insured's Comparative Bad Faith in Tort Bad Faith Action Against Insurer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Forms

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Affirmative Defense of Insured's Comparative Bad Faith in Tort Bad Faith Action Against Insurer

§ 120.184 Insurer Conducted an Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Conducted an Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Conducted Inadequate Investigation of Insured's Claim

§ 120.185 Action Not on Policy Is Not Barred by Statute of Limitations or Policy Limitations Clause

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Bad-Faith Claim Not on the Policy Is Not Subject to Statutory Limitation Period

§ 120.186 Insured's Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action Against Insurer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action

[b] Insurer Is Liable to Judgment Creditor for Postjudgment Refusal to Pay Amount of Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Judgment Creditor Has Direct Right of Action

§§ 120.187-120.194 [Reserved]

§ 120.195 Insurer Did Not Refuse to Accept a Valid and Reasonable Settlement Offer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Failed to Show That Reasonable Settlement Offer Was Made

[b] There Is No Conflict of Interest Between Insurer and Insured

[c] Insurer Had Bona Fide Belief That Recovery Would Be Within Policy Limits

[d] No Settlement Offer Was Made

[e] The Settlement Offer Was Not Valid

[f] The Settlement Offer Did Not Completely Release All Insureds

[g] Defending Insurer Did Not Participate in Settlement

[h] Rule That Insurer Is Not Bound by Settlement Without Its Participation Applies Whether Claim Against Insurer Is Based on Contract or Tort

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Had Bona Fide Belief That Recovery Would Be Within Policy Limits

[b] Rule That Insurer Is Not Bound by Settlement Without Its Participation Applies Whether Claim Against Insurer Is Based on Contract or Tort

§ 120.196 Third-Party Judgment Creditor Lacks Standing to Sue Insurer Without Valid Assignment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Made No Valid Assignment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Made No Valid Assignment

§ 120.197 Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Stipulated Judgment With Covenant Not to Execute Is Not Valid Assignment

§ 120.198 Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Waived Claim for Personal Damages by Assigning Rights to Judgment Creditor

§ 120.199 In Action by Insured Against Insurer for Failure to Settle, Insured May Not Recover Punitive Damages Awarded Against Insured in Underlying Action if Punitive Damages Award Was Based on Insured's Conduct

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] In Action by Insured Against Insurer for Failure to Settle, Insured May Not Recover Punitive Damages Awarded Against Insured in Underlying Action if Punitive Damages Award Was Based on Insured's Conduct

§§ 120.200-120.204 [Reserved]

§ 120.205 Insurer Did Not Act in Act Good Faith in Rejecting Settlement Offer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Act in Good Faith

[b] Insurer Breached Its Duty By Failing to Settle Claim

[c] Insurer Failed to Take Insured's Interest Into Consideration

[d] Insurer's Breach Established by Factors

[e] Insurer's Conduct Fails Objective Test

[f] Insurer Is Liable for Entire Judgment

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Act in Good Faith

[b] Insurer Breached Its Duty By Failing to Settle Claim

[c] Insurer Failed to Take Insured's Interest Into Consideration

[d] Insurer's Conduct Fails Objective Test

[e] Insurer Is Liable for Entire Judgment

§ 120.206 Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Claim to Judgment Creditor

§ 120.207 Insured's Failure to Pay Excess Judgment Does Not Exonerate Insurer's Wrongful Refusal to Settle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nonpayment of Excess Judgment by Insured

§ 120.208 Insurer's Breach of Covenant Is Not Excused by Insured's Failure to Perform Contractual Obligation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Its Unconditional Duty of Good Faith

§ 120.209 Good-Faith Denial of Coverage Is No Defense

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Good-Faith Belief in Noncoverage as No Defense

§ 120.210 Insurer Is Not Exonerated by Its Unilateral Delegation of Duty to Make Independent Risk Evaluation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Not Exonerated by Its Unilateral Delegation of Duty to Make Independent Risk Evaluation

§ 120.211 Insured's Assignment of Claim Is Valid Because Stipulated Judgment Was Approved by Court

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Properly Assigned Rights in Consideration of Personal Release

[b] Assignment Is Valid With Court Approval

§ 120.212 Insured Did Not Waive Claim for Personal Damages Because Assignor and Assignee Are Joined as Plaintiffs

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured Did Not Waive Personal Damages Claim Because Assignor and Assignee Are Joined

§§ 120.213-120.214 [Reserved]

§ 120.215 Attorney's Fees Are Improper in Action by Insurer Against Consecutive or Concurrent Insurers

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Not Recoverable as Damages by Insurer

§ 120.216 Attorney's Fees Recoverable as Damages Only for Work Attributable to Recovery of Amount Due On Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Recoverable as Damages Only for Work Attributable to Recovery of Amount Due on Policy

§§ 120.217-120.219 [Reserved]

§ 120.220 Attorney's Fees Expended to Recover Policy Benefits Are Proper Element of Damages in Action for Tortious Breach of Insurance Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages

[b] Insured's Assignment of Bad Faith Cause of Action Carries With It Right to Brandt Fees.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Attorney's Fees Are Recoverable as Damages.

§§ 120.221-120.229 [Reserved]

§ 120.230 Insurer Made Wrongful Misrepresentation Regarding Existence of Insured's Right to Obtain Review of Denial of Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Wrongful Misrepresenting Regarding Insured's Right to Review of Denial of Claim

§§ 120.231-120.239 [Reserved]

§ 120.240 Statute Does Not Confer Any Private Right of Action on Plaintiff in Unfair Claims Settlement Practices Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Plaintiff as Private Litigant May Not Bring Action for Damages Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Plaintiff as Private Litigant May Not Bring Action for Damages Under Ins. Code § 790.03(h)

§§ 120.241-120.249 [Reserved]

§ 120.250 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Insured's Material Concealment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Misrepresentation Not Required

[b] Questions in Insurance Application are Material

[c] "Action on the Contract"

[d] Rescission Applies to Assigned Risk Motor Vehicle Policy

[e] Insurer May Raise Defense of Rescission After Insured Commences Action

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer's Right to Rescind for Concealment

[b] Insured Failed to Communicate Material Facts

[c] Insured Failed to Communicate Material Facts

[d] Questions in Insurance Application are Material

[d] Rescission Is Proper Prior to Commencement of Action on Contract

§ 120.251 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Material Misrepresentation

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Right to Rescind

[b] No Intent to Deceive Required

[c] Severable Endorsement Subject to Rescission

[d] Insurer May Rescind if Applicant for Life Insurance Misrepresented Smoking History to Obtain Nonsmoker Rate

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Right to Rescind

§§ 120.252-120.259 [Reserved]

§ 120.260 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Concealed or Misrepresented Fact Was Immaterial

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Material Concealment Required

[b] Materiality From Standpoint of Insurer

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Material Concealment Required

[b] Determination of Materiality

[c] Materiality From Standpoint of Insurer

§ 120.261 Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions of Health in Insurance Application Does Not Constitute Concealment

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions in Insurance Application

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Nondisclosure of Temporary Indispositions in Insurance Application

§ 120.262 No Disclosure Was Required

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge Presumed

[b] Waiver of Disclosure by Insurance Contract or by Implication

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Waiver of Disclosure by Insurance Contract or by Implication

§ 120.263 Insured May Rebut Statutory Presumption That Representation Refers to Time Insurance Contract Is Completed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumption as Rebuttable

§ 120.264 Ambiguous Representation Is Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Construction of Uncertain Terms

[b] Ambiguous Representations Drafted by Insurer to be Construed in Favor of Insured

§ 120.265 Purported Representation Was Mere Hearsay Statement and That Fact Was Made Known to Insurer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Representation on Hearsay

§ 120.266 Representation Was Altered or Withdrawn

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Alteration or Withdrawal of Representation

§ 120.267 Incorrect or Incomplete Answers in Insurance Application Were Due to Insured's Ignorance of Fact or Failure to Appreciate Significance of Information

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicant's Ignorance of Facts or Their Significance

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Applicant's Ignorance of Facts or Their Significance

§ 120.268 Insurer Estopped from Rescinding Policy Because it Failed to Make Reasonable Investigation of Risk Prior to Accident

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Failed to Take Prompt Action on Application for Insurance

[b] Insurer Did Not Promptly Investigate Risk

[c] Due Diligence Requires Investigation of Risk Within Reasonable Time

[d] Effect of Failure to Make Reasonable Investigation of Risk

[e] Estoppel to Plead Rescission Where Rights of Third Party Have Intervened

[f] Reasonableness of Investigation as Question of Fact

[g] Rule Requiring Investigation Applies to Adding Vehicles to Existing Policy

§ 120.269 Knowledge of Independent Contractor Hired by Insurer to Conduct Investigation Is Imputed to Insurer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Knowledge of Independent Contractor Hired by Insurer to Conduct Investigation Is Imputed to Insurer

§§ 120.270-120.279 [Reserved]

§ 120.280 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Breach of Material Express Warranty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Breach of Express Warranty by Insured

§ 120.281 Policy Was Rescinded on Ground of Willful Concealment of Matter Relating to Falsity of Warranty

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Warranty False at Time Made Voids Policy

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Warranty False at Time Made as Voiding Policy

§§ 120.282-120.289 [Reserved]

§ 120.290 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Performance Became Unlawful or Impossible

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Performance Became Unlawful or Impossible

§ 120.291 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Breach Was of an Immaterial Policy Provision

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Applicability to Warranties

[b] Breach of Coinsurance Warranty as Immaterial

§ 120.292 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because There Was No Breach When Ambiguous Warranty Is Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Warranty Resolved in Favor of Insured

§ 120.293 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Loss Occurred Prior to Breach

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Loss Occurred Before Warranty Was to Be Performed

§ 120.294 Purported Rescission Was Not Effective Because Express Warranty Was Not in Writing

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Requirement That Express Warranty Be Contained in Policy or Writing

§§ 120.295-120.299 [Reserved]

§ 120.300 Policy Was Canceled Before Liability Arose or Loss Occurred

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Terminated Policy by Prescribed Notice

[b] Policy Was Canceled by Its Terms or Mutual Agreement

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Terminated Policy by Prescribed Notice

§§ 120.301-120.309 [Reserved]

§ 120.310 Purported Cancellation Was Not Effective Because Policy Was Not Canceled Before Loss Occurred

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Summary Judgment for Insurer Improper When Triable Issue Exists Regarding Whether Policy Was Canceled

§§ 120.311-120.319 [Reserved]

§ 120.320 Motor Vehicle Policy Expired at End of Policy Term Because of Insured's Defective Attempt to Accept Renewal Offer

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Expired at End of Term

[b] There Was No "Renewal" as Defined

[c] Insurer Offered to Renew Policy or Gave Nonrenewal Notice

[d] Insured Did Not Accept Renewal Offer

[e] Attempted Acceptance Did Not Comply With Terms of Offer

§§ 120.321-120.329 [Reserved]

§ 120.330 Insurer's Cancellation of Policy Breached Covenant of Good Faith

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Covenant of Good Faith Applies to Insurer's Cancellation of Policy

[b] Improper Exercise of Discretionary Power to Cancel Breaches Covenant

[c] Bad-Faith Cancellation Subjects Insurer to Liability

§§ 120.331-120.339 [Reserved]

§ 120.340 Coverage Under Motor Vehicle Policy Continued After Policy Expiration Date Because of Insurer Failed to Give Notice of Renewal or Nonrenewal to Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Renewed by Insurer's Failure to Give Notice of Nonrenewal

§§ 120.341-120.349 [Reserved]

§ 120.350 Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business and Operated Vehicle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Public Policy

[b] Conclusive Presumption Applies to Adverse Insurer

[c] Nature of Insured's Business as Determinative Factor

§ 120.351 Presumption Applies Even Though Insured and Permissive User Both Engaged in Motor-Vehicle Related Businesses

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Both Vehicle Owner and Permissive User Engaged in One of Specified Automotive Businesses

§ 120.352 Insured Was Owner or Lessee of Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

§ 120.353 Policy Describes or Rates Motor Vehicle as Owned Automobile

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Described in Policy as Owned or Rated Automobile

[b] Insurance Code Section 11580.9(a)-(c)Inapplicable

[c] Tractor/Trailer Is Treated as One Vehicle

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Described in Policy as Owned or Rated Automobile

§ 120.354 Statutory Presumptions Apply to Self-Insurers and Public Entities

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumptions Apply to Self-Insurers and Public Entities

§§ 120.355-120.369 [Reserved]

§ 120.370 Operator Was Not Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business or Insured's Employee

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Operator Was Not Insured Engaged in Motor Vehicle-Related Business or Insured's Employee

§ 120.371 Insured Is Lessor of Commercial Vehicles or Long-Term Lessor of Motor Vehicles

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Motor Vehicle Leasing Business

[b] Meaning of "Policies" as Used in Insurance Code Section 11580.9(b)-(d)

§ 120.372 Policy Covers Motor Vehicle When Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Named Insured Owns or Rents Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Named Insured Owns or Rents Premises Where Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

§ 120.373 Policies Do Not Cover Same Insured for Same Loss When Loss Occurred During Loading or Unloading of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Presumption Inapplicable to Policies Covering Independent Tortfeasors

§ 120.374 All Insurers and Insureds Modified Statutory Presumption

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

§§ 120.375-120.379 [Reserved]

§ 120.380 Tort Committed Against Insured Is Independent of Insurance Contract

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Liable for Tort Not Arising From Insurance Contract

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer's Agent/Employee Is Liable for Tort Not Arising From Insurance Contract

§ 120.381 Liability for Conspiracy to Defraud Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Conspiracy to Defraud Insured

§ 120.382 Liability for Actual Fraud Against Insured

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Are Subject to Liability for Actual Fraud Against Insured

§ 120.383 Agent Breached Duty to Insured to Inform Insured Accurately of Policy Provisions

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Owes Insured Duty of Due Care

[b] Agent for Several Insurance Companies Who Selects Insured's Company Is Agent of Insured

[c] Agent Who Prepares Insurance Proposal Is Under Duty of Due Care to Inform Insured Accurately of Policy Provisions

[d] Insured Entitled to Reasonably Rely on Agent's Representations Regarding Scope of Coverage

[e] Agent Prohibited From Misrepresenting Policy Terms

[f] Misrepresentation to Induce Another to Take Out Policy Prohibited

§ 120.384 Agent Breached Duty to Insured to Explain Policy Limitations When Silence Would Mislead Insured to Believe Certain Coverage Existed

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Breached Duty to Explain Limiting Provisions if Silence Is Misleading Under Circumstances

§ 120.385 Agent Liable to Insurer for Negligently Inducing Insurer to Provide Coverage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Liable to Insurer for Loss Resulting From Negligent Inducement to Provide Coverage

§ 120.386 Agent Liable to Insurer for Extra-Contractual Damages Incurred by Insurer as Result of Agent's Wrongful Conduct Resulting in Insurer's Denial of Underlying Claim

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent's Liability for Losses Incurred by Principal

[b] Extra-Contractual Damages

§§ 120.387-120.389 [Reserved]

§ 120.390 Insurer Has No Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage Limits Absent Promise to the Contrary

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Fiduciary Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage

[b] No Special Duty to Advise Insured Regarding Adequacy of Coverage

§ 120.391 Insurance Agent Owes No Duty to Insured to Provide Complete Protection Under Insurance Policy

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agent Does Not Have Duty to Provide Complete Protection

[b] Mere Agency Relationship Does Not Imply Duty to Advise of Additional Coverage

[c] Previous Reliance on Agent's Advice Insufficient to Impose Greater Duty

[d] Agent's Assurance That Coverage Is Adequate Does Not Imply Broader Agency Relationship

§ 120.392 Insurer's Agent or Employee Is Not Party to Insurance Contract and Therefore Is Not Subject to Liability for Constructive Fraud

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agents and Employees of Insurer Not Subject to Liability for Constructive Fraud

§§ 120.393-120.399 [Reserved]

§ 120.400 Broker Negligently Obtained Inadequate Coverage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker Liable for Negligently Obtaining Inadequate Coverage

§ 120.401 Presumption of Negligence for Obtaining Insurance From Out-of-State Carrier

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Presumption of Negligence for Obtaining Insurance From Out-of-State Carrier

§ 120.402 Broker Failed to Obtain Promised Coverage

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Broker Liable in Negligence for Failing to Obtain Promised Coverage

[b] Broker Liable in Fraud Based on Misrepresentation That Requested Coverage Was Obtained

§ 120.403 Insured's Reliance on Broker's Representation of Coverage Justifiable if Supported by History of Similar Reliance

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insured's Reliance on Broker's Representation of Coverage Justifiable if Supported by History of Similar Reliance

§ 120.404 Two-Year Limitations Period Applies to Action Against Broker Based on Broker's Failure to Execute Professional Duties

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

[d] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Two-Year Limitations Period Applies to Action Against Broker for Failure to Execute Professional Duties

§§ 120.405-120.409 [Reserved]

§ 120.410 Director or Officer of Corporate Insurance Agent Is Not Liable to Insurer for Negligent Inducement to Provide Coverage--Director or Officer Is Not Bound Individually

[1] FORM

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

[b] Argument

[c] Related Points and Authorities

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Directors and Officers of Corporate Agent Not Individually Liable

§§ 120.411-120.419 [Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.01

§ 120.01 Scope of Chapter

This article contains points and authorities for use in actions against insurance companies. It also contains points and authorities for use in tort actions against insurance agents, employees, and brokers. The forms are grouped in six parts.

Part II, Subpart A [see § 120.10 et seq.] contains forms for use in actions on oral or implied insurance contracts; Subpart B [see § 120.30 et seq.] contains forms for use in actions involving policy coverage and exclusions; Subpart C [see § 120.170 et seq.] contains forms for use in actions based on improper claims settlement practices, including breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing; Subpart D [see § 120.250 et seq.] contains forms for use in actions involving rescission, cancellation, and renewal of policies; Subpart E [see § 120.350 et seq.] contains forms for use in actions between motor vehicle liability insurers, or involving motor vehicle insurers, for a judicial determination as to which policy provides primary, and which excess, coverage for the liability loss; and Subpart F [see § 120.380 et seq.] contains forms for use in tort actions against insurance agents, brokers, and employees, and against insurers in tort actions other than those for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing.

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.02

§ 120.02 Governing Law

The subject of insurance is governed generally by the Insurance Code, which is divided into General Provisions (Ins. Code § 1 et seq.) and four divisions. Division 1 (Ins. Code § 100 et seq.) sets forth general rules governing insurance; Division 2 (Ins. Code § 1880 et seq.) covers classes of insurance; Division 3 (Ins. Code § 12900 et seq.) sets forth the rules applicable to the Insurance Commissioner; and Division 5 (Ins. Code § 14000 et seq.) covers insurance adjusters. Former Division 4 (Civil Disorders, Ins. Code § 13000 et seq.) was repealed by Stats. 1979, ch. 345, and former Division 6 (Repeals, Ins. Code §§ 15000-15003) was repealed by Stats. 1979, ch. 373. Agency is governed generally by Civ. Code § 2295 et seq., indemnity by Civ. Code § 2772 et seq., and suretyship by Civ. Code § 2787 et seq. and Code Civ. Proc. § 1912.

Preemption by federal law of state bad-faith law remedies by ERISA (29 U.S.C.S. § 1001 et seq.) is governed by Pilot Life Ins. Co. v. Dedeaux (1987) 481 U.S. 41, 107 S. Ct. 1549, 95 L. Ed. 2d 39 , and Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Taylor (1987) 481 U.S. 58, 107 S. Ct. 1542, 95 L. Ed. 2d 55 .

Broadly, insurance is a contract whereby one undertakes to indemnify another against loss, damage, or liability arising from a contingent or unknown event [Ins. Code § 22]. A person who undertakes to indemnify another by insurance is the insurer and the person indemnified is the insured [Ins. Code § 23]. Any person capable of making a contract [see Civ. Code §§ 38-40, 1556, 1557; Fam. Code §§ 6701, 6710, 7051] may, subject to the restrictions imposed by the Insurance Code, be an insurer [Ins. Code § 150] and any person, except a public enemy, may be insured [Ins. Code § 151]. But if the insured has no insurable interest, the contract is void [Ins. Code § 280]. Insurable interests are defined in Ins. Code § 281 et seq. (insurable interest in property) and Ins. Code §§ 10110, 10130 (insurable interest in life and health of person).

The written instrument in which a contract of insurance is set forth is called the policy [Ins. Code § 380]. The required contents of a policy are set forth generally in Ins. Code § 381. An open policy is one in which the value of the subject matter is not agreed on but is left to be ascertained in case of loss [Ins. Code § 411]. A valued policy is one which expresses on its face an agreement that the thing insured shall be valued at a specified sum [Ins. Code § 412]. A running policy is one which contemplates successive insurances and which provides that the object of the policy may be from time to time defined, especially as to the subjects of insurance, by additional statements or endorsements [Ins. Code §

413].

The execution of an instrument is defined as the subscribing and delivering of the instrument with or without affixing a seal [Code Civ. Proc. § 1933], and the persons who must subscribe a policy issued by a corporate insurer are identified in Ins. Code § 386.

An insurance agent is a person authorized, by and on behalf of an insurer, to transact all classes of insurance other than life insurance, and to transact 24-hour care coverage as defined in Ins. Code § 1749.02 [Ins. Code § 31]. An insurance broker is a person who, for compensation and on behalf of another person, transacts insurance other than life with, but not on behalf of, an insurer [Ins. Code § 33]. An insurance solicitor is a natural person employed to aid a fire and casualty broker-agent acting as an insurance agent or insurance broker in transacting insurance other than life [Ins. Code § 34]. A fire and casualty broker-agent is a person licensed pursuant to Ins. Code § 1625 [Ins. Code § 33.5].

The classes of insurance are listed in Ins. Code § 100 and separately defined in Ins. Code §§ 101-120. Events that may be insured against are set forth in Ins. Code §§ 250-252.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.03

§ 120.03 How to Use the Forms in This Chapter

[1] Page Limits on Points and Authorities

One of the more significant drafting requirements to keep in mind are page limits: opening or responding memoranda of points and authorities must not exceed 15 pages, or 20 pages if used in a summary judgment or summary adjudication proceedings. A reply or closing memorandum may not exceed 10 pages. Exhibits, declarations, attachments, a table of contents, a table of authorities, and the proof of service are excluded when calculating pages. Any party desiring to file a longer memorandum must obtain leave of court [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(d)]. These and other drafting requirements are discussed in further detail in Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[2] Using the Forms to Build a Draft Memorandum

The forms included in this chapter are designed to be combined with other points and authorities to form a complete memorandum. For a detailed discussion on how to select and use the forms in the publication to build a draft memorandum and complete the draft, with detailed discussion of all drafting requirements and strategic or stylistic considerations, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewCivil ProcedureSummary JudgmentSupporting MaterialsMemoranda of Law

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.04

§ 120.04 Related Discussion and Forms

[1] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For detailed discussion and forms relating generally to insurance, see the following chapters in California Forms of Pleading and Practice (Matthew Bender):

- Ch. 32, Contractual Arbitration: Agreements and Compelling Arbitration.
- Ch. 33, Contractual Arbitration: Appointment of Arbitrator and Conduct of Proceeding.
- Ch. 34, Contractual Arbitration: Judicial Review.
- Ch. 182, Declaratory Relief .
- Ch. 269, Fraud and Deceit.
- Ch. 300, Indemnity and Contribution.
- Ch. 427, Principal and Agent.
- Ch. 536, Subrogation.
- Ch. 537, Summary Judgment .
- Ch. 538, Suretyship, Bonds, and Undertakings .

[2] Related Points and Authorities

Memoranda of points and authorities that may be combined with the forms in this chapter, relating to various aspects of insurance proceedings generally, may be found in Ch. 105, Fraud and Deceit ; Ch. 115, Indemnity and Contribution ;

Ch. 182, Principal and Agent , Ch. 220, Subrogation , Ch. 221, Summary Judgments , and Ch. 222, Suretyship .

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART I. INTRODUCTION

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.05-120.09

[Reserved]

§§ 120.05[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.10

§ 120.10 Insurer Is Not Bound by Unauthorized Oral Representations of Soliciting Agent

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS NOT BOUND BY AGENT'S ORAL STATEMENTS SINCE INSURANCE APPLICATION EXPRESSLY STATED INSURER WAS NOT BOUND BY ANY STATEMENT MADE BY AGENT UNLESS WRITTEN IN THE APPLICATION.

Unauthorized Oral Statements or Agreements Not Binding. Oral statements or purported agreements by agents authorized only to solicit or accept applications for insurance do not establish binding oral insurance coverage (Toth v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1932) 123 Cal. App. 185, 192-193, 11 P.2d 94 ; see also Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 218, 137 P.2d 833).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant insurer's contention that it is not bound by the unauthorized oral representations of its soliciting agent.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the defendant insurer is not liable in an action on a contract of insurance, because there is no showing of a contractual relation between the parties at the time the loss was sustained or the liability incurred, in that the agent who allegedly entered into the oral contract of insurance on defendant's behalf was a mere solicitor without actual or apparent authority to do so.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.11 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.16 et seq. and § 120.24 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unauthorized Oral Statements or Agreements Not Binding

Toth v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1932) 123 Cal. App. 185, 11 P.2d 94 , was an action by plaintiff as beneficiary of an alleged oral contract of life insurance. Plaintiff offered no evidence concerning the actual or ostensible authority of the agent whom she claimed made the oral agreement, and defendant's evidence was that the agent was authorized only to take and submit insurance applications. Judgment for plaintiff was reversed. The court of appeal said that a mere soliciting agent or other intermediary operating between the insured and the insurer has authority only to initiate contracts but not to consummate them and cannot bind his or her principal by anything he or she may say or do during the preliminary negotiations (123 Cal. App. 185, 192) . The court added that an insurer is not bound by representations or purported agreements made by an unauthorized agent (123 Cal. App. 185, 193) .

Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 137 P.2d 833 , was an action by plaintiff as beneficiary of accident insurance contracts. The applications, signed by plaintiff's decedent, stated: "I understand and agree that this application shall not be binding upon the Association until the policy is issued to me." The initial premiums were paid to the insurance solicitor, who dated the applications July 20 and sent them and premiums to the company's Los Angeles office, which in turn sent them to the home office in Omaha, Nebraska, for approval of the policies. The applications arrived at the home office on August 1, were approved on August 2, and the two policies were issued, dated August 5, for a term commencing on the date of issue. On August 6, they were taken to the applicant's home in Hynes, California, where the applicant was lying unconscious from staphylococcic septicemia contracted from bodily injuries received in falls that had occurred on July 26 and 30. The applicant died on August 6 without regaining consciousness. Plaintiff had sent notice of the accidents to the association's Los Angeles office on July 30. The notice was received by the home office on August 2. On August 10, defendant denied liability for the reason that the injuries which resulted in death occurred prior to the date the policies were issued. For the same reason, the trial court sustained the defense of nonliability interposed by defendant. The trial court's judgment for defendant association was affirmed. Defendant's solicitor had told plaintiff's decedent that coverage would commence from the date of application, contrary to the statement in the applications quoted above. The Supreme Court rejected plaintiff's contention that coverage commenced from the date the applications were made because the solicitor said it did. The court said that plaintiff did not attempt to show by any evidence, except the solicitor's remark, that the solicitor had any authorityto bind the associations to the time when liability commenced and concluded that the agent had no authority, actual or apparent, to bind the association on a contract of insurance (22 Cal. 2d 216, 218) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unauthorized Oral Statements or Agreements Not Binding

In Browne v. Commercial Union Assurance Co. (1916) 30 Cal. App 547, 158 P. 765 , the court of appeal noted the settled rule that the authority to complete contracts primarily differentiates a general agent having power to bind his or her principal from mere soliciting agents and other intermediaries operating between the insured and the insurer, who have authority only to initiate contracts and, consequently, cannot bind their principals by anything they may say or do during the preliminary negotiations.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedurePleading & PracticeGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplicationsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingAgents & Brokers

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.11

§ 120.11 Application for Insurance Negated Apparent Authority

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURANCE APPLICATION NEGATED APPARENT AUTHORITY OF AGENT ORALLY TO BIND INSURER.

Application for Insurance Negated Apparent Authority. A statement in an insurance application that the insurer is not bound by any oral statement or representation made by or to its agent constitutes notice to the applicant that the soliciting agent is without authority to alter the terms of the written application. (Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 218, 137 P.2d 833 ; Toth v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1932) 123 Cal. App 185, 193, 11 P.2d 94).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant insurer's contention that it is not bound by the unauthorized representations of its soliciting agent. They should be included only if the insurance application contained a statement that the insurer is not bound by anyoral statement or representation made by or to its agent, or a variation of that statement. Such a statement would constitute notice to the applicant that the agent has no authority, actual or ostensible, to enter into a contract on the insurer's behalf.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the defendant insurer is not liable in an action on a contract of insurance, because there is no showing of a contractual relation between the parties at the time the loss was sustained or the liability incurred, in that the application expressly states that any oral statement or representation by its agent is not binding, and provides notice to the applicant that the agent has not authority to enter into a binding agreement on the insurer's behalf.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summaryjudgment, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.16 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Application for Insurance Negated Apparent Authority

The factual background of Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 137 P.2d 833 , is discussed in § 120.10[3][a]. The Supreme Court pointed out that, in addition to the statement that the application would not be binding until the policy was issued, each application contained the applicant's agreement that the association was not bound by any statement made by or to any agent unless written in the application. The Court, therefore, concluded that the agent had no actual authority to bind the association on a contract of insurance and that the agreement gave notice that he had no such apparent authority (22 Cal. 2d 216, 218) .

The factual background of Toth v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. (1932) 123 Cal. App 185, 11 P.2d 94 , is discussed in § 120.10[3][a]. The court of appeal pointed out that the application for insurance signed by the decedent contained the provisions that no agent or any other person except officers of defendant company had power to "Make, modify or discharge any contract of insurance" or to bind the defendant in any way "by making any promises respecting any benefits under any policy issued hereunder" and that defendant would incur no liability under the application until it had been received and approved and a policy issued and delivered with a full first premium paid to and accepted by defendant. The court said that decedent signed the application and is presumed to have known its contents and that, by these provisions, express notice was given to decedent that defendant's officers reserved the exclusive right to determinewhether or not defendant would insure him and that the soliciting agent had no right or authority to bind defendant by any promises or purported oral agreements. The court concluded that the agent had neither actual nor ostensible authority to make the purported oral contract relied on by plaintiff and consequently that no completed contract of insurance on decedent's life, either oral or written, was ever entered into by decedent and defendant (123 Cal. App 185, 193) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplications

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.12

§ 120.12 Parties Agreed That Insurance Would Not Be Effective Until Policy Issues

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER IS NOT LIABLE FOR THE _____ [LOSS SUSTAINED or LIABILITY INCURRED] BECAUSE THE PARTIES AGREED THAT THE INSURANCE WOULD NOT BE EFFECTIVE UNTIL THE POLICY ISSUES, AND THE _____ [LOSS or LIABILITY] WAS _____ [SUSTAINED or INCURRED] BEFORE THE INSURER ACCEPTED THE APPLICATION AND ISSUED THE POLICY.

Agreement That Insurance Is Not Effective Until Policy Issues Binding on Parties. An agreement between the parties that insurance is not effective until a policy issues does not violate public policy and is binding on the parties (see Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 218-219, 137 P.2d 833).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's contention that the insurer is not liable for the loss because the parties agreed that the insurance would not be effective until the policy issues, and the loss was sustained after the application for insurance was made but before the insurer accepted the application and issued the policy.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the insurer is not liable in an action on a contract of insurance, because liability was conditionedon the issuance of the policy and no policy had been issued at the time of loss.

For example, in his or her argument counsel would:

- Refer to or quote the express language in the application stating that the insurance would not be effective until the policy issued.

- State the date the policy was issued, if applicable.

- Identify the date the loss was sustained or liability incurred, pointing out that the date of loss precedes the date the policy was issued.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.11 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the formsof this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in §§ 120.25 and 120.26, based an insurer's unreasonable delay may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreement That Insurance Is Not Effective Until Policy Issues Binding on Parties

The factual background of Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 137 P.2d 833 , is discussed in § 120.10[3][a]. The Supreme Court, by implication, held that the statement in the applications that, in effect, the insurance was not to be effective until the policies were issued did not violate law or public policy and was binding on the parties. The Court said that any reader of the applications must be deemed to be placed with certainty on notice that coverage commenced not when the agent said it did, but on the issuance of the policies. It explained that if no insurance was to be in effect until issuance or delivery of the policy, the effective date of insurance coverage must coincide with the effective date of liability and to say that liability does not attach until a certain date, and when it does attach on that date it attaches as of an earlier date, is to place a strained and unwarranted construction on the plain language employed (22 Cal. 2d 216, 219) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplications

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.13

§ 120.13 Mere Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create Contractual Insurance Obligation

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER'S DELAY IN APPROVING THE APPLICATION AND ISSUING POLICY DOES NOT CREATE A CONTRACT.

Delay in Issuing Policy Does not Create a Contract. Mere delay, without more, in passing on an application for and issuing a policydoes not create a contractual insurance obligation (Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 220-221, 137 P.2d 833).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of an insurer's argument that a mere delay in passing on an application for and issuing a policy does not create a contractual insurance obligation. These points and authorities should be included only when there was some delay on the part of the insurer in acting on the application and issuing the policy and the delay was not unreasonable as a matter of law.

Counsel may wish to use this form in a reply memorandum to respond to an opposing party's contention that the insurer is contractually bound even though the insurer had not issued the policy at the time of loss because of some delay by the insurer [see, e.g., § 120.25].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form, showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that any delay on the part of the defendant

insurer was not unreasonable, therefore, the insurer is not contractually liable to the insured for the loss sustained prior to issuance of the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.11 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create a Contract

The factual background of Linnastruth v. Mutual Benefit Health & Accident Ass'n (1943) 22 Cal. 2d 216, 137 P.2d 833 , is discussed in § 120.10[3][a]. In affirming the judgment for defendant association, the Supreme Court in Linnastruth, noted that no facts were presented which would justify a finding of negligence, waiver, or estoppel on the part of the insurer and said that delay alone is not sufficient to create a contract of insurance (22 Cal. 2d 216, 220) . The Court explained that considering the geographical distances involved, no more than a reasonable time elapsed between the date of the applications and the issuance of the policies, that neither the retention of the premium until return of the policies was tendered at trial nor the issuance of the policies after notice of the accidents sufficed to impose liability prior to the date of the policies in view of the statement in the applications that liability would not attach until the policies were issued, and that neither the insured nor the beneficiary could have been misled by any act of the association (22 Cal. 2d 216, 221) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Delay in Issuing Policy Does Not Create a Contract

Lucas v. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co (1936) 14 Cal. App. 2d 676, 58 P.2d 934 , was an action by the widow of a deceased applicant for an accident insurance policy. The applicant had been injured and died while defendant insurer was investigating the risk. One of plaintiff's theories of recovery was based on the agent's delay in communicating with the insurance company. The trial court found that there was no negligence. In affirming the judgment for defendant, the court of appeal said that mere delay in acting on an application for insurance does not create a contract of insurance and that, as a matter of law, it is settled, with rare exceptions, that what is a reasonable lapse of time is within the sound discretion of the trial court (14 Cal. App. 2d 676, 680) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.14

§ 120.14 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Agreement to Insure Loss

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that an oral agreement to insure is enforceable in specific instances. See §§ 120.17 et seq. and 120.24 et seq.]

Oral Insurance Contracts Valid. An oral contract of insurance is valid and enforceable (Kazanteno v. California-W. States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370, 290 P.2d 332).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that oral agreements to insurer are enforceable.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that an oral agreement to insure is enforceable in specific instances [see § 120.17 et seq.], and with other points and authorities that contend that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the parties have entered into an enforceable oral contract of insurance, or agreement to issue, renew, or make an indorsement on a policy, or to waive a provision or condition or a provision [see Kazanteno v. California-W. States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370, 290 P.2d 332 ; see also §

120.14[3][a]].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.17 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.10 and § 120.11 may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Insurance Contracts Valid

Kazanteno v. California-W. States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 290 P.2d 332 , arose out of an oral agreement made on or about June 25, 1952, between plaintiff and defendant insurer's agent to reinstate a life insurance policy on the plaintiff, increase the amounts payable under two rider policies (one an accident monthly income policy and the other a health income policy) from $100 to $300 per month, and to issue a life policy covering plaintiff's son. Plaintiff expressly conditioned reinstatement of the life policy and issuance of the policy covering his son's life on defendant increasing the monthly benefit payments under the rider policies. On July 2, 1952, defendant reinstated the policy on plaintiff's life, and on July 7 sent plaintiff notice of the reinstatement with premium paid until July 18, 1952, and a notice of premiums due on July 18, 1952. Plaintiff paid the required premiums. On July 16, 1952, the policy covering the son's life was issued. On August 25, 1952, plaintiff was totally disabled by an accident. On October 17, 1952, defendant, with knowledge of plaintiff's accident, issued new rider policies with increased benefits dated July 18, 1953, but effective October 18, 1952, a date after the accident, and refused to pay the increased benefits under the accident rider policy.

Judgment for plaintiff was affirmed on appeal. The court of appeal noted that both sides admitted that oral agreements for insurance are valid in California and added that the rule appears equally applicable to all phases of insurance contracts; hence, a parol contract of insurance, or agreement to issue, renew, or make an indorsement on a policy, or to waive a provision or condition thereof, is valid and enforceable (137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370) . Quoting from Marderosian v. National Cas. Co. (1929) 96 Cal. App 295, 303, 273 P. 1093 [see § 120.14[4][a]], the court explained that when a valid parol contract of insurance has been entered into, the policy to be issued is simply the memorial of the prior parol contract, and even though the policy is not delivered until after the loss occurs, the insurance is deemed effective from the time agreed on in the parol agreement, irrespective of any delivery of the policy (137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Insurance Contracts Valid

In Marderosian v. National Cas. Co. (1929) 96 Cal. App. 295, 273 P. 1093 , an action to recover under an accident insurance policy which had not been issued until after the death of plaintiff's decedent (the alleged insured), the court of appeal, in affirming judgment for plaintiff, stated that when a valid parol contract of insurance has been entered into, the policy to be issued is simply the memorial of the prior parol contract and that the insurance is deemed effective from the time agreed on in the parol agreement, irrespective of any delivery of the policy (96 Cal. App. 295, 303) .

In Smith v. Massachusetts Bonding & Ins. Co. (1925) 71 Cal. App. 661, 236 P. 176 , an action arising out of a vehicle accident involving a trailer owned by plaintiff's assignor, plaintiff sought recovery under an alleged oral insurance contract covering both the assignor's trucks and his trailers which was entered into between plaintiff's assignor and defendant insurer before the accident. The policy was not delivered until after the accident and then covered only the trucks. The court of appeal, in affirming judgment for plaintiff, rejected the insurer's contention that the action was actually one to reform a written insurance contract and that substantially all the evidence introduced at the trial was objectionable because it sought to vary the terms of a written instrument. The court explained that there was no attempt to change the terms of a written instrument because at the time of the accident no policies had been issued; the action was based on an oral contract which was in effect at the time of the accident and which insured the trailers as well as the trucks (71 Cal. App. 661, 667) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationOral ContractsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationPolicy Delivery

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.15

§ 120.15 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Binder Pending Issuance of Written Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16].

A. Oral Binder Is Enforceable. A binder is a temporary contract of insurance, and an oral binder is valid and enforceable (Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710).

B. Insurer Is Bound Even Though Policy Not Yet Delivered. When a valid parol contract of insurance has been entered into, the policy to be issued is simply the memorial of the prior parol contract, and even though the policy is not delivered until after the loss occurs, the insurance is deemed effective from the time agreed on in the parol agreement, irrespective of any delivery of the policy (Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that the insurer has issued an oral binder pending delivery of the formal policy.

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16], and that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing, for example, that the insurer has obligated itself to issue a policy retroactive to the date of the oral agreement of its agent [see Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710 ; see also § 120.15[3][a]].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 537, Summary Judgment (Matthew Bender).

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Binder Is Enforceable

Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710 , was an action by insureds against an insurer. Defendant had originally insured plaintiffs under a comprehensive liability policy but plaintiffs, through their insurance broker, had invited bids for the policy when their current policy with defendant expired. Defendant hadissued a written binder for the 30 days immediately following the expiration period pending ultimate placement of the policy, and also submitted a bid for this policy. A second insurer submitted a lower bid and gave an oral binder covering plaintiffs for the same period. A fire occurred during the binder period which exposed the insureds to liability. The broker thereafter accepted the policy proposed by the second insurer and canceled the binder with defendant. The second insurer, about two weeks after the fire, issued its policy which was retroactive to the expiration date of the prior policy. Defendant insurer cross complained against the second insurer for a declaration that the second insurer was obligated to defend and indemnify plaintiffs under its oral binder and policy. After a trial by the court, judgment was entered declaring that defendant insurer had no obligation to defend or indemnify the insureds and that the second insurer (cross defendant) was solely liable.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the second insurer, by its oral binder, had obligated itself to issue a policy retroactive to the date the prior policy expired and that, under the facts of the case, the second insurer's binder canceled defendant's binder by substitution (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805-806) . The court said that a "binder" is a temporary contract of insurance and that the second insurer's contract, whether it be characterized as a binder or as an oral contract to insure, was valid (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805) .

[b] Insurer Is Bound Even Though Policy Not Yet Delivered

The factual background of Spott Elec. Co. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1973) 30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 106 Cal. Rptr. 710 , is discussed in § 120.15[3][a]. The court cited Kazanteno v. California-W. States Life Ins. Co. (1955) 137 Cal. App. 2d 361, 370, 290 P.2d 332 , discussed in § 120.16[3][a], explaining that when a valid parol contract of insurance has been entered into, the policy to be issued thereon is simply the memorial of the prior parol contract, and even though the policy is not delivered until after the loss occurs, the insurance is deemed effective from the time agreed on in the parol agreement, irrespective of any delivery of the policy (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805) . The court, quoting 27 Cal. Jur 2d, Insurance, § 182 and citing Civ. Code § 1625, explained that the rationale behind this rule is the notion that since the execution of a contract in writing supersedes all the negotiations or stipulations concerning its subject which preceded or accompanied the execution of the instrument, whether the law requires it to be written or not, an oral contract of insurance is merged into a subsequent written contract (30 Cal. App. 3d 797, 805) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Oral Binder Is Enforceable

In Granco Steel, Inc. v. Workmen's Comp. Appeals Bd. (1968) 68 Cal. 2d 191, 65 Cal. Rptr. 287, 436 P.2d 287 , a proceeding to review an order of the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board dismissing an insurer from liability for injuries sustained by one of petitioner's employees on the ground there was no insurance coverage at the time the injuries were sustained, the Supreme Court annulled the board's order. The Court held that on the basis of facts found by the board, a valid oral binder had been given by the insurer's agent prior to the accident. The Court restated the rule that insurance companies may enter into binding parol contracts to issue new policies, renew existing policies, or transfer existing insurance from one location to another (68 Cal. 2d 191, 197) . It added that, as with all insurance contracts, the identity of the insurer must be established if liability is to be predicated on an alleged oral binder and that some difficulty exists where, as here, the agent represents more than one insurance company (68 Cal. 2d 191, 198) . The Court nevertheless held that, under the facts of the case, there was a sufficient designation of the insurer as the company that was to carry the insurance (68 Cal. 2d 191, 198-206) .

In Zander v. Texaco, Inc. (1968) 259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 66 Cal. Rptr. 561 , defendant insurer had given an oral binder covering the owner and operators of a service station for fire, public liability, and property damage. Plaintiff was subsequently injured on the premises, recovered judgment against the service station owner and operators, and then sued to compel the insurer to pay the judgment. The court of appeal, in affirming judgment for plaintiff, explained that the issuance of binders, called covering notes in the Insurance Code, has statutory authorization with their duration limited to 90 days unless extended as provided by law [Ins. Code § 382], that California case law covers the issuance of binders, that binders may be oral and cover new policies, that the rationale for their issuance is that the parties have the benefit of them during that incipient period when the papers are being perfected and transmitted, and that oral binders are a common and necessary part of the insurance business (259 Cal. App. 2d 793, 800) .

In Parlier Fruit Co. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1957) 151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 311 P.2d 62 , plaintiff insured recovered judgment against several insurers under fire insurance policies issued by them, but judgment was rendered against plaintiff in its action against the insurers for losses under oral use and occupancy binder coverages. The court of appeal, in affirming that part of the judgment for plaintiff and reversing that part against it, explained that binders necessarily are of the most informal character, that a valid binder may be made orally as well as in writing, or partly in paroland partly in writing, and that oral binders are a common and necessary part of the insurance business (151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 20, 25-26) . Rejecting the trial court's finding that the binders were too uncertain to be enforceable, the court of appeal pointed out that the insurers must have known the type of insurance sought when they accepted the request for coverage and that it would necessarily be the type and form usually issued to an insured in the same type and class of business as plaintiff (151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 21) . With respect to the amount of insurance, the court said that plaintiff had expressly agreed to accept a total insurance amount up to $75,000 and impliedly agreed to accept from each company the amount allocated to it by the agent, provided only that the total from all companies did not exceed $75,000, and that each defendant had agreed to coverage in a particular sum (151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 22-23) . The court further explained that when a binder does not specify the terms and conditions, the general rule is that the parties will be presumed to have contemplated a form of policy containing such conditions and limitations as are usual in such cases (151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 21) and that the premium rate would necessarily be the company's usual rate for the type of coverage received (151 Cal. App. 2d 6, 22) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsBindersInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationOral ContractsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationPolicy Delivery

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.16

§ 120.16 Insurer Is Bound by Continuing, Collateral, Oral Contract to Insure

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16].

Insurer Is Bound by Continuing Contract to Insure. An oral agreement under the terms of which an insurer undertakes to keep the insured covered with insurance, to be terminated only by a notice in writing, is valid as a continuing collateral contract to insure (Dutton D. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App 574, 576-577, 29 P.2d 316).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its solicitingagent. The basis for this form is that the insurer has issued a continuing, collateral, oral contract to insure.

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16], and that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the insurer has obligated itself to keep the insured covered with insurance, to be terminated only by a notice in writing.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rulesapplicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Bound by Continuing Contract to Insure

Dutton D. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1934) 136 Cal. App. 574, 29 P.2d 316 , was an action for damages for breach of an alleged oral contract under the terms of which defendant insurer undertook to keep plaintiff covered with workers' compensation insurance, to be terminated only by a notice in writing. Defendant complied with the agreement for several years and then, without plaintiff's knowledge, allowed the insurance to lapse. Thereafter, one of plaintiff's employees was injured. In a proceeding before the Industrial Accident Commission (now Workers' Compensation Appeals Board), in which both plaintiff and defendant were defendants, the employee procured an award of $2,990.05 against plaintiff. The commission in that proceeding found that defendant was not plaintiff's insurance carrier at the time of the accident and ordered that it be released and discharged from liability. In the present action, plaintiff sought recovery of the amount of the award it had to pay. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint on the ground of lack of jurisdiction was overruled, and defendant petitioned for a writ of prohibition to restrain the trial court from proceeding with the action on the ground that the matter of its liability had been concluded by the Industrial Accident Commission's exercise of jurisdiction over it.

The Supreme Court denied the writ on the ground that the issue before the Industrial Accident Commission was whether or not a policy issued by defendant covering plaintiff was in existence at the time of the accident, whereas the issue before the trial court was whether defendant had breached its contract to issue and keep in effect compensation insurance [see United States Fid. & Guar. Co. v. Superior Court (1931) 214 Cal. 468, 470-471, 6 P.2d 243] . The action in the trial court thereafter proceeded and resulted in a verdict for plaintiff. Although the court of appeal reversed thejudgment for retrial on the issue of damages only, it upheld the validity of the agreement, which it characterized as a continuing collateral contract to insure (136 Cal. App. 574, 579) , distinguishing this kind of contract from a parol contract of insurance (136 Cal. App. 574, 576) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationOral Contracts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.17

§ 120.17 Insurer Is Bound by Its Oral Agreement to Renew Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16].

Oral Contract to Renew Policy Valid. An oral contract to renew an insurance policy is valid and enforceable (Gold v. Sun Ins. Co. (1887) 73 Cal. 216, 218, 14 P. 786).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that an oral contract to renew an insurance policy is valid and enforceable.

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16], and that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the insurer entered into an oral contract to renew an insurance policy. For example, counsel may refer to facts tending to show that the insurer had orally agreed to renew the insured's original policy on a specified date in the same amount and covering the same property as the original policy, that the agreement was for a valuable consideration, that the insured had relied on that promise by failing to secure insuranceelsewhere, that the insurer had failed to perform, and that the insured suffered loss of his or her property [see Gold v. Sun Ins. Co. (1887) 73 Cal. 216, 218, 14 P. 786 ; see also § 120.17[3][a]].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues [see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.] and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading of Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading of Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion forsummary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Oral Contract to Renew Policy Valid

Gold v. Sun Ins. Co. (1887) 73 Cal. 216, 14 P. 786 , was an action for damages resulting from defendant insurer's failure to renew a fire insurance policy covering plaintiff's property. The complaint alleged that defendant, for a valuable consideration, had orally agreed to renew plaintiff's original policy on a specified date in the same amount and covering the same property as the original policy, that plaintiff had relied on that promise by failing to secure insurance elsewhere, that defendant had failed to perform, and that the property had subsequently been destroyed by fire. Plaintiff sought recovery of the full amount of the policy agreed to be renewed. Defendant's general demurrer to the complaint was overruled, and judgment was entered for plaintiff on defendant's failure to answer. Defendant appealed, contending that the demurrer should have been sustained because (1) the complaint failed to state the terms and conditions of the policy as originally issued, (2) it was not alleged that the renewal premium was paid, and (3) no proof of loss was furnished as required under the original policy.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment. It held that the complaint sufficiently stated the terms of the contract, that a "valuable consideration" was alleged, that it was therefore unnecessary to specifically allege that the premium had been paid, and that proof of loss was not necessary as required under the terms of the renewed policy because defendant had repudiated its contract and refused to renew the policy (73 Cal. 216, 218-219) . With respect to the oral nature of the agreement to renew, the Court said that a parol contract to issue a fire policy, made by an insurer authorized to issue policies of that kind, is valid, and that it can be enforced by compelling specific performance by the company or in an action for breach of the agreement (73 Cal. 216, 218) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationOral Contracts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.18

§ 120.18 Actions By Agents Outside Scope of Actual Authority

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16].

INSURER IS BOUND BY _____ [INSURANCE POLICY ISSUED BY, OR MODIFICATION TO INSURANCE CONTRACT MADE BY] INSURER'S AGENT WHERE AGENT HAD APPARENT AUTHORITY TO _____ [ISSUE THE POLICY, OR MODIFY THE INSURANCE CONTRACT] AND INSURED HAD NO KNOWLEDGE OF LIMITATIONS ON AGENT'S AUTHORITY.

Insurer Bound by Agent Acting Outside Scope of Actual Authority. Where an agent has apparent authority to act in the business entrusted to the agent, and the insured has no knowledge, actual or constructive, of limitations on agent's authority, the agent's authority is coextensive with that of the principal notwithstanding limits placed on the agent's authority by principal (Skyways Aircraft Ferrying Serv., Inc. v. Stanton (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 281, 51 Cal. Rptr. 352).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that the insurer's agent has apparent authority to bind the insurer.

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts showing that the insurer has actually conferred authority on the agent to bind the insurer, that agent held him or herself out as an agent of the insured, and that the agent had the apparent authority to make the transaction in question.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading of Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading of Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations, and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication. For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to Agency, see Ch. 427, Principal and Agent .

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments . For discussion and forms on principles of agency, see Ch. 182, Principal and Agent .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Bound by Agent Acting Outside Scope of Actual Authority

In Skyways Aircraft Ferrying Serv., Inc. v. Stanton (1966) 242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 51 Cal. Rptr. 352 the court held that an agent for an insurercan bind the insurer even when acting outside the scope of the agent's actual authority if the agent had the apparent authority to make the transaction in question and the insured had no notice of limitations on the agent's authority (242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 280-281 ; see also Civ. Code § 2334). Whether an intermediary is an agent of the insurer with the apparent authority to bind the insurer is a question of fact (242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 284) .

In Skyways, the plaintiff was engaged in the business of ferrying and delivering planes on a worldwide basis. It carried a life insurance policy on its president, who piloted the planes. On the day the policy expired, plaintiff sought immediate coverage from a broker who had procured insurance coverage for plaintiff previously. The broker, who held himself out as an agent of the defendant insurer, gave an oral binder over the telephone that he would cover the risk beginning that day until they entered into a written contract. Plaintiff assumed the coverage promised by the broker was coextensive with his earlier policy because the broker knew plaintiff and its president were still in the same business when the broker offered to cover the risk, and he did not mention any limitations on coverage. However, while the broker was authorized to bind over the telephone and to issue certificates of insurance, the coverage of the type of flights plaintiff's president made was beyond the scope of the broker's actual authority to offer. When plaintiff's president was killed the day after the oral binder was made, the insurance company subsequently denied liability (242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 275-277) .

The court found that the broker had apparent authority to bind the insurer because he had worked with defendant insurance company for about 20 years, had an extensive aviation background and familiarity with the industry, and generally held himself out as an agent of the insurance company by such actions as using letterhead with the insurance company's name on it for five years prior to the transaction with plaintiff. The court held that the insurer was bound by the oral binder made by the broker as its agent because he was acting with apparent authority on insurer's behalf, and plaintiff had no knowledge of the agent's limited authority (242 Cal. App. 2d 272, 281) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Bound by Agent Acting Outside Scope of Actual Authority

In Frasch v. London & Lancashire Fire Ins. Co. (1931) 213 Cal. 219, 2 P.2d 147 , a declaratory relief action in which plaintiff sought a declaration that defendant insurer was liable under the terms of a fire insurance policy alleged to have been issued by it, the person who solicited the insurance and delivered the policy collected the premium, but absconded with themoney. The insurer denied liability unless plaintiff again paid the premium. In reversing the judgment of dismissal, the Supreme Court said that as a general rule the powers of an agent of an insurance company are governed by the general law of agency, that the agent's powers are varied by the character of the functions he or she is employed to perform, that he or she may be a general agent with general powers, or the powers may be limited by the company, or he or she may be a special agent with authority limited to a specific transaction. The Court stated that in any event, an insurance agent, whether general or special, possesses such powers as have been conferred by the company, or as third persons have a right to assume that the agent possesses under the circumstances of the case and that, as a general rule, the agent's powers, as to those dealing with the agent, are determined by the nature of the business entrusted to the agent and are prima facie coextensive with its requirements (213 Cal. 219, 223) .

In Guipre v. Kurt Hitke & Co. (1952) 109 Cal. App. 2d 7 , an action to recover on a substandard insurance agreement for automobile insurance covering public liability and property damage based on plaintiff's allegation and proof that immediate coverage had been orally agreed to by personnel in the office of an insurance general agent whose authority to "bind" on such policies was limited, the court of appeal affirmed judgment for plaintiff. The court said that when the assured has no notice of any limitation on the powers of the general agent, any act within the scope of the insurance business is binding on the insurance company, although it is in fact in violation of the agent's authority. Since new insurance in various forms, as well as increased coverage on existing insurance, is commonly ordered by phone, an enforceable insurance contract results if an application is accepted by a clerk who undertakes to speak for the agent (109 Cal. App. 2d 7, 15). The court said that in view of the conflicting testimony in this case, the question of whether the general agent had authority, either actual or apparent, was for the jury to determine. The court explained that secret limitations on an agent's power do not prevent a party from dealing with the agent to the full extent of the agent's apparent authority, and the parties dealing with an insurance agent having apparent authority to enter into an insurance contract cannot be affected by special instructions to the contrary (109 Cal. App. 2d 7, 16) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Business & Corporate LawAgency RelationshipsAuthority to ActApparent AuthorityGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesAgentsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesAgentsGeneral Agents

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.19

§ 120.19 Insurer Unreasonably Delayed Acting on Application

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generallycontending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16].

INSURER IS LIABLE FOR INSURED'S LOSSES BECAUSE INSURER UNREASONABLY DELAYED ISSUING THE POLICY, AND THE DELAY PREJUDICED INSURED'S RIGHTS.

Unreasonable Delay in Acting on Insurance Application. The failure of an insurance company either to issue a requested policy or to reject an application for insurance within a reasonable time will support an action against the insurer in either contract or tort if the delay prejudiced the applicant (see Snyder v. Redding Motors (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 416, 422-424, 280 P.2d 811 ; Stark v. Pioneer Cas. Co. (1934) 139 Cal. App 577, 580, 34 P.2d 731).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that the insurer delayed approving the application and issuing the policy to the prejudice of its insured.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities supporting the contention that a personal representative of the decedent has standing to assert the descendant's rights under an application for life insurance when the insurer unreasonably delayed issuing the policy to the decedent's prejudice [see § 120.26].

These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16], and that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq. In particular, this form may be used to oppose the contention that the parties agreed that insurance would not be effective until a policy has been issued [see § 120.11].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to facts showing that:

- The insurer delayed issuing the policy.
- The delay was unreasonable.
- The delay prejudiced the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.12[1] may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form. For example, if the points and authorities in this form are used in a memorandum opposing the contention that there is no insurance because a policy had not been issued before the loss was incurred, the form in § 120.12[1] would be used in a reply memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Acting on Insurance Application

Snyder v. Redding Motors (1955) 131 Cal. App. 2d 416, 280 P.2d 811 , was an action against an insurance company and its agents. Plaintiffs, in connection with their purchase of a car, had applied through defendant insurance company's agent, defendant car dealer, for insurance against liability for personal injuries and property damage. The agent forwarded plaintiffs' application to the insurer, but the insurer failed to act on it. Almost three months after their application had been forwarded to the insurer, plaintiffs suffered liability for property damage. Defendant insurer denied any liability for the property damage and refused to defend the third-party action against plaintiffs. The third party recovered judgment against plaintiffs who then brought this action to recover the amount of that judgment and the attorney's fees and costs they incurred in defending the prior action.

The court of appeal affirmed judgment for plaintiffs. The court held that the failure to issue the policy or to reject the application and return the premium within a reasonable time after receipt of the application, which delay misled the applicants to their prejudice, gave rise to an implied acceptance of the application which would support an action against the insurer outside the contract and that the same facts would allow recovery on the theory of negligence (131 Cal. App. 2d 416, 422) . The court of appeal found ample evidence to support the trial court's conclusion that there was an implied contractual duty on the part of the insurer to either accept or reject the application within a reasonable time and to notify the applicants of such action (131 Cal. App. 2d 416, 423-424) .

Stark v. Pioneer Cas. Co. (1934) 139 Cal. App. 577, 34 P.2d 731 , was an action by an applicant for accident insurance against an insurance company and its agent predicated on the agent's negligence in withholding the application and premium delivered to him for transmission to the insurer. The applicant did not learn of the delay until after he demanded insurance following an accident. Judgment was for plaintiff. The insurance company appealed, contending, among other things, that the agent'sauthority was limited to soliciting and receiving the application and premium, and that since the application was merely an offer from which no contract could be implied until accepted, no liability could arise because no policy had been issued or delivered.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that mere delay in passing on an application cannot be construed as an acceptance which will support an action outside the contract, but the applicant will not be charged with the same degree of diligence as an insurer organized for profit, and the latter may be held liable for actual damage not exceeding the amount of insurance purchased if it be shown to have delayed notice of rejection. The court further held that the insurer may not complain of inexcusable delay caused by its agent's dilatory conduct or inefficiency (139 Cal. App. 577, 580-581) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Unreasonable Delay in Acting on Insurance Application

In Loree v. Robert F. Driver Co. (1978) 87 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 151 Cal. Rptr. 557 , an action against insurance brokers for damages for negligent failure to have procured a Small Business Administration (SBA) guaranty policy in addition to a performance bond, the court of appeal reversed summary judgment for defendants. Quoting from Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 673, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 , the court of appeal said that California has developed a line of decisions imposing a duty on all insurers to act promptly on an application for insurance, that the rule finds its source in the quasi-public nature of the insurance business and the reasonable expectation of the applicant and the general public, and that since insurance companies are held to a broader legal responsibility than are parties to purely private contracts, they are bound either to furnish indemnity or decline to do so within a reasonable time after soliciting and obtaining an application for insurance and receiving payment of a premium (87 Cal. App. 3d 1032, 1037) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplicationsInsurance LawIndustry RegulationInsurance Company OperationsRepresentativesAgentsGeneral Agents

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.20

§ 120.20 Personal Representative of Life Insurance Applicant May Assert Prejudice From Delay in Acting on Application

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief. These points and authorities may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure. See § 120.16. They may also be combined with pointsand authorities contending that the insured by prejudiced by the insurer's delay, generally. See § 120.25.]

THE PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVE OF THE DECEDENT HAS STANDING TO ASSERT THE DECENDANT'S RIGHTS UNDER THE APPLICATION FOR LIFE INSURANCE WHEN THE INSURER UNREASONABLY DELAYED ISSUING THE POLICY, AND THE DELAY PREJUDICED THE DECEDENT.

Standing by Personal Representative of Deceased Applicant for Life Insurance. An action for damages for unreasonable delay in acting on an application for life insurance and issuing a policy may be maintained by the deceased applicant's personal representative (Smith v. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 581, 591-592, 195 P.2d 457).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that it is not bound by the oral representations of its soliciting agent. The basis for this form is that the personal representative of the decedent has standing to assert the decendant's rights under the application for life insurance when the insurer unreasonably delayed issuing the policy to the decedent's prejudice.

These points and authorities may be combined with points and authorities contending that the insured by prejudiced by the insurer's delay, generally [see § 120.25]. They may also be combined with points and authorities generally contending that the parties entered into an enforceable oral agreement to insure [see § 120.16], and that the soliciting agent had authority to bind the insurer [see § 120.24 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.10 et seq. In particular, this form may be used to oppose the contention that the parties agreed that insurance would not be effective until a policy has been issued [see § 120.11].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. See comments in § 120.11.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.16 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be amotion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclosing no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. In this context counsel would need to submit a statement of undisputed facts supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For a form of complaint, and forms of allegations for use in a complaint, by a beneficiary, insured, or loss-payable payee against an insurance company for damages for breach of contract, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender).

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.12[1]. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form. For example, if the points and authorities in this form are used in a memorandum opposing a contention that there is no insurance because a policy was notbeen issued before the loss was incurred, the form in § 120.12[1] would be used in a reply memorandum.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standing by Personal Representative of Deceased Applicant for Life Insurance

Smith v. Minnesota Mut. Life Ins. Co. (1948) 86 Cal. App. 2d 581, 195 P.2d 457 , was an action against an insurance company for negligent delay in passing on the application of plaintiffs' decedent for life insurance. The decedent had applied for life insurance, paid a premium, and been given a medical examination, but died some three months after the application date without having received any notice as to defendant's action, if any, on his application. The complaint set forth two causes of action. The first was by decedent's widow who was the beneficiary named in the application. The second was by the administratrix of decedent's estate. Defendant's demurrer to the complaint was sustained without leave to amend, and plaintiffs appealed from the subsequent judgment of dismissal.

The court of appeal reversed. It found the action stated by the administrator to be good as against a general demurrer. The court said that it appeared from the pleadings that a cause of action did exist immediately prior to the applicant's death and that, although sounding in tort, the cause of action was connected with and primarily based on contract, either express or implied, and that the applicant sustained an injury to his property and estate, either in being or expectancy, and, therefore, a cause of action survived to the administrator of his estate (86 Cal. App. 2d 581, 591-592). The court reversed the judgment against the widow, however, only for the purpose of allowing her to file an amended complaint, if she so desired, to allege any community property interest she might have had in the policy if issued or that she might have in the applicant's cause of action (86 Cal. App. 2d 581, 592).

It should be noted that in Smith, the court of appeal was faced with the question of survivorship of what appeared to be a tort action (negligence), came up with a quasi-contractual relationship, and held the action survived and could be maintained by the deceased's personal representative. The court was applying the provisions of former Prob. Code § 574 on survivability of actions. Under the current provisions of Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20 et seq., substantially all causes of action today survive death. Code Civ. Proc. § 377.20 states that, except as provided by statute and subject to the applicable limitations period, a cause of action for or against a person is not lost by reason of the person's death.

The more fundamental problem with Smith is its holding that decedent, himself, who had suffered no loss or damage, other than nominal, from defendant's failure to act on his application, had a cause of action whichcould survive to his personal representative, and the further holding that the widow, by the mere fact that she was the beneficiary named in the insurance application, in itself, gave her no right of action against the insurer (86 Cal. App. 2d 581, 586) . For the requirements that both a breach of duty and injury are essential to the accrual of a cause of action and the statement that mere possibility, or even probability, that an event causing damage will result from a wrongful act does not render the act actionable, see Walker v. Pacific Indem. Co. (1960) 183 Cal. App. 2d 513, 517, 6 Cal. Rptr. 924 .

In Smith it was the widow, the intended beneficiary of the policy, who sustained the loss and not the decedent's estate. This point was noted in Orcutt v. Ferranini (1965) 237 Cal. App. 2d 216, 226, 46 Cal. Rptr. 715 . It appears that a more satisfactory result would have been to hold that just as the duty of the promisor in the context of a third-party beneficiary contract runs to the third-party beneficiary [see Civ. Code § 1559] as well as to the promisee, the duty of the insurer to act on a life insurance application likewise runs both to the applicant for the insurance and the third-party beneficiary and that a breach of this duty, which operates to the prejudice of either, would support a cause of action by either against the insurer for negligence [see, e.g., Barrera v. State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. (1969) 71 Cal. 2d 659, 663, 79 Cal. Rptr. 106, 456 P.2d 674 (involving an automobile liability policy)].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Civil ProcedureJusticiabilityStandingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsContract FormationApplicationsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood

Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawLife InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
A. Oral and Implied Insurance Contracts

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.21-120.29

[Reserved]

§§ 120.21[Reserved]

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.30

§ 120.30 Liability Is Excluded From Coverage or Not Covered by Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION BECAUSE THE UNDERLYING ACTION DOES NOT POTENTIALLY SEEK ANY RELIEF THAT IS WITHIN THE POLICY COVERAGE.

A. Duty to Defend Not Absolute. The insurer's duty to defend is not without limits, but rather is limited by the nature and kind of risk covered by the policy (La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 39, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048).

B. No Potential Relief Within Policy Coverage. The test of an insurer's defense obligation is whether the underlying action for which defense and indemnity is sought potentially seeks relief within the coverage of the policy. If the underlying action does not potentially seek relief within the coverage of the policy, the insurer has no duty to defend the action (Kazi v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 871, 882, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 15 P.3d 223 ; Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 1, 37, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370, 900 P.2d 619 ; Truck Ins. Exch. v. Bennett (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497).

C. Causal Connection Required Between Policy and Claim. An insurer's duty to defend does not arise unless there is a causal connection between the insuring clause of the policy and the claim against the insured (Turner v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 681, 689-690, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurancepolicy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the underlying action does not potentially seek relief within the coverage of the policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as:

- In an action by an insured against an insurer for breach of the insurer's duty to defend or indemnify the insured, this form may be used in a memorandum supporting the insurer's motion for summary judgment. For this use, the form should be modified to contend that no triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty to defend [see § 120.30[2][b]].

- In a declaratory relief action by an insurer seeking a declaration that the insurer has no duty to defend the insured, this form may be used in a memorandum opposing the insured's motion for summary judgment.

- In an insurer's trial brief.

- In an insurer's appellate brief.

These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities setting forth the appropriate procedural context. For example, points and authorities supporting and opposing motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication are set forth in Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

Many complex issues can arise in the context of the duty to defend, and discussion of these is beyond the scope of this comment. For a detailed discussion of the duty to defend, and issues arising in the context of that duty, see California Insurance Law and Practice, Ch. 13, §§ 13.08, 13.09 (Matthew Bender) and Levy, Golden, & Sacks, CALIFORNIA TORTS, Ch. 82 (Matthew Bender).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel would:

- Identify the specific relief sought in the underlying action against the insured;

- Refer to the specific coverage portions of the policy;

- Point out that the policy does not provide coverage for the relief sought in the underlying action; and

- Conclude that the insurer has no duty to defend the underlying action because the relief sought is beyond the scope of the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.31 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there is no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts supporting the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(d), (g), (h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

References to exhibits and declarations must reference the number or letter of the exhibit, the specific page, and, if applicable, the paragraph or line number [see Cal. Rules of Ct., Rule 313(h)].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

For further legal background, research guides, and forms relating to judicial notice and affidavits and declaration, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 15, Affidavits, Certificates, and Declarations , and Ch. 321, Judicial Notice (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see also Ch. 357, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Duty to Defend Is Not Absolute

In La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 , the underlying complaint against an employer alleged that an employee had suffered emotional distress due to wrongful termination in violation of public policy. The employer's workers' compensation insurer refused to defend the action and the employer brought a declaratory relief and bad faith action against the workers' compensation insurer. The trial court granted the insurer summary judgment, but the court of appeal reversed, concluding that the complaint set forth claims that would support a potential claim under the workers' compensation policy.

The Supreme Court reversed. Concluding that the workers' compensation policy was not ambiguous and did not provide coverage for an employee's civil suit for damages (9 Cal. 4th 27, 41-43, 46) , the Court examined case law dealing with the basic nature of the duty to defend, and emphasized that the duty to defend is not without limits. The Court noted that an insurer is not required to defend if the third party complaint can by no conceivable theory raise a single issue that could bring it within policy coverage. The Court stated that the test for determining whether or not the duty to defend exists is whether the underlying action for which defense and indemnity is sought potentially seeks relief within the coverage of the policy (9 Cal. 4th 27, 44) . Applying this test to the facts, the Court concluded that since the policy did not provide coverage for an employee's civil action for damages, it did not present a potentiality of a judgment within the indemnity provisions of the policy because workers' compensation benefits can never be awarded in a civil suit (9 Cal. 4th 27, 46) . The workers' compensation insurer had no duty to defend the tort action merely because the plaintiff might later file a covered workers' compensation claim (9 Cal. 4th 27, 43-44) .

[b] No Potential Relief Within Policy Coverage

In Kazi v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 871, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1, 15 P.3d 223 , two property owners shared a common driveway 20 feet in width that straddled the boundary line between the two parcels. Litigation ensued between them that stated causes of action for declaratory and injunctive relief, quiet title, trespass to the common driveway easement, and ejectment from the common driveway easement. Each cause ofaction alleged that the access road of Parcel B obstructed the alleged implied easement over Parcel A. The owners of Parcel A alleged that the owners of Parcel B denied the existence of an easement over their parcel for purposes of the common driveway, that they had been grading and constructing on Parcel A in contravention of the existence of the common driveway easement, and that they had obstructed the easement, denying the owners of Parcel A the benefits of the easement. The owners of Parcel B tendered defense of the suit to their comprehensive general liability insurers. Their policies covered property damage and personal injury, including a duty to defend and indemnify them in an underlying lawsuit involving third party property damage or personal injury. After settlement of the easement suit, one of the insurers reimbursed the insureds for the fees and costs attributable to the defense and settlement. Not satisfied with the reimbursement, the insureds filed a bad faith action against their insurers for breach of contract, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, and negligent handling of their claim. The trial court granted the insurers' motions for nonsuit, finding that because the easement dispute involved intangible property rights only, and no physical damage or occurrence on the insureds' property, the complaint on its face did not trigger the duty to defend. The court of appeal reversed. The California Supreme Court granted review.

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that comprehensive liability insurers who insure only for tangible property losses do not owe a duty to defend in a dispute involving the right to use an implied easement. The Court held that interference with an easement right is not property damage to tangible property giving rise to a duty to defend (24 Cal. 4th 871, 879-882) . The Court stated that actions over easement ownership, interference with an easement, or the right to use an easement concern "pure rights in property" or intangible rights only (24 Cal. 4th 871, 882) . An easement is a nonpossessory interest in the land of another that gives its owner the right to use the land of another or to prevent the property owner from using his or her land. It represents a limited privilege to use the land of another for the benefit of the easement holder's land, but does not create an interest in the land itself. An easement is therefore an incorporeal or intangible property right that does not relate to physical objects but is instead imposed on the servient land to benefit the dominant tenement land (24 Cal. 4th 871, 880-881) .

Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1995) 11 Cal. 4th 1, 44 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370, 900 P.2d 619 , involved a commercial general liability policy. Plaintiff sought damages based on the insurer's refusal to defend plaintiff in a third party action that sought incidental emotional distress damages caused by the insured's noncovered economic or business torts. The trial court found for plaintiff, but the court of appeal reversed on the ground that the policy did not provide coverage for the economic loss, and therefore did not coverthe incidental emotional and physical distress; without that potential for coverage, there could be no duty to defend. The Supreme Court granted review, and affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal.

The Supreme Court held that the damages were derivative of and inseparable from the third party's allegations of intentional and business torts and thus did not give rise to coverage (11 Cal. 4th 1, 23) . Without the potential for coverage, there could be no duty to defend, and the insurer could not be liable for breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing by declining to defend the action (11 Cal. 4th 1, 37) .

In Truck Ins. Exch. v. Bennett (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 , the insurers brought a declaratory relief action against their insured, alleging that the insurers had no obligation under a personal injury liability clause in the insurance policies to defend or indemnify the insured against an underlying slander of title action. The trial court granted summary judgment motions in favor of the insurers. The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that the insurers' policies that indemnified the insured against "disparaging material" and "slander" did not provide coverage for an action based on disparagement or slander of title, and thus the insurers had no duty to defend the insured against that claim (53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 77) . In these policies, the words "disparaging" and "slander" applied unambiguously to defamation of a person's reputation, not to an action for disparagement or slander of title to property.

The thrust of the tort of disparagement or slander of title is protection from injury to the salability of property, which is pecuniary damage, explained the court. Defamation, by contrast, injures a person's reputation, vindicates personal interests, and is a personal injury. Hence, there is a distinction between the property or economic interest at stake in a slander or disparagement of title cause of action, and the personal interest in reputation at stake in a defamation cause of action (53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 77-78) . Given the "defamation" context in which these words appeared in the policies, the personal injury liability clause was not ambiguous, and it would not have been reasonable for the insured to have expected coverage (53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 76-77) .

[c] Causal Connection Required Between Policy and Claim

In Turner v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 681, 112 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , a husband and wife obtained a rental dwelling insurance policy for property that they owned. While at their own home, and not on the rental property, they engaged in a "verbal dispute" over new rental terms for tenants of the rental property. The dispute escalated to physical violence, which culminated in the wife's arrest. At the jail following the arrest, she claimed that a male deputy sheriff had performed an inappropriate strip search on her. This deputy sheriff filed a lawsuit against both the insureds for defamation. The insureds tendered the defense of the action to the insurer, which declined. The insureds sued their insurer for failure to defend, breach of the duty of good faith and fair dealing, and negligence. The trial court sustained a demurrer to the complaint and entered judgment in favor of the insurer. The insureds appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was an insufficient causal relationship between the defamatory statements in the third-party claim and the insured rental property. The policy language on which the insureds relied was contained in two separate sections of the policy. The first section, which describes the business liability coverage, provides: "If ... a suit is brought against any insured for damages because of ... personal injury ... to which this coverage applies, caused by an occurrence, and which arises from the ownership, maintenance, or use of the insured premises, we will: [P] ... [P] 2. provide a defense at our expense by counsel of our choice ... ." The second section defines "personal injury" as an "injury arising out of one or more of the following offenses: [P] ... [P] b. libel, slander or defamation of character ... ." The court of appeal ruled that to trigger a duty to defend, there must be a causal connection between the insuring clause of the policy and the slanderous statements (92 Cal. App. 4th 681, 686) . The court also ruled that if a rental dwelling policy affords coverage for damages because of personal injury caused by an occurrence that "arises from" the ownership, maintenance, or use of the insured premises, the occurrence must be logically and more than incidentally or parenthetically connected to that ownership, maintenance, or use. In this case, the insureds' slanderous statements could have occurred after an argument about anything. The nature of the violent quarrel, rather than the topic of the argument, required the police's involvement. Moreover, the first slanderous statement was removed in time from the argument because the wife made the statement only after she was interviewed at the scene, arrested, transported to jail, and booked. The court concluded that there was no potential for coverage under the insurance policy. Accordingly, no duty to defend ever arose (92 Cal. App. 4th 681, 689-690) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Potential Relief Within Policy Coverage

Storek v. Fidelity & Guaranty Ins. Underwriters, Inc. (N.D. Cal. 2007) 504 F. Supp. 2d 803 , involved an insurance policy covering some of the owners of a family-owned commercial building to protect them against losses they might sustain in connection with ownership. The federal district court held that the insurer had no duty to defend the insured based on a cross-complaint in a suit by family members regarding the insured's alleged mismanagement of the family-owned property. The cross-complaint asserted only economic causes of action, all of which pertained solely to financial management of property, not covered by the policy (504 F. Supp. 2d 803, 807-809) .

In Miller v. Allstate Ins. Co. (S.D. Cal. 2007) 489 F. Supp. 2d 1133 , plaintiffs (the insured's granddaughters), as assignees, brought an action against the insurer under a homeowners' policy for failure to defend and indemnify the insured regarding their underlying lawsuit. After repressing childhood memories, the granddaughters claimed that their grandfather had molested them. They sought damages for negligence, negligent infliction of emotional distress, and breach of fiduciary duty from the insured grandmother, for her part in the grandfather's conduct. The federal district court granted the defense motion to dismiss claims for breach of contract and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing without leave to amend, holding that the homeowner's policy did not cover acts intended to cause bodily injury. Child molestation is always intentional. Because the grandmother's potential liabilitystemmed from her husband's sexual assault, which was intentional, not accidental conduct, the insurance company owed no duty to defend (489 F. Supp. 2d 1133, 1137) .

In Loughney v. Allstate Ins. Co. (S.D. Cal. 2007) 465 F. Supp. 2d 1039 , the federal district court granted the insurer's motion for judgment on the pleadings. The insureds' home suffered damages from a landslide allegedly caused by the city's negligent maintenance of water and sewage lines. The homeowners' policy excluded coverage for damage caused by earth movement/landslide and third-party negligence. Coverage for "sudden and accidental direct physical loss caused by fire explosion, theft, or breakage of glass or safety glazing materials resulting from earth movement" did not apply to the insureds' loss. There is no coverage under an insurance policy when the cause of damage is an excluded peril (465 F. Supp. 2d 1039, 1042-1043) .

In Delgado v. Interinsurance Exch. of Auto. Club of So. Cal. (2009) 47 Cal. 4th 302, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 298, 211 P.3d 1083 , the insured under a homeowner's policy hit and kicked a person, who brought suit against the insured, alleging among other causes of actions, that the insured negligently and unreasonably believed he was engaging in self-defense, and unreasonably acted in self-defense when he struck the plaintiff. The insurer denied coverage and refused to defend, asserting that the assault was not an "occurrence," defined in the policy as an "accident," and that the allegations arose out of the insured's intentional acts, which were excluded from coverage. The injured party brought an action against the insurer following an agreement with the insured to accept partial satisfaction of the claim in exchange for an assignment of claims against the insurer. The injured party alleged that the insured's actions constituted an accident (47 Cal. 4th 302, 305-306, 317) . The California Supreme Court held that there was no potential for coverage, and that the insurer had no duty to defend (47 Cal. 4th 302, 305-308, 317) . In the context of liability insurance, an accident is an unexpected, unforeseen, or undesigned happening or consequence from either a known or an unknown cause. The Court held that whether there was an accident within the policy language need not be determined from the injured party's perspective. An insured's unreasonable, subjective belief in the need for self-defense does not convert into "an accident" an act that is purposeful and intended to inflict injury (47 Cal. 4th 302, 308-311) .

In Fire Ins. Exch. v. Superior Court (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 388, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 534 , reh'g denied, 2010 Cal. App. LEXIS 282 (2010) , homeowners insured under a homeowners' policy (the insureds) obtained a lot line adjustment from the city with the cooperation of the owner of adjacent property, concerning a strip of property along the border of both properties. Apparently because of their own mistakes and those of their architect, they inadvertently encroached on the adjacent property when rebuilding their residence. When purchasers of the adjoining property discovered a cloud on the title, they obtained an assignment of rights by the sellers, then disputed the validity of the lot line adjustment. The insureds brought suit for quiet title and adverse possession of the border strip. The adjoining property owners cross-complained for quiet title, declaratory relief, and fraud. The insureds brought an action against their insurer for breach of contract and bad faith for refusal to defend on the ground that it had no potential liability under the policy.

The trial court denied summary judgment for the insurer, finding a triable issue fact whether the insureds' act of constructing their home could constitute an accident based on their mistaken belief they had legally acquired title to the disputed property, with no intent to encroach. The appellate court issued a peremptory writ of mandate directing the trial court to set aside that order, and to issue a new order granting the motion. The appellate court held that the insureds' act of construction was intentional and not an accident, even though they acted under a mistaken belief that they had the right to do so. The reason for their failure to obtain title was irrelevant to the determination whether the act of building in that location could be characterized as an accident. There was no unexpected and unintended event between the intentional construction of the building and the encroachment. The trial court therefore erred in denying summary judgment because, based on uncontested facts, there was no potential for coverage (Hentzel v. Singer Co. (1982) 138 Cal. App. 3d 290, 188 Cal. Rptr. 159 .

In Baker v. National Interstate Ins. Co. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 1319, 103 Cal. Rptr. 3d 565 , a company operating a school bus business that primarily transported school children, was insured under a CGL that contained an exclusion entitled, "Products-Completed Operations Hazard." It excluded coverage for bodily injury damages caused by the insured's "products" and "completed operations," stated that it did not cover bodily injury arising out of "your product" or "your work," and provided separate definitions of "your product" and "your work." After selling one of its used buses to another bus company, the insured performed, for payment, a CHP-mandated inspection and maintenance service on the bus. While driving the bus, the new owner collided with a truck. The driver's seat of the bus then broke loose from the floor and propelled her through the windshield. In the ensuing wrongful death suit, the complaint alleged among other things negligent repair and maintenance of the driver's seat. The insurer refused to defend based on the completed-operations exclusion. A judgment against the insured based on negligent inspection or maintenance in connection with the sale of the bus, resulted in a $9 million damages award. The parties exchanged an agreement not to execute on the judgment for an assignment of rights against the insurer. In the suit against the insurer, the trial court found for plaintiffs, awarding $12 million in damages. The appellate court reversed and remanded, holding that the insured's inspection of the bus in conjunction with the sale was a work-related, "completed operation," even though the damages occurred after the sale. When a person provides a service for a customer for payment from that customer, the person is "working" or otherwise "performing an operation" in the context of his or her business activities. The trial court therefore erred in denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment (180 Cal. App. 4th 1319, 1339) .

In Griffin Dewatering Corp. v. Northern Ins. Co. of N.Y. (2009) 176 Cal. App. 4th 172, 97 Cal. Rptr. 3d 568 , the insurer under a CGL refused to defend the insured, which was a contractor whose primary work involved movement of water, in a suit by a water district arising from the insured's work on a manhole feeding into a main sewer that resulted in sewer-water damage to a residence. The appellate court held that the refusal to defend was reasonable in that it was rooted in the literal language of the absolute pollution exclusion (176 Cal. App. 4th 172, 197-198) . When the third-party suit never presents any potential for coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance, and the insurer may property deny a defense (176 Cal. App. 4th 172, 209) .

In Venoco, Inc. v. Gulf Underwriters Ins. Co. (2009) 175 Cal. App. 4th 750, 96 Cal. Rptr. 3d 409 , the liability policy issued to an oil company contained a "toxic pollution exclusion." An exception to the exclusion applies under limited circumstances provided that the insured notify the insurer of a claim within 60 days of an occurrence. In the insured's declaratory judgment action against the insurer, the appellate court held that the insurer had no duty to defend the underlying suit (175 Cal. App. 4th 750, 754, 758-765) . The exclusion applied to claims by third parties for injuries caused by toxic chemical contamination of property adjacent to the location of the insured's oil and gas operations. The exception regarding the 60-day notice provision did not apply because the insured failed to make the required notification (175 Cal. App. 4th 750, 758-763) . Moreover, the insurer's duty to defend a groundless action, set forth in the policy, applies only to claims covered by policy (175 Cal. App. 4th 750, 765) .

In GGIS Ins. Svcs. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 , the insured, an insurance company, brought an action against its insurer under an agents and brokers professional liability policy, seeking indemnity and defense in an underlying action brought by the Pennsylvania insurance commissioner. The policy provided coverage for losses and defense expenses arising from claims first made during the policy period, with additional limited coverage for defense expenses in certain circumstances. The policy excluded any claim, loss, or defense expenses regarding certain specified matters, including the commingling of, or inability or failure to pay, collect, safeguard, or return any money (Exclusion G). A claim was defined to exclude criminal proceedings of any type, or regulatory investigations, or any proceeding seeking injunctive, declaratory, equitable, or nonpecuniary relief or remedies. "Wrongful act" was defined as any actual or alleged negligent act, error, or omission of an insured arising solely from the insured's rendering or failing to render professional services. The underlying action concerned alleged wrongful conduct regarding the collection, retention, and payment of premiums; and demanded a monetary payment to the commission and an accounting of all premium amounts for canceled policies. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication, noting that it had already determined that triable issues of fact existed with regard to the issues raised. The trial court also declined to stay the trial of indemnity issues pending the outcome of the Pennsylvania action.

On petition for writ of mandate, the court of appeal held that a stay is not required if the court in the coverage action may resolve the coverage question as a matter of law without making any factual determinations that would prejudice the insured in the third-party action. The court also stated that if, as a matter of law, neither the complaint nor the known extrinsic facts indicate any basis for potential coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance (168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 1506) . The court concluded that the insurer owed no duty of defense. All counts alleged by the commissioner arose from the alleged failure to pay it money due the insurers. Absent a potential for coverage, the insurer had no duty to defend in the Pennsylvania action. Exclusion G precludes coverage for any liability or defense costs arising from the insured's failure to pay money. The trial court properly denied the motion for summary adjudication (168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 1508) .

In Medill v. Westport Ins. Corp. (2006) 143 Cal. App. 4th 819, 49 Cal. Rptr. 3d 570 , former directors and officers of a nonprofit organization sought coverage under a "Nonprofit Organization Liability Insurance" policy for an underlying action alleging negligence and breach of fiduciary duty because the organization defaulted on contractual payment obligations on municipal bonds. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the insurer had no duty to defend when the policy did not cover damages arising out of breach of contract, and the plaintiffs in the underlying suit sought to recover damages for failure of the defendants to perform their contractual obligations to make repayments on the bonds (143 Cal. App. 4th 819, 829-831) .

In Ortega Rock Quarry v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 969, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 517 , the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer in a suit by the insured seeking defense and indemnity regarding an EPA order and corresponding civil lawsuit. The EPA actions were based on the insured's placement of dredged fill material (pollutants within meaning of the Clean Water Act) on its leased property to replace a road washed out by storms, which subsequently filled an adjacent creek with that material. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the unambiguous "total pollution" exclusion excluded coverage under the relevant CGL and excess policies (141 Cal. App. 4th 969, 980-990) .

In August Entm't, Inc. v. Philadelphia Indem. Ins. Co. (2007) 146 Cal. App. 4th 565, 52 Cal. Rptr. 3d 908 , an officer under a directors' and officers' liability policy sued the insurer for bad faith, alleging that the insurer wrongfully refused to pay a claim and provide a defense based on a third-party suit for contract breach seeking the contract price. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for the insurer on the ground that the D&O policy did not cover the insured corporation's contractual debt or the officer's liability for contract breach. The breach of the contractual obligation asserted in the underlying action did not give rise to a loss caused by a wrongful act within the meaning of the policy. Rather, the corporation was simply being required to pay an amount it voluntarily contracted to pay (146 Cal. App. 4th 565, 579, 582-584) .

In Oak Park Calabasas Condo. Ass'n v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (2006) 137 Cal. App. 4th 557, 40 Cal. Rptr. 3d 263 , the insurer issued a D&O policy to a condominium association covering "wrongful acts." When the association failed to pay a construction company the full amount due under a contract, the company sued the association for breach of contract. After the insurer refused to defend the action, which resulted in a judgment against the association, the association sued the insurer. On the coverage issue, the trial court concluded that "wrongful acts" included only negligent breaches of duty, not breaches of contractual duties, and therefore that the policy did not provide any potential coverage. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that "wrongful acts" refers to negligent acts, negligent errors, and negligent omissions, and does not cover claims by contractors for breach of contract (137 Cal. App. 4th 557, 563-565) .

In Garamendi v. Golden Eagle Ins. Co. (2005) 127 Cal. App. 4th 480, 25 Cal. Rptr. 3d 642 , underlying complaints were filed against an insured company by two groups of workers, who alleged that the company sold defective sandblasting products that caused bodily injury after the workers inhaled sandblasted silica particles over a period of years. The company tendered defense of the complaints to the administrator of its insurer (after liquidation proceedings had commenced). The administrator denied coverage and defense based on the "total pollution exclusion" in the company's CGL policy, and the company filed applications for orders to show cause why the claims should not be allowed. The exclusion applied to bodily injury that "would not have occurred in whole or part but for the actual, alleged or threatened discharge [or] dispersal ... of pollutants at any time." The court of appeal affirmed denial of the applications, holding that because the discharge of silica dust, a pollutant, caused the injuries, the pollution exclusion excluded coverage for the claims and therefore that the administrator had properly rejected tenders of defense (127 Cal. App. 4th 480, 487-488) .

In Ace Am. Ins. Co. v. Walker (2004) 121 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 18 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , the insured under a commercial general liability (CGL) policy owned a car purchased for the use of the insured's son. While driving the car, the son was involved in an automobile collision that injured his passenger. The passenger sued the corporation that obtained the CGL policy, the insured (who formed the corporation), the son, for negligence and negligent entrustment, and the car owner's automobile insurer undertook defense of the claim. However, the automobile insurance policy limit was $25,000, and the CGL limit was $1 million. The CGL insurer filed a complaint for declaratory relief against the insured, his corporation, and the passenger, seeking a declaration that it had no duty to defend or indemnify the underlying claims. The trial court dismissed the complaint after granting the insurer summary judgment, finding that the automobile exclusion in the CGL policy precluded coverage and the duty to defend. The trial court also sustained the insurer's demurrer to the passenger's cross-complaint for breach of the duty to defend, negligence, misrepresentation, breach of contract, and bad faith. The demurrer stated that the insurer could not be liable for breaching a duty to defend if the court had already ruled there was no actual or potential coverage under the policy. The court of appeal affirmed (121 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1025-1026) .

In Swain v. California Cas. Ins. Co. (2002) 99 Cal. App. 4th 1, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 808 , the insureds had obtained a homeowner's policy on a recently purchased house that provided coverage for "personal liability." They then served an eviction notice on the tenants living in the house on the ground that they themselves intended to occupy the house, but instead they rented the house to other tenants in violation of a local rent-stabilization ordinance. The evicted tenants sued the insureds, alleging fraud, wrongful eviction, and related claims, and the insurer refused to defend. The insureds filed an action against the insurer for wrongful denial of coverage and bad faith, and the insurer filed a cross-complaint seeking declaratory relief as to its coverage obligations. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer, and the plaintiffs appealed. The court of appeal held that the claims asserted by the evicted tenants did not arise, even potentially, from an "occurrence" as defined in the policy. It modified the judgment, nunc pro tunc to the date of the summary judgment order, to provide that the plaintiffs take nothing, that the main action be dismissed, and that the insurer have judgment on its cross-complaint by way of a declaration that it was not obligated to defend or indemnify the insureds in connection with the underlying claims and otherwise affirmed (99 Cal. App. 4th 1, 8-16).

In Cunningham v. Universal Underwriters (2002) 98 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 120 Cal. Rptr. 2d 162 , the insured had entered into a lease agreement with a car dealership with regard to real property of the insured that was currently occupied by another tenant, but which the insured promised to be vacant and available by a specified date. The former tenant's failure to vacate the premises until six weeks past the promised date caused the car dealership to incur business losses, for which the dealership sued the insured. Following the insurer's refusal to defend, the insured settled the dealership's claim, then sued the insurer for breach of duty to defend, based on potential coverage under the policy's personal injury "wrongful eviction" coverage and property damage coverage. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's grant of summary judgment for the insured, holding that the insured's conduct did not constitute "wrongful eviction," and that no tangible property damage occurred within the meaning of the policy. Moreover, a policy exclusion for "loss of use of property not physically damaged, if caused by: (1) [the insured's] delay or failure in performing any agreement or contract ..." applied as a matter of law (98 Cal. App. 4th 1141, 1150-1156) .

In Ananda Church of Self-Realization v. Massachusetts Bay Ins. Co. (2002) 95 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 116 Cal. Rptr. 2d 370 , an ex-employee of a subsidiary of the insured company sued both companies, alleging wrongful discharge and other causes of action, based on sexual harassment by the subsidiary company's vice president. In a subsequent suit, the same plaintiff alleged that an agent of a private investigator hired by the defendants' counsel trespassed on her attorneys' property and ransacked her attorneys' trash. The defendants' agent allegedly tried to hit one of the plaintiff's attorneys as he drove away, then delivered two bags of trash to the private investigator. The investigator in turn delivered "selected documents" from the trash to members of the defense litigation team. The plaintiff stated causes of action, including conversion and invasion of privacy, against the defendants and their litigation team. In a third suit, the plaintiff's attorneys sued the same defendants for the same acts alleged in the second suit--that is, trespass and theft of documents contained in their trash, which had been located in a gated, secured, and enclosed area on their property. The defendants' insurer refused to defend and indemnify in the second and third suits. In a fourth suit, the defendants sued their insurer for breach of contract, bad faith, and related claims. The trial court sustained the insurer's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that if there is no potential for coverage, there is no duty to defend, regardless of whether the alleged loss took place during the policy period (95 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1280) . The court concluded that because the only awardable damages were for harm to the plaintiffs' intangible rights, principally the right to have their trashed documents properly destroyed and otherwise kept from the view of prying eyes, there was no potential coverage for, or duty to defend against, "injury to" or "loss of use of" tangible property within the meaning of the policy (95 Cal. App. 4th 1273, 1285) .

Continental Cas. Co. v. Superior Court (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 430, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 849 , initially involved third party suits for construction defects against a partnership engaged in real estate development and construction. The partnership was formed from two business entities insured by a commercial general liability (CGL) carrier, which assumed defense of the third-party suits. One of the companies forming the partnership sued the other company, its business partner, to resolve economic disputes involving the construction defect claims, to dissolve the partnership, and for an accounting. Shortly before a jury trial was to commence on that suit, the defendant in that suit tendered defense to the CGL carrier, which refused. The defendant in that suit then became the plaintiff in a suit against the carrier for breach of contract and bad faith. The trial court granted the plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication, finding a duty to defend. The court of appeal issued a writ of mandate compelling the trial court to vacate its order granting the plaintiff's motion and to enter a new order denying the plaintiff's motion and granting summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The court of appeal held that the construction company's CGL policy, which covered bodily injury and property damage, did not cover the claims by the insured's business partner--that is, intangible economic losses. The insured could not possibly be held liable to the partner for causing property damage because the partner made no claim for physical injury to tangible property. Moreover, all asserted construction defect claims that were potentially covered under the policy were already being defended by the insurer in the third-party suits (92 Cal. App. 4th 430, 439-441) .

In Century-Nat'l Ins. Co. v. Glenn (2001) 86 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73 , the insured had a homeowner's policy that contained an exclusion for bodily injury that is "a foreseeable result of an intentional or criminal act of any insured." The insured discharged a firearm in his backyard, allegedly to frighten away a group of youths, and the bullet struck one of the youths as he fled. The insured pled guilty to felony willful discharge of a firearm. In a declaratory judgment action between the insured and the insurer, the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer. On appeal, the court affirmed, holding that the criminal acts exclusion barred coverage. The court concluded that the bodily injury suffered by the victim was a "foreseeable result" of a criminal act by the insured (86 Cal. App. 4th 1392, 1397-1398) .

In Tosco Corp. v. General Ins. Co. (2000) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1016, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , an insured brought an action against numerous insurers to establish insurance coverage under comprehensive general liability policies for environmental cleanup costs. Two insurers asserted that they had no duty to indemnify or defend the insured because, as of the stated policy period, the insured neither owned nor had any other relationship to any of the properties from which the claims arose. The insurers contended that its coverage did not extend to claims arising from property acquired by the insured after the policy period. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of three insurers, based on A. C. Label Co. v. Transamerica Ins. Co. (1996) 48 Cal. App. 4th 1188, 56 Cal. Rptr. 2d 207 , which held that a comprehensive general liability insurer could not be required to defend or indemnify an insured with respect to liabilities arising from property that the insured did not own during the policy period. On appeal, the court affirmed, rejecting the insured's assertion that the holding of A. C. Label was incorrect. The court of appeal held in accordance with A. C. Label that liability insurance coverage cannot be created after the fact (85 Cal. App. 4th 1016, 1020) .

In Belmonte v. Employers Ins. Co. (2000) 83 Cal. App. 4th 430, 99 Cal. Rptr. 2d 661 , the insured's teenaged niece took his van keys without permission from his business office, drove his van around the parking lot, and ran into her friend, who sued the insured for negligence in the use of premises, negligent entrustment of the van, negligent failure to supervise the use of the van, and vicarious liability. The insurer under the relevant commercial general liability (CGL) policy refused to defend or indemnify because the injuries resulted solely from niece's use of the insured's van, coverage of which was precluded by the automobile exclusion clause in the policy. In an action by the insured for breach of contract and related causes of action, the trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, finding that the policy's automobile exclusion clause precluded coverage. The court of appeal affirmed, noting that the fact that the niece found the keys at the insured's desk rather than in the parking lot or in the van's ignition was irrelevant to the coverage issue, as was the fact that someone other than the insured used the van. Because the injuries alleged in the underlying complaint resulted solely from the niece's use of the insured's van, the automobile exclusion precluded coverage (83 Cal. App. 4th 430, 435) .

In Afrasiabi v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 86 Cal. Rptr. 2d 926 , the insured's nephew sued the insured for injuries received after four men, including the insured, threw the nephew into the swimming pool of a family friend. The insured sought defense and indemnity under his homeowner's policy. The insurer refused, contending that the policy excluded coverage for bodily injury claims made by relatives who were residents of the insured's household, which included his nephew. The nephew then released the insured from any responsibility in return for assignment of the insured's rights, if any, against the insurer. Following a default judgment entered against the insured for some $2 million, the nephew sued the insurer. The trial court found that the exclusion applied, because the nephew was a resident relative of the insured's household, despite his payment of rent to the insured. The court of appeal affirmed (73 Cal. App. 4th 1183, 1186-1187) .

Ray v. Valley Forge Ins. Co. (1999) 77 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 92 Cal. Rptr. 2d 473 , was an action by a roofing consultant against its commercial general liability (CGL) insurer for breach of contract and bad faith, based on the insurer's refusal to defend an action against the insured by a homeowner's association. The underlying action alleged that the insured gave bad advice about materials for re-roofing. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer, and the court of appeal affirmed, holding that the policy afforded no coverage for bad advice (77 Cal. App. 4th 1039, 1045-1046) .

Peters v. Firemen's Ins. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 808, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 326 , was an action in which an insured sought indemnity and defense of an underlying action brought by a woman alleging torts stemming from his alleged transmission to her of the herpes virus. The insured sought coverage under his yacht insurance policy, asserting that the sexual activity occurred while they were sailing on the yacht, which "was a sign of his wealth and status" that "fostered romance and sexual conduct." When the insurer refused coverage and defense, the insured brought an action for breach of contract and bad faith. The trial court granted the insurer's summary judgment motion and entered judgment accordingly. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that an insurer has a duty to defend an insured if it becomes aware of, or if the third party lawsuit pleads facts giving rise to the potential for coverage under the insuring agreement. However, when there is no possibility of coverage, there is no duty to defend. The court concluded that the yacht insurance policy provided no possible coverage for the insured's liability for allegedly transmitting the herpes virus to plaintiff, when the only connection with the boat was the allegation that plaintiff and defendant were sailing on her while sexual relations allegedly occurred. Nothing in the complaint involved defendant's "use" of the boat within the meaning of the liability coverage under the policy (67 Cal. App. 4th 808, 812-814) .

In Lunsford v. American Guarantee & Liab. Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 18 F.3d 653 , a liability policy covered "malicious prosecution." The insured was sued for abuse of process. The insurer refused to defend, contending that abuse of process was not covered, and the insured sued for bad faith. The district court entered summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The Ninth Circuit reversed in part, holding that abuse of process was in fact covered under the policy. The court determined that "malicious prosecution" was ambiguous because a layperson's understanding of the term would differ from the legal definition. Construing the term based on the probable reasonable expectations of a layperson, the court concluded that a layperson would expect a defense for claims that technically qualified as abuse of process rather than malicious prosecution (18 F.3d 653, 655-656) . However, the court also held that denial of coverage had not been in bad faith, since there was a legitimate question as to whether coverage had been present (18 F.3d 653, 656) .

In Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Andrews (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 500 , the federal court of appeals affirmed summary judgment for the insurer in a declaratory relief action, holding that the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify the insured under a homeowner's policy that provided coverage for a claim made because of "property damage," defined as "physical injury to or destruction of tangible property, including loss of this property," caused by an "occurrence," defined as "an accident, including exposure to conditions which results, during the policy period, in bodily injury or property damage." The underlying action brought against the insured arose from the insured's sale of real property, alleged negligent failure to inspect property, misrepresentation, breach of contract, and rescission, which the court held was outside the scope of the policy (Safeco Ins. Co. of Am. v. Andrews (9th Cir. 1990) 915 F.2d 500, 501-502).

In Gulf Ins. Co. v. L.A. Effects Group, Inc. (9th Cir. 1987) 827 F.2d 574 , the insurer under a comprehensive liability policy issued to a motion picture special-effects company brought a declaratory relief action to determine its duty to defend or indemnify the insured in underlying actions regarding the insured's failure to complete work on a motion picture. The federal court of appeal affirmed the federal district court's granting of summary judgment in favor of the insurer, holding that "property damage" covered under the policy did not include the type of harm incurred, because there was no physical injury to the film (827 F.2d 574, 577-578) .

In Cutler-Orosi Unified Sch. Dist. v. Tulare County Sch. Dists. Liab./Prop. Self-Ins.-Auth. (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 617, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106 , three public school districts were sued in federal court by district residents seeking declaratory and injunctive relief under the federal Voting Rights Act of 1965. The districts tendered their defenses of the actions to the joint powers agencies(JPA) to which they belonged and to the liability insurance carrier from which the JPA purchased insurance for the districts. The insurance policies covered "all sums which the Insured shall become obligated to pay as damages ... by reason of the liability imposed by law." The insurer and JPA refused to defend (31 Cal. App. 4th 617, 622-625). The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of a motion for summary judgment. The court noted that that a liability insurer owes a duty to defend its insured against all actions that potentially seek damages covered by the insured's policy (31 Cal. App. 4th 617, 625). However, it held that the only remedies available in an action to enforce the Voting Rights Act are declaratory and injunctive relief, and those remedies are not the functional equivalent of a form of monetary indemnification or recoupment that may be classified as damages (31 Cal. App. 4th 617, 629) .

In Alta Cal. Reg'l Ctr. v. Fremont Indem. Co. (1994) 25 Cal. App. 4th 455, 30 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841 , the issue was whether the insurer waived policy-based defenses that were not articulated at the time defense was tendered by an insured. The insured tendered defense of a claim to its professional liability insurer. The malpractice carrier declined the tender on the ground that the claim did not involve the negligent provision of medical services and therefore was not covered under the professional liability policy, contending that the insured's general liability insurer was responsible for the defense. The insured brought a declaratory relief action to determine the malpractice insurer's coverage and defense obligations. After the declaratory relief action had been instituted, the professional liability carrier apparently dropped its contention that its policy did not cover the claims in question. Instead, it contended that an "other insurance" clause in its policy rendered the policy excess only. The superior court, in granting summary judgment in favor of the insured, held that the carrier had waived that defense by not raising it when it had originally denied coverage. The court of appeal reversed. It held that an "other insurance" provision in a policy only limited the amount of benefits available, not coverage itself. Such a limitation, said the court, is not waived by a failure to raise it upon tender of defense (25 Cal. App. 4th 455, 464-467) . An insurer that simply denies coverage, without expressly reserving the right to assert defenses based on policy provisions that could limit the amount of benefits available under the policy in the event coverage ultimately is found to exist, does not waive the right to assert those defenses in the event coverage is found (25 Cal. App. 4th 455, 459) .

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Jioras (1994) 24 Cal. App. 4th 1619 , an insurer issued both primary and umbrella policies to the principals of a partnership that had built a house. The purchasers of the house later sued the partnership for construction defects. The builders tendered the claim to the insurer, which advised the partners that it was providing a defense and reserving its rights under the primarypolicies. It later declined coverage and filed a declaratory relief action against the assignees of the builders' policy rights. The claimants contended that since the insurer had not reserved its rights under the umbrella policy, it was estopped to deny coverage. The trial court held that no estoppel had occurred. The court of appeal affirmed. It held that since the insureds had been told that they were being defended under the primary policies, no detrimental reliance on the umbrella policy could be shown. Absent such reliance, no estoppel arose (24 Cal. App. 4th 1619, 1626-1628) . Defense under a primary policy, accompanied by a reservation of rights, did not constitute an estoppel against denial of coverage under an excess policy written by the same insurer (24 Cal. App. 4th 1619, 1626, 1627) .

In Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1994) 23 Cal. App. 4th 1774, 29 Cal. Rptr. 2d 32 , a primary carrier's policy contained a "per occurrence" limit but no aggregate limit. More than 60 private actions alleging contamination were against the insured. When the carrier believed it had exhausted the policy limits through settlement, it brought a declaratory relief action against the insured, seeking a determination that coverage no longer existed. The superior court granted the insured's summary adjudication motion, ruling that the carrier had prematurely withdrawn its defense. The Court of Appeal denied that carrier's petition for writ of mandate. The court held that because there was no aggregate limit, it was a triable issue as to exactly how many "occurrences" there had been. Therefore the duty to defend would exist as a matter of law until the insurer could prove in a coverage action that the policy limits had been exhausted. The court also held that a primary insurer who ultimately proves earlier exhaustion of limits may obtain reimbursement for expenses for which other insurers are obligated (23 Cal. App. 4th 1774, 1777, 1781-1782) .

In Prudential-LMI Commercial Ins. Co. v. Reliance Ins. Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 1508, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 841 , the issue was the applicability of "premises alienated" exclusion and a "work performed" exclusion in a liability policy. The former excluded coverage for alienated property; the latter excluded coverage on premises in which work had been performed by an entity or person other than the insured. The policy covered a marketer of condominiums that had been sued by a homeowners' association seeking recovery for construction defects. The underlying action was settled, and one of the marketer's liability insurers sought equitable subrogation from a successor liability insurer whose policy contained the exclusions noted above. The successor insurer successfully moved for summary judgment based on the "premises alienated" and "work performed" exclusions. However, the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal reasoned that because a marketer of condominiums by necessity permits another entity (the builder) to perform work, and by definitionalienates the property, invocation of the exclusions defeats reasonable expectations of the insured (22 Cal. App. 4th 1508, 1513) . See also Maryland Cas. Co. v. Reeder (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 961, 270 Cal. Rptr. 719 .

In Collin v. American Empire Ins. Co. (1994) 21 Cal. App. 4th 787, 810-814, 26 Cal. Rptr. 2d 391 , there was no coverage under a contractor's liability policy for damages arising out of the contractor's alleged conversion of a homeowner's personal property. In reversing the judgment in favor of the homeowner, the court of appeal held that damages allegedly arising out of conversion of personal property did not constitute "property damage," which was defined in the policy as injury, destruction or loss of use of tangible property. Conversion does not involve physical injury to property, but rather the taking or deprivation of property. Nor does conversion constitute loss of use of property, which is the rental value of the property, not the value of the property itself. The court also stated that in California, the term "accident" as used in a liability policy refers to the insured's intent to commit the act creating liability, not the intent to cause the consequences of that act. Conversion, which requires intent, cannot be an accident.

In American Motorists Ins. Co v. Allied-Sysco Food Servs., Inc. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 1342, 1348-1356, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 106 , an excess policy covering personal injury, defined as injury arising out of racial or religious discrimination and humiliation caused by injury to character or reputation, did not cover damages for humiliation and emotional distress arising from discriminatory hiring practices. The provision specifically listed certain types of discrimination and the court refused to expand it to cover all types of discrimination. Damages arising from the alleged humiliation were covered only if the humiliation arose out of torts against character or reputation, which did not include discriminatory hiring. The court also held that there was no potential for coverage, and therefore no duty to defend. Moreover, there was no right to reimbursement for defense costs because there was no understanding between the parties to that effect.

In Utley v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 815, 821, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 1 , an adult son of the insured was injured in a fall from the insured's bicycle. The son sued the city and the distributor of the bicycle, who in turn cross-complained against the insured for indemnity. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's determination that the son was a resident of the insured's home and fell within the resident relative exclusion of the insured's homeowner's policy. The term "residence" is not ambiguous as used in the exclusion, and the meaning of the term varies according to the facts and circumstances of the case. There was substantial evidence that the son was a resident relative at the insured's house when the son ate, slept, kept his belongings, received mail, and lived at the house after his military discharge. The court further held that the resident relativeexclusion applied to indemnification claims by third parties against the insured.

In Chadwick v. Fire Ins. Exch. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1112, 1119-1126, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 871 , insureds under a broad peril homeowner's policy sought coverage for cracks in the interior of their home. The insurer denied coverage, citing the exclusions for cracking, latent defects, and inherent vice. The court of appeal reversed a summary judgment in favor of the insurer. The court held that a latent defect or inherent vice was one that was not apparent by reasonable inspection. However, for purposes of coverage under homeowner's insurance, this test includes a reasonable inspection with expert assistance. The insureds did not have the benefit of expert assistance prior to seeking coverage for the loss, and a declaration of an expert that the cracking was caused by defective design and construction raised a triable issue of fact as to whether an expert inspection would have revealed the defect.

In Fibreboard Corp. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1993) 16 Cal. App. 4th 492, 497, 20 Cal. Rptr. 2d 376 , an insured manufacturer of products containing asbestos sought coverage for numerous claims based on product liability and conspiracy theories. The court of appeal affirmed the entry of summary judgment in favor of the insurer. Claims based on conspiracy theories cannot be "occurrences," defined in the policy as "an accident," because conspiracy cannot occur by accident. In addition, the claims all arose out of the insured's products, and therefore fell within the policy's product hazard coverage, which was subject to annual limitations of liability.

In Shell Oil Co. v. Winterthur Swiss Ins. Co. (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 715, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 815 , a chemical manufacturer brought a declaratory relief action against insurers who sold it comprehensive general liability policies, seeking a declaration that the insurers had a duty to defend and indemnify it in actions for environmental damage and remediation costs. The court of appeal held that "willful act" under Ins. Code § 533 includes a "deliberate, liability-producing act that the individual, before acting, expected to cause harm," and thus the jury was properly instructed that for coverage to exist the property damage must have been neither expected nor intended by the insured (12 Cal. App. 4th 715, 743) . However, the jury was improperly instructed that the test for "expected damage" uses an objective, rather than subjective, standard (12 Cal. App. 4th 715, 748-749 . The court also held that the jury was properly instructed that policies defining "occurrence" as "an accident or continuous repeated exposure to conditions that resulted in property damage during the policy period" require that only the resulting damage be unexpected or unintended, while policies defining "occurrence" as "an accident, including continuous or repeated exposure," require that both the events or event causing the damage and the damage itself be unexpected and unintended (12 Cal. App. 4th 715, 748-749) .

In Canadian Ins. Co. v. Ehrlich (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 383, 280 Cal. Rptr. 141 , a declaratory relief action regarding coverage, the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment in favor of the insured, based on an automobile liability policy exclusion regarding nonowned vehicles when used by a person who was not entitled to do so, when the claim arose from the use of a nonowned vehicle by a person who was expressly forbidden by the insured from ever doing so (229 Cal. App. 3d 383, 387-392) .

In Aim Ins. Co. v. Culcasi (1991) 229 Cal. App. 3d 209, 280 Cal. Rptr. 766 , the insurer brought a declaratory relief action regarding its duty to defend and indemnify the insured in an underlying action brought by the insured's employee for negligent breach of fiduciary duty, breach of contract, and infliction of emotional distress, based on the insured's failure to provide promised health-insurance coverage and the employee's consequent liability for medical expenses arising from a car accident. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment in favor of the insurer, holding that there was no reasonable expectation of coverage for economic loss or emotional distress under the policy, which covered "bodily injury" (229 Cal. App. 3d 209, 217-228) .

In Reliance Ins. Co. v. Alan (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 702, 272 Cal. Rptr. 65 , the insured under an all-risk yacht policy was sued in an underlying wrongful-death action arising from his alleged shooting of a person aboard his yacht. In the ensuing declaratory relief action, the court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for the insurer, holding that the "protection and indemnity" provision of the policy specifically limited coverage to liability arising from the ownership, operation, or maintenance of the insured vessel. The court held that the insured's conduct was an act not related to the vessel (222 Cal. App. 3d 702, 706-708) .

In State Farm Fire & Casualty Co. v. Salas (1990) 222 Cal. App. 3d 268, 271 Cal. Rptr. 642 , the court of appeal reversed the trial court's denial of summary judgment for the insurer, holding that the homeowner's policy exclusion, regarding bodily injury arising out of maintenance of motor vehicle, applied to the underlying action brought by a third party who was injured while repairing a tire on the insured's automobile (222 Cal. App. 3d 268, 273-274).

In Loyola Marymount Univ. v. Hartford Accident & Indem. Co. (1990) 219 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 271 Cal. Rptr. 528 , a university brought a declaratory relief action against its insurer to determine the insurer's duty to defend two wrongful-discharge actions under a policy that excluded coverage for personal injury "directly or indirectly related to the employment" of the injured person by the insured. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for the defendant insurer, holding that the exclusion precluded the insurer's duty to provide coverage or a defense, because itexcludes all personal injuries arising from or deriving from the third parties' employment and termination (219 Cal. App. 3d 1217, 1222-1223) .

In Waranch v. Gulf Ins. Co. (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 356, 266 Cal. Rptr. 827 , the trial court found that the insurer had no duty under a personal injury liability policy to indemnify or defend the insured in an underlying action arising from repossession of an automobile. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the policy definition of "personal injury," which included "wrongful entry or eviction, or other invasion of the right of private occupancy" referred only to torts directed against another's real property, and therefore did not include a tort relating to an automobile (218 Cal. App. 3d 356, 359-361) .

In Inglewood Radiology Med. Group, Inc. v. Hospital Shared Servs., Inc. (1989) 217 Cal. App. 3d 1366, 266 Cal. Rptr. 501 , an insured under a medical-malpractice policy brought suit against the insurer for failure to indemnify or defend with regard to an underlying action brought against her for wrongful termination. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment in favor of the defendant on the ground that neither the wrongful-termination claim, nor the related slander claim, in the underlying action concerned the "rendering of professional services" within the meaning of coverage provided under the policy (217 Cal. App. 3d 1366, 1370) .

In California Ins. Guarantee Assn v. Wood (1990) 217 Cal. App. 3d 944 , the court of appeal affirmed summary judgment in favor of the insurer in a declaratory relief action filed by the successor insurer to determine the predecessor's duty to defend under a general comprehensive policy. The court held that the exclusion in the policy regarding coverage of personal injuries arising out of business pursuits of insured precluded coverage of the underlying claim for negligent infliction of emotional distress arising from the insured's alleged wrongful discharge of the claimant's husband (217 Cal. App. 3d 944, 949).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsEstoppel & WaiverGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.31

§ 120.31 Occurrence Outside Policy Period Is Not Covered

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE OCCURRENCE WAS OUTSIDE THE POLICY PERIOD.

Occurrence Outside Policy Period Not Covered. When an insurance policy specifies that it applies only to occurrences during the term of the policy, no coverage exists for liability predicated onevents that transpire after the policy has expired, and the insurer has no obligation to defend such claims (Remmer v. Glens Falls Indem. Co. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 84, 90, 295 P.2d 19).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the events on which the claim was based occurred after the policy had expired.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel would:

- Identify the date the policy had expired.
- Identify the date the event occurred.
- Point out that the event occurred after the policy had expired.
- Conclude that the insurer has no duty to defend because the event occurred after the policy had expired.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . Forforms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Occurrence Outside Policy Period Not Covered

Remmer v. Glens Falls Indem. Co. (1956) 140 Cal. App. 2d 84, 295 P.2d 19 , was an action brought by plaintiffs, insureds under a comprehensive liability policy, following entry of a judgment against them in an action for damages for nuisance brought by a neighbor of plaintiffs. Plaintiffs had graded and filled portions of their lot in 1947. In 1952, large quantities of earth and rock slid from the fill onto the neighbor's property. The insurance policy was issued to plaintiffs in 1945 for a three-year period, but it was canceled in January 1948, and was not thereafter renewed. The policy provided that defendant would pay on behalf of the insured all sums which the insured became obligated to pay by reason of the liability imposed by law for damages because of injury to or destruction of property, including the loss of use thereof. The policy further provided that defendant would defend any suit against the insured alleging such injury or destruction and seeking damages on account thereof, even if the suit was groundless, false, or fraudulent, and would pay all costs taxed against the insured in any such suit and all interest accruing after entry of judgment. The policy also provided, however, that it applied only to occurrences during the policy period (140 Cal. App. 2d 84, 85) . It defined "occurrence" as an accident, or a continuous or repeated exposure to conditions, which results in injury during the policy period.

The court appeal affirmed the judgment for the insurer. The court held that the cause of action against the insureds was for then presently occurring damage not covered by the policy which had long since been canceled and that there was, therefore, no duty to defend. The court acknowledged the rule that under a policy requiring the insurer to defend an action against the insured alleging an injury under the policy even if the suit is groundless, false, or fraudulent, it is the duty of the insurer to defend the insured when sued in any action when the facts alleged in the complaint support a recovery for an occurrence covered by the policy, regardless of the fact that the insurer has knowledge that the injury is not in fact covered. However, the court held that it is equally true that the insurer is not required to defend an action against the insured when the complaint in that action shows on its face that the injury complained ofis not only not covered by, but is excluded from, the policy (140 Cal. App. 2d 84, 90) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Occurrence Outside Policy Period Not Covered

In Buena Vista Mines, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (2001) 87 Cal. App. 4th 482, 104 Cal. Rptr. 2d 557 , an insured sued several CGL insurance carriers, claiming that they breached the insurance contracts and violated the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing by refusing to defend the insured in a lawsuit for violation of the Clean Water Act previously brought against the insured in federal court. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint, ruling that the claims alleged against the insured in the prior action were outside the period of coverage under the policies at issue, there was no potential for coverage, and the insurers therefore owed no duty to defend. The insured appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, noting that the earliest alleged violations of the Clean Water Act occurred in 1992, and that the policies expired, at the latest, in 1983. The trial court therefore properly sustained the demurrer to the contract cause of action. Moreover, if there is no potential for coverage and, hence, no duty to defend under the terms of the policy, there can be no action for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, because the covenant is based on the contractual relationship between the insured and the insurer (87 Cal. App. 4th 482, 487-490) .

Cooper Companies. v. Transcontinental Ins. Co. (1995) 31 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 508 , involved an action for declaratory relief by a company against its insurer seeking coverage under two "occurrence" liability policies for claims against two subsidiaries the company acquired after the policies had expired. The named insured in these policies was defined as the insured and "any organization, association or business entity now existing or hereafter acquired, in which [the insured] owns an interest of fifty percent (50%) or more over which [the insured] exercises active management and control," specifically including subsidiaries. In 1987, almost two years after both policies had expired, the insured acquired two companies that manufactured breast implants. These companies were later sold, but the insured retained their liabilities. By 1993, over 1,400 claims had been filed against the insured and its two subsidiaries. The insurer denied coverage and a declaratory relief action followed.

The insured argued that the "hereafter acquired" language in the policy extended coverage to any subsidiary whenever acquired by the insured because the language did not define how long after the inception of the policies coverage would apply. However, following the framework for policy interpretation set forth in AIU Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 821-823, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253 , the court held thatthe only interpretation of the policy consistent with the objectively reasonable expectations of the insured and common sense is one that extends coverage only for the activities of acquisitions made during the policy period (31 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1103) . The insured could not have had an objectively reasonable expectation that the policies covered pre-acquisition torts of after-acquired companies when such coverage was not available in the marketplace at the time the policies were written (31 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1109) . The manner in which premiums were assessed also supported the court's conclusion with respect to the insured's objectively reasonable expectations regarding policy coverage (31 Cal. App. 4th 1094, 1108) .

In Larkspur Isle Condo. Owners' Assn v. Farmers Ins. Group (1994) 31 Cal. App. 4th 106, 37 Cal. Rptr. 2d 3 , the court held that under the manifestation rule, the insurer was not liable for water damage thathad manifested itself prior to the inception of the policy period. Moreover, it rejected the insured's attempt to characterized the discovery of rain-damaged asbestos ceiling materials as a separate loss, ruling that a portion of the total damage may not be separated out as a distinct loss when it proceeds from the same progressive destruction as the other damage (31 Cal. App. 4th 106, 111) .

In Whittaker Corp. v. Allianz Underwriters, Inc. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1236, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 659 , a manufacturer of a sealing compound for beverage cans brought a bad faith action against two of its commercial liability excess insurers, after the insurers denied coverage under policies issued for the manufacturer's 1983 fiscal year. An anti-oxidant the manufacturer had begun using in its sealant in 1983 had proved ineffective, causing some of the manufacturer's customers to suffer losses during 1984 and 1985. The trial court rendered judgment in favor of the manufacturer on the ground its decision to change anti-oxidants was the relevant "occurrence" for coverage purposes under the 1983 policies. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the trial court had confused the different uses of the term "occurrence" for purposes of determining coverage and limitations on liability. The court held that the time of the injury itself, rather than the cause of the injury, is the relevant occurrence for purposes of determining coverage (11 Cal. App. 4th 1236, 1241-1242) .

In Hallmark Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1988) 201 Cal. App. 3d 1014, 247 Cal. Rptr. 638 , a manufacturer of hang gliders brought an action against its liability insurer for bad faith refusal to defend or indemnify it regarding a third-party action stemming from the wrongful death of the user of one of its hang gliders. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's denial of the insurer's motion for summary judgment, holding that the policy had lapsed when the accident occurred, and the accident was therefore outside the policy period. The fact that the policy was in effect at the time the hang glider was manufactured was not controlling, because the time that the accident occurred was the time when the complaining party was actually damaged, not the time the wrongful act was committed (201 Cal. App. 3d 1014, 1017-1019) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.32

§ 120.32 Standard California Land Title Association Policy Does Not Cover Defects That Survey Can Disclose

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE STANDARD CALIFORNIA LAND TITLEASSOCIATION POLICY DOES NOT COVER DEFECTS THAT A CORRECT SURVEY WOULD DISCLOSE.

Standard California Land Title Association Policy Does Not Cover Defects That Survey Can Disclose. An owner's standard California Land Title Association (CLTA) policy of title insurance does not insure against conflicts in boundary lines, encroachments, shortages in area, or any other facts that a correct survey would disclose. Thus, a title insurer is not required to defend claims relating to the location of a structure on the property (Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 1, 29, 147 Cal. Rptr. 655).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a defendant insurer's contention that the owner's standard California Land Title Association (CLTA) policy of title insurance. The basis of the form is that the policy does not insure against conflicts in boundary lines, encroachments, shortages in area, or any other facts that a correct survey would disclose.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the formsof this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Standard California Land Title Association Policy Does Not Cover Defects That Survey Can Disclose

Walters v. Marler (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 1, 147 Cal. Rptr. 655 , involved an owner's standard California Land Title Association (CLTA) policy of title insurance. The insured, purchaser of a house and lot, sued the sellers, the title insurer, and others, and the sellers cross complained against the buyer, the title insurer, and others. The action arose out of the fact that due to a misdescription in the deed, only a small portion of the house was located on the designated lot. The jury returned a verdict for plaintiff buyer on the complaint against all defendants for the purchase price of the property and awarded punitive damages against the title insurer. The trial court also awarded plaintiff buyer attorney's fees against all defendants. The court of appeal reversed the judgment in favor of plaintiff against the title insurer. The title policy obligated the insurer to defend plaintiff in all actions commenced against plaintiff and to commence such action as may be appropriate to establish title to the estate as insured in plaintiff. Excluded from coverage were discrepancies, conflicts in boundary lines, shortage in area, encroachments, or any other facts which a correct survey would disclose and which are not shown by the public records. The court of appeal held that by reason of the exclusionary clause, the insurer was not required to defend or prosecute any action arising out of misunderstandings concerning the location of the house and that neither plaintiff's complaint nor the seller's cross complaint (against which the title insurer refused to defend plaintiff) alleged facts which would support recovery on risks covered by the policy in favor of plaintiff (83 Cal. App. 3d 1, 29) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawProperty InsuranceTitle InsuranceInsurance LawProperty InsuranceTitle Insurance Exclusions

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.33

§ 120.33 Business Owner's Comprehensive Liability Policy Does Not Cover Off-Premises Accident

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE ACCIDENTS OCCURRING OFF PREMISES ARE EXCLUDED FROM COVERAGE UNDER THE POLICY.

Business Owner's Comprehensive Liability Policy Does Not Cover Off-Premises Accident. Accidents occurring outside the business premises are not covered by a business owner's comprehensive liability policy that clearly defines the business premises and in unambiguous language excludes coverage for accidents occurring away from the premises (Ins. Code § 11580.1(e); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 517, 88 Cal. Rptr. 246).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that that accidents occurring outside the business premises were not covered by the business owner's comprehensive liability policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to the coverage provisions in the policy, showing that the policy does not cover losses which occurred off the premises of the insured.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.)and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Owner's Comprehensive Liability Policy Does Not Cover Off-Premises Accident

Ins. Code § 11580.1(e) is discussed in § 120.37[3][a].

State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (1970) 9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 88 Cal. Rptr. 246 , was a declaratory relief action for a determination of the obligations of five insurance companies for the payment of personal injury judgments against a business owner and his employee arising out of an accident which occurred while the employee was driving one of the owner's trucks. The owner was covered by the following policies: (1) a policy covering another truck, designated cars, and a temporary substitute; (2) a policy covering a station wagon and a temporary substitute vehicle, but which limited coverage to vehicles of three-quarter ton capacity and excluded owned vehicles from the category of temporary substitute automobiles; (3) a comprehensive liability policy covering the owner's business premises, but which covered automobile-related accidents only on the insured's business premises and the ways immediately adjoining them; and (4) a homeowner's policy. A fifth insurer, plaintiff, had issued policies to the driver's father covering homeowner's liability and three designated vehicles but excluded from coverage nonowned vehicles usedin business and nonowned vehicles with more than four wheels. The driver was a minor at the time of the accident and a resident of his father's household. The truck insurer (first policy listed above) refused defense of the owner in the third-party action but undertook defense of the driver. The insurer of the business premises undertook defense of the owner reserving the right to disclaim coverage. The trial court ruled that the truck involved in the accident was a temporary substitute vehicle within the meaning of the first-described policy above and that both the truck insurer and the insurer of the business premises were obligated to defend and indemnify the owner.

The court of appeal reversed that portion of the judgment declaring the liability of the insurer of the business premises with direction to enter judgment declaring that company's nonliability. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment in all other respects, but remanded the case to the trial court for a retrial limited to the issue of whether the truck insurer was liable for payment of the judgments in excess of the policy limit (9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 531) .

In affirming the judgment for the insurer of the business premises, the court noted that the comprehensive liability policy at issue covered automobile accidents on the insured's premises and "the ways immediately adjoining," a phrase which at the time had been recently determined in Herzog v. National Am. Ins. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 192, 84 Cal. Rptr. 705, 465 P.2d 841 , and Huggins v. Yoshiwara (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 200, 84 Cal. Rptr. 709, 465 P.2d 845 [see § 120.37[3][a]], not to be so ambiguous as to defy reasonable construction in the context of a particular case. The policy at issue in State Farm described the hazards insured as those arising from "the ownership, maintenance or use of the premises, and all operations necessary or incidental thereto," the premises being defined, as noted above, to include "the ways immediately adjoining." The policy listed various exclusions, among them the operation of automobiles "if the accident occurs away from the premises." As the accident occurred several hundred miles from the business premises, the court concluded that the clear and plain language of the policy excluded coverage (9 Cal. App. 3d 508, 516-517) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBusiness InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceOccurrences

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.34

§ 120.34 Commercial General Liability Policy Excludes Or Does Not Cover Faulty Workmanship

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE POLICY _____ [EXCLUDES or DOES NOT COVER] LIABILITY FOR FAULTY WORKMANSHIP.

[EITHER]

Commercial General Liability Policy Excludes Coverage for Faulty Workmanship. Claims arising from faulty workmanship by the insured are not covered by a comprehensive liability policy or commercial general liability policy that properly excludes injury to or destruction of property, the restoration, repair, or replacement of which was necessitated by the faulty workmanship of the insured (St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Coss (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 888, 892-897, 145 Cal. Rptr. 836 ; Rafeiro v. American Employers' Ins. Co. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808-809, 85 Cal. Rptr. 701).

[OR]

Commercial General Liability Policy Does Not Cover Insured's Faulty Workmanship. The risk of inferior or defective workmanship is not covered by commercial general liability insurance (F & H Constr. v. ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 377, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 896).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that claims arising from faulty workmanship by the insured are not covered by a comprehensive liability policy. The first alternate paragraph should be used if the policy expressly excludes coverage for losses arising from the insured's faulty workmanship. The second alternate paragraph should be used if there is no such exclusion, but if the policy merely does not cover that risk.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if the policy contains an exclusion for faulty workmanship, counsel may:

- Refer to specific language in the policy that excludes injury to or destruction of property, the restoration, repair, or replacement of which is necessitated by the faulty workmanship of the insured.

- Refer to evidence establishing that the property damage was caused by the insured's faulty workmanship.

- Argue that consequently, under the policy, the insurer has no obligation to defend the insurer under these circumstances.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Comprehensive Liability Policy Excludes Coverage for Faulty Workmanship

St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Coss (1978) 80 Cal. App. 3d 888, 145 Cal. Rptr. 836 , involved a declaratory relief action by an insurance company against its insured, a building contractor to whom the company had issued a comprehensive liability insurance policy insuring against bodily injury and property damage. Plaintiff sought a determination that it had neither the duty to defend nor the obligation to indemnify the insured with respect to a third-party action against the insured in which the third party recovered a $60,000 judgment based on the insured's use of defective materials in, and performance of defective work on, a house and garage constructed by the insured on property owned by the third parties. The policy excluded from coverage expenditures required to correct the insured's own defective product resulting from his use of defective materials and poor workmanship.

The court of appeal affirmed judgment for the insurer. The court held that the policy excluded the liability sued on (80 Cal. App. 3d 888, 892-894) , that there was no ambiguity in the policy that could be resolved in favor of the insured (80 Cal. App. 3d 888, 895-896) , and that because of the express exclusion, the insured could have no reasonable expectations of coverage for products liability (80 Cal. App. 3d 888, 896-897) .

In Rafeiro v. American Employers' Ins. Co. (1970) 5 Cal. App. 3d 799, 85 Cal. Rptr. 701 , plaintiff, the owner of apartment buildings, brought an action to recover from the insurer of the contractor who constructed the buildings the amount of a judgment previously recovered by plaintiff against the contractor for unworkmanlike service and negligent selection of defective materials. The contractor's comprehensive liability policy obligated the insurer to pay sums which the insured became legally obligated to pay as damages because of injury to or destruction of property resulting from an occurrence. Excluded from coverage was injury to or destruction of property, the restoration, repair, or replacement of which was made necessary by reason of faulty workmanship thereon by or on behalf of the insured and injury to or destruction of any goods or products manufactured, sold, handled, or distributed by the named insured, or work completed by or for the named insured, out of which the accident arises.

The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for defendant insurer. The court said that it appeared from the policy provisions that the insurance was not intended to indemnify the contractor (and through him the owner) for direct damages resulting because the contractor furnished defective materials or workmanship (5 Cal. App. 3d 799, 808) and that the insurer had not undertaken to indemnify the contractor with respect to any claim or suit alleging that construction or repair did not comply with customers' specifications (5 Cal. App. 3d 799, 809) . The court distinguished those cases holding the insurer liable for diminution in the value of real property in which a defective product was installed and for damage to other real or personal property resulting from installation of a defective product or negligent workmanship (5 Cal. App. 3d 799, 809) .

[b] Commercial General Liability Policy Does Not Cover Insured's Faulty Workmanship

In F & H Constr. v. ITT Hartford Ins. Co. (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 12 Cal. Rptr. 3d 896 , a contractor sued its subcontractor's insurer after suing the subcontractor, which filed bankruptcy and then defaulted in the civil suit, resulting in a judgment against the subcontractor. The subcontractor, which had been insured under a commercial general liability policy, had provided substandard-grade steel pile caps to the contractor, which welded most of the defective pile caps to driven piles at a water-facility pumping plant before realizing that the grade of steel was inferior. The policy defined property damage primarily as "physical injury to tangible property." The contractor brought suit for damages and breach of contract, seeking from the insurer the amount of the underlying default judgment against the subcontractor. Both parties filed cross-motions for summary judgment. The trial court found in favor of the insurer on both summary judgment motions. The contractor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the incorporation of a defective component or product into a larger structure does not constitute property damage unless and until the defective component causes physical injury to tangible property in at least some other part of the system (118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 371, 372) . The court held that the contractor's welding of the defective pile caps did not constitute "property damage" under the primary definition of that term solely because the welded unit was inadequate to meet the contractual design specifications, if there was no physical injury to the piles or to other property, and if the defective pile caps were ultimately used as modified to meet design specifications (118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 371, 377) . The court also held that the contractor did not suffer

"property damage" under the second definition of that term: "loss of use of tangible property that is not physically injured." The contractor did not seek damages (measured by rental value or its equivalent) for the loss of the use of the water facility while modifications were made to the pile caps, or even for a period of time caused by delay. The court noted that the failure to seek those damages was probably due to the timely completion of the project. The only costs claimed by the contractor were the costs of repairing and modifying the defective caps and for loss of the early completion bonus, caused by the need for repair and modification of the pile caps. Those costs are unrelated to rental value and are not recoverable as property damagebecause they are intangible economic damages rather than damages "to tangible property" (118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 373-377) . In so holding, the court stated that liability policies are not designed to provide contractors and developers with coverage against claims that their work is inferior or defective. The risk of replacing and repairing defective materials or poor workmanship has generally been considered a commercial risk that is not passed on to the liability insurer. Instead, liability coverage applies if the insured's defective materials or work cause injury to property other than the insured's own work or products (118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 372-373) . A liability insurance policy is not designed to serve as a performance bond or a warranty of a contractor's product (118 Cal. App. 4th 364, 373) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.35

§ 120.35 Specialty Business Insurance Policy Excludes Coverage of Criminal Acts of Employees

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE POLICY EXCLUDES CRIMINAL ACTS OF EMPLOYEES.

Specialty Business Insurance Policy Excludes Coverage of Criminal Acts of Employees. Criminal acts of employees may be properly excluded under a specialty business policy (see Atlas Assurance Co. v. McCombs Corp. (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 142, 194 Cal. Rptr. 66).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that criminal acts of employees are excluded from coverage of specialty business insurance policy, such as a self-service storage operator's policy [see Atlas Assurance Co. v. McCombs Corp. (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 142, 194 Cal. Rptr. 66 (claim arising from theft of patron's property by employee was properly excluded); see also § 120.35[3][a]].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to specific to provisions of the policy that exclude the activity which the insured asserts should be covered.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Specialty Business Insurance Policy Excludes Coverage of Criminal Acts of Employees

In Atlas Assurance Co. v. McCombs Corp. (1983) 146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 194 Cal. Rptr. 66 , an insurer brought an action for declaratory relief against its insured, the owners of a self-service storage facility, for determination of whether plaintiff had a duty to defend defendant in a lawsuit brought by tenants of the facility after valuable items were stolen from thetenants' locker by an employee of defendant. At the time of the theft, defendants were insured by plaintiff under a self-service storage operator's policy that included a promise to defend against any suit seeking damages payable under the terms of the policy. Excluded under the policy was coverage for liability arising from any dishonest or criminal act of the insured or their employees or agents. Plaintiff wrote defendants that it felt there was no coverage for the theft, but stated that it would undertake the defense, reserving the right to have the question of coverage judicially determined. Subsequently, in a criminal prosecution, the employee pleaded nolo contendere to a charge of grand theft and plaintiff informed defendants by letter on its belief that the exclusion applied to the lawsuit and gave notice of its intention to withdraw from the defense. Defendant did not agree and demanded full coverage. Plaintiff then continued the defense, subject to its original reservation of rights, and filed an action for declaratory relief. The trial court granted summary judgment for plaintiff, finding it had no duty to defend or indemnify defendants in the underlying lawsuit, and defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court concluded that the trial court correctly found that the exclusion unambiguously placed the underlying lawsuit outside the coverage of the policy (146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 142) . The court reiterated the general rules for construing the provision of insurance policies (146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 143) , and found that if the court accepted the insured's interpretation of the exclusion clause, it would lead to inconsistent coverage and require an assumption that the policy adopted an incorrect sentence construction. The court stated that an ambiguity cannot be based on a strained and grammatically incorrect reading of the policy's terms (146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 144) .

Defendants also contended that even assuming the applicability of the exclusion, plaintiff was required to provide coverage because defendants' liability in the underlying lawsuit was premised on their negligent acts (negligent hiring and breach of contract through the conversion by the employee) and not on the theft by the employee, and these negligent acts were not excluded from the policy. The court stated that when two risks constitute concurrent proximate causes of an accident, the insurer is liable as long as one of the causes is covered by the policy. However, it is crucial that the two causes of the injury be separate and independent of one another. In this case, no liability could arise from the claimed risk in negligently hiring a thief unless the thief actually stole something. It was the basing of liability specifically on the negligent hiring of a thief that rendered defendants' alleged negligent act dependent on the excluded theft as concurrent causes of the loss (146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 148) . The breach of contract theory was even more dependent on the employee's theft because the theft was the very act which was alleged as the breach, and the only way that defendants could be liable for the claimed breach of contract was through the theft. Therefore, under the facts of the case neither the breach of con tract theory nor the negligent hiring theory were independent of the theft by defendants' employee (146 Cal. App. 3d 135, 149) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawBusiness InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsCriminal Acts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.36

§ 120.36 Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE THE POLICY EXCLUDES CLAIMS ARISING FROM BUSINESS VENTURES.

Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures. An insurer is not obligated to defend its insured on a claim involving a business activity, including a part-time or supplemental income project, that is specifically excluded from coverage under a homeowner's policy (Morris v. Atlas Assurance Co. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 14-15, 204 Cal. Rptr. 95 ; State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Drasin (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 864, 869-870, 199 Cal. Rptr. 749).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer it is not obligated to defend its insured on a claim involving a business activity when that coverage was specifically excluded under the homeowner's policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would refer to specific to provisions of the policy that exclude the activity which the insured asserts should be covered.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.)and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

In West Am. Ins. Co. v. California Mut. Ins. Co. (1987) 195 Cal. App. 3d 314, 240 Cal. Rptr. 540 , the insured operated his contractor's business out of his house, and routinely entertained his employees at his house on payday. Two employees who remained after working hours on a payday became drunk and fought, ultimately bringing an action against the insured. In an action for declaratory relief brought by the insured's comprehensive-liability insurer against the homeowner's-policy insurer, the trial court found that the "business pursuit" exception in the homeowner's policy did not apply.

The court of appeal reversed. The court held that the "business pursuit" exception is broader than the "employment exception" in the comprehensive liability policy and logically includes any activity that arises from and is in the course of an employee's employment (195 Cal. App. 3d 314, 323-324) .

In Fire Ins. Exch. v. Jiminez (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 437, 229 Cal. Rptr. 83 , the insured had a homeowner's policy with exclusions for business pursuits and commercial rentals. The insured brought an action fordeclaratory relief against the insurer to determine whether the insurer had the duty to indemnify or defend the insured with regard to a personal injury action brought by a third party regarding wreckage of a nuisance structure on the insured's commercial premises. The trial court held that the insurer did not have a duty to indemnify, but did have a duty to defend.

The court of appeal affirmed with respect to indemnification, but reversed with respect to the duty to defend. The court held that the policy's exclusions could not impose a duty to defend when the accident occurred on commercial property (184 Cal. App. 3d 437, 439-443) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Coverage of Claims Arising From Business Ventures

In Amex Assurance Co. v. Allstate Ins. Co. (2003) 112 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 5 Cal. Rptr. 3d 744 , a plumber installed a propane water heater for a friend, from whom he sometimes but not always received payment for his professional work. The friend had a homeowner's insurance policy. After the work the plumber had done caused a fire that destroyed the friend's home, litigation ensued, which included a cross-complaint against the plumber by the insurer that issued the homeowner's policy. In the resulting settlement, the insurer paid the friend a sum in excess of $1.5 million, and it received an assignment of the friend's claims against third parties. The insurer then pursued its cross-complaint against the plumber, resulting in the entry of a default judgment against the plumber for $1.3 million. The insurer then obtained an assignment of the plumber's rights, and it made a claim against the insurer that provided homeowner's insurance to the plumber. The plumber's insurer denied that claim. The friend's insurer sued the plumber's insurer for breach of contract and bad faith refusal to defend. The trial court awarded summary judgment to the plumber's insurer because its homeowner's policy excluded coverage for professional services, business activities, and damages arising out of any premises other than the insured premises. On appeal, the friend's insurer argued that plumbing is not a professional service, but rather a craft or trade. Although the term "professional service" was not defined in the policy, the court of appeal stated that the ordinary meaning includes plumbing (112 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1252) . In addition, the friend's insurer argued that the plumber was providing services as a friend, not as a professional for compensation. The court noted, however, that he was hoping that the friend would pay him, at least for other professional services performed previously. Moreover, the type of activity, rather than actual compensation, controls. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the undisputed facts showed that the professional services and business activities exclusions eliminated any potential for coverage (112 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1252) . Because the underlying suit did not potentially seek damages within the coverage of the policy, the plumber's insurer had no duty to defend (112 Cal. App. 4th 1246, 1253) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceBusiness Activities

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.37

§ 120.37 Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE POLICY EXCLUDES MOTOR VEHICLE CLAIMS THAT ARISE FROM ACCIDENTS THAT OCCUR AWAY FROM THE PREMISES.

Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims. Claims arising from automobile accidents occurring away from the premises may be properly excluded from the coverage of a homeowner's policy (Ins. Code § 11580.1(e); Herzog v. National Am. Ins. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 192, 198-199, 84 Cal. Rptr. 705, 465 P.2d 841 ; Huggins v. Yoshiwara (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 200, 203-204, 84 Cal. Rptr. 709, 465 P.2d 845).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that claims arising from automobile accidents occurring away from the premises may be properly excluded from the coverage of the homeowner's policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should refer to specific toprovisions of the policy that exclude the activity which the insured asserts should be covered.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

Herzog v. National Am. Ins. Co. (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 192, 84 Cal. Rptr. 705, 465 P.2d 841 , involved the death of plaintiff's son in a motorcycle accident. The motorcycle driver and his father were named insureds under the father's homeowner's policy. The personal liability provisions of the policy in question provided coverage for all sums which the insured became obligated to pay as damages because of bodily injury. Expressly excluded from coverage were damages resulting from "the ownership, maintenance, operation, use, loading, or unloading of land motor vehicles while away from the premises or the ways immediately adjoining ... ." Theaccident having occurred on a freeway some distance from the insured's home, the trial court granted judgment for the insurer. Plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court affirmed. In affirming, the Court stated that the term "the ways immediately adjoining" was unambiguous and that the reasonable expectations of the policyholder did not contemplate that a homeowner's policy would provide extended automobile coverage (2 Cal. 3d 192, 197-198). The court distinguished and overruled Pacific Employers Ins. Co. v. Maryland Cas. Co. (l966) 65 Cal. 2d 318 , to the extent of any inconsistency and refused to apply the doctrine of Wildman v. Government Employees' Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 31, 307 P.2d 359 , to extend coverage to the accident in question (2 Cal. 3d 192, 198-199) .

Huggins v. Yoshiwara (1970) 2 Cal. 3d 200, 84 Cal. Rptr. 709, 465 P.2d 845 , involved a fatal accident between the plaintiff's decedent and the insured in Oxnard. The insured's automobile liability insurer settled for the policy limits. The insured also had a homeowner's policy on his Los Angeles residence. The policy provisions, including the exclusions, were worded exactly as those in Herzog. Plaintiff sought recovery under the homeowner's policy. Judgment was for cross defendant insurer. On appeal and in the Supreme Court, after considering the same grounds advanced in Herzog, and applying the same reasoning, the judgment was affirmed (2 Cal. 3d 200, 203-204) .

The "anti-Wildman" holdings of Herzog and Huggins were later codified at Ins. Code § 11580.1(e), which specifies that neither Ins. Code § 11580.1 nor Veh. Code §§ 16054, 16450 shall be construed to constitute any of the types of policies therein enumerated, including homeowner's policies and comprehensive liability policies, as an automobile or vehicle liability policy and therefore subject to the requirements of Veh. Code § 16054 or Veh. Code § 16450 merely because the policy, or some endorsement to it, provides incidental coverage for automobile liability.

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Homeowner's Policy Excludes Motor Vehicle Claims

In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Partridge (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 94, 109 Cal. Rptr. 811, 514 P.2d 123 , the insured under a homeowner's policy was a hunting enthusiast who had filed the trigger mechanism of his gun so that it had a hair-trigger action. The insured and his friends were hunting by shooting from the windows of the insured's vehicle. The vehicle hit a bump and the weapon discharged, hitting one of the passengers, who was paralyzed as a result (10 Cal. 3d 94, 97-98) . Although the insured's homeowner's policy contained an exclusion for injuries arising out of the use of a motor vehicle, the court held that the policy provided coverage forthe injuries. The court found that "although the accident occurred in a vehicle, the insured's negligent modification of the gun suffices, in itself, to render him fully liable for the resulting injuries ... . [I]nasmuch as the liability of the insured arises from his non-auto-related conduct, and exists independently of any 'use' of his car, we believe the homeowner's policy covers that liability" (10 Cal. 3d 94, 103) .

In Gurrola v. Great Sw. Ins. Co. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 65, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 , an insured negligently drove his car, killing himself and his passenger and injuring another driver. It was found that the insured's negligence in welding the chassis to the frame of his 1934 car during the process of restoring it was also a cause of the accident. The injured third party and the deceased party's estate brought a third-party action against the insurer. The only issue was whether there was coverage under the insured's general liability policy, which contained an exclusion for injury or damage arising out of the ownership, maintenance, operation, or use of any automobile owned or operated by the insured. The court of appeal affirmed a judgment for the insurer. After analyzing the decisions in State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Partridge (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 94, 109 Cal. Rptr. 811, 514 P.2d 123 , and State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Camara (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 48, 133 Cal. Rptr. 600 , the court rejected plaintiff's argument that the exclusion was inapplicable because the negligent welding was a non-vehicle cause of the injury. The court held that the only way plaintiffs could have been exposed to the negligent welding was through the use and operation of the vehicle, and that the negligent welding therefore failed to meet the requirement that the nonvehicle-related cause must be independent of the vehicle-related cause for liability to be covered by the homeowner's policy (17 Cal. App. 4th 65, 67-68) .

In Safeco Ins. Co. v. Gilstrap (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 524, 190 Cal. Rptr. 425 , the insurer brought a declaratory relief action, seeking a declaration that it owed no duty of defense or indemnification under the personal liability portion of a homeowner's policy. The policy specifically excluded coverage for injuries arising out of the ownership and use of a motor vehicle. The son of the insured couple borrowed the insureds' motorcycle, causing injury to a third party. The third party sued the insured couple and their son, alleging negligence on the son's part and negligent entrustment of the motorcycle on the part of the insureds. In the insurer's declaratory relief action, the trial court determined that under the exclusion in the policy, the insurer had no obligation to defend the son, but it had an obligation to defend the insured parents. The court of appeal reversed regarding the defense of the parents, holding that the act of negligently entrusting a motor vehicle cannot be disassociated from use of the vehicle itself. The exclusion in the policy therefore precluded coverage (141 Cal. App. 3d 524, 527-528) .

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Camara (1976) 63 Cal. App. 3d 48, 133 Cal. Rptr. 600 , the court distinguished State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Partridge (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 94, 109 Cal. Rptr. 811, 514 P.2d 123 . In Camara, the insured under a homeowner's policy with an auto use exclusionary clause was driving a dune buggy when a collision occurred injuring plaintiff, the insured's passenger. Plaintiff alleged that the insured had negligently designed, constructed, and assembled the vehicle so as to "proximately cause the vehicle to overturn" (63 Cal. App. 3d 48, 50) . The court held that under Partridge, the nonvehicle-related cause must be independent of the vehicle-related cause in order for the liability to be covered by the homeowner's policy (63 Cal. App. 3d 48, 54-55) and found no coverage under the policy. The court pointed out that "the only way in which plaintiff could have been exposed to the claimed design risk was through the operation or use of the motor vehicle" (63 Cal. App. 3d 48, 55) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral OverviewInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsurancePersonal Property

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.38

§ 120.38 Policy Covering Only "Accidents" Does Not Cover Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE POLICY DOES NOT COVER CLAIMS BASED ON INSURED'S NEGLIGENT MISREPRESENTATION.

Policy Covering Only "Accidents" Does Not Cover Negligent Misrepresentation Claims. Claims arising from negligent misrepresentations are not covered under a comprehensive general liability policy, because misrepresentations are not "accidents" for purposes of coverage. Negligent misrepresentation requires intent to induce reliance, and is therefore a subspecies of fraud excluded from policy coverage (Dykstra v. Foremost Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 361, 366-368, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that claims arising fromalleged negligent misrepresentations are not covered under the comprehensive general liability policy.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would refer to specific to provisions of the policy that exclude the activity which the insured asserts should be covered.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Covering Only "Accidents" Does Not Cover Negligent Misrepresentation Claims

In Dykstra v. Foremost Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 361, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 543 , Dykstra was the insured under a series of generalcomprehensive liability (GCL) policies issued by Foremost Insurance Company (Foremost), that defined a covered occurrence as an "accident ... which results in bodily injury, property damage or advertising liability neither expected nor intended from the standpoint of the insured." A third party filed a complaint alleging that Dykstra had induced him to enter into a partnership with Dykstra's son and acquire a mobilehome franchise. The suit alleged that Dykstra was liable for the losses suffered by the franchise, due to Dykstra's negligent misrepresentations regarding his son's experience in mobilehome sales and in management of mobilehome dealerships. Dykstra tendered defense of the action to Foremost; Foremost responded by letter stating that it appeared that no coverage existed, but that Foremost would investigate and would reimburse Dykstra for attorneys' fees if coverage were found. Dykstra settled the action, and then demanded reimbursement from Foremost for the amount of the settlement and attorneys' fees. When Foremost rejected the demand on the ground, among others, that no "occurrence" as defined by the policy gave rise to the third party's claims, Dykstra filed a complaint alleging that Foremost had breached its duty of good faith and fair dealing by refusing to defend the action. The trial court granted Foremost's motion for summary judgment and dismissed the action. Dykstra appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that Foremost had no duty to defend Dykstra under its comprehensive general liability policies because the misrepresentations were not "accidents" for purposes of coverage (14 Cal. App. 4th 361, 364) . Fraudulent acts are deemed purposeful rather than accidental, and therefore are not covered under a GCL policy (14 Cal. App. 4th 361, 366) . The court relied on Chatton v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (1992) 10 Cal. App. 4th 846, 860-861, 13 Cal. Rptr. 2d 318 , for the proposition that negligent misrepresentation requires intent to induce reliance; this intent requirement precludes a finding that a negligent misrepresentation cause of action can be based on an "accident," but instead makes the cause of action a subspecies of fraud that is excluded from policy coverage (14 Cal. App. 4th 361, 366-367) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageAccidentsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional Acts

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.39

§ 120.39 Predecessor Corporation's Product Is Not "Named Insured Product" Under Successor Corporation's Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE PRODUCT MANUFACTURED BY A PREDECESSOR CORPORATION IS NOT A "NAMED INSURED PRODUCT" UNDER THE POLICY.

Predecessor Corporation's Product Is Not a "Named Insured Product" Under Successor Corporation's Policy. A product manufactured by a predecessor corporation is not a "named insured product" under an insurance policy carried by a successor corporation so as to obligate the insurer to provide coverage and defend the additional insured on that policy (Oliver Mach. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1515-1520, 232 Cal. Rptr. 691).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer is not obligated to defend an action because the product which is the subject of the suit was manufactured by a predecessor corporation and is therefore not a "named insured product" under the policy carried by the successor corporation.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would refer to specific to provisions of the policy that exclude the activity which the insured asserts should be covered.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Predecessor Corporation's Product Is Not "Named Insured Product" Under Successor Corporation's Policy

In Oliver Mach. Co. v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1986) 187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 232 Cal. Rptr. 691 , defendant manufacturing corporation, which was the named insured under the policy in question, purchased a machine-manufacturing corporation, after which time the purchased corporation dissolved. The named insured continued to manufacture a line of woodworking machines, and sold them to defendant vendor under its own name. The named insured obtained a comprehensive general liability policy, and designated the vendor as an additional insured on a vendor's broad form endorsement to the policy, for which coverage the vendor paid the named insured a sum of money, based on the estimated value of purchase of the woodworking machines. In pertinent part, the policy provided that the vendor's coverage applied only to the distribution or sale in the vendor's business of the "named insured's products." A machine that was sold by the dissolved corporation prior to its sale to the named insured injured the plaintiff, who brought an action against the named insured and the additional insured (the vendor). The insurer assumed defense of the named insured, but refused to represent the vendor. The vendor and the insurer brought cross-motions for summary judgment seeking a declaration of the insurer's duty to defend and indemnify the vendor. The trial court ruled that as a matter of law, the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify the vendor under the broad form endorsement for injuries caused by products manufactured and sold by a predecessor corporation to the named insured. The vendor appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that a product manufactured by a predecessor corporation is not a "named insured's product" and therefore is not covered by the insurance contract (187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1515-1520) . The court rejected the vendor's contention that machines manufactured by the predecessor corporation constituted "named insured's products" under the policy because they were being traded under the named insured's name. Words in an insurance policy are to be read in their plain and ordinary sense, unless there is a clear indication to the contrary. "Named insured's products" as defined in the policy referred to goods or products manufactured by the insured, and not by its predecessor. It strains logic and the ordinary meaning of language to conclude that the product was sold by the predecessor company while trading under the name of the insured, because the product was sold to the vendor prior to the insured's purchase of the predecessor company (187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1516-1517) . The court distinguished the California Supreme Court's holding in Ray v. Alad Corp. (1977) 19 Cal. 3d 22, 25, 34 , which states that under certain circumstances the liabilities of a predecessor corporation may be imposed on its successor corporation. The successor corporation in Alad acquired the plant, equipment, inventory, trade name, and good will, and continued to manufacture the same product under the predecessor's name, with no outward indication of any change in ownership of the business. The court declined to extend the narrow exception for successor liability in Alad to insurance coverage for sellers of products that were manufactured by a predecessor company. Coverage is a question of contract interpretation, and the duty to defend is based on the subject insurance contract (187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1517). The vendor in the instant case paid the named insured for its coverage based on an estimated value of the purchase of woodworking machines. It is therefore reasonable to infer that the insurer contemplated coverage in the policy of only those risks arising from the sales made by the named insured to the vendor during the coverage period. To include coverage for products manufactured by the predecessor company, perhaps years prior to the purchase of the policy, is an irrational construction of both the insured's and insurer's reasonable expectations for coverage (187 Cal. App. 3d 1510, 1518) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral Overview

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.40

§ 120.40 No Duty to Defend When Coverage Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE COVERAGE IS PRECLUDED AS MATTER OF LAW.

No Duty to Defend When Coverage Precluded as Matter of Law. If the only potential for an insurer's liability under the policy depends on the resolution of a legal question, rather than on disputed facts known to the insurer or pleaded in the complaint, and the legal issue is resolved against coverage, there is no duty to defend (State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Longden (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 226, 233, 242 Cal. Rptr. 726).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that there is no duty to defend because the only potential for the insurer's liability under the policy depends on the resolution of a legal question and the legal issue has been resolved against coverage.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would:

- Refer to the specific legal question on which insurer's liability under the policy depends.
- Identify how the legal issue has been resolved against coverage.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend When Coverage Precluded as Matter of Law

In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Longden (1987) 197 Cal. App. 3d 226, 242 Cal. Rptr. 726 , the insurer issued an automobile policy insuring the insured's truck. Three months later, the insured traded his truck for another person's car, and transferred his coverage to the car, removing coverage from the truck. Two months later, the new owner of the truck was severely injured in a traffic collision while driving the truck. He filed a complaint against the insured, claiming that his injuries were caused by the insured's negligent maintenance of the truck and failure to disclose defects in the brakes. The insured's counsel requested the insurer to defend the action. The insurer filed a declaratory relief action against the insured and the injured party, seeking a determination that it had no duty to either defend or indemnify the insured. The defendants answered, and the injured party filed a cross complaint for declaratory relief against the insurer. The trial court found in favor of the insurer, holding that it had no duty to defend or indemnify the insured, and the injured party appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court rejected the injured party's contention that coverage of an "accident" under the policy included liability for negligent maintenance of the truck or failure to disclose brake defects, which allegedly occurred prior to the accident and while the insured's policy on the truck was still in force. Noting that a conflict exists in appellate interpretation of the definition of "accident" within the meaning of indemnity policies, the court approved the holding of Maples v. Aetna Casualty & Surety Co. (1978) 83 Cal. App. 3d 641, 644-650, 148 Cal. Rptr. 80 , which stated the general rule that the time of the occurrence of an accident is not the time the wrongful act was committed, but rather the time when the complaining party was actually damaged (197 Cal. App. 3d 226, 231). Consequently, the court found no duty of indemnification. In so doing, the court rejected contrary holdings in a line of cases typified by Sylla v. United States Fid. & Guar. Co. (1976) 54 Cal. App. 3d 895, 901, 127 Cal. Rptr. 38 , stating that "accident" as commonly used in liability policies is predicated on an occurrence that is the cause of the injury, rather than the effect (197 Cal. App. 3d 226, 230-231) .

The court then discussed an insurer's duty to defend pursuant to Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 275, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 , which held that potential liability depends on whether the insurer owes coverage to the insured based on the facts known to the insurer or facts pleaded in the complaint, even if false. In the instant case, any potential for liability did not arise from disputed facts, but depended rather on resolution of a legal question, that is, whether the undisputed facts constituted an "accident" during the policy period. There are apparently no cases suggesting that an insurer has a duty to defend when the only potential for liability turns on resolution of a legal, rather than factual, question. Inasmuch as the policy, as a matter of law, did not cover the risk as contended by the injured party, the insurer had no duty to defend (197 Cal. App. 3d 226, 233-234) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend When Coverage Precluded as Matter of Law

In GGIS Ins. Svcs. v. Superior Court (2008) 168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 86 Cal. Rptr. 3d 515 , the insured, an insurance company, brought an action against its insurer under an agents and brokers professional liability policy, seeking indemnity and defense in an underlying action brought by the Pennsylvania insurance commissioner. The policy provided coverage for losses and defense expenses arising from claims first made during the policy period, with additional limited coverage for defense expenses in certain circumstances. The policy excluded any claim, loss, or defense expenses regarding certain specified matters, including the commingling of, or inability or failure to pay, collect, safeguard, or return any money (Exclusion G). A claim was defined to exclude criminal proceedings of any type, or regulatory investigations, or any proceeding seeking injunctive, declaratory, equitable, or nonpecuniary relief or remedies. "Wrongful act" was defined as any actual or alleged negligent act, error, or omission of an insured arising solely from the insured's rendering or failing to render professional services. The underlying action concerned alleged wrongful conduct regarding the collection, retention, and payment of premiums; and demanded a monetary payment to the commission and an accounting of all premium amounts for canceled policies. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion for summary adjudication, noting that it had already determined that triable issues of fact existed with regard to the issues raised. The trial court also declined to stay the trial of indemnity issues pending the outcome of the Pennsylvania action. On petition for writ of mandate, the court of appeal held that a stay is not required if the court in the coverage action may resolve the coverage question as a matter of law without making any factual determinations that would prejudice the insured in the third-party action. The court also stated that if, as a matter of law, neither the complaint nor the known extrinsic facts indicate any basis for potential coverage, the duty to defend does not arise in the first instance (168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 1506) . The court concluded that the insurer owed no duty of defense. All counts alleged by the commissioner arose from the alleged failure to pay it money due the insurers. Absent a potential for coverage, the insurer had no duty to defend in the Pennsylvania action. Exclusion G precludes coverage for any liability or defense costs arising from the insured's failure to pay money. The trial court properly denied the motion for summary adjudication (168 Cal. App. 4th 1493, 1508) .

In Golden Eagle Ins. Corp. v. Cen-Fed, Ltd. (2007) 148 Cal. App. 4th 976, 56 Cal. Rptr. 3d 279 , a bank sued the insured company for breach of a lease and for declaratory relief. The insurer, which provided policies with general liability and commercial general liability coverage, undertook a defense under a complete reservation of rights in the underlying action. In the instant suit, the insurer sued the insured seeking a declaratory judgment that the insurer had no duty of indemnity for various of the underlying allegations, nor for any contractual attorney's fees that might be awarded to the bank; nor any duty to defend. The appellate court upheld the trial court's grant of the insurer's motion for summary adjudication, holding that as a matter of law, there was no actual or potential coverage, and therefore the insurer owed no duty of indemnification or defense (148 Cal. App. 4th 976, 989-992) . Furthermore, because no defense liability ever existed, the insurer had no obligation under the supplementary payments provision, regarding attorney fees (148 Cal. App. 4th 976, 996) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to Defend

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.41

§ 120.41 No Duty to Defend Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY UNDER THE COMPREHENSIVE GENERAL LIABILITY POLICY TO DEFEND INSURED IN THE ADMINISTRATION ACTION FOR WHICH THE INSURED _____ [SEEKS or SOUGHT] DEFENSE, BECAUSE THE ACTION DOES NOT CONSTITUTE A "SUIT" WITHIN THE MEANING OF THE POLICY. THE DUTY TO DEFEND DOES NOT ARISE UNLESS THE ADMINISTRATIVE AGENCY FILES A COMPLAINT INITIATING COURT PROCEEDINGS AGAINST THE INSURED SEEKING DAMAGES COVERED UNDER THE POLICY.

No Duty to Defend Against Coercive Administrative Action. Under a comprehensive general liability insurance policy that requires the insurer to defend the insured against a "suit" when the term is undefined in the policy, the insurer is under no obligation to defend a coercive administrative action if the administrative agency has not filed a complaint for relief that initiates court proceedings (Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 888-889, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to support the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend a coercive administrative action (e.g., an EPA order to clean up hazardous waste) that has not resulted in the filing of a complaint initiating court proceedings, when the insured seeks defense under a comprehensive general liability policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that there is no duty to defend because although the policy requires defense against a "suit" that seeks damages covered the policy, the action that has been taken against the insured is a coercive administrative action (e.g., an EPA order) rather than a suit, and that the third party has not filed a complaint initiating court proceedings in the matter. This contention is therefore appropriate when the term "suit" is not defined in the policy, but is distinguished from the term "claim," and the policy treats theduty of defense within the context of a third-party "suit."

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in a memorandum supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.30[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of the case. In particular, counsel would:

- Refer to the specific legal question on which insurer's duty to defend under the policy depends.
- Identify how the legal issue has been resolved against finding the duty to defend.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete the argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to a summary judgment motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend Against Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

In Foster-Gardner, Inc. v. Nat'l Union Fire Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 857, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 107, 959 P.2d 265 , four insurers issued consecutive comprehensive general liability policies covering the insured's wholesale pesticide and fertilizer business during the relevant time period. The policies, which did not define the terms "suit" or "claim," contained essentially the following language:

> The company will pay on behalf of the insured all sums which the insured shall become legally obligated to pay as damages because of bodily injury or property damage to which this insurance applies, caused by an occurrence, and the company shall have the right and duty to defend any suit against the insured seeking damages on account of such bodily injury or property damages, and may make such > investigation and settlement of any claim or suit as it deems expedient, but the company shall not be obligated to pay any claim or judgment or to defend any suit after the applicable limit of the company's liability has been exhausted by payment of judgments or settlements.

During the relevant time period, the Department of Toxic Substances Control (DTSC) of the California Environmental Protection Agency issued to the insured an "Imminent and Substantial Endangerment Order and Remedial Action Order" pursuant to the Carpenter-Presley-Tanner Hazardous Substance Account Act (HSAA), California's "Superfund law" (see Health & Saf. Code § 25300 et seq.). (HSAA is similar to CERCLA (42 U.S.C.S. § 9601 et seq.) (see 18 Cal. 4th 857, 865 n.4).) The order concluded many years of investigation and monitoring of hazardous substances on the insured property by city and county agencies, and the insured's failure adequately to rid the site of contamination. The Order stated as a finding of fact that the insured was the owner and operator of the site, was a responsible party, and had incurred liability for cleaning up the site. As a conclusion of law, the insured was named a "responsible party" or "liable person" within the meaning of the HSAA. The DTSC determined that during the ownership and operation of the site by the insured, the site ground had been used for disposal of hazardous substances (or waste), which were being released (or threatened to be released) from the site, presenting an imminent and substantial endangerment to the public health or welfare, or to the environment. The Order required the insured to clean up and abate the contamination, to submit notices of intent to comply with the various agency directives, and to file specified remedial studies and proposals. The order also stated that (1) the DTSC or any other agency is not precluded from "taking any action authorized by law to protect the public health or safety or the environment and recovering the cost thereof"; (2) the insured is liable for any cleanup costs incurred by the DTSC, recoverable in a civil action; (3) nothing in the order constitutes a satisfaction or release from liability for any conditions r claims arising as a result of past, current, or future operations of the insured; and (4) the insured may be liable for penalties of up to $25,000 for each day it refuses to comply with the order, and for statutory punitive damages for noncompliance. The insured tendered the defense to its insurers, which either refused to defend, or agreed to defend subject to a reservation of rights. Theinsured filed an action seeking a declaration of the insurers' defense obligations and recovery of defense costs; and subsequently filed a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, to which the insurers filed objections (18 Cal. 4th 857, 861-864) . The trial court entered summary judgment in favor of the insurers in part on the ground that the insurer had no duty to defend because the DTSC order was not a "suit." The court of appeal reversed, holding that the order constituted a suit within the meaning of the policy, giving rise to the duty to defend. The Supreme Court granted review to resolve a conflict in appellate decisions on this issue of first impression in California (18 Cal. 4th 857, 864-865) .

The California Supreme Court reversed, holding that the coercive administrative action did not initiate a "suit" within the meaning of the policies, and therefore did not give rise to the insurers' duty to defend (18 Cal. 4th 857, 889) . A "suit" is a court proceeding initiated by the filing of a complaint (18 Cal. 4th 857, 888) . (This issue arises only with respect to policies issued before 1986, when the standard insurance form was amended to define suit as a civil proceeding, including arbitration proceedings (see 18 Cal. 4th 857, 864 n.3).) Under the policies, the insurers were required to defend a "suit," but had discretion to investigate and settle a "claim" (18 Cal. 4th 857, 878) . Although the insured asserted that the Order is the substantive equivalent of a "suit" because it is an attempt to gain an end by legal process, the Court found this construction unreasonable: "There is nothing in the policy language to support the interpretation that some precomplaint notices are "suits" and some are not. Rather, the unambiguous language of the policies obligated the insurers to defend a "suit," not the substantive or functional equivalent of a suit (18 Cal. 4th 857, 878-879, 888) ." Although the Court acknowledged the seriousness and coerciveness of the Order in question, it held that the construction of a particular notice or order as a suit or claim cannot be grounded on its degree of coerciveness, because courts would be required to "rewrite unambiguous policy language on a case-by-case basis under the guise of interpretation." The seriousness of an administrative order, and the paucity of defenses allowed the violator do not serve to elevate the order to a "suit" for purposes of interpretation of the insurance policy. Nor could courts provide an exception for environmental agency notices, because other agency orders are equally coercive in nature. The Court noted that an insured could contract to expand the scope of the insurer's duty to defend: policies expanded to include defense coverage of third-party demands or in response to government investigations, by contrast to lawsuits, have proportionally larger premiums for that purpose (18 Cal. 4th 857, 881-882) .

The Court further stated that although the insurers might ultimately be obligated to indemnify costs incurred as a result of the Order, that possibility does not alter the scope of their duty to defend; rather, it might give them an incentive, in their discretion, to intervene prior to the filing of a civil suit. Moreover, the Court's decision, rather than providing an "unintended windfall" for insurers in the form of reduced indemnity obligations, prevents a windfall that the insured might have gained by obtaining a scope of defense obligations for which it did not contract or pay premiums (18 Cal. 4th 857, 883) .

The Court rejected the argument that construing coercive administrative action as a suit would curb litigation by deterring insureds from purposely ignoring an administrative order, instigating the agency to sue and triggering the insurer's duty to defend. The Court stated rather that its definition of "suit" as a court proceeding initiated by the filing of a complaint creates a "bright-line rule" that, by clearly delineating the scope of risk, reduces the need for future litigation (18 Cal. 4th 857, 888) .

The Court also stated that under AUI Ins. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 51 Cal. 3d 807, 274 Cal. Rptr. 820, 799 P.2d 1253 , discussed in § 120.150[3], it did not conclude that cleanup costs ordered by a state agency prior to the filing of any civil suit are "damages." Rather, the proceedings in AUI in which "damages" were sought were civil actions, not administrative proceedings. Furthermore, the Court's holding in AUI that "if the insured was not 'legally obligated' to pay the relevant costs, the insurers had no duty to provide coverage," referred to relief ordered by a court of law (18 Cal. 4th 857, 885-886) . Similarly, the Court's holding in Aerojet-Gen. Corp. v. Transport Indem. Co., that "environmental investigation expenses may constitute defense costs that the insurer must pay in fulfilling its duty to defend," did not involve the insurer's duty to defend. Rather, it involved the issue of whether site investigation expenses may constitute defense costs, with respect to an insurer's duty to defend following the filing of state and federal court complaints. The duty to defend arises when the insured tenders defense of the third-party lawsuit to the insurer. Prior to the filing of a complaint, there is nothing for which the insured requires a defense, and hence, no duty to defend (18 Cal. 4th 857, 886-887) . Although the Court agreed that it is in the nation's best interests to have hazardous waste cleaned up, it held that courts may not rewrite an insurance policy for that purpose (or for any purpose) (18 Cal. 4th 857, 889) . (All italics are in the original.)

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] No Duty to Defend Against Coercive Administrative Action Under Comprehensive General Liability Policy

In Bullock v. Maryland Cas. Co. (2001) 85 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 102 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 , the owners of a residential hotel, sued by a city for violating an ordinance requiring that a certain percentage of hotel rooms be rented to permanent residents, tendered the costs of its defense of the suit to its CGL policy carriers. The trial court sustained demurrers to the complaint, and the insureds appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the action by the city did not invoke the insurer's coverage with respect to claiming damages that the insured was "obligated to pay" under the policy. The court noted that the only coercive tool employed against the insureds was a traditional prohibitory injunction barring them, on pain of contempt, from continuing to rent rooms to nonresidents without a permit (85 Cal. App. 4th 1435, 1444-1449) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageAdministrative Actions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.42

§ 120.42 "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion in Comprehensive General Liability Policies Applies Only to Environmental Pollution

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE "ABSOLUTE" POLLUTION EXCLUSION CONTAINED IN THE POST-1985 POLLUTION EXCLUSION CLAUSE OF COMPREHENSIVE GENERAL LIABILITY POLICIES APPLIES ONLY TO ENVIRONMENTAL POLLUTION.

"Absolute" Pollution Exclusion Limited to Environmental Pollution. The "absolute" pollution exclusion contained in the post-1985 standard pollution exclusion clause of comprehensive general liability policies pertains only to environmental pollution (MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 635, 645-653, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228, 73 P.3d 1205).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in a case concerning a comprehensive general liability policy that contains the "absolute" or current pollution exclusion clause drafted in 1985, to support the contention that the exception applies only to environmental pollution and not, for example, to ordinary acts of negligence involving harmful substances [see, e.g., MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 635, 653, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228, 73 P.3d 1205] .

This form may be used in various procedural contexts, such as a memorandum in support of a summary judgment motion in favor of the insurer, or in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument connecting the points in this form with the facts of the case--for example, by setting forth the pollution exclusion provision of the policy to show that it contains the "absolute" pollution clause.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument with respect to all issues, and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the formsof this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion Limited to Environmental Pollution

MacKinnon v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 635, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228, 73 P.3d 1205 , was an action by the owner of an apartment building against his comprehensive general liability (CGL) insurer for bad faith, breach of contract, and declaratory relief regarding the "absolute" pollution exclusion clause in his policy (31 Cal. 4th 635, 645-653) . The owner caused an exterminator to spray pesticides in his apartment building to eradicate yellowjackets, at least partly in response to a complaint about yellowjackets from one tenant. That same tenant died, allegedly from pesticide exposure, resulting in a wrongful death suit by her survivors against the owner, the exterminator, and others, based on the allegedly negligent use of pesticides. In the wrongful death suit, the owner tendered defense of the action to his comprehensive general liability insurer, which initially retained counsel for the insured under reservation of rights, but then withdrew its defense, asserting no coverage pursuant to the pollution exclusion clause. The CGL policy contained the post-1985 "absolute" pollution exclusion, which provided: "We do not cover Bodily Injury or Property Damage ... (2) Resulting from the actual, alleged, or threatened discharge, dispersal, release or escape of pollutants: (a) at or from the insured location." The terms "Pollution or Pollutants" were defined, in the definitions section at the beginning of the policy, as "mean[ing] any solid, liquid, gaseous or thermal irritant or contaminant, including smoke, vapor, soot, fumes, acids, alkalis, chemicals and waste materials. Waste materials include materials [that] are intended to be or have been recycled, reconditioned or reclaimed." (31 Cal. 4th 635, 639, 655-656). The owner then retained his own counsel and entered into a settlement with the plaintiffs in the wrongful death suit (31 Cal. 4th 635, 655-656) . In the owner's action against the CGL insurer, based on the insurer's alleged breach of its duty to defend and indemnify the owner, the trial court granted the insurer's summary judgment motion based on the pollution exclusion. The court of appeal affirmed. The trial court's principal basis for granting summary judgment, and the court of appeal's principal basis for affirming the trial court, was a determination that the pollution exclusion found in the CGL policy excluded coverage for the injury claimed in the wrongful death complaint (31 Cal. 4th 635, 641) .

The California Supreme Court granted review and reversed, interpreting the exclusion in favor of coverage and adopting a narrow interpretation ofthe pollution exclusion that limits the scope of the pollution exclusion to injuries arising from events commonly thought of as pollution--that is, environmental pollution (31 Cal. 4th 635, 645-653) . The Court held that the exclusion does not apply to ordinary acts of negligence involving harmful substances. The Court noted that this case involves the post-1985 pollution exclusion clause often referred to as the "absolute" or "current" pollution exclusion. The two most notable features of this version of the exclusion are: (1) the lack of any exception for the "sudden and accidental" release of pollution; and (2) the elimination of the requirement that the pollution be discharged "into or upon land, the atmosphere or any watercourse or body of water." (31 Cal. 4th 635, 644). The Court noted that courts interpreting the scope of the current pollution exclusion are roughly divided into two camps. One camp maintains that the exclusion applies only to traditional environmental pollution into the air, water, and soil, but not to all injuries involving the negligent use or handling of toxic substances that occurs in the normal course of business. These courts generally find ambiguity in the wording of the pollution exclusion if it is applied to that type of negligence and interpret the ambiguity against the insurer in favor of coverage. The other camp maintains that the clause applies equally to negligence involving toxic substances and traditional environmental pollution and that the clause is as unambiguous in excluding the former as the latter (31 Cal. 4th 635, 641-642) . After discussing the conflicting authorities at length, the Court agreed with those courts that narrowly interpreted the exclusion, limiting the scope of the pollution exclusion to injuries arising from events commonly thought of as pollution--that is, environmental pollution (31 Cal. 4th 635, 645-653) . The Court interpreted the term "pollution" in light of the purpose of CGL policies, which is to provide the insured with the broadest spectrum of protection against liability for unintentional and unexpected personal injury or property damage arising out of the conduct of the insured's business (31 Cal. 4th 635, 653-654) . If the pollution exclusion does not plainly and clearly exclude coverage, it must be interpreted in favor of coverage. The Court stated that the term "disperse pesticides" is generally not used as a substitute for "spray" or "apply" pesticides, except perhaps if the pesticides are being spread throughout a large area. In this particular case, the application of pesticides in and around an apartment building does not plainly signify to the common understanding the "dispersal" of a pollutant. In other words, the term "discharge" is commonly used with pesticides to describe pesticide runoff behaving as a traditional environmental pollutant, rather than pesticides being normally applied (31 Cal. 4th 635, 651, n.6). The Court concluded that it is far from clear that the owner's claim (based on the wrongful death action), for injuries arising from the normal, though negligent, residential application of pesticides, would be commonly thought of as pollution. Although pesticides may be pollutants under some circumstances, it is unlikely that a reasonable policyholder would think of the act of spraying pesticides under these circumstances as an act of pollution. The common understanding of the word "pollute" indicates that it is "something creating impurity, something objectionable and unwanted." The normal application of pesticides around an apartment building to kill yellowjackets would not comport with the common understanding of the word "pollute" (31 Cal. 4th 635, 654) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] "Absolute" Pollution Exclusion Limited to Environmental Pollution

In American Casualty Co. of Reading, Pa. v. Miller (2008) 159 Cal. App. 4th 501, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 571 , a furniture-stripping company released methylene chloride into a public sewer system, injuring a worker in the sewer. The company was insured under a commercial general liability policy that contained an "absolute pollution exclusion" clause similar to that in MacKinnon v. Truck Insurance Exchange (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 635, 3 Cal. Rptr. 3d 228, 73 P.3d 1205 . Following a criminal conviction against the owner of the company in which the owner pled guilty to negligently discharging pollutants into a public sewer system, the injured party's workers' compensation insurer brought a lawsuit against the furniture-stripping company for reimbursement; the injured party then brought a separate action against the company. That company sought coverage and defense for both actions under its CGL insurer, which refused on the ground that coverage was excluded by the "absolute pollution exclusion" clause. In the ensuing declaratory relief action by the CGL insurer, the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer with respect to both actions. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the policy at issue was similar to that in MacKinnon, the release of methylene chloride constituted "environmental pollution," and the pollution exclusion clause excluded coverage for injuries arising from the discharge (159 Cal. App. 4th 501, 515-516, 71 Cal. Rptr. 3d 571).

In Titan Corp. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. (1994) 22 Cal. App. 4th 457, 27 Cal. Rptr. 2d 476 , the issue was the applicability of the version of the pollution exclusion appearing in the standard 1986 ISO policy form. An insured, faced with liability for toxic waste cleanup, sought indemnity from its insurer. The trial court held that coverage existed under the personal injury endorsement of the policy. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the 1986 exclusion was unambiguous and applied to the cost of an operation to clean up soil and groundwater contaminated with a hazardous substance. The policy unambiguously declared that it would not pay for bodily injury or property damage if that damage arose from pollution. To hold otherwise would render the pollution exclusion inoperative in almost all cases and would be inconsistent with the principle of contractual interpretation that ascribes to terms their clear meaning (22 Cal. App. 4th 457, 473-476) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsPollution

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.43

§ 120.43 Insured Has Not Shown That "Sudden and Accidental" Exception to "Qualified Pollution Exclusion" in Comprehensive General Liability Policy Applies

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE INSURED HAS NOT MET THE BURDEN OF SHOWING THAT THE INSURED'S CLAIM COMES WITHIN THE "SUDDEN AND ACCIDENTAL" EXCEPTION OF THE "QUALIFIED POLLUTION EXCLUSION."

A. Burden Is on Insured to Establish That "Occurrence" Is Covered Under Policy. The burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage (Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1188, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213).

B. Burden Shifts to Insurer to Prove Exclusion After Insured Shows That "Occurrence" Is Covered. Once an insured has shown that the occurrence forming the basis of the insured's claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage, the burden is on the insurer to prove that the claim is specifically excluded (Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1188, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213).

C. After Insurer Shows That General Pollution Exclusion Applies in Comprehensive General Liability Policy, Insured Bears Burden of Showing That Pollution Was "Sudden and Accidental." In an action seeking indemnity under a standard commercial general liability insurance policy, once the insurer carries its burden of proving that the general pollution exclusion applies, the insured bears the burden of proving that a claim comes within the "sudden and accidental" exception (Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1194, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213).

D. No Coverage if "Sudden and Accidental" Exception Does Not Apply. There is no coverage under a comprehensive general liability policy if the "sudden and accidental" exception to the "qualified pollution exclusion" clause is inapplicable to the facts of the case [see Smith v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 22 F.3d 1432, 1437] .

E. "Sudden and Accidental" Has Temporal Meaning. "Sudden and accidental," for purposes of the exception to the standard pollution exclusion, connotes a temporal quality of short duration (Smith v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 22 F.3d 1432, 1437) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in a case concerning a comprehensive general liability policy in which the "sudden and accidental" exception to the pollution exclusion is at issue, to support the contention that the insured has the burden of proving the application of that exception to the exclusion. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer has met its burden of showing that the pollution exclusion applies, and therefore that the burden shifts to the insured to show that coverage exists pursuant to the exception.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts, such as a memorandum in support of jury instructions with respect to the burden of proof, or in a trial or appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument connecting the points in this form with the facts of the case--for example, by setting forth the pollution exclusion provision of the policy to show that it is a broad exclusion [see § 120.43[3][c]].

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument with respect to all issues, and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Burden Is on Insured to Establish That "Occurrence" Is Covered Under Policy

Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213 , was a declaratory relief action brought by an insured seeking a judgment with respect to the coverage provided by comprehensive general liability policies issued by its primary and excess insurers. The crucial issue at trial was the burden of proof with respect to the "sudden and accidental" exception to the general pollution exclusion. The trial court gave the advisory jury the following instruction on that issue:

> The policies issued by First State contain pollution exclusions. To establish its defense based on the pollution exclusions, First State has the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence (1) that Aydin Corporation's liability arises out of the "discharge, dispersal, release or escape" of smoke, vapors, soot, fumes, acids, alkalis, toxic chemicals, solids, liquids or gases, waste materials or other irritants, contaminants or pollutants into or upon land, the atmosphere or any watercourse or body of water; and (2) that the discharge, dispersal, release or escape of [those pollutants] was not "sudden and accidental."

The jury answered "No" to special interrogatories inquiring whether the insurer met its burden of proving that the insured's legal liability arose out of the discharge, dispersal, release or escape of contaminants, on land or water, that were not "sudden and accidental." Based on the jury's findings, the trial court entered a declaratory judgment in favor of the insured. The insurer appealed, and the court of appeal reversed (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1186-1188) .

The California Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the court of appeal, holding that once an insurer has met its burden of showing that a claim is specifically excluded, the burden shifts to the insured to show that the pollution activity was "sudden and accidental," so as to provide coverage (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1194) . In its preliminaryreasoning, the Court stated that the burden is on an insured to establish that the occurrence forming the basis of its claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1188) .

[b] Burden Shifts to Insurer to Prove Exclusion After Insured Shows That "Occurrence" Is Covered

The factual and procedural background of Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213 , is discussed in § 120.43[3][a]. The California Supreme Court held that once an insured has established that the occurrence forming the basis of the insured's claim is within the basic scope of insurance coverage, the burden is on the insurer to prove that the claim is specifically excluded (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1188) .

[c] After Insurer Shows That General Pollution Exclusion Applies in Comprehensive General Liability Policy, Insured Bears Burden of Showing That Pollution Was "Sudden and Accidental"

The factual and procedural background of Aydin Corp. v. First State Ins. Co. (1998) 18 Cal. 4th 1183, 77 Cal. Rptr. 2d 537, 959 P.2d 1213 , is discussed in § 120.43[3][a]. The central ruling of this case involved whether the "sudden and accidental" exception in the pollution exclusion should be considered as a coverage provision or an exclusionary provision when allocating the burden of proof. Noting that no California published opinions had yet decided this issue and that the courts in other states that have done so have all ruled that the burden rests with the insured, the Court explained its decision in line with the other state courts. The policy language itself, rather than the location of the language in an insurance policy, controls. The language of the exclusion [see § 120.43[3][a]], creates a broad exclusion from coverage for any liability resulting from pollution (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1191) . Read in the context of this broad exclusionary language, the "sudden and accidental" exception serves to reinstate coverage when it would otherwise not exist. Once the insurer has established that the pollution exclusion applies, coverage depends on the applicability of the exception. Because the insured bears the burden of establishing coverage under an insurance policy, the insured must also prove that the exception affords coverage after an exclusion is triggered. The Court observed that this broad construction will aid insureds in meeting their burden of proof, ensuring that the end result (coverage or noncoverage) conforms to the insured's objectively reasonable expectations (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1192) . The Court concluded that the "sudden and accidental" exception must be construed as a coverage provision as to which the insured would ordinarily bear the burden of proof, and that no compelling reason exists to alter the normal allocation of burden on this question (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1193) . The Court therefore held that in an action seeking indemnity under a standard commercial general liability insurance policy, once the insurer carries its burden of proving that the general pollution exclusion applies, the insured bears the burden of proving that a claim comes within the "sudden and accidental" exception (18 Cal. 4th 1183, 1194) .

[d] No Coverage if "Sudden and Accidental" Exception Does Not Apply

The factual background and holding of Smith v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 22 F.3d 1432 , are discussed in § 120.43[3][e].

[e] "Sudden and Accidental" Has Temporal Meaning

In Smith v. Hughes Aircraft Co. (9th Cir. 1993) 22 F.3d 1432 , residents of an Arizona city filed suit against an aircraft manufacturer for damages caused by contamination of their drinking water. After that case settled, various insurers of the manufacturer brought a declaratory relief action to determine their respective liability for the water-contamination claims. The federal district court granted summary judgment for the insurers with respect to policies issued between 1971 and 1985 and granted summary judgment for two of the insurers with respect to policies issued between 1956 and 1971. The manufacturer appealed.

The Ninth Circuit affirmed with respect to the summary judgment motions granted on the ground that the policies in question precluded coverage because of the pollution exclusion clause. The pollution exclusion clause in question stated that the insurance does not apply (22 F.3d 1432, 1437 (emphasis in original)):

> (f) to bodily injury or property damage arising out of the discharge, dispersal, release or escape of smoke, vapors, soot, fumes, acids, alkalis, toxic chemicals, liquids or gases, waste materials or other irritants, contaminants or pollutants into or upon land, the atmosphere or any water course or body of water; but this exclusion shall not apply if such discharge, dispersal, release or escape is sudden and accidental.

The Ninth Circuit held that "sudden and accidental" for purposes of the exception to the standard pollution exclusion (the pre-1986 "qualified pollution exclusion") connotes a temporal quality of short duration under both Arizona and California law (22 F.3d 1432, 1437) . Moreover, an insured cannot break down its long-term waste disposal practices into temporal components to bring its activities within the exception for "sudden and accidental" activities. For example, discharges that occurred when a waste treatment plant broke down or became incapacitated could not be characterized as "sudden" and segregated from the insured's long-term waste practices if evidence clearly indicated that the pollution was gradualand the result of those long-term practices (22 F.3d 1432, 1438) . Finally, the fact that a chemical is not listed as a pollutant by the Environmental Protection Agency until after the discharges in question occur is irrelevant, because the language of the standard pollution exclusion does not require such a listing (22 F.3d 1432, 1438) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] After Insurer Shows That General Pollution Exclusion Applies in Comprehensive General Liability Policy, Insured Bears Burden of Showing That Pollution Was "Sudden and Accidental"

In Aeroquip Corp. v. Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co., Inc. (9th Cir. 1994) 26 F.3d 893 , an insured under a comprehensive general liability policy was faced with liability for a leak of diesel fuel that occurred for an undetermined but lengthy period. After the insurer denied, coverage, the insured filed a declaratory relief action. The federal district court entered a judgment in favor of the insurer. The insured appealed, contending that the insurer had not proven that the "sudden and accidental" exception to the "qualified pollution exclusion" (pre-1986) was inapplicable. The Ninth Circuit affirmed, holding that the insured bore the burden of demonstrating the applicability of the exception to the exclusion (26 F.3d 893, 895) .

[b] "Sudden and Accidental" Has Temporal Meaning

In ACL Techs., Inc. v. Northbrook Prop. & Cas. Ins. Co. (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 1773, 22 Cal. Rptr. 2d 206 , a purchaser of property containing underground storage tanks that released pollutants sought coverage for clean-up costs under its comprehensive general liability insurance. The court declined to find coverage under the "sudden and accidental" exception to the standard pollution exclusion because the pollutants were released gradually by the corroding, rusting storage tanks. The court held that the term "sudden and accidental" is not ambiguous, and that the term "sudden" does not merely mean "unexpected," but is temporal in meaning and indicates something that happens quickly or abruptly. Even if the phrase "sudden and accidental" was ambiguous, interpreting these terms to cover gradual pollution would not be within the objectively reasonable expectations of the insured. No ordinary person would think that something that happens gradually also happened suddenly (17 Cal. App. 4th 1773, 1788) .

In Truck Ins. Exch. v. Pozzuoli (1993) 17 Cal. App. 4th 856, 21 Cal. Rptr. 2d 650 , the insureds had purchased a comprehensive general liability policy to cover their car wash, where they also sold gasoline. An underground gasoline storage tank developed a leak, which continuedduring a 60-day period. The issue was whether the phrase "sudden and accidental" (in the exception to the standard pollution exclusion in the policy) was ambiguous. The insureds argued that "sudden" should be interpreted as not having any temporal meaning. However, the trial court granted summary judgment to the insurer, holding that the phrase had a temporal meaning and was not ambiguous, and that a leak of 60 days' duration was not "sudden" as that term was used in the policy. Therefore, the damage from the leak did not fall within the exception to the pollution exclusion and was not covered under the policy. The court of appeal affirmed, finding that the term "sudden" was defined in the policy as "not continuous," and therefore it was a weak argument to contend that the term was ambiguous. The court also held that the insureds had no reasonable expectation of coverage for a long-term pollution process (17 Cal. App. 4th 856, 860-861) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnificationInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageAccidentsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsPollution

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.44

§ 120.44 Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE BUSINESS LIABILITY INSURANCE POLICY THAT IS AT ISSUE IN THIS ACTION DOES NOT COVER THE INSURED'S CLAIM UNDER ITS "ADVERTISING INJURY" CLAUSE BECAUSE THE CLAIM IS FOR _____ [describe, e.g., TRADEMARK INFRINGEMENT], WHICH IS NOT A COVERED LOSS.

Business Liability Policy at Issue Does Not Cover This Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" or "Advertising Liability" Clause. The "advertising injury" or "advertising liability" coverage clauses in the business liability policy at issue do not include coverage for the insured's claim. [The relevant exclusion clauses in this policy exclude the insured's claim.] Under this policy, no coverage exists for this claim, and therefore the insurer is under no duty to defend or indemnify the insured (see Palmer v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1116, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647, 988 P.2d 568).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of the contention by an insurance company that the business liability policy at issue(for example, a commercial general liability or similar policy) does not cover the claimed loss under its "advertising injury" or "advertising liability" clause (see Palmer v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1116, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647, 988 P.2d 568).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of its case. In particular, counsel should set forth the relevant policy provisions and contrast them with the insured's claim, arguing that under the relevant coverage and exclusion clauses, the claim is not a covered loss.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication, as necessary, to complete argument with respect to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion relating to insurance liability policies, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance , Part I, Subpart E.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

Palmer v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 1109, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 647, 988 P.2d 568 , was an action by the insured, a real estate developer, against several of its business liability insurers (only one of which appealed), alleging causes of action for declaratory relief and breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. In the underlying third-party action, another real estate developer sued the insured for (1) infringement of the registered trademark "Valencia"; (2) false designation of origin and false representation; and (3) unfair competition. The third-party complaint alleged that the defendant used the Valencia mark and used colored flags, signs, and slogans that were "remarkably similar" to those used by the plaintiff for its own real estate projects. At trial, the jury found for the plaintiff, awarding it almost $1 million in damages for infringement by one of the insured's companies and over $1 million in damages for infringement by another of the insured's companies. The jury returned special verdict forms finding that the insured's use of the Valencia mark was "likely to cause confusion," "infringing"; and "a false representation or a false designation of origin." The jury also found the insured's conduct willful. The district court entered judgment against the insured for trademark infringement, false designation or origin, and false representation. After the jury verdict, the insured tendered the action to various insurance carriers, including the insurer in this appeal, which agreed to pay a portionof the costs on appeal, but reserved the right to contest coverage. During the pendency of the appeal, the insured settled with the plaintiff in the underlying action for $1,590,000. The insurer denied coverage and refused to contribute to the settlement. The insured then filed this suit. The only policy at issue was the comprehensive umbrella liability policy issued to one of the insured's companies. That policy provided coverage for "advertising liability," including "infringement of copyright or of title or of slogan," but excluded coverage "with respect to advertising activities" for "infringement of registered trade mark, service mark or trade name." The exclusion specifically did "not relate to titles or slogans." The trial court sustained the insurer's demurrer without leave to amend on the grounds that the insured lacked standing and had breached the "no action" clauses of the policies. The court entered judgment of dismissal as to the insurer. The court of appeal affirmed the dismissal of most claims but reversed dismissal of all claims relating to the umbrella policy. The court of appeal held that the underlying judgment fell within the scope of the policy language requiring coverage for infringement "of title or of slogan," despite the language excluding coverage for trademark infringement.

The California Supreme Court granted review to determine whether the policy language providing coverage for advertising liability caused by infringement of "trade mark, service mark or trade name [except relating to] titles or slogans" covers infringement of any name. (The Court also entertained an issue regarding willful infringement under Ins. Code § 533, but did not ultimately reach that issue.) After reviewing the relevant policy language, the Court found that this language only provides coverage for infringement of a name of a literary or artistic work or a name that is also a slogan (21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1114) . The only applicable coverage clause provided coverage for "advertising liability" resulting from infringement "of title or of slogan." The Court concluded that the coverage clause, when read in conjunction with the clause excluding coverage for trademark infringement, did not cover the underlying judgment because the mark "Valencia" is neither the name of a literary or artistic work, nor is it a slogan (21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1116) . Nothing in the policy suggested that the coverage clause and exclusion clause define "title" differently. Therefore, it was reasonable to assume that "title" had the same meaning in both clauses. The exclusion clause stated:

> This insurance does not apply ... with respect to advertising activities, to claim made against the insured for ... infringement of registered trade mark, service mark or trade name by use thereof as the registered trade mark, service mark or trade name of goods or services sold, offered for sale or advertised, but this shall not relate to titles or slogans ...

Interpreted in its ordinary sense, this clause excludes coverage for infringement of a "registered trade mark, service mark or trade name," unless that "trade mark, service mark or trade name" is a title or slogan. To be consistent with this interpretation, the definition of "title" cannot subsume the definitions of "trade mark," "service mark," or "trade name" as understood in the policy. Otherwise, all or part of the exclusion clause becomes meaningless. Only one definition fits: the name of a literary or artistic work. Because these names can be trademarked, adopting this definition of "title" carves out a limited exception and gives effect to every part of the policy's trademark exclusion clause (21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1117) . The Court therefore held that the policy provision covering infringement of title did not require the insurer to provide reimbursement (21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1120) . The Court also held that the mere fact that the plaintiff in the underlying action used the mark Valencia in a slogan did not bring the judgment within the scope of coverage for infringement of slogan (21 Cal. 4th 1109, 1120) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Business Liability Policy Does Not Cover Particular Claim Under "Advertising Injury" Clause

In Hayward v. Centennial Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2005) 430 F.3d 989 , the complaint language in the underlying suit was virtually identical to that in Hameid v. Nat'l Fire Ins. of Hartford (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 16, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 401, 71 P.3d 761 . The third party sued a former employee who worked for the insured, for breach of contract and breach of fiduciary duty, and the third party sued the former employee and the insured for misappropriation of trade secrets and violation of the California Business and Professions Code, based on wrongful solicitation of the third party's customers. The insured and the former employee sued the insurer for breach of contract and bad faith, after the insurer refused to indemnify or defend them. After removal to federal court, the district court found for the insurer on all claims. The Ninth Circuit affirmed, holding that under Hameid, there was no advertising injury as defined in the policy (430 F.3d 989, 992) .

In Homedics, Inc. v. Valley Forge Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2002) 315 F.3d 1135 , the insured was sued for patent infringement by virtue of offering to sell products through advertising. The insured's commercial general liability (CGL) policy covered "advertising injury," which was defined to include injury arising from "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business," and "personal injury," which was defined to include nonbodily injury arising out of "oral or written publication of material that ... disparages an organization's goods, products or services." After the CGL insurer refused to defend the patent infringement suit, the insured filed an action against the insurer for declaratory relief on that issue, and the district court dismissed the complaint pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. Proc. 12(b)(6). The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that although the Patent Act includes some conduct involving advertising, thus allowing patent infringement to arise out of an insured's advertising activities in some instances, in this case the conduct alleged in the underlying complaint (direct infringement of patent by offering to sell infringing products through advertising) did not include the advertising injury of "misappropriation of advertising idea or style of doing business" (315 F.3d 1135, 1139-1141) .

In Intex Plastics v. United Nat'l Ins. (9th Cir. 1994) 23 F.3d 254 , an insured tendered defense of a patent infringement claim to its general liability carrier, which denied coverage. The insured sued for declaratory relief. The district court concluded that the insured was covered under the "advertising injury" endorsement to the policy and entered judgment in favor of the insured. The Ninth Circuit reversed, holding that direct infringement involves the making, using, or selling of a patented product, and none of these activities constitutes an advertising injury (23 F.3d 254, 255-256) .

In Hameid v. National Fire Ins. of Hartford (2003) 31 Cal. 4th 16, 1 Cal. Rptr. 3d 401, 71 P.3d 761 , the "Business Account Package Policy" held by the insured covered "advertising injury" arising out of the "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business." A competing company brought an action against the insured, alleging various causes of action based on allegations that the insured misappropriated the plaintiff's trade secrets by using the plaintiff's customer list to identify and solicit the plaintiff's customers and engage in unfair competition. After the insurer refused to defend, the insured prevailed at trial and then sued the insurer for bad faith, seeking to recover its defense costs and punitive damages. The court of appeal reversed judgment for the insurer. The California Supreme Court granted review, reversing the decision of the court of appeal. The Supreme Court delivered a narrow ruling, holding that because coverage for "advertising injury" arising out of the "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business" under a commercial general liability policy requires widespread promotion to the public, the one-on-one solicitation of a few customers in this case did not give rise to the insurer's duty to defend the underlying lawsuit. Allegations that the insured took a competitor's customer list and solicited customers from it did not give rise to insurer's duty to defend because the insured's alleged act was not misappropriation of advertising ideas under the policy definition (31 Cal. 4th 16, 22-30) .

In Total Call Int'l, Inc. v. Peerless Ins. Co. (2010) 181 Cal. App. 4th 161, 104 Cal. Rptr. 3d 319 , the insured under a CGL policy provided telecommunication services and products, including prepaid phone cards. The CGL policy included advertising-injury coverage, and excluded coverage for personal and advertising injury arising out of the failure of goods, products, or services to conform with any statement of quality or performance in the insured's advertisement (nonconformity exclusion). In the underlying action, competitors of the insured alleged that they suffered damages because of the insured's advertising activities solely because the insured's advertising misrepresented its own phone cards. The underlying suit was settled. In its action against the insurer, the insured stated causes of action for breach of contract, bad faith, unfair business practices, and declaratory relief, based on the insurer's refusal to defend. The trial court sustained the insurer's demurrer to the complaint without leave to amend. The appellate court affirmed, holding that the complaint did not potentially allege an advertising injury under the policy. The court also held that there was no potential for policy coverage in view of the nonconformity exclusion. This exclusion precludes coverage for third-party claims predicated on allegations that the insured's advertising misrepresented the quality or price of the insured's own product (181 Cal. App. 4th 161, 169-172) .

In Kim Seng Co. v. Great American Ins. Co. of N.Y. (2009) 179 Cal. App. 4th 186, 101 Cal. Rptr. 3d 537 , reh'g denied, 2009 Cal. App. LEXIS 1971 (2009) , primary and umbrella CGL policies issued by related insurers covered "advertising injury." Both policies contained an exclusion for prior publication, excluding coverage for advertising injuries arising from material first published before inception of the policy. Following trial of the underlying trademark infringement action, other insurers that paid for the defense sought equitable contribution and subrogation from insurers that had refused defense and indemnity, including the two described above, which cross-complained for declaratory relief regarding the applicability of the prior-publication exclusion. The trial court granted the related CGL insurers' motion for summary judgment, holding that the prior-publication exclusion applied to exclude coverage; the Court of Appeal affirmed (179 Cal. App. 4th 186, 192-193, 200) . The appellate court held that the exclusion applied to trademark infringement actions and was not limited to defamation and privacy claims. In the policies, "advertising injury" was surrounded by quotation marks, and appeared with quotation marks in the prior-publication exclusion. Consequently, "advertising injury" had the same meaning when used in the exclusion that it had whenever it appeared in the policy enclosed in quotation marks (179 Cal. App. 4th 186, 195) .

In ACS Sys., Inc. v. St. Paul Fire & Marine Ins. Co. (2007) 147 Cal. App. 4th 137, 53 Cal. Rptr. 3d 786 , a software company insured under a commercial general liability policy was sued for sending unsolicited advertisements to fax machines, allegedly in violation of federal and state statutes. The policy included the insurer's duty to defend in suits alleging injury or damage resulting from property damage caused by an event, or caused by an advertising injury offense committed during the policy term. The appellate court affirmed the trial court's sustaining of a demurrer without leave to amend and consequent dismissal, because neither the advertising-injury nor the property-damage coverage provisions applied to the wrongful sending of the faxes (147 Cal. App. 4th 137, 154-155) .

Rombe Corp. v. Allied Ins. Co. (2005) 128 Cal. App. 4th 482, 27 Cal. Rptr. 3d 99 , a company that was a franchisee corporation invited its customers and employees to a breakfast meeting at a hotel, where one of the company's principals announced that the company would no longer be affiliated with the franchisor corporation and that it would start a new company engaged in the same business as a temporary employment agency. This person also asked the attendees to become customers and employees of the new company. The meeting and its agenda were later reported in an Internet newsletter. The company's business insurance policy included within the definition of advertising: "a notice that is broadcast or published to the general public or specific market segments about your goods, products or services for the purpose of attracting customers or supporters." The company's insurer refused to indemnify or defend the underlying suit brought by the franchisor for breach of contract, misappropriation of trade secrets, and unfair competition. In the subsequent suit for breach of contract and bad faith brought by the company against its insurer, the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the policy did not cover the injuries alleged in the underlying complaint. The term "specific market segments" does not relieve an insured of the burden of demonstrating that it was engaged in relatively wide dissemination of its advertisements, even if the distribution was focused on recipients with particular characteristics or interests (128 Cal. App. 4th 482, 492-494) .

In We Do Graphics, Inc. v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2004) 124 Cal. App. 4th 131, 21 Cal. Rptr. 3d 9 , the underlying third-party complaint alleged that the third party's former employee, who currently worked for the plaintiff, stole trade secrets and attempted to solicit the third party's customers. Advertising injury was defined in the policy insuring the defendant as:

[P] (a) Oral or written publication of material that slanders or libels a person or organization or disparages a person's or organization's goods, products or services; [P] (b) Oral or written publication of material that violates a person's right of privacy; [P] (c) Misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business; or [P] (d) Infringement of copyright, title or slogan.

In the ensuing action by the plaintiff against its insurer for refusal to defend and indemnify, the insurer successfully moved for summary judgment. The trial court found that the underlying action did not trigger coverage. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the former employee's conduct did not involve any advertising injury (124 Cal. App. 4th 131, 136-138) .

In Lomes v. Hartford Fin. Servs. Group, Inc. (2001) 88 Cal. App. 4th 127, 105 Cal. Rptr. 2d 471 , the ousted president of a corporation, who remained a director and shareholder, brought a federal suit against the corporation and the individual controlling the corporation for securities fraud and related claims. When the defendants filed a counterclaim for defamation, the corporation's commercial general liability policy insurer (which was providing a defense to the defendants) refused to provide a defense to the plaintiff as counterclaim defendant (although it partially funded his defense under a reservation of rights). The policy provided coverage for "personal and advertising injury," including defamation. The counterclaim alleged that after leaving the corporation, the counterclaim defendant telephoned a lender and made false and defamatory statements that caused the corporation to lose its financing. In the subsequent state court action to determine the insurer's duty to defend the counterclaim defendant in the federal action, the court of appeal, reversing the trial court, noted that the named insured under the policy was the corporation and that the only counterclaim arguably covered by the policy was defamation. Although the counterclaim defendant alleged that it was within the realm of "possibility" that he made the statements in question in the course of advertising or soliciting lending activity for the corporation as one of its directors, the court found as a matter of law that he was sued in an individual capacity with respect to the counterclaim and therefore that the insurer owed him no duty of defense or indemnification. Specifically, hecould not reasonably be said to have been acting in his capacity as a director when he allegedly defamed the corporation. Moreover, the allegation of breach of fiduciary duty did not render him an insured under the corporation's policy (88 Cal. App. 4th 127, 134-135) .

In Peerless Lighting Corp. v. American Motorists Ins. Co. (2000) 82 Cal. App. 4th 995, 98 Cal. Rptr. 2d 753 , the insurer refused to defend an underlying action for infringement of "trade dress" that allegedly arose from the insured's solicitation of a single customer through a competitive bidding process with a product specifically designed for that customer. The liability policy involved provided "advertising injury" coverage for offenses "committed in the course of advertising ... goods, products, or services." In the declaratory relief action between the insurer and the insured, the trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the insured on the issue of the insurer's duty to defend the underlying action, but after trial found the insurer had no duty to indemnify the insured for the amount it paid to settle the underlying suit. The court of appeal affirmed, holding, among other things, that the term "advertising" as used in the standard commercial general liability (CGL) policy does not include responding to a single customer in a competitive bidding process with a product tailor-made for that customer (82 Cal. App. 4th 995, 1012) .

In Maxconn Inc. v. Truck Ins. Exch. (1999) 74 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 750 , the insurer denied coverage under a commercial general liability policy for a patent infringement suit against the insured regarding an electronic product invention. The insured sued the insurer for declaratory relief with respect to the duty to defend the underlying lawsuit. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's finding that the insurer was required to defend the suit. Under the policy, "advertising injury" insurance applied to "advertising injury caused by an offense committed in course of advertising your goods, products or services ... ." The court held that if "infringement of ... title," included in the "advertising injury" clause, encompassed patent infringement, the word "patent" would appear in the infringement clauses. However, there was no mention of patent infringement anywhere in this policy. The absence of any express reference to patent infringement in the policy would lead a reasonable layperson to the conclusion that patent infringement was not covered (74 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1275-1276) . Inasmuch as there was no potential for coverage under the policy, the insurer had no duty to defend a patent infringement suit (74 Cal. App. 4th 1267, 1279) .

In Ziman v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (1999) 73 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 87 Cal. Rptr. 2d 397 , the insured, which owned and managed commercial office buildings, borrowed through an art broker an original copyrighted painting for display in a building lobby, on the promise that the insured would seriously consider buying the work. After the insured informed the broker that the insured would not buy the painting because it was tooexpensive, the broker picked up the painting. In its place she noticed an unauthorized copy of the same painting. The artist brought a federal suit against the insured, alleging copyright infringement, fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and unfair competition. The insured tendered the suit to its insurer under a general comprehensive liability policy. The "advertising injury coverage" applied to "advertising injury caused by an offense committed in the course of advertising your goods, products or services." "Advertising injury" was defined as "injury arising out of ... Infringement of copyright, title or slogan." The insurer denied coverage and refused to provide a defense. The insured sued the insurer for breach of contract, tortious breach of the covenant of good faith, and constructive fraud. The trial court granted summary judgment to the insurer. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that there was no potential coverage, and hence no duty to defend, under the advertising injury provision of the policy. The alleged copyright infringement had nothing to do with any advertising by the insured (73 Cal. App. 4th 1382, 1389) .

In Aetna Cas. & Sur. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 442 , a manufacturer was sued for patent infringement. It tendered defense to its comprehensive general liability carrier, alleging that the loss fell within the "advertising injury" endorsement in the policy. The insurer rejected the tender, and the insured filed a declaratory relief action. The trial court held that coverage existed, but the court of appeal reversed, holding that as a matter of law patent infringement could not be considered "advertising injury" (19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 328) . The court concluded that decisions in the wake of the California Supreme Court's ruling in Bank of W. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 1254, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538, 833 P.2d 545 , have confirmed that except perhaps in very unusual circumstances, it is now settled law that there is no coverage for patent infringement under the advertising injury coverage of a business general liability policy (see Iolab Corp. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (9th Cir. 1994) 15 F.3d 1500, 1506-1507 ; Gitano Group, Inc. v. Kemper Group (1994) 26 Cal. App. 4th 49, 59-60, 31 Cal. Rptr. 2d 271). Coverage for inducing patent infringement, as opposed to patent infringement itself, is barred by Ins. Code § 533. To be liable for inducing infringement, a party must have the specific intent to induce another to infringe. Therefore, such an act must be intentionally performed, with knowledge of its harmful nature (19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 331) .

In Mez Indus., Inc. v. Pacific Nat'l Ins. Co. (1999) 76 Cal. App. 4th 856, 90 Cal. Rptr. 2d 721 , the insured filed a declaratory relief and breach of contract action against the insurer with respect to a commercial general liability (CGL) policy, based on the insurer's refusal to defend a third-party action for patent infringement and inducement of patent infringement. The trial court sustained the defendant's demurrer without leave to amend and entered a judgment of dismissal. The court of appeal affirmed, holding thatwith respect to coverage for advertising injury, neither "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business" nor "infringement of copyright, title or slogan" applied to the claims against the insured in the underlying action. The insured was not claimed to have directly violated any patents by its advertising activities. Moreover, coverage for inducement of patent infringement would have been barred by Ins. Code § 533 (76 Cal. App. 4th 856, 865-866, 874-877) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnificationInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageAdvertising Injuries

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.45

§ 120.45 Commercial General Liability Policy Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Is Limited to Money Ordered by Court

[1] Form

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE COMMERCIAL GENERAL LIABILITY INSURANCE POLICY THAT IS AT ISSUE IN THIS ACTION, PROVIDING COVERAGE FOR SUMS THE INSURED IS "LEGALLY OBLIGATED TO PAY AS DAMAGES," IS LIMITED TO MONEY ORDERED BY A COURT.

A. Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Is Limited to Money Ordered by Court. A commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that an insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" is limited to money ordered by a court (Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v. Superior Court (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 945, 960, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 16 P.3d 94).

B. Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Does Not Require Insurer to Indemnify for Administratively Required Expenses Pursuant to Environmental Statute. The duty to indemnify under a commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that an insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" does not extend to any expenses required by an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute (Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v. Superior Court (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 945, 966, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 16 P.3d 94).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insured's contention that a commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that the insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" is not limited to money ordered by a court. The basis of these points and authorities is that the provision imposing the duty to defend expressly links "damages" to a "suit"--that is, a civil action prosecuted in a court.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in a memorandum supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points and authorities in this form with the facts of the case. In particular, counsel should describe facts showing generally that the sums for which the insured is seeking indemnity were not money that the insured was ordered by a court to pay, and facts showing specifically, if appropriate, that those sums were expenses required by an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute coverage.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete the argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by the insurer for summary judgment on the issue of whether the commercial general liability insurance policy in question covers the insured's obligation to pay administrative expenses required by an environmental agency.

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For complete discussion of the format requirements and strategic considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion of requirements and considerations for completing a memorandum, together with a general skeletal form of memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs . For forms relating specifically to the procedural context of a motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.50 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose the points and authorities set out in this form.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Is Limited to Money Ordered by Court

In Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v. Superior Court (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 945, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 16 P.3d 94 , an insurer filed a declaratory relief action against its insured, an oil refinery, alleging that (1) it had issued the insured various comprehensive general liability insurance policies; (2) the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) had instituted a proceeding against the insured pursuant to the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA) (42 U.S.C.S. § 9601 et seq.) regarding the cleanup of a contaminated site and the abatement of contamination. The insurer sought a declaration that it did not owe any duty to defend or any duty to indemnify in this pending proceeding. The insured filed a cross-complaint, initiating a cross-action essentially for damages and declaratory relief against the insurer, alleging that (1) the insurer had issued it various insurance policies, including a CGL policy; (2) the EPA had instituted a proceeding against the insured pursuant to CERCLA for the cleanup of two contaminated sites, and for the abatement of contamination, and had required the continuing expenditure of funds for the cleanup and abatement; and (3) the California regional water quality control boards had initiated at least one proceeding against the insured by means of a cleanup and abatement order pursuant to the Porter-Cologne Water Quality Control Act (Porter-Cologne Act) (Water Code § 13000 et seq.) regarding the contaminated soil and groundwater of one or more sites, and had required the continuing expenditure of funds for it. In addition, several persons or entities had prosecuted to conclusion civil actions in court against the insured based on allegations of contamination. The insured also alleged that the insurer owed a duty to defend in the past actions, but denied it, and owed a duty to indemnify in the past actions and the pending proceedings, but denied it. The insured sought a declaration that the insurer owed it a duty to indemnify in the pending EPA/CERCLA and regional water board proceedings, and also prayed for damages for harm arising from the insurer's breach of the duty to defend in the past civil actions. The insurer filed an answer to the cross-complaint, asserting as an affirmative defense that they did not owe any duty to defend in any proceeding conducted before an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute, as opposed to a civil action prosecuted in a court, because its duty was limited to a civil action. Another affirmative defense asserted that they did not owe any duty to indemnify for any expenses required by an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute, as opposed to money ordered by a court, because the duty was limited to money ordered by a courtand hence could not extend to administrative expenses. The insurer filed a motion for summary judgment regarding whether they owed any duty to defend in any of the pending proceedings and whether they owed any duty to indemnify for any expenses required in those proceedings. The trial court ruled that the insurer did not owe any duty to defend in any of the identified pending proceedings, but also ruled that were not entitled as a matter of law to an adjudication that they did not owe any duty to indemnify for any expenses. The insurer submitted a petition for writ of mandate. The Court of Appeal ordered issuance of a peremptory writ of mandate directing the superior court to vacate its order denying the insurer's motion for summary judgment on the issue of the insurer's duty to indemnify, and to make a new order granting the relief that the insurer sought. The California Supreme Court granted the insured's petition for review.

The California Supreme Court affirmed. The Court held that the insurer's duty to indemnify the insured for "all sums that the insured becomes legally obligated to pay as damages" under the standard comprehensive general liability insurance policy is limited to money ordered by a court (24 Cal. 4th 945, 960) . The provision imposing the duty to defend expressly links "damages" to a "suit"--that is, a civil action prosecuted in a court--because it is in a "suit" that "damages" are fixed in their amount through the court's order. Moreover, "damages" exist traditionally only inside of court (24 Cal. 4th 945, 962) . The duty to indemnify under a CGL policy containing this provision therefore does not extend to any expenses required by an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute (and specifically, proceedings conducted before the Regional Water Quality Control Boards pursuant to the Porter-Cologne Act) (24 Cal. 4th 945, 966) .

[b] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Does Not Require Insurer to Indemnify for Administratively Required Expenses Pursuant to Environmental Statute

The factual background of Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's of London v. Superior Court (2001) 24 Cal. 4th 945, 103 Cal. Rptr. 2d 672, 16 P.3d 94 , is discussed in § 120.45[3][a].

The Supreme Court held in this case that the duty to indemnify under a commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" does not extend to any expenses required by an administrative agency pursuant to an environmental statute (and specifically, proceedings conducted before the Regional Water Quality Control Boards pursuant to the Porter-Cologne Act) (24 Cal. 4th 945, 966) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnificationInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageDamagesInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

35 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.46-120.49

[Reserved]

§§ 120.46[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.50

§ 120.50 Liability Partially or Wholly Within Potential Coverage of Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE AT THE TIME IT REFUSED TO UNDERTAKE DEFENSE OF INSURED IN THE THIRD-PARTY ACTION, INSURER KNEW THAT THE POTENTIAL FOR LIABILITY UNDER THE POLICY EXISTED.

A. Insurer Is Bound Under Contract of Indemnity. The indemnitor under a contract of indemnity is bound, on request of the indemnitee, to defend actions or proceedings brought against the indemnitee regarding in respect to the matters embraced by the contract of indemnity, unless a contrary intention appears (see Civ. Code § 2778(4)).

B. Insurer Has Duty to Defend Against Claim Potentially Within Policy Coverage. When an insurer is required under the terms of a liability policy that it has issued to defend its insured in any action for an occurrence covered by the policy, the insurer must defend an action against the insured that seeks damages potentially within the coverage of the policy (Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 275, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322).

C. Insurer Ascertained Facts Giving Rise to Potential Liability. The duty to defend is fixed by the facts which the insurer learns from the complaint, the insured, or other sources, and the insurer's duty to defend arises whenever it ascertains facts which give rise to the potential of liability under the policy (Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 276-277, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 ; Mullen v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 169-170, 140 Cal. Rptr. 605).

D. Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify. The duty to defend is broader than the duty to indemnify. When there is doubt as to whether the duty to defend exists, the doubt should be resolved in favor of the insured and against the insurer (Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 538, 47 Cal. Rptr. 843).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer ascertained facts that give rise to the potential of liability under the policy from the complaint, the insured, or other sources.

This form may be used in various procedural contexts, such as:

- In an action by an insured against an insurer for breach of the insurer's duty to defend or indemnify the insured, this form may be used in a memorandum opposing the insurer's motion for summary judgment. For this use, the form should be modified to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty to defend.

- In a declaratory relief action by an insurer seeking a declaration that the insurer has no duty to defend the insured, this form may be used in a memorandum supporting the insured's motion for summary judgment.

- In an insured's trial brief.

- In an insured's appellate brief.

These points and authorities should be combined with other points and authorities setting forth the appropriate procedural context. For example, points and authorities supporting and opposing motions for summary judgment or summary adjudication are set forth in Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.51 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should include specific facts that show that the insurer ascertained facts that give rise to the potential of liability under the policy. For example, counsel would refer a specific paragraph in the complaint in the third party action, by number, from which the insurer reasonably should have ascertained the insured's potential liability under the policy.

An appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposingan insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention. In this context, counsel would modify the form to assert that there remain triable issues of material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. Counsel would need to submit a separate statement of undisputed material facts opposing the motion. The statement must be supported by cognizable evidence in the form of a request for judicial notice or one or more affidavits or declarations [see Cal. Rules of Court, Rule 342(e)-(h)]. The latter supply facts that are within the personal knowledge of the affiant or declarant [see Code Civ. Proc. §§ 2002(1), 2003; Evid. Code § 702], and may also provide the necessary foundation for any accompanying discovery documents or other documentary evidence attached in the form of an exhibit.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Defend Against Claim Potentially Within Policy Coverage

Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 , was an action against an insurance company for damages for failure to defend a third-party action against plaintiff, defendant's insured, for assault and battery. Plaintiff, a doctor, had been driving a car on a residential street when another car narrowly missed colliding with his. The driver of the other car left his vehicle, approached plaintiff's car in a menacing manner, and jerked open the door. Plaintiff, fearing physical harm to himself and his passengers, rose from his seat and struck the other driver. The other driver filed a complaint in Missouri against plaintiffalleging that plaintiff willfully, maliciously, brutally, and intentionally assaulted him and prayed for $50,000 actual damages and $50,000 punitive damages. Under a comprehensive personal liability policy issued by defendant, defendant agreed to pay on behalf of plaintiff insured all sums which the insured should become legally obligated to pay as damages because of bodily injury or property damage and to defend any suit against the insured alleging such injury or damage and seeking damages which were payable under the terms of the policy, even if any of the allegations were groundless, false, or fraudulent. The policy provided that it did not apply to bodily injury or property damage caused intentionally by or at the direction of the insured. Plaintiff notified defendant of the suit, stated that he had acted in self-defense, and asked the company to defend. When the insurer refused to defend, plaintiff unsuccessfully defended the third-party action, which resulted in a judgment against him for $6,000 actual damages, but no punitive damages. Plaintiff then brought an action against defendant for damages for failing to defend him and for refusing to pay the judgment rendered.

The Supreme Court reversed judgment for defendant with instructions to the trial court to take evidence solely on the issue of damages. The Court found that the policy provisions as to the duty to defend were uncertain and that, in light of the insured's reasonable expectation, they required performance of that duty (65 Cal. 2d 263, 267, 271) . The Court pointed out that the carrier must defend a suit which seeks damages potentially within the coverage of the policy (65 Cal. 2d 263, 275) and that defendant could not construct a formal fortress of the third-party's pleadings and retreat behind its walls, since pleadings are malleable, changeable, and amendable (65 Cal. 2d 263, 276) . The Court held that the third-party action presented the potentiality of a judgment based on nonintentional conduct and that since liability for such conduct would fall within the indemnification coverage, the duty to defend became manifest at the outset (65 Cal. 2d 263, 276) .

Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322 , was an action by an insured against his motorcycle liability insurance carrier for breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing in defendant's handling of a claim against plaintiff resulting from a fire which plaintiff accidentally caused while using his motorcycle. The fire caused $11,000 worth of damage for which the insured parties were reimbursed by their own fire insurer. Plaintiff's policy limit was $5,000 and the policy covered the cost of defense and indemnity for occurrences covered by the policy. Defendant rejected the fire insurer's offer to settle its subrogated claim against plaintiff for $5,000, made in response to defendant's offer to settle for $3,000. Although defendant had accepted the $11,000 figure as the amount for which plaintiff was potentially liable for the fire damage, it had, prior to the time it made its offer, set up a reserve fund of only$2,000 for the claim and determined that there was a 50 percent chance plaintiff would be held liable. One of the reasons for the reduced amount of $2,000 for the reserve fund was the assessment of defendant's claim manager that there was a strong possibility that defendant could avoid coverage under one of the exclusionary clauses in the policy. However, defendant did not advise plaintiff of the possible noncoverage.

On defendant's rejection of the fire insurer's settlement offer, the fire insurer sued plaintiff for $11,000. Defendant refused to undertake defense of the action on the ground of noncoverage. Plaintiff retained private counsel and, under a negotiated agreement, agreed to pay the fire insurer $3,000 plus attorney's fees. The fire insurer agreed that it would seek recovery of the balance of the claim from defendant and that plaintiff would retain any punitive damages that might be awarded. The trial court directed a verdict for plaintiff on the issue of compensatory damages, and the jury awarded him $150,000 punitive damages.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court said that an insurer must defend a suit which seeks damages potentially within the coverage of the policy. The court noted that the obligation to defend is measured by the terms of the policy and the allegations of the complaint against the insured, and that where the complaint reveals potential liability within the policy, the duty to defend arises (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753) . Applying these rules to the evidence, the court held that there was a potential liability under the policy and that defendant had a duty to defend (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753) . It further held that the duty to defend, where it exists, exists at the prelitigation as well as at the litigation stages (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 755) .

[b] Insurer Ascertained Facts Giving Rise to Potential Liability

The factual background of Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 , is discussed in § 120.50[3][a]. In reversing the judgment for defendant insurer, the Court said that since modern procedural rules focus on the facts of a case rather than on the theory of recovery in the complaint, the duty to defend should be fixed by the facts which the insurer learns from the complaint, the insured, or other sources and that an insurer, therefore, bears a duty to defend its insured whenever it ascertains facts which give rise to the potential of liability under the policy (65 Cal. 2d 263, 276-277) . The Court held that the complaint itself in the third-party action, as well as the facts known to the insurer, sufficiently apprised the insurer of the possibility of recovery under the policy (65 Cal. 2d 263, 277) .

Mullen v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 140 Cal. Rptr. 605 , was an action against an insurance company brought by an injured party who had recovered a judgment against defendant's insured in a prior action which defendant allegedly had wrongfully refused to defend. The insured had assigned to plaintiff all rights which he might have against the insurer for its refusal to defend. Defendant had issued a comprehensive personal liability policy to Joe and Dorothy Santos which named the Santoses as the insureds and included as additional insureds all residents of their household who were related to, or were under the age of 21 years and in the care of, either of them. Under the terms of the policy, the insureds' minor son, Anthony, who was living with them, was an additional insured. The policy required the insurer to pay on behalf of the insured all sums which the insured should become legally obligated to pay as damages because of bodily injury or property damage caused by an occurrence and to defend any suit seeking such damages. "Occurrence" was defined as including injurious exposure to conditions, which results, during the policy period, in bodily injury or property damage neither expected nor intended from the standpoint of the insured. Excluded from coverage was bodily injury or property damages arising out of the ownership, maintenance, operation, use, loading, or unloading of any car or out of a business pursuit of the insured.

Plaintiff was a service station attendant who had been struck with a tire iron by Anthony Santos. Plaintiff filed a complaint against Anthony and against Gary Witt and Gary's father, Paul Witt, to recover compensatory and punitive damages for personal injuries. The complaint contained four causes of action. The first alleged that Paul and Gary were the owners of a specified car, that on a specified date Gary and Anthony "drove, operated, maintained, propelled, controlled, and parked" the car at a service station, and that as a direct and proximate result thereof, plaintiff received certain specified personal injuries when Anthony negligently struck plaintiff's left arm as plaintiff was loading the car with gas. The second and third causes of action alleged that, at the time of the negligent act described in the first cause of action, Anthony was an employee of Paul and Gary and was acting in the course and scope of his employment. The fourth cause of action alleged that while plaintiff was in the process of loading the car with gas, he was "intentionally assaulted and struck on the left arm" by Anthony.

Relying on the allegations in the third-party complaint and the policy provisions, defendant, without investigating the facts, denied coverage and refused to defend the insured. That action resulted in a judgment against Anthony for $16,144 general damages and $5,000 punitive damages. The action against the insurer was submitted to the trial court on an agreed statement of facts and resulted in a judgment for defendant insurer.

The court of appeal reversed with instructions to the trial court to take evidence solely on the issue of damages. The court held that an insurance company must defend any lawsuit brought against its insured which seeks damages potentially within the coverage of the policy and, quoting from Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 276-277 , said that since modern procedural rules focus on the facts of a case rather than the theory of recovery in the complaint, the duty to defend should be fixed by the facts which the insurer learns from the complaint, the insured, or other sources, and that an insurer bears a duty to defend its insured whenever it ascertains facts which give rise to the potential of liability under the policy (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 169-170). The court said that, at the time defendant refused the defense of Anthony, it possessed factual information which gave rise to potential liability under the policy. Defendant knew that the use of the car had no causal connection with plaintiff's injuries, that the injuries were the result of a fight, and that, for all defendant knew, the fight had been started by plaintiff who was struck by Anthony in self-defense (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 170) . The court said that injuries resulting from acts of self-defense are not "intended" or "expected" as those terms are customarily used in insurance policies and that those terms exclude from coverage only injuries and damages resulting from acts involving an element of wrongfulness or misconduct on the part of the insured and not acts otherwise intentionally performed (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 170-171) .

[c] Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify

Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 47 Cal. Rptr. 843 , was an action to determine whether defendant insurers were, under insurance certificates issued by them, obligated to defend plaintiff, their insured, a builder and seller of homes, in third-party lawsuits brought against plaintiff. The suits resulted from the rupture and leaking of radiant heating systems installed by plaintiff in the homes that it had built and sold. The trial court entered judgment declaring that defendants were obligated to defend certain of the actions and were liable for attorney's fees, court costs, and expenses incurred by plaintiff because of defendants' failure to accept the defense of those claims.

The court of appeal affirmed. The insurance certificates provided coverage for loss sustained or incurred by plaintiff as a result of any liability imposed by law or loss of, damage to, or destruction of property of others arising from any cause whatsoever out of the operations, activities, work, and/or business of the assured. The certificates also required defendant to defend all claims or suits for such injury or damage for which the assured was alleged to be liable. Excluded from coverage were claims for repairing or replacing any defective product or part manufactured, sold, or supplied by the assured and the cost of repair or replacement, for the loss of use of any such defective product or part, and for damage to the particular part of any property on which the assured was working that was caused by the faulty manner in which the work was performed. The court pointed out that the claims against plaintiff for which a duty to defend was adjudged to exist alleged damage (impairment of market value of homes, damage to real property, and damage to other personal property) that was entirely unrelated to damage resulting from the cost of repairs and replacement of defective products (the heating systems) and, hence, was a claim for a loss or damage covered by the policy. The court said that the duty to defend is broader than the duty to indemnify and that any doubt as to whether the duty exists should be resolved in favor of the insured (238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 538) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Defend Against Claim Potentially Within Policy Coverage

In Align Tech., Inc. v. Federal Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal 2009) 673 F. Supp. 2d 957 , the insured, which produced orthodontic appliances, sought defense and indemnity of cross-claims in an underlying action it had brought against a competitor for unfair competition and related claims. The cross-complaint alleged causes of action including unfair competition, defamation, and contract breach. In its denial letter, the insurer acknowledged that some of the claims in the cross-complaint fell within the policy definition of covered "personal injury," but denied coverage and defense on the ground that the "intellectual property laws or rights" ("IP") exclusion applied to preclude coverage in its entirety. The federal district court held that under California law, an insurer owes a broad duty to defend its insured against claims that create a potential for indemnity. To trigger the defense duty, there need be nothing more than a bare potential or possibility of coverage (673 F. Supp. 2d 957, 967) . The court also held that a single intellectual property claim does not automatically disqualify the entire suit from coverage. In this case, the "IP" exclusions did not conclusively apply to all the alleged defamation in the cross-complaint; and the insurer breached its duty to defend by declining coverage (673 F. Supp. 2d 957, 968-972) .

In Hyundai Motor America v. National Union Fire Ins. Co. (9th Cir. 2010) 600 F.3d 1092 , the insured automobile manufacturer offered on its website two interactive features that infringed on another company's patents. The CGL policy covered "advertising injury," including among other things, "misappropriation of advertising ideas or style of doing business." The insurer refused to defend the underlying action for patent infringement, asserting that no advertising injury was alleged. In the subsequent action by the insured against the insurer, the federal district court granted summary judgment to the insurer, holding that patent infringement is not an advertising injury. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals reversed, holding that the infringement claims constituted "misappropriation of advertising ideas" within the scope of the advertising injury clause. The insurer therefore had a duty to defend (600 F.3d 1092, 1104) . The Court of Appeals noted that both it and California courts have rejected past claims that a patent infringement constitutes an advertising injury, but stated that a contextual analysis applies, recognizing that infringement of a patented advertising method could constitute a misappropriation of advertising ideas, as in this case (600 F.3d 1092, 1101) .

In Rojo v. Kliger (1990) 52 Cal. 3d 65, 87-88, 276 Cal. Rptr. 130, 801 P.2d 373 , a diversity action brought in federal district court, the insured alleged breach of contract and sought declaratory relief against the insurer under a CGL policy containing a "personal injury liability" and "advertising injury" clause. The underlying complaint against the insured, brought by the insured's competitor in software products, stated causes of action for false advertising and unfair competition. The bases of the complaint involved the insured's alleged representations regarding the technological architecture of its own products; but the complaint did not allege that the publication expressly identified a disparaged product or business. The question arose whether disparagement, which was covered under the "personal injury" and "advertising injury" provisions, was pleaded in the underlying complaint. The district court noted that precedent under California law suggests that disparagement by implication is actionable. Inasmuch as the complaint makes numerous allegations that suggest a claim for disparagement by implication, the claims implicated coverage for personal injury and advertising injury, triggering the insurer's duty to defend (52 Cal. 3d 65, 88).

In American States Ins. Co. v. Progressive Casualty Ins. Co. (2009) 180 Cal. App. 4th 18, 102 Cal. Rptr. 3d 591 , a self-employed trucker was driving his truck onto a construction site when the trailer attached to the truck hit and injured a pedestrian. The driver was the sole owner and operator of his truck; a trucking company was the sole owner of the trailer. The driver was hauling dirt under an agreement with the trailer owner, which had an oral agreement with the grading contractor on the construction project. The contractor was a named insured under a commercial automobile policy; the general contractor and developer were additional insureds. The underlying suit by the injured person alleged in part a cause of action for motor vehicle negligence against the contractor, the general contractor, and the developer, claiming that they employed the driver and that the driver and the trailer owner were their agents. It also claimed that they were liable for failing to take necessary safety precautions at the construction site entrance. The driver and trailer owner cross-complained against each other and the contractor/developer defendants, alleging that those defendants were vicariously liable. The trial court denied a motion for summary judgment brought by the contractor/developer defendants, finding triable issues of material fact concerning, among other things, whether the peculiar risk doctrine applied. The contractor's insurer then brought a declaratory relief action concerning whether the insurers of the driver and trailer owner had a duty to defend the contractor/developer defendants in the underlying suit. The trial court found as a matter of law that the truck/trailer insurers did not have a duty to defend the contractor/developer defendants, and that the peculiar risk doctrine did not apply. The appellate court reversed with respect to the truck/trailer insurers' duty to defend, concluding that the contractor/developer defendants were potentially liable for the accident under the vicarious liability theory of the peculiar risk doctrine. Therefore, the truck/trailer insurers owed them a duty to defend, which was triggered by the potential vicarious liability (180 Cal. App. 4th 18, 32) .

In State Farm Fire and Casualty Co. v. Superior Court (2008) 164 Cal. App. 4th 317, 78 Cal. Rptr. 3d 828 , the insured under a homeowner's policy threw a person into a swimming pool, intending to get him wet, but by mistake did not throw hard enough, so that the person landed on the cement step and suffered injuries. In the action for damages for personal injuries and declaratory relief brought by the real party in interest against the insured and his insurer, the trial court ruled that the insurer owed a duty to defend. The insurer filed a petition for writ of mandate seeking an order directing the trial court to vacate its order and enter a judgment declaring that it had no duty to defend. The appellate court affirmed, holding that an insurer has a duty to defend an insured when facts give rise to the potential for coverage. Because the policy covered damages for injuries arising from an "accident," and that word was not defined, the potential for coverage existed, and the insurer had a duty to defend (164 Cal. App. 4th 317, 323-329) .

In Frontier Oil Corp. v. RLI Ins. Co. (2007) 153 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 63 Cal. Rptr. 3d 816 , rev. denied, 2007 Cal. LEXIS 12848 (2007) , the underlying complaints against the insured alleged that it conducted oil and gas exploration, production, processing, and storage activities at a certain drill site, which resulted in the release and discharge of pollutants that caused plaintiffs personal injury. The complaints alleged damage of a nature and kind covered by the "pollution incident" coverage clause in the commercial general liability policy, and did not foreclose the possibility that the damage was caused by a sudden and accidental release. They therefore created a potential for coverage under the policy. The potential for coverage was sufficient to establish the insurer's duty to defend (153 Cal. App. 4th 1436, 1467-1468) .

In Standard Fire Ins. Co. v. Spectrum Cmty. Ass'n (2006) 141 Cal. App. 4th 1117, 46 Cal. Rptr. 3d 804 , rev. denied, 2006 Cal. LEXIS 12875 (2006) , a condominium association brought an action against the developers and contractors for multiple causes of action based on construction defects. The insurer that had issued an occurrence-based commercial general liability policy covering the construction project for approximately ten months filed a complaint for declaratory relief seeking a determination that it had no duty to defend in connection with the construction-defect litigation. The trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer; the condominium association appealed. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the alleged property damage occurred at least in part during the policy period. Moreover, although the condominium association was not formed until after the policy was canceled and therefore owned no property until after the damage occurred, the critical question was when the property damage occurred (141 Cal. App. 4th 1117, 1130-1131) .

Atlantic Mut. Ins. Co. v. J. Lamb, Inc. (2002) 100 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 123 Cal. Rptr. 2d 256 , involved consolidated cases among the insured and two successive insurers, regarding potential coverage under the policies and rights of equitable subrogation and equitable contribution between the insurers. With respect to the coverage issue, the court of appeal reversed summary judgment for the insurer in its declaratory relief action. The underlying federal suit against the insured sought declaratory relief regarding the enforceability of a patent and stated causes of action for unfair competition and interference with prospective advantage. The complaint in that suit alleged that the insured had contacted the plaintiff's customers, telling them that plaintiff was infringing its patent and threatening legal action. The court in this case held that a liability policy potentially covered the underlying claim under the clauses covering personal injury. "Personal injury" was defined to mean "injury other than 'bodily injury,' arising out of one or more of the following offenses: ... oral or written publication of material that slanders or libels a person or organization or disparages a person's or organization's goods, products or services" (italics added by court). The court distinguished this holding from its prior holding in Truck Ins. Exch. v. Bennett (1997) 53 Cal. App. 4th 75, 61 Cal. Rptr. 2d 497 , because in this case the policy language expressly went beyond coverage for purely defamatory statements to also include the disparagement of a party's business or products (100 Cal. App. 4th 1017, 1032-1037) .

In La Jolla Beach & Tennis Club, Inc. v. Industrial Indem. Co. (1994) 9 Cal. 4th 27, 36 Cal. Rptr. 2d 100, 884 P.2d 1048 , the underlying complaint against the employer alleged that the employee had suffered emotional distress due to wrongful termination in violation of public policy. The employer's worker's compensation insurer refused to defend the action and the employer brought a bad faith action against the workers' compensation insurer. The Supreme Court held that while the insurer has a duty to defend when the claim is potentially covered, to protect the reasonable expectation of the insured (9 Cal. 4th 27, 37) , a possible future claim based on similar factual allegations is not sufficient to trigger the duty to defend. The test is "whether the underlying action for which defense and indemnity is sought potentially seeks relief within the coverage of the policy." Therefore, the workers' compensation insurer had no duty to defend the tort action merely because the plaintiff might later file a covered workers' compensation claim (9 Cal. 4th 27, 44) .

In Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 , discussed in § 120.109[3][a], the underlying complaint alleged that a teacher "negligently, carelessly, recklessly, and wantonly engaged in sexual and nonsexual acts with the minor plaintiff." The teacher had previously plead nolo contendere to one count of committing lewd acts with a minor. The school's insurer sought declaratory relief that it had no duty to defend or indemnify the teacher because his acts were intentional under Ins. Code § 533. The trial court agreed and granted summary judgment for the insurer, and the court of appeal affirmed. The Supreme Court reversed, ruling that the teacher's conviction did not eliminate the insurer's duty to defend against other allegations of misconduct that did not amount to criminal molestation (4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1083) . The test is not whether noncovered acts predominate in the third party action, but rather whether there is any potential for liability under the policy (4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1084) . In this case, the possibility of a duty to indemnify remained because some of the alleged acts arose from the teacher's interaction with students in the course of his educational activities, and conceivably could support a finding of negligence. Since the parties disputed whether the insured's alleged misconduct was a part of a proven sexual molestation, or whether instead was independent of the molestation and so potentially within policy coverage, summary judgment was improper (4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085) . The Court noted, however, that in many cases the plaintiff's allegations of molestation and other misconduct may be "inseparably intertwined" and therefore not separable for purposes of the insurer's defense obligation (4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1085, 1087) . See also Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 1608, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 (allegedly negligent conduct that was part of a consistent course of sexual harassment in an employment setting was inseparable from the intentional wrongful acts and did not give rise to a duty to defend).

In El-Com Hardware, Inc. v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 205, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 670 , a fastener manufacturer included in one of its products a handle for which another company claimed to own a patent. That company brought an action for "trade dress" infringement against the fastener manufacturer, which tendered defense to its commercial general liability (CGL) policy carrier. The insurer refused to defend because the claim did not involve trade dress infringement, and even if it did, the infringement did not occur in the course of the insured's advertising activities. The insured sued the insurer for breach of contract, breach of the duty to defend, and breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, based on the insurer's failure to defend the trade dress claim under the CGL advertising injury liability coverage. The trial court entered summary judgment for the insurer, finding that it owed no duty to defend, because the third party's damages from the insured's alleged trade dress infringement arose not from the insured's advertising activities, but from its copying and selling the allegedly infringing handle. The court of appeal reversed, holding that in light of the complaint's allegations for trade dress infringement, certain extrinsic evidence known to the insurer when the insured tendered its defense of the claim implicated potential advertising-injury liability coverage. The extrinsic evidence showed that the product was possibly depicted in a sales catalog (that is, advertised), which was distributed prior to the suit. Therefore, the insurer had a duty to defend (92 Cal. App. 4th 205, 215-219) .

In Barnett v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 500, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , a medical practice management company, which was the named insured under a comprehensive general liability (CGL) policy, and a professional medical corporation (filing a separate complaint in intervention) sued two of the executive officers and one of the employees of the management company, alleging breach of fiduciary duty, breach of the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and related torts. Thesuit was based on comments made by the defendants criticizing the restructuring of a subsidiary management company on the basis that the changes compromised patient care and violated California insurance laws. The defendants asked the CGL policy insurer to defend and indemnify them against both complaints, as additional insureds under the policy, asserting that the allegations of the complaint created a potentially covered claim for personal injury or advertising injury within the meaning of the policy. When the insurer declined to defend or indemnify them, the defendants in the underlying action filed suit against the insurer for breach of the contractual and good faith obligations owed to them under the policy. The court of appeal, reversing dismissal of all claims following the sustaining of a demurrer, held that if a person seeks coverage as an additional insured under a policy issued to a corporation as the named insured, an officer or employee of the corporation is entitled to a defense if he or she was acting in an insured capacity when allegedly engaged in the injury-producing conduct. Because the complaint alleged that the executive officers were seeking to further the corporation's interests when they criticized the restructuring of the subsidiary management company, it is possible that they were engaged with respect to their duties as executive officers when they committed the alleged misconduct. The court therefore held that for purposes of surviving a demurrer, a potential for coverage existed with respect to the officers (although the policy excluded from coverage any claim against an employee for defaming the named insured) (90 Cal. App. 4th 500, 512-513) .

In Alpine Ins. Co. v. Planchon (1999) 72 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 85 Cal. Rptr. 2d 777 , homeowners sued a roofing company for damages arising from the destruction of their home by fire. While the defendant was repairing the homeowners' roof, its standard pick-up truck, which was modified with a hydraulic scissors lift, was overloaded with gravel. The truck bed consequently toppled into burning propane, causing the fire. The defendant tendered defense to its commercial general liability insurer. The insurer accepted with reservation of rights, then brought an action for declaratory relief, seeking a declaration that it had no duty to defend or indemnify. The policy provisions in question excluded coverage for property damage arising out of "ownership, maintenance, use or entrustment to others of any ... auto ... owned or operated by or rented or loaned to any insured." However, the definition of an "auto" specifically did not include "mobile equipment." The trial court found that the pickup truck was mobile equipment rather than an "auto" and therefore that the policy covered the claim, and the insurer appealed. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's factual finding that the vehicle was sufficiently modified and used in such a fashion as to transform it into "mobile equipment" rather than a standard pickup truck. The insurer therefore had a duty to defend the underlying lawsuit (72 Cal. App. 4th 1316, 1323-1324) .

In Amato v. Mercury Cas. Co. (1993) 18 Cal. App. 4th 1784, 1789, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d 73 , an insurer breached its duty to defend a permissive user who was sued by his mother-in-law for injuries resulting from an auto accident caused by the permissive user. Although the policy excluded liability coverage for bodily injury to a resident relative of an insured, which would exclude coverage for injury to the mother-in-law, the insurer possessed evidence suggesting that the insured permissive user did not reside with the mother-in-law. This information created a potential for coverage and triggered the duty to defend, even though the jury ultimately found that the two parties did in fact reside together.

In Smith Kandal Real Estate v. Continental Cas. Co. (1998) 67 Cal. App. 4th 406, 79 Cal. Rptr. 2d 52 , professional liability policies covered a licensed real estate broker partnership as the named insured. The policies covered claims against the partnership for negligence and errors or omissions in rendering or failing to render professional services as a real estate broker, agent, or salesperson, subject to specific exclusions in policy. "Exclusion O" excluded coverage for claims arising from the sale of any property owned by "any entity in which you have a [greater than 10 percent] financial interest." Another exclusion stated that the insurance did not apply to claims arising out of activities performed by or on behalf of Ventana Ranch, an enterprise in which one of the partners held a financial interest. In the underlying action plaintiffs brought a claim against the partnership acting as their real estate broker in the purchase of seven homes as part of a tax-deferred exchange of homes. They alleged that as the result of the partnership's negligence in structuring the sale, they lost the tax benefits they had sought by the exchange. The seller of the homes was Ventana Ranch. The insurer asserted that the exclusions mentioned above precluded coverage. The court of appeal reversed judgment in favor of the insurer, holding that the plaintiffs in the underlying action could potentially recover against the partnership by proving that the acts performed on their behalf were negligent, without proving that the negligent conduct was also designed or intended to benefit or be on behalf of Ventana Ranch. Because this potential exists, the insurer has a duty to provide a defense, regardless whether the Ventana Ranch exclusion ultimately provides grounds for the insurer to refuse to indemnify the partnership (67 Cal. App. 4th 406, 422) .

In Republic Indem. Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 224 Cal. App. 3d 492, 273 Cal. Rptr. 331 , the insurer sought a writ of mandate to overturn the trial court's order granting summary adjudication for the insured on the issue of the insurer's duty to defend an underlying wrongful termination action under an employer's liability policy. The court of appeal rejected the insurer's contention that Ins. Code § 533 precluded a duty to defend as a matter of law; the court held that an insurer is not absolved from the duty to defend, merely because indemnification for that conduct is forbidden by law or contract, and that the insurer is excused from defending anaction premised on willful conduct only if the policy expressly excludes that duty, or if the insured does not reasonably expect a defense (224 Cal. App. 3d 492, 497-498) . The court noted that it need not determine the insured's reasonable expectations in this case because the underlying action was not premised entirely on willful conduct, in that the third party could potentially recover from the insured on the basis of the insured's unreasonable, rather than willful, conduct (224 Cal. App. 3d 492, 501-502) .

Garriott Crop Dusting Co. v. Superior Court (1990) 221 Cal. App. 3d 783, 270 Cal. Rptr. 678 , arose from a third party action against the insured seeking damages for soil contamination on plaintiff's property. The third party purchased the property some 15 years after the insured allegedly contaminated the soil by polluting the water supply on adjacent property. The insured's current insurer brought a declaratory relief action against several parties, including several insurers under successive policies issued over the 15-year period. The trial court granted summary judgment in favor of the insurer that had a policy in force during the commission of the wrongful acts and ensuing damage, on the ground that the third party sustained no injury during the policy period. The court of appeal (granting the insured's petition for writ of mandate) vacated the summary judgment order, holding that that policy, which provided coverage for damages "caused by an occurrence," defined as "physical injury to or destruction of tangible property ... during the policy period," required that insurer to indemnify and defend the insured, despite that fact that the third party claimant did not own the property at the time of the occurrence (221 Cal. App. 3d 783, 793-795) .

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Eddy (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 958, 267 Cal. Rptr. 379 , a third party complaint alleged negligent and intentional torts arising from the defendant insured's transmission of a venereal disease. The insurer filed a declaratory relief action to determine its duty to indemnify and defend under the insured's homeowner's policy. The court of appeal reversed a summary judgment that the trial court had granted in favor of the insurer, holding that the insurer had a duty to defend based on its potential liability for the insured's negligent conduct (218 Cal. App. 3d 958, 965-966) .

In Sunseri v. Camperos Del Valle Stables, Inc. (1986) 185 Cal. App. 3d 559, 230 Cal. Rptr. 23 , the insurer refused to defend the insured in an action brought by an injured third party, who later obtained an assignment from the insured of rights against the insurer and then entered into a stipulated judgment with the insured. Subsequently, the third party brought an action against the insurer for the amount of the stipulated judgment, and the insurer filed a motion to set aside the stipulated judgment on grounds of fraud and collusion. The trial court denied the motion; the insurer appealed. The court of appeal affirmed, holding that the insurer bears a duty to defend its insured whenever it ascertains factsthat give rise to a potential of liability under the policy. The insurer's failure to bring a declaratory relief action, or to defend the action under a reservation of rights, rendered it susceptible to liability for the amount of the stipulated judgment between the insured and the third party (185 Cal. App. 3d 559, 561-562) .

In CNA Cas. of Cal. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276 , the court of appeal found that the factual allegations in the complaint against the insured created a potential for coverage under the policy, and concluded that a duty to defend therefore arose, notwithstanding that the allegations might have been unmeritorious (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 607-609) .

In Central Mutual Ins. Co. v. Del Mar Beach Club Owners Assn. (1981) 123 Cal. App. 3d 916, 176 Cal. Rptr. 895 , the court of appeal reversed a summary judgment in favor of plaintiff insurers in an action for a declaration of rights under liability insurance policies issued to defendants, developers of residential real property. The policies excluded coverage for various forms of product liability. The trial court held that the complaint in the underlying action alleged claims that were within the exclusions contained in the policies and that plaintiffs had no duty to defend. In reversing, the court of appeal held that a liberal reading of the complaint revealed additional claims that presented a potential for liability that was not subject to the exclusions and for which the insurers should have provided a defense (123 Cal. App. 3d 916, 928) .

[b] Insurer Ascertained Facts Giving Rise to Potential Liability

In CNA Cas. of Cal. v. Seaboard Sur. Co. (1986) 176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 222 Cal. Rptr. 276 , the court of appeal rejected the insurer's contention that the complaint's "Antitrust" title precluded any duty to defend. The court instead examined the factual allegations contained in the complaint, and concluded that because those allegations could have been the basis of recovery covered by the policy, a duty to defend arose (176 Cal. App. 3d 598, 607-609) .

[c] Insurer's Duty to Defend Is Broader Than Its Duty to Indemnify

In Food Pro Int'l, Inc. v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (2008) 169 Cal. App. 4th 976, 89 Cal. Rptr. 3d 1 , a food processing and distribution consulting firm tendered defense of a tort action to its insurer under a CGL policy. The underlying action arose when the insured's employee, acting in the capacity of a consultant during the process of relocating the client's food-processing plant to another city, noticed that an electrical contractor hired by the client disconnected the electrical system for a fruit extruder machine while leaving a large hole in the floor. The insured's employee apprised the client's mechanics so that they would address the problem. The mechanics covered the hole but did not secure the covering; and a week later the electrical contractor's foreman fell through the hole to the lower floor, although he had been aware of the hole when he was at the site the previous week. The CGL contained an exclusion entitled "Exclusion--Engineers, Architects or Surveyors Professional Liability," which the insurer contended applied to preclude a duty to defend. The trial court found for the insurer, holding that the bodily injury in the underlying action arose out of the insured's supervisory services, which was excluded. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the duty to defend is both separate from and broader than a duty to indemnify (169 Cal. App. 4th 976, 985) . The court construed the exclusion narrowly, noting that to do otherwise would render the CGL policy inapplicable to any incident that occurs while the insured is on a project site as an engineering consultant. Because the insured is an engineering firm, its general liability policy would be essentially useless. To prevail on a claim for breach of duty to defend, the insured need not prove coverage, but only the possibility of coverage at the time the claim is raised (169 Cal. App. 4th 976, 992) .

The factual background of Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322 , is discussed in § 120.50[4][a]. In affirming the judgment for plaintiff, the court of appeal said that if there is a doubt as to whether the insurer must defend, the doubt should be resolved in the insured's favor (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnificationInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsurancePersons InsuredThird Parties

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.51

§ 120.51 One of Several Causes of Action Alleged in Third-Party Complaint Was Covered by Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS OR WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE ONE OF SEVERAL CAUSES OF ACTION ALLEGED IN THE THIRD-PARTY COMPLAINT AGAINST THE INSURED IS COVERED BY THE POLICY.

A. One of Several Causes of Action Alleged in Third-Party Complaint Covered by Policy. If one of several causes of action alleged in the third-party complaint against the insured is covered by the policy, the insurer is bound to defend the action (Blackfield v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 271, 275, 53 Cal. Rptr. 838).

B. Obligation to Defend Extends to Entire Action Involving Covered and Uncovered Claims. If an insurer has a duty to defend, the obligation generally applies to the entire action, even though the suit involves both covered and uncovered claims or a single claim only partially covered by the policy (Presley Homes, Inc. v. American States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that at least one of several causes of action alleged in the third-party complaint against the insured is covered by the policy, and that if an insurer has a duty to defend, the obligation generally applies to the entire action, even though the suit involves both covered and uncovered claims.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would refer to the specific cause of action in the complaint in the third party action that is covered by the complaint. Reference to pleading should be clear enough to assist the court in locating the applicable cause of action, for example, "the Second Cause of Action of the Complaint, alleging negligence by Defendant Corporation."

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] One of Several Causes of Action Alleged in Third-Party Complaint Covered by Policy

Blackfield v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1966) 245 Cal. App. 2d 271, 53 Cal. Rptr. 838 , was an action by an insured, a builder and seller of tract homes, to determine whether defendant insurers were obligated to defend a third-party action against it. The third party (a husband and wife) had purchased one of the tract homes. They sued the insured for damages, alleging that the insured had so defectively constructed the foundation of their home and compacted the fill on which it was placed that the foundation had settled unevenly, causing the house to slant, thestucco portion of the house to crack, and the windows and sliding doors not to open or close properly. The complaint separately alleged seven theories of liability. The policy provisions in question were identical to those involved in Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 47 Cal. Rptr. 843 [see § 120.50[4][c]]. The trial court rendered judgment for plaintiff, and defendants appealed. The evidentiary record before the court of appeal consisted only of the second amended complaint filed in the third-party action, defendants' denial of coverage and refusal to defend, and the insurance policy.

The court of appeal modified the judgment to strike a paragraph relating to the issue of indemnity and affirmed the judgment, as modified. With respect to the duty to defend, the court pointed out that the parties agreed that the obligation to defend must be measured by comparing the allegations of the third-party's pleading with the terms of the insurance policy (245 Cal. App. 2d 271, 272). The court stated that if the allegations of the claimant's complaint would support a recovery on a risk covered by the insurer's policy, then the duty to defend is present (245 Cal. App. 2d 271, 274). The court held that at least one of the counts in the third-party complaint was for damage to those parts of the house that were not defective, and hence was damage apparently within the policy coverage. It found it unnecessary to review the remaining counts of that complaint, since the insurer is bound to defend the action if one of several causes of action alleged against the insured is covered by the policy (245 Cal. App. 2d 271, 275) .

[b] Obligation to Defend Extends to Entire Action Involving Covered and Uncovered Claims

In Presley Homes, Inc. v. American States Ins. Co. (2001) 90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 108 Cal. Rptr. 2d 686 , a real estate developer was named as an additional insured in two contractors' policies issued by the same insurer, pursuant to endorsements amending the policy definition of the term "insured." Home buyers sued the real estate developer for construction defects. The developer cross-complained for indemnity against several subcontractors, including the two contractors whose policies had included the developer as an additional insured. With respect to the home in question, the two contractors had provided only (1) concrete foundations, driveways, walkways, and stoops, and (2) rough carpentry (framing). The developer tendered the defense to the insurer, which agreed to share in the developer's defense, but denied having a duty to defend against all of the underlying claims. With respect to the framing contractor, the insurer proposed to retain separate counsel on the issues relevant to that contractor. The parties also discussed the possibility of the insurer's paying a percentage of the developer's defense costs based on the two contractors' work on the residence. When the parties failed to reach agreement, thedeveloper sent the insurer a letter demanding that it provide a "full and complete defense" and agree to reimburse the developer for attorney's fees and costs incurred. The insurer contended that it had a duty to defend the developer against only the claims relating to the two contractors' work. The third-party suit settled. Although the developer did not contribute to settlement, it did incur legal costs. The insurer settled the developer's indemnification claims for defense costs attributable to the two contractors' work. The developer sued the insurer seeking both damages and declaratory and injunctive relief. The insurer cross-complained against the developer for declaratory relief. Both parties moved for summary adjudication of issues. The trial court denied the developer's motion, granted the insurer's motion, and directed a judgment be entered for the insurer on each of the developer's causes of action. The insurer dismissed the cross-complaint, and the developer appealed the trial court's judgment.

The court of appeal reversed, noting that although the endorsements limited the coverage for the developer to "liability" arising from the insured contractors' work, nothing in either the policies or the endorsements limited the insurer's obligation to provide the developer with a defense. If an insurer has a duty to defend, the obligation generally applies to the entire action, even though the suit involves both covered and uncovered claims or a single claim only partially covered by the policy (90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 575) . Citing Buss v. Superior Court (1997) 16 Cal. 4th 35, 48-49, 65 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 939 P.2d 766 , the court further stated that an insurer's duty to defend the entire action is based on public policy, not the terms of the parties' contract (90 Cal. App. 4th 571, 576) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsurancePersons InsuredThird Parties

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.52

§ 120.52 Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THE COMPLAINT SUPPORTS AT LEAST PARTIAL LIABILITY UNDER THE POLICY.

Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy. If the complaint against the insured seeks recovery of damages on a liability covered by the policy, the duty to defend exists even though the insurer is not liable under its policy for all the damages sought (Hogan v. Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 553, 563, 91 Cal. Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer has a duty to defend because the complaint against the insured seeks recovery of damages on a liability covered by the policy, even though the insurer is not liable under its policy for all the damages sought.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel would refer to the specific causes of action in the complaint in the third party action that are covered by the complaint. Reference to pleading should be clear enough to assist the court in locating the applicable cause of action or causes of action (see, e.g., § 120.51[2][b]).

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

Hogan v. Midland Nat'l Ins. Co. (1970) 3 Cal. 3d 553, 91 Cal. Rptr. 153, 476 P.2d 825 , was an action by an insured's assignee against the insurer to recover the amount paid in satisfaction of a former judgment against the insured and the amount expended by the insured for attorneys' fees and costs in defending the third-party suit after defendant insurer had refused to defend. The insured was a manufacturer of wood processing machinery, including saws. One of its saws was purchased by the Kaufmans for use in their lumber business. The Kaufmans suffered substantial monetary loss because of defects in the saw and sued the insured. Judgment was rendered against the insured in the sum of $30,195.61, which included:

- $8,038.49 for lumber undercut by the saw,

- $7,850 for the cost of lumber deliberately overcut to prevent its rejection for undercutting and additional freight charges incident to the overcutting,

- $6,793.88 for wages and other expenses paid for periods when the saw failed to operate altogether, and

- $5,449.49 for the cost of leasing and cancelling the lease on a machine which was to be used in conjunction with the saw.

Also awarded were the cost of the saw and freight charges for shipping, but these items of damages were not involved in the action against the insurer. The policy provided that the insurer must pay all sums which the insured should become legally obligated to pay as damages because of injury to or destruction of property, including the loss of use thereof, caused by accident and arising out of defined hazards. Excluded was liability for repairing or replacing any defective products manufactured by the insured or any defective part thereof and for the loss of use of any such defective product or part thereof. The policy required the insurer to defend suits against the insured seeking damages within the policy's coverage. The trial court in the action against the insurer rendered judgment for plaintiff in the sum of $57,064.91, and the insured appealed

The Supreme Court reversed the judgment insofar as it allowed recovery for the deliberate overcutting of lumber and additional freight charges incident to the overcutting, the wages, and other expenses paid during the period the saw failed to operate, and the cost of leasing and cancelling the lease on the machine to be used in conjunction with the saw on the groundthese damages were not the result of an "accident" within the meaning of the policy (3 Cal. 3d 553, 560-563). However, the Court affirmed the judgment with respect to the undercut lumber, since that was the result of an "accident" within the meaning of the policy (3 Cal. 3d 553, 559-560). The Court also affirmed the award of attorneys' fees and costs in defending the third-party suit (3 Cal. 3d 553, 563-564) on the ground that the insurer was required to defend that action since the policy covered the damages suffered as a result of the undercutting (3 Cal. 3d 553, 561, 563) . The Court said that the rule is settled that an insurer is under a duty to defend a claim whenever the allegations of a complaint would support a recovery on a risk covered by the policy and that in the cases supporting the rule, various theories of recovery were asserted by the plaintiff, only one or more of which were within the coverage of the policy (3 Cal. 3d 553, 563) . The Court stated that the duty also existed in the present case since the complaint alleged facts bringing the action within the policy's coverage, that is, it alleged that the saw damaged the wood which it processed and that the damages were continuing in nature--which at least potentially asserted injury to property as the result of an accident (3 Cal. 3d 553, 563 n.7), although the proof at trial indicated that the insurer was not liable for some of the damages suffered by the third-party plaintiffs (3 Cal. 3d 553, 563) .

The Court, however, rejected plaintiff's argument that the insurer was liable for the full amount of the judgment in the third-party action because of its wrongful refusal to defend. The Court held that although the insurer was bound, in the absence of fraud or collusion, as to all material findings of fact essential to the judgment of liability of the insured in the third-party action, it was not bound by issues not adjudicated in the prior action, such as the scope of policy coverage (3 Cal. 3d 553, 564-565) .

It should be noted that the Court also rejected defendant's contention that the fees and costs in the third-party action should be apportioned (3 Cal. 3d 553, 563) and held that the insurer is liable for the total amount of the fees despite the fact that some of the damages recovered were outside policy coverage (3 Cal. 3d 553, 564) . The Court explained that, in its pragmatic aspect, any precise allocation of expenses in this context would be extremely difficult and, even if feasible, could be made only if the insurer produces "undeniable evidence" (see Bertero v. National Gen. Corp. (1974) 13 Cal. 3d 43, 63, 118 Cal. Rptr. 184, 529 P.2d 608) of the allocability of specific expenses. The insurer, having breached its contract to defend, should be charged with a heavy burden of proof of even partial freedom from liability for harm to the insured which ostensibly flowed from the breach (3 Cal. 3d 553, 564) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Third-Party Complaint Supports Partial Recovery Under Policy

The facts and procedural background of Eichler Homes, Inc. v. Underwriters at Lloyd's, London (1965) 238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 47 Cal. Rptr. 843 , are discussed in § 120.50[3][d]. The court of appeal affirmed the lower court's judgment. The court said that the insurer's obligation to defend must be measured by the terms of the insurance policy and the pleading of the claimant who sues the insured and that if the allegations of the claimant's complaint would support recovery on a covered risk, the duty to defend is present (238 Cal. App. 2d 532, 538) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingThird Party ClaimantsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsurancePersons InsuredThird Parties

39 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.53

§ 120.53 Insurer May Not Deny Recovery Without Investigating Facts

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THE INSURER DENIED RECOVERY WITHOUT FIRST INVESTIGATING THE FACTS ON WHICH THE CLAIM WAS BASED.

Insurer Breached Duty to Investigate Facts. An insurer may not, without making an investigation of any kind, deny an insured a defense at a time when it has reason to believe that there is potential liability under the policy and then rely on the results of the third-party action and subsequent factors to prove that there was, in reality, no potential for liability in the first instance (Mullen v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 173, 140 Cal. Rptr. 605).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that an insurer may not, without making an investigation of any kind, deny an insured a defense at a time when it has reason to believe that there is potential liability under the policy.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, in a case in which an insurer is attempting to rely on a third-party judgment against the insured based on willful misconduct to establish that there was a lack of potential liability at the time it denied defense of the third party action, counsel would refer to facts showing that the insurer was in possession of sufficient facts at the time it denied the defense to believe there was a potential liability under the policy.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Breached Duty to Investigate Facts

The facts and procedural background of Mullen v. Glens Falls Ins. Co. (1977) 73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 140 Cal. Rptr. 605 , are discussed in § 120.50[3][c]. In Mullen, the court of appeal reversed the judgment for defendant insurer. The court, quoting from Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 278, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 [discussed in § 120.50[3][b]], said that it could not accept the insurer's argument that the duty to defend dissolved simply because the insured was unsuccessful in his defense and because the injured party recovered on the basis of a finding of the assured's willful conduct (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 170, 174) .

The court held that an insurer may not, without making an investigation of any kind, deny an insured a defense at a time when it has reason to believe that there is a potential liability under the policy and then rely on the results of the third-party action and subsequent factors to prove that there was, in reality, no potential for liability in the first instance (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 173) . To hold otherwise, the court explained, would permit the insurer to refuse to defend its insured on the slightest provocation and then resort to hindsight for the justification, and this would thus force the insured to finance his or her own investigation and defense of the lawsuit and then seek reimbursement in a second lawsuit against the insurance company. This, in turn, could not only impose an undue financial burden on the persons who have purchased insurance protection, but it could deprive them of the expertise and resources available to insurance carriers in making prompt and competent investigations as to the merits of lawsuits filed against their insureds (73 Cal. App. 3d 163, 173-174) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.54

§ 120.54 Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THAT DUTY IS ESTABLISHED WHEN, AS REQUIRED BY LAW, THE POLICY'S EXCLUSIONARY CLAUSE IS CONSTRUED IN FAVOR OF THE INSURED.

Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured. Any ambiguity in an insurance policy is to be resolved against the insurer, and the language of an exclusionary clause must be construed liberally in favor of the insured (Crane v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 112, 115-116, 95 Cal. Rptr. 513, 485 P.2d 1129 ; Morris v. Atlas Assurance Co. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 12-13, 204 Cal. Rptr. 95).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that any ambiguity in an insurance policy is to be resolved against the insurer.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to a specific portion of the policy that is ambiguous, making reference to any appropriate paragraph or clause number to assist the court.

- Describe how the clause is susceptible of interpretation in favor of a duty to defend.

- Conclude that under Crane v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 112, 115-116, 95 Cal. Rptr. 513, 485 P.2d 1129 , any ambiguity in an insurance policy is to be resolved against the insurer.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

Crane v. State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. (1971) 5 Cal. 3d 112, 95 Cal. Rptr. 513, 485 P.2d 1129 , involved construction of the exclusionary language in a homeowner's policy. The mother of a minor injured in the home of defendant's insured brought an action for declaratory relief. The insured provided child care services for plaintiff's two daughters in her home for minimal compensation ($25 per week plus groceries). Because the insured had children of her own, while she cared for plaintiff's children she was simultaneously supervising her own. The trial court ruled for defendant insurer and the plaintiff appealed.

The Supreme Court reversed. The exclusionary clause provided that coverage did not apply "to any business pursuits of an Insured, other than activities therein which are ordinarily incident to non-business pursuits." Noting that reasonable doubt as to uncertain language must be resolved against the insurer and that exclusionary language must be conspicuous, plain, and clear, and is to be construed strictly against the insurer, the Court found that at the time of the accident the insured was engaged in an activity "ordinarily incident to non-business pursuits" and that the claim was therefore covered (5 Cal. 3d 112, 115-116) .

In Morris v. Atlas Assurance Co. (1984) 158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 204 Cal. Rptr. 95 , the court of appeal reversed the decision as to one of the insurers. The court noted that although personal liability clauses in a homeowner's policy usually apply to accidents incident to the home, they are construed by the courts to apply to all personal liability not falling within specific exclusions (158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 13) . The exclusion here covered "business pursuits of any kind conducted by any person on premises." The policy defined premises to included "out-buildings incidental" to the main dwelling (158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 15) . The court ruled that the restaurant was not "incidental" to the dwelling in the sense that it was not dependent on or related to the principal use of the residence (158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 16) . Because the business exclusion was limited to business conducted on the insured premises, the policy covered the claim at issue. The court rejected the insurer's argument that the doctrine of reasonable expectations precluded coverage, stating that the doctrine only is applicable when there exists an ambiguity which defies interpretation (158 Cal. App. 3d 8, 16-17) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusionary Clause Must Be Liberally Construed in Favor of Insured

In Meraz v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (2001) 92 Cal. App. 4th 321, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 804 , the plaintiff was injured after pouring gasoline into the carburetor of a nonoperating van that was used only as toolshed and parked on the insured's property. In an assigned action brought by the plaintiff against the homeowner's policy carrier for breach of contract and bad faith after the carrier denied coverage, the trial court granted summary judgment for the insurer, based on application of the motor vehicle exclusion. The court of appeal reversed, holding that the exception to the motor vehicle exclusion for a vehicle not subject to motor vehicle registration and used only on an insured location might apply. The court stated that coverage exclusions and limitations are strictly construed against the insurer and liberally interpreted in favor of the insured (92 Cal. App. 4th 321, 324-327) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsConstruction Against InsurersInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusions

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.55

§ 120.55 Potential Liability Is Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THE INSURER'S POTENTIAL LIABILITY IS NOT CONCLUSIVELY REFUTED BY THE FACTS.

Potential Liability Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts. An insurance carrier may escape its presumptive obligation to defend its insured against claims arguably covered by its policy only if undisputed facts conclusively refute any potential for liability (Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 287, 299-300, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467, 861 P.2d 1153).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that an insurance carrier may escape its presumptive obligation to defend itsinsured against claims arguably covered by its policy only if undisputed facts conclusively refute any potential for liability.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, if the insurer has asserted facts whichit contends refutes any potential for liability, counsel would refer to other facts that dispute those asserted by the insurer, and point out that the insurer has not, therefore, conclusively refuted any potential for liability.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Potential Liability Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

In Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 287, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467, 861 P.2d 1153 , an insured brought a declaratory relief action to compel its insurers to defend it in an underlying third-party lawsuit alleging that the insured was liable for pollution cleanup costs under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) (42 U.S.C.S. § 9607 et seq.). The insured moved for summary judgment, arguing that under Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 [discussed in § 120.50[3][b]], it was entitled as a matter of law to have the insurers defend the underlying CERCLA action because the allegations of the complaint created a potential for liability under the CGL policies. The insurer argued that extrinsic evidence raised a triable issue of fact on the existence of liability; specifically, whether the damage resulted from the insured's deliberate management practices rather than from an accident or occurrence. In denying the insured's summary judgment motion, the trial court ruled that the insured could not simply rely on the allegations of the complaint, which the opinion characterized as "neutral" regarding whetherthe alleged contamination was caused by covered or noncovered activities. The trial court ruled that (1) absent an affirmative evidentiary showing that the contamination resulted from an accident or occurrence within the meaning of the policies, the insured could not show a potential for coverage; and (2) the insurers had adduced extrinsic evidence creating a triable issue of fact as to whether the CERCLA complaint alleged acts within the policy's coverage (6 Cal. 4th 287, 293-294) . The insured sought a writ in the court of appeal.

The Court of Appeal issued a writ of mandate ordering the trial court to set aside and reconsider its order. While agreeing with the insurers that facts extrinsic to the underlying complaint may defeat as well as trigger a duty to defend, the court concluded that the insurers' extrinsic evidence did no more than put in dispute whether the acts alleged in the underlying complaint would come within one or more exceptions to the coverage. The court concluded that such a dispute could not defeat the potential for coverage that the insured had established and so could not eliminate the duty to defend. The Supreme Court granted review.

The Supreme Court affirmed the judgment of the court of appeal. The Court held that evidence extrinsic to the complaint may defeat as well as trigger an insurer's duty to defend, when the issue of coverage can be determined as a matter of law on undisputed facts (6 Cal. 4th 287, 296, 298-299) . However, in this case the evidence offered by the insurers simply created a dispute as to whether the insured's actions were intentional and therefore not an "occurrence" under the liability policy, and did not defeat the potential for coverage (6 Cal. 4th 287, 299-300) . The Court further held that although the allegations in the underlying CERCLA complaint were neutral as to coverage (in that they did not specify whether the insured's conduct was negligent or intentional), by alleging that the insured caused environmental contamination, the complaint sufficiently raised the possibility that the insured could be liable for property damage covered by the policy (6 Cal. 4th 287, 304-305) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Potential Liability Not Conclusively Refuted by Undisputed Facts

In Haskel, Inc. v. Superior Court (1995) 33 Cal. App. 4th 963, 39 Cal. Rptr. 2d 520 , the court ruled that a trial court could not delay consideration of an insured's motion for summary judgment on the issue of the duty to defend until after the conclusion of discovery. The trial court had granted the defendant insurers' ex parte request to have the insured's summary judgment motion taken off calendar after the insurers claimed they could not file an opposition to the motion until the insured hadresponded to all their discovery requests. The court of appeal reversed, ruling that the insured had right to have the duty to defend issue adjudicated. Discovery was irrelevant because an insurer's defense obligation turns on those facts known by the insurer at the inception of the underlying lawsuit. If the claims asserted in the underlying action raise a potential for coverage, the insurer has a duty to defend the insured upon tender of the claims, unless and until it produces in court undisputed extrinsic evidence conclusively establishing that there was no potential for coverage (33 Cal. App. 4th 963, 976-977) .

The court said that the insurer is either aware of such evidence at the time of tender or not; it does not need discovery to determine the existence of that evidence. The court observed that the insurers' unstated proposition was, in effect, that they should be permitted to delay adjudication of their defense obligation until they developed sufficient evidence to retroactively justify their refusal to defend (33 Cal. App. 4th 963, 977) . This, in the court's view, was contrary to the principles in Montrose Chem. Corp. v. Superior Court (1993) 6 Cal. 4th 287, 24 Cal. Rptr. 2d 467, 861 P.2d 1153 [see § 120.55 [3][a]]. The court also held that the insured was entitled to a stay of discovery on issues that would prejudice its defense of the underlying action (33 Cal. App. 4th 963, 978-980) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsAllegations in ComplaintsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.56

§ 120.56 Duty to Defend Is Implied, and Not Expressly Excluded, in Contract

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THE INSURER'S DUTY TO DEFEND IS IMPLIED IN THE INSURANCE POLICY, AND THE POLICY DOES NOT EXPLICITLY EXCLUDE THE DUTY TO DEFEND.

A. Policy Does Not Explicitly Exclude Implied Duty to Defend. The law imposes an implied obligation to defend when it is not expressly and clearly omitted from the particular risk. If the exclusion is unclear or uncertain, and coverage is reasonably to be expected by the insured, the obligation will be implied by law and included as part of the agreement (Interstate Fire & Cas. Co. v. Stuntman, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 203, 205) .

B. Policy Does Not Explicitly Waive Implied Duty to Defend. An insurer's implied duty to defend may only be waived by anexplicit provision to that effect (Interstate Fire & Cas. Co. v. Stuntman, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 203, 205) .

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the policy does not explicitly exclude the duty to defend from the particular risk. Therefore, the duty to defend is implied in the absence of an express waiver [see Interstate Fire & Cas. Co. v. Stuntman, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 203, 205 ; see also § 120.56[3][a]]].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should refer to particular provisions of the policy to show that the policy does not clearly omit a duty to defend with respect to the particular risk involved, and point out the absence of any express waiver by insured of that duty.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Does Not Explicitly Exclude Implied Duty to Defend

In Interstate Fire & Cas. Co. v. Stuntman, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 203 , an excess insurer of a stunt-performing company brought a declaratory relief action in federal district court to determine the existence of its duty to defend and indemnify the insured regarding an underlying action brought by an injured stunt performer. In the underlying action, the multimillion-dollar damages award was appealed, and at the time of the declaratory relief action, the possibility remained that liability could exceed primary insurance coverage or benefits. The district court granted summary judgment for the insured. With regard to the duty to indemnify, the district court construed the relevant coverage and exclusion clauses to allow coverage for only certain damages (ordering supplemental hearings in the district court to determine that portion of the damages awarded). With regard to the duty to defend the policy provided in relevant part that "[t]he insured shall be responsible for the investigation, settlement or defense of any claim made or suit brought or proceeding instituted against the insured which no underlying insurer is obligated to defend." It also provided that "[t]he [insurance] company shall have the right and shall be given the opportunity to associate with the insured or its underlying insurers, or both, in the defense and control of any claim, suit or proceeding which involves or appears reasonably likely to involve the company." The district court held that the insurer had a duty to defend the insured on the exhaustion of the insured's primary insurance. The insurer appealed.

The federal court of appeals affirmed, holding that the insurer had an implied duty to defend, which had not been waived. The court rejected the insurer's argument that the policy established only an optional duty to defend. The court noted that, under California law, an insurer's implied duty to defend may not be waived absent an explicit provision to that effect. The law imposes an implied obligation to defend when it is not expressly and clearly omitted from the particular risk. If the exclusion is unclear oruncertain, and coverage is reasonably to be expected by the insured, the obligation will be implied by law and included as part of the agreement (861 F.2d 203, 205) . The insurer cited authority for the holding that the excess insurer does not have a duty to defend. However, in the case on which the insurer relied, the relevant policy provision contained the following language: "[The insurer] shall not be obligated to assume charge of the settlement or defense of any claim or suit brought or proceeding instituted against the Insured, but [the insurer] shall have the right to and be given the opportunity to associate with the insured in the defense or control of any claim, suit or proceeding which appears reasonably likely to involve [the insurer]" (emphasis added).

The court rejected the application of that authority to the instant case, because the policy before it contained no explicit reservation of rights such as that italicized in the quotation above. In contrast, the provision in question refers to claims in which "no underlying insurer is obligated to defend," but does not mention situations such as this one, in which an underlying insurer's initial obligation to defend has been exhausted. In addition, the reservation of rights provision permits the insurer to associate with the insured in the defense and control of any claim "which involves or appears reasonably likely to involve the company." The court held that this language certainly applies to a situation such as the one before it, in which the primary insurance policy limits may well have been reached, and the excess insurance policy triggered (861 F.2d 203, 206) .

[b] Policy Does Not Explicitly Waive Implied Duty to Defend

The factual and procedural background of Interstate Fire & Cas. Co. v. Stuntman, Inc. (9th Cir. 1988) 861 F.2d 203 are discussed in § 120.56[3][a]. The court noted that an exclusion in an insurance policy must be conspicuous, plain, and clear, and that ambiguities are construed against the insurer. The court stated that the fact that the insurer used a standard policy form does not excuse the existence of the ambiguities in the insured's contract. The court also noted that it would have been a simple matter to amend the standard language to state clearly that the insurer and insured agree that the insurer is not required to defend any claim. The court concluded that the policy's reservation of rights provision was not sufficiently explicit to put the insured on notice that the insurer had no duty to defend in this case (861 F.2d 203, 206) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationAmbiguous TermsConstruction Against InsurersInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusionsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.57

§ 120.57 Duty to Defend Extends to Prosecuting Appeal of Adverse Judgment

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO PROSECUTE THE APPEAL OF THE ADVERSE JUDGMENT IN THE ACTION BECAUSE THERE WERE REASONABLE GROUNDS FOR APPEAL, AND THE INSURER'S DUTY TO DEFEND EXTENDS TO PROSECUTING AN APPEAL.

Insurer Has Duty to Appeal Adverse Judgment. An insurer is obliged to pursue an appeal on behalf of its insured if there are reasonable grounds for appeal, and the policy does not provide that the insurer need not do so (Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1490-1492, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer has wrongfully refused to appeal an underlying judgment against the insured, when reasonable grounds for appeal existed, and the policy did not provide that the insurer need not do so [see Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1490-1492, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7 ; see also § 120.57[3][a]].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should refer to specific clauses in the policy that either expressly require the insurer to bring an appeal of an adverse judgment under the circumstances, or point out that the policy does not expressly preclude that duty, and the policy language otherwise supports a finding of that duty.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Has Duty to Appeal Adverse Judgment

In Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7 , an insured brought an action against the insurer seeking declaratory relief and damages for bad faith, arising from the insurer's failure to bring an appeal of an underlying judgment against the insured. Plaintiff, a housing contractor, purchased a series of primary and excess liability insurance policies from various insurers, including two successive $300,000 policies from defendant, covering a housing development that he constructed. Subsidence problems, causing substantial structural damage to the homes, began to occur shortly after the buyers moved in, and several homeowners sued the insured in two actions. Defendant insurer ultimately provided a defense after initially refusing to do so. Before trial, the insurer settled a portion of the claims against the insured; following trial on the remaining claims, a jury rendered an aggregate judgment of $716,000 against the insured.

The trial court entered judgment against the insured in the total sum of $761,000, which included an indemnity claim on a cross complaint. The insurer filed an interpleader action and deposited $383,000 with the court, consisting of the $375,000 remaining policy limits plus interest. During the trial, the attorney provided by the insurer to represent the insured stated that several of the rulings made by the trial court provided grounds for appeal. However, after the verdict was returned, the insurer declined to appeal because of the cost of obtaining a trial transcript. The insured retained his own counsel to defend the interpleader action and to appeal the indemnity judgment, which was reversed on appeal. The insured sued the insurer, and was awarded $500,000 in compensatory damages and $2,500,000 in punitive damages after a jury trial. The insurer appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that under the policy, the duty to defend included the duty to appeal when reasonable grounds for an appeal exist (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1491) . The court rejected defendant's claim of error in the jury instructions concerning its duty to appeal either or both of the judgments entered against the insured in the homeowners' lawsuits. The challenged instruction stated that one element that the plaintiff was required to prove was that defendant refused to appeal either of the judgments, knowing there were reasonable grounds for appeal. The trial court had also instructed the jury that defendant's good-faith belief that it had no duty to prosecute an appeal after exhaustion of its policy limits is a proper cause for refusing to pay the costs of appeal, provided defendant's interpretation of its insurance contract was not unreasonable (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1488) . The court observed that the duty to defend is broader than the duty to indemnify, and continues until a judgment has been entered and has become final. An insurer may not escape the duty by paying its policy limits and then abandoning its insured. The duty to defend may include the duty to appeal when reasonable grounds for an appeal exist. Defendant, relying on Johnson v. Continental Ins. Companies (1988) 202 Cal. App. 3d 477, 248 Cal. Rptr. 412 , contended that by interpleading its policy limits it had avoided its duty to appeal.

The court disagreed, distinguishing Johnson in that the insurer in that case, unlike defendant, paid the policy limits within two weeks of the insured's demand. The insurer in Johnson had no further duty to defend when, six months after it paid the policy limits, the insured filed a products liability action and certain defendants initiated cross actions against her. By contrast, defendant in this case never paid the policy limits, choosing instead to interplead the policy limits some four years after the insured's demand, leaving plaintiff subject to liability for the amount of any excess judgment. The court noted that the defendant's own counsel believed the indemnity judgment to be erroneous and subject to appeal. The defendant's refusal to follow its own attorney's advice, which left plaintiff tofinance his appeal personally, was evidence of bad faith. The extent of defendant's duty to appeal was not clear from its policy, which provided that defendant would pay premiums on appeal bonds, but was not required to apply for or to furnish such bonds. The court found the effect of that provision to be ambiguous (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1490) .

However, the court held that the duty to appeal is not precluded by contract unless the contract very specifically exempts the insurer from the duty to appeal. The court noted that there is a diversity of opinion regarding whether an insurer is obligated to prosecute an appeal from an adverse judgment, although there is no California case directly on point. The court concluded that there is a general consensus in other jurisdictions that an insurer is obliged to pursue an appeal on behalf of its insured when there are reasonable ground for appeal (citing Cathay Mortuary (Wah Sing), Inc. v. United Pacific Ins. Co. (N.D. Cal. 1984) 582 F. Supp. 650, 655) (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1491) . The court noted that the trial court did not instruct the jury that defendant had a duty to appeal under all circumstances. Rather, the jury was told that plaintiff had the burden of proving that the defendant refused to appeal when there were reasonable grounds to do so; and that instruction was correct (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1491-1492) . Additionally, the court noted that the basis of the finding that defendant breached its duty of good faith was the insurer's failure to consider in good faith whether to appeal (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1492 n.1).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.58

§ 120.58 The Policy Does Not Explicitly Preclude Duty to Appeal

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE NO EXPLICIT POLICY LANGUAGE PRECLUDES THE DUTY TO APPEAL.

The Policy Does Not Explicitly Preclude Duty to Appeal. The duty to appeal is not precluded by contract unless the contract very specifically exempts the insurer from that duty (Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of North America (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1491, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer has wrongfully refused to appeal an underlying judgment against the insured, because the policy did not provide that the insurer need not prosecute an appeal.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel should show that the policy either expressly requires the insurer to bring an appeal of an adverse judgment under the circumstances, or that the policy does not expressly preclude that duty, and the policy language supports a finding of that duty.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] The Policy Does Not Explicitly Preclude Duty to Appeal

Jenkins v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1990) 220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 272 Cal. Rptr. 7 , is discussed in § 120.57[3][a]. The court stated that the duty to appeal is not precluded by contract unless the contract very specifically exempts the insurer from the duty to appeal (220 Cal. App. 3d 1481, 1491) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.59

§ 120.59 Insurer Not Exonerated When Conduct Was Mere Negligence

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [IS or WAS] BOUND TO DEFEND THE ACTION BECAUSE THE LOSS RESULTED FROM INSURED'S NEGLIGENCE AT MOST, NOT FROM ANY WILLFUL ACT.

Insurer Is Not Exonerated From Liability for Insured's Negligence. An insurer is not exonerated from liability under its policy by the negligence of the insured or his or her agent (Ins. Code § 533; see also Nuffer v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 358-360, 45 Cal. Rptr. 918).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the act of the insured on which the insurer relies constituted negligence at most.

These points and authorities may be submitted in various procedural contexts. For example, it may be submitted:

- By a plaintiff-insured, in an action by the insured under a liability policy for damages for wrongful refusal to defend the insured in athird-party action, or under a casualty policy for wrongful refusal to pay the loss, or

- By the third-party judgment creditor of the insured under a liability policy in an action to recover the amount of the judgment up to the policy limit [see Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2)].

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see § 120.50 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.30 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.50[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. For example, counsel may point out that opposing counsel has failed to meet his or her burden of establishing that the conduct of the insured amounted to willful conduct.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Is Not Exonerated From Liability for Insured's Negligence

In Downey Savings & Loan Assn. v. Ohio Casualty Ins. Co. (1987) 189 Cal. App. 3d 1072, 234 Cal. Rptr. 835 , a savings and loan association brought an action against its insurer for breach of contract and bad faith resulting from the insurer's failure to indemnify the association in its defense regarding an employee's dishonest act. The trial court refused to instruct the jury about the association's purported negligence in failing to mitigate its damages. The court of appeal affirmed, noting that even if the association's conduct constituted negligence, it would not have exonerated the insurer because an insurer is not exonerated by the negligence of the insured, the insured's agents, or others, pursuant to Ins. Code § 533 (189 Cal. App. 3d 1072, 1095) .

Ins. Code § 533 provides that an insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured, but he or she is not exonerated by the negligence of the insured, or of the insured's agents or others.

Nuffer v. Insurance Co. of N. Am. (1965) 236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 45 Cal. Rptr. 918 , was an action to recover under fire insurance policies covering a hotel destroyed by fire. The origin of the fire was in a basement corridor where several pieces of furniture were stacked up. Defendants denied liability on the ground that the fire resulted from the willful acts of the insured and his agent, consisting, among other things, of having failed to have installed a sprinkler system. From a judgment on a directed verdict for plaintiff, defendant appealed, contending that the insured's failure to install a sprinkler system was a willful act within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533 and that had the area where the fire originated been equipped with a sprinkler system as required by statute, the fire could have been confined to that area and the loss would have been negligible. The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. It said, after quoting the provisions on Ins. Code § 533, that a determinative issue was whether the insured's failure to equip the hotel basement with a sprinkler system was a willful act within the meaning of that section, as distinguished from a negligent act (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 358) . The court pointed out that a willful act as that term is used in Ins. Code § 533, connotes something more blameworthy than the sort of misconduct involved in ordinary negligence and something more than the mere intentional doing of an act constituting such negligence (236 Cal. App. 2d 349, 359) . It held that the insured's failure to install a sprinkler system in the basement corridor, even though assumed to be a technical violation of the statute sufficient to support afinding of negligence, did not amount to willful misconduct and would not have supported a finding of the willful act contemplated by Ins. Code § 533.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.60

§ 120.60 Commercial General Liability Policy Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Not Limited to Tort Damages

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief].

THE COMMERCIAL GENERAL LIABILITY INSURANCE POLICY THAT IS AT ISSUE IN THIS ACTION, PROVIDING COVERAGE FOR SUMS THE INSURED IS "LEGALLY OBLIGATED TO PAY AS DAMAGES," IS NOT CATEGORICALLY LIMITED TO DAMAGES SOUNDING IN TORT. INSTEAD, COVERAGE IS DETERMINED BY THE NATURE OF THE DAMAGE AND THE RISK INVOLVED, IN LIGHT OF ALL RELEVANT POLICY PROVISIONS.

Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums That Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Not Categorically Limited to Tort Damages. A commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that the insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" is not categorically limited to damages sounding in tort. Instead, coverage is determined by the nature of the damage and the risk involved, in light of all relevant policy provisions (Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 839, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's contention that a commercial general liability insurance policy providing coverage for sums that the insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages" is categorically limited to damages sounding in tort.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of the case. For example, counsel should set forth the relevant policy provisions and show that the type of damages sought is not precluded under the policy. Counsel should also argue that the nature of the damages and the risk involved, in light of all relevant policy provisions, rather than the theory of recovery chosen by the third party, controls (see Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 839, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229).

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument with respect to all issues and to place the argument within its proper procedural context.

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For discussion relating to insurance liability policies, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance , Part I, Subpart E.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial General Liability Insurance Policy Providing Coverage for Sums Insured Is "Legally Obligated to Pay as Damages" Not Categorically Limited to Tort Damages

In Vandenberg v. Superior Court (1999) 21 Cal. 4th 815, 88 Cal. Rptr. 2d 366, 982 P.2d 229 , the insured was a lessee of land that he had used for several decades as an automobile sales and service facility. When the owners took possession of the land to sell it, they discovered contamination of the soil and groundwater. The landowners sued the insured, alleging causes of action for breach of contract, breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing, public and private nuisance, negligence, waste, trespass, strict liability, equitable indemnity, declaratory relief, and injunctive relief, based on the insured's alleged installation and operation of waste oil storage tanks that caused petroleum contamination. A settlement between the plaintiff, the defendant, and the sole insurer that agreed to provide a defense disposed of all claims except those based on the theory that the contamination constituted a breach of the lease agreement. The parties agreed to resolve those claims through binding arbitration. Although the insurer agreed to provide a defense, it reserved the ultimate issues of coverage and indemnity for further resolution (21 Cal. 4th 815, 826) . Following the arbitrator's ruling for the plaintiff, all of the insurers rejected the insured's request for indemnification, and the insured then sued the insurers for failure to defend, settle, or indemnify. All the insurers sought summary judgment on the basis that the arbitrator awarded damages forbreach of lease, a contractual cause of action, and that contractual damages were not covered by the policies. The trial court granted that motion, but the court of appeal reversed. The court of appeal ruled that coverage under the insurance policies could not be determined by the "general rule" that damages for an insured's nonperformance of a contract are not covered under commercial general liability (CGL) policies (21 Cal. 4th 815, 827) .

The California Supreme Court granted review. The insurers contended that CGL policies limiting coverage to amounts that the insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages," or using similar language, refer to tort liability and not contract liability. The Court held that the long line of cases so holding misread the seminal case of Ritchie v. Anchor Cas. Co. (1955) 135 Cal. App. 2d 245, 286 P.2d 1000 , which held that the phrase "liability imposed by law" as used in that policy related to the nature of the liability to be defended rather than the result of the lawsuit. In Ritchie, the phrase "liability imposed ... by written contract" occurred in one coverage provision, but not in the coverage provision in question. Subsequent cases erroneously generalized that the phrase "damages for a liability imposed by law" uniformly refers to a liability arising ex delicto as distinguished from ex contractu (21 Cal. 4th 815, 839) . The Supreme Court held that policy language limiting coverage to amounts the insured is "legally obligated to pay as damages," does not necessarily refer to tort liability, to the exclusion of a claim that involves a contract. The Court stated that the nature of the damages and the risk involved, in light of particular policy provisions, control coverage. Coverage is determined not by the injured's party's choice of remedy, or the form of action, but rather by the nature of the risk and injury in question (21 Cal. 4th 815, 838-841) . In so holding, the Court disapproved a line of appellate cases that held that the phrase "legally obligated to pay as damages" in this context uniformly referred to a liability arising ex delicto as distinguished from ex contractu. These cases erroneously established an arbitrary distinction between tort and contract damages, categorically precluding coverage pleaded on a theory of breach of contract (21 Cal. 4th 815, 839-841) . The Court noted that the same act ay constitute both a breach of contract and a tort. The coverage agreement that embraces "all sums [that] the insured shall become legally obligated to pay as damages ..." is intentionally broad enough to include the insured's obligation to pay damages for breach of contract as well as for tort, within limitations imposed by other terms of the coverage agreement (for example, bodily injury and property damage as defined, caused by an occurrence) and by the exclusions. The Court therefore affirmed the court of appeal (21 Cal. 4th 815, 840-841) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageDamagesInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
1. General Exclusions

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.61-120.69

[Reserved]

§§ 120.61[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.70

§ 120.70 User of Vehicle Was Excluded From Coverage Under Policy

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

THE OPERATOR OF THE INSURED'S CAR WAS EXPRESSLY EXCLUDED [BY NAME] FROM COVERAGE UNDER THE POLICY.

Exclusion of Named Person From Coverage. An insurer and any named insured may, by the terms of any automobile liability insurance policy issued or delivered in California or by a separate writing, agree that coverage and the insurer's obligation to defend under the policy shall not apply or accrue to the benefit of any insured or any third-party claimant while any insured motor vehicle is being used or operated by a natural person or persons designated by name, and that agreement is binding on every insured to whom the policy applies and on every third-party claimant (Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1); Hitchcock v. Mercury Ins. Co. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 303, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681 ; Associated Indem. Corp. v. King (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 470, 472-474, 109 Cal. Rptr. 190).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that the user of a vehicle was excluded from coverage under the insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the operator of the insured's car was expressly excluded from coverage under the policy.

This form may be used, for example, in an action against the insurer for damages for breach of its alleged duty under a motor vehicle liability policy to defend an action brought against the operator of the insured's vehicle or to indemnify the user on the judgment entered. These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the driver of the insured vehicle [see § 120.71 et seq.].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summaryjudgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

It should be noted that in some instances Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1) will require the insurer to defend the named insured (see Safeco Ins. Co. v. Gilstrap (1983) 141 Cal. App. 3d 524, 190 Cal. Rptr. 425).

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to the specific portion of the policy that excludes the driver of the insured vehicle, and

- Argue that under the policy, therefore, the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of that driver's operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of Named Person From Coverage

Ins. Code § 11580.1(d) provides, in pertinent part, that notwithstanding the provisions of Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4) (requiring coverage for permissive users) or of Veh. Code §§ 16450-16457 and 17150-17159 (relating to insurance policies under the Financial Responsibility Law and civil liability, respectively), the insurer and any named insured may, by the terms of any automobile liability insurance policy to which Ins. Code § 11580.1(a) applies, or by a separate writing relating to it, agree that coverage and the insurer's obligation to defend under the policy shall not apply or accrue to the benefit of any insured or any third-party claimant while any insured motor vehicle is being used or operated by a natural person or persons designated by name and that such agreement is binding on every insured to whom the policy applies and on every third-party claimant. Ins. Code § 11580.1(d) further provides that the agreement shall remain in force as long as the policy remains in force and shall apply to any continuation, renewal, or replacement of such policy by the named insured, or reinstatement of such policy made within 30 days of any lapse thereof.

Ins. Code § 11580.1(a) applies to automobile liability insurance policies issued or delivered in California after January 1, 1971.

Ins. Code § 11580.1(d) further provides, however, that the insurer shall be obligated to defend the named insured when all of the following apply to the designated natural person:

(1) He or she is a resident of the same household as the named insured;

(2) As a result of operating the insured motor vehicle of the named insured, he or she is jointly sued with the named insured; and

(3) He or she is an insured under a separate automobile liability policy issued to him as a named insured, which policy does not provide a defense to the named insured.

In Hitchcock v. Mercury Ins. Co. (1997) 54 Cal. App. 4th 303, 62 Cal. Rptr. 2d 681 , after plaintiff and her fiance, the registered owners of an automobile insured by defendant, were involved in an automobile accident while plaintiff was driving, and plaintiff's fiance filed a personal injury action against her, which defendant refused to defend or indemnify, based on policy provisions specifically excluding coverage for bodily injury claimsbrought by an "insured," defined as all persons "legally responsible" for the car (Ins. Code § 11580.1(c)(5)), the trial court granted summary judgment for defendant in plaintiff's breach of contract action against it.

The Court of Appeal affirmed, holding that the trial court properly granted summary judgment for defendant since under Veh. Code § 17150, a vehicle owner who knowingly lends his or her car to another person is legally responsible for damages occurring during its use (54 Cal. App. 4th 303, 304) . It was undisputed that plaintiff's fiance was a registered owner of the car, and that plaintiff was driving it with his permission at the time of the accident. The fiance was therefore deemed "legally responsible" and fell within the definition of an "insured." Insurance carriers are not precluded from relying on existing law in interpreting statutorily imposed definitions (54 Cal. App. 4th 303, 303-304) . The legislature's later amendment of Ins. Code § 11580.1, former subd. (b)(4), to delete the phrase "legally responsible" from the definition of "persons insured" could not be viewed as a statement of public policy which could be applied retroactively (54 Cal. App. 4th 303, 304) .

Associated Indem. Corp v. King (1973) 33 Cal. App. 3d 470, 109 Cal. Rptr. 190 , was a declaratory relief action by an insurer seeking a determination of its rights and liabilities under an automobile liability insurance policy issued by the insurer to defendant Price. Joined as additional defendants were Price's son, Michael, the third-party claimants, and the latter's insurer as subrogee of their claims against the Prices. The policy covered three cars owned by defendant Price but contained the following restrictive endorsement: "Except as respects Fire, Theft and Comprehensive; no insurance is afforded by the policy to the named insured or any other insured while any automobile is being operated or driven by any of the following persons: Michael Lawrence Price." While the policy was in effect, one of the cars, while being driven by Michael, collided with a car occupied by the third-party claimants. Plaintiff insurer denied coverage and the third-party claimants' insurer paid the claimants $19,000 and expended $2,280.30 in attorney's fees and costs, pursuant to the uninsured motorist coverage contained in their policy. The third-party claimants sued the Prices. The trial court in the declaratory relief action determined that plaintiff insurer had no duty to indemnify its insured, or defend the third-party action, or to reimburse the third-party claimants' insurer on the ground that the restrictive covenant was valid and effectively limited plaintiff's liability.

The court of appeal affirmed the judgment. The court pointed out that Ins. Code § 11580.1(d) authorized the limitation on coverage (33 Cal. App. 3d 470, 473) and, declining to follow Abbott v. Interinsurance Exch. (1968) 260 Cal. App. 2d 528, 67 Cal. Rptr. 220 , the court held that the exclusion of coverage whenever the insured car was being operated or driven by defendant's son was valid (33 Cal. App. 3d 470, 472-474) .

An agreement made by the insurer and any named insured more than 60 days following the inception of the policy excluding a designated person by name is effective from the date of the agreement and is, with the signature of a named insured, conclusive evidence of the validity of the agreement (Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1)).

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Exclusion of Named Person From Coverage

Farmers Ins. Exch. v. Cocking (1981) 29 Cal. 3d 383, 173 Cal. Rptr. 846, 628 P.2d 1 , was a declaratory relief action by an insurer against its named insured and the insured's wife for a declaration of the validity of an exclusionary clause contained in an automobile liability insurance policy issued by it. The policy defined "named insured," if an individual, as including his spouse if a resident of the same household, and excluded from coverage liability of any insured for bodily injury to the named insured or a relative of the named insured who was a resident of the same household. The wife was injured while she was a passenger in a car driven by her husband and sued her husband for damages, alleging that her injuries were caused by his negligence. The exclusion in the policy was one expressly authorized by Ins. Code § 11580.1(c)(5). That section provides in relevant part, that in addition to any exclusion provided in Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(3) (requiring designation by explicit description of purposes for which coverage for motor vehicles is specifically excluded), the insurance afforded by any automobile liability insurance policy may, by appropriate policy provision, be made inapplicable to liability for bodily injury to an insured. The wife acknowledged that this statute purported to authorize the insurer to exclude coverage for bodily injury to an insured such as herself, but argued that the provision contravened public policy and was void as a denial of equal protection under both federal and state Constitutions.

The trial court accepted her constitutional argument and granted a summary judgment in her favor. The Supreme Court reversed with directions to enter judgment for plaintiff. The Court held that the exclusion was expressly sanctioned by state statute and, accordingly, could not be struck down on public policy grounds (29 Cal. 3d 383, 387) . The Court explained that the wife's reliance on general principles favoring recovery for injuries was misplaced because, with respect to the specific issue before the Court, the public policy of California was contained not in broadly expressed generalized abstractions, but in the applicable statutory provisions themselves. The Court then quoted the pertinent portions of Ins. Code § 11580.05 and concluded that Ins. Code § 11580.1(c) is not only consistent with state policy, but that it itself constitutes and expresses that policy (29 Cal. 3d 383, 388) . The Court further rejected the wife's constitutional challenge (29 Cal. 3d 383, 389-390) .

State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. MacKenzie (1978) 85 Cal. App. 3d 727, 149 Cal. Rptr. 747 , was a declaratory relief action by which the insurer sought to determine the total insurance coverage available for an automobile accident, in which a passenger in a car owned by Low and driven by MacKenzie was killed when the car crashed. Both Low and MacKenzie had automobile liability insurance with plaintiff. The policy issued and delivered to Low in California expressly covered liability for the permissive use of the car with bodily injury limits of $15,000 for each person and $30,000 for each accident. The policy issued to MacKenzie, which was not delivered in California, had $10,000/$20,000 limits and insured against liability to third persons for the use of a designated vehicle and other vehicles driven by the insured with the permission of the owner. A wrongful death action against Low and MacKenzie was filed by the victim's widow who rejected plaintiff's offer in settlement of $25,000, representing the combined total of the stated limits of both policies, on the ground that the minimum limit of each policy was $15,000. Plaintiff then commenced the declaratory relief action against MacKenzie and the third-party plaintiff. Defendants contended that California public policy required reformation of the policy to increase coverage for liability arising out of the insured's permissive use of another's vehicle to $15,000, citing the minimum coverage required by statute (former Veh. Code §§ 16057, 16059 (now see Veh. Code §§ 16054, 16056); Ins. Code § 11580.1).

The trial court declared $10,000 to be the policy limit, and the court of appeal affirmed. The court of appeal said that the total public policy in regard to provisions required to be included in voluntary automobile liability insurance policies issued or delivered in California is contained in the Insurance Code (citing Ins. Code §§ 11580.05 and 11580.1) and that this legislatively declared policy affecting automobile insurance policies taken out before an accident replaced the judicially determined policy of Wildman v. Government Employees' Ins. Co. (1957) 48 Cal. 2d 31, 39, 307 P.2d 359 . The court held that Ins. Code § 11580.1 does not require coverage for the permissive use of nonowned vehicles, that an insurer has a right to limit coverage in plain and understandable language and is at liberty to limit the character and extent of the risk it undertakes to assume, and that public policy, therefore, did not require reformation of the policy (85 Cal. App. 3d 727, 732) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsIndemnificationInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UsePermissive UsersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.71

§ 120.71 Exclusion of Named User Driving Without Permission

[1] FORM

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE THE OPERATOR OF THE INSURED'S CAR WAS DRIVING WITHOUT THE INSURED'S PERMISSION.

A. Exclusion of Named User Driving Without Permission. Insurance Code Section 11580.1(d)(1) clearly and unambiguously provides that the exclusion of a named user from coverage applies whether the user was driving the vehicle with or without permission (Yamasaki v. Mercury Cas. Ins. Co. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 830, 833, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577).

B. Insured Cannot Ratify Nonpermitted Use of Vehicle. An insured cannot ratify a nonpermitted use of a vehicle after an accident so as to impose liability on the insurer (Allied Mut. Ins. Co. v. Webb (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1190, 1194-1196, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that the user of a vehicle was excluded from coverage under the insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the user of a vehicle was driving without permission.

This form may be used, for example, in an action against the insurer for damages for breach of its alleged duty under a motor vehicle liability policy to defend an action brought against the operator of the insured's vehicle or to indemnify the user on the judgment entered. These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the driver of the insured vehicle [see § 120.70

et seq.].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.70[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the driver of the insured vehicle was driving without the insured's permission, and

- Argue that under the policy, therefore, the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of that driver's operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of User Driving Without Permission

In Yamasaki v. Mercury Cas. Ins. Co. (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 830, 14 Cal. Rptr. 2d 577 , the insured's policy contained an exclusion that followed the language of Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1), stating, "it is agreed that coverage and the insurer's obligation to defend, under this policy, shall not apply nor accrue to the benefit of any insured or any third party claimant while any motor vehicle is being used or operated by a natural person or persons designated above ... This limitation shall apply to any use or operation of a motor vehicle including the negligent or alleged negligent entrustment of a motor vehicle to any designated person." Adriver specifically named under the exclusion was involved in an accident while driving the insured's car without permission. The insurer denied coverage. The insured brought an action against the insurer seeking a declaration that the exclusion applied only to permissive users. The insured argued that the exclusion had to be strictly construed because it limited the insurer's liability. Thus, the insured argued that the clause had to be read to provide coverage because it did not specifically state it was applicable when an excluded driver takes the vehicle without permission. The trial court granted the insurer summary judgment.

The court of appeal affirmed. It held that the exclusion and Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1) are both clear and unambiguous. The court stated that the plain meaning of "any use or operation" as used in the exclusion is that all kinds of use or operation, including permissive and non-permissive use, are excluded (11 Cal. App. 4th 830, 833) .

[b] Insured Cannot Ratify Nonpermitted Use of Vehicle

In Allied Mut. Ins. Co. v. Webb (2001) 91 Cal. App. 4th 1190, 111 Cal. Rptr. 2d 426 , a family operated a farming business through several partnerships. A partnership formed by two brothers employed a worker who was permitted to drive the partnership's vehicles for business purposes, but whose compensation did not include the personal use of a partnership vehicle. Another partnership included the brothers and the father, who owned a truck that the father kept on the farm property, with the understanding that it would not regularly be used for farm business, but that the brothers' partnership could use it as a spare vehicle. An employee of the brothers' partnership used the truck without permission when his own car broke down. He used it for both personal and employment purposes over the course of several days, driving it on one occasion to a friend's home where he consumed alcohol. Afterwards he returned to the farm, then drove the vehicle to a relative's house, en route to which he collided with another vehicle. He sustained extensive injuries and was arrested and convicted of driving under the influence. The occupants of the other vehicle filed a complaint for personal injuries against the employee. They contended that the business automobile liability insurance policy issued to the brothers' partnership provided coverage--that is, that the vehicle was covered as a borrowed automobile that was used by the employee with the insureds' permission. The insurer filed this action for declaratory relief, seeking a declaration that the policy did not provide coverage for the third-party claims against the employee. The trial court entered judgment for the insurer, after determining that the brothers' partnership borrowed the truck from the father and that the truck was potentially insured under that partnership's business automobile policy. The court also found that the employee did not have permission to use the vehicle, but that even if he were a permissive user, his conduct exceededthe scope of the implied permission. The court further found that permission was not supplied by the insureds' postaccident conduct--failing either to reprimand or to discharge the employee following the accident. The defendants appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, rejecting the defendants' argument that the brothers' partnership granted the employee permission to use the truck by ratifying his conduct after the accident. The held that an insured cannot ratify the nonpermitted use of a vehicle after an accident so as to impose liability on the insurer. The court also held that the trial court correctly found no coverage under the automobile policy, and consequently it did not decide whether the employee's conduct would have exceeded the scope of the permission if permission had been granted (91 Cal. App. 4th 1190, 1193) . The court stated that although an agent's originally unauthorized act may be ratified by implication if the only reasonable interpretation of the principal's conduct is consistent with approval or adoption, that rule does not apply if a third party is involved. Specifically, ratification does not apply to permit the insured to examine the alternatives after the loss has occurred. This result would be unfair to the insurer and has the potential to foster collusion between the insured and the permittee. Inasmuch as the employee in this case did not have permission to use the truck at the time of the accident, there is no coverage under the business automobile policy. Ratification cannot date back to destroy intervening rights of third persons or otherwise to achieve an inequitable result (91 Cal. App. 4th 1190, 1194-1196) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UsePermissive UsersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.72

§ 120.72 Exclusion of User From Coverage When Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Business

[1] FORM

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE THE NAMED INSURED OPERATING THE CAR WHILE ENGAGED IN A SPECIFIED BUSINESS.

Exclusion of User From Coverage When Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Business. An insurer and a named insured engaged in the business of leasing vehicles for a term in excess of six months, or selling, repairing, servicing, delivering, testing, road-testing, parking, or storing automobiles, may agree that coverage shall not apply to any person other than the named insured or his or her agent or employee except to the extent that the limits of liability of any other insurance available to such person are not equal to the minimum coverage specified in Vehicle Code Section16056(a). If an insurer and its named insured so agree, that agreement is binding on every insured to whom the policy applies and on every third-party claimant (Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2)).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that the user of a vehicle was excluded from coverage under the insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insured was engaged in a specified business.

If the permissive user was one of a class of users excluded by a named insured primarily engaged in one of the businesses specified in Ins. Code§ 11580.1(d)(2), these points and authorities will apply (regarding requirement that named insured's primary business be one enumerated in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2), see Powell v. Premier Ins. Co. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 336, 173 Cal. Rptr. 383).

This form may be used, for example, in an action against the insurer for damages for breach of its alleged duty under a motor vehicle liability policy to defend an action brought against the operator of the insured's vehicle or to indemnify the user on the judgment entered.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the driver of the insured vehicle [see § 120.70 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.70[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the permissive user was one of a class of users excluded by a named insured primarily engaged in one of the businesses specified in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2), and

- Argue that under the policy, therefore, the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of that driver's operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.80 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Exclusion of User From Coverage When Named Insured Is Engaged in Specified Business

Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2) provides that with regard to any automobile liability insurance policy issued to a named insured engaged in the business of leasing vehicles for those vehicles that are leased for a term in excess of six months, or selling, repairing, servicing, delivering, testing, road testing, parking, or storing automobiles, the named insured and the insurer may agree that coverage does not apply to any person other than the named insured or his or her agent or employee, except to the extent that the limits of liability of any other valid and collectible insurance available to such person are not equal to the limits of liability specified in Veh. Code § 16056(a) (not less than $15,000 for bodily injury to or death of one person, $30,000 for bodily injury to or death of two or more persons, and $5,000 for property damage in any one accident). Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2) also provides that if the policy is issued to a named insured engaged in the business of leasing vehicles, which includes the leasing of vehicles for a term in excess of six months, and the lessor includes in the lease automobile liability insurance, the terms and limits of which are not otherwise specified in the lease, the named insured must incorporate a provision in each vehicle lease contract advising the lessee of the provisions of Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2) and of the fact that this limitation is applicable except as otherwise provided for by statute or federal law.

It should be noted that prior to January 1, 1982, leasing was not included as one of the businesses in which a named insured had to be engaged in order to exclude permissive user coverage in excess of financial responsibility minimums.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsBusiness UseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.73-120.79

[Reserved]

§§ 120.73[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.80

§ 120.80 Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND OR INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE MOTOR VEHICLE LIABILITY POLICIES ARE REQUIRED TO COVER PERMISSIVE USERS.

A. Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User. With exceptions not applicable here, no automobile liability insurance policy may be issued or delivered in California unless it covers permissive users of the covered motor vehicle (Ins. Code § 11580.1(a), (b)(4); Metz v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 45, 55-56, 109 Cal. Rptr. 698, 513 P.2d 922).

[Optional] B. Judgment Creditor Has Standing to Sue. A judgment creditor may sue the judgment debtor's insurer under a liability policy to recover the amount of a judgment up to the policy limits (Ins. Code § 11580(b)(2)).

[Optional] C. Permissive User Liability Exclusion Unenforceable if Inconspicuously Located in Policy. Exclusions or limitations on permissive user liability coverage that are not clearly and conspicuously stated and located in the policy are ineffective and unenforceable (Haynes v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1206-1212, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 68, 89 P.3d 381 ; Thompson v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 90, 97, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the driver of the insured's vehicle at the time of the accident was a permissive user.

These points and authorities may be submitted by a plaintiff, for example, in an action for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or to indemnify either the named insured under a motor vehicle liability policy or a person who incurred potential liability while operating a vehicle with the insured'spermission [see Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4)], in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when the defendant contends that the particular liability sued on was not covered, or was excluded from coverage, by the policy. They may also be used in a trial or appellate brief in such an action. In addition, they may be used in support of a motion for summary judgment in favor of the insured in a declaratory relief action seeking a declaration that there is no duty to defend.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see §§ 120.50 et seq. and 120.81 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.70 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show the driver of the vehicle is properly considered a permissive user, and

- Argue that under the policy, therefore, the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of that driver's operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

Ins. Code § 11580.1(a) provides in part that a policy of automobile liability insurance described in Veh. Code § 16054 (liability policy or bond as proof of financial responsibility under Financial Responsibility Law) covering liability arising out of the ownership, maintenance, or use of any motor vehicle may not be issued or delivered in California on or after the effective date of the section (January 1, 1971) unless it contains the provisions set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.1(b). Ins. Code § 11580.1(b) provides that every policy of automobile liability insurance to which Ins. Code § 11580.1(a) applies must contain, among other things, a provision affording insurance to the named insured with respect to any motor vehicle covered by the policy, and to the same extent that insurance is afforded to the named insured, to any other person using, or legally responsible for the use of, the motor vehicle, provided that such use is by the named insured or with his or her permission express or implied, and within the scope of such permission [Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4)].

Ins. Code § 11580.1(a) further provides that none of the provisions set forth in Ins. Code § 11580.1(b) shall apply to the insurance afforded under any such policy (1) to the extent that such insurance exceeds the limits specified in Veh. Code § 16056, or (2) if such policy contains an underlying insurance requirement, or provides for a retained limit of self-insurance, equal to or greater than the limits specified in Veh. Code § 16056(a).

The circumstances under which coverage of permissive users may be excluded are discussed in § 120.72[3][a].

In Metz v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co. (1973) 10 Cal. 3d 45, 109 Cal. Rptr. 698, 513 P.2d 922 , Metz sustained severe injuries in a collision of his motorcycle with a car driven by Hamlin, who had leased the car from a leasing corporation. Universal Underwriters Insurance Company had insured all cars owned by the lessor, but excluded from coverage were vehicles "while rented to others by the named insured." Hamlin was covered by two other insurance policies, both of which named Hamlin and the lessor as insureds. After the accident, Metz's father, individually andas guardian ad litem, sued Hamlin and the lessor and recovered judgment in excess of the limits of the two policies covering Hamlin. Hamlin's insurers paid plaintiff the limits of their policies in partial satisfaction of the judgment. One of Hamlin's insurers then initiated a declaratory relief action in which Metz filed a cross complaint against Universal to recover the balance of the judgment after crediting the amounts paid by Hamlin's insurers. The trial court granted Metz's motion for summary judgment against Universal, finding Universal liable for the unsatisfied balance of the judgment plus accrued interest.

On appeal, the Supreme Court modified the judgment to eliminate the accrued interest and affirmed the judgment as modified. The Court held that the exclusionary clause, "while rented to others," was ineffective. Reviewing the development of the law on this issue, the Court held that not only did the statute proscribe policy provisions which by their terms excluded coverage for permissive users, but that it also invalidated provisions which, by defining a class of excluded vehicles in terms of their operation by permissive users, served effectively to deny coverage to those users (10 Cal. 3d 45, 53) . The Court then concluded that the exclusion did not come within the provisions of former Ins. Code § 11580.1(f) (now see Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2)) since the insured was not engaged in any of the businesses specified in that section (10 Cal. 3d 45, 54-56) .

[b] Judgment Creditor Has Standing to Sue

Ins. Code § 11580 provides, in relevant part, that a policy insuring against loss or damage resulting from liability for injury suffered by another person, other than a workers' compensation policy or a policy issued by a nonadmitted Mexican insurer solely for use in the Republic of Mexico, may not be issued or delivered to any person in this state unless it contains the provisions set forth in Ins. Code § 11580(b) and that such a policy, whether or not actually containing such provisions, must be construed as if such provisions were embodied in the policy. Ins. Code §

11580(b)(2) provides that such a policy may not be issued or delivered to any person in this state unless it contains a provision that whenever judgment is secured against the insured or the executor or administrator of a deceased insured in an action based on bodily injury, death, or property damage, then an action may be brought against the insurer on the policy, subject to its terms and limitations, by the judgment creditor to recover on the judgment.

[c] Permissive User Liability Exclusion Unenforceable if Inconspicuously Located in Policy

Haynes v. Farmers Ins. Exch. (2004) 32 Cal. 4th 1198, 13 Cal. Rptr. 3d 68, 89 P.3d 381 concerned the provisions of liability coverage for permissive users under an "E-Z Reader Car Policy" issued to the ownerof a vehicle involved in an accident. The policy was 39 pages long. The first page consisted of a declarations page that stated that "COVERAGES" are $250,000 per person and $500,000 per occurrence for bodily injury, and $100,000 for property damage. The declarations page also provided the insurer's company name, the insured's name and address, the policy number, the insurance agent's name and contact information, a description of the insured vehicle, and other miscellaneous information. Two-thirds down the declarations page on the left-hand side appeared a box labeled "ENDORSEMENT NUMBERS." Within this box were 11 alphanumeric entries, each containing a letter followed by four digits. The eighth alphanumeric entry was the relevant entry. Nothing in the box, or anywhere on the declarations page, defined or explained "ENDORSEMENTS" or indicated the title, location, subject matter, or substance of the relevant alphanumeric entry, or any of the other entries in the box. Inserted between the second and fourth pages was a letter to "Dear Customer," which stated:

> The accompanying Declarations Page shows your current coverages resulting from recent changes made to your policy. Please review your policy changes and file them in a safe place with your original policy document.

No specific changes were identified. The fourth page (numbered "1") was entitled "Index of Policy Provisions." Under part I, "Liability," the index contains entries for "Coverage," "Exclusions," "Limits of Liability," and "Other Insurance," providing page numbers for each. No reference to permissive users, or any limitation on permissive-user coverage, appeared in the index. On the seventh page (numbered "4"), in the "LIABILITY" section, "insured person" was defined as including "Any person using your insured car." On the ninth page (numbered "6"), under "Limits of Liability," was an explanation of the bodily injury and property damage liability limits for "each person" and "each occurrence" shown in the declarations on the first page. There was no indication, either on the declarations page or in the "Limits of Liability" section, that limits were different for persons "using your insured car." Also in the "LIABILITY" section, on the 10th page (numbered "7") under the subheading "Other Insurance," the policy advised that for "an insured person, other than you or a family member," coverage was provided "up to the limits of the Financial Responsibility Law only." The relevant endorsement was on the 24th page. Entitled "PART I--LIABILITY--PERMISSIVE USER LIMITATION," the endorsement was contained within a box occupying the upper half of the page, the lower half of which was blank, and included 19 lines of text. Various purported amendments to "Your E-Z Reader Car Policy, Your E-Z Reader Motorcycle Policy and Your Motor Home Plus Policy" were stated in those 19 lines. The relevant endorsement in its eighth paragraph (lines 11 and 12) stated: "In Your E-Z Reader Car Policy, the second paragraph under PART I--LIABILITY," Other Insurance" is deleted" and in its penultimate paragraph (lines 15 through 17) stated:

> We will provide insurance for an Insured person, other than you, a family member or a listed driver, but only up to the minimum required limits of your state's Financial Responsibility Law of $15,000 per person and $30,000 per occurrence for bodily injury, and $5,000 for property damage.

A permissive user of the vehicle insured under this policy became involved in an accident, injuring a passenger in the insured vehicle. The injured person sued the owner and the permissive user, and the insurer defended the action. In response to interrogatories, the insurer stated that the pertinent coverage was provided in the endorsement described above, which limits permissive-user coverage. The injured person then filed an action for declaratory relief, specifically seeking a declaration that the endorsement's limitation of permissive-user coverage was unenforceable. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, and the court of appeal reversed.

The California Supreme Court affirmed the decision of the court of appeal, holding that the endorsement regarding limitations on coverage for permissive users was unenforceable. The Court began by noting that any exception to the performance of the basic underlying obligation must clearly apprise the insured of its effect. Coverage may be limited by a valid endorsement, and if a conflict exists between the main body of the policy and an endorsement, the endorsement prevails. However, any provision that takes away or limits coverage reasonably expected by an insured is not enforceable unless it is conspicuous, plain, and clear. Any such limitation must therefore be placed and printed so that it will attract the reader's attention. It must also be stated precisely and understandably, in words that are part of the working vocabulary of the average lay person. The burden of making coverage exceptions and limitations conspicuous, plain, and clear rests with the insurer (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1204) . The Court stated that in this particular policy, the permissive-user language in the main body of the policy, located on the 10th page (numbered "7") as the second of four paragraphs under the heading "Other Insurance," was not conspicuous, plain, and clear. There was nothing in the heading to alert a reader that it limits permissive-user coverage, and nothing in the section attracted a reader's attention to the limiting language (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1204-1205) .

The permissive-user language in the endorsement was similarly unenforceable because it was not inconspicuous, plain, and clear. With respect to the conspicuousness requirement, the endorsement was listed on the policy's declarations page only by its alphanumeric designation, along with 10 other endorsements. Actual dollar coverages for permissive users could have been placed with the policy coverages on the declarations page, where one would expect an insured to look to determine the policy limits. Moreover, nothing on the declarations page alerted a reader to the fact that theendorsement in question contains a paragraph limiting coverage for permissive users to amounts less than the policy coverages prominently displayed in specific dollar amounts on that same page. The declarations page did not reveal the subject matter or substance of any of the endorsements, nor did it state that the endorsements constituted part of the policy and amended the policy. To receive this latter notification, a reader was required to proceed to the bottom of the fourth page (numbered "1"). The only apparent references to the policy's endorsements that appeared on the declarations page, except for the alphanumeric list, were two phrases placed among others in a box positioned immediately to the right of the "ENDORSEMENT NUMBERS" box. Labeled "MESSAGES / RATING INFORMATION," the box, which was only half full, contained only a cryptic notation referring to numerical and letter designations. The "MESSAGES /RATING INFORMATION" box contained no message informing a reader that the relevant endorsement discussed permissive users or limited coverage. Not unless or until a reader had turned to and examined the policy's 24th page--after perusing pages containing language relating to "MEXICO COVERAGE," "BUSINESS USE," and "CUSTOMIZING EQUIPMENT," along with a page "LEFT INTENTIONALLY BLANK"--did the reader learn that the policy contained an endorsement entitled "PART I--LIABILITY--PERMISSIVE USER LIMITATION" (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1206-1207) . Within the endorsement, the language of the permissive-user limitation was not in boldface, italicized, enlarged, underlined, in a different font, capitalized, boxed, set apart, or in any other way distinguished from the rest of the fine print. The title also indicated that the endorsement contained a "LIMITATION," but did not state that the limitation concerned liability coverage amounts. The text of the permissive-user limitation contained a few scattered terms that were in boldface, apparently because they were terms defined elsewhere within the policy, but because the other 10 paragraphs in the endorsement do so as well, nothing about this scattered use of boldface attracted attention to the permissive-user limitation. Consequently, the permissive-user limitation was not positioned in a place and printed in a form that would attract a reader's attention. Although California insurers may rely on endorsements to modify printed terms of a form policy, and if the terms of an effective endorsement conflict with terms in the main body of such a policy, the endorsement controls, neither the prevalence of endorsements in the insurance industry nor the Court's recognition that they may validly modify an insurance policy diminishes an insurer's burden of notifying insureds of reductions in otherwise reasonably expected coverage. Although an insurer has the right to sell insurance policies by methods of mechanization, the insurer cannot then rely on esoteric provisions to limit coverage. If an insurer deals with the public on a mass basis, any notice of the policy's lack of coverage, in a situation in which the public may reasonably expect coverage, must be conspicuous, plain, and clear. Other deficiencies in the language regardingpermissive-user coverage included: (1) the definition of the insured, appearing at the outset of the liability section, gave every indication that a permissive driver stood in the same position as the insured and received the same coverage; and (2) the permissive-user limitation was found in the subsection on "Other Insurance," even though it has nothing to do with insurance from any other source. The Court agreed with the court of appeal that burying the permissive-user limitation among unrelated provisions rendered it inconspicuous and potentially confusing to the average lay reader (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1208-1209) .

With respect to the requirements of plainness and clarity, the language itself must be plain and clear. Although the term "permissive user" appeared in the title of the endorsement containing the limitation, the term was nowhere defined, either in the policy or the endorsement, for the average lay reader. Moreover, the endorsement contained confusing language surrounding and introducing the actual text of the permissive-user limitation, along with confusing cross-references to other insurance policies that the insured did not possess. Therefore, contrary to the claim on the cover page of the E-Z Reader Car Policy, the policy was not "written in non-technical easy-to-read style" (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1211-1212) . Although the endorsement purports to effect insertion of the permissive-user limitation at two different points in the policy, the purported insertion points were difficult to understand and confusing (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1212) .

Because the policy in this case provided the named insured with liability insurance greater than the minimum requirements of the Financial Responsibility Law, the insurer had no initial duty to indemnify a permissive user for damages exceeding those requirements, pursuant to Ins. Code § 11580.1(a), (b)(4). However, the insurer included "[a]ny person using your insured car" within its definition of "Insured person," thus raising a reasonable expectation that permissive-user coverage would be coextensive with the coverage for other insureds. Consequently, any limitation on permissive-user coverage was not enforceable unless it was conspicuous, plain, and clear (32 Cal. 4th 1198, 1213) .

In Thompson v. Mercury Cas. Co. (2000) 84 Cal. App. 4th 90, 100 Cal. Rptr. 2d 596 , the insureds' automobile policy provided liability insurance on their pickup truck. After they increased their policy limits, the new bodily injury liability limits were $100,000 per person up to $300,000 per accident. On the first page, the policy included the following language:

> Persons Insured: Subject to Condition 23 on page 6 of this policy, the following are insured under Part I:
>
> (a) With respect to the owned automobile:
>
> (1) the named insured and any relative,
>
> (2) persons listed as drivers in the policy declarations,
>
> (3) any other person, provided it is used with the permission of the named insured. ...

On the sixth and last page, Condition 23 provided:

> Permissive User Coverage--Coverages A and B: If this policy provides coverage with bodily injury liability limits in excess of $15,000 per person and $30,000 per accident and/or a property damage liability limit in excess of $5,000 per accident, then the coverage in excess of those limits shall not apply to the operation or use of a motor vehicle by any person other than the named insured, a relative as defined in Part I of this policy, or an agent or employee of the named insured in the scope of his employment. This limitation shall not apply to liability incurred by the named insured or by such relative.

With the insured's permission, another person (the permissive user), who was not a relative nor a named insured, drove the vehicle with his friend's son as a passenger. He encountered icy road conditions and slid into opposing traffic, causing a head-on collision with another car. The permissive user, his passenger, and the driver of the other car (the third party) were all injured. The third party filed a claim with the insurer for $100,000, the per-person liability limit as shown on the declarations page. After initial attempts at settlement, the parties could not agree on whether the third party was entitled to claim $100,000 or $15,000, the permissive user coverage limit as stated in Condition 23. The third party sued for declaratory relief, claiming that the automobile insurance policy failed to state clearly and conspicuously the limitations on permissive user coverage. The third party further claimed that as a result of the ineffective limiting language contained in the policy, she was entitled to recover the full amount of the policy limits ($100,000). The insurer filed a cross-complaint against the insureds, the permissive user, his passenger, and the third party. The insurer sought a declaration stating that Condition 23 applied to all bodily injury claims arising out of the accident. The trial court held that the policy language limiting liability for permissive users was inconspicuous and thus unenforceable. The court found that the limiting or exclusionary language affecting liability was not within the liability section of the policy, where one would expect to find it, but was instead on the last page, in the last part of a little-consulted section of the policy that lumps together miscellaneous and unrelated provisions. Although the "persons insured" section of the policy begins with "Subject to Condition 23 on page 6 ...", the first subparagraphs describe insured persons who do not fall within Condition 23. In the two subparagraphs that do describe the permissive users, no hint is given that their coverage is limited in any way. Condition 23 itself refers only to "Part [I]" of the policy, a part that is a full page in length, and it nowhere refers to the specific subparagraphs that describe the permissive users whose limits of liability are less than those of the policy.

On the insurer's appeal, the court of appeal noted that the case presented a narrow legal question: whether Condition 23, the exclusionary orlimiting language on permissive user coverage contained in the automobile liability insurance policy, was conspicuous. Affirming the trial court's ruling, the court of appeal analyzed the exclusionary clauses in light of controlling rules of construction. In this case, the permissive-user coverage clause of the automobile liability insurance policy was inconspicuously located on the last page of the policy. Permissive users were included in the definition of "Persons Insured" on the first page of the policy, but the liability limitations for permissive users was not in the "Liability" section of the policy. Strangely enough, the court noted, the policy contained two numbered sections and one unnumbered section entitled "Conditions." The unnumbered section contained 30 random and unrelated subsections, which contained the permissive user coverage provision. Furthermore, the language in Condition 23 was not in boldface, italicized, enlarged, underlined, in different font, capitalized, boxed, set apart, or in any other way distinguished from the rest of the fine print. Although certain parts of this Conditions section, aside from the headings, were in boldface for emphasis, Condition 23 was not. The subsection immediately above the permissive user coverage provision was in boldface, which hid, to some extent, the heading for Condition 23. Significant because of its limitations on the insurer's liability, the permissive-user coverage clause should be included in the "Liability" section of the policy, where an average layperson would expect to find it. The liability limits are among the few policy features actually bargained for between the insurer and insured. The court concluded that in this case, Condition 23 in the automobile liability insurance policy was not sufficiently conspicuous to apprise the average layperson of the limitations on permissive user coverage. The court rejected the insurer's contention that this defect is cured by its repeated references to Condition 23 in the policy. Instead, the cross-references merely underscore the importance of the clause without revealing the nature of its content. The court also rejected the insurer's contention that Condition 23 was not an exclusion from the agreed-on policy limits, as provided on the declarations page of the policy. At minimum, the court stated, it is a limitation on or partial exclusion from coverage. The court concluded that the insurer failed to satisfy its burden of conspicuously displaying exclusionary language (84 Cal. App. 4th 90, 96-99) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Motor Vehicle Liability Policy Insures Permissive User

In Mercury Ins. Group v. Checkerboard Pizza (1993) 12 Cal. App. 4th 495, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 657 , the insured leased an automobile while the family car was being repaired. The insured's son was involved in an accident while using the leased car to deliver pizzas. The court held that the leased automobile was a "nonowned" vehicle for purposes of a policyexclusion for business use of a nonowned vehicle (12 Cal. App. 4th 495, 498) . However, the car came within the exclusion's exception for private passenger vehicles driven by the named insured. The court held that the exclusion was unenforceable because it treated a permissive user differently than a named insured. Thus, the exclusion did not preclude coverage of the insured's son as a permissive user (12 Cal. App. 4th 495, 499-500) .

In Ohio Farmers Ins. Co. v. Quin (1988) 198 Cal. App. 3d 1338, 244 Cal. Rptr. 359 insurer brought an action for declaratory relief to determine whether coverage was excluded because a person expressly excluded from coverage had entrusted the insured's vehicle to another. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's determination that coverage existed, holding that the public policy of California requires every automobile liability policy, as a matter of law, to cover permissive users, and that any provision in the policy excluding them is illegal (198 Cal. App. 3d 1338, 1344 ; interpreting 1982 version of Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1)).

In Lovy v. State Farm Ins. Co. (1981) 117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 173 Cal. Rptr. 307 , the court of appeal stated that Ins. Code § 11580.1, a part of this state's financial responsibility law, is to be liberally construed to provide monetary protection for that ever-changing and tragically large group of persons who suffer grave injury (117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 843) , that any attempt to exclude coverage for permissive users of insured automobiles is viewed with disfavor, that all ambiguities and doubts must be resolved in favor of coverage (117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 844-845) , and that the attempts of the insurer to exclude coverage for certain permissive users in cases involving the renting of dealer automobiles was not permissible under Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4), specifying requirements for liability coverage for permissive users of insured automobiles (117 Cal. App. 3d 834, 845-851) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusionsInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UsePermissive UsersGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.81

§ 120.81 No Exclusion May Be Based on Insured's Incidental Business

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND OR INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE EXCLUSIONS CANNOT BE BASED ON THE INCIDENTAL BUSINESS OF THE NAMED INSURED.

No Exclusion May Be Based on Insured's Incidental Business. Exclusion of coverage of permissive users under the provisions of Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2) is not permitted if the named insured is only incidentally or occasionally involved in one of the businesses enumerated therein (Powell v. Premier Ins. Co. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 336, 343-344, 173 Cal. Rptr. 383).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the named insured is only incidentally or occasionally involved in one of the businesses enumerated in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2).

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see §§ 120.50 et seq. and 120.80 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.72.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.80[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the named insured is only incidentally or occasionally involved in one of the businesses enumerated in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2), and

- Argue that under the policy, therefore, the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of anymaterial fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] No Exclusion May Be Based on Insured's Incidental Business

Powell v. Premier Ins. Co. (1981) 118 Cal. App. 3d 336, 173 Cal. Rptr. 383 , a declaratory relief action, was decided before Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2) permitted exclusion of permissive-user coverage because the named insured is in the automobile leasing business. Plaintiff's conservatee had been injured while riding in a car owned by defendant's insured, a leasing company, and driven by Hatch with the permission of the lessee. The parties had stipulated that the named insured was in the business of selling and leasing automobiles. The word "primary" was not used in the stipulation, but evidence before the court clearly indicated that the named insured was primarily a leasing company. The trial court entered judgment for plaintiff.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that to claim the protection of Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(2), the business activity of the named insured must have been one of those enumerated in the statute. Additionally, something more is required than a showing that the named insured engaged in the enumerated business incident to a principal business not enumerated in the statute (118 Cal. App. 3d 336, 343) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle

InsuranceExclusionsBusiness UseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.82

[Reserved]

§ 120.82[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.83

§ 120.83 Insurer Must Defend or Indemnify Person Legally Responsible for Use of Vehicle

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND OR INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE _____ [name] IS LEGALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THE USE OF THE VEHICLE DESCRIBED INTHE POLICY, AND MOTOR VEHICLE LIABILITY POLICIES MUST COVER ANY SUCH PERSONS.

A. Insurer Must Defend or Indemnify Person Legally Responsible for Use of Vehicle. Every motor vehicle liability policy must provide coverage, to the same extent that insurance is afforded to the named insured, to any other person legally responsible for the use of the motor vehicle, provided the use is by the named insured (Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4); Younker v. County of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1328, 285 Cal. Rptr. 319).

[Optional] B. Employee's Motor Vehicle Policy Fulfills Public Entity's Statutory Obligation. When a public entity is required by statute to defend and indemnify an employee regarding third-party liability incurred during the course of employment, it may satisfy that obligation through funds available to it through any insurance policy, whether the public entity is the named insured or merely an additional insured under the policy (Younker v. County of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1330, 285 Cal. Rptr. 319).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the insurer is required by statute to provide coverage to the person legally responsible for the use of the vehicle if the named insured was using the vehicle at the relevant time [see Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4); Younker v. County of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1328, 285 Cal. Rptr. 319] .

Paragraph B is for use if the insurer asserts that it is not obligated to defend or indemnify a public entity that is legally responsible within the meaning of Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4), because a public entity has a separate statutory obligation to defend and indemnify the named insured. The ground of the opposition is that a public entity is not prevented by any statute from satisfying obligations to its employees through any insurance policy, whether as a named insured or additional insured (including the personal motor vehicle liability policy of the employee). For a memorandum of points and authorities that includes the assertion that a public entity may insure against the expense of defending a claim against itself or an employee, see § 120.82[1].

These points and authorities may be submitted, for example, in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment in an action against amotor vehicle liability insurer based on defendant's refusal to defend or indemnify the person (or organization) legally responsible for the use of the vehicle. They may also be used in a trial or appellate brief in such an action. In addition, they may be used in support of a motion for summary judgment in favor of the insured in a declaratory relief action seeking a declaration that there is no duty to defend.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see §§ 120.50 et seq. and 120.80 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.70 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.80[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the person asserting coverage is legally responsible for the use of the vehicle, and

- Argue that, consequently, pursuant to statute and the corresponding policy provision, that person is an additional insured under the policy and the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary

Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Insurer Must Defend or Indemnify Person Legally Responsible for Use of Vehicle

In Younker v. County of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 285 Cal. Rptr. 319 , a named insured (the insured) under an automobile liability insurance policy (the policy) brought an action against his employer, a self-insured county (the county), seeking settlement and expense costs that he and his insurer (the insurer) incurred based on a third-party action arising from an accident in which he was driving his own car while acting in the scope of his employment. The insured, a volunteer fireman, responded to a report of a fire while driving his personal vehicle. While driving toward the fire, he received a radio message cancelling his response. En route to his home he struck and injured a pedestrian. The county initially admitted its responsibility to defend and indemnify the insured if a claim were filed, but when a claim was filed, it refused to do so, asserting that the insurer provided primary coverage. The third party sued the insured for negligence, and the parties to that action settled. The insured filed a claim with the county, seeking reimbursement for expenses, and the county returned the claim without taking action. The insured and his insurer sued the county to recover the amount paid in settling the lawsuit plus attorney's fees and expenses. Plaintiffs alleged they were forced to incur expenses because the county violated its statutory duty to defend and indemnify its employee. The trial court entered judgment for the insurer against the county for the costs of settlement and attorney's fees. Defendant appealed.

The court of appeal reversed, holding that the insurer was required to cover the county as an entity responsible for the use of the vehicle by the insured (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329) . The county contended on appeal that the policy extended coverage to the county as the insured's employer, and that the insurer's obligation prevailed over the county's general obligation to defend and indemnify the insured (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1327) . Plaintiffs contend that the fact that the insured obtained his own automobile liability insurance policy should not permit the county to avoid its obligations under the Government Code, the relevant provisions of which require a public entity to defend and indemnify employees acting within the scope of employment [see Gov. Code §§ 825, 825.2, 825.4, 995, 996, 996.4]. The court found the facts identical to those in Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Gibraltar Cas. Co. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 163, 229 Cal. Rptr. 57 , in which a teacher driving her private vehicle struck and injured a person while acting within the scope of employment. In that case, the employee's insurer settled with the third party and sued the insured's employer, a school district, to recover the amount of the settlement and attorney's fees. The court of appeal affirmed summary judgment for thedefendant. The court in the instant case stated that Ins. Code § 11580.1(b)(4) requires every motor vehicle liability policy to provide coverage for anyone legally responsible for use of the vehicle described in the policy (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1328) . Accordingly, the policy in question defined as "persons insured," in addition to the named insured, "any other person or organization but only with respect to his or its liability because of acts or omissions of an insured." The court stated that under the policy, the county was clearly a "person or organization" liable because of the named insured's "acts or omissions" in operating his vehicle in the scope of his employment at the time of the accident. Therefore, the policy insured not only the named insured, a public employee, but also the county, as his employer. Therefore, the policy coverage was an asset of the county as well as of the named insured (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329) .

The court noted that defendant was statutorily obligated to defend and indemnify the insured with respect to the third-party claim (citing Gov. Code §§ 825, 825.2, 825.4, 995, 996, 996.4) (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1329) . The court rejected plaintiffs' contention that the county refused to defend or indemnify the insured in violation of its statutory obligations, holding that the county satisfied those statutory obligations through the insured's policy. Pursuant to the holding of Government Employees, nothing in the Government Code prevents a public entity from satisfying a judgment or other obligation through funds available to it through any insurance policy, whether the public entity is the named insured or merely an additional insured (citing Government Employees Ins. Co. v. Gibraltar Cas. Co. (1986) 184 Cal. App. 3d 163, 167, 229 Cal. Rptr. 57).

Plaintiffs also contended that the county is required to bear the entire loss based on the Government Code goals of protecting public employees from financial burden resulting from third-party claims, and encouraging zealous job performance. The court rejected that argument also, stating that the satisfaction of the county's obligation to its employee does not depend on whether the loss was paid by the employee's insurer or by the county directly as self-insurer, nor on the fact that the employee may have paid the premium for the policy used to pay the settlement (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1330-1331) . Further, because the county had an asset (the insured's policy) available to pay the settlement, the insured did not incur any financial burden beyond the premium already paid. (Plaintiffs' contentions that the insured was subjected to higher premiums, cancellation, or difficulty in finding coverage were unsupported.) The court concluded that if a public employee is fully covered, there is no proscription against the public entity satisfying its statutory obligation by availing itself of insurance designating its employee as the named insured. Therefore, the county properly relied on the policy to comply with its statutory obligation to the insured. The insurer had a clear duty under the policy to pay on behalfof the county as well as on behalf of the named insured the amount of the settlement and the attorney's fees incurring in defending the third-party claim. Consequently, the trial court erred in concluding that the insurer was entitled to reimbursement from the county (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331) . The court rejected plaintiff's reliance on Pacific Indem. Co. v. American Mut. Ins. Co. (1972) 28 Cal. App. 3d 983, 105 Cal. Rptr. 295 , in which the insurer of a government employer was found to have no contribution rights against the private insurer of an employee regarding a third-party malpractice action. The court in the instant case held that case distinguishable because no other insurance covered the government's obligations (233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 1331-1332) .

[b] Employee's Motor Vehicle Policy Fulfills Public Entity's Statutory Obligation

Younker v. County of San Diego (1991) 233 Cal. App. 3d 1324, 285 Cal. Rptr. 319 , is discussed in § 120.83[3][a].

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsIndemnificationInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.84

§ 120.84 Commercial Policy Cannot Exclude Driver Based on Nonserious Personal Traffic Violations

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND OR INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE THE PURPORTED EXCLUSION OF _____ [name] AS A NAMED INSURED IS INVALID BECAUSE THE PURPORTED EXCLUSION IS BASED ON HIS/HER COMMISSION OF NONSERIOUS TRAFFIC VIOLATIONS WHILE OPERATING A PERSONAL PASSENGER VEHICLE NOT OWNED OR LEASED BY INSURED.

A. Commercial Policy Cannot Exclude Driver Based on Nonserious Personal Traffic Violations. No admitted insurer licensed to issue motor vehicle liability policies, as defined in Section 16450 of the Vehicle Code, shall cancel, or refuse to renew, a motor vehicle liability insurance policy covering drivers hired to drive by a commercial business establishment, nor execute the agreement specified in Section 11580.1(d)(1) of the Insurance Code with respect to those drivers for the reason that those drivers have been convicted of violation of the Vehicle Code or the traffic laws of any subdivision of the state that were committed while operating private passengervehicles not owned or leased by their employer, subject to exceptions regarding serious offenses enumerated under Section 670(b) of the Insurance Code (Ins. Code § 670(a); State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162).

B. Prohibition Against Exclusion Is Not Limited to Any Particular Type of Policy. Section 670 of the Insurance Code does not specify the type of motor vehicle policy to which its prohibition applies, beyond simply stating that the policy must cover drivers hired by commercial business establishments, with certain specified exceptions (State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the exclusion was impermissibly based on the driver's past commission of minor traffic offenses while operating a personal passenger vehicle that was not owned or leased by the employer, in violation of Ins. Code § 670 [see Ins. Code § 670; State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162 ; see also § 120.84[3][a]].

These points and authorities may be used by plaintiff, for example, to oppose a defendant insurer's motion for summary judgment in an action for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or to indemnify a driver excluded by name in a vehicle liability policy. They may also be used in a trial or appellate brief in such an action. In addition, they may be used in support of a motion for summary judgment in favor of the insured in a declaratory relief action seeking a declaration that there is no duty to defend.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see §§ 120.50 et seq. and 120.80 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.70 et seq.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.80[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to specific facts that show that the violations on which the insurer is applying its purported exclusion are nonserious traffic violations while the driver was operating a personal passenger vehicle not owned or leased by insured, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Commercial Policy Cannot Exclude Driver Based on Nonserious Personal Traffic Violations

In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162 , the insurer under a vehicle liability policy brought a declaratory relief action regarding its duty of defense or indemnity regarding a third-party claim arising from an accident involving a driver who was excluded by name under the policy. The insurer filed the action against the insured (a construction company), the driver (an employee of the insured), and the injured third party, among others. The insured cross complained for bad faith. The trial court severed the bad-faith cause of action, and tried the declaratory relief action without a jury. The policy purported to exempt the driver who was ultimately involved in the accident, because he had received several speeding tickets while driving his personal vehicle on his own time. The accident occurred while the driver was returning home from a job site while driving a company vehicle during work hours, after stopping at the office and then at a grocery store. He was usinga company vehicle only because his own vehicle was temporarily disabled; he was otherwise required to use his own vehicle at work.

The injured third party contended that the purported exclusion of the driver was invalid pursuant to Ins. Code § 670. Ins. Code § 670(a) provides that no admitted insurer licensed to issue motor vehicle liability policies, as defined in Veh. Code § 16450, shall cancel, or refuse to renew, a motor vehicle liability insurance policy covering drivers hired to drive by a commercial business establishment, nor execute the agreement specified in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1) with respect to those drivers for the reason that those drivers have been convicted of violation of the Vehicle Code, or the traffic laws of any subdivision of California, that were committed while operating private passenger vehicles not owned or leased by their employer. (That prohibition is inapplicable if the exclusion was based on a conviction for certain serious offenses enumerated under Ins. Code § 670(b), none of which pertains to mere speeding offenses.) Veh. Code § 16450 provides that a "motor vehicle liability policy" means an owner's policy or an operator's policy, or both, of liability insurance, certified as provided in former Veh. Code § 16431 (subsequently amended by 1989 and 1990 legislation), as proof of "ability to respond in damages" (later amended to "proof of financial responsibility"), issued by an insurance carrier authorized to transact that business in California to or for the benefit of the person named as the insured.

The version of Veh. Code § 16431 in effect at the time provided that proof of ability to respond in damages may be given by the written certificate of any insurance carrier duly authorized to do business within California that it has issued to or for the benefit of the named person in a motor vehicle liability policy as defined in Veh. Code § 16450, which at the date of the certificate is in full force and effect. Veh. Code § 16431(a), as amended, provides that proof of financial responsibility may be given by one or more written certificates of any insurance carrier duly authorized to do business within California, stating that the carrier has issued to or for the benefit of the person named in those certificates a motor vehicle liability policy as defined in Veh. Code § 16450, an automobile liability policy as defined in Veh. Code § 16054, or any other liability policy issued for vehicles with fewer than four wheels that meets the requirements of Veh. Code § 16056, which, at the date of the certificates, is in full force and effect [see Stats 2003, ch. 594, § 43].

Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1) provides that an automobile liability policy can exclude coverage regarding a driver designated by name. The insurer also argued that the driver was not "hired to drive," within the meaning of Ins. Code § 670, but rather was "hired to supervise" certain work, and further asserted that he was not acting within the scope of his employment at the time of the accident. The trial court found that no coverage existed, on the ground that the driver was not "hired to drive," within the meaning of Ins. Code § 670. The injured third party appealed.

The court reversed, holding that Ins. Code § 670 specifically prohibits by its plain language this class of insurers from executing a driving exclusion agreement as specified in Ins. Code § 11580.1(d) (with regard to the exclusion of specified drivers for reasons stated in Ins. Code § 670) (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231) . It also held that the driver was "hired to drive" within the meaning of Ins. Code § 670, and that he was acting within the scope of his employment when the accident occurred (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 240-244) . Consequently, the court reversed the judgment (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 244) .

[b] Prohibition Against Exclusion Is Not Limited to Any Particular Type of Policy

In State Farm Mut. Auto. Ins. Co. v. Haight (1988) 205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 252 Cal. Rptr. 162 , the insurer argued that Ins. Code § 670 is applicable only to motor vehicle liability policies issued after an accident has occurred. It based this argument on the premise that the required "certificate" of financial responsibility under Veh. Code § 16370 (referred to under its Vehicle Code chapter by Veh. Code § 16450) refers only to a policy issued after an accident.

The court of appeal held that Ins. Code § 670 is not limited in its applicability to any particular type of motor vehicle liability policies, that is, to policies issued only after an accident has occurred (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231) . Concerning the applicability of Ins. Code § 670 to the policy in the instant case, the court discussed that statute as well as those referred to within it (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 230-239) . The court rejected the insurer's contention that Ins. Code § 670(a) applies only to a policy issued after an accident, and not to motor vehicle liability policies generally. The court stated that the language of that statute clearly contains no such limitation to postaccident specifications of insurance. Rather, it describes the class of insurers that Veh. Code § 16450 defines and to which it applies. It applies to insurers that are "admitted" and "licensed to issue motor vehicle liability policies," as defined in Veh. Code § 16450. Thus, Ins. Code § 670 does not specify the type of motor vehicle policy to which its prohibition applies beyond simply stating that the policy must cover drivers hired to drive by commercial business establishments. The indefinite article "a" is used to describe "motor vehicle liability policy" without any specification as to the time when the policy was issued. Ins. Code § 670 specifically declares that the defined class of insureds may not execute a driver exclusion agreement with regard to a driver hired to drive, when the exclusion is based on the driver's private-vehicle driving records. The court noted that the insurer's purported construction results in an absurd meaning, out of step and context with the manifest purpose of the financial responsibility laws of California (205 Cal. App. 3d 223, 231) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle UseScope of Employment

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.85

§ 120.85 Exclusion of Named Person Does Not Apply to "Motor Vehicle Liability Policy" for Commercial Passenger Vehicles

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND OR INDEMNIFY INSURED BECAUSE _____ [name] INSURANCE CODE SECTION 11580.1, WHICH ALLOWS AN EXCLUSION FOR A NAMED DRIVER, APPLIES ONLY TO AN "AUTOMOBILE LIABILITY POLICY," NOT TO A "MOTOR VEHICLE LIABILITY POLICY" FOR COMMERCIAL PASSENGER VEHICLES.

Exclusion of Named Person Does Not Apply to Commercial Passenger "Motor Vehicle Liability Policy." The driver exclusion endorsement authorized by Insurance Code Section 11580.1(d)(1) applies only to an "automobile liability policy," not to a "motor vehicle liability policy" for commercial passenger vehicles (Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Bell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1416, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that the driver exclusion endorsement authorized by Ins. Code § 11580.1(d)(1) applies only to an "automobile liability policy," not to a "motor vehicle liability policy" for commercial passenger vehicles.

These points and authorities may be submitted, for example, in opposition to a defense motion for summary judgment in an action against a motor vehicle liability insurer based on an insurer's refusal to defend or indemnify the person (or organization) legally responsible for the use of the vehicle. They may also be used in a trial or appellate brief in such an action. In addition, they may be used in support of a motion for summary judgment in favor of the insured in a declaratory relief action seeking a declaration that there is no duty to defend.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see §§ 120.50 et seq. and 120.80 et seq.].

This form may be used to oppose the points and authorities set forth in § 120.70.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.80[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to provisions of the policy that establish that the policy issued by the insurer is a "motor vehicle liability policy" for commercial passenger vehicles, under Veh. Code § 16450 et seq.

- Argue that pursuant to Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Bell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1418, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 [see § 120.85[3][a]], the driver exclusion endorsement does not apply and, consequently, the insurer is bound to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of operation of the insured vehicle.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

In Empire Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Bell (1997) 55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 64 Cal. Rptr. 2d 749 , the defendant ambulance service was the named insured of an insurance policy labeled a "business automobile" policy issued by the plaintiff insurance company. During the policy period, a driver employed by the ambulance service lost his driver's license, and in December 1992 he signed a "Driver Exclusion" endorsement excluding from coverage any accidents involving the driver. Approximately two monthslater, plaintiff was injured in an accident caused by the driver while he was operating an ambulance owned by the ambulance service. The insurer filed a declaratory relief action and moved for summary judgment, asserting that pursuant to the driver exclusion, the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify the ambulance service. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment, concluding that there were no disputed issues of fact and as a matter of law the insurer had no duty to defend or indemnify.

The court of appeal reversed the judgment entered in favor of the insurer. The court stated that the legislature has distinguished in the Insurance Code and the Vehicle Code between an automobile liability policy and a motor vehicle liability policy. An automobile liability insurance policy is essentially defined by Ins. Code § 11580.1, which lists various provisions that must be contained within an automobile liability policy. Ins. Code, § 11580.05 expressly excepts from compliance with section 11580.1 policies to which Veh. Code § 16450 et seq. applies. Veh. Code § 16450, in turn, defines a "motor vehicle liability policy." The distinction coincides with the different financial responsibility requirements imposed on commercial and noncommercial vehicles (55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1416-1417) . A second key difference between the two types of policies pertains to the extent of coverage (55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1418) . The court concluded that Ins. Code § 11580.1 defines the contents of an automobile liability policy but not a motor vehicle liability policy. Under the financial responsibility laws, the ambulance company's insurer was obligated to maintain a motor vehicle liability policy for its commercial passenger vehicles pursuant to Veh. Code § 16500 (55 Cal. App. 4th 1410, 1418) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceObligationsIndemnificationInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceVehicle OwnershipFleet Vehicles

58 of 185 DOCUMENTS

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
2. Exclusions in Motor Vehicle Policies

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.86-120.89

[Reserved]

§§ 120.86[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.90

§ 120.90 Insurer Has No Duty to Defend/Indemnify Insured When Liability or Loss Results From Willful Act

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE THE _____ [CLAIM SUED ON or LOSS] RESULTED FROM INSURED'S OWN WILLFUL ACT.

A. Insurer Is Not Liable for Willful Act of Insured. An insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured (Ins. Code § 533).

B. Statutory Exclusion Is Implied in Every Policy. Insurance Code Section 533 is an implied exclusionary clause that by statute is to be read into all insurance policies (J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689).

C. Intentional Act Is Excluded by Policy Language. An insurer is not required to indemnify a loss resulting from the insured's intentional conduct if the policy excludes coverage for intentional conduct (Tradewinds Escrow, Inc. v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 704, 714-715, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 561).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that the claim on which plaintiff was sued or the loss for which recovery under the policy is sought was caused by plaintiff's own willful wrong.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.91 et seq.].

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summaryjudgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the loss or liability resulted from the insured's willful conduct, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those willful acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[e] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Statutory Exclusion Is Implied in Every Policy

J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , is discussed in § 120.93[3][a]. The Court noted that Ins. Code § 533 is an implied exclusionary clause, and must be read into all insurance policies (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019) . Pursuant to Ins. Code § 533, which reflects a fundamental public policy of denying coverage for willful wrongs, and Civ. Code § 1667, which provides that a contract contrary to express law is unlawful, the parties to an insurance policy cannot contract for that coverage (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019-1020 n.8).

[b] Intentional Act Is Excluded by Policy Language

In Tradewinds Escrow, Inc. v. Truck Ins. Exch. (2002) 97 Cal. App. 4th 704, 118 Cal. Rptr. 2d 561 , the underlying complaint against the insured, an escrow company, alleged causes of action for breach of contract, intentional misrepresentation, intentional infliction of emotional distress, unfair business practices, constructive trust, accounting, and conversion, based on the insured's failure to close escrow on a transaction. The insured tendered defense initially to another insurer (covering errors and omissions (E&O)), then to the defendant, which had issued a commercial general liability (CGL) and automobile policy. The E&O insurer contributed to the settlement ultimately reached, but refused to pay attorney's fees accrued prior to the insured's tender of the defense. In this action, the insured sued the defendant for breach of contract and breach of its good faith duty, because it refused to defend the underlying action. The trial court granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment, and the insured appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed, holding that: (1) the insured's pre-tender payment of defense costs could not be recovered because of the "no voluntary payments" provision in the CGL policy; (2) the costs of defense could not be recovered from one insurer if other insurers were on the risk and assumed the insured's defense; and (3) the defendant had no duty to indemnify the insured (97 Cal. App. 4th 704, 710-712) . On the third point, the court further held that CGL policies are limited to providing coverage for accidental occurrences and do not provide coverage for professionalnegligence claims. Moreover, the policy excluded intentional conduct by expressly not covering "bodily injury or property damage expected or intended from the standpoint of the insured." This phrase covers intentional, as opposed to negligent, conduct. The underlying claims for misrepresentation, conversion, unfair business practices, and intentional infliction of emotional distress would be excluded by the plain language of the policy because the conduct alleged was intentional. In addition, to the extent that the underlying action stated a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress, coverage would be excluded. Furthermore, intentional acts of the type alleged in the complaint are not covered by standard CGL policies, based on the rationale that the intentional conduct does not constitute an "accident" or "occurrence" within the meaning of the policy. Finally, extra-contractual limitations on the provision of indemnity for intentionally wrongful conduct are embodied in Ins. Code § 533, which is implied in every contract and provides that an insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the willful act of the insured. This limitation, in addition to all of the conclusions above, would also apply to the insured's assertion that its automobile policy somehow covered the conduct at issue because one of the acts complained of was committed while the insured was in a car (97 Cal. App. 4th 704, 713-714) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Statutory Exclusion Implied in Every Policy

In California Amplifier, Inc. v. RLI Ins. Co. (2001) 94 Cal. App. 4th 102, 113 Cal. Rptr. 2d 915 , an excess insurer under a directors and officers' liability insurance policy refused to indemnify its insured for the settlement of an action alleging market manipulation of stock in violation of Corp. Code §§ 25400 and 25500. In an action by the insured against the insurer for bad faith, breach of contract, and unfair business practices, the trial court granted the insurer's motion for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the alleged securities fraud was uninsurable under Ins. Code § 533. The court of appeal affirmed, concluding that liability under Section 25500 requires a "wilful act" within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533, which precludes coverage under the policy (94 Cal. App. 4th 102, 117) .

In Northland Ins. Co. v. Briones (2000) 81 Cal. App. 4th 796, 97 Cal. Rptr. 2d 127 , an insurer brought a declaratory relief action to determine its rights under a mobile homeowner's policy. The policy provided personal liability coverage to the insured for damages because of bodily injury or property damage, but an endorsement provided that physical/sexual abuse was not covered. A third-party suit against the insured alleged personal injury damages caused by the insured based on sexual assaults against the plaintiff. In its summary judgment motion, the insurer assertedthat coverage was excluded based on the exclusion for sexual abuse in the policy, and on Ins. Code § 533. The court of appeal affirmed the trial court's granting of the summary judgment motion, and its refusal to grant a stay pending the outcome of the third-party action to determine the scope of coverage. The court of appeal held that there was no accident or occurrence within the meaning of the policy and Ins. Code § 533 (81 Cal. App. 4th 796, 812) .

In Fire Ins. Exch. v. Altieri (1991) 235 Cal. App. 3d 1352, 1 Cal. Rptr. 2d 360 , the plaintiff, an adolescent boy, brought an action seeking damages for injuries sustained when another boy punched him. The court of appeal reversed the trial court's ruling that the homeowners policy insuring the assailant and his parents provided indemnity for the damages awarded. The trial court had reasoned that although the assailant intentionally hit the plaintiff, he did not do so with a preconceived design to inflict injury. The court of appeal held that insurance coverage under the policy is precluded if the assault was intentional and that the motive of the person who committed the assault is relevant only to the issue of whether the conduct was wrongful in the first instance (in other words, whether the act was in self-defense). The assault in this case, which was without any legal justification, was an uninsurable willful act under Ins. Code § 533 (235 Cal. App. 3d 1352, 1359-1360) .

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Drasin (1984) 152 Cal. App. 3d 864, 199 Cal. Rptr. 749 , the court of appeal affirmed a summary judgment that declared that the insurer under a homeowner's policy had no duty to defend or indemnify the insured against a third-party action. The court affirmed on the ground that the third-party action was one for malicious prosecution, which constituted willful misconduct for which the insurer was not liable, under both the policy's provisions and Ins. Code § 533 (152 Cal. App. 3d 864, 867-869) .

State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Dominguez (1982) 131 Cal. App. 3d 1, 182 Cal. Rptr. 109 , was a declaratory relief action by an insurer to determine whether or not a policy required it to defend its insured in a wrongful death action filed after insured was convicted of the first degree murder of the decedent. On appeal from a judgment entered for the insurer, defendants (plaintiffs in the wrongful death action) contended that, since the wrongful death action was based on negligence, the insurer was required to show that the insured's conduct was nonnegligent. The court of appeal disagreed, stating that under an exclusion in the policy and Ins. Code § 533, the insurer need only show that the insured committed an intentional wrong (131 Cal. App. 3d 1, 4) . The court agreed that mere proof of the insured's conviction was insufficient to prove intentional conduct (131 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) . However, taking judicial notice of the record in the insured's criminal appeal, the court ruled that, since the insured's only defense was self-defense, the killing was clearly an intentional act (131 Cal. App. 3d 1, 5) . Lastly, distinguishing Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 , the court held that collateral estoppel applied to make the criminal judgment binding on defendant (131 Cal. App. 3d 1, 6) .

[b] Intentional Act Is Excluded by Policy Language

In Western Mut. Ins. Co. v. Yamamoto (1994) 29 Cal. App. 4th 1474, 35 Cal. Rptr. 2d 698 , an action against a child who intentionally shot another with his parents' gun, and against the child's parents for negligent supervision, the court held that a finding of intentional shooting made in a juvenile proceeding may be binding on a juvenile in a subsequent declaratory relief action to determine coverage or exclusion for the act under a homeowner's policy. Although juvenile proceedings differ from adult criminal proceedings in that they are nonadversarial in nature, when a contested matter has been adjudicated in a juvenile court proceeding under Welf. & Inst. Code § 602, following the same formalities, rights, and processes as an adult criminal trial, the findings of the juvenile court are entitled to the same collateral estoppel effect that would be afforded findings made in an adult criminal court (29 Cal. App. 4th 1474, 1484-1485) . Thus, there was no coverage for the child because the homeowner's policy contained an exclusion that precluded coverage for injuries "expected or intended" and injuries arising out of criminal acts of "an insured." There was likewise no coverage for the claim of negligent supervision by the parents because the injury resulted from an intentional act of an insured (29 Cal. App. 4th 1474, 1486) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationExclusionsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawLife InsuranceAccidental DeathIntentional ActsInsurance LawMotor Vehicle InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawProperty InsuranceCoverageArson & Intentional LossIntentional Acts Exclusion

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.91

§ 120.91 Agreements Waiving Fraud or Willful Injury Are Illegal

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION], EVEN THOUGH INSURED ASSERTS AN AGREEMENT WAIVING LIABILITY FOR FRAUD OR WILLFUL INJURY, BECAUSE SUCH AGREEMENTS ARE ILLEGAL.

Agreements Waiving Fraud or Willful Injury Are Illegal. All contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law,whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law (Civ. Code § 1668).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that an agreement by the insured and a third party that the third party waives any right to recover from the insured from acts of fraud or willful misconduct, does not create a duty on the part of the insurer defend or indemnify the insured, because such agreements are illegal.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summaryjudgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to the agreement that by which the insured contends the third party has waived any rights based on fraud or willful misconduct by the insured, and

- Argue that such agreements are illegal, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those willful acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Agreements Waiving Fraud or Willful Injury Are Illegal

Under Civ. Code § 1668, all contracts which have for their object, directly or indirectly, to exempt anyone from responsibility for his or her own fraud, or willful injury to the person or property of another, or violation of law, whether willful or negligent, are against the policy of the law.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Contracts LawDefensesIllegal BargainsInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnification

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.92

§ 120.92 Policy Purporting Coverage for Willful Acts Is Prohibited

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE A POLICY PROVISION CONTRARY TO INSURANCE CODE SECTION 533 IS PROHIBITED.

Policy Purporting Coverage for Willful Acts Is Prohibited. The parties to an insurance policy cannot contract for coverage for acts excluded by Insurance Code Section 533 (J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019-1020 n.8, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that Ins. Code § 533 precludes a contractual agreement for coverage of liability arising from willful acts.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summaryjudgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the policy purports to provide coverage for willful acts, and

- Argue that such coverage is illegal by statute and, consequently, the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those willful acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Policy Purporting Coverage for Willful Acts Is Prohibited

J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , is discussed in § 120.93[3][a]. In discussing the insurer's reliance on both the statute and the language of the policy at issue, the Court noted that Ins. Code § 533 reflects a fundamental public policy of denying coverage for willful wrongs, and that Civ. Code § 1667 precludes a contractual agreement for such coverage (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019-1020 n.8).

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional Acts

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.93

§ 120.93 Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE FOR CHILD SEXUAL MOLESTATION IS PRECLUDED AS A MATTER OF LAW.

Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Precluded as Matter of Law. As a matter of law, Insurance Code Section 533 precludes insurance coverage for damages arising from child sexual molestation, because that conduct is inherently harmful (J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1025, 1028, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of thesepoints and authorities is that Ins. Code § 533 precludes insurance coverage for damages arising from child sexual molestation, because that conduct is inherently harmful.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to the specific provision of the policy purporting to cover the insured for child sexual molestation, and

- Argue that such coverage is precluded as a matter of law and, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those willful acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication indrafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Precluded as Matter of Law

In J. C. Penney Cas. Ins. Co. v. M. K. (1991) 52 Cal. 3d 1009, 278 Cal. Rptr. 64, 804 P.2d 689 , the insurer under a homeowner's policy brought a declaratory relief action to determine coverage regarding an underlying action against the insured based on the insured's sexual molestation of a minor. The homeowner's policy contained an exclusion of "bodily injury or property damage which is either expected or intended from the standpoint of the insured." The insured molested a young girl on several occasions. He asserted that he intended to molest the child, but did not intend to cause her harm. He was convicted of violation of Penal Code § 288(a) (lewd conduct with child under age of 14 with intent to arouse lust) based on that conduct. The child and her mother successfully sued the insured, proceeding to trial only on theories of negligence and negligent infliction of emotional distress. In a declaratory relief action brought by the insurer, the trial court concluded that the insured's conduct constituted a willful act as a matter of law within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533, even though a psychologist at the trial of the negligence action had testified that the insured intended no harm, the trial court concluded that coverage was precluded by Ins. Code § 533, and that coverage under the liability insurance policy was therefore precluded.

The insurer appealed. (The child also appealed, regarding the collateral estoppel issue based on the effectiveness of the insurer's reservation of rights.) The court of appeal held, with respect to the Ins. Code § 533 issue, that the intentional-act exclusion in the policy and in Ins. Code § 533 does not bar coverage unless the insured acts with a dual intent: (1) the intent to commit the act itself, and (2) a preconceived intent to injure. That court held that the insured's admission of his intent to sexually molest the child does not necessarily establish that he also had a preconceived intent to harm her. Both parties sought review.

The California Supreme Court reversed the judgment of the court of appeal to the extent that it reversed the trial court judgment in favor of theinsurer with respect to the Ins. Code § 533 issue. The Court held that Ins. Code § 533 precludes coverage for child sexual molestation as a matter of law (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1028, 1029) . The Court first disposed of the issue of collateral estoppel raised by the child and her mother against the insurer regarding the underlying action; the Court held that the insurer, which provided a defense in that action, effectively reserved its right to deny coverage (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1017-1018) . The Court then discussed the effect of Ins. Code § 533 on conduct constituting child sexual molestation. Ins. Code § 533 provides that "[a]n insurer is not liable for a loss caused by the wilful act of the insured; but he is not exonerated by the negligence of the insured, or of the insured's agents or others." The Court found the entirety of Ins. Code § 533 to be internally inconsistent when read literally, in that its first part purports to exclude coverage for all willful acts, but the second part expressly provides that the insured's negligence does not allow an insurer to disclaim coverage (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1019-1020) . It noted that negligence is often the result of a "willful act"; for example, a traffic accident may result from intentionally driving an automobile in excess of the speed limit (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1020) . However, a "willful act" under Ins. Code § 533 means something more than mere intentional conduct that constitutes negligence; and the statute does not preclude coverage for acts that are negligent or reckless. The Court found nothing in the statute to support the view that a child molester can disclaim an intent to harm the victim, because the act in itself is the harm, and the intent to molest is, by itself, the same as the intent to harm (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1021) .

Both the insured and the third party relied on Clemmer v. Hartford Ins. Co. (1978) 22 Cal. 3d 865, 151 Cal. Rptr. 285, 587 P.2d 1098 , in support of the contention that coverage exists unless the insurer proves that the insured acted with a "preconceived design to inflict injury," and the Court discussed that decision at great length. It rejected the request (by insurance interests appearing as amici curiae) to overrule or limit Clemmer, and instead explained the holding in that case, and clarified its applicability to the instant case. In Clemmer, which arose from the killing of a physician by his employee (the insured) after an employment dispute, the jury was properly allowed to determine if the insured had the mental capacity to intend to shoot and harm the victim, as well as the mental capacity to govern his own conduct, for the purpose of determining whether or not the insured had acted "willfully." The Court in Clemmer rejected the contention that the instruction to the jury improperly required the jury to find a specific intent to kill in order to find a willful act, noting that under the language of the instruction, the jury determined only the mental capacity "to shoot and harm."

It was in this context that the Court held that even an intentional act is not excluded from coverage under Ins. Code § 533 unless the act is donewith a "preconceived design to inflict injury." The Court in the instant case rejected the contention that this holding supports the argument that coverage for child sexual molestation is not excluded unless the insurer can show that the molester had a preconceived design to inflict injury on the child. Rather, the Court held, the inquiry in Clemmer was limited to the unresolved mental capacity of the insured, that is, whether he was legally sane when he committed the killing; and the discussion on subjective and objective intent is misplaced unless one has evidence regarding a lack of intent t commit the act itself. The Court held that, properly understood, Clemmer does not support a finding of coverage if there was no preconceived design to injure in the instant case, because the wrongful act of child molestation is itself the harm.

Thus, Ins. Code § 533 does not require a showing of the insured's subjective intent to harm with respect to that conduct (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1022-1025) . Similarly, Clemmer does not require a showing by the insurer of the insured's preconceived design to inflict harm when the insured seeks coverage for an intentional and wrongful act if the harm is inherent in the act itself. Ins. Code § 533 precludes coverage in the instant case because child molestation is "always intentional, it is always wrongful, and it is always harmful" (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1025 (italics in original)).

The Court noted that with the exception of the instant case, California court of appeal decisions and Ninth Circuit court of appeals decisions were unanimous in finding that Ins. Code § 533 precluded coverage for child sexual molestation [citing, e.g., Allstate Ins. Co. v. Kim W. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 326, 332-333, 206 Cal. Rptr. 609] . The Court further noted that, properly understood, the insured's argument is based not on his intent but on his motive. However, it held, motive is irrelevant for purposes of Ins. Code § 533; motive is relevant only to the different question of whether the conduct was wrongful, giving rise to liability. For example, an insured who when sane shoots someone at point-blank range, intends to injure; and the wrongfulness of the conduct depends on the insured's motive, because if the insured acted justifiably, as would be true if the insured acted in self-defense, the act is not wrongful. However, there is no motive that can justify child sexual molestation; and the insured's professed motive is therefore entirely irrelevant for purposes of Ins. Code § 533 (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1026-1027) . In concluding that Ins. Code § 533 excludes liability insurance coverage for an insured's sexual molestation of a child, the Court also held that an insured therefore cannot show or attempt to show a subjective intent not to cause harm (52 Cal. 3d 1009, 1028) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Coverage for Child Sexual Molestation Precluded as Matter of Law

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Abraio (9th Cir. 1989) 874 F.2d 619 , the insured under a homeowner's policy was criminally charged with violating Penal Code § 288 (lewd acts against child under age of 14), a felony, and entered a plea of guilty to former Penal Code § 647a [now see Penal Code § 647.6] (molestation of child under age of 18), a misdemeanor. In a declaratory-relief brought by the insurer, regarding coverage in an underlying third-party action brought by the victim, the federal court of appeals affirmed the trial court's grant of summary judgment to the insurer, holding that the insured's conduct gave rise to an irrebuttable presumption of intent to harm, and that coverage for damages arising from that conduct was therefore excluded. The court found it irrelevant that the insured was convicted of a general-intent crime, instead of the special-intent crime with which he was charged (874 F.2d 619, 622-623) .

In State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Estate of Jenner (9th Cir. 1989) 874 F.2d 604 , the insured under a mobilehome owner's policy committed acts in violation of Penal Code §§ 288(a) (lewd act with child under age of 14 with intent to arouse lust) and 288a(c) (oral copulation by person more than 10 years older than victim who is under age of 14). After the insured's suicide, the insurer brought a declaratory-relief action against his estate, asserting exclusion of coverage under Ins. Code § 533 with regard to an underlying action by the victim for damages; the trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment. The federal court of appeals affirmed, holding that acts in violation of Penal Code § 288 create an inference of an intent to injure, and are thus willful as a matter of law, within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533 (874 F.2d 604, 606-607) .

In Allstate Ins. Co. v. Gilbert (9th Cir. 1988) 852 F.2d 449 , an insured under a homeowner's policy was criminally charged with violation of Penal Code § 288 (lewd acts with child under 14 years of age), then sued by the victim and her parents for damages arising from the same acts. The federal court of appeals affirmed summary judgment for the insurer in its declaratory-relief action against the insured, holding that there was no duty to defend or indemnify because coverage was precluded by the policy exclusion regarding injuries intentionally caused by the insured (also noting that coverage was precluded by Ins. Code § 533). The court stated that intent to harm is inferred by the nature of the act of sexual assault (852 F.2d 449, 451-453) .

In State Farm & Cas. Co. v. Bomke (9th Cir. 1988) 849 F.2d 1218 , the insurer brought a declaratory relief action to determine its obligation to defend the insured in a third-party civil action alleging injuries arising froma sexual assault. One insured had pleaded guilty to kidnapping, rape, and forced oral copulation (Penal Code §§ 207, 261(2) (now Penal Code § 261(a)), 288a, respectively) based on the same acts, and another insured pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting those acts. The federal district court granted summary judgment in favor of the insurer, holding that both insureds' acts demonstrated an intent to harm as a matter of law, and thus were excluded from coverage under Ins. Code § 533 and by the policy provisions. The federal court of appeals affirmed, agreeing with the trial court's analysis (849 F.2d 1218, 1218-1220) . The court also found no exception under the rule for aiding and abetting as opposed to direct commission of the acts themselves (849 F.2d 1218, 1220) .

In Farmer v. Allstate Ins. Co. (C.D. Cal. 2004) 311 F. Supp. 2d 884 , a husband and wife provided day care for children in their home and had a homeowner's insurance policy that included an endorsement for home day care. The plaintiff, alleging sexual molestation by the husband, sued the husband for assault and battery and sued both the husband and wife for intentional infliction of emotional distress, negligent infliction of emotional distress, negligence, and premises liability, including negligent supervision of a minor. The insurer refused defense and indemnity because: (1) there was no "occurrence" under the policy, (2) Ins. Code § 533 precluded coverage, (3) the "intentional or criminal acts" exclusion precluded coverage, and (4) the home day care endorsement excluded coverage for sexual molestation. The federal district court held that as a matter of law, both the Sexual Molestation Exclusion and the Intentional or Criminal Acts Exclusion precluded coverage for the wife (311 F. Supp. 2d 884, 897).

In Jane D. v. Ordinary Mut. (1995) 32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 38 Cal. Rptr. 2d 131 , a woman sued a priest, alleging that, beginning at age 15, she sought counseling from him and he induced her to have sexual relations. The suit sought recovery for negligence, negligent infliction of emotional distress, and breach of fiduciary duty. The woman obtained a default judgment and then brought a declaratory relief action seeking to establish coverage for the judgment under a liability policy. An endorsement to the policy covered liability arising out of the performance of professional services in the insured's capacity as a pastor or counselor. However, the endorsement excluded coverage for behavior culminating in any sexual act. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for summary judgment finding that there was coverage under this endorsement only if the default judgment was based on a claim of other than sexual misconduct and that the priest was not a named insured under a second policy endorsement that covered named insureds for liability arising out of sexual misconduct. The court ruled in favor of the insurer, and plaintiff appealed.

On appeal, plaintiff argued that the insurer had a duty to defend the priest, and was liable for the default judgment because it breached that duty. Plaintiff further contended that there was coverage under the policybecause it was the mishandling of the counseling relationship, not the sexual act, that formed the basis for the negligence claim (32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 651) . The court of appeal noted that the California Supreme Court's analysis in Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792 [see § 120.109[3][a]], was applicable. In applying that analysis, the court concluded that the facts in this case, unlike those in Horace Mann, indicated that the allegations of nonsexual conduct--obtaining information about plaintiff during counseling, and misusing this information and counseling techniques to create transference and control and induce plaintiff's behavior--were "inseparably intertwined" with the sexual misconduct. Thus, the court concluded that there was no coverage under the policy (32 Cal. App. 4th 643, 652-653) .

In National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Lynette C. (1991) 228 Cal. App. 3d 1073, 279 Cal. Rptr. 394 ("National Union I"), the court held that Ins. Code § 533 did not preclude insurance coverage for the negligence of a wife in failing to warn or protect a foster child from her husband's pedophilic tendencies. Subsequently, in National Union Fire Ins. Co. v. Lynette C. (1994) 27 Cal. App. 4th 1434, 1463-1465, 33 Cal. Rptr. 2d 496 ("National Union II"), the court held that the insured's negligence in allowing a child to be placed with her for foster care, and subsequent negligence in failing to protect the child from repeated sexual molestations committed by the insured's husband, constituted a distinct series of acts and omissions, rather than a single act.

In Fire Ins. Exch. v. Abbott (1988) 204 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 251 Cal. Rptr. 620 , the court of appeal reversed a trial court judgment in favor of the insureds (in a consolidated action) regarding coverage for damages arising from the insureds' conduct constituting violations of child molestation statutes, including Penal Code § 288(a) (prohibiting lewd acts on child under age of 14 years). The court of appeal held that with regard to an insured's act that constitutes adult criminal sexual misconduct against a minor, intent to harm is inferred, and the act is "willful" under Ins. Code § 533 (204 Cal. App. 3d 1012, 1019-1029) .

In Allstate Ins. Co. v. Kim W. (1984) 160 Cal. App. 3d 326, 206 Cal. Rptr. 609 , the court of appeal affirmed the trial court's judgment in favor of the insurer with regard to noncoverage under a homeowner's policy for damages arising from the insured's conduct constituting violation of Penal Code § 288 (lewd acts against child under age of 14). The court of appeal held that with respect to that conduct, the intent to harm is inferred as a matter of law, and the act is construed to be a willful act within the meaning of Ins. Code § 533 (160 Cal. App. 3d 326, 332-333) .

NOTE:

The line of reasoning used in the cases discussed above has not been extended to cases that involve neither sexual misconduct against minors nor forcible sexual assault [see, e.g., State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Eddy (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 958, 969-970, 267 Cal. Rptr. 379 (action alleging negligent and intentional torts, arising from transmission of venereal disease between consenting adults)]. In such cases, a duty to defend may exist [State Farm Fire & Cas. Co. v. Eddy (1990) 218 Cal. App. 3d 958, 971-972, 267 Cal. Rptr. 379] .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsCriminal ActsInsurance LawProperty InsuranceHomeowners InsuranceGeneral Overview

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.94

§ 120.94 Coverage for Sanctions Imposed for Bad-Faith Litigation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE FOR SANCTIONS IMPOSED FOR BAD-FAITH LITIGATION ARE PRECLUDED AS MATTER OF LAW.

Coverage for Sanctions Imposed for Bad-Faith Litigation Is Precluded as Matter of Law. Insurance Code Section 533 bars coverage of sanctions imposed against the insured under Code of Civil Procedure Section 128.7 for bad-faith conduct in engaging in meritless litigation. Bad-faith actions or tactics are acts that are always intentional and wrongful and in which harm is always inherent as a matter of law, and thus are patently "willful" acts for which insurance coverage is always proscribed by Insurance Code Section 533 (California Cas. Mgmt. Co. v. Martocchio (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that Ins. Code § 533 bars coverage of sanctions imposed against the insured under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 for bad-faith conduct in engaging in meritless litigation [see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 510, Sanctions] for bad-faith conduct in engaging in meritless litigation.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the insured is seeking coverage for sanctions imposed against the insured under Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7 for bad-faith conduct in engaging in meritless litigation [see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 510, Sanctions] for bad-faith conduct in engaging in meritless litigation, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those willful acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Sanctions Imposed for Bad-Faith Litigation Is Precluded as Matter of Law

In California Cas. Mgmt. Co. v. Martocchio (1992) 11 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 15 Cal. Rptr. 2d 277 , Martocchio was the plaintiff in a libel action against a newspaper. The action was dismissed for failure to prosecute, and the newspaper sought and was granted an award of attorneys' fees under former Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (now see Code Civ. Proc. § 128.7), based on Martocchio's bad-faith conduct. Martocchio then demanded that California Casualty Management Co. (CCM) pay the sanctions award under an insurance policy that covered liability against malicious prosecution. CCM brought an action seeking declaratory relief that the sanctions were not covered. The trial court granted CCM's summary judgment motion and entered judgment in its favor, and Martocchio appealed.

The court of appeal affirmed. The court held that Ins. Code § 533 bars the attempt to shift to an insurer the losses occasioned by the willful act of a violation of former Code Civ. Proc. § 128.5 (11 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1533) . The court held that a predicate condition for the imposition of sanctions under former § 128.5 is a finding that the expenses that are the basis of the sanctions order were incurred because of Martocchio's bad-faith actions or tactics, and that such acts are always intentional and wrongful and therefore covered by the prohibition of Ins. Code § 533 (11 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534) . The court also rejected the contention that, because the policy covered claims for malicious prosecution, that the sanctions at issue should also be covered. The court noted that the case before it did not concern a malicious prosecution claim, but stated that even if it had, Ins. Code § 533 would preclude insurance coverage for a malicious prosecution action based on defendant's willful conduct (11 Cal. App. 4th 1527, 1534-1535) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingDuty to DefendInsurance LawClaims & ContractsGood Faith & Fair DealingIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.95

§ 120.95 Coverage for Criminal Fines or Restitution Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE FOR FINES OR RESTITUTION IMPOSED AS A RESULT OF CRIMINAL CONVICTION ARE PRECLUDED AS MATTER OF LAW.

Coverage for Criminal Fines or Restitution Is Precluded as a Matter of Law. As a matter of law, Insurance Code Section 533 precludes insurance coverage for fines or restitution imposed as a result of a criminal conviction, including attorney's fees imposed as a fine or restitution (Baker v. Mid-Century Ins. Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 921, 924-925, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that as a matter of law, Ins. Code Section 533 precludes insurance coverage for fines or restitution imposed as a result of a criminal conviction, including attorney's fees imposed as a fine or restitution.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the insured is seeking insurance coverage for fines or restitution imposed as a result of a criminal conviction, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of such a circumstance.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Criminal Fines or Restitution Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

In Baker v. Mid-Century Ins. Co. (1993) 20 Cal. App. 4th 921, 25 Cal. Rptr. 2d 34 , the court held that attorney's fees imposed on an insured as a fine or restitution for felony drunk driving were not covered under the insured's liability policy because Ins. Code § 533 precludes insurance coverage for policy fines or restitution imposed as a result of a criminal conviction, and the deterrent effect of the restitution would be undermined if a defendant could pass the cost on to an insurer (20 Cal. App. 4th 921, 924-925) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsEquitable Relief

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.96

§ 120.96 Coverage for Intentional Sexual Harassment Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE FOR INTENTIONAL SEXUAL HARASSMENT IS PRECLUDED AS MATTER OF LAW.

Coverage for Intentional Sexual Harassment Precluded as a Matter of Law. As a matter of law, Insurance Code Section 533 precludes insurance coverage for intentional sexual harassment and associated employment-related torts (Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that Ins. Code § 533 precludes insurance coverage for intentional sexual harassment and associated employment-related torts.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal.

Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the insured is seeking insurance coverage for intentional sexual harassment or another associated employment-related tort, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of such acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Intentional Sexual Harassment Precluded as a Matter of Law

In Coit Drapery Cleaners, Inc. v. Sequoia Ins. Co. (1993) 14 Cal. App. 4th 1595, 18 Cal. Rptr. 2d 692 , a corporation, its president, and another managerial level employee sued the corporation's insurer for breach of contract and bad faith refusal to defend and indemnify in a sexual harassmentand wrongful termination action brought by a former employee. The president, well known for his harassment of female employees, made continuous advances towards the employee and sexually assaulted her, aided at times by the managerial level employee who acted as a procuress. The harassed employee was terminated when she refused the advances. The trial court granted the insurer's motion for directed verdict.

The court of appeals affirmed. The court held that there is no duty to defend and indemnify a corporate insured when the corporation is aware of sexual harassment by its officers and employees and that conduct is ratified or condoned by the corporation. The court concluded that the conduct at issue in the case occurred "in the context of a policy of quid pro quo, where corporate funds, employment, and advancement were used or withheld, as a matter of common knowledge and routine, to coerce sexual favors for a high managerial employee." The court found that the corporation, "in allowing, condoning, and ratifying such intentional conduct as a matter of corporate policy, triggered the prohibition against intentional wrongful conduct embodied in [Ins. Code S]ection 533."

The recharacterization of intentional sexual harassment as negligent in order to trigger coverage was futile in light of Ins. Code § 533, which prohibits attempts to shift liability for intentional conduct. The court of appeals also rejected the insured's attempt to seek coverage on a negligent supervision theory, concluding that under the facts outlined above, the corporation had ratified the harassment. Thus, the insurer was not required either to indemnify or to defend the claim.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

LexisNexis®

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.97

§ 120.97 Coverage for Inducing Patent Infringement Is Precluded as a Matter of Law

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] NO DUTY TO _____ [DEFEND or INDEMNIFY] INSURED [IN THE UNDERLYING ACTION] BECAUSE COVERAGE FOR INDUCING PATENT INFRINGEMENT IS PRECLUDED AS A MATTER OF LAW.

Coverage for Inducing Patent Infringement Precluded as a Matter of Law. As a matter of law, Insurance Code Section 533 precludes insurance coverage for inducing patent infringement (Aetna Casualty & Sur. Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 331).

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted in support of a contention by the insurer that it has no duty to defend a prior action brought against the insured or to indemnify the insured, or both. The basis of these points and authorities is that as a matter of law, Ins. Code § 533 precludes insurance coverage for inducing patent infringement.

This form may be used by an insurer in various procedural contexts, such as in memoranda supporting or opposing a motion for summary judgment, in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][a].

The California Supreme Court has held that an insurer may have a duty to defend an action against an insured even if the action alleges willful conduct (such as sexual molestation), if the action also alleges conduct for which potential coverage under the policy exists [Horace Mann Ins. Co. v. Barbara B. (1993) 4 Cal. 4th 1076, 1082-1086, 17 Cal. Rptr. 2d 210, 846 P.2d 792] . For a form setting forth points and authorities in support of the contention that such a duty to defend exists, see § 120.109.

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insurance policy excludes from coverage the willful acts of the insured [see § 120.90 et seq.].

For references to related Pleading and Practice chapters, see § 120.90[2][c].

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument in this form showing the relationship between the facts of the case and the points of law stated. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to facts showing that the insured is seeking insurance coverage for its inducement of patent infringement, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer has no duty to defend or indemnify the insured for claims arising out of those acts.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.10 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be a motion by a defendant insurer for summary judgment or opposition to such a motion by a plaintiff, when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose no triable issue as to any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.30[2][b].

[c] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[d] Opposing Points and Authorities

The points and authorities in § 120.100 et seq. may be used in an appropriate case to oppose these points and authorities.

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Coverage for Inducing Patent Infringement Precluded as a Matter of Law

In Aetna Cas. & Sur. Co. v. Superior Court (1993) 19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 23 Cal. Rptr. 2d. 442 , a manufacturer was sued for patent infringement. It tendered defense to its comprehensive general liability carrier, alleging that the loss fell within the "advertising injury" endorsement in the policy. The insurer rejected the tender, and the insured filed a declaratory relief action. The trial court held that coverage existed, but the court of appeal reversed, holding that as a matter of law patent infringement could not be considered "advertising injury" (19 Cal. App. 4th 320, 328) . The court concluded that decisions in the wake of the California Supreme Court's ruling in Bank of W. v. Superior Court (1992) 2 Cal. 4th 1254, 10 Cal. Rptr. 2d 538, 833 P.2d 545 have confirmed that except perhaps in very unusual circumstances, it is now settled law that there is no coverage for patent infringement under the advertising injury coverage of a business general liability policy.

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageAdvertising InjuriesInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceExclusionsIntentional ActsInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefenseInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsIndemnification

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities §§ 120.98-120.99

[Reserved]

§§ 120.98[Reserved]

California Points & Authorities

Copyright 2010, Matthew Bender & Company, Inc., a member of the LexisNexis Group.

Volume 12 Chapters 120-129 INSURANCE---to---INTERVENTION
CHAPTER 120 INSURANCE
PART II. FORMS
B. Coverage and Exclusions
3. Exclusions for Willful Acts

12-120 California Points & Authorities § 120.100

§ 120.100 Policy Language Led Insured to Expect Defense in Third-Party Action Based on Willful Act

[1] FORM

[The following may be included in a memorandum of points and authorities, or in a trial or appellate brief.]

INSURER _____ [HAS or HAD] THE DUTY TO DEFEND INSURED BECAUSE AMBIGUOUS LANGUAGE IN THE POLICYREASONABLY LED INSURED TO BELIEVE THAT INSURER WOULD DEFEND INSURED IN THE THIRD-PARTY ACTION.

Ambiguity in Policy Led Insured to Reasonably Expect Coverage. The meaning of an insurance policy which does not clearly define the application of the clause excluding coverage for intentional conduct to the duty of the insurance company to defend the insured in an action against the insured is tested according to the insured's reasonable expectation of coverage; if the language of the policy would lead the insured to expect the defense, the insurer is required to defend or be liable to the insured for its failure to do so (Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 266-267, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168).

[These points and authorities should be combined with points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by statutes forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing. See, e.g., § 120.101.]

[2] Comments

[a] Use of Form

These points and authorities may be submitted to oppose an insurer's the contention that an insurer has no duty to defend its insured under an insurance policy. The basis of these points and authorities is that ambiguous language in the policy reasonably led insured to believe that insurer would defend the insured in the third-party action.

This form may be used by an insured in various procedural contexts. For example, these points and authorities may be submitted by plaintiff, in an action against plaintiff's liability insurer for damages for wrongful refusal to defend or indemnify plaintiff in a third-party action, in opposition to a motion by defendant insurer for summary judgment pursuant to Code Civ. Proc. § 437c, when defendant contends that it had no duty to defend or indemnify because the third-party action sought recovery of damages based on a willful wrong. For use in this context, counsel should modify the form to contend that triable issues of material fact remain regarding the insurer's duty.

This form may also be used in a trial brief, or in an appellate brief. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][a].

These points and authorities should be combined with additional points and authorities contending that the policy is not prohibited by Civ. Code § 1668 and Ins. Code § 533 (forbidding contracts which indemnify for "loss" or "responsibility" resulting from willful wrongdoing) [See, e.g., § 120.101].

These points and authorities may be combined, if appropriate, with other points and authorities that contend that the insured has wrongfully refused to defend its insured in a third-party action [see, e.g., §§ 120.50 et seq., 120.80 et seq., and 120.101 et seq.].

In an appropriate case, these points and authorities may be submitted in opposition to a motion for summary judgment supported by the points and authorities in § 120.90 et seq.

[b] Argument

Counsel should insert argument linking the points in this form with the facts of his or her case. In particular, counsel should:

- Refer to the specific provisions of the policy that may reasonably be construed to provide for coverage of the underlying third-party action, and

- Argue that, consequently, under the policy the insurer is bound to defend the insured in the third party action.

The form should be combined with other forms in this publication as necessary to complete argument as to all issues (see, e.g., § 120.20 et seq.) and to place the argument within its proper procedural context. One appropriate procedural context for this contention, for example, would be an insured's memorandum of points and authorities opposing an insurer's motion for summary judgment or summary adjudication when the evidentiary facts clearly support the contention and disclose triable issues of any material fact [see Code Civ. Proc. § 437c]. For further discussion, see § 120.50[2][b].

[c] Related Pleading and Practice Chapters

For complaints by an insured against an insurer for damages for breach of contract because of the insurer's refusal to pay a third-party judgment against the insured or to defend the insured in a third-party action, see California Forms of Pleading and Practice, Ch. 308, Insurance (Matthew Bender). For a discussion of the rules applicable to summary judgment, a form of notice of motion for summary judgment, and related forms, see Ch. 537, Summary Judgment , in that publication.

[d] Related Points and Authorities

For discussion of requirements and considerations for drafting memoranda, discussion on how to combine the forms of this publication in drafting, and discussion and general forms for completing a draft memorandum, see Ch. 1, Writing

Legal Memoranda and Briefs .

For points and authorities generally supporting and opposing a motion for summary judgment, see Ch. 221, Summary Judgments .

[3] Discussion of Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Policy Led Insured to Reasonably Expect Coverage

In Gray v. Zurich Ins. Co. (1966) 65 Cal. 2d 263, 54 Cal. Rptr. 104, 419 P.2d 168 , the liability policy provided coverage for bodily injury, except that which is caused intentionally, and required the insurer to defend any suit against the insurer in which bodily injury was alleged, even if the allegations were groundless, false, or fraudulent. The insurer refused to undertake defense of the third-party action on the ground that the complaint in that action alleged an intentional tort and was excluded from coverage (65 Cal. 2d 263, 267) . The Supreme Court, in reversing the judgment for defendant insurer with instructions to the trial court to take evidence solely on the issue of damages, pointed out that the language of the policy did not clearly define the application of the exclusionary clause to the duty to defend, that the meaning of the policy must, therefore, be tested according to the insured's reasonable expectation of coverage, and that since the language of the policy would lead the insured to expect defense of the third-party suit, the insurer could not be exonerated from rendering such protection (65 Cal. 2d 263, 267) .

[4] Additional Authorities

[a] Ambiguity in Policy Led Insured to Reasonably Expect Coverage

In Miller v. Elite Ins. Co. (1980) 100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 161 Cal. Rptr. 322 , affirming the judgment for plaintiff, the court of appeal said that insurance policies must be interpreted so as to protect the reasonable expectations of the insured and that where the parties are of unequal bargaining strength, and the more powerful party offers a standardized, written contract, the court will interpret the contract according to the weaker party's expectations (100 Cal. App. 3d 739, 753) .

Legal Topics:

For related research and practice materials, see the following legal topics:
Insurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationGeneral OverviewInsurance LawClaims & ContractsPolicy InterpretationReasonable ExpectationsGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceCoverageGeneral OverviewInsurance LawGeneral Liability InsuranceObligationsDefense

California Points & Authorities

